NEWSPAPER

KPRC TV SHOOTS MORE NEWS FILM THAN ANY OTHER HOUSTON STATION.

KPRC TV believes our viewers should see the news instead of seeing an announcer read the news.

That's why we have more reporters and cameramen, in more places, shooting more film and doing more in-depth stories than any other Houston TV station.

But being the biggest isn't enough. We also pry harder. And more often than not we uncover important news like our story on price comparisons of prescription drugs.

Our reporting doesn't stop there. KPRC TV's air personalities write their own stories, help edit film and put together the newscasts.

The result is a factual, objective, informative news presentation by reporters who are involved in the news of the day.

Maybe that's why KPRC TV has won more news awards than all the other Houston stations combined.

If you'd like to know more, contact our reps. They know our news.

GRASS VALLEY GROUP Model 1600-7K Switching System...

With Rotational Wipe Effects

Model 1600-7K is a 24-input, 8-output, production switcher with 3 mix/effects systems, plus program and preset buses with flip-flop mixing. Each mix/effects system provides both rotary and conventional wipe effects.

Several types of rotational transitions are possible, for example wipes which pivot about a fixed point to produce a clock, windshield wiper, or fan effect. The rotational feature can also be applied to many conventional patterns to produce either a rotational effect or a splitting effect. A square or a group of 4 squares can be made to rotate as they expand in size. Separation of the transition control levers allows independent control of size and rotation. Soft wipe and bordered wipe operation is available with most rotary patterns.

Selection of a pivotal wipe is obtained by depressing a unique pattern button. Selection of the rotational mode or splitting mode for conventional patterns is achieved by first selecting the conventional pattern (e.g., a square), followed by operation of a "shift" key. A total of 54 patterns is available.

Model 1600-7K is also available in PAL and PAL-M versions. For additional information on the system, including a demonstration video tape, contact your nearest Grass Valley Group field office.

The Week in Brief

PRELIMINARIES □ There was more back-and-forth last week about how and if the Ford-Carter debates can be put on television than there ever will be if they do go on the air. But by week's end, it seemed all the parties of interest may be ready to go ahead. PAGE 19.

CANADIAN MATTERS □ Senator Magnuson gets Kissinger assurances that State Department will actively seek a solution to border problems and advertising policies that affect U.S. broadcasters. PAGE 21.

SMOOTH AND ROUGH WATERS □ Nomination of Joseph Fogarty to FCC sails smoothly at Hill hearing last week. However, as expected, choice of Margita White stirs up some stormy conflict-of-interest questions. PAGE 22.

TWO-DECADE COMPARISON □ Spot television's healthy growth and change over the past 20 years is traced in a report developed by the Television Bureau of Advertising. PAGE 24.

ANOTHER 'NO' TO VIOLENCE □ Samsonite Corp. is the latest JWT advertiser to refuse to place ads in shows it feels promote violence or sex. PAGE 24.

TOYOTA TURNS DOWN 'GODFATHER' □ As a result of pressure from one of its dealers, an Italian-American, Toyota won't advertise on NBC's telecast of "The Godfather—Parts I and II" in 1977-78 season. PAGE 28.

NEW RELATIONSHIP □ OTP Director Houser hopes to move agency away from its role of FCC critic to spend more time with Congress. He also sets November date for new OTP policy statement. PAGE 30.

RENOVATION □ The full revision of the Communications Act by the House Communications Subcommittee is set to begin in October with a completion date scheduled for early next year. PAGE 30.

AFFILIATE AUDIENCE □ Henry Kissinger will open CBS Radio affiliates convention on Sept. 14. Other speakers at Williamsburg, Va., include news and sports executives. PAGE 31.

POLE CONTROL □ Bill introduced in the House would give the FCC power to regulate pole attachment rates for cable TV. PAGE 34.

STATIONS RATED □ National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting study ranks Michigan and Ohio television stations according to their programing and employment efforts. PAGE 35.

GROSSMAN'S ENTRY □ Taking a more aggressive competitive stance, PBS releases its fall schedule. It's counterprogramed head-to-head with the commercial TV networks and the PBS president explains why he feels public television has made such great strides. PAGE 38.

WOMETCO'S NEW VENTURE □ Florida-based company adds pay television to its plans as it applies to buy 80% of WBTB-TV Newark, N.J. Though STV floundered under Blonder Tongue ownership of that station, Wometco believes it has a programing pattern for pay success. PAGE 41.

SYNDICATED SPORTS FARE □ Simmons-Parkes signs Jane Chastain for its new weekly half-hour Sportsview that will be sold, with help of Avery-Knodel, in a two-way deal. PAGE 42.

KANSAS CITY NUMBERS □ CBS-TV and NBC-TV finished in a dead heat in the Republican convention ratings. But ABC-TV came up with a plum Aug. 17 when a special preview of The Captain and Tennille captured the best audience of the week. PAGE 42.

SCHORR SUBPOENAED □ Suspended CBS reporter gets the word from the House Ethics Committee investigating the CIA report leak. Summons is for Sept. 15. PAGE 42.

CIRCULAR POLARIZATION □ Despite reports of ABC's success in Chicago with test of that transmission pattern, broadcasters express misgivings about expense of changeover, and whether system should be tested more. Question is also raised whether it should be an option of the broadcaster, not an FCC requirement. PAGE 43.

U ANTENNAS ON SETS □ Council for UHF Broadcasting's proposal for attachments comparable to those for VHF draws favorable comment. PAGE 44.

CBS-TV'S RUNNING BACK □ Carrying the ball for the network's prime-time offerings this fall is Bud Grant, vice president, programs, since April. Associates praise his competence and feel his thorough schooling in daytime programing will be a key factor in CBS-TV's efforts to regain the ratings leadership. PAGE 65.

White hope

Some experienced observers are predicting that Senate will confirm nomination of Margita White to FCC, despite Democratic disinclination to approve Republican appointments and questions raised about communications practice of her husband's law firm (see page 22). It's pointed out that no doubts about her basic qualifications or integrity have been raised in responsible or influential quarters.

It's also assumed that Senate would be subject to criticism if it left seats unoccupied until next January on essential agencies like FCC. Beyond that, senatorial rejection of woman for agency that has been without one since Charlotte Reid, Republican, resigned some months ago could arouse repercussions from women's organizations. Confirmation of other FCC nomination now before Senate—Joe Fogarty, Democratic counsel to Communications Subcommittee—is believed assured.

Defections

Network sources say final counts aren't available but that preliminary reports indicate substantial numbers of NBC-TV and CBS-TV affiliates failed to carry full gavel-to-gavel coverage provided by those networks at this summer's political conventions. One top executive ventured that many stations, if not most, "joined us late or tuned out early—or both." Another source offered partial figures that tended to confirm late-and-early outages: He said first reports from stations indicated around 10% of line-up pre-empted network for early local news and about 15%-20% for late local—and that he wouldn't be surprised if final figures are twice as high.

Talk hurts

Mounting criticism of TV violence by likes of Jimmy Carter, American Medical Association and various advertisers, among others, has network authorities concerned—not about validity but about propaganda effect. They insist criticism is based on misinformation, to put it charitably. In case of AMA denunciation, for example, they say psychiatrist members—who presumably have clearest insights into violence causes—cast most of votes against it. But some also say they're having to spend more time these days making explanations to agencies whose clients have raised questions as result of "violence" publicity.

Study that had provided principal ammunition in National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting's new antiviolence campaign has, in effect, substantially defused itself. Leaders of b.i. Associates, which monitored for NCCB and plan ongoing service (BROADCASTING, Aug 2), say they've done retribution, eliminating light and humorous violence, and that this cut their original count by 52%. They use so-called "Gerbner definition" of violence, which includes comedic, but say in future they'll also include counts of "serious" violence alone.

Legal brief

Front runner for general counsel's job at National Association of Broadcasters is Erwin G. Krasnow, 40, Washington communications attorney associated with Kirkland, Ellis & Rowe, Chicago-based law firm. Mr. Krasnow has been with firm since 1964. He is slated to succeed John B. Summers, NAB's new executive vice president-general manager, who reportedly recommended his appointment.

Less certain is selection of new NAB vice president for television, decreed in reorganization program now under way. There's faction of board members and officials supporting Bill Carlisle, now VP in government relations department, who was VP for television before job was abolished years ago.

Season for speculation

Guessing game as to who would be new chairman of FCC if Jimmy Carter becomes President has gone beyond speculation about Commissioner Ben Hooks, this on assumption that Mr. Hooks may be in line for bigger assignment, perhaps to federal bench, possibly cabinet post. (There's one black now in Ford cabinet—Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman Jr.)

One clue to possible FCC appointment is seen in long-time friendship of Mr. Carter and Robert Marmet, Washington communications lawyer. They were both in class of 1947 at U.S. Naval Academy, have maintained contact since going different ways. It's doubtful Mr. Marmet, who succeeded to lucrative practice established by late Paul M. Segal, would want FCC job for himself, but it would be only natural for Mr. Carter to consult him on appointments.

Partisan movement

Donald Jones of KFIZ(AM) Fond du Lac, Wis., is putting together coalition of broadcasters to support Gerald Ford in campaign for election to Presidency. Mr. Jones, vice chairman of National Association of Broadcasters radio board and one of kingpins in current reform activity inside NAB, is long-time Ford activist, having served as Republican chairman in his county and Ford delegate at Republican convention this year.

Mr. Jones thinks more broadcasters should be involved in partisan politics, especially since President Ford's opponent, Jimmy Carter, told forum staged by consumerist Ralph Nader that he thinks FCC should involve itself in setting TV program standards to cut down on violence (BROADCASTING, Aug. 16). Mr. Jones will raise his concern during NAB executive committee meeting Monday and Tuesday in Washington, but doesn't expect that organization to take partisan stance. NAB traditionally stays out of presidential contests.

Dislocations

Extensive changes in 1976-77 prime-time schedules made by ABC-TV and NBC-TV this month are disturbing some advertising agencies with heavy fall commitments on networks. Agitation is intensified by expectation that CBS-TV will make changes this week and speculation that ABC-TV may make more before Sept. 20 opening of new season. One agency executive said he was re-evaluating all scatter buys to determine whether promises of gross rating points and demographics can be delivered.

Honor for Bryan

D. Tennant Bryan, 70, chairman of Media General, owner of newspapers in Virginia, North Carolina and Florida and of WFLA-AM-FM-TV Tampa, Fla., soon will be nominated by President Ford as member of U.S. Advisory Commission on Information. He would succeed J. Leonard Reinsch, retired president of Cox Broadcasting and chairman of Cox Cable, who served tenures as chairman and member under Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon. Incumbent chairman is Hobart Lewis, chairman of Reader's Digest.

In letter to Mr. Reinsch, President Ford said, "your expert advice and sage counsel has been of invaluable assistance" to commission, which sits over United States Information Agency. Other incumbent commissioners are George Gallup, Arthur C. Nielsen and John M. Shaheen, oil millionaire who has talked of starting new newspaper in New York.

Business Briefly

Chrysler Corp. □ New Plymouth and Chrysler car lines for 1977 will have network-TV introduction Sept. 22, spotlighting Plymouth Fury, Volare, Cordoba and luxury model Chrysler New Yorker. Monday Memo[®]

A broadcast advertising commentary from John Watson, vice president, BritRail Travel International, New York

A British advertiser finds an American home

With the notable exception of several extremely large companies, British industry has remained basically uninvolved with television advertising in this country.

For the small British advertiser, U.S. television presents a tantalizing but frustrating vista. While a vast and lucrative market exists "out there" with many potential customers presumably ripe for our message, the economics of obtaining television time in this country generally puts this audience beyond our reach.

While smaller American advertisers can use local or regional advertising opportunities, for Britons (or, indeed, for any foreign interests) the only feasibilities are the largest U.S. markets or the networks, both of which are generally impracticable for us.

Another discouraging factor is the typical British firm's unfamiliarity with the American television program format and the styles of commercial presentation—in short, the way you do things here that differ from our practices at home.

These negative factors are especially dismaying to English companies that cater to the traveling and vacationing audience because so much of our export trade, to assure a favorable balance of payments, depends on the affluent American tourist business.

Now, a solution—albeit temporary—to our dilemma has appeared: On Sept. 6, for the first time, a British program-maker, Thames of London, will be showcased for five successive evenings over WOR-TV New York, giving New Yorkers a whole range of top-rated programs from the United Kingdom. The combination of programming and participating advertisers has made this unusual TV event a timely vehicle that clearly merited our investment.

Over the past six years that I've spent as an Englishman living and working in New York, we at BritRail watched the growth of the television medium with fascination. It was, however, mingled with despair at our not being able to join the parade. We were pleased and intrigued to notice a marked increase in the numbers of British programs being shown here, but because they were generally either noncommercial broadcasts or isolated events, they did not affect our advertising plans. But the innovative notion of a concentration of British TV over a five-day period, as Thames and WOR-TV are scheduling, immediately stimulated our active interest.

It is perhaps unfortunate that this week will represent my first use of television as an advertising medium for BritRail. Nevertheless, for a company with a 1975

John Watson is executive vice president and resident director of BritRail Travel International Inc., New York. He is responsible for marketing and advertising in North America the passenger services of British Rail and its steamship connections with Ireland and continental Europe. Mr. Watson joined British Rail in 1969 after 25 years representing in Europe the rail, steamship and airline services of Canadian Pacific. He is chairman of the Conference of European Railroad Representatives in New York and a fellow of the Institute of Certified Travel Agents. BritRail is one of the participating advertisers in "Thames on 9" a week of British programs from Thames Television that will be broadcast over WOR-TV New York Sept. 6-10, 5:30 p.m. to sign-off.

gross turnover slightly exceeding $7 million, television advertising in normal circumstances was just out of the question.

There must be thousands of smaller advertisers—from commerce and industry as well as from the travel business—that find themselves in a predicament similar to ours. They are eager to reap the benefits of a medium that embodies the use of both sound and sight, a medium that captures the prospective buyer in his most receptive frame of mind.

In most cases however, the staggering cost of network television and the more limited scope of local television coverage force the exclusion of television from serious consideration during annual marketing reviews. The "Thames on 9" TV package, however, justifies our involvement, both because of the projected revenue return it offers and the chance for exceptional exposure to a quality market it creates.

