On the Cover

Each "oil-filled" bar on the cover graph represents a portion of the nearly $47 million spent by the U.S. government for fats, oils and related products in 1987. This included $565,000 for military commissaries, $1.8 million for Indian reservations, $10.9 million for military troops, $11.2 million for charitable institutions and $20.7 million for schools. The balance went to smaller domestic feeding programs. The cover photograph of lunch-time at a public school was provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service. An article examining the U.S. government fats and oils purchases for these programs begins on page 300.
