EDITORIAL

We are delighted to inform our readers that the International Journal of Polymer Analysis and Characterization (IJPAC) and our publisher Taylor & Francis are members of the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).

COPE's mission is to help scientific journals maintain their integrity, and they do that by conducting research, publishing a members' newsletter, organizing presentations and seminars, and providing specific guidance to members on issues relating to publication ethics. We urge you to visit COPE's website at <http://publicationethics.org> to learn more about COPE's work and about ethical issues relating to scientific publications, including conflict of interest, disputes over authorship and data ownership, and plagiarism.

We have received permission from COPE to publish in this issue of IJPAC COPE's guidelines on handling article retractions. The guidelines were written by Elizabeth Wager, Virginia Barbour, Steven Yentis, and Sabine Kleinert on COPE's behalf.

IJPAC has only rarely had to retract published articles, and we hope to avoid retractions in future.
