FROM THE EDITOR

It's been more than 20 years ago today that Sgt. Pepper taught the band to play, and coming up now on a generation since the U.S. Air Force officially exited the public end of the UFO business. Some of you will remember the incident as if it were yesterday, others will be too young to recall it at all. Both parties may profit from attorney Dell'Aquila's lead article this issue, which examines the pivotal role the University of Colorado Condon Report played in the Air Force's fateful decision.

For those who really want to stretch their minds we present the (mad? paranoid?) musings of Bob Girard, proprietor of Arcturus Books in Stone Mountain, Georgia. His article, "This Is A Test..." may itself be considered a test of sorts. If you would like to see more articles in a similar speculative vein, now is the time to stand up and be counted, or tested, as it may be.

Finally, aside from our regular departments, we have Budd Hopkins with some caustic observations on what he refers to as stewpot thinking, and Joseph Nyman with some intriguing suggestions about the latent encounter experience.

Condon: Twenty Years Later

By Richard P. Dell'Aquila

Attorney Dell'Aquila is an Ohio state section director.

This is the 20th anniversary of the U.S. Air Force decision to close its public UFO data gathering effort known as "Project Blue Book" which was terminated soon after the January 8, 1969 release of the Air Force commissioned study at the University of Colorado under the direction of Edward U. Condon, Ph.D. A professor of Physics and Astrophysics at the university, Dr. Condon had an impressive history of scientific and public sector accomplishments, including membership on the committee which established the top secret atomic bomb program during World War II. Twenty years later, the Colorado study is now remembered as a blemish on this eminent scientist's otherwise distinguished career.

Condon's summary of the lengthy project is merely an outline of policy prescriptions, unsupported by the conclusions of staff members primarily responsible for actual case investigations. Although he was a highly qualified expert in the areas of his scientific competence and had been employed by the government in positions requiring high security clearances, his biases made him an inappropriate choice to direct the study unless the Air Force wanted a negative conclusion. His transparent refusal to apply scientific professionalism to the performance of his responsibilities on the panel confirms Condon's participation in a scheme to reach just such a predetermined conclusion. In the lexicon surrounding the new Bush administration, "if it looks like a duck, swims like a duck and quacks like a duck, then it is a duck." Condon's "quacking" was part of an officially sanctioned disinformation program and the "duck" was the discharging of what he saw as his patriotic duty.

The Condon committee findings parroted those of the 1953 Robertson panel study and the opinions of Harvard astronomer Donald H. Menzel.

The Condon committee findings parroted those of the 1953 Robertson panel study and the opinions of Harvard astronomer Donald H. Menzel. Having now become largely irrelevant to modern UFO investigation, the discredited opinions set out in these studies, and the individuals behind them, nonetheless retain historical significance by reason of the resulting disservice done to the nation in delaying scientific progress and/or solutions to the continuing UFO mystery. Given the Air Force's obvious vested interest in the outcome of the project, it now appears rather naive to have ever expected any program which it funded and commissioned, "coincidentally" selecting Condon as director, would be any more objective than the CIA-funded Robertson panel fifteen years earlier. As Congressman William F. Ryan (N.Y.) correctly predicted on the House floor soon after release of the Condon study, "Public interest in UFOs cannot be wished away and reported sightings will persist."

When it became evident that UFOs would not obediently "go away" in the post-Condon years, and faced with the unravelling of his work, Condon grew so frustrated with the avalanche of criticism he received for his botched study that he claimed to have destroyed all project files in his possession. He remained curiously unapologetic for the damage he caused, until his death in March 1974, by which time he had withdrawn from further debate or defense of his opinions. During the first huge flap after release of the report, his final public statement concerning UFOs, printed in the October 19, 1973 issue of the Pensacola News, quoted him lamely as calling the continuing UFO reports "pretty much fantasy stuff."

Biases, Prejudice and Ridicule

At the very conception of this regrettable chapter in American history a "ticking bomb" was unwittingly placed in the project's files by Robert Low (the eventual project coordinator), who wrote his now infamous memo to university administrators in August of 1966, while they were considering whether to accept the Air Force contract. Describing how the proposed program would be structured, Low said "...the trick would be to describe the project so that, to the public, it would appear a totally objective study but, to the scientific community, would present the image of a group of non-believers trying their best to be objective but having an almost zero expectation of finding a saucer." (Emphasis added.)

Low suggested that the best way to accomplish this would be to emphasize the investigation of psychological and social factors of persons who reported UFOs, rather than examining the potential physical reality of the stimuli for the reports. He felt the scientific community would "quickly get the message," and clearly, this was exactly the methodology adopted by Condon. Emphasizing the "kook" cases typically written off by serious investigators, Condon simply ignored the truly puzzling hard core of reports and chose rather to approach his task with an unscientific attitude of bias, prejudice and ridicule. The four or five cases he personally investigated all involved contactees or outright hoaxes.

The committee's policy against any statements to the press before release of the final report seemed not to apply to Dr. Condon. However, his several abuses of the privilege have fortuitously provided history with a clear picture of his predispositions and hint at the motivations behind his sabotage of the Colorado study. For example, in a speech made January 25, 1967 to the American Chemical Society and quoted in the next issue of the Elmira, New York, Star-Gazette, Dr. Condon announced: "It is my inclination right now to recommend that the government get out of this business. My attitude right now is that there is nothing to it ... With a smile he added, but I'm not supposed to reach a conclusion for another year ... This just isn't a military problem; I can't see where the national safety is at stake ... Maybe it would be a worthwhile study for those groups interested in meteorological phenomena." (Emphasis added.)

Here was the presumably "unbiased" director of a panel of scientists, contracted by the Air Force and paid with our tax dollars, smugly reciting the major points of the project's final report which would ostensibly not be written for "another year" a) UFOs are not worthy of further serious study except as a "meteorological" or social problem, b) there is no threat to the national security from UFOs and c) the Air Force should remove itself from publicly admitted UFO responsibilities.

The failure to dismiss Dr. Condon from his position of authority in the Colorado study despite the obvious biases revealed by his many premature negative statements raises serious question as to the actual purposes and motivations behind his selection to direct the project. In hindsight, there was little or no reason to expect an objective evaluation from Condon and it is now clear that his appointment to head the study was motivated by Air Force awareness of his prejudices.

His admission that he had reached a negative conclusion before the study was really underway belied his later claim that his primary concern was to staff the study with "personnel of adequate scientific training, rather than with persons emotionally committed to extreme pro or con views on the subject," (Emphasis added) since this restriction apparently did not apply to Dr. Condon. Predictably, the interpretations in Condon's final report were identical to his originally stated opinions, as he summarily dismissed the subject in the first two paragraphs of the first section, writing, "nothing has come from the study of UFOs in the past 21 years that has added to scientific knowledge ... further extensive study of UFOs probably cannot be justified in the expectation that science will be advanced thereby."

He recommended that scientists in agreement with this opinion turn their attention to other pursuits and suggested that those who disagreed would find in his report areas where existing studies are incomplete and requiring more accurate study. However, Condon cautioned against establishment of any new agency of the federal government for the scientific study of UFOs, although hedging, "... this conclusion may not be true for all time." He recommended that nothing be done with UFO reports continuing to be received from the public "in the expectation that they are going to contribute to the advance of science." Condon was silent as to what, if anything, should be done with UFO reports continuing to be received from other sources, including the military.

Joint Army Navy Air Force Publication-146 (JANAP-146) required reports to be made of UFOs which continued to be sighted by military personnel. Important UFO sightings and reports, even before 1969, were not processed under Project Blue Book, but were collected and investigated elsewhere by the military under JANAP-146. The Air Force document which proposed termination of Project Blue Book stated, "Reports of Unidentified Flying Objects which could affect national security are made in accordance with JANAP-146 or Air Force Manual 55-11, and are not part of the Blue Book system ... reports of UFOs which could affect national security should continue to be handled through standard Air Force procedure designed for this purpose." (Emphasis added.)

Condon's obvious negative biases about UFOs which he found so difficult to conceal ultimately erased whatever real credibility the Condon study may have had. In a letter of October 11, 1967 to the Denver Post, for example, Condon pronounced, "What can be learned from the UFO project can make valuable contributions to knowledge of atmospheric effects," adding almost laughably, "Many people find it extremely difficult not to pass judgment before all the facts are in." (Emphasis added)

His prejudices paralleled those of Harvard astronomer Donald H. Menzel, who also held a top secret clearance. In 1952, Menzel, the self-styled "man who shot Santa Claus," began to debunk UFOs in nationally published magazine articles. As Condon would later, he attributed the sightings to mirages caused by an assortment of natural phenomena. Menzel predicted that "these saucers will eventually vanish — most appropriately, into thin air, the region that gave birth to them." Thirty-seven years later, UFOs have not only failed to vanish, but the reports have become more puzzling.

Although neither held a medical license or degree in psychology, Menzel and Condon claimed sufficient "expertise" in these disciplines to pronounce that the problem was essentially psychological, in that Americans were suffering from "international jitters," and reported anything anomalous observed in the skies as a UFO because they worried about an atomic war. Menzel even "diagnosed" those persons who gave credence to the extraterrestrial hypothesis as "lunatics, cultists, religious fanatics, or, at best, frightened and confused." Condon's belief was that, "the problem is more difficult than finding a needle in a haystack; it is finding a piece of extra-terrestrial hay in a terrestrial haystack, often on the basis of believers in extra-terrestrial hay." (Emphasis added) Yet, Condon was also forced to admit that in evaluating the calibre of witnesses making UFO reports, he determined that they are primarily normal and responsible individuals (Emphasis added) who are merely puzzled about what they saw and looking for explanations. "Only a very few are obviously quite emotionally disturbed, their minds being filled with pseudo-scientific, pseudo-religious or other fantasies." He found "rather less than some people may have expected in the way of psychiatric problems related to belief in the reality of UFOs as craft from remote galactic or intergalactic civilizations."

