Former Brazilian intelligence Officer relates experiences

By BOB PRATT and CYNTHIA LUCE

A former military intelligence officer who led an official investigation of UFOs said he and his team photographed "many flying saucers," and admitted he was once badly frightened when a huge UFO hovered just 100 meters above him and his men.

"I was terrified," Uyrange Hollanda, a retired Brazilian Air Force lieutenant colonel, told us at his home in Cabo Frio in August 1997. "At that moment I didn't know what would happen. They could have abducted us. They could have done anything they wanted to with us.

"It was about seven o'clock just after sunset. We never saw anything approaching. Suddenly a big disc-shaped object thirty meters in diameter and fifty meters high was hovering exactly above us! It made a noise like an air conditioner, and in the midst of that we could hear a sound like a bicycle sprocket when you pedal backwards.

"It was emitting a yellow glow that would grow and dim, grow and dim, every two or three seconds... for about five times. As we watched we could see small yellow and orange lights in the middle of it. And after the fifth time, the lights turned light blue, dimmed—and then it disappeared with incredible speed toward the sea."

The astonishing close encounter occurred near the village of Baía do Sol, about twenty five kilometers north of Belém, one night in November 1977 during a long series of UFO sightings in at least thirty villages at the mouth of the Amazon River. The sightings began in August 1977 and continued for more than a year. Hollanda said the chief of the Intelligence Service at the First Air Force Command in Belém sent him and a number of technicians, photographers and specialists, all sergeants, to the region to investigate.

The team spent four months in Colares, Baía do Sol and other villages just north of Belém, after which time the official investigation was terminated. However, Hollanda said, he wanted to learn more about the flying saucers and continued the investigation on his own for several more months.

Still interested

"I was interested because I saw a lot of things," he explained. "I continued searching for the reasons

About the Authors

Both Bob Pratt and Cynthia Luce have been investigating the UFO phenomenon for more than 20 years.

Cynthia has a master's degree in anthropology and has lived in Brazil for 25 years. During most of this time she has been a member and section director of MUFON.

Bob has been a journalist for nearly 50 years, is a former editor of the MUFON UFO Journal, and is the author of UFO Danger Zone: Terror and Death in Brazil—What Next? He is also co-author with J. Allen Hynek and Philip J. Imbrogno of Night Siege: The Hudson Valley UFO Sightings. Pratt has interviewed an estimated 1,800 individuals in North and South America who have reported UFO experiences.

Pratt and Luce have worked together in Brazil on several occasions, the first being in 1979.

for what the UFOs were doing there, what they wanted... the Air Force was no longer interested but I was."

Hollanda said he and the sergeants interviewed nearly three hundred people who had had close encounters, including dozens of men and women who had been burned by the UFOs.

At least two people died in Colares after being burned by rays from UFOs, according to Dr. Wellaide Cecim Carvalho, who was then in charge of the state-operated hospital in Colares. It is not known whether there were UFO-related deaths in any of the other villages. Hollanda said he was not aware of the Colares deaths at that time but heard about them later.

Dr. Wellaide also said she treated about forty people who had been burned by beams of red light from UFOs. Hollanda told us his team had seen almost the same number of injuries in Colares, but added that people had been similarly burned in many other villages as well, including some on Marajó Island, sixty kilometers across the mouth of the Amazon from Colares.

Beams of light

Villagers in Colares reported that sometimes UFOs would hover in the dark sky at night and beam down rays of light, usually green or red, at houses — beams of light that passed through the tile roofs as if they didn't exist. At times the rays were seen circling around inside the houses as if searching for someone or something. Hollanda said the tiles seemed to dematerialize where the rays hit them and then re-materialized when the rays withdrew or shut off.

The UFO beings used two different rays of light, Hollanda said. "First came a green light that would hit the person and paralyze them, then the green light would turn off and a red ray of light would hit, burning them," he said. "A lot of people were burned."

One of the victims in Colares was Claudiomira Rodrigues Paixo, then thirty five. On the night of October 18, 1977, she was asleep in a hammock at the home of a cousin and her five children. About eleven o'clock Claudiomira was awakened by a light coming through a window.

"The air became warmer and warmer," she told Hollanda. "The first time the light was green. It touched my head and passed across my face. I woke up and the color changed to red." She could see a person, like a man in a diving suit, but only from the chest up. "He had an instrument like a pistol," she said.

Beam strikes her chest

"He pointed it at me and shined the beam three times, hitting me in the chest all three times almost in the same place. It was very hot. I got very thirsty. It hurt, like being stuck with a needle. I bled at all three points. I think each time he took blood. I was terrified, but I couldn't move my legs. I was paralyzed. I was very frightened."

The "man" and the light disappeared when she began screaming, awakening her cousin, who took her to the hospital. Dr. Wellaide treated her, and Claudiomira returned home about four in the morning. The burns left three tiny pinpoint scars in a triangular pattern on the upper right side of her chest. "For many weeks I had headaches and fever," Claudiomira said.

In an interview in Belém in 1993, Dr. Wellaide said most of the burns she treated were like sunburns, usually on the chest and throat. "I could see two small puncture wounds in the center of the burns," she said. "All had irritation, swelling, redness. Very red. The burns usually covered an area of ten to twenty centimeters, and the skin peeled off. These burns healed quickly. Usually it takes about seventy-two hours for burned skin to peel. UFO burns begin to peel almost immediately."

In each case, she said, the victims told her a ray of light had hit them. Nearly all of the villagers were terrified because they believed they were under attack by the UFOs, and they had no way to defend themselves. Many fled from the area. Dr. Wellaide said that for three months everyone left Colares except her and two other residents, the sheriff and the priest (Father Alfredo de La Ó, who experienced many sightings, according to Hollanda). They had little to eat except eggs and farinha because fishermen were too frightened to fish.

Shoot at disks

"The villagers were very afraid," Hollanda said. "They used weapons. They shot at the discs very often, threw rocks. We told them: 'Don't shoot! Don't shoot!'"

"Once a strong light was focused on a man's home in Colares, a carpenter about fifty or sixty years old. He got a rifle and aimed at the disc. The light turned on him and he fell to the ground, almost paralyzed. He could barely move for fifteen days. The first day he was dizzy. He could hear, see, and speak but he stayed in his hammock for days, hardly able to move. After fifteen days he was normal again."

Fishermen from Colares also saw UFOs going into and out of the water, and sometimes they saw blue lights moving around underwater. "They told me about these sightings, but I did not believe them," Hollanda said. "Once I was sleeping and the sergeants came and told me they had photographed a flying saucer diving into the water near a boat. I waited for the fisherman to come to shore and he told me that happened. He said he was afraid."

Dives into water

"Several weeks later I saw a light near a fishing boat. The light was blue. It circled the boat once or twice about three hundred meters away and then it dived into the water. The boat was about eight hundred meters off shore. I could see the sail of the boat in the light from the UFO. I saw it. It really happened. I started to believe the fishermen were telling the truth. I asked the fishermen did it make a splash, a sound? No, nothing."

Hollanda held his hand horizontally flat, then moved it down and said: "When you hit the water that way, SPLAT! But when you do like this," and he turned hand vertically sideways, "no sound, like a blade going in water. I talked with another crew of fishermen who said they saw a blue light under water circle the boat and then come out of the water about a hundred meters away. We got a lot of reports from fishermen."

More attacks

"I went over to Marajó Island three or four times to see what was happening there, and the people there were getting attacked too. Some of them said they also saw flying saucers floating on the water, blue lights, and they could hear sounds like fishing nets being launched and then pulled in. This was maybe eight hundred to a thousand meters off shore."

The people called the UFOs chupa-chupas, Hollanda said, because they believed the UFOs suck blood from the victims. He was convinced that actually happened, but he believed the UFO crews were simply taking blood samples, somehow withdrawing small amounts when they burned someone with a ray of red light. "They were not attacking people," he said. "They were collecting material."

UFOs seen every night

Flying saucers were seen throughout neighboring Maranhão nearly every night from April through July in 1977, just before moving farther west to the Belém region. They then showed up in Colares in August, but Hollanda, then a captain, was not aware of them until the following month.

"I was in Brasília at the National Intelligence School, and when I returned to Belém, my section chief (Lt. Col. Camilo, then head of the Belém Air Force Base's Intelligence Service) asked me whether I believed in UFOs. Until then, I didn't know about the operation in Colares. When he asked me that, I said 'Yes.' And he said, 'Well, you are responsible for the operation now.'"

Col. Camilo and several sergeants from the air base had already spent two to three weeks in Colares. They had interviewed some of the people who had been burned by UFOs and had seen flying saucers themselves. Asked why Camilo chose him, Hollanda replied: "I don't know. I was the chief of the Operation Section. I was responsible for the operations of the Intelligence Service.

