

EDITORIAL NOTICE

The International Journal of Heat and Mass Transfer can next month look back on two years of successful development as evidenced by the rapidly and continuously growing number of subscriptions. The editors have always considered it to be in the best interest of the readers to apply a high standard to the acceptance of papers. Nevertheless, contributions accepted for publication have piled up considerably during recent months and it was therefore decided that the journal should be published monthly, beginning with this issue. It is hoped that by this change in policy the Journal will best serve the international scientific community.
