From 1996, Journal of Materials Chemistry will be added to The Royal Society of Chemistry's top value package of primary journals, replacing the members' magazine Chemistry in Britain (issued free to 45,000 members) as the final component in this set of titles covering primary research in all areas of chemistry. With the addition of Journal of Materials Chemistry, both the value and coverage of the package have been enhanced significantly. The JCS Package offers superb value to those that need the best information on current research in chemistry; providing, each year, thousands of pages of carefully selected, up-to-date research from all over the world.

At its 1996 price, the JCS Package represents a substantial saving on the combined cover prices of its constituent titles; improving still further the kind of quality and value that a learned society can offer.