"I went to the commander of the base, the brigadier, to find out what he wanted done. I asked him what the command wanted to know about the cases in Colares, what was the line of the investigation. He said he was interested in what was happening and wanted to know everything we could find out. He wanted us to get the details and make a report."

No deadline

The commander did not set any specific length of time for the investigation. Hollanda selected as his staff a number of sergeants who worked in Intelligence and had been trained in different specialties: photography, metallurgy, first aid, and so on. He equipped them with cameras, tape recorders, radios, food, and whatever else they would need to spend time in the field, traveling to affected villages and interviewing the people.

To Hollanda, this was just another Intelligence operation. He called it Operação Prato because, he said, he had to give the operation a name. "Brazil is the only nation that calls UFOs 'discos voadores', flying saucers," he explained. "In Portugal, they speak Portuguese too and they call it 'flying plate.' The Spanish call them 'platillos volantes' and the French call it flying saucer. I could not call it Operation Flying Saucer. I could not call it Operation Flying Disc. I chose a cousin of the saucer, a plate. That's why I called it Operação Prato."

Hollanda and his team soon went to Colares. "I returned to Belém a week or two later and the commander asked me what I had seen. I told him I didn't know anything yet. My problem was that I saw lights almost every night, and we photographed them, but the negatives didn't show anything. I had no proof of the flying saucers, only my visual information."

Moving from place to place

Generally, the team would spend a week in one village or another—moving from Colares to Mosqueiro to Baía do Sol to Benevides, Santo Antonio do Tauá, Vigia, Bragança and many other villages as well as farm areas—and return to Belém on weekends. They often saw flying saucers themselves and photographed many of them, then kept detailed notes and sketches on altitude, movement, direction, color, shape and anything else they believed important.

In the daytime they would type up their reports. They interviewed people who had seen UFOs and been burned by them, again keeping written records of what people told them. "I was there with orders from my commander to see and try to understand what was happening there," Hollanda said. "We were to photograph everything we could. But I spent two months without any results. I saw the balls of light, I saw the people who had been burned, but I could not make any conclusions. Many times during the two months, I saw very bright lights, blue lights, yellow lights, but I didn't see one object. I saw lights, but no shape. I was worried because my work was showing no results.

"When we saw a big ball of light we photographed it, but it did not register on the film. I was sure when I came back to headquarters that we had a picture of a big light, but nothing showed on the negatives. Then I asked for filters and special film, infrared and ultraviolet. The results were much better, and then we identified many other forms, many other shapes." Once they started getting results, they were able to get good photos of UFOs.

Three-hundred photos

"We took about three hundred photos and we photographed eight different shapes of UFOs," he said in an earlier, off-the-record interview. "The first was a disc with windows. The second was rectangular, like a barrel on its side. The third was a trapezoid, or like a pyramid with its top cut off. The fourth was like a Boeing (jetliner). The fifth was triangular or like an arrowhead. They flew very high in the sky and very fast. They were also seen leaving the water. The sixth was domed. The seventh was pointed on the top and bottom and was black on top and white on the bottom. The eighth was like a ball with three sticks coming out the back, with lights on the sticks."

A mother ship

In Cabo Frio, Hollanda said they had actually seen a ninth shape—a huge mother ship. "It was maybe a hundred meters long with windows in it. This was near Baía do Sol. And little ones (flying saucers) would come out of it and later go back in, three, four, five, six sometimes. We photographed this several nights."

Hollanda said some people reported seeing occupants in the flying saucers. Usually most of them were short, about 1.50 meters. However, in two cases the beings were taller and looked more or less like normal people. "One man in Baía do Sol said he was sleeping after lunch when he awoke to see a red light blinking outside his house. He thought that was strange and went to the window, and what he saw was much stranger.

It was a huge shape like a helicopter, but without rotors. A red light was blinking on top. There were three men inside. They were tall, about one meter eighty, with blond hair and blue eyes and were wearing white suits with blue capes. They looked like they were working with instruments, like a computer. When the man appeared at the window, he heard one of the three say to the others: 'Look at that.' And immediately the UFO took off, disappearing beyond the trees."

Tall blond man

In another case, a pilot friend of Hollanda's was driving near Colares one night when he saw a light in the sky coming toward him. "He stopped the car and he saw this disc land behind the trees. He was alone on the road, it was completely dark, and he became frightened. Then he saw a man walking toward him. The stranger was tall and had blond hair. He walked close to the car, looked at the driver, and looked into his eyes. The driver started to cry and the tall man shook his head, glanced at the license plate, turned, and walked back into the forest. Then the disc took off into the sky."

Hollanda related a story about a young man named Luis who was hunting in the forest. Luis climbed a tree and slung a hammock to wait for small animals to come near. A bright light approached and stopped above him. Frightened, he jumped to the ground and tried to hide. He saw a door open on the bottom of the UFO and a little humanoid floated down a beam of light with his arms and legs spread out, and shined a red light over the hammock, then returned to the UFO in the same way.

"Luis began to run, but the forest was muddy," Hollanda said. "He ran and ran and the disc chased him with the beam of light. It took him an hour to get to the place where two friends were waiting for him in a boat. They saw a big ball of light searching for them, and all three jumped into the water to hide in the weeds. Then the UFO stopped over the boat and again the little man came floating down like before and passed a red light over their boat, searching for something. Then the man went back to the flying saucer and it went away."

(In the official report that was sent to the Brazilian Air Force Headquarters in Brasilia, the incident occurred on the evening of Nov. 11, 1977, and the humanoid was described as short but muscular and wearing a dark, seamless uniform, and that as Luis fled from the first encounter, he looked back and saw the humanoid examining his fishing net.)

Back to the site

Hollanda persuaded a reluctant Luis to take him and four sergeants back to where this happened. "About eleven thirty, we saw a big ball of fire, dark yellow, about two kilometers down the Rio Guajará," Hollanda said. "We took some photographs of it. Then, about eleven forty five, we saw the same ball of fire again, but this time it was smaller and going at a slower speed. Now it was only a thousand meters from us over on the right side of the river and maybe two hundred meters high.

"At midnight, a big ball of fire passed directly over us, going across the river. When it got to the other side, it turned its light out and we saw a disc-shaped object about twice as big as a Boeing 737, very, very big. It was amber colored with many bright white windows. When it passed over us, we heard a small noise like a turbine, but low. It crossed the river and disappeared. We photographed this object also.

"Then, about two in the morning, we saw it again. This time it was coming down the right side of the river. It looped out and swung back toward us and stopped for a minute above the opposite shore. It looked like the sun had stopped about seventy meters away and six to eight meters high. It was a very, very big ball of bluish light.

"We were taking pictures all the time. Then the object went into the sky very fast and shut its light off. When it did that, we couldn't see the shape, but there was one green light on top and a red light on the bottom. We couldn't see the shape, but when the pictures were developed, we could see a large disc-shaped object standing vertically, rather than horizontally."

Whenever possible, usually at the end of each week or two in the field, Hollanda turned in reports of the team's findings. These reports gave details of each sighting of their own and those they learned about, the testimony of witnesses, and photos they took of UFOs. Also included would be sketches of the UFOs, as well as maps showing where sightings occurred and paths of the UFOs as they moved about.

Officials reports

Hollanda no longer remembered how many individual cases he reported to Brasilia. Somehow, Brazilian UFO researchers obtained copies of many of the reports that had been sent to Brasilia, and we have seen at least three different sets, no two of which are identical. Some are bare summaries of incidents with dates and times but no names, while others name the witness and give date, time, location and details of the encounters. Some examples from one set of documents are:

1. "A reddish-yellow light at low altitude moving east to west descended rapidly toward the witness, obliging him to hide in the bushes from where he saw the object shine a blue light in his direction. He could not determine its size or shape. He heard a hissing sound like a dynamo when the object climbed toward the city."

2. "A bright light hovering about twenty meters above the trees, bluish color with three black stripes, with a round shape like a farinha oven, lit up everything around it. The witness aimed a gun to shoot the object when he was hit by a reddish light that felt like an electrical charge, paralyzing him. Thereupon the object moved off, gaining altitude in a wavy motion and spinning like a wheel while making a slight hissing sound."

3. "A ball of light, yellow-reddish, moved down to a low height, ten meters, east to west, circular shape with a multi-colored tail, making no sound, emitted a long ray of bluish light that hit the witness in the back, causing numbness in the area hit and paralysis, muscle pain and other effects for several days."

4. "A reddish-yellow light descended to one hundred meters, moving north-south... At a distance its light was very bright and when it came close it reduced the intensity of the light, like a lighted cigarette in the dark. After coming to a swift stop, the object fired three quick rays of bluish light toward the city (Colares), 1,500 meters away. Witness raised his gun and fired two shots at the UFO."