This special event affords us an opportunity to promote the comprehensive railway network that exists in Britain to the television viewers who are most likely to have occasion to use it. Whether as tourists or on business, the majority of Americans visiting Britain commence their stay in London. Should they wish to move elsewhere, we want them to know that with our intercity service they can reach every major city in Britain.

Our advertising message will stress that we can transport passengers from one city-center to another in fast, new, air-conditioned trains in a matter of hours. Our rail service also links with the major ports, should they want to extend their journey to Ireland or Europe.

In addition to the advantages of appearing within a totally British context, plus the reasonable prospects of good penetration in a top-dollar market, "Thames on 9" has further appeal on the basis of its content and mode of presentation.

The British system of using only natural breaking points in any given program for the airing of commercials and of creating less frequent interruptions is being maintained during this television week of close to 50 broadcast hours, containing approximately 40 different shows. One especially provocative feature of the week is the live transmission, via satellite, of Dick Cavett's American views on London set against our Eamonn Andrews's presumably quite British vision of New York. It is my belief that the novel and stimulating environment of "Thames on 9" will result in greater receptivity to our British Rail ads.

British TV programming is far more liberal in its treatment of sensitive or controversial subjects than is U.S. television. Moreover, the comedy is in a far different vein from the laugh shows to which Americans are accustomed. Therefore, we anticipate that the WOR-TV audience during the Sept. 6-10 week will really sit up and take notice of whatever transpires on their home screens; in the process, their recall of commercial messages supporting these shows should be correspondingly more memorable.

On balance, therefore, I believe the many impressive facets of this upcoming week of special programming make our initial approach to this medium sound marketing strategy.

Naturally we hope our participation in this project will catch the eyes of both Anglophiles and top business executives who may well have cause to use our services on their international travels. But, further, it can be hoped that a week such as this will be successful enough to warrant staging it again, in other cities, thereby affording another unusual opportunity to British advertisers, and to small advertisers in general.

Perhaps "Thames on 9" may even stimulate other kinds of broadcast experiments in terms both of programming and of marketing.

THE SURE WAY TO REACH THIS MARKET

You see, Hartford, New Haven and Springfield is one market. WFSB-TV defines the market in terms of the multi-city area we cover. And in terms of how we cover it for the 2½ million people who live here. We call it The Land of the 3.

THE GREAT ADI/DMA WALL. STOP BEATING YOUR HEAD AGAINST IT.

This is how some people still see us. As two separate ADI/DMA areas. Hartford and New Haven as one. Springfield as another. That's not the way it has to be. With WFSB-TV you can penetrate the walls between them.

THE OLD BLIND SPOT. NOW YOU SEE IT.

There are still computers that can't find the one big market between New York and Boston. They've got a great big blind spot: Southern New England. We've got a sure cure.

Springfield is one Market.

WFSB-TV is the only CBS affiliate in Southern New England. The only station with a one hour local news program. The only station with an hour service magazine every weekday morning.

The station with Dinah, Celebrity Sweepstakes and the most public affairs in prime time every week. And editorials every day. The station that originates the only weekly show about business on commercial television. The station that made room for 8 special programs exploring public education in depth. And the Connecticut State Lottery program, too. And also threw a picnic so hundreds of retarded kids and adults could play ball, enjoy music and just get outside for a change.

Day after day. On and off the air. WFSB-TV is Southern New England.

Hartford-New Haven-Springfield. WFSB-TV. One market, Indivisible, with CBS and Service for all.

There's a lot more going on...

So is Katz.

Rod Laver became a tennis great by mixing a big serve with a deft volley.

In the rep business Katz has the resources to score with a big smash or a little finesse. Take computers for example. Katz has a big computer that can do most anything but make a sales call — and a mini-computer to help with that job.

With more salesmen in more offices than any other rep, Katz can afford to link all of this selling power together in a nationwide on-line computerized spot sales system.

By year end an automated avail preparation system will give Katz TV salesmen more time to sell. Katz Radio will be transmitting "Probe" reports to all of its offices. Both station and Katz salesmen will be getting the facts they need faster to sell retail and agency timebuyers.

Even the little things at Katz are big. Being big helps Katz build bigger station billing.

Come to Katz. Be with the best. Call Gordon Hastings, Vice President, New Business Development. (212) 972-2422.

Love's labors won

EDITOR: Your Aug. 2 "Closed Circuit" headlined "No Love Lost" was based on the assumption that my letter to radio broadcasters asking them to contact the House Judiciary Committee was critical of the National Association of Broadcasters because I said, "Don't depend on the so-called Washington lobby to do it for you."

I was not being critical of NAB's Washington lobbying efforts any more than I was of our own or that of any other organization. I was simply trying to tell radio broadcasters that they must personally and individually act to protect their interests and not rely on any Washington lobby to do it for them.

The National Radio Broadcasters Association knows how effective individual broadcasters, acting in concert, can be. The "right-to-sue" issue is a good example. As a result of NRBA's alerting radio broadcasters, several hundred of them wrote to congressmen (we have copies of their letters) and the inequity was eliminated. We give NAB full credit for all it did and we're pleased to have had the opportunity to work on the same issue with NAB, even if we didn't officially combine our efforts.

The important thing is that for once the interest of the radio broadcaster was protected and we're happy to have been involved in this successful effort.—Abe Voron, executive director, National Radio Broadcasters Association, New York.

What Sauter said

EDITOR: In the Aug. 16 issue in an article concerning a fairness doctrine dispute relating to Texaco's latest piece of propaganda, Van Gordon Sauter, CBS vice president for program practices, said: "We have a policy of not carrying commercials or PSA's that relate to controversial issues of public importance."

That seems to imply that the only ones he will allow are those that have no public importance. Such cop-outs, if Mr. Sauter is representative of this nation's programing chiefs, are responsible for the indoctrination of America with a policy, or propaganda if you will, in direct violation of the media's duty to the public interest—Barry Vaughn, South Royalton, Vt.

The Carter-Nader axis

EDITOR: Jimmy Carter's alignment with Ralph Nader (BROADCASTING, Aug. 16) is an interesting opening to what appears to be Mr. Carter's switch from his promise to return our government to the people. He now wants to pull the regulatory agencies up from "... the low estate to which they have fallen."

At a time when more people are buying and listening to radio than ever before, buying and viewing more television and clamoring for more CATV so that they can have more channels to listen to and view one should logically conclude that they are satisfied. "If I should call on the parents of this nation to express displeasure ... I think this would have a beneficial effect," says Mr. Carter. If he wants to poll the American people, send him the rating books.

Following Mr. Nader is comparable to hooking your caboose to a locomotive with a full head of steam and no track to run on.—Chick Monti, general sales manager, WPRC-AM-FM Lincoln, Ill.

Side effects?

EDITOR: The Aug. 16 "Open Mike" from Patti Johnson referring to sexist practices in broadcasting touches on a trend that is becoming increasingly more disturbing in our business—reverse discrimination.

Ms. Johnson apparently would prefer to ignore the pronouns his, he and him and substitute hers, she and her or better yet their, they and them. Despite the scramble to hire women, some men still do work as announcers and newsmen. More and more the "special, sustained efforts" to seek out women leave in their wake men who were fired because of a quota or token women who are marginally qualified. I'm not saying stop hiring women. I am saying hire the qualified person, whether it be a man or a woman.

With good, solid, communications courses and majors being offered at many colleges and schools, there is a larger pool of qualified people to fill jobs. So, don't merely hire women because they're women. The backlash will not only leave resentment, but also make it difficult for those women who are qualified to get jobs and be accepted.—Robert B. Graham, Darien, Conn.

It used to be

EDITOR: In giving the details of Hall Communications' proposed purchase of W GAL-AM-FM Lancaster, Pa. ("Changing Hands," March 29) and proposed sale of WETE(AM) Knoxville, Tenn. ("Changing Hands," Aug. 9), you refer to Hall's WCTY(FM) Norwich, Conn. by its former call, WICH-FM. WICH-FM became WCTY in July 1975 to reflect its separate programming from its AM counterpart.—Charles E. Everett, Bridgewater, Conn.

Top of the Week

Still on: Ford-Carter TV debates

Despite the number of obstacles thrown up last week, it looks like go for the confrontation

Although there remain a number of competing interests to reconcile, at the end of last week the odds still favored Great Debates II.

It won't be easy, however. Problems raised at meetings and in communications last week involving Congress, the networks, the Federal Election Commission, the two major candidates and their representatives, at least one unhappy third-party candidate and the League of Women Voters showed that the path to the debates is strewn with obstacles.

Still, the major hurdles are behind. First, the mechanism for TV coverage of the debates was provided when the FCC ruled that candidate debates, when sponsored by someone other than broadcast stations and broadcast live and uncut, are exempt from the equal time requirement of Section 315 of the Communications Act. The League of Women Voters has offered itself as the nonbroadcast sponsor. Second, the candidates, President Ford and Jimmy Carter, and vice presidential nominees Robert Dole and Walter Mondale, have agreed to debate, and have not backed out yet. And now—and third—if the league-sponsored arrangement falls apart, it appears that Congress will step in with the remedy: a temporary suspension of 315 to make possible all manner of broadcast coverage—of debates and otherwise—exempt not only from equal time but from mandated fairness obligations as well. Both Senator John Pastore (D-R.I.) and Representative Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.), chairmen of their respective Communications Subcommittees, say they will start that ball rolling if they have to. "Should the thing fall apart," Senator Pastore said Friday, "I'd be the first one . . . to introduce a resolution." Said Representative Van Deerlin: "We'll be ready to move" if the league arrangement is challenged or runs afoul of the campaign law. Both men said they thought such legislation could be cleared in committee for quick action by both houses.

Behind it. Jim Karayn (l), director of the debates project for the League of Women Voters Education Fund, and Peggy Lampl, league executive director, were unscheduled witnesses at a hearing before Senator John Pastore's Communications Subcommittee Tuesday. Senator Pastore wanted them on record saying their plans for the debates would fall apart if the networks were given the suspension they seek of the equal time requirement of the Communications Act. On the force of their remarks, Senator Pastore said he will not press for the suspension unless the league sponsorship of the debates is jeopardized.

All three networks are willing to cover the debates under league sponsorship. The plan the league offered calls for four debates in various cities, beginning in St. Louis Sept. 28, in auditoriums with live audiences. If the networks had their way, however, they would carry the debates as they did in 1960—in their own studios, where the best production values would be available.

The networks are not yet together on their approach to the debates controversy. To date, CBS and NBC have wired Senator Pastore and Representative Van Deerlin seeking suspension of the equal time provision of the Communications Act, Section 315, permitting them to carry the debates without having to include third party candidates and without having to rely on nonbroadcasters such as the League of Women Voters to sponsor them. NBC argued additionally for a permanent repeal of Section 315 for presidential and vice presidential candidates.

Later in the week, both NBC and CBS said their efforts to secure suspension of Section 315 are not aimed at wresting the debates from the League of Women Voters. Both, however, continue to press for the suspension and toward that end, CBS Washington Vice President William Leonard will meet privately with Senator Pastore Monday (Aug. 30).

ABC supports suspension of 315 but isn't counting on that happening.

Both Senator Pastore and Representative Van Deerlin requested additional information and argument from the networks about suspending Section 315. Absent an independent disruption of the League of Women Voters approach, however, neither chairman is likely to initiate legislation to do that. "I don't think it's proper, I don't think it's decent and I don't think it's dignified," to undercut the league's work, Senator Pastore told BROADCASTING.

In response to Representative Van Deerlin's questions, wired to the three network heads last week, NBC said that if Section 315 were suspended, it would offer free time for candidate appearances (four half hours for each party) in addition to the free debates. It would also include "direct and substantial appearances" by the candidates in a planned series of cam-

Let's talk. Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter struck some nerves in the broadcasting industry with his remarks at a Ralph Nader Public Citizen Forum in Washington three weeks ago, and prompted National Association of Broadcasters President Vincent Wasilewski and Chairman Wilson Wearn to request a meeting with him "in the near future." In a joint letter to the candidate last week, Mr. Wearn and Mr. Wasilewski announced their wish to discuss major issues in radio and TV "and to dispel some of the unease within the industry resulting from your recent remarks . . ." At the Nader Forum, Mr. Carter said that if elected he would appoint to the FCC and other regulatory commissions consumer advocates that would appeal to Mr. Nader. He also said the FCC should have a direct role in cutting down the amount of violence on TV (BROADCASTING, Aug. 16). Mr. Wearn and Mr. Wasilewski requested that Mr. Carter meet with "a small group" from the NAB board, meaning probably, the executive committee.

A short history. The misnamed "Great Debates" of 1960 consisted of four one-hour joint appearances by the Republican and Democratic presidential nominees, Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Senator John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.). In each program, the candidates were questioned by broadcast newsmen, not by each other. The first program originated at CBS-owned WBBM-TV Chicago at 9:30-10:30 p.m. New York time Sept. 26. Moderator was Howard K. Smith, then with CBS News, now with ABC, and panelists were Sander Vanocur, NBC; Charles Warren, Mutual; Stuart Novins, CBS, and Bob Fleming, ABC. Arbitron estimated the audience at 29.6 million homes, the most attracted to a television program up to that time. The second confrontation originated at NBC-owned WRC-TV Washington at 7:30-8:30 p.m. Oct. 7. It was moderated by the late Frank McGee of NBC News, and panelists were Edward P. Morgan, ABC;

Paul Niven, CBS; Alvin Spivak, UPI, and Harold Levy, Newsday. The third originated at 7:30-8:30 p.m. Oct. 13 in ABC-TV studios in New York where Senator Kennedy appeared and in Los Angeles where Mr. Nixon was campaigning. The moderator, Bill Shadei, ABC, and the panelists, the late Charles Von Fremd, CBS; Mr. McGee of NBC; Roscoe Drummond, New York Herald-Tribune, and Douglass Cater, Reporter magazine, were in Los Angeles. The fourth put both candidates in ABC-TV's New York studios for broadcast at 10-11 p.m. Oct. 21. The late Quincy Howe, ABC, moderated, and panelists were John Edwards, ABC; Walter Cronkite, CBS; Frank Singiser, Mutual, and John Chancellor, NBC. The principal television advisers to the candidates for the joint appearances were J. Leonard Reinsch of Cox Broadcasting for Senator Kennedy and Fred Scribner of the Nixon campaign staff for the Vice President. They and other aides held 15 negotiating sessions (not 12 as commonly reported) before agreeing on procedures for the first debate.