Scientific Methodology

In November 1970, a committee of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics examined the Condon study and found it "difficult to ignore the small residue of well-documented but unexplainable cases MUFON UFO Journal, No. 251, March 1989

Condon claimed that his study found "no evidence of secrecy concerning UFO reports," and that, "What has been miscalled secrecy has been no more than an intelligent policy of delay in releasing data so that the public does not become confused by premature publication of incomplete studies of reports."

which form the hard core of the UFO controversy" and found "no basis for Condon's opinion (Emphasis added) that nothing of scientific value could come from continued UFO research." Citing the difficulty of reading the Condon report due to its poor organization, the committee said:

"It is not enough to read the summaries, such as those by Sullivan and Condon, or summaries of summaries on which the vast majority of readers and news media seems to rely. There are differences in the opinions and conclusions drawn by the authors of the various chapters, and there are differences between these and Condon's summaries. Not all conclusions contained in the report itself are fully reflected in Condon's summary." (Emphasis added)

The final report is a compilation of several sections written by different persons and padded with superfluous technical material of little or no apparent relevance to the UFO problem. Although the panel considered only a small fraction of the truly puzzling cases and did not discuss in detail most of the significant cases it listed, a total of ninety-one cases are reviewed, including sixty-one "identified." The remaining thirty cases are unexplained, leaving a significantly higher percentage of unexplained cases than even the Air Force found and which presumably created the need for the Condon study in the first place.

Among the rather incredible case studies buried in the text there are several startling conclusions by the investigators, such as, "The apparent rational intelligent behavior of the UFO suggests a mechanical device of unknown origin as the most probable explanation of this sighting ... (and) ... the probability that at least one genuine UFO was involved appears to be fairly high." (Emphasis added) In another case, the analysis reports that the sighting, "defies explanation by conventional means," and in another, "This is one of the few UFO reports in which all factors investigated, geometric, psychological and physical appear to be consistent with the assertion that an extraordinary flying object (Emphasis added), silvery, metallic, disk-shaped, tens of meters in diameter and evidently artificial, flew within sight of two witnesses." Perhaps the classic "double-speak" evaluation in the report is the conclusion that one "unusual sighting should therefore be assigned to the category of some almost certainly natural phenomenon which is so rare that it apparently has never been reported before or since." (Emphasis added)

Accepted scientific procedures for evaluation of unexplained data typically require the formulation of a hypothesis to explain observed data and test whether the hypothesis is true. Obviously, this assumes that the testing procedure applied is capable of also determining whether the hypothesis is false. Condon chose to instead test whether UFO reports were evidence for extraterrestrial visitation — an "unfalsifiable" hypothesis, since a number of other hypotheses could also account for the unexplained cases. The failure of the panel to identify about one-third of the cases it examined established nothing about the validity of the ETH. Rather, what the failure to adequately explain these cases did establish (and Condon ignored) was that the present state of our scientific development is insufficient to permit us to adequately explain reported UFO phenomena.

This failure of methodology is central to the ultimate unacceptability of Condon's conclusions. He failed to properly define the nature of the problem to be studied. This failing was not inadvertent, but rather the result of Condon's admitted predisposition to skew the project's results in a direction consistent with his biases and, not coincidentally, to the benefit of the Air Force which was paying for the project. The AIAA committee also found that:

"Condon's (summary) ... discloses many of his personal conclusions ... (we) did not find a basis in the report for his prediction that nothing of scientific value will come of further study ... We have already expressed our disenchantment with arguments about the probability of the extra-terrestrial origin of UFOs since there is not sufficient scientific basis at this time to take a position one way or another ... (the ETH) introduces an unassessable element of speculation; but ... it is unacceptable to simply ignore substantial numbers of unexplained observations and to close the book about them on the basis of premature conclusions ... (we) see the only promising approach as the continuing moderate level effort with emphasis on improved data collection by objective means and on a high quality scientific analysis." (Emphasis added)

In defining the problem as "that of learning the various kinds of stimuli that give rise to UFO reports," Condon's working assumption was that UFOs are all misperceptions of natural phenomena. His working definition for UFO reports to be studied by the panel only required that the object not be identifiable by the observer, rather than studying only those cases which could not be eliminated by competent analysis by qualified persons other than the observer. This forced the panel to waste time studying a variety of unscrubbed misperceptions of natural objects which were not representative of the truly anomalous cases reported and which any competent investigator would have immediately dismissed.

The panel recommended that UFOs be "debunked" so as to remove the aura of mystery surrounding the subject and a "public information campaign" be instituted to produce a "better" understanding of the subject.

Comparing Condon's final recommendations and conclusions with the remainder of the study, one questions whether these are parts of the same report. Apparently, Dr. Condon relied only in part on the team studies and rather more heavily on his own personal opinion as expressed the prior year. Gratuitously sprinkled throughout Condon's final report are a number of unsupported opinions concerning matters such as the ETH which were outside the scope of the study. In setting up the ETH "strawman" he appeared to be following some hidden agenda by slanting the study toward examination of an unprovable hypothesis for which no examination had been publicly requested by the Air Force. Condon acknowledged that although unequivocal proof that UFOs were extraterrestrial would be the greatest scientific discovery in the history of mankind, he claimed that the study found "... no direct evidence supporting the claim that any UFO reports studied represent spacecraft visiting Earth from another civilization." He facetiously qualified this conclusion, saying, "... no prediction is made for the future ... If new evidence appears later, this report can be appropriately revised in a second printing."

Coverup

Condon also claimed that his study found "no evidence of secrecy concerning UFO reports," and that, "What has been miscalled secrecy has been no more than an intelligent policy of delay in releasing data so that the public does not become confused by premature publication of incomplete studies of reports." Again, notwithstanding that the Condon Committee was also not contracted to study, and did not study, whether there existed any governmental secrecy in UFO matters, Condon expressed his unsupported opinion that, "... It would be impossible to keep a secret of such enormity for over two decades ... no useful purpose would be served by engaging in such an alleged conspiracy of silence. One person with whom we have dealt actually maintains that this super-secret matter is in the hands of the Central Intelligence Agency which, he says, installed one of its own agents (i.e. Condon) as scientific director of the Colorado study. This story, if true, is indeed a well kept secret."

In tacitly acknowledging the existence of other programs and procedures (such as JANAP-146) for collection of UFO data outside Blue Book, he offered another unsupported personal opinion that the defense function should be continued within existing intelligence and surveillance operations "without the continuance of a special unit such as Project Blue Book." Clearly aware of these other existing intelligence and surveillance operations for collection of UFO data, Condon then announced, "Since 1953 the results of UFO study have been unclassified, except where tangential reasons exist for withholding details, as, for example, where sightings are related to launchings of classified missiles, or to the use of classified radar systems ... During the period from March 1952 to the present, the structure for handling UFO reports in the Air Force has been called Project Blue Book.

"... We are assured that the federal government would withhold no infor- mation on the subject, and that all essential information about UFOs could be included in this report." (Emphasis added)

Condon knew this was not true, for had he been correct, it would then be fair to expect that all "complete studies of reports" to date (including JANAP-146 materials) would have been released by now. Instead, those documents which have been discovered have not been voluntarily released by the federal government and efforts to force further disclosures through the FOIA confirm that thousands of pages of other UFO related documents, many several decades old, continue to be withheld from the public behind a wall of obscure, sometimes contrived, "national security" excuses.

Likewise, the CIA long maintained that it also had no interest or involvement in the collection and/or analysis of UFO data. Once classified CIA documents have established otherwise and confirm Condon's knowledge of, and participation in, the CIA's pretense of noninvolvement in UFO studies. Documents obtained through the federal courts confirm that CIA's National Photographic Interpretation Center (NPIC) even analysed photographs studied by the Condon Committee with Condon's guarantee of secrecy and his promise to "make no reference to CIA in regard to this work effort."

A "Better Understanding"

Official policy concerning UFOs changed dramatically in 1953, primarily due to the recommendations of the CIA-sponsored Robertson panel and possibly motivated by considerations set out in the MJ-12 documents whose authenticity remain an open question at this time. In describing the history of UFOs to that point, Condon admitted that "early investigations were carried on in secrecy by the Air Force" and other foreign governments, but that the large 1952 Washington D.C. flap and resulting "clogging" of military communications channels with sighting reports, a study was commissioned under the chairmanship of H.P. Robertson, professor of mathematical physics at the California Institute of Technology and a CIA classified employee. Interestingly, the panel also included physicist Lloyd V. Berkner, at the time a director of the Brookhaven National Laboratories, and reputed member of MJ-12.

On the last day it met, the Robertson panel spent a few hours analyzing the UFO phenomenon before adjourning with the finding that UFOs presented no direct threat to national security and warning that having a military source foster public concern in what it called "nocturnal meandering lights" was possibly dangerous since the public might be encouraged by military involvement to believe in the existence of some potential threat. The panel recommended that UFOs be "debunked" so as to remove the aura of mystery surrounding the subject and a "public information campaign" be instituted to produce a "better" understanding of the subject.

These findings are identical to those of the Condon Report fifteen years later, and served a similar propaganda function with regard to promoting a "better understanding" of UFOs and assisting the Air Force with its public relations problem by permitting it to point to an "exhaustive" study by an "impartial" panel of prominent scientists who had fully examined the UFO phenomenon and found nothing of scientific interest nor any direct threat to national security. It is noteworthy that some of the panelists joked about the subject and expressed negative biases toward the subject, one member calling it "a complete waste of time," requiring investigation by "psychiatrists rather than physicists." Clearly, within fifteen years, when the Condon Committee was convened, the conclusions and recommendations of the Robertson panel were no more credible or valid than are those of the Condon Committee today.