Additional reports

And from another, more detailed set of documents, a copy of which we showed to Hollanda ("These are my reports," he said), these examples:

1. "About 11:30 on the night of October 12, 1977, in the village of Santo Antonio de Tauá, a twenty-year-old man named Manoel was standing outside his house with four friends. They saw a yellow light moving east to west, then slow down and stop about twenty meters from them. Inside the object they could see a man on the left and a woman on the right who appeared to be working controls of some kind. Then a beam of red light was directed toward the group, hitting Manoel. It was like an electrical shock that traveled all over his body from the head to his toes. He felt weak and paralyzed, and thought that for some minutes he was going to faint."

2. "Late on the same night in the same village, a forty-year-old man (also) named Manoel was asleep in his house with his children when a bright light came through the roof, awakening him. He started to get up, but felt paralyzed. He tried to scream for help, but couldn't. After about two minutes he was able to get up and cry out. His neighbors came to his rescue. In telling the investigators his story, Manoel said his left side was numb for eight days. He said he had seen a ball of light several times passing near his home at low level without making any noise, at times slowing down and nearly stopping before disappearing at great speed.

Like being stuck by a needle

3. "At four o'clock in the morning on October 26, 1977, in the same village, a thirty-six-year old man named Raimundo was awakened by a bright greenish glow in his room. Then he felt as if he had been stuck by a needle on the inside of his right thigh. He felt dizzy and soon had a headache. His thigh was reddish and hot. Several other people had told him the same thing had happened to them, but he didn't believe them. Ten days later, his thigh looked like it had been sunburned. The whole area was twenty-five centimeters long and fourteen wide, oval shaped. In the center was a small red point, and around that was a two-centimeter area that was clearer where the skin was starting to peel."

These incidents are just a few of the many hundreds that occurred throughout the region. Hollanda's team obviously could not investigate and record everything that happened in that area during 1977-78, especially after the Air Force ended the official phase of the investigation. Hollanda turned all of his reports in to his superiors, and the reports were then sent to Brasilia. "I never saw them again," he said.

"Did anybody from Brasilia ever ask you any questions about these reports?" we asked. "No, I asked them, and they said, 'We are keeping them indefinitely.'" "But nobody asked questions about what you found up there?" "No, they joked," Hollanda replied. Not all of his colleagues took his investigation seriously. "Some of my fellow officers used to joke with me and asked if I had seen any flying saucers. But later some of them saw the same thing."

Hollanda's investigation was not a secret mission, but it was "classified," he said. "The Brazilian government and the Air Force were not interested in publicizing UFOs because three questions were often asked of the Government and the Air Force: Who are they? Where do they come from? What do they want? And the Air Force did not have answers to the three questions."

Ordered to keep quiet

Asked if his commander had specifically told him he could not speak publicly about the sightings, Hollanda replied: "Yes." We asked if the Air Force ever had any similar UFO investigations in other parts of the country. "No," Hollanda answered, and then said his investigation was unique for three reasons:

"We were lucky we had a very long exposure to the UFO phenomenon. We were lucky because we were chosen to be in charge of the operation. And we were lucky because my commander, the brigadier, was interested and believed in UFOs. Three conditions. It would be very difficult to have all three again."

We asked if he had ever worked with the U.S. Air Force, and again he said "No" but added: "They were interested, but we never worked together. They asked about the UFO operation, but we never worked together. They wanted to know what we saw, the facts." He explained that two or three times military attaches from the American embassy in Brasilia would pass through Belém. They would have lunch or drinks together and the subject would come up. "It was very discreet," Hollanda said. "I suppose it was just curiosity, or they dissimulated very good."

We asked if at any time his commander considered sending fighter planes after the UFOs, and he said: "No." Nor did he and his sergeants ever think of shooting at the UFOs. "We never, in the entire time of the mission, used a single weapon, never even thought of doing it," he said.

A widespread flap

The 1977-78 Colares-area UFO flap was not an isolated occurrence, in Hollanda's opinion. He was convinced that the UFOs "surveyed" much of northern Brazil in 1977-78. A smaller flap, lasting for four months, had taken place just to the east in the state of Maranhão in mid-1977. When the Maranhão flap ended, the flying saucers shifted operations west and next showed up in the Colares region.

"They were covering Brazilian air space in strips much the way aerial photographers would," Hollanda said. "They were moving from Maranhão, then to Colares, Marajó, Monte Alegre, Santarém and Manaus, covering the region like a program."

Where the flying saucers were before they invaded Maranhão, or where they went after leaving the Manaus area, no one knows, although some encounters were reported in Ceará and Rio Grande do Norte in 1977. The year 1977 was a particularly active one for UFOs throughout South America and the rest of the world... and they have never gone away. Sightings and encounters still occur nearly every day somewhere, not only in Brazil, but around the globe.

Hollanda, who died unexpectedly on Oct. 2, 1997, at the age of fifty seven, spent thirty-six years in the Air Force. He enlisted at the age of 17 and spent the next seven years undergoing academic and military training at the Air Force academy. He became fluent in English and French, was a pilot, a parachutist, a jungle expert, and for many years was the finance officer of the Belém Air Force Base—and for twenty-four years was an officer in the secret Intelligence Service, a fact that few people were aware of.

Hollanda said he had Indian, Portuguese, Jewish, French and Dutch blood in him, and was proud of the fact that one of his great-great-grandmothers was Indian and a member of a cannibal tribe called Porintintin. He knew some Indian dialects ("They would greet me saying, 'Capitão! Capitão!'" he said in Cabo Frio), and almost every month for six years he spent long periods of time living in the jungle and working with tribal Indians, who are under the protection of the government. He retired from the Air Force on March 10, 1992.

A unique individual

Our friend Hollanda was a unique individual, a well-trained, highly educated professional warrior who served his country loyally and well. As long as he was on active duty he obeyed orders not to speak publicly about what he learned during his UFO investigations. But in the year before he died, he concluded he was no longer obligated to keep quiet. Thus, he began to speak out, giving interviews to magazine and television reporters, revealing with his firsthand testimony what governments around the world deny—that UFOs are very real.

Many mysteries still surround Hollanda and his life. He had much more to tell. We have no doubt that he would fervently hope that others with secret knowledge of flying saucers will follow his example and speak out. For those who knew him well, it is hard to imagine him gone, and even more impossible to forget him.

Military interrogation sessions with alleged abductees

By Helmut Lammer Ph.D.

Since I published two overview articles on alleged military involvement in alien abductions (MILABs), most of the well known alien abduction researchers stayed quiet, but interestingly the abductees did not. I got much information and new MILAB cases which were investigated by professional psychiatrists and therapists, and which have not published books on the abduction phenomenon.

This information and the growing evidence that covert military-intelligence agencies may be secretly involved in the alien abduction phenomenon led to three books about alien abductions, former mind-control experiments, and exotic weapon technologies, co-authored by my wife. Two of them are available only in Europe, but one of them, which concentrates mainly on the MILAB topic, will be available in the USA via IllumiNet Press this month. This book has the title MILABS: Military Mind-Control and Alien Abduction and will be the first publication which describes in detail this frightening but interesting aspect of the alien abduction phenomenon.

Of course there are MILAB sceptics too. Most of them have military-intelligence backgrounds and believe that it is not possible that covert military agencies kidnap, examine, and interrogate innocent people in democratic countries like the USA or Canada, people which they have sworn to defend.

Recently declassified top secret cold war radiation experiments, covert biowarfare experiments, illegal drug tests on unwitting people and former mind-control projects like BLUEBIRD, ARTICHOKE, MKULTRA, MKSEARCH,... show that some people high up in the command chain may have other views of how they defend their own people.

Other MILAB sceptics, like well known alien abduction researcher Prof. David Jacobs, try to defend their so-called abduction-world-view, their patriotic belief in their country, especially their belief in the military forces, with strange MILAB hypotheses.

Aliens dressed as military?

Prof. Jacobs wrote in his new book The Threat that he believes that MILAB abductees mistake human-like alien/hybrids dressed in military-like clothes and uniforms for US military personnel. Further he believes that these alien/hybrids bring the abductees to abandoned military bases, or even to unused areas of active military bases where they examine and interrogate them.

Therefore, Prof. Jacobs claims that there is no evidence that the US Government, or any foreign military is involved in covert abduction projects. I believe that such claims of infiltrated military-like alien/hybrids, however, have no scientific credibility and will be used by debunkers for ridiculing the whole alien abduction phenomenon.

In the 1998 MUFON Symposium Proceedings he claims further that only abductees which are not well known in the public claim that they have these frightening military contacts. This is also not true, since I would not know that MILAB cases exist if there were not well known abductees like Debby Jordan, Leah Haley, Katharina Wilson, Anna Jamerson, and Dr. Karla Turner, who have written books where they described some of their MILAB experiences.