The debates were made possible by the suspension of the equal-time law for presidential and vice-presidential candidates (although the latter, Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, and Lyndon B. Johnson, Democrat, refused to debate). The Senate passed a suspension resolution on June 27, 1960, but the House waited until Aug. 22, after both parties had picked their candidates, before following suit. The debates did not constitute the first candidate appearance to take advantage of the lifting of restraints. Mr. Nixon seized that honor with an interview on NBC-TV's Jack Paar Show on the day President Eisenhower signed the measure.

In its responses, CBS said it would try to arrange its own debates, in addition to the league's, if Section 315 were suspended. In its own debates, "significant minor parties . . . would be taken into consideration," CBS President Arthur Taylor said. CBS would include the league-sponsored debates in the eight hours free time it says it would offer the candidates. NBC, on the other hand, said its league debate coverage would be in addition to the four half hours it would offer each side.

ABC said it will withhold responding to Mr. Van Deerlin's questions until after the Federal Election Commission decides whether the league's sponsorship of the debates is legal under the campaign laws.

The FEC considered that question in a meeting Thursday. The issue, raised by the commission's general counsel, is whether the league's sponsorship would amount to an in-kind contribution to both presidential candidates. Such contributions are prohibited under the law. The FEC postponed its decision until today, but the commission appears ready to say that the league's record of nonpartisanship moots the question of contributions.

The same general counsel posed another problem, however, suggesting that the league's plans to accept corporate and union contributions to pay for the debates—the league estimates it will need $150,000—might be illegal. Peggy Lampl, executive director of the league, told Senator Pastore at a hearing Tuesday, however, that the league would use its own money, primarily from foundation sources, for the project.

Still another threat to the debates comes from former Senator Eugene McCarthy, an independent candidate for the Presidency, who says he will file a fairness doctrine complaint with the FCC if he is not included. His reasons are several, not the least being that the debates will "distract the viewers from what I or other third parties might be saying." He told BROAD-

CASTING he thinks if the press has done a good job of informing about the candidates there is no need for debates, and that for the press to permit the debates between just the two parties without including other significant viewpoints is to "surrender in much the same way as a totalitarian press surrenders to a totalitarian government."

Mr. McCarthy said his attorney is currently drafting a legal brief for a possible fairness complaint. The candidate's aim is to prevent the debates from happening at all. For the moment, the FCC has no role in all this. According to John Sturm, legal assistant to Chairman Richard Wiley, the commission will act if it receives a request for declaratory ruling or if it receives a request for advice from Congress. It has received neither yet, however. "The ball is not in our court," Mr. Sturm said.

Under the assumption that it will be permitted to run the debates, the League of Women Voters continued its negotiations between the Carter and Ford camps over formats, places and dates for the meetings. Early in the week, President Ford urged starting the debates next week, a suggestion Mr. Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, denounced before the league-Ford-Carter meeting Thursday. Mr. Powell is paired with the Carter campaign's TV expert, Barry Jagoda, to represent Mr. Carter in the negotiations. Mr. Ford's representatives are Dean Burch and William Ruckelshaus. Mr. Burch, now with the Washington law firm of Pierson, Ball & Dowd, is a former chairman of the Republican National Committee, of the FCC, and was a White House counsel. Mr. Ruckelshaus is the former deputy attorney general. Although neither side would disclose the points on which they agreed or disagreed during the three-and-a-half hour session, both said they were confident there will be debates. Jim Karayn, major domo for the league project, said more was accomplished than he had anticipated. Negotiations resume Wednesday.

315 exemption sought for delayed airing of candidate debates

There was a radio twist to the increasingly involved pretzel of political debates last week. The Radio Television News Directors Association asked the FCC to review an FCC Broadcast Bureau decision forbidding WILM(AM) Wilmington, Del., to broadcast a taped political debate without providing equal time to other candidates.

The RTNDA said the Broadcast Bureau's ruling is "arbitrary and violative of the First Amendment" and that the decision to broadcast a debate when the public would most benefit from it should be left to journalistic discretion.

WILM is an all-news station and was planning to cover and tape debates between Republican and Democratic candidates for Congress before the Rotary Club of Delaware. In a letter requesting advice on the applicability of the FCC's equal-time requirements, the WILM president and general manager, Sally V. Hawkins, wrote that the station's all-news format did not "lend itself easily to a half-hour block of programing." She said WILM wanted to tape the debate and broadcast excerpts during afternoon newscasts and the entire debate that evening or within a few days. The Broadcast Bureau ruled that "the broadcast of a taped debate even if broadcast in its entirety cannot be considered 'on-the-spot coverage of a bona fide news event' within the meaning of Section 315."

The RTNDA said the Broadcast Bureau erred in its interpretation of commission rules allowing unrestricted, on-the-spot coverage of appearances by candidates "live" and "in their entirety." The commission "cannot reasonably say that these events cease to be newsworthy if their broadcast from tape recordings is delayed for a few minutes or hours or even days," the RTNDA said.

The RTNDA noted that during the recent Democratic and Republican conventions, all the networks, particularly ABC, included taped excerpts of convention activities. The association said the conventions were indeed news events and that speeches and debates should be considered the same kind of news.

Canadian matters will be pursued, Kissinger reassures Magnuson

Letter to senator from State says talks will proceed on tax exemption and commercial-deletion policies

Even though a tax bill unfavorable to American broadcast stations near the Canadian border has been passed by both houses of the Canadian parliament and the Canadian government has given indication it will take the final step of promulgating the measure, the U.S. State Department said last week it will work to stop the bill.

That assurance, from Secretary of State Henry Kissinger through State's assistant secretary for congressional relations, Robert McCloskey, was precisely what Senate Commerce Committee Chairman Warren Magnuson (D-Wash.) and 17 other senators asked for in a letter to Dr. Kissinger in July (BROADCASTING, Aug. 2). Senator Magnuson has led a campaign in the Senate to prod the State Department to press the tax issue with the Canadians at the same time it is negotiating for a reversal of another troublesome action, the Canadian policy of deleting commercials from U.S. TV signals carried on cable TV.

A meeting between the two countries will take place in Washington "in the near future," Mr. McCloskey wrote Mr. Magnuson last week. On Aug. 18, Allan MacEachen, Canadian secretary of state for external affairs, told reporters in Washington, "we have undertaken to meet as soon as possible, and I believe that means late in September or early October." Mr. MacEachen, however, said the meeting would cover the commercial deletion problem and added that the tax bill "is not negotiable."

The tax bill would remove the tax exemption for advertising bought on American broadcast stations.

But, in his letter to Senator Magnuson, Mr. McCloskey said "it is our firm expectation" that the meeting will cover the tax bill as well as the commercial deletion problem.

The 18 senators in their July letter had proposed retaliating against Canada with legislation prohibiting the importation of Canadian movie and TV films and sound recordings into the United States or to tax heavily American TV products exported to Canada.

The State Department rejected that alternative for now, however, saying "it is premature while discussions are proceeding."

Senator Magnuson found the State Department's letter "reassuring," according to an aide to the senator.

Clear sailing for Fogarty; troubled water for White

Republican can't shake problem with conflict of interest and lame-duck attitude toward her party; subcommittee counsel finds all sweetness and light

The nominations of Joseph Fogarty and Margita White to the FCC were in hearings before the Senate Commerce Committee last Tuesday. During that proceeding, it became apparent that Senate confirmation of Mr. Fogarty, the Democratic counsel to the Senate Communications Subcommittee and protege of its chairman, John Pastore (D-R.I.), is virtually assured. It also became apparent that the appointment of the Republican Mrs. White, White House assistant news secretary, is in trouble.

How much in trouble should be clearer this Tuesday (Aug. 31), when the Senate Commerce Committee meets in executive session to consider both nominations.

At the hearing, Mr. Fogarty met no opposition from committee members or other witnesses. He sat behind the witness's microphone only long enough to read a three-page statement praising Senator Pastore, who retires the end of this session, and was asked no substantive questions.

Mrs. White's appearance lasted considerably longer, however, long enough for her to respond to a barrage of questions and later to listen from the audience to testimony from representatives of citizen groups strongly critical of her.

A few criticized Mrs. White's qualifications for the job. "She is a well educated and bright woman whom I have enjoyed meeting socially," said former FCC Commissioner Nicholas Johnson, "but there is really nothing in her background that demonstrates any preparation or inclination for this type of policy-making position." Mr. Johnson spoke as head of the National Citizens Communications Lobby.

But Senator Pastore brushed aside such comment, saying he was "not too much impressed" when another witness, Roger Hickey of the Public Media Center, charged Mrs. White lacked experience and was not informed on issues important to his group.

The more important issue in Mr. Pastore's mind, the one that occupied most of the hearing time, was the possible conflict of interest between Mrs. White's appointment to the FCC and the communications practice of her husband's law firm. Her husband, Stuart White, is a partner in Hamel, Park, McCabe & Saunders in Washington, which includes AT&T and some broadcast stations among its clients.

To remedy the conflict problem, Mrs. White promised to disqualify herself from any proceeding in which her husband's firm participated. At the hearing she said that would amount to a "very small" proportion of the FCC's business. And she promised to separate herself from any contact with members of Mr. White's firm. Further, Mr. White although a tax lawyer and not involved with communications, agreed not to share in any income from the law firm's FCC practice.

"It is inconceivable to me," Mrs. White said in her own defense, "that anyone would think that my husband's law firm associates, whom I see only rarely on social occasions, would influence my thinking or that the assumption prevails that a husband makes his wife's decision for her."

Her and her husband's arrangements to resolve the possible conflict were adjudged sufficient by the White House, the FCC and the Justice Department, all of which were consulted earlier by the Senate Communications Subcommittee (BROADCASTING, Aug. 9). A fourth opinion, from the General Accounting Office, found, however, that although the Whites' actions had removed the "fact of conflict," the "appearance" of conflict might still exist. The latter, it said, would have to be a judgment call by the Senate.

The Whites' actions were also considered sufficient by the two Republican senators at Tuesday's hearing, Howard Baker (Tenn.) and Ted Stevens (Alaska).

But Mr. Pastore was not moved. "I haven't made up my mind," he said. Calling Mr. White to the witness table, Mr. Pastore asked what Congress's remedy would be if Mr. White went back on his word not to share in any communications income. Mr. White said the Congress has his word of honor. But with Mrs. White at the FCC, "don't you think there will be a gravitation of business to your firm?" Senator Pastore asked. "I really don't know," Mr. White said.

"I think you're an honorable man," Mr. Pastore said to Mr. White. "I think you will live up to your word. But on the other hand, is it our position as elected servants of the people to take your word?"

Mr. Pastore said: "We're raising these questions because the record has to be very, very exhaustive and clear... We want to be fair. If I've ever agonized over a nomination, I've agonized over this one."

He added later, "For the life of me, I don't know why the administration didn't take up my suggestion of putting her [Mrs. White] on some other commission."

Several citizen group witnesses argued that the conflict they alleged in Mrs. White's appointment would hurt the commission. In effect, she would be a "part-time commissioner," said Charles Firestone of the Citizens Communications Center. Mr. Johnson wondered how the public could be assured the Whites would not receive remuneration from Hamel, Park's communications practice from the period of Mrs. White's tenure either during those seven years or in delayed payment afterward. "Will Hamel, Park open their books to public inspection for such a purpose?" he asked.

The closest examination of the conflict problem was given in a 23-page statement by Harvey Shulman, executive director of the Media Access Project. He raised the possibility that "once Mrs. White's position on an issue is generally known, parties can play 'firm shopping' or 'alter ego shopping' to either have her recused or allow her to participate." He said, "If AT&T wants her to vote, it might decide to let another party 'front' for it, or it might use another law firm. If, however, Mrs. White's vote is detrimental to AT&T, or any other party, it could affirmatively use Mr. White's firm to represent it, thereby knowing that it has eliminated an unfavorable vote."

Mr. Shulman argued that there would be an additional conflict between a seat for Mrs. White at the FCC and her current job under the President, particularly during Three make a crowd. The nomination of Joseph Fogarty (at right), counsel to the Senate Communications Subcommittee, received a warm family welcome at the subcommittee's hearing last week. But the appointment of White House assistant news secretary Margita White ran into a real family problem: Her husband, Stuart, is a member of a law firm that practices before the FCC, and that raises the question of conflict of interest.

this year's presidential election campaigns. "The specter of having the previous director of the White House Office of Communications rule on Section 315 or Section 312 complaints only three months after leaving office in an election year is not acceptable," he said. Mrs. White replied from the audience that it would take her a month or two to orient herself to the new job, and so probably she would not vote on anything before the end of the election campaign.

There was another side to the problem of conflict of interest—other than the financial and political sides—that was discussed at the hearing, the problem of women's rights. Mrs. White raised the issue herself, saying, "As this committee evaluates the circumstances of my situation, I know it will recognize that as more women pursue professional careers, there will be many more so-called 'conflict' issues. Husbands and wives who have been pursuing independent careers in separate orbits will enter coincidentally related spheres ... When precautionary measures can insure a sufficient degree of separation to avoid such a conflict, I hope it will not be necessary to abort either spouse's professional mission."

Senator Baker, in urging the committee to resolve the conflict question in Mrs. White's favor, noted her concern. "We don't want to discourage wives from entering government service," he said.

There are other pressures on the White nomination, the straight party-politics kind that comes, for instance, from three prominent members of the House Commerce Committee, Chairman Harley Staggers (D-W.Va.), John Moss (D-Calif.) and John Dingell (D-Mich.), who asked in a recent letter to the Senate that no Republicans be confirmed for agency jobs during the election campaign (BROADCASTING, Aug. 16).

Opposition to both the White and Fogarty nominations came from a fifth citizen group witness, Grace Castro Nagata, representing the National Latino Media Coalition, among other groups. She argued that one of the two nominations should have gone to a Hispanic American. Senator Pastore said he would ask both Mr. Fogarty and Mrs. White to say in writing what they would do to hire more Latinos. He also said the President should be urged, next time there is an opening at the FCC, to appoint a Hispanic American.