Repeating and expanding upon the recommendations of the Robertson panel, and again without supporting studies for any of his conclusions, Condon proposed that the debunking effort be taken up by the educational system as well:

"Teachers who find their students strongly motivated in this direction should attempt to channel their interests in the direction of serious study of astronomy and meteorology, and in the direction of critical analysis of arguments for fantastic propositions that are being supported by appeals to fallacious reasoning of false data."

Presumably, these suggestions also extend to critical analysis of Condon's methodology and his failure to correlate the patterns in the truly puzzling reports studied and formulate hypotheses to account for them, but instead fitting each individual report into a prosaic, sometimes far-fetched, explanation. This methodology was crystallized in his directive to the panel:

"If an (sic) UFO report can be plausibly explained in ordinary terms, then we accept that explanation even though not enough evidence may be available to prove it beyond all doubt... the problem (is) that of learning to recognize the various kinds of stimuli that give rise to UFO reports... We placed very little value for scientific purposes on the past accumulation of anecdotal records, most of which have been explained as arising from sightings of ordinary objects. Accordingly, I have recommended in Section I against mounting a major effort for continuing UFO study for scientific reasons."

Conclusions

It is no coincidence that Condon, Menzel and members of the Robertson panel, all scientists with high security clearances who worked under contract with the military and intelligence agencies repeatedly parroted official Air Force and CIA statements about UFOs. The old saying, "he who pays the piper calls the tune," is no less true because of its age. The Robertson and Condon studies were arranged and paid for, respectively, by the CIA and Air Force at times of intense public and congressional pressure for "something" to be done

Stewpot Thinking - An Obstacle To Science

By Budd Hopkins

Hopkins is the author of Missing Time (1981) and Intruders (1988).

A basic tenet of the scientific method holds that progress can occur only when the problem to be analyzed has been isolated as thoroughly as possible from all irrelevant surrounding factors. This principle is as essential to UFO research as it is to any other scientific endeavor, and to illustrate this point I will use an example from the field of medical research — the isolation and discovery of Legionaire's disease (LD). The problem of LD first came to light when a number of people attending a convention at a Philadelphia hotel became seriously ill with pneumonia-like symptoms; several of them died. Since the symptoms were particularly virulent and not identical with any known form of pneumonia, various theories were presented: poison was suspected, or noxious fumes in the airconditioning system, or a very strange form of mass hysteria — and even a previously unrecognized and therefore "new" disease. (The last theory turned out to be the correct one.)

An investigation began, part of which proceeded in this manner: Let us say that a well-known, similar disease, lobar pneumonia, has five specific symptoms. Scientists studying LD find that in many cases LD also presents these same five symptoms. More significant is the discovery that in every case LD has other symptoms that never occur in lobar pneumonia. These recurring differences, both subtle and dramatic, between LD and all other known forms of pneumonia, helped to establish the fact that LD was a new phenomenon, a heretofore unrecognized disease. This crucial information together with dramatic bacteriological discoveries enabled pathologists to retroactively diagnose a number of other cases of this newly designated pathological condition. Progress towards a cure for LD was now possible.

What I have been describing is a standard scientific method, which in this case insisted upon the isolation and study of any unique symptoms that Legionaire's Disease may have presented. By contrast to the scrupulous researchers of my example, however, let us consider a type of would-be researcher that I call a "stewpot thinker." Essentially this kind of person prefers to stress the reassuring similarities among various phenomena and to ignore their differences. He habitually tosses into the same pot all available information about superficially related situations, assuming that this process adds something to the world. "It looks like pneumonia," a stewpot thinker might declare. "Nothing new. Forget the differences in symptoms. We've seen at least some of these symptoms before in lobar pneumonia, so why bother with an investigation?"

New Input

Stewpot thinkers have trouble dealing with new phenomena. After all, it's real work to study the medical reports closely, to be especially attentive to what the victims are actually saying. Stewpot thinkers are essentially lazy thinkers, conventional in their outlook and eager to blur any inconvenient differences among the subjects they are ostensibly examining. Yet virtually all scientific discoveries of new phenomena have occurred when someone, somewhere resisted these impulses and attempted to isolate an imperfectly understood problem or condition. They understand that it is the handful of differences between the known and this potentially new, unknown phenomenon which must be examined, regardless of whether these differences are dramatic or subtle. If there are no differences then there is no new phenomenon. But if close examination reveals the existence of specific and recurring differences, then we have at least two phenomena, not one. Scientific examination demands the careful isolation of the object under study, teasing it away from all entangling irrelevancies.

The lesson to be learned here has profound relevance for UFO research, and specifically for the investigation of UFO abduction reports. As an example of two different phenomena that stewpot thinkers have confused, let us consider the contact-abductee reports. In the Nineteen Fifties and Sixties, many self-proclaimed contactees took to the lecture circuit, proclaiming the beauty of their trips to Venus or to the back of the moon in the company of kindly, long-haired Space People. These angelic beings usually passed on innocuous messages of love and friendship which the contactees promised to reveal during their lectures. (The Billy Meier saga currently represents this self-aggrandizing contactee phenomenon.)

But beginning with Betty and Barney Hill and continuing in ever increasing numbers, many people have claimed to have been abducted, taken aboard UFOs and subjected to sometimes painful and demeaning physical procedures. No Venus, no back of the moon, no lovely Space Beings with long flowing hair. Abductees mostly prefer to remain anonymous, avoiding publicity and living in a constant climate of subtle fear. A scientist would recognize two distinct phenomena here, but a stewpot thinker prefers to ignore all the glaring differences and to throw both types of report into the same overloaded pot.

Recently, two UFO researchers have specifically stated that the differences between contactees and abductees should not be recognized. Obviously, if these stewpotters were doctors they would not recognize any differences between, say, malaria and megalomania. (Accepting their remedies might turn out to be risky.) If, as in the case of LD and lobar pneumonia, we have different phenomena, each is likely to have its own cause, and the treatment for each would be different. In the UFO examples I've given, the contactee's placid experience appears to be internally generated while the abductee's traumatic memories seem to be externally caused. Obviously, this is a crucially important distinction for science and one that can only be made if we prevent lazy thinkers from arbitrarily tossing the two phenomena into the same pot. Investigators must begin with a study of the differences between the two kinds of experience.

Virgin Mary vs. ET

Let us consider another pairing of superficially related phenomena. In one instance a lonely young girl in a poor, rural Sicilian town reports seeing the Virgin Mary on a nearby hill. She is, herself, deeply religious, unhappy, and describes the Virgin as exactly resembling her image in a painting in the local church. In the United States a research scientist for NASA describes a strange humanoid creature gliding across the floor of his bedroom. The experience, which involved physical paralysis, is terrifying, and this highly intelligent scientist cannot sleep for months after the event without the lights turned on and the TV playing. Baffled by his sighting, he begins a process of research to try to find out what this and other, equally frightening personal experiences might mean.

Another similar incident involves two men, conventionally religious southerners, who describe virtually the same type of figure appearing and floating them into a landed UFO. The experience created enormous problems for them — one of the men suffered a series of nervous breakdowns — and adversely affected their previously comfortable religious beliefs.

There are religious visions reported by true believers, and there are UFO-related humanoid sightings in which religion plays no role whatever. Only the stewpot thinker confuses the two.

Enter now one of our most confused stewpot thinkers, who confidently announces that the Sicilian girl's vision of the Virgin and the two UFO humanoid cases are essentially the same. All three, he informs us, are caused by man's hunger for religion! A more cautious investigator might counter by saying that this is like telling a cloistered teenager and a terrified, bloodied rape victim that they both daydreamed the same thing in a mood of romantic longing. There are religious visions reported by true believers, and there are UFO-related humanoid sightings in which religion plays no role whatever. The only course for science is to make careful note of all the differences between traditional religious visions and the clearly secular and usually frightening humanoid sightings — which, as we have seen can cause problems to one's previous religious beliefs — and to proceed from there.

Other stewpot thinkers have thrown different types of contradictory information into the same capacious old pot. One man with an interest in UFOs became curious about the traditional folkloristic stories of fairies and leprecauns. Though these tales are extremely vague in origin and involve toadstools and magic trees and other nice things not present in easily investigated UFO accounts, they do sometimes include descriptions of small "humanoid" creatures. Naturally, this stewpotter assumed, these elusive and ever-changing folk tales must somehow be connected to current, fully-investigated UFO reports—ground traces, physical evidence, photographs and all. (Unfortunately UFO accounts don't have the leprecauns' pots of gold to give them an enlivening point, but what does it matter?) And so this stewpotter, happily immersed in Magonia, goes about his business "solving" mysteries by willfully mixing myth and religion and fiction and psychosis and carefully investigated UFO reports into one thick, glutinous, indigestible mass. The leaden batter is then served up to the public as if it has somehow helped to clarify things. Since any stewpot thinker by definition disdains analysis on a case by case basis, anyone's chance of arriving at truth by following this path is virtually nil.

Hershey Bars

The confusion of stewpot thinking is glaringly obvious in the case of another author who writes nearly simultaneously on what he refers to as visions, apparitions, alien visitors, gods, spirits and cosmic guardians. (One is tempted to counter with an equivalent medical text to be titled, "Cancer, The Vapors, Systemic Lupus Erythematosus, Languor and Pyromania".) And still another stewpot thinker writes about the UFO phenomenon in such a way as to invoke folk tales, the goddess Ishtar "gliding high above the Mesopotamian savanna," and an alien suggestion that he give up eating Hershey bars.

The more muddled the thinking, unfortunately, the bigger the pot. It is a sad truth that the very nature of the UFO phenomenon makes this kind of intellectual confusion inevitable. Though scientists and medical professionals are being drawn into these investigations in ever increasing numbers, so are the stewpot thinkers and the proponents of every kind of bizarre theory.

