Oil chemists to converge on heart of Midwest

Chicago—Giant fingers reach toward the sky from the flat prairie land. These are the massive skyscrapers that make up the downtown section of the city, and the bird's eye views they provide are fascinating. One of the best vantage points is the observation deck of the John Hancock Center. "Big John," as Chicagoans fondly refer to it, is 100 stories tall and the highest apartment-office building in the world.

AOCS members will convene in Chicago for their 47th Annual Fall Meeting, September 16-19, 1973, in the Pick Congress Hotel. General Chairman Wally Quick, Technical Program Chairman Dave Erickson and Entertainment Chairman Bart Greenwell report that plans are underway for an exciting, informative meeting. Exhibits Chairman Bill McPherson advises that a few choice booths remain; any exhibitor who has not yet purchased space should contact Sully Gaskins, Room 2408, 919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611; phone (312) 642-0139.

Chicago's famous Water Tower, one of the few buildings to survive the fire of 1871, stands in marked contrast to the sleekly modern 100-story John Hancock Center which rises behind it on the city's Magnificent Mile along Michigan Avenue.
