1. Product Overview

GateEye is a software program that operates via Ethernet to acquire image data from network cameras and Yokogawa's DX, MV, and CX series instruments, and distributes those images to clients on the network. GateEye does not store image data. This manual explains how GateEye acts as a client to acquire image data from networked devices (cameras and Yokogawa DX, MV, and CX series instruments), and acts as the server to distribute those images to other clients. GateEye allows you to enter connection settings for downloading images from a server, and view connection settings, image data client information, and server information. Settings for distributing images must be entered on each individual client.

Specifications for image acquisition and distribution are as follows:

Acquisition Function

Max. no. of servers: 4
 Protocol: HTTP (1.0 or later), dedicated DX/MV/CX communication commands
 Image format: JPEG, PNG
 Connection example: Network camera (able to take JPEG images, and supports URLs. Panasonic KX-HCM1, Yokogawa FGC21 etc.), DX/MV/CX (snapshots)

Distribution Function

Max. no. of clients: 16
 Protocol: TCP/IP
 Client example: YOKOGAWA AddObserver RMPanel
 Image size: 640 × 480 dpi recommended.
 GateEye imposes a limit of 128 Kbyte per image data file. If files larger than 128 KB are sent, parts of the data will be lost.
 Screen size: 640 × 480 dpi recommended. GateEye imposes an upper limit of 128 kB per image data file. If files larger than 128 KB are sent, parts of the data will be lost.
