FIFTH THERMAL ANALYSIS SCHOOL

Salford, 13–17 September 1976

The Fifth Thermal Analysis School will be held at the University of Salford, England, Department of Chemistry and Applied Chemistry, 13–17 September, 1976.

The School is designed to give scientists and technologists a general introduction to the theory and practice of thermal analysis which will enable to evaluate critically the uses of these techniques in relation to their own analytical testing or research requirements. The programme for the fifth school will include the special theme of „Applications of Thermal Analysis”.

The lectures will be held by R. C. Mackenzie, D. Dollimore, F. W. Wilburn, J. H. Flynn, D. V. Nowell, A. Dyer, L. S. Bark, P. S. Barnes, R. H. Still, A. K. Galwey, P. W. Lawson.

The fee for the School will be £ 98.24, which includes accomodation in single study bed rooms at the Halls of Residence and all meals.

Deadline for registering is 1 August, 1976.
