

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Whereas I was ostensibly 'in charge' of both the special minisymposium at MIT (June 2001) and this special issue of IJNMF that resulted from that meeting, I want the record to show that, in fact, both tasks were actually placed in the capable hands of one of our new members of the journal's editorial board—Dr Mark A. Christon of Sandia National Laboratories. Although he was assisted by both myself and Dr Steven Sutton (Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory), Dr Christon did most of the real work—by far. He communicated with the authors, selected (and badgered—the unhappy portion of an editor's life) referees, and collected revised papers from the authors. After perusal of this special issue, I hope you will agree with me that he did a fine job.

PHIL GRESHO