Editorial

This month we present a special Photograph of the Month, submitted by Chris Talbot from Uppsala University. Chris has been on the Advisory Editorial board for a great number of years, and retired recently. The theme of this Photograph of the Month is fitting, since Chris was the first author in the first issue of the Journal of Structural Geology in 1979 with a paper on “Fold trains in a glacier of salt in southern Iran”. We would like to take this opportunity to honour our first ever author, and to thank Chris for all the good work he did for the Journal of Structural Geology over the 29 years that the Journal exists. Thanks, Chris, and happy retirement!
