Letting go of a relationship can be an enormous wrench, especially when you're convinced that you've found the man or woman of your dreams.

30. GET YOURSELF A SUGAR DADDY

With so many uncertainties in today's world it is no wonder so many single women are wondering how to find a sugar daddy who can provide them with the security they crave.

36. SECRET TO BEING SEXY

Sexual attraction is a key factor in uniting couples, but what is it that generates the desirable qualities that so many long to possess?

38. DESIRED CARS

Everyone dreams of owning an exotic car we will show you the best to drool over.

46. HONDA DN-01

Whatever you call it, the DN-01 (could we please have a name with some personality...?) makes a splash wherever it's ridden. Its arresting design hurt some necks in Daytona, as it caused hundreds of neck-snapping double-takes.

With a techy-industrial-athletic look, this rugged roll-top bag features a dual compartment design with a weatherproof, seam-sealed main chamber as well as a separate padded laptop compartment. The good news is that the Soyuz has the braun to back up its good looks. $180

Cocoon Bags feature an innovative Grid-It organization system inside, which use a unique weave of rubberized elastic bands to offer nearly endless configuration. With a variety of sizes, styles, and colors available, you're sure to find one that suits your needs. $40-$130

PIN-UP GIRL CUFFLINKS

We love women here at Desire, and we've found another tasteful way to show our appreciation — these Pin-up Girl Cufflinks from Paul Smith. They're made from polished stainless steel with a porcelain center and feature a revolving foot. The vintage inspired pin-up girl reminds us of finding that stack of vintage gentlemen's mags at our grandparents, while it reminds older gents of a time when they were still getting tail. $135

SUMMER STORM CAP

Protect your noggin from fierce summer weather in the Summer Storm Cap from Outlier. Made from Zegna wool suiting that has been made both waterproof and breathable via a laminated outer membrane, this classically styled cap also features a supplex lining with a soft feel for added durability and superior comfort. $80

ARMANI 3 BUTTON SUIT

Like a Rolex watch, an Armani suit is one of those purchases that reminds you that you've made it. This season we're recommending the Three Button Suit from Armani. Yes, that is hella-expensive, but that amount does get you a suit with impeccable tailoring, a notched collar, three button jacket, and straight-leg, flat-front trousers, all in a wool/elastin blend that will help accentuate your build, and hopefully help you get you some action. $1695

OAKLEY ASSAULT BOOT

Originally designed for the U.S. military Elite Special Forces, the Oakley S.I. Assault Boot is built so well it's still in use in 2018. As worn by John Conner in Terminator Salvation, the lightweight, athletically-inspired boot features Resistance-approved niceties including prime urethane shock absorption, a moisture-wicking/Skynet-pissing liner, and a vulcanized rubber sole for wet/dry traction and silent movement. With the S.I. Assault, you'll be covered no matter what your post-apocalyptic landscape looks like. $185

Beer Soap is fine soap made using 100% beer as the liquid portion, with the rest made with a special recipe of olive oil, sunflower oil, unrefined shea and cocoa butters, and more. Available in many types of beer-specific varieties, these bars don't smell like beer, but instead offer just a hint of hoppy aroma as an additive to more complex aromas. $5

Get more power and longer life with less charging from the Wahl Lithium Ion Trimmer ($40). As the world's first groomer with a Lithium Ion battery, the new Wahl offers a one hour charging time, more than two hours of run time, and more than twice the torque of a normal NiMH/NiCad trimmer, and includes a charging base, trimmer blade, detailer, dual shaver, and clipper blade. $40

LETTING GO OF A RELATIONSHIP

Letting go of a relationship can be an enormous wrench, especially when you're convinced that you've found the man or woman of your dreams. Not only are you certain that you're losing your soul mate, but letting go of a relationship that you cherish can also leave you feeling that you've missed your one big chance of happiness in life. And while it's tempting to refuse to believe what your lover is telling you in the hope that he or she might just have a change of heart, it rarely happens and the best move is always simply to say goodbye.