Credit the abductees

In fact the abductees are the ones who brought the MILAB topic out to the public, and not the well known alien abduction researchers!

When I write about the military, I do not mean the whole US military community; I mean only a small covert task force which is in the need to know and operates in an Unacknowledged Special Access Program (USAP), financed by a black budget.

Therefore, I am not against the whole US military and related agencies, but I think that the public has the right to know what is going on in USAPs, where the enemy seems not to be a hostile dictator or regime. If one reviews hypnosis transcripts of several MILAB abductees and compares their recovered memories with the experiences of survivors of now known declassified Government sponsored mind-or behavior-control experiments, one will find a strong indication that covert human military personnel are indeed involved in the alien abduction phenomenon. Many researchers ignore or don't understand MILAB experiences because they don't know good and competently investigated MILAB cases.

Support from MUFON project

It should be noted that cases in MUFON's own Abduction Transcription Project support the MILAB hypothesis. Dan Wright informed me on May 5, 1998, that the experiences recalled by several subjects of project MILAB bear striking resemblance to those separately recalled by persons in the MUFON Abduction Transcription Project. Examples are:

1. A hangar with UFO-like craft(s)
2. One or more cubicle-like rooms within a very large underground room or cavern.
3. Military officers with name tags and other identifiers removed from their uniforms.
4. Use of drugs to elicit responses from subjects.
5. Berating the subject to relate what he/she was told or shown by aliens.
6. Brainwashing the subject to believe afterward that the interrogation did not happen.

We found in our research that most MILAB abductees claim with or without hypnosis that they were interrogated by military personnel, men in business suits, or men in white lab-coats sometime during their experience. Brenda (pseudonym) a Canadian alien abductee who was also taken to a military base during one of her encounters remembers the following:[1]

"...I was in front of a military hangar. I recall being met by two men in white lab-coats. I was led through a door where I saw a large room. As I was taken down the hall, to my left on the wall was a large sign that read 'Cold City in the Future.' As I proceeded down the hall with these two men I saw a large UFO-like craft, but I could not focus.

A room within a room

"Then I was taken to a room within a room where I was interrogated by two more men in white lab-coats. These two men were not young men they must have been in their fifties or so. One man stood behind me while the other stood in front. I was shoved against the wall while they talked to me.

"I remember standing there scared to death and I asked them if they were going to kill me. I recall one of them saying, 'We could, but we won't.' It was then that they pushed me forward while the one stood behind me.

"I noticed one guy held a bottle of what I saw to be chloroform. It was written on the bottle. Then the other had a cloth. One of the men stood behind me while the other guy put the stuff on the cloth. They placed this cloth over my mouth and that's the last thing

I recall until I woke up in my room at home. The first thing I noticed was I could not see very well. My room was very hazy and my eyes were blurry. I was not feeling well at this time. I had a very bad headache and an upset stomach. I could smell chloroform in my nose and was sick for most of that day."

Similar report

Debby Jordan, like Brenda, also remembered that she saw many rooms within a room, each separated by glass walls and more wide swinging doors.[2] The military hangar and the strange looking UFO-like craft offers evidence that Brenda was taken to a secret military/aerospace facility. The craft must not be an alien UFO; it could also be that she saw an advanced disc shaped, UFO-like drone, such as the discs which are currently developed at Lockheed's Helendale underground research facility near Palmdale in South California.

MILAB abductee and researcher Melinda Leslie had also experienced alien and military abductions since 1993. One of those kidnappings occurred near one of the before mentioned secret aerospace facilities in southern California, where she had an alien abduction experience near Lancaster with friends.

After some weeks they independently had flashbacks of a scenario where they saw a man in a Navy uniform monitoring their examination, which was done by nonhuman beings. They remember also that they had headphone-like things on their head.[3]

Kidnapped and drugged

In November 1993 Ms. Leslie remembered that she was kidnapped, drugged, and taken by two men in camouflage to a military facility where she saw also a strange triangle-shaped craft in a large hangar. In the meantime she has done extensive hypnosis regression concerning this event.[4] She recalled being on a stretcher in a large hangar as a helicopter pilot asked her what the hell she is doing there. At that moment a man in a naval officer uniform and two men in white lab-coats appeared and rebuked the pilot.

This important event shows that not all military personnel on this base had the "need to know" concerning MILABs. After this confrontation the men in the lab-coats and the military guy took her in an interrogation room. She described in detail how they walked through halls with video cameras on the walls and metal-doors. Inside this room was a table and chairs.

Forced to sit on chair

Melinda was forced to sit on such a chair, and one man in a lab-coat gave her a shot in the arm and a strange drink. After this she felt high. She was very frightened as she felt that one man grasped her on the cheeks. A man in a white lab-coat stood behind her and a spotlight shone on her chair.

A red haired military officer asked her questions concerning her alleged alien experiences. I do not believe that the alien/hybrids in military uniforms described by Dr. Jacobs would be interested in the abduction experience of humans which were allegedly done by the creators of the hybrids! This would be very strange, since the alien/hybrids should know more about the motives of the alleged alien abductors than the abductees.

Strangely, it appeared that he wanted information about UFO technology. He said to her:[4]

"...What have they asked you? Tell me about their technology? Tell me about the drive system, the drive mechanism? You tell me about what they told you to do! What did they tell you? What did they ask you to do? Tell me, tell me, tell me. You know you are not theirs, you are ours!..."

Very traumatic

This strange interrogation session was very traumatic for her since she cannot recall that she answered his questions. The hypnotherapist calmed her as she began weeping and crying. After this interrogation she was brainwashed by the same guy:[4]

"...You couldn't tell me now even if you want. You can't talk right now. You couldn't tell it even if you try. We fixed that. Don't try! You won't remember any of this, we fixed it!...You won't remember this! It's a bad dream. We are taking care of that. You will not remember. This is a bad dream. You were never here...I don't exist...None of this is happening..."

Melinda Leslie tried to resist the brainwashing procedure, although she was drugged. Historic cases of mind-control experiments document procedures similar to Melinda Leslie's interrogation scenario.

Master Sergeant James Stanley was used in a psychochemical warfare experiment in Fort Knox, Kentucky, in February 1958. Stanley remembered sitting across a table from a white-coated doctor with two glasses of clear liquid between them. The man in the lab-coat said to him: "Here, have a drink. It's only water, nothing more than what I drink." A little bit later, Stanley thought he had gone insane. His head was filled with terrifying visions and his body seemed to tumble through time and space. He participated unwittingly in LSD-brainwashing experiments. After a third experiment Stanley's memory was wiped out and he vaguely remembered telling the doctor that he was standing by a river.[5]

Drugs as Cold War weapon

It is now known from the Edgewood experiments that the CIA and the military intelligence thought psychochemicals could be used as a cold war weapon to control the mind of an individual being interrogated.[6] This short excursion into the CIA/LSD-brainwashing experiments of the fifties show that similar psychochemicals are probably used also in MILAB interrogation sessions.

After the interrogation, Melinda Leslie was escorted by military personnel through hallways and doors back to the hangar where she saw large dark unmarked helicopters. Melinda Leslie saw also an advanced triangle shaped UFO-like craft. One can speculate that she was taken to a similar base as Brenda. It should be noted, however, that she remembered many more details of the base than I presented here.

Abductee Leah Healy recalled, also under hypnosis, that she was taken by a helicopter to a military base where she was interrogated concerning her alleged alien abduction experiences:[7,8]

"...I was struggling with them as I was coming off the helicopter. I don't understand why they're taking me in there. I felt a sudden chill. It's cold. There's a man on each side of me holding my arms tightly. They're taking me into a building...I see men seated along the left side of a conference room table. The man in the blue uniform is standing to my right.

Military pins

"A man decorated with military pins is standing at the opposite end of the table...Somebody is giving me a shot in the right arm. It feels like a tetanus shot...The guys in the uniform are still holding me tightly...They look like military people...Real short hair...They don't look familiar...They force me into a chair...I am just feeling dizzy...The man from the helicopter said: 'Here she is. She's a cocky little bitch.' "Then somebody on the other side of the room said, 'Well, we'll just take care of that!'...Somebody came up from behind me and put a jacket around my shoulders..."

Interestingly, abductee Leah Haley recalled a similar brain washing scenario as Melinda Leslie. She also has no memory what they asked her before.

"...There's a man talking to me. He is telling me I haven't seen anything. He is not very nice. I don't see him because I am so dizzy. I'm leaning my head over. First he was on the other side of the room, but now he comes close to me and sort of props himself up against the table. He said, 'You didn't see a spaceship. Do you understand! You didn't see a spaceship'...They are angry... 'It's none of your damned business... You hadn't seen anything... You don't know anything'... There is a lady with a blue uniform in the room. She brought in a tape recorder. She laid it on the end of the table at the other end of the room..."

