Notice to Subscribers

You will have noticed that the March and April issues of the British Journal of Pharmacology are 50% thicker than normal issues. The extra pagination is being supplied without extra charge to subscribers and the costs of this are being defrayed by the British Pharmacological Society. The need to increase the Journal size has been precipitated by a substantial increase in the backlog of in press material. In turn this has arisen from an increase in the rate at which papers are being submitted to the Journal and the increasing size of our meetings, the transactions of which are also published in the Journal. The editorial board is working towards a permanent solution to these problems. Meanwhile I apologise to authors whose manuscripts are temporarily delayed by these difficulties.