If your lover is the one to end the relationship, then he or she will have explained why. Maybe he fell out of love with you, or maybe her feelings for you were never strong enough to last. Whatever the reason, if your lover is decent and caring, then he or she would have explained their reason for wanting out. And accepting that your partner is moving on and won't be back is the first step to letting go of a relationship. If your lover doesn't have the nerve to end the relationship and you believe he or she is keeping you hanging on with false promises, then however difficult it may be, you will have to be the one to say goodbye. Letting go of a relationship is rarely straightforward, especially when strong emotions are involved, but most people know when it's time to move on: listen to your head and not what your heart is telling you.

The best way forward after letting go of a relationship is to cease all contact with your lover. While he or she may have visions of the two of you being best buddies, in most cases this only works after a considerable amount of time has elapsed since breaking up. Don't dismiss the notion of the two of you ever being friends; just accept that it may be some time before it happens. Ask your lover not to contact you, and ensure that there are no reasons why he or she should. If the two of you shared a house or apartment, then request that your lover remove all of his or her possessions so that there will be no need for future visits. Don't be tempted to frequent the places you know your lover will be just to see who he or she is with as this can be heartbreakingly painful. Steer clear of places you suspect he or she might be until you feel strong enough to be able to cope with the sight of your ex in the arms of another.

“While he or she may have visions of the two of you being best buddies, in most cases this only works after a considerable amount of time has elapsed since breaking up”

In coming to terms with letting go of a relationship some people find that it helps to write down their thoughts and feelings. This is especially true if you're a little confused as to what exactly went wrong with the relationship and why it ended, or if you feel that you and your lover didn't speak candidly enough at the time of the break-up. Write your lover a letter telling him or her how you felt or still feel about your relationship and where you feel it may have failed: then put this letter away. This will help give you a sense of closure. Letting go of a relationship is never easy. But you can learn from the experience and take something positive from it to help you succeed in love next time around.

ASK HER

Why are women always cold?

Vanity, that's why. We're always wearing slinky little outfits made out of paper-thin fabric that flatter our figures- but bare our arms, shoulders, backs, and/or legs. Translation: Unless it's 75 degrees or warmer, we're never wearing enough clothes. And once we've gone to so much trouble to look cute, the last thing we do is cover up in a bulky sweater or jacket- although we'll happily wear yours because, you know, that's romantic.

What does a woman expect the first time you have sex?

We expect that it'll be a little clumsy at first, then frantic and passionate, then over very, very fast. It doesn't take that many first encounters to realize that few men can restrain themselves from coming for long when they're inside someone new. As for us, we don't expect to come at all (unless maybe we get lucky and the novelty of it all sends us over the edge even before you get there). All of which doesn't make it any less exhilarating. We're intoxicated the moment we feel you through your pants and realize we're going to have this forbidden part of you in the palm of our hand and then the other wetter, warmer places. It's all so erotic it doesn't take much at all to make this night exceptional.

How can you tell if you should break up with someone or just keep trying to work it out?

Sit down for a second and imagine yourself without her. Day after day goes by you don't see her talk to her at all. And it isn't because she's just away for a few weeks on vacation without you this time she's never, ever coming back. Now, how do you picture yourself? Relieved not to deal with the relationship problems, having a blast with your friends, meeting great new women, and pretty much happier without her? Or do you imagine yourself relieved not to deal with relationship problems but otherwise missing her like crazy, wishing she were around to talk to, go to dinner/the movies/the park with, have late-night/ early-morning sex with, just sit around and do nothing with? If it's the latter, keep trying to make it work thinks out because you still love her and she still makes you happy- most of the time.

When is it okay to fart in front of someone you've been dating awhile?

Under no circumstances should you pass wind before reaching Relationship Comfort Level 5. In order to get to Comfort Level 5 with your girlfriend, you have to pass Levels 1 through 4. Level 1: Belching for longer than 3 seconds mid conversation. Level 2: Scratching your crotch/ butt crack while in her direct line of sight. Level 3: Taking a whiz while she's in the shower. Level 4: Announcing you're about to take a dump. If she doesn't leave you after witnessing those delights, go ahead and turn on the gas.

How do I know if she's The One?

I'm not sure I believe in "soul mates," but if your relationship meets the following criteria, there's a damn good chance you can keep each other happy for the next 50 years.