Similar cases

The husband of the late Dr. Karla Turner, Casey Turner, and many other MILAB abductees also recalled abductions where they were drugged, taken to a military underground facility, and interrogated by a military officer. There are more cases which describe such scenarios in detail in our book MILABS.

If one investigates these so-called military interrogation sessions, it appears that these abductees are some kind of "hypnotic couriers" or programmed agents. In MILABS we show that professional hypnosis experts like Dr. George Estabrooks claimed that they created such hypnotic couriers after the war via personality dissociation.[9] Probably a military psychiatrist split the personality of some abductees with known mind-control techniques such as sensory deprivation, spin-programming, flashlights, electric shocks, rape, ecetera to create "Manchurian Candidates" for information gathering purposes during alien abduction experiences.

Personality split

Consider the splitting of an abductee into personality A and personality B. Personality A had been a normal citizen with alien abduction experiences. Under hypnosis, the abductee and especially personality B was carefully prepared for spying during an alien abduction experience. Personality B, the prepared military spy and deeper personality, knew all the thoughts of personality A.

A military psychiatrist could hypnotize the whole person, to get in touch with personality B, the artificially created military spy. The military would have a straight perfect pipeline into the alien abduction scenario. Personality B is more watchful, has an enhanced memory, not so frightend as personality A.

Since the military gave the abductees strange drinks and shots before the interrogation, they probably use drugs to get easier access to personality B. When personality A is questioned the abductee would have no conscious memory of what happend during the interrogation session, since the civilian hypnotist does not know how person B could be triggered. Therefore, civilian researchers would have no way to get the information the military gets from personality B.

Can't remember

Another indication that the above mentioned scenario goes on is the fact that the interrogated abductee can't remember what he/she replies to the interrogator. Most remember some of the questions, but not the answers. Melinda Leslie found this experience very frustrating.

If MILAB abductees are programmed to spy for the military, the victim switches from personality B to personality A and understands only some of the questions the interrogator asks them. As a consequence they would have memory gaps.

MILAB abductee Lisa (pseudonym) was also interrogated by her military kidnappers.[10, 11] On one August night in 1993, Lisa had an alien encounter, only to be followed the next night by a military kidnapping. The first night Lisa had what she called a reality-like dream of travelling in a spaceship with a Grey alien. The being was telepathically instructing her how to maneuver around objects. The Grey told her that the craft could sense objects and maneuver around them.

The following night Lisa had a traumatic flashback that she experienced as:[10, 11] "...I was being interrogated by the military and pushed around. I was on the ground with my hands on the back of my head, with a gun pushing and holding me down. Men in green military clothes were asking me questions, while men in black military clothes were standing in the background by the military vehicles. They kept saying over and over, to give them the knowledge, and they said at any cost...do you understand? At any cost!..."

After this Lisa's memory ended, and she wrote in her journal that she couldn't figure out what it was the military men wanted to know. On Dec. 17, she remembered lying on a stretcher and being pushed down a hallway that was lit with bright lights. Something was inserted into her left ear, and she passed out. She remembered also men wearing business suits. One of these men called her by her maiden name.

More flashbacks

After some time she got more flashbacks of what occurred during this encounter:[10, 11] "...All of a sudden I'm surrounded by men in black clothes and some military men dressed in green." Lisa was forced to walk very quickly across the grounds of a compound or an installation..."The soldiers were rude to me...I told them to stop pushing on me. I was very irritated by them. Then we went into an office of some type...A man was sitting behind the desk. He was wearing solid green military type clothes, but had no name or tag medals on it. He started asking me questions about what I felt about the aliens. It seemed like he was wondering how to get the public prepared. I told him that a lot of the public was already aware, and some would never accept it..."

During another military interrogation she met the same man as before. He told her that she was the key to understanding. "...He was saying it's in my head and it had to be unlocked, and that I belong to the Government. Also, men in green military clothes were standing beside me with guns, and I thought there were some men in black uniforms behind me. I remember standing up and then being made to sit in an old wooden chair in a concrete-floored room. He wore green military clothes and kept tapping me with his fingers on the front and sides of my head, like he was frustrated with me..."

Again the sentence: "It's in your head, and it had to be unlocked" points to a hypnoprogrammed courier or spy. We present more evidence in our MILABS book that such things are going on, and there are more abductees who may have such a dissociative-programming.

Manchurian candidate?

If one speculates that MILAB abductees have got a "Manchurian Candidate"-like programming in their past, their personality A would have a "missing time" experience if personality B is activated, since A doesn't know what personality B was doing. Personality B is probably trained on a military base for a secret mission. After some time, personality A could experience flashbacks from personality B's memories. The military could defend personality B's memories by alien related screen memories and mostly personality A experienced alien-related flashbacks.

The before mentioned scenario is just a thought-game, but there are many indications that something similar is going on with some MILAB abductees. The before mentioned cases have similarities with cases from the files of hypnotherapist Valery Wolf, who testified with two former mind-control vic-

X-ray from New Zealand mind-control victim Janine Jones. Mrs. Jones has statements from medical doctors confirming that she has a foreign object in her forehead which was implanted transnasal by persons unknown. The case has nothing to do with alien abductions, but one can see the similarities. (Copyright Janine Jones.)

tims before the radiation hearings of the US Congress, found indications that children who were abused and formed an ability to dissociate and split their personalities were allegedly used by secret military/intelligence units for spy-purposes.[12]

We asked several MILAB abductees 20 symptoms which were found by people who switch into another personality, shortly before or after the transformation.[13] These symptoms are:

1. A severe headache
2. Eye pressure
3. Pressure inside the head
4. Stiff neck and tense muscles
5. Blurry vision
6. Glassy eyes
7. Dizzy or lightheaded
8. Ringing in ears
9. Eyes become very sensitive to light
10. Chills
11. Feeling physically different
12. Feeling more childlike
13. A rapid mood swing
14. Thought's feelings and emotions change about the same situation

15. Things look different
16. You don't feel real. Like you are looking down on yourself
17. Your mannerisms change
18. Can't think clearly
19. Thought's get louder
20. Opposing conversations in your head (Voices)

Many symptoms

Interestingly most MILAB abductees reported many symptoms after an experience. Brenda experienced 14 symptoms, some of them very intensive. Katharina Wilson experienced 12 symptoms after or before an alleged alien abduction experience, and 15 symptoms after or before a MILAB experience. Michelle experienced 17 symptoms reported usually in multiple personality patients. Other MILAB abductees from our review reported symptoms in the same numbers.[14]

This results show probably a connection in MILABs, alien abductions, and multiple personality disorder (MPD). More research must be done before we would definitively know what's really going on. Several mind-control research organisations and researchers have collected a lot of evidence that the post war experiments which are now known to the public are only the tip of an iceberg.

Dr. Corydon Hammond gave an interesting talk about "Hypnosis in MPD: Ritual Abuse," at the Fourth Annual Eastern Regional Conference on Abuse and Multiple personality, 1992 in Virginia.[15] He reported that he and other therapists came across some cases where the abused victim claims that he/she were programmed by secret military/intelligence agencies in military hospitals.

Naked on a gurney

Basically, in the programming the victims will be put naked on a gurney. They will have an IV in one hand or arm. There are wires attached to their head to monitor electroencephalograph (EEG) patterns. Some victims describe pulsed flashing red, white or blue lights. They are drugged, probably with Demerol or other drugs. Dr. Hammond believes that military psychiatrists need no longer than 25 minutes to program a person.

Some of Dr. Hammond's patients describe a pain in one ear, mostly the right ear. They hear weird disorienting sounds in that ear while they see photic stimulation to drive the brain into a brainwave pattern with a pulsing light at a certain frequency. After a certain period the victim is in the right brainwave state and they will begin with the programming.

Many MILAB abductees describe IV's, drugs, pulsing lights, implants,...therefore, it seems to me that they have received some programming during MILAB kidnappings.

It is difficult to say what MILAB abductees are being conditioned or programmed to do. By careful investigation of these interrogation sessions one should ask two questions:

1. Are MILAB abductees military programmed "Manchurian Candidates" who spy for a secret military task force in alleged alien crafts? Are they so-called "Trojan Horses" inside "real" UFOs during an alien abduction experience? Or...

2. Is their alien abduction experience a synthetically programmed screen memory for hiding secret spy or military missions?

Detailed research in the history of MILAB abductees should lead to answering at least question (2). If one finds that the parents or relatives of the victim had early connections to the military/intelligence community, they were adopted or worked early on sensitive Government positions, one should find some evidence of childhood mind-control programming.