A surprisingly large number of people are apparently prepared to mutilate the data in order to support one or another private "explanation" of a particular UFO phenomenon.

The Familiar Entity and Dual Reference in the Latent Encounter

By Joseph Nyman

In the aftermath of the continuing publicity about latent encounters (a term meaning unremembered encounters with UFO related entities that I find more appropriate than "abductions"), my colleague Martha Munroe and I, as well as other researchers, are contending with increasing numbers of individuals who are coming forward with feelings that they too might be latent encounter experiencers.

While the publicity is proving a boon to case numbers, it is also a potential bane to the quality of information that may come out in any investigation. In the suggestible state that experiencers are asked to enter and in their potential willingness to please, anything picked up among friends, or in the UFO conferences that are nearly as common as bingo games, or in the persistent media din, is fair game for regurgitation. Anyone who has investigated a number of these cases is aware of this contamination potential and how much more difficult it makes investigation. Also in the wake of the continuing Carnival Cruise of UFO authors there is an unfortunate trail of disturbed individuals who must be screened out and referred to mental health professionals.

In the face of these difficulties, we here in Massachusetts have tried to shift our main focus from emphasis on the details of the images reported (although these are pursued vigorously) to the abstracting of overall patterns which have not been publicized and are unique to our own investigations.

Now, at this point, let me say that the following material may seem quite extreme to those who are nuts-and-bolts oriented. However, I strongly believe it represents a faithful and conservative representation of our work. It reflects what is being reported to us by experiencers and it is being related by completely independent witnesses.

Patterns

In a previous paper we have discussed the pattern represented by our latent encounter model (Orbiter, Feb. '88 and MUFON Journal, June, 1988) and, in a following note, the model's predictive value (Orbiter, Jun/Jul '88, published by Jim Melesciuc, 43 Harrison St., Reading, MA, 01867).

Another outstanding pattern is apparent in all the people we have worked with; viz. there is no experiencer (a person who has reported images of an encounter with UFO associated entities) who has reported one and only one latent encounter. In every instance multiple experience images, trailing back to early childhood, have emerged during regression or in subsequent flashbacks.

Reasoning inductively, we have adopted the viewpoint that if an individual has reported one latent encounter, that individual will eventually report multiple encounter images extending throughout life. This has proven valid in all cases. We have found that there is no experiencer who will report, in the ultimate course of an investigation, the adult genesis of his or her latent encounters, even though, when beginning the investigation the experiencer believes he or she has had only a single adult encounter.

It has become clear that the experiencer's images are not the result of a random process, for if that were the case we would expect to see at least some people who, after investigation, have made only an isolated claim at a random point in their lives rather than a series originating in early childhood and progressing well into adulthood.

Succinctly stated, we can say that if people have not had a latent encounter by childhood they will never have one. If they have had one, they will have or have had many.

Pattern Source

What could be the reason for such a pattern?

From the perspective of what would motivate an individual to report such images the above seems consistent with the view that we might be dealing with fantasy-prone people stimulated by pervasive media focus on this material. We could say that these people need to project themselves into latent encounter scenarios as a way of attracting attention to compensate for unmet needs, or as wish fulfillments, or perhaps as screens for other situations too difficult to face directly.

Contradicting this point of view are the following: that the experiencer in general wants no publicity but is trying to solve a personal life puzzle, and in reliving the latent encounter images, is invariably disturbed, embarrassed, or both; that there is no obvious satisfaction from the relation, only an apparent lessening of anxiety and a feeling that certain gaps in one's life have been filled; that in spite of a feeling of relief there still remains a quality of wanting to keep the relation at a distance because it is so difficult to incorporate.

Interestingly, in support of the screen argument, we have found that our population of experiencers has a disproportionate number of people who believe themselves the victims of either verbal or physical child abuse (30 to 40 percent compared to a national figure of 25 percent quoted to us by a psychologist). However, our sample is small and irregular and may not be meaningful. Yet those who report no abuse still report the same traumatic encounter imagery as those who feel they have suffered abuse. The screen argument is lessened too by the fact that, once the encounter imagery is relived the emotions associated with it seem reduced. This shouldn't be the case if the latent encounter imagery were really a disguise for something else.

It is probably wise to not completely dismiss the possible link between child abuse and the fact of being an experiencer, although I don't believe this is the ultimate source of the imagery.

The above, combined with our position of not being prepared to publicize the experiencer in any way, eliminates any material motive for the experiencer to continue the investigation, i.e., there is no payoff for the claimant in being repeatedly subjected to an embarrassing, anxiety provoking recitation for a small group of investigators who can neither verify the reality of the images nor wish to promote them for gain or publicity.

For the great majority of experiencers there must be a deeper, more urgent motive for pursuing the inconvenience and upset of an encounter investigation; a motive that can have little, if anything, to do with money or media attention.

Possibilities

It seems to me that there are two possibilities: either experiencers must somehow have a genetic predisposition to report these kinds of images (the reports of family involvement through at least three generations which we also have here in Massachusetts is a strong support for this point of view) or that their images are the result of intervention of some kind. If there exists a genetic predisposition to express this kind of imagery then we would expect it to have appeared in a similar manner before the time of wide UFO publicity. Is there a historical parallel?

If, as a working hypothesis, we consider that the imagery is the remnant of true intervention we are left with the conclusion that the individual reporting the imagery must indeed be the product of a predetermined selection process with the selection having occurred in early childhood.

Experiencer Selection

Staying with our working hypothesis, an indication of the how and why of selection has emerged in our work during the last couple of years and stems from an overlooked detail of the encounter imagery.

The key lies in a salient image whose nature is implied in the UFO literature. It is the experiencer's image of an entity involved in the encounter who stands out from all the other encounter entities. This entity is described as the "leader" and, many times, has been given a name by the experiencer. What has been recognized as important is that this lead entity is familiar to the experiencer, and, as we find, this same entity appears in nearly every encounter imaged by the experiencer. Furthermore, this familiar entity has a special connection to the experiencer!

This, the familiar entity, is the salient image and realization. It is so because it leads to further, emotion provoking insight into why the same individuals have repeated encounter images and others have none.

Procedure

The process of ultimate realization starts with the experiencer, having been regressed, in the midst of the encounter imagery for a particular experience. The experiencer has recognized that there is an entity present who is familiar. Since familiarity implies previous imagery, the experiencer is asked to go back to the time implied by the sense of familiarity. This process is repeated to the earliest age at which the experiencer has a sense of association or presence.

In the last two and one half years nine experiencers have articulated a sense of entity familiarity. Two of these experiencers have reported feelings of familiarity with a trio of entities rather than with individual entities. Six of the nine individuals have reported being infants in their cribs or bassinets with their special entity looking down at them. Six of the nine have reported feelings of pre-birth association with the special entity(ies).

Five of the nine experiencers reported feelings of not belonging here and of wanting to return to their place(s) of origin. Pre-birth association is, perhaps, the most interesting connection of all.

As the experiencer recounts the images of the crib encounter, concentrating on the accompanying image of the entity, the feeling of familiarity persists and with it a realization in the experiencer that he or she is not only aware of the nursery surroundings but of another place and another sense of being, a non-human sense of being (thus the dual reference).

Typically, this feeling of duality brings with it an overwhelming emotional surge and a sense of belonging somewhere else, of belonging to a different world. Close upon this is a deep longing for return attended by expressions of having been abandoned here (on Earth).

Remember that in this crib encounter the feeling of familiarity continues persistent and strong. This is taken as a signal to the investigators to continue asking the experiencer when previously have they seen the image of the special entity, and to go back yet again to that time of association.

Three experiencers have thus, independently, gone back to images of themselves as alien entities. In one tear-filled session, the experiencer at first experienced his consciousness, disembodied and contained, in the presence of his special entity (this is the second instance of this type of image that has been reported to us). The imagery continued with communication taking place between the consciousness and the special entity. This was followed by another flashback, a precursor to the contained consciousness image, in which the experiencer saw himself as "one of them" deciding whether his consciousness or that of the special entity was to occupy a human form.

The experiencer's relationship with the special entity was now very clear to him — the two were partners in a process in which the experiencer's future human body was to be involved and which the special entity was to monitor.

Dual Reference

We strongly suspect that the feeling of dual reference as described above is unconsciously present in all experiencers. If that is the case, a word should be said about the approach taken by some investigators in attempting to have experiencers resist future encounters.

Whatever the source of these images, whether self-induced or otherwise, there is an unconscious conviction in the experiencer of belonging to two worlds. To fight this conviction while not being consciously aware of it is laying one conflict on top of another and can only lead to more anxiety. Better to expose these feelings at their core so they can be consciously dealt with. Our approach is to try to have the feeling of dual reference brought fully to mind so that the experiencer can attempt to come to terms with it in a supportive environment.

Forward Time Frame

In moving forward in the time imagery of experiencers we have found that the feeling of dual reference seems to disappear from their images at different ages.

With most it does not seem to be present after about the age of four (as expressed in their imagery), but one experiencer reported this feeling of dual reference still present in an encounter at age nine.

During the regression to that age, she had feelings that, at last, she was going to return to where she belonged. She was disappointed that not only was this not to be the case but that she was to undergo a procedure that would considerably lessen her sense of dual awareness (the details are reserved as a check on other cases). She reported undergoing a test the following day to determine the results of the procedure. Supposedly, it worked.

Significance

The phenomenon of familiarity-entity-leading-to-a-sense-of-dual-reference is very significant in that it has been found in nine experiencers independently. In fact, it has been found whenever it has been looked for and in several cases it has appeared spontaneously. It is a phenomenon that is scarce in the literature, if it exists there at all, just about eliminating the possibility of contamination as a source.