Both Mr. Fogarty and Mrs. White answered written questions from the committee about their stands on issues. In her responses, Mrs. White said: Congress should decide questions of open meetings at agencies and of reimbursement of citizen participants in FCC proceedings; the FCC's current approach toward regulating cable television is the wisest; "I am troubled" that the FCC's decision to exempt small stations from filing affirmative action employment programs exempts more than half of all stations; access for citizens should be encouraged on local stations but not regulated by the FCC; the fairness doctrine has encouraged discussion of local issues, but the equal-time provision, Section 315, has had "some inhibiting effect upon broadcast coverage, especially at the national level," although any changes in the law should come from Congress; extending the broadcast license period beyond three years may help expedite the removal process.

Mr. Fogarty said: FCC meetings should be open to the public unless voted closed by the commission, "for good and substantial cause"; he favors reimbursing citizen groups for "substantial" contributions in commission proceedings; "I think the policy of the FCC should be to encourage the growth of the cable industry through enlightened regulation while at the same time protecting the legitimate rights of over-the-air broadcasters"; the FCC should encourage licensees to cooperate with citizen groups to ascertain and program for local needs; "there should be broader access to the broadcast media," and to further that goal, the spectrum should be augmented with VHF drop-ins, cable growth and parity for UHF; he supports the fairness doctrine and would expect broadcasters to initiate coverage on their own of controversial issues; he thinks good broadcasters should get a plus at renewal time, but should be subject to hearing if competing applications are filed.

Although the common assumption until last week was that Mr. Fogarty was sponsored by Senator Pastore, the ranking Republican on the subcommittee, Mr. Baker, claimed responsibility for recommending him. He did that, he said, before Senator Pastore was aware of it. And when he told Mr. Pastore, the latter expressed "great reservations" about the appearances of that situation, reservations Mr. Baker said he helped the chairman overcome.

Mr. Fogarty's appointment is to the remaining two years of the unexpired term of Republican Charlotte Reid, who resigned from the commission in June. Mrs. White's nomination is to a full seven-year term, succeeding Democrat Glenn Robinson.

Three networks' sold-out status indicates potential for a fourth, says BBDO

BBDO's programing department said last week that "the talk of a fourth TV network" could become "a reality in the future."

This conclusion was based on the fact that there simply aren't enough commercial minutes on the existing three networks to meet advertiser demand, according to the BBDO document which is titled "Report on Prime-Time Network Television 1976-77."

Despite the fact that prices are higher than ever—30-second spots range from a low of $28,000 to a high of $62,000, the report says, with the average prime-time fourth-quarter minute selling at $90,000—"all three networks have already posted record sales levels" for the first three quarters of 1976 and "for the time being the networks are resisting putting additional commercials into programs."

BBDO cites the success of Norman Lear's Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, Don Fedderson's The Lawrence Welk Show and Yongestreet's Hee Haw as proof that "the fourth network can be a viable concept."

Another area the report focused on was family-viewing time, which caused programs "containing violence" to be "scheduled later into the evening and even after prime time," as the report put it. Within family hour, the "action/adventure/mystery category is down 17% from last year," the report continued, "and the newest storylines for shows in this category focus on a 'superhero' (like the Bionic Woman or Gemini Man) or they tend more to portray cops as human beings rather than as enforcers." BBDO also pointed out that, as a category, situation comedy "has had tremendous growth during the past two years, with the number of sitcoms on the air almost doubling. Again, the family hour has been partly responsible for this change. Sitcoms have found a cozy home during the family hour, drawing large audiences of children and teens."

NBC jockeys for fall starting position

Following ABC lead, it shifts time periods for six shows

Industry insiders say it's the biggest schedule upheaval this late in the season in the history of prime-time television: Last Thursday (Aug. 26), in response to ABC's extensive prime-time schedule changes 10 days ago (BROADCASTING, Aug. 23), NBC shifted time periods on six shows, added a 90-minute Movie of the Week, and announced a push-back into the second season of two series that had been slotted for September; the sitcom, Snip, and the 60-minute drama, Gibbsville.

CBS sources said that CBS would take a few days to digest its competitors' changes before deciding whether to respond with some fine-tuning of its own.

NBC changes: Little House on the Prairie moves from Wednesday (8-9 p.m., NYT) to Monday at 8. The Practice (Thursday, 9-9:30 p.m.) travels to Wednesday (8-8:30 p.m.) and NBC will create a new Movie of the Week time-slot on Wednesday, from 8:30 to 10 p.m., with "The Francis Gary Powers Story," starring Lee Majors (The Six Million Dollar Man), as the kickoff movie.

By slotting the new Wednesday movie, NBC is forced to push back its 60-minute Western series Quest, from Wednesday at 9 to Wednesday at 10. The Gemini Man, displaced by Little House, shifts to Thursday (8-9 p.m.), the 60-minute Best Sellers moves up an hour, from Thursday at 10 to Thursday at 9, and the 60-minute Van Dyke and Company flops back two hours, from Thursday at 8 to Thursday at 10.

to dramatize two decades'
growth of an advertising medium

With spot-TV billings at an all-time high and still rising, the Television Bureau of Advertising has prepared a report that tracks both the billings growth and many of the other changes in spot television's evolution over the last 20 years.

The special report will be published shortly along with TVB's annual estimates of advertisers' spending in spot TV for the past year. It will contrast the 1975 records with those of 1956, the year of its first such report, and those of the intermediate year, 1965. There've been a lot of changes.

In addition to a 325% increase in annual spot spending, TVB President Roger D. Rice noted, the years since 1956 have produced "a shift to new commercial lengths, new classifications of day-parts, new spot-using categories of advertisers, new budgets from long-term users—a 20-year record of explosive growth with even bigger gains projected for the future."

Among the changes singled out:

■ Investments by day-parts—In 1956 there were three day-parts; daytime, nighttime and late night, and over half (56%) of all spot investments went into nighttime, with daytime getting 34% and late night 10%. By 1965, early evening had been created out of pieces of daytime and nighttime, and was getting 23.1% while nighttime's share had dropped to 32.5%. Daytime's was down to 25.1% and late night's had increased to 19.3%. By 1975, early evening was spot TV's second most popular day-part, accounting for 25.8% of spot billings as compared with 33.6% for nighttime, 21.1% for daytime and 19.5% for late night.

■ Message lengths and classifications—In 1956, 44.4% of all spot dollars went into announcements, usually 60 seconds long and scheduled, like ID's, between programs. In-program participations represented 22.8%, program sponsorships 21.1% and ID's 11.8%. By 1965, emphasis had shifted more to commercial length, and 67.9% of the money went into one-minute commercials. By 1975, the 30-second message was the norm, accounting for 81.5% of all dollars, and the 60-second length was down to 15.6%.

■ Multimillion-dollar spot advertisers—No spot-TV spender was up to the $20-million level in 1956, or anywhere close. In fact, 94% of those spending over $20,000 a year (the minimum budget for inclusion in TVB's count) spent less than $1 million in 1956. By 1965, seven were spending $20 million or more; in 1975 the total reached 12, and the number spending $1 million or more had almost quadrupled since 1956, totaling 303. One thing remained constant: Procter & Gamble's supremacy as the biggest spot spender.

■ "Entrance fees"—In 1956, a spot-TV investment of $800,000 could get an advertiser onto the list of the top-100 spot spenders. By 1965 it took $2 million to make the list. In 1975 it took $3.4 million.

■ Food and food products was spot television's biggest category in 1956, 1965 and 1975—but its spot-TV billings totals rose from $107.6 million to $264.1 million to $388.3 million in the 20 years. Automotive spending, among other major categories, went from $12.9 million in 1956 to $38.9 million in 1965 and $135.9 million last year. And some small categories in 1956 have become substantial: Records and tapes, for instance, went from $800,000 in 1956 to $60.2 million last year.

Big oaks from little acorns. This table, illustrating the dramatic growth of spot-television advertising over the past 20 years, shows the leaps and bounds by which 1975's top-10 spot-TV spenders reached the head of the pack. The story for spot TV as a whole is equally impressive: From a total of $400 million in 1956, the year of the Television Bureau of Advertising's first such report, to $1.63 billion in 1975 and projected now to rise a record 32% to $2.15 billion this year (BROADCASTING, Aug. 16).

Samsonite steers away from violent programs

Luggage maker is third JWT client to shun such shows for its ads

The Samsonite Corp., Denver, says it will not place commercials for its luggage in television shows "promoting excessive violence, sex or matters of poor taste."

The company's president, Richard W. Hanselman, declared in a statement that "as a responsible advertiser and a concerned corporation, we reserve the freedom and privilege to determine the atmosphere in which our commercials will be shown. Given the possible link between televised violence and actual aggressive behavior by some individuals, we feel it is important to encourage those programs which, in our judgment attempt to achieve high standards in television performance."

Samsonite Corp. spent an estimated $1.8 million in advertising last year, mostly in TV.

The firm's agency, J. Walter Thompson Co., New York, has been encouraging clients to avoid placing spots in shows perceived to be violent (BROADCASTING, June 14)—and not only for humanitarian reasons. JWT believes negative viewer reaction takes away from the spot's selling power, no matter what the gross rating points indicate.

Samsonite follows in the steps of Kraft and Eastman Kodak, also JWT clients, who have said they will refuse to advertise in "violent" programs.

Compu/Net sets target date for new TV-station service

Compu/Net Inc., New York, announced last week that it expects to have its new computer-based traffic and sales reporting, invoicing and management service for television stations in operation by mid-1977. A.J. Aurichio, president of the Control Data Corp. subsidiary, said Joseph V. Chaplinski, who joined Compu/Net from Storer Broadcasting Co. several weeks ago, had been named product manager to oversee the system's transition from drawing board to active operation.

Compu/Net operates a similar service for radio stations. It formerly had offered a TV service as well, but halted that last fall to develop the new system, which Mr. Aurichio describes as the first step toward television's "first truly complete system for broadcast automation."

Broadcasters vote against monopoly in radio measurements

Preliminary results of a survey conducted by the Radio Ratings Task Force indicate that most broadcasters want more than one widely accepted radio audience measurement service.

The survey was conducted for the task force by the Radio Advertising Bureau, which canvassed more than 3,000 stations. On the basis of 1,000 returns, 75.2% said they did not support the concept of a single radio measurement service; 16.8% were agreeable and 8.0% replied "don't know."

The task force now intends to solicit proposals from a number of research firms on costs for a package of basic information, and for additional data applicable to local and retail advertising. Arbitron Radio is the acknowledged leader in radio research, and station operators have proposed concern at the decline of advertising agency acceptance of other services.

Advertising briefs

Black market reports. Fifteen TV markets, with ADI ranks ranging from one to 98, will be included in Arbitron Black Market Reports for the May 1976 sweep. Markets to be covered: New York; Los Angeles; Chicago; Philadelphia; Detroit; Washington; Atlanta; Baltimore; New Orleans; Memphis; Norfolk, Va.; Birmingham, Ala.; Richmond, Va.; Jacksonville, Fla., and Baton Rouge.

Here's the plan. Blair Television and Blair Radio, station rep divisions of John Blair & Co., have published their 1976-77 media planning calendars, which conform to uniform billing week system endorsed by agency, station-rep and TV and radio station trade associations and were designed specifically for use by buyers and sellers of broadcasting time. They come in two sizes: a 24-by-36-inch four-color poster edition that covers 18 months, and an 8-by-10-inch desk-top version covering 24 months. Copies of both are available from any Blair office or by writing: Blair Media Planning Calendar, John Blair & Co., 717

Fifth Avenue, New York 10022.

On target. Data Communications Corp. of Memphis has introduced new program for its BIAS computerized accounting, billing and traffic clients called AIM (Automatic Inventory Maximization). After program or commercial changes are made by computer, AIM automatically upgrades station's spot inventory by taking spots from file of those waiting to be placed and inserting them in most desirable break by removing lower priority ones. Those removed are put in file and placed later so that maximized inventory is assured. Two stations testing project, wjw-TV Detroit and WFAA-TV Dallas, are reported as enthusiastic.

Rams' advertiser line-up. Listing of sponsors for Los Angeles Rams football broadcasts originated by KMPC(AM) Los Angeles (BROADCASTING, Aug. 9) incorrectly identified as ingame sponsors the adjacency sponsors. Ram play-by-play sponsors should have read: Chevrolet (Campbell-Ewald), Budweiser (D'Arcy, MacManus & Masius), Continental Airlines (Benton & Bowles), Standard Oil (BBDO), and Bank of America (Grey Advertising). Pregame and postgame sponsors are correct as listed.

Toyota refuses offer NBC hasn't made

Under pressure from big dealer who's Italian-American, motor firm will stay out of 'Godfather' on TV

Toyota Motor Sales authorities confirmed last week that, because of hostility from an Italian-American pressure group, the company will buy no commercial time in NBC-TV's multipart telecast of "The Godfather—Parts I and II" during the 1977-78 season.

"We don't regard this as censorship," said Chuck Burlingame, Toyota's public-relations service manager, from the company's headquarters in Torrance, Calif. "We're simply bowing to the desires of a large segment of the American public—in this case, the Italians—who think that a particular program casts them in a negative light."

Toyota bought spots in NBC's two-part "The Godfather—Part I" in November 1974.

Mr. Burlingame acknowledged that the prime mover in changing Toyota's corporate mind about future "Godfather" participation was an El Monte, Calif., Toyota dealer named Dominick Longo, a member of Unico National, The Italian-American Organization that is spearheading the "'Godfather'-as-negative-stereotype" protest.

NBC has set no date for its "Godfather" telecast and has begun no advertiser solicitations, according to various sources. But NBC is confident of finding advertisers to participate, even though the price may be in the neighborhood of $300,000 for one commercial minute.

