News briefs

The implementation of exploration and development programs in certain countries will cause oilfield chemical consumption to rise sharply as these countries attempt to reduce their dependency on foreign oil imports and/or increase crude oil exports, according to a study conducted by Colin A. Houston & Associates. The firm, based in Mamaroneck, New York, explained that the soft crude oil market does not necessarily translate into lackluster world oilfield chemical growth. However, it added, OPEC member-countries will have much lower growth rates than non-OPEC countries.

Stepan Co. has named Edward T. C. Hyer Jr. plant manager for the company's manufacturing facility in Winder, Georgia.
