

Squibb, Maisch, Procter and the many others who labored so long and earnestly to make pharmacy a true and an honored profession,—one ranking with any other in the world. It is not necessary that members should devote their valuable time to work for the Association; to sacrifice anything. It only calls for them to hold it in their heart of hearts as the Association of the country and the world, the one which has ever held its rudder true to the highest ideals of pharmacy; to look up to it as their Alma Mater,—their loving mother,—whose ever-watchful care is over and around them, ever seeking for their weal.

In this spirit the old-time men of our craft served their guild, and made it their protection against the tyranny of the over-lords and others who would oppress them. To-day the Pharmaceutical Guild of the Nation,—the American Pharmaceutical Association,—has taken the place of the guild of the old burghs, for, under modern conditions, the men of Boston know the men of San Francisco as well as the men of olden time knew their confreres of the next city, and this intimate connection should make for a solidarity, a harmony and a strength which should be irresistible for good if properly utilized and fostered and it is by association-work that such results may be achieved.

If every member would grapple this thought to his soul and take this interest in the Association, much good would result to American pharmacy and every one of its members would attain to a higher, better and a more profitable position in the community.

DETROIT,—THE BEAUTIFUL.

Anyone who has visited Detroit can readily answer the question—“Why is Detroit the greatest convention city in the world?” Space precludes our giving the thousand and one reasons here. Suffice it to say that Detroit fully lives up to the reputation expressed in its world-wide known slogan,

“In Detroit Life’s Worth Living Every Day!”

By virtue of its location, Detroit is preëminently the Convention City of America. Situated on the high terraced bank of its beautiful river,—the noble strait which connects Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie,—its climate is ideal for mid-summer gatherings. Its many beautiful public buildings, churches and other edifices delight the artistic eye, while a lover of Nature finds keen pleasure in the enjoyment of its magnificent parks, its boulevards and suburban drives.

Detroit will be the Mecca for many conventions this coming summer. The greatest of these will be that of the American Pharmaceutical Association which will be held August 24-29. An efficient entertainment committee has arranged a splendid program for your pleasure and benefit,—they say “There never was a better one.” For this week Detroit will be the drug-center of the world where the great men of the profession will gather and confer as to the welfare of our noble craft. Your presence will add to the success of the convention, and you will have “the time of your life.”

Send your notice at once to the Local Secretary, Mr. Leonard A. Seltzer,—tell him you will be in Detroit with us, and “be a Booster”; get your fellow-pharmacists to come along, and with them get away from the daily grind and broaden your horizon. You can greatly serve your Committee on Accommodations by sending your notice to-day. And you will also be assured of better quarters and service. You are confidently expected and will be cordially welcomed by your brothers of Detroit. Omar Khayyam sings:

“When all the temple is prepared within,
Why waits the drowsy worshipper without?”

Why then wait? Say to yourself, “I’ll be in Detroit in August,” and BE THERE.

THE DETROIT HOTELS.

Members of the American Pharmaceutical Association, expecting to attend the Detroit meeting, beginning Monday, August 24, will be interested to know about the various hotels and their rates. May we suggest, too, that reservations be made reasonably early in order to avoid any doubt about getting satisfactory accommodations? Detroit is well filled with tourists in July and August, and it would be most unwise not to reserve your rooms and thus make sure of getting them.

The hotels are as follows:

EXCURSION FROM DETROIT TO PT. COCKBURN AND RETURN.