Strengthening its sales hand. Blair Television, TV station rep division of John Blair & Co., began phasing into its New York sales operations last week its new in-house Hewlett-Packard minicomputer, with which all of its 12 sales offices across the U.S. are due to be linked by Oct. 30. In-house unit replaces a shared-time system that Blair had been using, for its New York office alone, since 1974. It provides instantaneous access to constantly updated sales inventory data, including availability proposals and sales-support rationale, packages, rankings, competitive availabilities in Blair markets and wide variety of management aids. One of its printouts is examined by (l-r) Jack W. Fritz, president of John Blair & Co.; James R. Kelly, vice president and general sales manager, Blair Television; Walter A. Schwartz, president, Blair Television, Station Division; Marjorie A. Bittel, director of data systems, and William A. Morris, director of Blair Television's sales strategy division. Other Blair offices will be tied into the minicomputer by Telenet, computer data transmission network.

OTP seeks less friction in its dealings with other agencies and broadcasters

Houser tells first news conference that office will have better ties with FCC, among others; policy statement due in November

Thomas J. Houser, director of the Office of Telecommunications Policy, last week set a new course for the agency's relationship with the FCC.

"OTP is moving away from the role of critic of the FCC to one of long-range planner, proportionately spending more time with Congress and less time with the FCC," Mr. Houser told a Washington news conference where he was joined by six of his top-level staff members. It was Mr. Houser's first news conference since he assumed his post seven weeks ago.

Recalling when he was an FCC commissioner in 1971, he noted that he had been "very unhappy" with the way former OTP Director Clay Whitehead "took off after the FCC." Mr. Houser—whose tenure may depend on the outcome of the upcoming election—added: "I don't see my job to be critical of them." Mr. Houser's statement and answers to the questions that followed formalized sentiments he had expressed after being nominated to the post by President Ford (BROADCASTING, June 14). At that time he said he looked forward to a harmonious relationship with the commission, noting that he and FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley are personal friends.

During his "Opening Remarks," Mr. Houser also said that OTP plans its first "national telecommunications policy document." The paper, to be available by mid-November, is to include a statement of OTP principles, a "look into the future" and a statement of principles from the industry on such subjects as broadcasting, cable and satellite.

Mr. Houser cited his two basic goals for OTP: (1) "To make OTP an efficient, credible player in the formulation and implementation of telecommunications policy"—he especially stressed implementation—and (2) "to press always for deregulation—a necessary effort to get the collective weight of government off of the backs of industry."

On the subject of broadcast deregulation, Mr. Houser said he supports it. But he refused to get down to specifics and recommendations. That will have to wait, he said, until he has conferred with Mr. Wiley and with members of Congress. And he plans to restrict his statements on deregulation of the industry until he testifies on Capitol Hill. (His first appearance before Congress as OTP director is to be during the Sept. 14-16 House Communications Subcommittee hearings on license renewal.)

Among the issues that he said are currently being reviewed at OTP include broadcast-license renewal, the 1979 World Administrative Radio Conference, broadcast captioning for the deaf, cable versus satellite, direct broadcast satellite and translator versus cable for local signal distribution.

Absent from that list was mention of VHF drop-ins. While previously an OTP concern, Mr. Houser said, the matter is now in the hands of the FCC. He said he expects some new allocations will be made but that "we're not pressing" any longer on that issue.

Mr. Houser also said that OTP must allow industry and private initiative to develop to its full potential and must also avoid duplication of other agencies' efforts. OTP's "key" function should be to gather data and "anticipate" long-range implications of "more near term" policies in what he said is now called the "Age of Information."

He said that OTP has established a new Office of Planning and Policy which supervises a common carrier office, a new information policy office, a new office of outreach and a research office. Closer cooperation with the FCC, State Department and the Commerce Department's Office of Telecommunications is also being sought, he said.

Mr. Houser noted that OTP has advised the White House on legal questions regarding debates between President Ford and Jimmy Carter but that, otherwise, it will not be involved.

Whole new law is job faced by House unit

Communications subcommittee staff sets deadline early next year for rewrite of Communications Act including cable TV regulations

Work on the "basement-to-penthouse" revamping of the Communications Act, ordered by House Communications Subcommittee Chairman Lionel Van Deerlin, should be completed in the first months of the next session of Congress, in 1977. The subcommittee's work on revising the regulation of cable television, which seemed a monumental task when first conceived, will be but a piece of that.

"It's not a patch job," the subcommittee's counsel, Harry M. (Chip) Shooshan, said last week of the new undertaking. "It's not amending the act. It's rewriting the act."

The task will begin soon, likely after Congress adjourns this session in October. The subcommittee anticipates taking on additional personnel for the job, at least another full-time lawyer, according to Mr. Shooshan.

The subcommittee's cable study will not be left in the lurch, however. The subcommittee staff will put out another document on the subject, something like the original staff study released last January, except that this one will be with the approval of the subcommittee members. The first was merely a reflection of the staff's views.

Mr. Shooshan said the document will contain recommendations to the FCC for its regulation of cable TV. Legislation, if any results, would become a part of the Communications Act revision project. The new cable report ought to be finished in late fall. The subcommittee's weeks-long hearings on cable TV will conclude this week (Sept. 2) with testimony from the FCC commissioners.

Still another document will be in the works at the House subcommittee, a report and recommendations for revision of the FCC's license renewal procedures. There are 70 license renewal bills now pending in the House, including versions by Commerce Committee Chairman Harley Staggers (D-W.Va.), Communications Subcommittee ranking Republican Louis Frey (R-Fla.) and Commerce Committee member Richard Ottinger (D-N.Y.). Despite Mr. Van Deerlin's admonishment that no new renewal legislation will leave the subcommittee this year, the subcommittee will hold three days of hearings on the pending measures, Sept. 14-16.

Mr. Houser meets the press.

Staff coordinator of the hearings and the follow-up document is Barry Cole, half-time consultant with the subcommittee until the end of the year. Mr. Cole is a former consultant with the FCC, principally on license renewal matters.

Mr. Cole plans hearings with a mix of testimony from individuals and three panels. The latter will include broadcasters and nonbroadcasters, and will be broken down into discussions of the comparative renewal process, petitions to deny process and the simple renewal process where there is no challenge. The last will get into discussions of license term and paperwork burden.

The report that follows the hearings will be chiefly a guide to the next Congress, with recommendations to the FCC and, again, legislative recommendations that might be included in the bottom-to-top revamping of the Act.

Kissinger tops list of speakers for CBS Radio affiliates

Network executives and newsmen also sprinkled throughout agenda

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will open the 20th CBS Radio affiliates convention at Williamsburg, Va., with an after-dinner address on Tuesday, Sept. 14, Sam Cook Digges, president of the CBS Radio division, announced last week.

Mr. Digges said other featured speakers at the biennial affair, Sept. 14-17, will include William O. Beers, chairman and chief executive of the Kraftco Corp.; Arthur R. Taylor, president of CBS Inc.; Lee Loevinger, Washington attorney and former FCC commissioner; Bill Leonard, CBS Inc. Washington vice president, and CBS News correspondent Charles Kuralt. Mr. Digges will also be one of the principal speakers.

Participants in panel and other sessions are slated to include Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn; Football Commissioner Pete Rozelle; CBS News President Richard S. Salant and Vice Presidents William Small and Emerson Stone; correspondents Walter Cronkite, George Herman, Ed Bradley and Sharron Lovejoy, and Sylvia Westerman, deputy director of news.

Thad M. Sandstrom of WIBW(AM) Topeka, Kan., chairman of the affiliates group, and Al Sanders of WMAZ(AM) Macon, Ga., chairman of the convention, will be among the speakers at the opening business session Sept. 15. Among network executives who will be heard are George Arkedis, vice president of the radio division and general manager of the radio network; Sherril W. Taylor, affiliate relations vice president; Tom Dawson, division services vice president; Bernard Krause,

FCC would get power over poles in Wirth bill

Van Deerlin and Rose co-sponsor measure giving commission authority to regulate attachments, and set standards, although states would be asked into act

Legislation granting the FCC authority to regulate pole attachments for cable systems was introduced last Wednesday by Representative Timothy Wirth (D-Colo.).

The bill, co-sponsored by Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.), chairman of the Communications Subcommittee, of which Mr. Wirth is a member, and Representative Charles Rose (D-N.C.), would require the FCC to set minimum standards for regulation of rates, terms and conditions for the use of space on telephone poles by cable operators. Actual regulation, however, would be encouraged at the state level, but with adherence at least to the minimum federal standards.

There are no federal standards governing pole attachments now, although the FCC has been wrestling with the problem for six years.

A hearing will be held by the Communications Subcommittee Wednesday (Sept. 1) on the Wirth bill and on one Mr. Van Deerlin is expected to introduce Monday. Mr. Van Deerlin's will combine the Wirth bill with a bill giving the FCC authority to fine cable systems for rule violations. A version of the latter has already passed the Senate.

The following day, Sept. 2, the FCC commissioners will be asked to comment on both bills, and on the regulation of cable in general (see story, page 30). Working under a Sept. 10 deadline for all new legislation imposed by the House Rules Committee, the subcommittee will mark up the Wirth and Van Deerlin bills immediately following the Sept. 2 hearing.

Mr. Wirth said he introduced the pole-attachment bill because he became convinced from testimony at the subcommittee's cable hearings that utility companies have been "behaving in the classic monopolistic manner. Utility companies have consistently, on a nationwide basis, presented the providers of cable television service with 'take-it-or-leave-it' contract terms." In one instance, he said, an electric company is demanding a fixed percent of the gross revenue of a cable system on top of a rental rate almost double the national average.

He quoted a survey by the cable industry saying that pole rental fees amount to 53.8% of the cable industry's net income before taxes.

"The exploitation of the monopoly power possessed by utilities with regard to cable television conduit attachments not only is a threat to consumers who are presently receiving cable service," Mr. Wirth said, "but also threatens to deny this promising new communications medium to additional consumers who would benefit from the services offered by cable television."

United Broadcasting rebuffed by FCC

Commission gives former WOOK frequency to new licensee; turns down rehearing of TV denials

Last week was a bad one at the FCC for United Broadcasting Co. and its subsidiaries.

The commission granted Washington Community Broadcasters the 1340 khz frequency where United operated WOOK(AM) until its license was lifted a year ago. At the same time, the commission denied a United petition for remand of the case to look further at Community's financial qualifications. The FCC also turned down petitions by United Television Co. and United Television Co. of Eastern Maryland for rehearing of its 1974 decisions taking away their licenses for WFAN-TV Washington and WMET-TV Baltimore, respectively.

In turning down the United petition for remand of the WOOK case, the FCC said no valid objections had been raised to Community's financial set-up. The commission had lifted WOOK's license a year ago for broadcasting lottery information and false and misleading advertising. United has taken that decision to court, but no stay has been issued and the case is still pending.

The WFAN-TV and WMET-TV licenses were dismissed by the commission for United's failure to keep the stations on the air. Those denials of license have been upheld in court appeals.

Ammunition offered license challengers in Ohio and Michigan

NCCB rates and ranks programing, minority records of stations there, which are up for October renewal

Hoping that the results will help "reward the best and reprimand the worst" and "be of use to individuals and citizen groups trying to improve the performance of a local television station through negotiation or license challenge," the Washington-based National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting has released an analysis and ranking of Ohio and Michigan commercial television stations.

The study compares programing and employment figures for the 42 stations (chosen because licenses in both states are up for renewal in October). The programing criteria measures the amount of news, public affairs and other nonentertainment offerings; the number of public service announcements aired; the amount of commercials in excess of 12 minutes per hour, and the amount of locally produced programing.

For the employment comparisons, the study lists the percentages of minority and female employes on the station staffs and the percentages holding one of the FCC's four upper level job descriptions.

In an over-all ranking, WHIO-TV Dayton, Ohio, and WGTV(TV) Traverse City, Mich., were rated number one in employment with WBNS(TV) Columbus, Ohio, and WWJ-TV Detroit first in programing. Coming in last in those categories were WLIO(TV) Lima, Ohio, and WPBN-TV (and its satellite, WTOM(TV)) for employment and WUAB(TV) Lorain, Ohio, and WUHQ-TV Battle Creek, Mich., for programing.

After this general ranking, the study lists specific breakdowns of the different categories and concludes with a combined chart of all the findings.

Media briefs

In the meantime. FCC has granted interim authority to operate facilities of former WVON(AM) Cicero, Ill., to WFMT Inc., licensee of WFMT(FM) Chicago until permanent licensee is chosen. Frequency of 1450 khz went silent last year (BROADCASTING, March 3, 1975) after former licensee, McLendon Corp., bought another station there and FCC turned down its request for 90 days to find buyer for WVON. FCC granted interim authority to WFMT since station was not competing applicant for regular authority.

He'll be there. Thomas J. Houser, Office of Telecommunications Policy's new director, will be luncheon speaker Tuesday, Sept. 21, at National Radio Broadcasters Conference and Exposition in San Francisco (BROADCASTING, Aug. 23). Convention runs Sept. 19-22.

Daytona decision fought. Central Florida Enterprises Inc. is appealing FCC's denial of its construction permit to operate on channel 2 at Daytona Beach, Fla., and commission's decision to renew license of WESH-TV, now operating contested facility. FCC renewed license on principal that WESH-TV's past programing had been superior, despite dissenting statements by Chairman Richard E. Wiley and Commissioner Glen O. Robinson (BROADCASTING, July 5).

Go-ahead. FCC has dismissed racial discrimination charges against KWFK-FM Tucson, Ariz., and renewed station's license. Station employe, Michael Hester, had alleged unfair treatment due to racial prejudice on part of owner, Alvin Korngold. Local human rights agency investigated charges and found no basis for them; FCC agreed.

Second job. FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley has been reappointed chairman of American Bar Association's special committee on lawyers in government. Com-

Just in case. RCA announced it is establishing $20 million reserve during third quarter to reflect estimated loss on possible sale of its British food companies, Oriel Foods Ltd. and Morris & David Jones Ltd. This will probably mean RCA's third-quarter net income will be about same as 1975 third-quarter ($32.8 million, or 42 cents a share), RCA said. Food companies are profitable but do not contribute significantly to RCA revenues and earnings, and RCA is considering selling them in belief that "their retention is not compatible with the corporation's long-term foreign business investments."