*She backs you up no matter your goal-whether it's working out three times a week or changing careers and wants to help any way she can. * You're honest with each others even when the truth is going to cause problems. * You spend equal amounts of time listening to each other complain. *You have fun together doing absolutely nothing. *You like who you are around her. She makes you a better person. * Your fights usually spiral down into rational discussions. *You find her very, very attractive. * You have crazy, amazing, out-of-this world sex and neither of you is afraid of new tricks. * You have the same values when it comes to fidelity, marriage, and family.

HOW TO FIND A SUGAR DADDY

If you have been wondering how to find a sugar daddy you are certainly not alone. With so many uncertainties in today's world it is no wonder so many single women are wondering how to find a sugar daddy who can provide them with the security they crave. But those sugar daddies can provide much more than mere security, and those wondering how to find a sugar daddy certainly know that. After all, what woman would not love to live in the lap of luxury, enjoying fine meals at the most exclusive restaurants, furs, diamonds and all the other goodies that come with dating a rich and successful man?

Of course the question of how to find a sugar daddy can be a somewhat complicated one, and it is a good idea to approach the subject with care. When you are wondering how to find a sugar daddy you need to employ certain subtlety in order to catch your prey. After all, those rich and successful men are often besieged by offers from young single women, so you will have plenty of competition. In addition, if the rich and successful man you have been pursuing gets wind of the fact that you have been trying to find out how to find a sugar daddy he may very well be scared off. That is because many wealthy men fear their lady friends are dating them only for the money, and they take great pains to avoid gold diggers and all the problems they can present.

THE SECRET TO BEING SEXY

THE INBORN QUALITY THAT LEADS TO DESIRABILITY

Sexual attraction is a key factor in uniting couples, but what is it that generates the desirable qualities that so many long to possess?

Sex appeal can be described as a vibe – the look, sound and general aura of a person. It is a standard mix of visual and auditory signals that initially turns heads and causes hearts to pump erratically. So why is it when those standard signals are emulated by some, the outcome is not always favorable?

The truth is, looking and acting “sexy” can only get you so far. The genuine art of exhibiting sex appeal and being incessantly desired by the person you long for all boils down to chemistry.

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder...

Have you ever dated someone that you considered to be so attractive, you couldn't get them out of your mind? And then upon getting to know that person, the obsession quickly deteriorated because you had nothing in common? It's called infatuation – that passionate feeling that is frequently exaggerated by fantasy, shrouding the not-so-desirable qualities by optimistically filling in the mysterious gaps.

The problem with infatuation is, the manufactured set of images and scenarios mask a person's compatibility factor with the desired individual. Eventually they realize this “perfect” person no longer turns them on – even though they continue to exhibit the same visual and auditory signals that they were initially attracted to.

On the flip side, perhaps you've met someone whom you didn't initially find attractive, but with repeated contact, you began to experience deep, emotional feelings towards that person. This is when something greater than the perception of external qualities is involved; it's when a little thing called chemistry kicks in. The presence of emotional chemistry goes beyond craving a superficial, physical attachment. It is an innate longing to have a deeper connection with the desired individual, for reasons that cannot always be explained.

The thin line between love and hate...

Contrary to popular belief, the opposite of love is not hate. As relationships bond and sever, intense emotional feelings can cause these words to be used interchangeably. When we are hurt by someone we love, we may temporarily feel hatred towards that person for causing us pain. In a tumultuous relationship, we may love someone one minute and hate them the next. It's this lack of stability and irresolute feelings that cause our emotions to flip one way and then the other, fueling the flames of the “love/hate relationship.”

Rather than hate, the true opposite of love is indifference. When you are indifferent to someone, you don't care what they are doing, what they are thinking, or even what they think of you. That person means very little to you emotionally. But when you “hate” someone, it means you harbor strong feelings for that person. Even though the feelings are less than positive, they still weigh heavily on you emotionally.

Strong, negative emotions can sometimes disguise a buried feeling of affection for someone who does not reciprocate. Unfortunately, these are the sort of relationships that are the most difficult to let go of. What makes matters worse is the intense focus on hatred can cause an individual to miss out on suitable romantic prospects that they regularly encounter.