The trip from Detroit to Toronto is made in the elegantly appointed trains of the C. P. R. Leaving Fort St. Union Depot, the train soon passes upon the railway ferry, to be transferred to Windsor in Canada. From the middle of the stream, an excellent view of Detroit may be observed. Leaving Windsor, the train passes through a rich farming country to Chatham, London, Woodstock, Galt, Milton and Erindale, all prosperous manufacturing and farming communities. At Cooksville, Dixie, Summerville and Islington many Toronto people have their summer homes. At West Toronto, those tourists who do not care to visit Toronto, can make connection for Bala. Toronto is, however, most interesting, and well repays a visit to Canada's "Queen City." From Toronto to Bala are many beautiful views, among them being the Falls of the Severn and Muskoka. Leaving Bala, the tourist passes through the beautiful lakes of Muskoka, Rosseau and Joseph, which are situated some hundred and twenty miles from Toronto, and on the east of the Canadian Pacific line. Stretching fifty miles further north, is the famous Georgian Bay country. These two districts, comprising as they do rivers, lakes, islands and bays innumerable, form one of the greatest vacation lands yet discovered. This romantic network, of open lakes and intricate waterways, every year rings with the laughter of the city dweller, who finds in the clear waters and pine-clad islands of the Muskokas, in the sheltered inlets of Georgian Bay and Point Au Baril, and on the rocky shores of the French River that outdoor life which fills the lungs with purest of ozone, the body with new vigor, and the heart with new happiness.

"Own your own island," say some, and surely there is a wide choice, for there are thirty thousand islands in Georgian Bay. Those of more moderate desires can, for a dollar a day, in some lake hotel or boarding house, breathe in the balsamic odors of pine and spruce, and with the daily swim, happy picnics and canoe parties, find exquisite enjoyment and regain health and joy of life.

Then there are those who scorn dwellings, and prefer camp-life in the open, taking with them bacon, flour, butter, sugar, salt and tea, needing but a fish or two from the cool waters to complete all that an epicure could crave.

By Canadian Pacific train from Toronto to Bala, the gateway of the Muskoka district, is some four hours' ride through a rich agricultural section, and a good service, combined with the fact that there are both United States and Canadian customs officers located at Bala station, makes the rail-journey unusually free from care and trouble. At Bala, transfer is made from train to steamer, and close connections insure quick arrival at any point on the lakes.

The principal lakes are three in number, Muskoka being the largest, Joseph next in size, and Lake Rosseau the smallest. They contain between four and five hundred islands, ranging from one of over 1999 acres, to those containing but a single tree or a rugged mass of rock. The majority, however, are densely crowded with pine, balsam, cedar, birch, maple, oak and other varieties of tree life.

These attractive lakes, however, do not monopolize the attention of the vacation seeker, for there are many rivers in this lovely region which offer an almost endless variety of canoe and motor-boating trips. Lake Muskoka itself is twenty-one miles long, and being joined with the other lakes by channels, a month could be easily spent in exploring their inlets, bays and rivers. Water sports are very popular in the Muskoka

Lakes, regattas being a weekly occurrence, and often parties located at one end of the lakes will boat to a neighboring regatta, and enjoy the sport always to be found at these gatherings. At the many hotels and boarding-houses on the lakes will be found good tennis courts, bowling greens and golf links, where these pastimes may be enjoyed.

In the Georgian Bay District, where everybody lives on islands, yachting is one of the great attractions, and canoeing is safely enjoyed among the many passages. There is splendid fishing among the islands, bass being very plentiful. Parry Sound is a favorite point, but a little further north, at Point Au Baril, will be found a vacation-land which all will depart from with regret and a longing to return.

Its natural attractions are very wonderful, in fact the hundreds of islands appear to have been designed to supply the need of salubrious resorts, where, in the summer, people might go and forget business cares and be happy in a land of enchantment. The fishing is exceptionally good, black bass, pickerel, pike and muskalonge being found in abundance. In this region and the French and Pickerel River Districts, those who prefer camping-out, to hotel life, will find splendid facilities, as there are people who make a specialty of fitting up tents and camping outfits for parties. During the open season the inducements to the hunter are very strong, as the section within an eight-mile radius of Point Au Baril is one of the richest game lands in the country.

The canoe trips are innumerable, and a party can set out and, with portages, return, without having traversed the same waters twice.

The whole country between the Muskoka Lakes and Sudbury is a natural heritage which is becoming more popular yearly, as vacationists return from a happy visit bringing with them stories of the joys to be found among its waters and its woods.
