NATURAL PRODUCT REPORTS

Natural Product Reports is a new bimonthly review journal which will commence publication in February 1984. It will review recent developments in areas of natural product chemistry previously covered by the Specialist Periodical Reports (annual or biennial reviews) entitled "The Alkaloids", "Biosynthesis", "Terpenoids and Steroids" and "Aliphatic and Related Natural Product Chemistry". Publication in journal form will help to overcome the problem of overlap and enable reports to be published much faster than is possible in an annual volume. Furthermore, an annual subscription to Natural Product Reports will cost substantially less than a subscription to Specialist Periodical Reports.

Natural Product Reports, however, is more than just a continuation of subjects covered by a number of SPR titles—it is planned that coverage should be expanded to include such areas as chemotaxonomy, enzymology and biosynthetic aspects of biotechnology, and also advances in physical techniques used for structure determination e.g. n.m.r., h.p.l.c., mass spectrometry, and chiroptical data.

Natural Product Reports will consist of critical reviews written by groups of leading authorities, many of whom have gained worldwide recognition for their contributions to the subject area. Each issue will contain approximately 120 pages covering six or seven articles; there will be an author index and a subject index (cumulated annually) to facilitate location of articles dealing with specific areas.