Covert operations

We believe that there are also indications that "some" MILAB experiences show that there is indeed at least one covertly operating secret military task force whose leaders "believe" some alien abductions may be real. Therefore, they seem to be interested in getting as much information from alleged alien abductees as they can. It should also be noted that the above mentioned MILAB abductees are not alone, and that their cases are only examples from a much larger pool of victims.

The UFO PRESS

MILABS—Military Mind Control and Alien Abduction by Dr. Helmut F. Lammer and Marion Lammer, Illuminetpress, 1999.

Reviewed by Dwight Connelly

This, Dr. Lammer's fifth book, could change the way many people view the UFO phenomenon.

Evidence is presented by this international researcher that the military is involved with what we normally perceive as purely alien abductions, suggesting that the motive for this involvement may be two-fold: (1) finding out more about the true alien abductions and (2) utilizing fake alien abductions in order to conduct experiments on human guinea pigs. Such experiments, he suggests, are in two specific areas: (1) advanced mind and behavior control, and (2) genetic research.

Helmut Lammer

Dr. Lammer goes into considerable detail, with extensive footnoting, as he develops this theory. Whether one accepts his conclusions or not, the reader at least knows what they are based on. There are many noteworthy chapters in this book, and there is space to briefly touch on just a few.

For example, the chapter on the role of dark, unmarked helicopters in conjunction with abductions is quite interesting. The author notes that this is primarily reported in the U.S., rather than worldwide, suggesting that such encounters and observations are more likely to involve the U.S. military than aliens.

Reports by abductees of what appears to be involvement with the military during abductions is, of course, discussed in detail. Rather than accepting the presence of the military and individuals in lab coats as a technique used by aliens to screen or confuse abductees, Dr. Lammer takes the approach that it may very well work the other way around: the military (government) is utilizing the perceived (perhaps faked) alien presence in some abductions to confuse the situation and to damage the credibility of military abductees.

The author discusses the role of drugs, such as LSD, as possible components of military abductions, noting experiments which show that such drugs can create hallucinations and otherwise make the victims see strange beings, strange animals, and other images often reported by abductees.

Another fascinating area involves scientific experiments which involve living organisms, including dogs, being submerged in a liquid and being able to actually survive by breathing the liquid and obtaining oxygen from it. One of the familiar reports of abductees, of course, involves submersion in a liquid in some sort of glass-like tube—and of observing others in similar tubes. Dr. Lammer theorizes that the military has simply carried the reported scientific experiments a step or two farther, utilizing unwilling abductees for their experiments.

Likewise, he feels that cloning has been carried much farther than Dolly the sheep, and that reports by some abductees, such as Katharina Wilson, that they saw clones of themselves may very well be true.

Another area being pursued openly by scientists involves the use of implants, and many abductees have indicated that their captors—whether alien or military—have also shown interest in such devices. While public discussion of implants focuses on their benefits, such as monitoring individuals to prevent heart attacks, or locating missing children or pets, Dr. Lammer has found evidence that others have a less benevolent purpose in mind. These would include manipulation of the thought process in humans, as well as implants for strategic military purposes. Again, Dr. Lammer questions whether abductees have become unwilling participants in experiments which could not be conducted openly on humans, using fake alien abductions as a type of screen.

There is, of course, a great deal more in this book that this brief review can cover. Dr. Lammer has done a tremendous amount of research, and has been able to bring his research together in a compelling account. This is one of those books that is truly hard to put down. While Dr. Lammer's account will not be the last word on MILABS, it appears to be the best thus far, and ufologists will not have a picture of the total abduction situation without reading it.

Letters to Mufon UFO Journal

Accuracy of article questioned

In your February 1999 issue the article by J. P. Daley is very interesting, but raises the question who is kidding who. In the answer to Question 1 regarding "the elements that have closed shells, e.g. 2, 8, 20, 28, 50, 82, and 126," anyone with a chemistry or physics background will do a double take.

This could be a typographical error if one or two numbers were incorrect; however, only helium with atomic number 2 is accurate. The remaining elements with closed shells are neon #10, argon #18, krypton #36, xenon #54, and radon #86. The theoretical element at #126 may or may not be stable if it is capable of being created. Please clarify this apparent error.

Jerry Pirie

Creston, B.C., Canada

Mr. Pirie's letter was referred to MUFON Consultant Bob Wood. His response follows:

I received today your note and letter from Mr. Pirie of Canada regarding the possible errors in the Daly article in the February 1999 Journal.

Daley is attempting to discuss the stability of the nuclei of the atoms and is, by inference, using a model of how the protons and neutrons of the nuclei may be arranged in shells.

Unfortunately, he used the words "closed atomic shells," which conjures up the image of the electrons going around the nuclei and the attendant chemical stability properties.

The closed atomic (electron) shells are shown on the right-hand row of any periodic table, and are given with their atomic numbers: 2. He helium, 10 Ne neon, 18 Ar argon, 36 Kr krypton, 54 Xe xenon, and 86 Rn radon, just as Pirie notes. These elements are the inert gases, basically irrelevant to the point Mr. Daley is trying to make.

The stability of the nucleus is what is at issue, and the stable low atomic number elements have equal numbers of neutrons and protons. If heavier elements are examined, to be stable the number of neutrons exceeds that of the protons. For example, stable nickel (Ni) with atomic number 28 has 30 neutrons for the most abundant isotope. Nickel also has an isotope with 32 neutrons that is stable.

I do not have handy the Meyerhof reference cited by Daley and have no way of developing his sequence of closed (nuclear) shell stability of 2, 8, 20, 28, 50, 82 and 126, and whether the number represent protons or neutrons. I presume protons, since he alludes to "element 126." Thus, I cannot confirm this sequence of "closed shells" in the article or describe how they may have been obtained. They may indeed be incorrect, but I think Daley will have a good answer, which will become much more complex than implied.

It is unfortunate that the word "isotope" was misspelled "isotone" on line 6 following the Question 1 header, since the entire discussion hinges on an understanding of isotopes, and it is easy to see how Pirie missed this point. I believe his concern was somewhat justified.

UFO flap reported in Lima, Peru, area

By George Filer

MUFON Eastern Director

LIMA —On Feb. 9, 1999, just before midnight, witnesses from the port of Pisco, 300 kilometers south of Lima, watched a large anomalous light emerge from the Pacific Ocean. The UFO was described by witnesses as a supply ship or mothership that rose into the air, banked sharply to the right, and flew east heading for the shore.

The following evening Feb. 10, residents of Chorrillos, a suburb of Lima, reported seeing luminous discs "flying at a low altitude." In Jesus Maria, another Lima suburb, residents poured into the plaza to watch the overflight that was videotaped.

Within the hour, another squadron of luminous UFOs flew over the seaport city of Callao, 13 kilometers west of Lima. By now, the word had spread, and a crowd of about 2,000 people witnessed the overflight of Callao. "Neighbors in the zone went outside of their homes in the hope of seeing the OVNI's (Spanish acronym for UFOs) again."

At 11:00 p.m. both Channel 2 and 5 Television Panamericana stunned all two million residents of Lima with a special 40-minute broadcast on the UFO flap. The show aired video footage of the objects flying over Jesus Maria and Callao. Two luminous UFOs were seen flying eastward towards the Andes from Ica, 400 kilometers south of Lima.

On Feb. 12, more UFO reports came from the desert northeast of Lima as residents watched the UFOs pass overhead. According to Dr. Virgilio Sanchez Ocedo, the next day a startling videotape was shown on Channel 5 of a saucer skimming low over the rooftops and palm trees of Callao. (See the newspapers El Comercio and El Expresso for Feb. 13, 1999). F-18 near miss in California

SAN DIEGO — The International Society for UFO Research (ISUR) has received intriguing information from a former Air Wing Marine once stationed at Miramar Air Station. In November of 1995, a pilot in his squadron, VMFA-212 (F/A-18Cs) had a near-collision with a slender cigar-shaped UFO. Interestingly, the UFO was recorded on the plane's "Heads-Up Display video" according to this former enlisted Marine who viewed the tape.

George Filer

Excerpts, with names, addresses and phone numbers deleted, from several e-mail exchanges between ISUR and the ex-Marine follow.

Ex-Marine's initial description of a "12:00 noon," November 1995, incident: "I was in the Marine Corps. Two of our pilots had just gotten back from a flight. One of them called for intelligence and me (flight scheduling rep). He showed us the Heads Up Display video from the flight. He was engaging the other pilot in a dogfighting exercise when a 'cigar-shaped' object zipped past the F-18.

"We slowed it down to a crawl, but it was traveling so fast initially that it was a blur even at the speed we viewed. The object came so close to the jet the pilot thought it would hit him. Later in the video, the F-18 in front is preparing to bank right. Just before he does a glare on the video banks quickly to the left about 2 seconds before either jet made a move. I personally acquired the flight clearance the day before and there should not have been any activity even in the area.