Hang it up. ABC has opposed tariff revisions filed by New York Telephone Co. that would charge participants in call-in contests and promotions in New York metropolitan area whose calls reach only recorded messages when lines are busy ("Closed Circuit," July 26). ABC said this amounts to charging audience for busy signal, and is first step on road to charging general public for all busy signals to all numbers.

Moving violations. FCC fined Broadcasting Service of America, licensee of KBSA(TV) Guasti, Calif., $5,000 for changing its main studio location twice without prior commission approval. Station was also cited for using remote pickup station as studio transmitter link without FCC authorization.

Time doubles. Board of Time Inc. authorized two-for-one split of Time Inc. common stock to holders Aug. 30, with the additional shares to be distributed around Oct. 1. Board also increased quarterly dividend on pre-split stock to 57.5 cents per share from 50 cents, payable Sept. 13 to holders of record Aug. 30. Shareholders approved doubling of authorized shares last April, bringing total to 25 million.

Public TV goes pro

There'll be a new competitor in the prime-time television arena this fall; Larry Grossman has positioned PBS for a run for the audience, if not for the money; no-holds-barred it may not be, but head-to-head you can count on

Larry Grossman thinks he's riding a rocket. "Public television is the fastest growing medium in the history of communications," he says. "Our audiences are up 34% at night and 50% over two years . . . This year we crossed the big divide where more than 50% of television homes are watching public television in the course of a single rating period. That's a helluva jump."

Last week the Public Broadcasting Service Mr. Grossman heads put more muscle where his mouth is. It released PBS's first-ever competitive network schedule—that is, a seven-nights-a-week, coordinated, promoted, counterprogramed, head-to-head-with-the-commercial-networks program schedule that he's counting on to carry public broadcasting into an even higher—and wider—orbit.

The master plan centers on "theme" nights. "For the first time in public television," he explains, we took the program schedule . . . into consideration." Left behind was the "hodge podge" scheduling of the past.

Beginning in September, Sunday night is devoted to "The Performing Arts," with Evening at Symphony at 8, Masterpiece Theatre at 9 and Great Performances at 10. Monday is classified "Variety" with The Adams Chronicles at 8, In Performance at Wolf Trap at 9 and Soundstage at 10. Tuesday is for "Specials," Wednesday is for "Arts and Sciences," Thursday for "Drama," Friday for "Public Affairs" and Saturday, "Something for Everyone."

The greatest attention has revolved around Friday nights, which grew out of Larry Grossman's push for increased emphasis on public affairs (BROADCASTING, May 10). Prime time begins with Washington Week in Review at 8, Wall Street Week at 8:30, USA: People and Politics (until Nov. 5 when Documentaries will begin) at 9. The 10 o'clock show has yet to be announced.

Larry Grossman doesn't expect to conquer the ratings world with his new schedule. Indeed, public broadcasting has a long way to go and he'll be the first to admit it. "Most of the programs that are broadcast on public television have historically achieved below-minimum standards"; many have scored high enough to be measured by rating services. But he believes noncommercial television is on its way. He notes that for the second quarter this year, 126 public stations were reportable in the rating services.

While he claims that "there's no rational basis" for setting goals, Mr. Grossman would like to see public television eventually capture 10% of the total viewing audience. "I don't mean we should get 10% all the time," he explains, "but certainly on [the] average." He says WNET(TV) New York, one of the system's VHF stations, is reaching that goal now.

As for demographics, Mr. Grossman acknowledges that they remain elitist. "We do very badly with blacks and minorities. We do well with the well-educated. We do well with kids, with Sesame Street. And it's a legitimate complaint about public television that it's an elitist medium.

But admitting to the charge's legitimacy doesn't mean he takes it lying down. "I resent it," he says, "being attacked on that basis. That is to say, if we're going to present the best in culture and art and music and literature and dance, then of course we're going to tend to be attracting an elitist audience. The trick for us is to make it available and to bring in a wider audience—which we're beginning to do—that wouldn't normally be exposed to this kind of thing. "At the same time there must be programs for minorities and blue-are being attracted to them are being taken by the most attractive commercial programs."

Financial considerations have caused much of the new season to be reruns. Among them are The Adams Chronicles, which itself had been subject to financial controversy. Although the first episodes went well over budget, Mr. Grossman calls it "the cheapest program we ever ran" on a cost efficiency basis. The 13-hour series cost $5.2 million and reached an average four million viewers, four times the average prime-time audience for noncommercial programs. That figures to $1.33 per viewer so far. More typically, Mr. Grossman says, public television programs don't bring in those results.

Yet The Adams Chronicles also demonstrates a classic problem that PTV faces: "The great tragedy of this is that once we have an Adams Chronicles, and these people get good at it . . . , they've all been disbanded. They have nothing to keep going." As a successor to that series, Mr. Grossman is looking toward The Best of Families, a $4.2 million effort by Children's Television Workshop. "It's taken them three or maybe four years to get the money" for that series, Mr. Grossman notes.

There's a lack of big-ticket programming that Mr. Grossman is quick to admit. "There's very little in the pipeline there and it's a cause of great concern. We've started the major production centers working on that."

The new season also will include only one series—Masterpiece Theatre—which is "pure import," although other series may have imported episodes. Currently the balance of trade within noncommercial television is favorable. This year public broadcasting sold 113½ programming hours to 29 countries, as opposed to buying 89½ from seven countries. Last year, the difference was less pronounced. The stations sold 115 hours to 13 countries but bought 103½ from five foreign countries.

Larry Grossman has no hesitancy about talking about a fourth network, although the word has admittedly been "an anathema" to many in public television.

"The fact is we are a network. In broadcasting terms, a network is a national distribution system." But, he continues, "we're very different from the [commercial networks] . . . because we have no hold over our stations. . . . There's no way of requiring them to run things at a particular time or to run it altogether. We've got to earn our way.

"Originally public television, or educational television, was looked upon as an extension of the classroom—the same way an automobile was looked upon as a horseless carriage and electricity was looked upon as candle power. . . . Where we are now is in a wholly different era. . . . The only thing that counts is what . . . comes on the screen [and] into the home. . . . We're not in the business of getting audience for the sake of getting audience. But we are in the broadcasting business."

And being in that business, he ex-collar types." "And that's very hard" says Mr. Grossman.

Grossman

"There's a lot of conventional wisdom that has to be overcome, political wisdom like if [we] schedule some of our minority programs off prime time, we get attacked for it. The fact is it's a disservice to their programming to put it on opposite The Jeffersons or All in the Family. It does better at 6 or at 11 than it does at 8 [in] prime time because it is not prime time for those programs. Because the very audiences that plains, there is a certain amount of cross-pollination between segments of the industry. "I'm here. Right?" he notes, then adding the names of others who have made the transition to or from public broadcasting. Yet, over-all, he says, "on executive talent we're not at all competitive. The salaries don't compare." (Mr. Grossman, who earns $63,350 a year, took a substantial pay cut when he left his New York advertising agency to join PBS.)

But as a market for creativity, he believes public television to have its lure. "We're very competitive in the sense of giving people the freedom . . . to do things they've always wanted to do." Apparently the freedom has limits, however. Mr. Grossman continues, "Norman Lear is dying to do something. So far . . . we haven't been too happy with the proposal so we're asking him to go back and do something else." Mr. Lear, who received a $20,000 research and development grant last year, was told to revamp his proposed series on the works of American writers. Mr. Grossman says, "I've gotten calls from a lot of the agents for the major actors and writers." Still he admits that those interested can afford to earn less than they would for a commercial project.

But even if public television had the same resources, it apparently would not become a direct competitor. Take hard news. "I don't think there's very much we can or should do about hard news. If you look upon public television as an alternative resource, the one thing that the commercial . . . [networks] are terrific about is hard news." Take Walter Cronkite. "There's no point in hiring somebody away from commercial television to do the same thing he's doing there. That's not our role." However, if Mr. Cronkite had a different vehicle to explore, he says, that would be a different matter.

No matter what the programing goals may be, the bottom line is funding. Without the ability to accrue advertising revenue, public television must depend on the support of government, underwriters and the viewing public. And while "putting together pots of money from all different kinds of sources" has its drawbacks, Mr. Grossman believes that "in a funny way we have a very healthy situation." (On that score, he says he's "probably alone in the whole public television area" and "maybe it's because I come out of [a] commercial background.")

At present, public television receives 1 dollar in federal matching funds for every $2.50 it can come up with. In fiscal 1975 26.4% of public television's revenues came from federal sources and 34.2% from state governments and state educational organizations.

"You notice that the stations that are the most vital and the most vigorous are the ones that have gone out to their communities to raise money. They start becoming more in tune with their communities. And that's a new development in public television. It used to be that we were the most arrogant sort of medium there was. . . . Now even the institutional station licensees are going out because the money is drying up," he says.

On the subject of corporate underwriting, Mr. Grossman doesn't believe that it is commercializing the medium. He also isn't concerned that it might be channeling money from the commercial networks. "First of all," he explains, "PBS has very severe guidelines so that the credits are restricted enormously. When you tune in our air, all you see is a credit . . . that says made possible by a grant from. . ." And as for the print advertisements that corporate underwriters take out to promote their contribution, "that has nothing to do with what goes up on our screen."

The "real issue," he contends, "is the question of control. Do they dictate or can they in some way influence . . . program judgments?"

His answer: "Of course they do. . . . They have a very important influence because they will pay for certain kinds of programs. . . . We know they're going to pay for cultural programs; they're not going to pay for highly controversial programs that are going to get people angry. But knowing that, we have a responsibility . . . to redress that imbalance—to put our money first and foremost into public affairs and into controversy. And to make sure that they stay out of our control rooms. And if we don't do it, it's a failure, not of the system, but a failure in leadership."

Corporate funds may, however, eventually be funnelled into public affairs programing. PBS has set up a public affairs fund which would serve as a buffer between underwriter and producer. Such a fund would be mutually advantageous, Mr. Grossman explains. Corporations would have no direct connection and by not having to roll an individual credit, PBS would not look "like we're bought."

Yet it isn't the corporations that Mr. Grossman believes would attempt to control content. He says that they are wise enough to know the trouble that would result.

It is influence from the federal government he perceives as "a much more serious danger," claiming that public television's major funder tends "to be much less sophisticated about the control."

Pressure has also come from Congress, Mr. Grossman adds. He says he has received letters from congressmen suggesting that works of their constituents be aired. "We've got to stand by the gate and tell [them] absolutely not."

There also appear to be major sources of funding that have yet to be tapped. Mr. Grossman says that money has been allocated in certain federal agency budgets for public television but never seen. "We ought to know about it and secondly that money should be brought in under the right constraints." PBS is working to uncover these potential funders.

Despite the problems, he claims that the variety of contributors "gives us a lot more freedom than almost any other medium in this country. . . . There isn't a single dominant force that can open or close our doors." One door is about to be closed. The Ford Foundation has indicated that its $40-million allocation, which is nearly exhausted, will be its final big funding effort. Mr. Grossman, however, claims, "I find [it] hard to believe that [the foundation] will stay out just when it's getting fun and important."

After six months on the job, Larry Grossman claims that the most dramatic thing he has encountered is "the incredible affection that people hold [for] public television . . . The only thing people know are programs. We have the greatest children's programing in the history of television—Sesame Street, Electric Company, Zoom, Misterogers. For the first time children treated with respect by television. Apart from Captain Kangaroo. Thank God for Captain Kangaroo. Wometco blueprint for N.J. success

In purchase application for WBTB, it details daytime shows for kids, nighttime movies, sports and special-interest programming for pay

Wometco Enterprises Inc. has a plan it thinks will work. Subscription television featuring sports and movies, some facilities changes and a lot of daytime children's programming, Wometco hopes, will put WBTB-TV Newark, N.J. on sound footing.

The New Jersey television station (ch. 68) with subscription television authority has been in financial trouble under the ownership of Blonder Tongue Broadcasting since it went on the air in 1974. The application for transfer of 80% of its stock to Wometco (BROADCASTING, March 15) has been tendered to the FCC, with Wometco picking-up $1.6 million in debts for its controlling interest.

Although Isaac Blonder and Ben

Tongue couldn't really get WBTB-TV's pay television off the ground, Wometco, until recently a bitter foe of pay television, is anxious to undertake the subscription authority. Besides its involvement in broadcasting, cable television, bottling and automatic vending, Wometco is also a major motion picture exhibitor. Wometco had a poll conducted of the Newark service area, and believes it has found a substantial market for subscription pay television for the showing of movies less than two years old, and professional and other sports not shown or blacked-out on other television stations. Wometco said it also found interest in televised stage shows, plays, musical concerts, operas and other special programming.

Daytime nonsubscription programming will be devoted in a large way to "meet the needs of children of all ages," according to Wometco's transfer application. One program Wometco hopes will be popular is a two-hour "daily magazine format" called Playhouse, aimed at pre-school children. The show will feature a local host and a small studio audience of children from various backgrounds and races. For example, Wometco said, a local police officer who is proficient in simple magic tricks might help children associate the image of a policeman with something they like. The officer would suggest tips for the day on subjects like traffic safety and not opening doors to strangers.

The Skipper Chuck Show, designed for children between pre-school age and 12, Wometco said, has been successful for over 15 years on its WTVJ(TV) Miami, and is being proposed for inclusion on WBTB-TV. The show relates and describes occupations in the community and discusses youth problems, crime, race relations, education and other "events or objects interesting to children," Wometco said.

To implement its STV system Wometco said it will purchase 500 decoders from Blonder-Tongue Laboratories prior to operation of its subscription television system for $60,000 and an additional 9,500 decoders during the first year's operation for $1,060,000. The decoders will be leased by subscribers for a fee to unscramble the pay television picture and sound.

In its programming proposal for the subscription television authority Wometco said it will devote not more than 90% of its time to entertainment and sports on an annual basis and not more than 95% in any one month. The balance, Wometco said, will be made up of programs on cooking, sewing, secretarial skills, beauty, language instruction, historical and educational documentaries and other special interest subjects.

of its weekly syndicated series, The $64,000 Question, to The $128,000 Question.

In addition, Viacom confirmed that the U.S. and Canadian TV personality Mike Darow will be the host.

The series, which CBS-TV removed from the network in the late 1950's in the wake of the quiz-show scandals, is being resuscitated in a new format by Viacom, which will try to prevent cheating by the installation of "two electronic security systems, which store the questions and answers so they cannot possibly be read by anyone without a special electronic device," according to sources at the production firm.