One can postulate several sources for such a deeply felt unconscious pattern — a pattern common enough to be quite significant yet so surprising to both the experiencer and investigators:

- A reflection of the psychological makeup of the individual.

- A reflection of something induced in the experiencer by the investigative process.

- A reflection of something resulting from an imposition on the experiencer.

The first of these seems unlikely on the basis of the many different personalities evident in the group, but, of course, this is only a subjective observation. Testing in the manner of the study sponsored by the Fund for UFO Research might prove instructive (see Final Report on the Psychological Testing of UFO "Abductees," 1985, Fund for UFO Research, Box 277, Mt. Ranier, MD 20712).

The second of these seems more viable as a possibility, although the investigators believe great care has been taken not to lead the experiences.

The third possibility seems overwhelming. If it is indeed the source, it implies the taking up of residence in the human form at birth (or before) of a fully developed intelligence which for a while is aware of both its human and non-human nature and of the pre-arranged monitoring to be conducted throughout life.

Finally, if, in our investigations, there are claims of alien intelligence taking up residence in the human body, are there corresponding images in which the alien intelligence leaves the human body?

We have no evidence for this from our investigations, but last year, in conversation, I was told by an individual that at his mother's death in 1937, he and his two sisters were terrified to see a figure descending the stairs. The figure had a face that the man saw again years later — on the dust jacket of Communion.

(Abduction reports, unfortunately, bear the brunt of these chronic misrepresentations.) Most of these private "explanations" are classic examples of stewpot thinking, and are based upon real or imagined similarities between disparate phenomena. In my experience, conspiracy theorists, numerologists and fanatic Jungians tie for first place in their ability to find mysterious, hidden, and essentially meaningless connections between unrelated phenomena. When any of these unleash their skills in the service of UFO investigations, science suffers.

The essential lesson to be learned from all this is a simple one: pay scrupulous attention to the case material, search carefully for the basic, recurring factors within the phenomenon under study, and avoid stewpot thinking. Superficial resemblances between different things can be interesting — a flounder, a duck, and Mark Spitz are similar in that they all swim skillfully, so perhaps a student of animal locomotion can learn a great deal by comparing them. But to a biologist inquiring into their nature the crucial information proceeds from a study of their innate differences. There the truth resides.

This Is A Test ...

By Robert C. Girard

Bob Girard is the proprietor of Arcturus Books, a new and used book service specializing in UFO and related material. He can be contacted at Box 831383, Stone Mountain, GA, 30083-0023. The opinions expressed are of course those of the author.

In the United States, there is a regulation with which all commercial radio and television broadcasters must comply. It consists of an unscheduled interruption of programming, followed by about 10 seconds of an ear-splitting tone, followed by an explanation which states that this has been a test of the "Emergency Broadcast System;" that in the event of a national emergency, instructions and information from local civil defense agencies would be broadcast over that and all other radio and television stations. All broadcasters must maintain their EBS equipment in constant readiness — for real emergencies are as unscheduled as these tests of readiness, and it makes sense to be prepared "just in case ..."

A different kind of test took place nationally in the U.S. on the evening of October 14, 1988. In an indirect way, it too was a test of an emergency system. And in a roundabout way it has a bearing on the EBS test, for there may come a day in which the Emergency Broadcast System will actually be used, based on the information gathered and analyzed during this October 14 test. But unlike the EBS tests, whose explanation is repeated verbatim each time so that our memories of its purpose are reinforced to the point of our being brainwashed with respect to what the test symbolizes, there was no explanation at all following the October 14 test. Few of the millions of Americans who watched this test realized (then or now) that they had been witnesses to something which may come to have an extraordinary impact on their lives in the not-too-distant future. This article is an attempt at an unauthorized, "free-lance" explanation.

Despite some apparently reactionary political foot-dragging by the Reagan administration, the cold war of the superpowers is suddenly undergoing a super-thaw. An epidemic of detente has broken out, and there is a faint, but growing, perception among Americans that in a couple of years — and perhaps sooner — the Soviet Union will evolve into a better, freer Land of Opportunity than our own United States. A revolution of peace and harmony is suddenly in the air. There is a palpable drop in the tension level associated with the threat of nuclear war — and the previously implacable Soviets are apparently leading the way.

It is against this political backdrop that the test of October 14, 1988 was conducted. It took the form of a two-hour television event titled "THE UFO COVER-UP: LIVE." Advance hype gave the impression that Soviet UFO investigators were going to reveal to American viewers certain UFOlogical secrets which our own government would not reveal to us. The actual "live" presentation came off as an over-rehearsed, clumsily walked-through "amateur night," featuring a cast of characters who were anything but natural on stage. It may have been the most un-spontaneous "live" broadcast in television history — as if its producers were terrified that one or two members of the cast (whom they obviously did not trust in the least) might suddenly veer from the script and launch into some lunatic diatribe or other about the "TRUTH" behind UFOs, inviting instant zapping from a superpower government with the superpower technology to obliterate such heresy from the airwaves on a moment's notice.

Nonetheless, the program did contain something extraordinary, which virtually nobody — not even at the highest echelons of government — had ever seen before. This was a videotape which had been in the possession of UFO researcher and author William L. Moore, a tape whose existence was long known among American Ufologists, but totally unknown to the ordinary public (and which was updated to the moment especially for this broadcast). Featuring two "insiders" whose faces and voices were heavily altered, a series of revelations was made at strategic intervals during the two hours which — if true — were nothing less than sensational.

Birds of Prey

"Falcon" and "Condor" were presented as two of nine U.S. government employees whose careers involved hands-on experience with a long-standing, covert U.S.-alien relationship. Concerned that the "greater good" was not being served by the government's hyper-paranoid attitude of secrecy about UFOs, these "moles" were risking their jobs and their very lives to leak "the truth" to the public through serious, reputable Ufologists such as Moore, Linda M. Howe and Robert Emenecker. Among the stunning disclosures of "Falcon" and "Condor" were these:

- Verification of crashed UFO recoveries on several occasions
- Verification of alien body recoveries at these crash sites
- Detailed description of a living alien presently in U.S. custody
- Revelation of a U.S.-alien "exchange program" implying that at least one human is an "alien" being studied on another planet or world
- Disclosure of a place in Nevada (Area 51, or "Dreamland") where testing of alien hardware (UFOs) takes place under extreme secrecy.

To be sure, such rumors have been flowing and ebbing for years within the hermetically-sealed UFO community. To many Ufologists (and since that broadcast we have spoken with many, throughout the U.S.), the program was a disappointment, failing to live up to (perhaps unrealistically lofty) expectations. But among the millions of uninformed, everyday Americans, that videotape ought to have caused an uproar at the very least. What was made public on that tape represented the most significant event in at least the last 2,000 years of human history: that there has admittedly been contact with intelligent beings from beyond our solar system, contact which has been regularly maintained for years and which continues even now.

But — despite our inquiries to all parts of the U.S. — we have yet to find a single word of public reaction to this broadcast in any of the country's video or print media. Nor was a single word of public comment uttered by any U.S. government spokesman or official! Was this seemingly inexplicable lack of reaction merely due to some bad timing! Was it the U.S. presidential election campaign which drowned out the "newsworthiness" of this otherwise sensational event? Was it our preoccupation with a host of severe 20th-century-type problems, which — unlike UFOs — are regularly kept in our field of vision as they are paraded before us daily by the media? Or was it simply that Ufologists, driven by a unique sense of urgency with which they alone view the UFO presence, are hopelessly misguided in their belief in the importance of the UFO Age among run-of-the-mill humanity? In reality, the answer is one which very, very few suspect.

How often we find ourselves using the word "THEY" when we want to identify actual — but non-specific — persons whom we believe to be responsible for doing something which affects us in some way. But it seems that there really is a "THEY" behind the scenario with which we are dealing here. What THEY have done, for many long years, is to engage in a specific program of indoctrination and conditioning of the masses; and on October 14, 1988, THEY conducted a test designed to determine how well that conditioning campaign had succeeded.

Indoctrination

This indoctrination effort is a very convoluted one, and is itself part of a much larger effort which extends to the control of every area presently encompassed by human consciousness. The aspect of this larger effort which concerns us here consists of the following elements:

1.) Immediate recognition of a set of valid UFO phenomena beginning shortly after the explosion of the first atomic bombs, and recognizing that major changes would have to be made quickly in THEIR existing psychological conditioning program.

2.) Realizing that the sudden presence of UFOs in the human frame of reference represented an absolute godsend: something literally "from out of the blue" which would enable THEM to cut years, perhaps even decades, from THEIR plot to take total control of human civilization for themselves.

3.) Establishing a multi-faceted program which would combine various and sometimes conflicting features simultaneously, with the overall thrust being aimed at eliminating all public concern and interest in the subject of UFOs. These features included:

- Cloaking government "sanctioning" of the legitimacy of UFO phenomena behind a curtain of "National Security," knowing that the great majority of the unthinking masses would swallow that line in characteristically naive fashion.

- Allowing "Free Speech" rights to Ufologists (generally speaking), knowing that only a tiny number of zealots was truly devoted to understanding the real nature of UFOs, and that as such they represented no serious threat to awaken the sleeping masses to their discoveries.

- The paying of debunkers and dis-information specialists, whose role has been and is still to counter any rise in pro-UFO sentiment, and to contaminate genuine UFO data, to patch "leaks" from within the system, and generally to discredit organized Ufology.

- Encouraging an endless series of films, TV series and literature, all aimed basically at 1) making alien beings appear as lovable, sympathetic, non-hostile creatures, or 2) jacking up our human "shock quotient" so that mass consciousness will gradually be hardened enough to accept calmly, without disrupting the fabric of society, an eventual "News Bulletin" involving UFOs and suddenly hostile aliens. This unceasing barrage of UFO fiction and UFO fact (through the "free speech" granted to the non-fiction Ufologists) would leave the masses totally saturated psychologically with the UFO motif, glutted with a surfeit of it.