Sharing is caring...

With experience, stereotypical sexual images go by the wayside in favor of something more mysterious and inherent. It's that knowing look, a shared feeling of excitement and tension, and the abrupt change in the air when that special person is near that induces the feelings we all desire so much.

So it's important not to change who you are if what you are seeking is a long-lasting passionate relationship. Be confident within yourself and allow nature to send out those alluring signals that you already possess. If we look beyond stereotypical images, we have a better chance at finding long-lasting mutual desire and passion. And it is that shared passion for what is under the exterior that is really, truly sexy.

2009 EDO COMPETITION FERRARI CALIFORNIA

The Ferrari 599, 612 and 430 have had offspring. The open two-seater, dubbed the California Spider, with its retractable aluminum hard top is the new entry level model among the sports car offerings from Maranello. Having been introduced to the world at the Paris Motor Show last October, the California Spider can now be admired on our roads, too.

Newly-developed wheel/tire sets in 20 and 21 inches are guaranteed to draw amazed looks from passers-by. The wheels are available in several attractive designs. Customers can also opt for a lowered ride height or the addition of a sport suspension system. The sport suspension is adjustable in both compression and rebound damping, allowing for a custom tailored ride for cruising, spirited driving, or competition.

To make sure the performance of a vehicle as special as the California is up to par in all aspects, edo competition also offers custom ECU recalibration. After reprogramming the production ECU, the 8-cylinder engine now generates 367 kW (500HP) and 369 ft-lb of torque at 5,200 rpm. In addition to the recalibrated electronics edo competition can install a newly-developed high performance exhaust system featuring adjustable butterfly valves and custom designed high flow catalytic converters with a 200 cell per square inch metal core.

This well-matched combination enables the engine to develop its new-found power in an impressive manner. The treatment also provides a torque increase that is particularly noticeable in everyday driving. As a result, the performance figures of the edo California Spider are improved as well: It can accelerate from 0 to 100 km/h (62 mph) in a phenomenal 3.9 seconds and the top speed is an impressive 315 km/h (196 mph).

REDCARS

2009 CARLSSON CK63S

Carlsson unites two automobile worlds which could not be any more different: on the one hand, overwhelming engine power and on the other hand, the touring limousine. On one, a car trimmed for sportiness and on the other, a fully-fledged boot. Here, the coilover kit for top speeds on the race track and there, a comfortable damping for long tours. The Carlsson CK63S based on the Mercedes-Benz C-class C 63 AMG unites all of these contradictions in one car.

The core part of this refinement is the enhanced engine. The renowned automobile manufacturer Carlsson is approved by the federal motor transport authority and its engineers pull out an unbelievable 565 hp (415 kW) out of the 6.3 litre V8. This is nearly a quarter more output than the AMG engine which provides 457 hp (336 kW) out of the same cubic capacity. The maximum torque rises from 600 Newton metres in the AMG to an impressive 685 Newton metres in the CK63S. Therefore, the Carlsson C-class accelerates from zero to one hundred in only 3.8 seconds and is therefore another 0.7 seconds faster than the already speedy 4.5 seconds in the serial edition. The maximum speed is electronically limited to 300 km/h and therefore rises by 50 km/h.

As far as the optimal road handling is concerned, the Mercedes specialist brought an absolute top expert on board. The internationally successful race driver Ellen Lohr who also works as a Carlsson brand ambassador and the engineers from Merzig have perfectly adjusted the Carlsson running gear to the strong engine. This allows a continuous traction- and compression phase and therefore a perfect adjustment. Comfortable for long distance trips and the perfect performance for a ride over winding country roads.

2009 ARIEL ATOM

Walk around the Atom and names leap out. Bilstein, Eibach, Willans. Look deeper between the chassis tubes and the spokes of the wheels. There's more. Tilton, ITG, SPA, Alcon, Goodridge. Adjustable front/rear bias brakes, twin master cylinders, composite bodywork, alloy adjustable pedals, four point harnesses, competition steering rack. This is a car that has been designed to a specification not built down to a price.

