ARGENTINE CONGRESS ON MEDICAL ECONOMICS.

The first Congress on Medical Economics, organized by the Colegio Medico, a medical society of Buenos Aires, with the coöperation of similar medical societies of Argentina, was held in Buenos Aires. Important problems of collective medical practice were discussed. The members resolved to have a fixed tariff of fees, in relation to the economic conditions of patients, who were classified as "poor," "justified to have a 60 per cent reduction in the schedule," and "able to pay the whole fee assigned in the schedule." They also resolved to have the City Hospital and similar institutions as centers for free medical care. There were various general motions, such as on the preparation of a national sanitary code. The existence of sanatoriums belonging to medical coöperative and medical mutual societies were approved. The members stated that the medical profession in Argentina is overcrowded and advised the limitation of the number of students to medical schools in relation to the health demands of the country as well as the selection of candidates, according to their preparation and ethical background. The suppression of treaties of reciprocity with various countries was advised as an aim of securing practice for Argentine physicians, those graduated from Argentine schools as well as those returning home with diplomas from accredited schools in other countries.
