

Publisher's Note

We are delighted to inform you about important developments that will be of significant benefit to the authors and readers of Journal of Catalysis.

The Editorial Office for Journal of Catalysis is now at one central location in Cambridge, UK. Manuscripts submitted as Regular Articles, Research Notes, or Letters to the Editor to Professors Enrique Iglesia and Roel Prins should be sent to this office, as should also Priority Communications, handled by Professor Hans Niemantsverdriet. Manuscripts must be submitted electronically by e-mail to jcat@elsevier.com, unless a specific request for submission by hard copy is made by contacting the Cambridge Office beforehand. Authors must clearly indicate the editor to whom the manuscript is submitted and should refer to the detailed Guide for Authors on the journal Web site (<http://www.elsevier.com/locate/jcat>) for detailed submission information.

Journal of Catalysis is included in a new initiative from Elsevier: "Colorful e-Products." Effective immediately, usable color figures submitted with your accepted manuscript will be published in color, without charge, in the electronic version on ScienceDirect, regardless of whether these illustrations are approved as color versions for the printed version of the journal. This initiative solution provides a welcome step forward in addressing the effective presentation of scientific information in an increasingly electronic environment without significant increases in cost. Authors interested in taking advantage of this initiative should submit all color art in an acceptable format (TIFF, EPS, or MS Office files) and with correct resolution. For color online and black and white in print, authors should also provide both color and black and white artwork (file and/or hard copy).

There is no charge to authors for participating in this initiative. Additional details about the requirements for electronic artwork can be found at <http://authors.elsevier.com/artwork>.

Articles can be viewed online at the ScienceDirect Web site at <http://www.sciencedirect.com>.

Elsevier now accepts electronic supplementary material to support and enhance the dissemination of your scientific research. Supplementary files offer authors the opportunity to publish supporting applications, movies, animation sequences, high-resolution images, background datasets, sound clips, and other visual aids or additional procedural details. Supplementary files supplied will be published online together with the electronic version of articles in Elsevier electronic products, including ScienceDirect. To ensure that your submitted material is directly usable, please provide the data in one of the recommended file formats. Authors should submit the material in electronic format together with the manuscript and also provide a brief descriptive caption for each file. For more detailed instructions, please visit our Author Gateway at <http://authors.elsevier.com>.

Your feedback and comments are welcome.