Lift the rear cover, another name. An important one. Honda. Makers of the best engines in the world. And here in the Atom 3 the latest all alloy Honda 2.0 liter i-VTEC. No turbos, no race gearboxes, no bits of motorcycles. Just remarkable and reliable Honda power. Low speed tractability with race engine dynamics. Normally aspirated or supercharged. Honda provenance, Ariel design. Now look further. Fabricated tubular manifold, ram air system, dedicated electronic control unit. The Ariel detailing.

Flip the ignition. Electronic needles spring to life, the fuel pump primes. Press the starter. The engine settles to a quiet tickover. Track or traffic the atom is ready. First gear and launch the car. The urgent bark of the VTEC cuts in, the supercharger whines, the needles compete towards the 8600 limiter. Zero to 60 mph in 2.7 seconds. 0-100 mph in 6.8 seconds. Up to 600bhp per tonne. Astounding figures. Quicker than a Ferrari Enzo, more lateral G than a Porsche GT3. Giant killing performance for a fraction of the price. This is race car territory, but obtainable, affordable.

SUPERIOR 54 SPORT WAGON PROJECT HISTORY

The Superior 54 Sport Wagon project was started in the 1980s by an individual trying to build his own piece of history. The years went by and the project languished. In 2004, Superior Glass Works acquired the unfinished dream. Five more years and many thousands of hours later, the Superior 54 Sport Wagon is available at last.

The journey was one that combined old-school craftsmanship and leading-edge technology. One of the most significant pieces of this project was to create the body from which a mold could be made. Without an original body to start with, the plug was built using wood, foam, fiberglass, body filler, steel and anything else that would yield the desired form. These materials were shaped entirely by hand using only simple tools to create an extremely accurate model from which the molds were made.

The next phase of the project blasted our team into the modern era of product design and development. The now-perfect plug was imaged with a 3-D scanner, producing electronic files of the body from every angle. These were handed off to a CAD drafter to digitally create all of the body and window trim pieces. Rapid-prototyping technology was utilized to produce each part in full scale that were then installed on the body. After final hand-fitting of each trim piece, the master parts were finished and ready for production and chrome.

Since we were building a Corvette tribute car, it only seemed fitting to use the high-performance 1997-2005 C5 Corvette suspension under the skin. Leveraging decades of in-house street rod and racing chassis experience, and working with our friends at Art Morrison Enterprises, we designed a chassis from the ground up to meet our exact specifications. Art Morrison then built it up in their leading edge chassis production facility and we have a world-class platform on which this car will drive.

FERRARI F430 "CALAVERA"

Using 11 months of design and development, the Bavarian design house Unique Sportcars has completed their first design concept: A Super Sports Car for the streets.

Limiting the series to the number of 11, the unique Calavera design is based on the Ferrari F430, collaborating exclusively with Ferrari Specialist Novitec Rosso and Airbrush Artist Knud Tiroch. The Calavera concept (Spanish: Skull) is the brand of Unique Sportcars, mother of future design implementations.

All involved create an inspiring team. For over 20 years, Novitec is well-known on the tuning scene. In the early 90s, Novitec received attention and recognition for their Turbo- and Supercharged motors for Alfa Romeo. 2003 was the year of the first Novitec Rosso twin-supercharger engine for Ferrari, making a statement to professionals worldwide.

Unique Sportcars develops exclusive designs for customers wanting more than off-the-shelf. Custom-tailoring individual ideas and customer's wishes, we are on the look-out for partners to make these come to life. Idea, Concept and Implementation, all from one source!

Besides design composition and project engineering, these Bavarians have developed a few special extras. Calavera's front is suited with daytime lights, creating a more aggressive look, but not impeding on its aerodynamics.

2009 VORSTEINER PORSCHE 997 V-RT TURBO

The Vorsteiner V-RT (Vorsteiner Race Technologies) latest aerodynamic & forged wheel package is finally being released to the public to add to the current V-GT lineup for the 997 Carrera. The all-new V-RT parts will be available for world wide release after March 23rd, 2009. Please our website at www.vorsteiner.com/porsche for any public updates.