4. Periodic testing of the success or "temperature" of the conditioning program. The October 14 broadcast was such a test.

5. At the properly prepared moment, to activate the penultimate phase of the master program: to announce suddenly, through the world's leading political figures, that earth was being invaded from outer space by hostile aliens. This announcement would be verified by showing "live" battle scenes, live aliens, and downed UFOs. There would be an urgent appeal by all of the leaders of earth's superpowers for the laying aside of national and ideological differences, and the uniting of all humanity into a global community under a central control; this alone would give us any chance of turning back this alien threat to Earth. The full "special effects" capability of the superpowers would be thrown into play, staging an alien "invasion" so convincing that without hesitation earth's smaller nations, and all of its people, would join in principle to save our species from destruction.

6. Having achieved the voluntary surrendering of national identities, THEY would move quickly to consolidate power into THEIR own hands. THEY would reassure all nations that the situation was a temporary one necessitated by the grave situation at hand, and that at the earliest possible moment national sovereignty and identity would be restored everywhere on the planet. But in the meantime, under a "War Powers Act," individual nations would cease to exist. And we would be told that the situation, given the alien invasion, dictated that individual human rights would be abrogated as well, with provision for elimination of "nonconformists" physically or intellectually hindering the struggle to preserve humanity on earth.

7. With power completely established, nevermore to be returned to former regimes or nations, a process of stripping the unproductive and unhealthy elements of humanity would begin, perhaps camouflaged as "war casualties." The human population would be thinned of its unfit and its expendably unprofitable segments: the wretched, underfed billions of the Third World and the criminally, mentally and socially unfit of the industrialized world. This would leave a tiny ruling elite, a healthy producing class and enough healthy lower-grade humans to perform the most degrading or menial tasks. This remnant would be maintained as a zero-growth population thereafter. The One World would be achieved at last.

Since the days of World War II, more than 40 years ago, the first phase of this indoctrination has been slowly, patiently fed into mass human consciousness. This is testimony to the enormous scale on which this panorama of world domination is taking place, and of the time scale involved. The master domination plan began centuries ago, during the later Middle Ages and the Renaissance, with the first real attempts at consolidating wealth among the great early trading and banking families of Europe. Little by little, pushing ahead three steps and being forced backward two, through many generations of patient and purposeful manipulation, THEY have surrounded the world and its people. A few short years, or even months, and the final bolt will be thrown; all of humanity will finally be trapped in a situation whose only escape is death itself. From then on, if you are still alive, you will work for THEM and THEM alone. You will think, and breathe and live for THEM alone.

You will have no thoughts of your own, no individual rights, no methods of expression which do not conform to THEIR code. You will neither study, nor learn, nor teach. You will be limited to a life of doing, on THEIR terms. You will be told what to do and you will do it. Physical or intellectual resistance will be met with punishment and death. It will be the price humanity will have paid for being seduced as it has by the induced sensual stimulations and addictions of the outer material world (provided by THEM to keep you from discovering what was really going on, unknown to you). All of it: the politics, the religions, the falsified histories, the literature, and every other single facet of everyday life — all of it — kept always in front of you by the media so that the undiscerning eye saw only what THEY had arranged for you to see, hear, touch, smell, taste, and LIKE — all of it was just a clever ruse designed to trap dumb suckers by the billions. And it worked, perfectly.

That is the context in which the October 14 test was conducted. A very important phase was shown to be complete, when nobody said a word about that broadcast.

UFO phenomena are completely real. They are not our subject here, but they have been seized upon by THEM and assimilated cunningly into THEIR plot. THEY knew that this sudden surge of genuine UFO activity in the mid-1940s spelled Big Trouble to THEIR existing plans. THEY acted immediately. It has taken THEM over 40 years, but THEY have succeeded. THEY created and fed humanity so much high technology, so much Space Age and so much extraterrestrial stimulation that finally — on October 14, 1988 — we no longer knew how to distinguish between the real and the unreal. We no longer even cared whether it was the real or the unreal whose image hypnotized us for the 50,000th hour of our lives as we stared at the colored TV picture.* And when it was over, we simply went on to begin gazing blankly at whatever program came on next.

We are now ripe for the next phase of THEIR scheme: the staging of the UFO Invasion, and the appeal for the dropping of national identities, so that global political coordination (first) and (second) unification can take place. It could happen at any moment — although it does appear that the test-flight program in the Nevada desert ranges (Area 51) is still not free of bugs. More work and time are apparently needed, but this will involve only a minimal delay. It is not known if the holographic projection techniques which are needed to create the "special effects" of the UFO invasion have been perfected yet, but the basic technology has existed for some years already. I suspect that the "Alien Technology Division's" real role has not been to analyze crashed extraterrestrial discs, but to perfect THEIR own craft, so that six or seven centuries of patient planning may at last be brought to fruition.

* A figure obtained by multiplying the 7-hour daily U.S. per-capita TV Viewing average over a span of 20 years. This yields 51,100 hours in front of the set.

I suspect further that the eerie silence kept by the U.S. government can now be understood for what it is: a reflection of the brazen contempt which THEY harbor toward the masses. Time was — until very recently — that some spokesperson would have to step in and save the day when the masses showed signs of paying too much attention to a flurry of UFO activity. But the last twelve months have seen a steady barrage of leaks of highly sensitive UFO information (or dis-information — actually, it no longer matters which), and a series of books which just a few years ago would have been soundly suppressed in the "interests of National Security." Enough threat to make any legitimate government take the most intense action possible against these betrayers of its most secret secrets. And yet ... not a squeak! It is contempt. THEY are totally confident that THEY have won. THEY knew how the test would turn out, for THEY knew human nature and they took advantage of its gross weaknesses. THEY were apparently correct. THEY will never again have to deal with the UFO problem — and THEIR silence indicates that the next phase is likely very close to being sprung.

So watch carefully, Ufologists, and plan carefully, you sovereign individual thinkers who are contemplating this advisory. That was a test, and soon enough it will be very dangerous to be discovered as a Ufologist, or as an individual. Prepare now for the New Inquisition.

Fringe Coverage: A Review

By Dennis Stacy

Inevitably, something odd or untoward occurs whenever any "outsider," however well intentioned, turns his or her attention to the UFO literature. Biases blossom, emphases are misplaced, or material of a significant nature is simply omitted without explanation. Certainly this is the case with The Fringes of Reason, edited by Ted Schultz and subtitled "A Field Guide to New Age Frontiers, Unusual Beliefs & Eccentric Sciences." This page-size, glossy paperback (Harmony Books, 224 pp, illus, $14.95, paper) is brought to you by the ordinarily reliable and thorough people at the Point Foundation, Sausalito, California, who produce the quarterly Whole Earth Review and irregular access catalogs such as this one.

Fringes consists of six sections, each composed of the standard plethora of original articles and reprints, as well as combined review/notices of books, journals, and where applicable, organizations. Whole Earth founding father figure Stewart Brand, not normally known for frivolity, contributes a throwaway introduction. The first chapter, "The New, Improved Age," treats such topics as apocalyptic awareness, the new generation of "shamans" sprouted out of the continental woodwork, crystalmania and "spiritual" capitalism, eg, the most recent version of the pyramid scam, the Airplane Game, which fleeced would-be frequent flyers.

"Inner Frontiers" deals with psychic "channeling," dowsing and parapsychology as a whole. "Everything You Know Is Wrong!" examines Spontaneous Human Combustion, rampant conspiracy theories, flat-earth-ers, the tabloid press and students of fortean (anomalous phenomena). "Weird Science" features that inveterate encyclopedist of anomalies, William Corliss and his Source Book Project, dreams of perpetual motion and cryptozoologists, people who investigate Bigfoot, the Loch Ness Monster and other related rumors of animate reality. "Not Of This Earth" is devoted wholly to UFOs and ufology, while "What Is Reality?" focuses on professional skepticism and the cult-to-end-cults, the decidedly eccentric Rev. Ivan Stang and his Church of the SubGenius of Dallas. Probably neither party will be pleased with this particular pairing.

But it is with the UFO segment that we are primarily concerned here. And how does the outside world fare? The most obviously inexcusable omission is that of Jacques Vallee, still widely regarded as one of the field's foremost thinkers and theoreticians. Bad enough that none of Vallee's numerous books are referenced or reviewed; worse still that he was not asked to contribute an original article; but inexcusable the fact his name is not even listed in the presumably accurate index! How this oversight could occur is unfathomable, especially when editor Schultz writes in his closing comments that Fringes is "only the tip of the iceberg of what I wanted to include, but I chose to go for thoroughness of coverage of selected topics rather than an exhaustive but superficial approach."

What Schultz has included is commendable enough, if one lays the completeness proviso aside. The familiar John Keel weighs in with two pieces, "The Man Who Invented Flying Saucers," about the diminutive Ray Palmer, and "The Great Phonograph in the Sky," a veiled dismissal of all ufological thought but that Keelian. Douglas Curran chips in some text and striking photographs from his book, In Advance of the Landing, a study of the individual and sociological impact of belief in UFOs. Three short pieces on UFO folklore are included, two by Jerome Clark, editor of International UFO Reporter and Fate, (on crashed saucers and humanoids), and one by this writer on the enigma of MIB, Men In Black. Thankfully, the latter corrects a couple of errors in spelling and context which crept into the original appearance in OMNI Magazine. The "Access" section includes reviews of numerous UFO publications and books, some long out of print, others prohibitively expensive for the average budget. The MUFON Journal is prominently featured (p. 163), as is CUFOS's IUR, and the bi-monthly UFO out of California.