More than 100 stations will begin telecasting the series next month, among them WNEW-TV New York, KTTV Los Angeles, WAGA-TV Atlanta and WBAL-TV Baltimore. The series will be taped in New York by Steve Carlin, the executive producer, who was in charge of the original $64,000 Question.

'Sportsview' signs Chastain, opts for two-way sales deal

Show will have national and regional segments; advertising will be sold accordingly

Simmons-Parkes Inc. has signed former CBS-TV sports reporter Jane Chastain as co-host of its new syndicated weekly half-hour series, Sportsview ("Closed Circuit," Aug. 23). The other host will be Doug Layton, the play-by-play man for the University of Alabama's football and basketball games.

Sportsview, which Simmons-Parkes will produce in cooperation with Sport magazine at Metromedia's studios in Los Angeles, will be structured around two reportorial segments in each half-hour: one will be a feature of national interest; the other will, for the most part, encompass four different segments aimed at four separate geographical regions of the country—Northeast, Southeast, Midwest and West.

Simmons-Parkes, with the help of Avery-Knodel, the TV rep firm, will buy a half-hour's worth of time on stations within each geographical region in weekend daytime periods adjacent to the station's sports coverage and then try to sell the eight 30-second spots within each half-hour to advertisers seeking to reach either a full national audience or an audience within one of the four regions.

The producers say they'll probably shell out about $100,000 each week ($35,000 for production costs, $55,000 for the time buys on the various stations and $10,000 for Avery-Knodel's commission). But if all the 30-second spots are sold out each week, the revenues could reach upwards of $130,000 per week, the producers say.

Target air date for the series is Saturday, Jan. 8, 1977.

CBS and NBC split TV audience for conventions

They receive identical ratings and shares for total hours; meanwhile, NBC evening news is catching up on Cronkite

CBS-TV and NBC-TV finished in a dead heat during the 25.5 hours of prime time and late-fringe time of head-to-head coverage of the Republican convention.

Each of the two scored a 9.4 rating and 24 share for the total hours. ABC's 16 hours of competitive coverage managed only a 7.4 rating and 18 share, but Fred Silverman, the president of ABC Entertainment, was crowing about the 26.1 rating and 51 share harvested by a special preview of The Captain and Tennille (Aug. 17, 8:30-9:30 p.m., NYT), a variety series that begins its regular fall run on Monday, Sept. 20 (8-9 p.m.). These numbers made Captain and Tennille the highest-rated show for the week ended Aug. 22. In addition, ABC's What's Happening (Thursday, 8:30-9 p.m.), the new Bud Yorkin-produced sitcom about black high-school students, got a 17.5 rating and 34 share against convention coverage on CBS and NBC, its third week in a row of solid Niensens. As the only summer-replacement show on all three networks so far to get above-average ratings, What's Happening is at the top of the list of shows being readied for second-season duty, according to sources at ABC.

By finishing even with CBS for Republican convention coverage, NBC re-

Reporting on the reporters. Doug Sheer, JVC Industries advertising and sales promotion manager, was at the Republican convention in Kansas City to cover ENG activities. Along with a local JVC dealer, Mr. Sheer shot pictures and recorded about 20 hours of interviews with video crews and news personnel from stations and the networks to gather opinions and suggestions on ENG equipment design and performance. President Ford's staff used three JVC videocassette recorders, cameras and monitors to record action at different areas of the convention floor for review later.

bounded from its showing at the Democratic convention, when it ended up second to CBS. For the 20 hours of common prime-time and late-fringe Democratic convention coverage, CBS wound up with a 9.2 rating and 20 share to NBC's 8.4 rating and 19 share. ABC received a 7.8 rating and 17 share for 10 hours of Democratic convention coverage.

NBC researchers estimated that 110 million people watched some part of the Republican convention, a boost over the 100 or so million that tuned in to some part of the Democratic convention.

In a somewhat parallel situation, the NBC Nightly News has made solid gains against Walter Cronkite ever since it brought in David Brinkley to co-anchor the newscasts with John Chancellor on June 7. For example, during the two weeks ended May 23, Mr. Cronkite scored a national Nielsen rating of 12.7 and a 29 share to NBC's 10.4 rating and 23 share with Mr. Chancellor as sole anchorman. ABC's nightly newscasts, with Harry Reasoner as sole anchor, got an 8.5 rating and 19 share.

But for the two weeks ended Aug. 8, CBS's nightly news lead had been narrowed considerably. CBS had an 11.3 rating and 27 share for those 10 newscasts to NBC's 10.1 rating and 25 share. ABC had an 8.7 rating and 21 share.

Schorr showdown is set in House

CBS correspondent, subpoenaed on CIA leak, says he won't talk

The House Ethics Committee investigating the leak of the House Intelligence Committee's secret report on the Central Intelligence Agency last week subpoenaed Daniel Schorr, the suspended CBS correspondent who has admitted receiving the report and passing it on to The Village Voice, which published it.

The committee also voted to subpoena Clay Felker, editor-in-chief of the Voice; Aaron Latham, who wrote the preface to the Voice article on the CIA report, and Shelly Zalaznick, senior editorial director of New York magazine, which Mr. Felker publishes.

Mr. Schorr, who has refused to appear voluntarily before the committee and who has said previously that if subpoenaed he would appear but not testify as to his source, said last week in a statement: "If subpoenaed I will appear, but in appearing I will under no circumstances disclose or discuss my sources. I feel that I have a moral and professional obligation to protect my source and in so doing I rest on my First Amendment rights."

In the same closed session in which the Schorr subpoena was voted, the committee voted to subpoena 18 Intelligence Committee staff members, who are scheduled to testify Sept. 8. Mr. Schorr and the Voice-connected people are set to appear Sept. 15.

The committee has spent four months and $150,000, and interviewed more than 400 persons in a vain attempt to trace the source of the leak. Mr. Schorr, though still salaried by CBS, has been relieved of reporting duties while the case is pending (BROADCASTING, July 26).

Some misgivings on new pattern for TV signals

Despite ABC Chicago success, comments mixed on FCC proposal to OK circular polarization

Broadcasters seem to like the idea of circular polarization for transmission of television broadcast signals, but most don't think they're quite ready for it.

In response to an FCC notice of proposed rulemaking, broadcasters supported the development and technical efforts leading to antenna equipment that will transmit television signals in a spiraling, elliptical pattern rather than the horizontally polarized transmissions now employed.

But broadcasters differed as to whether circular polarization is at a practical or theoretical stage of development.

ABC, optimistic over the proposal it first asked the FCC to consider over a year ago (BROADCASTING, Feb. 24, 1975), said "it is seldom that a significant improvement in broadcasting is obtainable without adverse effects which must be weighed against it," but that circular polarization "appears to fall into such a category."

ABC said tests it conducted at WLS-TV Chicago in 1974 revealed that circular polarization can improve picture reception and minimize ghosting effects while lessening the likelihood of co-channel interference.

Many broadcasters agreed with CBS, however, that more data is necessary before the FCC institutes rules that could lead the public and broadcasters into expenditure of large sums of money for service that might never materialize.

The National Association of Broadcasters said the transition to circular polarization would entail considerable expense. A new antenna would be required by virtually every station electing to use the system, the NAB said. Transmitter power would have to be doubled and antenna power would have to be replaced or reinforced to accommodate the additional load.

All broadcasters filing comments urged that the decision to use circular polarization should be left to the individual broadcaster and not an FCC requirement.

The Association of Maximum Service Telecasters predicted problems for circular polarization systems. ABC has envisioned a system, according to its proposal, in which viewers who wished to purchase special antennas for the enhanced picture potential circularly polarized transmissions offer could do so, while viewers unwilling to buy new equipment would receive slightly better or unaffected signals. "Rabbit ear" antennas, for instance, would present a significantly improved picture, according to ABC, while traditional outdoor antennas would experience "no change in the quality of reception." AMST said ABC's data was not comprehensive enough, and seemed to indicate that in some cases reception for outdoor antennas could be adversely affected. AMST said more complete experimentation, analysis and evaluation were needed before the commission adopts a rule that "would lead to heavy promotion of circular polarization, with broadcasters and the public lacking the information to make informed judgments as to the value" of circular polarization.

AMST said if the FCC acts prematurely in permitting the use of circular polarization, it would "remove the incentive" for properly investigating the technique from "those who are in the best position to make the necessary studies . . . the antenna and transmitter manufacturers."

NBC supported the principle of circular polarization, but agreed that "much more experimental and developmental work is needed."

One way for four way

CBS has asked the FCC to adopt uniform standards for quadrasonic broadcasting. Existing practices allowing quadrasonic broadcasting encoded in a 4-2-4 matrix have created a "proliferation" of 4-2-4 encoding techniques, CBS said, resulting in varying degrees of broadcast compatibility, confusion and unnecessary equipment costs to the consumer. CBS urged the commission to adopt standards that would maximize the compatibility of quadrasonic broadcasts with monophonic and stereophonic receivers and provide for an identification signal that would distinguish quadrasonic transmissions from other types of broadcasting. CBS said its own SQ system exemplified a modern, technically viable approach to quadrasonic broadcasting.

Most in agreement with petition on UHF antennas

CUB request of FCC for rule requiring attached fixture meets broadcaster approval

A Council for UHF Broadcasting proposal that the FCC require television receiver manufacturers to give equal treatment to UHF television set antennas received the support of most of the broadcasting industry last week.

The CUB proposal, joined by such competitors as the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the National Association of Broadcasters and the Association of Maximum Service Telecasters Inc., seeks an FCC ruling that all television sets equipped with an attached VHF antenna come equipped with an affixed UHF antenna.

In its comments, CUB said television sets now come to the purchaser with either no UHF antenna or an unattached antenna that is frequently discarded or overlooked by the consumer. This puts UHF stations at a significant disadvantage, CUB said.

In a survey it sponsored in the Washington market, CUB said, it was found that 19.2% of the viewers had no UHF antenna attached to their television sets as compared with 4.4% that had no VHF antennas attached. Eighty-four percent had rabbit-ear or outdoor VHF antennas, CUB said, while only 63.4% had UHF loop antennas, bow ties, both or outdoor UHF antennas.

ABC said that it supports the commission proposal that if a VHF antenna is provided, a UHF antenna must also be provided, and the FCC distinction that if the VHF antenna is attached the UHF antenna must also be attached. ABC and many other broadcasters, however, disagreed with the commission's deletion of the term an "effective" UHF antenna. ABC said that "while the term effective is somewhat imprecise . . . some standard is desirable and that a standard of effectiveness is probably the most satisfactory at this time."

One joint comment urged that the commission require mechanical and technical comparability in VHF and UHF antennas. The comment representing several television stations in California, Alabama, Connecticut, Wisconsin and Illinois said the commission's rule "may be inadequate" if in its attempt to promote "comparability" as it did in its ruling on the comparability of UHF and VHF tuners it does not insure comparability in antenna requirements as well.

Some broadcasters agreed with Storer Broadcasting Co. in challenging commission reluctance to indulge in technical specifications for UHF antennas. Storer said the ruling should go farther in specifying the quality of the antenna. Storer recommended the bow-tie configuration antenna as opposed to "the relatively worthless simple loop now furnished."

The Consumer Electronics Group of the Electronic Industries Association said that it supported the proposed antenna rule. EIA-CEG said it "considers that at best a flimsy relationship exists between the number of UHF viewers and the operation of affixing the UHF antenna," but that it would support the measure. EIA-CEG recommended an effective date of 18 months for the rule to allow manufacturers time for the tooling and shipping requirement changes. CUB has suggested an effective date of September 1977 for the same purpose.

The only complaint registered by last week's Monday deadline at the FCC was by GTE Sylvania. GTE complained that adoption of the rule could lead to increased costs to both manufacturers and consumers, and that CUB's allegations did not contain enough concrete data to warrant this result.

GTE also said that the FCC should refrain from an exercise "in the outermost fringes of its regulatory jurisdiction," and that the matter should be left to "the sound business judgment of individual manufacturers."

Technical briefs

Dish disagreement. National Association of Broadcasters has filed opposition at FCC to proposal by Community Antenna Television Association to allow construction of receive-only earth stations smaller than nine meters (BROADCASTING, July 5). NAB claims plan, if adopted, would "jeopardize the most efficient usage" of 4/6 ghz band spectrum space and should only be considered in "context of broader ranging proceedings concerning all policy aspects of domestic satellite communications."

More muscle. WFIE-TV Evansville, Ind., has ordered new RCA transmitting system, valued at $650,000, designed to almost double its coverage area when installation is completed early next year. Channel 14 station's current system will be replaced with RCA 55 kw TTU-55 UHF transmitter and custom-built high-gain antenna to produce selected directional signal of more than 2.2-million watts effective radiated power. Antenna will be installed on new 1,000-foot tower.

Playback

Giant step. Earth, Wind and Fire provides the major mover on the "Playlist" with Getaway (Columbia) which takes a 20-position leap. "The different rhythm changes make it more rock and uptempo. It's well produced and all-around very good," says Diane Cartwright of KNDE(AM) Sacramento, Calif. Quack. Disco Duck by Rick Dees (a WMPM(AM) Memphis disk jockey) and His Cast of Idiots enters "Playlist" as the fastest debut. Most mentioned in a random survey by BROADCASTING, this novelty record combines duck talk with synthesizers. Among those adding the tune are WLAC(AM) Nashville, WNCI(AM) Columbus, Ohio, KOMA(AM) Oklahoma City and KCPX(AM) Salt Lake City. Why the excitement? "You just don't find many records that sound like Donald Duck," says Gary Waldron of KCPX. Olympic record. Still familiar sound to viewers of the 1976 summer Olympics is Nadia's Theme (A&M) by Peter Botkin. It's beginning to show up on station playlists, and Jay Clark of WPRO(AM) Providence, R.I., and Craig Lutz of KREM(AM) Spokane, Wash., both call it a "beautiful record." It's actually the theme from the CBS soap opera, The Young and the Restless.

Action Aug. 6.

