

Many different groups of people are involved in the production of JA. First, of course, are the authors. Without the authors and their papers, there would not be a JA. Let us not forget that obvious fact. So we thank the authors for their papers and their selection of JA as their journal for rare trivial review makes the editors appreciate all the more the complete review. To the JA reviewers the editors extend publication. (Please don't quote this paragraph if we happen to reject your paper.)

Next there are the Associate Editors (AE) who are responsible for evaluating the papers. The AE's require two talents in almost equal proportion: 1) sufficient experience to be able to judge the merit of a paper and 2) sufficient administrative skill to keep the editorial process moving. The Associate Editors for JA for 1975 have done an excellent job. My thanks are extended to Toshi Kubota, Carson Yates, Ed Stear, John Povolny, Jim Dougherty, and Roy Reichenbach. We had a guest editorial staff for the April issue of JA. Bill Walker was the key individual; to him and the other guest editors, I also extend my appreciation for their help.

The reviewers are the anonymous, but essential, facet of the JA production team. Almost every reviewer does a thorough, objective, conscientious, timely job of review. A few reviewers submit shallow, trivial and superficial reviews. The editor discounts this input. Once a shallow review has been received, we delete that person from our reviewer list. The their sincere thanks for their help in maintaining technical quality. Those for 1975 are listed below.

The AIAA Publications Committee and the Vice President-Publications, Ralph Ragan, serve in a capacity analogous to the Chairman and the Board of Directors; this analogy is valid for the publication activity. The Editors and the AIAA New York staff are the executives who implement the plans that have been formulated. Your Editors have spent many hours in committee meetings and conferences sharing the problems of publication. With that background, the Editors of JA acknowledge the help, advice, and assistance that the Vice President and the Publications Committee have provided in making JA successful in 1975, and we look forward to a dynamic 1976.

Finally, the key group in the production of JA is the New York staff. Miss Ruth Bryans, Mr. David Staiger, and Mrs. Anne Huth have contributed very significantly to JA. It has been a pleasure to work with each of these individuals.