Most of the individual assessments of source material I can agree with, though there are one or two minor curiosities here, too. Schultz, for instance, refers to UFO's: A Scientific Debate, Carl Sagan and Thornton Page editors, as "the best book to read when asking the question 'Are UFOs real?'" Admittedly, this is a matter of personal opinion, but mine would rank Debate third or lower behind the controversial Condon Report (Scientific Study of Unidentified Flying Objects) and Capt. Edward Ruppelt's The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects. In the latter case, I refer of course to the original edition, the one without the three added-on chapters, which transparently took away with the left hand that which the right had already bestowed. Neither book is even referenced.

The English contribution is conspicuously slighted, too, and any argument that it is difficult of access simply won't wash. For instance, two fine psychological studies of the visitor experience by Hilary Evans, Visions, Apparitions, Alien Visitors and Gods, Spirits, Cosmic Guardians (Aquarian Press, 1984 and 1987, respectively) were readily available in many U.S. bookstores. So were several books by the otherwise indefatigable Jenny Randles, not the least of which was The UFO Conspiracy (Blandford Press, 1987). In the same vein, Timothy Good's Above Top Secret: The Worldwide UFO Cover-up (William Morrow, 1988) was virtually abandoned by its American publisher. Flying Saucer Review, the world's oldest continually published UFO journal, is also left in the lurch.

One could also rather that not quite so much of the original material, which had its genesis in the Fall, 1986, No. 52 issue of Whole Earth Review, was reprinted. This makes at least the third time that Keel's opinionated but hardly definitive article on Palmer has appeared in print. And unless one is a complete addict, one appearance of the Rev. Stang and SubGenius material would have sufficed, too. The occupied pages could easily have been put to much better, not to mention newer, use, given the amount and significant extent of material omitted.

UFO Poll

During the week of May 16, 1988, KOAT-Channel 7 News in Albuquerque presented a week-long segment on the UFO phenomenon during its 6:00

Most of these sins are ones of omission rather than commission. But there is at least one of the latter. Under "Chroniclers of the Unexplained," for example, Michael Persinger and Gyslaine Lafreniere's now classic Space-Time Transients and Unusual Events (p. 84) is listed as available from Reader's Digest (!). Stranger things have happened, but the last time I looked the publisher was Nelson-Hall (1977).

These cavils and quibbles aside, some major, some slight, should you drop 15 hard-earned dollars on Fringes? Undoubtedly. Despite the peculiarities referred to above, the usual wealth of material expected in a Whole Earth access catalog is still here, much of it unavailable anywhere else. And a few of the original and reprinted articles are well worth reading, even for the second time around. Ultimately, however, Fringes of Reason is barely on the edge of ufology.

newscast. That following weekend (May 21 and 22) they conducted a telephone opinion survey as well. Following are the results of that survey:

Q. 1. Do you believe some UFOs are visitors from outer space?

	Number	Percent
Yes	1205	60.9
No	477	24.1
No Opinion	298	15.0

Q. 2. Do you believe you've ever seen a UFO?

Yes	655	33.1
No	1228	62.0
No Opinion	97	4.9

h = 1980

Methodology: The spokesperson for Channel 7 told me they used an automatic telephone system which randomly generates numbers within a designated area — in this case, the Albuquerque metropolitan area. These random numbers were called and they were able to collect completed surveys from 1980 people as indicated above. It is estimated that the total Albuquerque metro area population is at approximately 450,000. At a sample size of about .005 of the population I would say this falls into a representative range. Even more so, if the assumption is made that the majority interviewed were adults. That would of course enlarge the sample as the population size would be smaller.

about UFOs. The final reports of these studies and the unsupported statements made by otherwise coherent scientists are not well grounded in a logical progression of analysis but rather, emphasize ad hominem arguments or personal biases having no relation to the truly puzzling cases which continue to be reported. Some of the reasoning employed is indeed so vacuous as to raise serious doubt about the veracity and credibility of these otherwise reasonable scientists. For example, after the 1952 sightings over Washington, D.C., Menzel (otherwise one of the most eminent physical scientists in American history), reasoning by human analogy, pronounced that the objects could not be extraterrestrial because if "they" had spaceships they would also have radio by which they would have contacted us. "They would get off their ships and have a look at us. Wouldn't you on Venus?"

Either these men, afflicted by some curious "blindspot" to the subject, were unable to fully focus their otherwise considerable mental abilities on an objective analysis of the UFO materials they claimed to have "fully studied," or their conclusions were intentionally grounded in something other than objective scientific analysis.

As did the Air Force, CIA, and the Robertson panel, Condon and Menzel claimed that although there was "nothing to the UFO reports," the sightings themselves represented a potential threat to national security. By 1963, as the UFO reports escalated instead of "vanishing into thin air," Menzel rehashed these same opinions in his second book, claiming that in the short time it met, the Robertson Committee had analyzed "every available act of evidence" about UFOs and found no support for the extraterrestrial hypothesis, concluding that the "UFO hysteria" was "dying a slow and lingering death." With the benefit of twenty years hindsight, it is now clear that it has instead been the unscientific prejudices of these men, and others like them today, that are dying the "slow death." Their intentional avoidance of legitimate questions raised by the evidence concerning UFOs and the fervor with which they pronounce their clearly illogical positions leave very little room for doubt as to what they are really all about.

Looking Back

By Bob Gribble

THIRTY FIVE YEARS AGO - March 1954: On the afternoon of the 22nd, four flying discs were sighted at Hazelton, Pennsylvania, making close passes at an airliner. As the UFOs flashed past the aircraft the captain notified ground control. The report to the Civil Aeronautics Administration was quickly covered up, but civilian observers on the ground reported the incident to newsmen. On the 24th, Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott, his aides and crew all witnessed a large, silvery, metallic disc follow their aircraft 1,000 feet below and 1,000 feet distant. The incident occurred in daylight over Fresno, California. When the Secretary ordered his crew to challenge the disc, it maneuvered in a tight circle, then shot away, disappearing at tremendous speed.

At 10:32 p.m. on the 24th, Adolph Wagner, Deputy Coordinator for Civil Defense at Baltimore, Maryland, sighted a formation of 13 triangular-shaped objects. As he watched the strange craft an airliner approached. Immediately the formation split. One group made a sharp turn toward the airliner, while the other held its course. Then a much larger object — estimated to be at least two and a half times larger than the others — descended from the clouds. As if on signal, the smaller craft joined the larger object and all disappeared in the darkness. At 3:30 p.m. on the 25th, Don Holland, a Marine Corps jet pilot, saw a disc descend over a guided-missile range in Florida. After streaking downward, it stopped abruptly at 3,000 feet. Holland turned his aircraft to try for a gun camera picture but the disc instantly took off at terrific speed.

THIRTY YEARS AGO - March

MUFON UFO Journal, No. 251, March 1989

1959: Percy Briggs, mail carrier, and Carl Towill, postmaster, said that they saw a huge dome-shaped craft take off from a farmer's field near Purnong, Australia — 90 miles north-east of Adelaide — at 2:10 a.m. on the 13th. When they first sighted the craft it looked like a huge brightly-lit circus tent. As they approached the strange craft and got to within 600 feet of it, the object shot upwards into the sky and disappeared. On the 14th Charles Athey was out for a walk in Kyger, Ohio when he came upon a UFO that looked like two table saucers placed together rim-to-rim and topped with a red sphere-like affair which rotated. The sphere contained openings through which a light penetrated, striking his shoulder. At 8:45 p.m. on the 19th, Mayo R. Bales was driving near Kyger when he observed a similar object. Bales said his car radio reception cut-out and a "buzzing," static-like sound invaded the air waves. He then spotted the UFO 300 feet up and 75 to 100 feet in front of his vehicle. The car lights also dimmed. "It was shaped like a shined-up aluminum pan with white light coming from it," Bales said. He pursued the craft for 27 miles before losing sight of it.

TWENTY YEARS AGO - March

1969: William Overstreet, 50, was on his way to work about 6:40 a.m. on the fourth when he saw a bright reddish ball — about 100 feet in diameter — near Atlanta, Missouri. The sphere was so bright that he pulled down the visor in his truck and shielded his eyes with his hand. He said there seemed to be a yellow border around the outside that moved clockwise. There was no sound, and it cruised about 30 feet above the road ahead of him at 40 miles an hour. As he got closer to the ball, a beam of light that was the width of the craft at its origination but only about eight feet in diameter on the road, shined down in front of him. Overstreet described the beam as bluish-white and giving off intense heat. He compared the heat to the inside of a car in mid-summer when all of the windows had been rolled up on a sunny day.

When the front of the truck touched the beam, both the engine and his citizen's band radio abruptly stopped. Also, everything seen through the beam was magnified. Overstreet depressed the clutch pedal and the UFO moved ahead of him and both the engine and radio came back to life. He again attempted to catch up with the sphere to see what it was, but the engine started missing when he got to within about six feet of the beam and stopped altogether when he touched it again. He then stopped chasing it. (Editor's note: Case investigated by MUFON.)

On the 10th a Lancaster, Missouri housewife was driving near her home about 10:30 a.m. when a large, bright beam of light that almost completely covered the highway shined down in front of her car. The beam was being emitted from the bottom of a gray disc with a dome on top that was hovering at about a 1,000 foot altitude. The cone-shaped beam was narrow at the top and wide at the bottom. As the witness drove into the beam, her car slowed. "My car's speed dropped from 50 m.p.h. to 8 m.p.h.," she said. "It did not start to miss; it merely slowed to that speed, although I had the accelerator on the floor." When the car drove out of the beam, it again functioned normally. The witness said that her eyes hurt for several days after the sighting.