The exterior aerodynamic package consists of 3 primary packages. Up front is a new replacement front fascia that features larger carbon fiber air intakes for the radiators and elimination of the fog lights like the factory 997 GT2. A removable dry carbon fiber front lower spoiler adds additional down force to the front end while protecting the front bumper from any steep inclines or road hazards. The principal challenge of this front bumper was maximize weight savings. This was achieved by eliminating the fog lights, and replacing the factory plastic air ducts and hardware with carbon fiber ducting as a molded single component of the front bumper.

The V-RT rear bumper is also designed to offer the 997 Turbo with a wider stance with enlarged side intercooler extraction vents that house a replacement dry carbon fiber shroud that is approximately 35% larger for improved airflow through the intercoolers. The rear bumper also features a new molded carbon fiber rear diffuser with integrated twin aero fins that encompass the quad sport exhaust tips.

The V-RT rear end is completed with a carbon composite rear deck lid/engine cover with twin ram air scoops that feed air into the engine bay and air intake for maximum airflow and cooling. Additionally a carbon fiber wing blade enhances the final appearance while increasing down force to the rear of the vehicle at high speeds.

The V-306 twin 7 spoke 3-piece forged wheels shown are wrapped in Michelin Pilot Sport PS2 tires. The wheels feature a race-inspired center mesh design in 20x8.5J and 20x12J that are also available in 19 inch configurations with many personalized finish options.

HONDA DN-01

Whatever you call it, the DN-01 (could we please have a name with some personality...?) makes a splash wherever it's ridden. Its arresting design hurt some necks in Daytona, as it caused hundreds of neck-snapping double-takes.

The DN defies immediate classification. Its shark-like nose brings to mind a futuristic sportbike and is its strongest styling asset, but its considerable length gives it a laid-back cruiser profile. It looks like a mega-scooter, too, but it's lower than your typical touring scooter. A single-sided swingarm makes room for the stainless-steel exhaust and provides for easier access to the semi-adjustable rear shock.

Riding the DN couldn't be easier. It's powered by a 680cc, 52-degree V-Twin borrowed from the European-market Transalp. Although it has roots to the late-1980s Hawk GT, the SOHC, 4-valve motor is thoroughly modernized with a sophisticated fuel-injection system using dual 40mm throttle bodies and high-tech 12-hole injectors.

In terms of Bike Week qualities, the DN's deficiency is revealed after thumbing the starter button – this has got to be the most docile V-Twin exhaust note in history. The EFI's auto-enrichment system ensures quick rideability. Then things get weird.

A rider subconsciously reaches for a clutch lever that isn't there. This "crossover" is meant to appeal to less-experienced riders, so it is fitted with an automatic transmission. Called HFT (Human Friendly Transmission), this is a continuously variable, hydro-mechanical design that is a big leap in technology above the simple belt-drive CVTs (continuously variable transmission) in scooters. Honda says its HFT provides comparable performance and efficiency to a manual gearbox.

The HFT combines a hydraulic pump and motor that transmits power to the rear wheel by a conventional shaft drive, and the system seamlessly changes drive ratios in response to rider inputs. There are two fully automatic modes: D (Drive) is for maximum economy and for those in no hurry, while S (Sport) offers more immediate and snappy response. Maximum enjoyment is found by using the thumb-activated push-button manual mode that simulates a six-speed gearbox.

An electronic instrument panel provides clear and comprehensive info. The unobtrusive mirrors (with integrated turn signals) are much more effective than the mini windshield.

Although the HFT seems a bit gimmicky, it proves to be a highly refined transmission that can accommodate riders of all skill levels. The two automatic modes enable near-brainless operation, as the system feels similar to a CVT tranny. But the electronically controlled HFT automatically compensates for road inclines by a reducing the drive ratio, plus it has the ability to lock a ratio for optimum economy when cruising at constant speeds.

Other non-CVT bennies include a compression-braking effect when rolling off the throttle and the ability to switch it into neutral – perhaps the only scooter that allows you to rev the engine at stoplights. A one-touch, cable-actuated parking brake keeps the DN from rolling down inclines. In addition, the HFT's compact design requires no scheduled maintenance.
