Each upgrade requires installation by an HP service center and includes a warranty. Hewlett-Packard does not charge for installation once the upgrade kit has been purchased. Only repairs, if needed, necessitate additional charges.

Upgrade Installation

To have the upgrade installed, first check the serial number of the analyzer to make sure it is the one for which the upgrade was ordered. Next, return the upgrade kit and your network analyzer to one of the identified HP service centers. Addresses are provided at the end of this installation note.

Note

For an HP 11884A (6 GHz) upgrade, you must return your 6 GHz HP 85047A test set with this kit and your network analyzer. If you have not received your HP 85047A test set, DO NOT send in the upgrade kit or the network analyzer. The HP service center can not install the 6 GHz upgrade kit without your HP 85047A test set.

HP will install the upgrade, upgrade assemblies as required, test the added performance features, and return the analyzer to you with a new warranty. The new warranty will run concurrently with any other warranties in force. In brief, this is the effect of the warranty where on-site service is available:

- Instrument out of warranty: additional 90 days of on-site service.
- Instrument with more than 90 days warranty: conversion of warranty to on-site service.
- Instrument has less than 90 days of warranty: extension of warranty to 90 days of on-site service after installation of upgrade.

Note

Calibration is not included or required. Current calibrations are not affected. If a calibration is desired, it should be scheduled as an addition service through the service center.

If you have ordered more than one upgrade for an instrument, Hewlett-Packard recommends that you have the upgrades installed at the same time to minimize down-time. Please contact your nearest HP service center to coordinate installation of this upgrade.