Initial decision

- Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., FM proceeding: Radio Soo seeking 101.3 mhz (Docs. 20627-8)—ALJ John H. Conlin granted application of Radio Soo. On Dec. 12, 1975, Broadcast Bureau designated mutually exclusive applications of Miami County Broadcasting Co. and Q Communications Corp. for hearing. Issues included extent to which duopoly considerations would preclude future expansion of WCBY-FM Cheboygan, Mich., and proposed station of Miami County Broadcasting; whether Miami proposal represents fair, efficient and equitable use of channel; and efforts made by both applicants to ascertain community needs and interests of area to be served and means by which they would meet those needs and interests. On March 2, 1976, Miami and Q filed joint petition for approval of agreement, requesting dismissal of Q's application and amendment of Miami's application to substitute Radio Soo as remaining applicant. Judge Conlin concluded that Soo satisfied duopoly issue and met burden of proof under ascertainment of community needs issue. Ann. Aug. 20.

FCC decision

- WKYZ(AM) Madisonville, Tenn., renewal proceeding: Monroe Broadcasters (Doc. 19829)—FCC denied application of Monroe Broadcasters, because of false billing practices which occurred at station between 1967 and 1973. Unless appeal is taken, WKYZ must cease operating on Nov. 1. In April, 1973, commission conducted field investigation of WKYZ, and uncovered fraudulent billing practices. Hearing was ordered Sept. 19, 1973. ALJ Reuben Lozner released initial decision Aug. 29, 1975. He denied WKYZ's renewal application for violations of Rule 73.1205, which prohibits broadcast licensee from issuing false documents which can be used to defraud national advertisers. Action July 27.

Allocations

Petitions

- Faith Media Inc., Oxnard, Calif.—Seeks assignment of ch. 212B to Oxnard (RM-2738). Ann. Aug. 17.
- Stoner Broadcasting System, Fort Myers Beach, Fla.—Seeks assignment of ch. 257A to Fort Myers Beach (RM-2736). Ann. Aug. 17.

Actions

- Red Oak, Iowa—Broadcast Bureau proposed assigning FM ch. 237A (95.3 mhz) to Red Oak, and substituting ch. 257A (99.3 mhz) for ch. 237A at Maryville, Mo. Action was in response to petition by Red Oak Broadcasting Co., licensee of daytime-only AM station KOAK, Red Oak. Nodaway Broadcasting Corp., licensee of KNIM-FM ch. 237A, Maryville, opposed proposal. Red Oak receives local service only from KOAK and has no FM assignments. Nodaway argued that, in changing channels, it would lose large number of listeners who would not know where KNIM-FM is located on radio dial. Red Oak stated that in event ch. 237A is assigned as requested, it would apply for channel. It added that it was willing to reimburse KNIM-FM for reasonable expenses incurred in changeover from its present channel (Doc. 20891). Action Aug. 13.

- Taos, N.M.—Broadcast Bureau proposed substituting either FM ch. 288A (105.5 mhz) or 296A (107.1 mhz) for ch. 257A (99.3 mhz) at Taos. Action was in response to petition by Fontana Media Corp., licensee of KMYR(FM), ch. 258 (99.5 mhz), Albuquerque, N.M. KMYF(FM) said it planned to relocate to site which it would share with KHFM(FM) and KRHE-FM, also Albuquerque. It pointed out that engineering study showed that substitution of either ch. 288A or 296A would eliminate nine mile short-spacing between its proposed trans. site and reference point of ch. 257A assigned to Taos (Doc. 20893). Action Aug. 13.
- Green Bay and Sturgeon Bay, both Wis.—Broadcast Bureau proposed assigning FM ch. 240A (95.9 mhz) to Green Bay, and substituting ch. 261A (100.1 mhz) for unoccupied ch. 240A at Sturgeon Bay. Action was in response to petition by Communications Properties, licensee of WNFL(AM) Green Bay. Green Bay is served locally by three standard broadcast stations, two commercial FM stations, and two noncommercial educational FM stations (Doc. 20892). Action Aug. 13.

The difference between day and night for CBS's Grant

When Bud Grant, the head of programming at CBS-TV since April, is asked whether the corporation has given him a mandate to finish first in prime time for CBS's 50th anniversary in 1977, he answers, "I've got my own internal mandate. The pressure I feel is mainly the pressure I'm putting on myself to succeed in this job."

CBS is facing its severest challenge in prime time since the 1970-71 season, when NBC ended up with a 19.5 rating to CBS's 19.4. The new-season network to beat, however, is expected to be ABC, which has finished a consistent first since last January, when the winter Olympics, a 12-hour Rich Man, Poor Man and a trio of hit second-season shows (Laverne and Shirley, The Bionic Woman and Donny and Marie) generated the momentum that could well keep it on top right through the fourth quarter of 1976.

Mr. Grant is quite cognizant of the competitive challenge, and for the last couple of months has been hard at work doctoring series on the schedule he inherited from Lee Currilin, his predecessor.

Spencer's Pilots, for instance, a series that's running into clearance problems from disenfranchised affiliates, "is being given a new tone," according to Mr. Grant. "We'll focus more on the relationship between the two male leads. The background of stunt flying, with its strong adventure possibilities, will give the show a lot of appeal to kids, a natural for the 8 o'clock time period.

Another series whose pilot didn't go over well with affiliates, the Ball Four sitcom, "still has the elements of a good gang comedy," Mr. Grant says. "We're putting a lot of work into it, sharpening the material and writing in stronger character delineations."

And among returning programs that showed dangerous signs of softness last year, Good Times will undergo a shift of emphasis toward the Evans children (the character of the father, played by John Amos, has been dumped) to try to rope in more young viewers, according to Mr. Grant.

"We need more youth appeal for Tony Orlando and Dawn," he continues, "so we've added a company of comic regulars," headed by George Carlin, who will contribute five-minute satirical bits each week.

"Bud is so concerned about his network's product that he won't hesitate to get deeply involved in the creative aspects of a show," says Mark Goodson, the game-show entrepreneur, who worked closely with Mr. Grant as a supplier of product to CBS's daytime schedules. "Bud has a real gut instinct for what will or will not play to mass audiences, and he's such a stickler for detail he will stay with a project from its initial outline on paper to the final run-through of the opening episode. If Bud has any problems as head of nighttime programs, it'll be that he just won't have time to get that wrapped up in every single program on the prime-time schedule."

Buddy Donald Grant—vice president, programs, CBS-TV New York; b. Feb. 7, 1934, Baltimore; BS in business administration, Johns Hopkins University, 1956; U.S. Coast Guard, 1956-58; executive-training program, NBC, New York, 1958-60; various programming jobs, NBC-TV, New York, 1960-67; national director of daytime programs, NBC-TV, New York, 1967-72; vice president, daytime programs, CBS-TV, New York, 1972-76; present post, April 19, 1976; divorced; children: David, 14, and Katie, 8.

Mr. Grant first got hooked on media at Baltimore's Johns Hopkins University. He majored in business engineering but says his real love was announcing for the college radio station (WJHU-FM) and working summers and after school "shlepping and painting scenery" and doing other odd jobs at WAAM-TV in Baltimore (which subsequently became WJZ-TV).

After graduation and two years in the Coast Guard, Mr. Grant joined the 2,000 or so other young men applying to NBC for one of the eight spots that year (1958) in its executive-training program. "Bud went through a battery of some of the most grueling tests ever devised," says Arthur Sarnoff, the president of Bruno New York Inc. and a friend of Mr. Grant's since their fraternity days at Hopkins.

Mr. Grant survived the winnowing process, though, and spent the next 18 months going through the entire corporation from top to bottom. "Bud spent time in accounting, advertising and various business departments of NBC," Mr. Sarnoff says, "but I know his goal was programming."

Throughout the sixties, Mr. Grant was working his way up NBC's executive ladder. In 1967, he was named national director of daytime programs, and by the time he left that post for the same slot at CBS in 1972, he'd turned NBC from daytime also-ran to spirited challenger of CBS. It was as head of daytime at NBC, he says, that "I developed a profound respect for the serial as one of the most powerful forms of drama ever created."

He started Days of Our Lives, which subsequently became the linchpin of NBC's daytime-serial schedule, and worked hard (and eventually successfully) at stimulating mass-audience interest in the characters on The Doctors and Another World.

After five years as head of daytime at NBC, "I felt that a lateral move would be the right way to go, and CBS seemed to offer greater career potential," Mr. Grant says. CBS had actually sounded out Mr. Grant for the job, and, in best cloak-and-dagger fashion, he met with a New York programming executive of CBS, Oscar Katz, at a Central Park restaurant called Tavern-on-the-Green, "where, because it was the dead of winter, nobody would spot us," according to Mr. Grant. Although he says that both of them almost froze to death, they had a good session ("I spent a half hour telling him what was wrong with CBS's daytime schedule," Mr. Grant remembers, "and he spent a half hour telling me why I'd be better off working for CBS") and on Jan. 10, 1972, he became vice president, daytime programs, CBS-TV.

Although it took a few years, and there were many detours in the process, Mr. Grant did shoulder CBS's daytime schedule back into a strong number-one position by, among other moves: creating a hit contemporary serial called The Young and the Restless, pulling out of mothballs the old Price Is Right game show, expanding CBS's most popular soap opera, As the World Turns, to a full hour, and scheduling All in the Family reruns in the heart of the afternoon.

With that kind of a track record, Mr. Grant was tapped by the new president of CBS-TV, Robert Wussler, to head CBS's programming department on April 19, 1976. Both Lawrence White, the head of production at Columbia Pictures Television, and Mark Goodson say they think Mr. Grant will succeed in his new post because, as Mr. White puts it, "daytime is the perfect grounding" for coping with the challenges of a network prime-time schedule.

It's a flop

A fortnight ago the Republicans adopted a platform containing a call for "citizen action" against violence on television. A week before that Jimmy Carter vowed to subdue the programming on TV if he became President. Two months ago the American Medical Association declared television violence to be a menace to health and outlined a campaign to keep children away from it.

How can this issue be so lively now when it was supposed to have been stilled in April 1975 with the adoption by the National Association of Broadcasters of family viewing time in the television code?

There is no intention here to recall the circumstances leading to the code amendment. They have been recalled, in somewhat varying details, in the testimony taken during trial of the family-viewing suit brought against the FCC, NAB and television networks by the Hollywood creative community and will presumably be sorted out in the court's decision. The results of the code amendment, however, are beyond dispute. Violence is a more troublesome subject now than it was before it and sex were banished from 7 to 9 p.m.

What is to be the broadcasters' next action? Banning violence from 7 to 10 p.m.? To 10:30 p.m.? Putting a quantitative limit on blows exchanged or shots fired or pints of blood spilled?

It is difficult, isn't it, to codify taste or its application to television programming.

Long shot

For the first time since 1960, the major-party candidates for President and Vice President have declared a willingness to participate in televised debates. For purposes of the following comments, a natural disbelief in politicians' utterances will be momentarily suspended.

It was a simpler world back in 1960 when Richard Nixon and John Kennedy captured the national broadcasting system for four prime-time joint appearances. Mr. Nixon was the incumbent Republican Vice President with a national reputation cultivated over many years. Mr. Kennedy was a relatively unknown senator. A Congress controlled by Democrats had no trouble at all in suspending the equal-time law to give the party's candidate the exposure he was lacking. Mr. Kennedy at once accepted the invitation to debate, leaving Mr. Nixon the choice of accepting also or risking national opprobrium for cowardice.

Times are different now. Through television coverage of the long primary campaigns, Jimmy Carter has acquired visibility denied Mr. Kennedy at this stage of the latter's campaign. There are Democrats with long experience in politics and broadcasting who wonder whether Mr. Carter would be wise to match himself against an incumbent President in the full view of the whole country. The same Senator John O. Pastore (D-R.I.) who was instrumental in the suspension of Section 315 in 1960 was raising doubts last week about a suspension now. The assumption may be made that Mr. Pastore was hearing no clamor for suspension from Plains, Ga.

Without suspension of the law, broadcasters will expose themselves to all of the hazards of Section 315 if they have anything to do with arranging Ford-Carter debates and to at least some if they merely accord live coverage to debates arranged by others, the League of Women Voters, for example. The latter prospect was largely ignored in early reactions to the league's offer to provide a Ford-Carter forum.

In the FCC's latest interpretation, political debates over which broadcasters have no control are bona fide news events and thus exempt from the equal-time requirements of Section 315. They are not, however, exempt from the fairness doctrine that is also in the law. Broadcasters who air a Ford-Carter appearance are destined to be the objects of fairness complaints filed by, say, Eugene McCarthy and Lester Maddox, not to mention other candidates too obscure to come to mind. It will be interesting to see how an FCC that has increasingly leaned toward complainants in fairness cases will define the "reasonable opportunity" that the law requires for the presentation of views that conflict with those of the principal candidates.

There is, of course, a possibility that the Federal Election Commission will rule that the presentation of a forum by the League of Women Voters is in itself a violation of the new election law, a forbidden contribution to the candidates. That would as effectively end the prospect of debates this year as would a decision from still another authority, and a higher one, the U.S. Supreme Court. As Mr. Carter and his advisers are presumably aware, the Democratic National Committee has appealed the FCC ruling that freed League-of-Women-Voters-type debates from the equal-time requirement. That is hardly the action of a party chafing to send its candidate into the pit.

Whatever comes of it all, the politicians have once again demonstrated their determination to manipulate broadcasting to their own ends, in outright contempt of its journalistic rights. At some point the courts will surely recognize the continuing offense to the First Amendment.

Best feet forward

The Department of Defense has taken the first step toward realistic selection of media for recruitment advertising by authorizing the services to include radio and television. The allocation of money suggests, however, that the department is counting on broadcasters to continue the generous carriage of unpaid "public service" messages. Of a total budget for Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines of $91 million, $8.5 million is to be spent on the air.

There is some doubt that broadcast advertising would even now be authorized by the Department of Defense if Representative F. Edward Hebert (D-La.) had not been deposed as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee early last year. Mr. Hebert, a one-time newspaperman, was adamantly opposed to paid broadcast advertising and personally thwarted it while he had the power. Credit must also be given to the National Association of Broadcasters which has tirelessly courted the recruiting officials and their agencies. For broadcasters it is both a break and a breakthrough.
