1. North Koreans order precautions against alleged bacteriological warfare:

US Army Korea APSA 225 A North Korean battalion commander was ordered 16, 28 Feb 52 15472 on 27 February to take special precautions to SUEDE avoid contamination of his unit's food and water 15ASM/6456 - 16 Feb 52 because "the enemy dropped bacteria" in central Korea. Covering wells and disinfecting United Nations leaflets were additional recommendations.

These latter measures were probably inspired by a 16 February message which stated that "spies are putting poison into the drinking water" and distributing paper which causes death to "anyone using these papers for the nose."

Comment: There is no evidence that a serious health problem exists in North Korea. Following recent charges made by both the North Korean and the Chinese Communist Foreign Ministers that the United Nations were using bacteriological warfare in the Korean war, the entire Soviet Orbit has been giving great emphasis to this subject. The American Embassy in Moscow observes that Soviet press and radio coverage links the BW issue with the Panmunjom truce talks.
