USDA's Kromer retires

George Kromer, oilseed commodity market analyst with the USDA's Economics Statistics and Cooperative Service, has retired from that post, but will continue to be a consultant to USDA on a part-time basis. Kromer has been the principal contributor to USDA domestic oilseed analytical papers and has spoken frequently on that topic. He was a speaker at the 1976 World Conference on Oilseed and Vegetable Oil Processing and Technology. Although Kromer will be in the USDA office part-time, persons seeking statistical information on oilseed crops should ask for Mrs. Dottie Nelson. □

NCPA promotes Lynn Jones

AOCS member Lynn Jones has been named director of research and education at the National Cottonseed Products Association, where he had served as assistant director since 1976.

Dr. Jones was a member of the steering/program committee for the AOCS-sponsored World Conference on Vegetable Food Proteins held during 1978 and served as a session chairman at that conference.

He succeeds Garlon A. Harper, who retired earlier this year. □

Swern honored at Temple

AOCS member Daniel Swern has been named one of the first three recipients of the Temple University Faculty Award for Research and Creative Achievements, specifically the Paul W. Eberman Faculty Research Award, named for a former dean of the institution's college of education.

Dr. Swern's citation noted his work as editor of Bailey's Industrial Oil and Fat Products, his work on peroxides and his current work in the chemistry of nitrosamines and investigation of fatty acid oxidation products as potential carcinogens. □

The Question Place

In January we sought your suggestions for slogans to be printed on an AOCS T-shirt, giving as suggestions such choices as "I'm an HPLC (High Performance Lipid Chemist)" and "I'm an Oilseed; Crush Me!" Thus far, only one suggestion has been received. We've also ruled out "Lipid Lovers" and "Chromatography Is a Gas," since Supelco Inc. already offers T-shirts with those slogans. New deadline: August 1, 1980. Send suggestions to The Question Place, AOCS, 508 S. Sixth St., Champaign, IL 61820. □
