

A Word of Appreciation

In its first year of publication, the Journal of Aircraft has been privileged to present a group of articles, notes, and technical comments which, in our opinion, have added significantly to the aeronautical literature. Major credit for this achievement, of course, goes to the authors who have devoted the time and effort to writing down the results of their research, study, and analysis so that fellow members of the engineering profession could share this new knowledge. AIAA is deeply indebted to these authors, and we are pleased to express our gratitude to them.

Special acknowledgment is appropriate also for the outstanding contribution made by our reviewers to the technical quality, substance, and readability of articles. A conscientious review of a paper by a person knowledgeable in the field reveals areas where clarity and conciseness can be improved or, occasionally, technical errors have occurred. The reviewer also serves as an advisor to the editors in deciding whether a paper merits publication.

This time-consuming work necessarily is conducted anonymously with respect to an individual manuscript. At this time, however, we are able to list the names of those who have performed so ably in this capacity during the past year, and we are happy to take this opportunity to extend to them our warm thanks.
