About the cover: The molecular drawings represent substances suggested as alternate solvents to hexane for the oilseeds industry. In this issue, we present two papers on this topic. One, by Robert Hron of the USDA Southern Regional Research Center, reviews a wide range of suggested solvents. His paper originally was presented to the 31st Mississippi Valley Oilseed Processing Clinic held this past spring in New Orleans. The other article, by Helmut K. Mangold of the Federal Center for Lipid Research in Germany, reviews European research on use of supercritical carbon dioxide as a solvent. His article was written specifically for this issue of JAOCS.
