

Stabilization of Filled Polysiloxane Elastomers to Cyclic Stress at Elevated Temperature Through Use of Zinc Oxide Fillers

SUSAN A. VISSER, CHARLES E. HEWITT, JOHN J. FITZGERALD, WAYNE T. FERRAR, TONYA D. BINGA

Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, New York 14650-2129

[Article in J. Appl. Polym. Sci., 64, 1499 (1997)]

Please note that the use of zinc oxide in addition-cured¹ or condensation-cured² PDMS or PDPSDMS³ has been reported in the patent literature to give polysiloxane elastomers that are stable to cyclic stress at elevated temperature.

REFERENCES

1. S. A. Visser, C. E. Hewitt, T. D. Binga, W. T. Ferrar, M. W. Fichtner, and J. J. Fitzgerald, U.S. Pat. 5,587,245 (1996).
2. J. J. Fitzgerald, U.S. Pat. 5,292,606 (1994).
3. J. J. Fitzgerald, W. T. Ferrar, T. D. Binga, and M. W. Fichtner, U.S. Pat. 5,466,533 (1995).

Correspondence to: S. A. Visser.

Journal of Applied Polymer Science, Vol. 65, 1443 (1997)
© 1997 John Wiley & Sons, Inc. CCC 0021-8995/97/071443-01