"However, it was never explained and shortly declassified. Everyone regarded the situation as either a mistake by someone on the ground or a natural phenomenon. According to what the pilot, and the rest of us saw on the video, the object was approximately 12 feet in length and 3 feet wide. The name of the squadron was VMFA-212 (F/A-18Cs). The video has probably been copied over, deleted or discarded."

On Feb. 22 and 23, 1999, several UFOs were reported in the Miramar Air Station area. Thanks to ISUR and board member John Thompson.

Georgia F-4 accident and UFO

Investigator John Thompson reports that on March 6, 1994, an Alabama Air National Guard F-4 exploded in mid-flight over Heard County, GA. A Heard County fireman, Bill Thompson, who is not related to John, said that two minutes before the explosion and crash of the F-4, he saw the F-4 chasing a missile-like or cigar-shaped UFO. Bill's description was that the gray or silver-colored UFO was about "a third to half the size of the F-4" chasing it.

This, of course, suggests a UFO of the same type and size that the California VMFA-212 pilot almost collided with in 1995. Referring to the ANG explosion, in which the pilot died, the Air Force said the mishap was caused by bad welds. These inadequate welds, according to the Air Force's official crash report, originated with the plane's number one engine (GEOO420459). The failure of the welds, according to the USAF was the sole reason for the upper combustion case failure that subsequently caused the F-4 to explode in mid-flight.

A General Electric engineer who subsequently investigated the crash, because of a law suit against General Electric, the manufacturer of the plane's engines, said that he thought the pilot had over-stressed the F-4, causing it to tear apart and explode. Of course, if the F-4 was chasing or suddenly encountered a small thin cigar-shaped UFO, as Fireman Bill Thompson claims, its pilot might over-stress his plane in his excitement.

There is also a precedent for something exactly like this happening. In the Paris Air Show of 1972, the Soviets introduced their new TU-144 supersonic plane. According to a PBS Nova special that aired last year, the French now admit that they had a Mirage jet "shadowing" the Soviet aircraft and that the Soviet pilot on avoiding the Mirage, which before had been unseen, pulled the TU-144 apart. In the video of the plane's tragic crash, which was aired on Nova, the TU-144 can be seen disintegrating and exploding in mid-air.

Despite what the Air Force and the retired colonel said, the F-4's explosion could have come about from over-stress as General Electric's investigator said happened. These "missile" like UFOs have been seen repeatedly in the Long Island Sound area by commercial airliners. It can be speculated that one of these UFOs caused the TWA 800 disaster that, to many, still remains unsolved. The ex-Marine's testimony lends credibility to Fireman Thompson's claims that a UFO may have indirectly caused the ANG F-4 to explode.

MUFON Case Investigation of the Month

By Dan Wright,
Deputy Director, Investigations

The great majority of close encounter sightings suffer from an absence of physical evidence to support the witness testimony. The investigation is further complicated when the only eyewitnesses disagree as to the fundamental nature of the object viewed. Under these circumstances, many cases quickly reach a dead end. But Minnesota MUFON field investigator Craig Lang, with assistance from Dr. Steven Hero, a MUFON consultant, overcame those handicaps with a well-reasoned case narrative.

Dan Wright

The Event

At about 11:30 p.m. on Sept. 22, 1997, a 67-year-old woman was awakened by a loud noise outside her mobile home in rural Frazee, MN. Expecting to see raccoons, she instead observed a lenticular-shaped object a few hundred feet distant, hovering low over a farm field. Five large white lights, nearly blinding in their intensity, obscured the surface area. Frightened but fascinated, with no telephone with which to seek help, she embarked on a vigil over the next two-hours.

As her eyes adjusted to the glare which illuminated an expanse of the field, the woman perceived multiple blue beams between the blobs of white and extending outward. Twenty minutes into the event, as she returned to the window after rousing her 82-year-old companion, she confronted three smaller, less intense white lights in a triangular formation, fairly near the first object but motionless over a farmhouse.

At this point the man arrived at the window. After initially assessing the primary object as a helicopter, he concluded instead that the brilliance must be from an airport at the town of Perham (eight miles distant). The smaller lights nearby, he decided, were likely from an approaching train. Satisfied, he returned to bed.

A few minutes later, the top light of the triangular formation suddenly darted toward the larger object, merged with it and was not seen again. The woman opened a window, but heard nothing despite a near absence of wind and no other masking sounds. She moved among windows in various rooms of the darkened home, yet gained no additional insights. At about 1 a.m., still frightened yet having witnessed no further movement of the lights, she returned to bed, but was unable to sleep. At 1:30 she arose again to find the two remaining smaller lights either resting on the roadway or in the adjoining field. She again went from window to window for an optimum view.

By 2:45 the two lights appeared to be slowly approaching, bouncing slightly as they went. She wished for them to be the headlights of a truck, but realized they were situated too far apart. Unnerved, she returned to bed to compose herself. Curiously, she fell quickly asleep and slept soundly until 8 a.m.. All was then back to normal.

The Investigation

Written testimony and sighting forms were obtained a week later. The woman and man are relatives of Dr. Hero, their veracity beyond question. On a visit a fortnight after the event, he visually inspected the field in question and surrounding area, but found no evidence of a UFO landing. Neighboring residents available at that time could offer nothing.

The investigators then postulated and evaluated all conceivable IFO possibilities: Distant lights or the moon on clouds can be discounted by the main object's fierce glare, both witnesses' good vision, and the three-plus hours comprising the episode.

The humid night in this swampy area might possibly have triggered a plasma or power line corona. But the behavior of the triangle of lights, including their position above the farmhouse and one merging with the primary object, plus the sighting's overall duration, argue strongly against that.

Lights from a train or railroad work are discounted by reason of the obscured view of the tracks from the mobile home, the elevation of the triangle of lights when over the farmhouse, and again the overall duration.

A helicopter or other hovering aircraft would produce a detectable and familiar sound on this still night. One must consider reflections or refraction in respect to the windows from which the observations were made. However, screens were also in place, thus all but eliminating that possibility, especially given the separate darkened rooms.

Distant city or airport lights are often a possibility, but a town's airport eight miles away would not likely be mistaken for LAX. The glaring main object reported near at hand by both witnesses must be accepted at face value.

Celestial bodies should certainly be considered. Sirius (magnitude - 2) and Procyon (magnitude 0.5) were in the general direction of the observations and near the horizon at 3 a.m. At midnight, though, only Aldebaran (magnitude 1.1 - not very bright) was present.

A final plausibility would be the headlights of a tractor working farm fields through the night. The long period of the main object remaining motionless as reported would argue against that.

In the final analysis, it is appropriate to both accept the elderly gentleman's confirmation of something unusual nearby and reject his helicopter/airport/train lights assessment. Rather, the woman's steady, if frightened, observations of a brilliantly lighted disc and separate formation of lights is the far more reasonable conclusion.

The important matter of purpose is less clear, though the woman's mention of falling into a hard sleep while greatly fearful of lights approaching her home must raise an eyebrow.

Getting It Straight

The Yuma, AZ, sightings noted here (MUFON UFO Journal December 1998) as occurring in August 1998 actually occurred in August 1993. That would not have altered the conclusion as to the contents of a complete case report. Still, I apologize for misreading the date on the submitted case narrative.

Swissair near miss reported

Stephen Thorn of The Canadian Press (CP) has learned that Swissair Flight 127 was cruising at 23,000 feet on Aug. 9, 1997, when the pilot interrupted an address to passengers to report the near miss by a round white object, as reported by the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board.

"Sir, I don't know what it was, but it just flew like a couple of hundred feet above us," he radioed Boston air traffic control. "I don't know if it was a rocket or whatever, but incredibly fast, opposite direction."

"In the opposite direction?" asked the controller. "Yes sir, and the time was 2107 (Greenwich mean time). It was too fast to be an airplane." The controller asked another aircraft if its crew saw anything like a missile in the area? The reply was negative. He then asked the Swissair pilot again how far above the plane it was. "It was right over us, right above, opposite direction, and, and I don't know, two, three, four hundred feet above. All that I can tell is that (we) saw a light object, it was white, and very fast." FBI, FAA and Safety Board Investigators interviewed the captain and first officer on Aug. 10, 1997.

The report, filed under NYC97SA193, said the flight was opposite John F. Kennedy Airport at 5:07 p.m. Eastern time—near the area where TWA Flight 800 went down July 17, 1996, after taking off from JFK; 230 persons died. Some believe a missile caused the midair explosion of the TWA 747 off Long Island.

The Transportation Safety Board report said the Swissair captain saw the cylindrical object for less than a second. He did not see any wings and was not sure it was an aircraft. "He had never been so close to other traffic before," said the report. "It passed over the cockpit, slightly right of centerline. If it had been any lower, it would have hit the aircraft. "As the object passed by, there was no noise, no wake turbulence, and no disruption or anomalies with any of the flight or engine instruments."

The plane was flying in clear weather to Boston from Philadelphia. He did not have time to take evasive action. "There was no exhaust or smoke, and he could not accurately discern its size. The captain reported his total time as 15,000 plus flight hours. He had never seen a missile in flight."

The first officer, whose flight time was 7,500 hours, said he was bent over, when he looked up and saw the object pass overhead "very quickly. "It was close enough that he ducked his head because he thought it would hit them. He thought it passed about 100 to 200 feet above the airplane and between the right side of the fuselage and the No. 3 engine."

The first officer said no markings were visible and the object appeared to be the size of a thumbnail held at arm's length. He said he had previously encountered a weather balloon over Italy, and the object did not look like the balloon. He had previously witnessed missile launches from the ground.

The report said the nearest weather balloons are launched from Upton, NY, 45 miles northeast of JFK twice daily, at 3:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. Eastern time and usually take 25 to 28 minutes to reach 23,000 feet. Balloons are light tan or brownish, or black and red, adding the wind was blowing from the north, almost at right angles to the aircraft. The Canadian Press, 1999, Dunn, Steven J. Perspectives

PERSPECTIVE ON THE MARCH ISSUE

Let me get this straight now. We have evidence suggesting or proving that aliens have crashed and bodies were retrieved along three lines: (1) analysis of the Ramey letter, whose wording allegedly includes "incriminating" evidence; (2) allegedly authentic documents confirming MJ-12; and (3) skeletal evidence of a possible alien body (or "hybrid," judging by the description). Wow!

The sensation factor is very high here, and accordingly it is absolutely imperative that critical-minded, forensic investigations be conducted and the results submitted to thorough peer review. Anything less would be inexcusable. If any one of these three theses could be proved, the debate would be over. The only remaining task would be to force open the secret files and obtain the full story, and that would be practically a foregone conclusion if we had the proof.

Fortunately, there are signs that all three sensations are being submitted to careful study. Although I applaud the Woods for their conscientious effort to determine the authenticity of the MJ-12 documents, I am bothered that they have stated their conclusions before fully publishing their arguments and before allowing time for adequate peer review. All this will do is increase the level of rancor.

Having seen the skeptical objections by some very knowledgeable people, I am on record as being highly skeptical of all the MJ-12 documents. The Woods claim to have already dispensed with these objections. I don't buy that at all.

There is not space here to state all my reasons. A few examples: (1) the "identical UFOB reporting words in an FOIA document" do not rule out a cut-and-paste job from real documents; (2) "where...are examples of such faked documents?" I have a file full of them!; (3) the Woods appear to assume that "forensics" are more important than "provenance"; that is highly debatable. And their argument that fakers would require access to fancy equipment overlooks the decidedly low-tech world of scissors and paste.

But, as I have said in other contexts, my opinion or your opinion does not count for much. What counts above all is hardnosed, objective investigation that produces fact-based hypotheses, followed up by strong peer review. Only then will the findings be credible.

"Sid Fiber's" open letter to the Woods advocating linguistic analysis of key documents has my endorsement as one of many approaches to exhausting all avenues to provide the "extraordinary evidence" that will be needed to change made-up minds.

Meanwhile, almost as a "throwaway," we have some intriguing film and videotape analyses that suggest extraordinary phenomena. Still, we are preaching to the choir. Perhaps the most important issue we face is how to reach out beyond the choir.

MUFON Field Investigator Training Seminar to feature presentations by Bob & Ryan Wood, Joe Firmage

A MUFON Field Investigator Training Seminar is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday, April 18, at the B' Hai Center, 170 Valencia St., San Francisco, CA.

The first session begins at 10 a.m. with Bob and Ryan Wood teaching how to research documents for authenticity. This includes an online exercise projected on a giant screen and a demo of their CD-Rom. Moderator JOHN SHIRLEY will play devil's advocate/skeptical believer during this session. This will ensure a balanced presentation and the interjection of questions and observations often overlooked by Field Investigators.

The final session will be presented by former USWeb CEO, Joe Firmage, who will discuss his experiences and views on the UFO Phenomenon, what it means to him, and why he stepped down as CEO of a multi-billion dollar company. There will be an hour long Q & A session with Mr. Firmage following his presentation. Special guests are also scheduled.

The NIGHT SKY

Walter N. Webb

May 1999

Bright Planets (Evening Sky):

Venus (magnitude -4.2) stands prominently above the W horizon at dusk. The brilliant object does not set until about 11:30 p.m. in mid-May.

Mars, after its closest approach to Earth on the 1st, gradually begins to dim its brightness during the month (to -1 magnitude). Look for it in Virgo near the star Spica in the SE at dusk. After twilight ends, it continues westward across the southern sky during the night. The red planet closes to within a few degrees of blue-white Spica by month's end, making a beautiful contrasting pair in the sky.

Bright Planets (Morning Sky):

Mars sets in the W about 4 a.m. in midmonth. Jupiter (-2.1), in Pisces, emerges in the E about 4 a.m. in mid-May.

Meteor Shower:

A gibbous Moon washes out many of the May Aquarid meteors during the morning maximum on May 5. Under better conditions observers might have been able to see up to about 20 meteors per hour toward dawn. Lesser numbers of Aquarids can be seen from about May 1 to 8.

The Stars:

Late in the evening the spring constellations are well established in the southern sky. Leo the Lion, with its bright star Regulus, lies in the SW heavens. In the S reside Virgo the Maiden, with her star Spica and planet interloper Mars; Bootes the Herdman, with orange-tinted Arcturus; and the little U-shaped starry Crown of Ariadne, Corona Borealis. To the SE, we find Libra the Balance, Scorpius the Scorpion (its heart is reddish Antares), and large but dim Ophiuchus the Serpent-Bearer (shaped like an Arab tent).

A preview of summer draws us to the eastern sky where the Summer Triangle (Vega, Deneb, Altair) has already risen above the horizon.

Moon Phases:

- Last quarter--May 8
- New moon--May 15
- First quarter--May 22
- Full moon--May 30

The Center is located two miles south of Interstate 10 at exit 610 on Highway 123 Bypass. Prominent signs identify the location in an office complex. Seguin, TX, is 35 miles east of San Antonio, 160 miles west of Houston on Interstate 10, and 45 miles south of Austin. If you are in this part of the country, try to visit our UFO Information Center and Museum. It is the only UFO museum in the nation east of Roswell, NM. You all come see us—you will be glad that you did. (The museum will be closed the week before and after the MUFON 1999 UFO Symposium in Arlington, VA.)

Unusual Skeleton

The article and photographs of the unusual skeleton that were published in the March 1999 issue of the MUFON UFO Journal under the title "The Alien?" by your International Director has created quite a stir in ufological circles on the Internet via the "chat rooms." The domino effect has been very prevalent, with very few facts suggested to support the chatter. I hope that each of the gregarious individuals (I am not listing names) will take the time to read the article and not rely on e-mail or chat rooms for their facts.

Nowhere in the article did I claim that this was a skeleton of an extraterrestrial entity or creature. The similarity to a small grey was the basic reason for writing this preliminary report so as to breed discussion and to uncover additional knowledge. Mrs. Slaughter promised to donate the skeleton to the MUFON UFO Information Center and Museum after the proposed motion picture is produced and released. (The real question about the motion picture is when and if.)

If MUFON had possession of the skeleton, we could perform several tests to determine its authenticity. A DNA test of the bones would be invaluable, and material spectrographic analysis of the vest, sword handle, glass, and the metal rings could be very revealing. A plan has been instituted to perform these tests. Journal readers will be the first to know the results of this ongoing documentation effort. If the skeleton turns out to be an ET, imagine the implications.

In the meantime, please use discretion before you believe everything you read on the websites and e-mail about the skeleton. A few people have said some very ugly things based upon second hand information. In spite of the few condemnations on the websites, no other articles in the Journal have sparked such favorable responses by mail and telephone from our readers.

Most of you attending the MUFON Symposium will be flying into Reagan National Airport, which is a scant half-mile from the Hyatt hotel. The hotel has a courtesy van to take you door-to-door for your convenience. Sometimes it is more practical or cost-effective to fly into Dulles Airport to the west, or Baltimore-Washington Airport to the north. If that is your situation, there is a wide range of alternatives on the last leg of your journey. There are local trains as well as organized shuttle vans that go between the airports. Sometimes a flight into BWI and a taxi ride into Arlington is less expensive and more convenient than flying directly to Reagan National.