Kjell Naslund was on duty at a television transmitter station at Memlidex, Sweden on the 12th at about 6:30 p.m. when he experienced an uncontrollable urge to go outdoors. As he walked out the door he was greeted with an incredible sight. About 15 meters from the station, in a clear-cut hollow, a huge craft was sitting on the ground. He estimated the diameter to be 150 meters and it filled the entire hollow. Naslund could see what appeared to be a tunnel leading into the craft. A grayish-blue light was shining in the tunnel, while the outer surface of the craft was shining in a gray misty light. Naslund said he could see ten "occupants" standing beside the craft. "They looked like boxes floating above the ground. I estimated their height to be 130 to 135 centimeters and their circumference 30 to 40 centimeters. I also saw four of the occupants floating outward toward the tunnel opening."

Naslund decided he had seen enough and decided to get to the telephone and call the police. He suddenly realized he could not move. "It was just a feeling I got," Naslund recalled, "that I was to stand there and keep the door open for them. I just had to stand there and witness everything. There were seven or eight beings floating into the station, and when they passed by me the distance was only a couple decimeters. I wanted to touch them but I couldn't move. They did not have arms and legs. I was so affected by those beings that I couldn't do anything of my own accord. I felt as if I was being guided. They were there for five to 10 minutes." Before the craft took off the occupants re-entered the object through the tunnel as though they had been sucked into it. Then the tunnel closed and the craft moved away.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO - March 1974: On the ninth, just before 10 p.m., Alfonso Isaia was flying a jet from Paris to Turin, Italy, when, at a height of about 9,000 feet, and a speed of about 285 miles per hour, "I suddenly saw this object in front of me like a white-hot glowing mass," he recalled. The seasoned jet pilot stared in wonder, his eyes riveted to the mysterious glowing object in the sky before him. After 45 years of flying, Alfonso was seeing his first UFO. "I will never forget it," said Isaia, a former colonel in the Italian Air Force and chief pilot for the giant Fiat auto company's private air fleet. "It was like a white-hot glowing mass. After MUFON UFO Journal, No. 251, March 1989 years of being a skeptic, I am now convinced UFOs exist.

"At that same moment, the radar at air traffic control in Milan showed the same object and the traffic controller came on the radio. 'Can you see an object at 10 o'clock?' he asked me. I told him that I could. He said, 'It is not one of ours.' Then he gave me the OK to follow it. I climbed up to 18,000 feet at a speed of some 230 m.p.h., with the object about 10 miles in front of me. It was in the shape of a pipe from beneath, but at the same altitude, it looked more like an upturned plate. It was multi-colored with yellow rings around the outside, red inside these, and brilliant white in the center. I was flying at a speed of more than 330 m.p.h. and increasing, but not making any gain on the object," recalled the 64-year-old pilot.

"I kept on its tail for 5 or 6 minutes, going on an east west course toward the French border. But then I flew into prohibited military airspace and had to turn back. I have spent the best part of half a century flying and never before have I had an experience like this. I admit that man can have hallucinations, start imagining things — but radar can't. The radar in Milan picked up a UFO in its screen and saw that object." Milan air traffic control confirmed the pilot's report: "Col. Isaia followed the UFO we picked up on our radar and reported it was not an airplane or artificial satellite or weather balloon." Said Col. Isaia: "Before I witnessed this, I was skeptical that UFOs existed. Now there is no doubt in my mind that somewhere in the millions of other planets in the thousands of other solar systems, other civilizations have developed a form of space travel far more advanced than we have."

TEN YEARS AGO - March 1979: Ben Chastain was working in his yard in Westminster, South Carolina on the sixth when he looked up and saw a round object — which he estimated to be 12 feet in diameter — moving very slowly. The object trimmed the tops of the trees and then disappeared out of sight. Then his dogs "started raising a fit." Chastain looked up and saw the object again. At this point the UFO was less than 50 yards away and a light on it was so bright that it lit up the entire area. The light seemed to be located inside the flat, red-colored bottom. The object was also able to move upwards and downwards with ease to transverse the uneven terrain near his home. "I was a doubter before this happened," Chastain said. "I watched Project UFO on television two or three times and then stopped watching it because I thought it was a bunch of bull. I sure never thought I'd be the one to see something like that."

Oconee County Deputy Sheriff Jimmy Roach, his wife and a neighbor also reported seeing the object, but from a further distance. At about 8 p.m., the Bill Osborne family reported seeing a similar object on Highway 221. Osborne said the hovering craft had a very strong light that penetrated into the car. "We watched it hover for a long time in the same spot," Osborne said. "I'd say we watched it for about 30 minutes and then it moved toward the southeast. All during this time there was a very, very strong light that moved about and shined down toward the ground. Sometimes it would shine straight towards us." Osborne said he and his wife were fascinated by the fact that the object had the ability to stand perfectly still and then move off at right angles, either straight up or straight down.

The craft apparently "followed" the Osborne's about six miles to their home, and then came in closer. "As long as it was in the distance there was no sound, but when it got within a hundred yards of the house we began to hear a sound unlike anything I have ever heard." Osborne believed the craft was much larger than described by Chastain — about 80 feet long and 25 feet wide.

Journal of Scientific Exploration

As a scientist with a long interest in the UFO phenomenon and as an active member of several UFO organizations, I have often wished for the emergence of a responsible, refereed scientific journal to which one could submit papers on the UFO subject. Despite several attempts in the past, the most recent being CUFOS' Journal of UFO Studies, such a publication has yet to become firmly established.

Last year a new journal appeared which holds the promise of becoming just such a publication. It is the Journal of Scientific Exploration, a publication of the Society for Scientific Exploration (SSE). The journal is published by the respected Pergamon Journals Ltd. of England. The SSE was established by Dr. Peter Sturrock of Stanford University and others in 1981 with the purpose of promoting the study of anomalous phenomena. Included in papers presented at the Society's annual meetings have been such subjects as Psi phenomena, Cryptozoology and, of course, UFOs. A number of scientists well known in the UFO community, including members of MUFON, are now members of the SSE.

The SSE's journal provides an unprecedented opportunity to elevate the debate and study of the UFO phenomenon to a level more acceptable to the scientific community as a whole, and to counter the negative efforts of other groups with scientific credentials, such as the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal (CSICOP). As such, the SSE's journal should be supported by all of us interested in the serious study of UFOs. As with any new publication, the journal needs a minimum number of subscribers to survive. Although membership in the SSE is limited to those with professional qualifications, the journal can be subscribed to by anyone for $40.00 per year. Though this may seem expensive, it is a reasonable price by professional standards. You should also make your local libraries aware of the new journal. One can subscribe by writing to Pergamon Journals Inc., Fairview Park, Elmsford, N.Y. 10523. Manuscripts submitted for publication should be sent to the Editor, Ronald E. Howard, Dept. of Engineering-Economic Systems, Terman Engineering Center, Stanford, CA 94305. Professionals interested in joining the SSE should contact the secretary, Prof. Laurence W. Fredrick, Dept. of Astronomy, P.O. Box 3818, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, VA 22903.

Letters to the Editor...

Dear Editor:

The Atlas UFO case (Journal, January 1989) immediately interested me since it offered verifiable events surrounding the story. I conducted a correspondence with both figures in the story, but was never able to determine the required data, such as date, time, azimuth, etc., which we all know are necessary for checking out possible prosaic explanations. The tone of Jacobs' article (so different from his polite, reasonable letters) suggests now that he was never interested in helping me conduct a proper investigation which might have solved the sighting.

He certainly may release copies of any of our correspondence. It is always important to validate the technological jargon so often bandied about in "war stories," and Jacobs' text shows that he was exposed to the environment of missile activities but did not really understand some basic principles (for example, his reference to 18,000 mph speeds, far in excess of actual ICBM speeds). This is crucial in being able to weigh the credibility of assertions of a technological nature.

You can also see from early reports that Jacobs' memory was not good enough to even determine the year of the event or the missile type. He later found written records, but the question always remains about the accuracy of other recollections never written down but frequently recounted orally over the ensuing years. Compare the 1982 account with this one, for example! (National Enquirer)

This is one area of the UFO puzzle where my particular talents can be productively applied and I remain willing to offer them again in this case. I appreciate the harshest critiques and high regard these specializations have earned among serious ufologists, and I wish to continue to deserve such constructive opinions.

Dear James Edward Oberg:

Walt Andrus sent me a copy of your most recent diatribe relative to me and my reporting of an incident photographed from Big Sur, California. As usual, your arrogance astounds me. Your insulting and disparaging remarks about me were and are totally unnecessary and uncalled for, in my view. Since you don't know anything at all about this incident, I can't understand why you think you should have had something "to contribute to understanding this case" in the first place. All you have on which to base any opinion is what you read in The National Enquirer and culled from me and Florenz Mansmann, according to your own testimony. So what gives you editorial or proprietary rights now?

The only thing you got right in your letter was that mine was a "one-sided account." Since the incident happened to me, not to you, what other side would you like to have printed in my article? Yours? I didn't know that you had a "side" in this case. I didn't see you up on the mountain at Big Sur or in the offices at 1st Stratad! Were you privy to the film itself somewhere along the line? I bet not. So ... where's the vast voice of your expertise in this case which I so obviously should have consulted? Who agreed that everything written in this field had to pass the Jim Oberg litmus test of veracity? Who put you in charge, sir?

Since the literature in the field is littered with your "one-sided accounts," opinions, and character assassinations directed at well-meaning, serious investigators such as ... yeah ... me, I'm again surprised that you can whine about my article being one-sided.

As for comparing "the 1982 account with this one, for example," as you invite us to do in your letter, one of the reasons for the present article was to print the account the way I intended it and NOT the way in which the National Enquirer compressed, condensed and sensationalized it. Walt Andrus will confirm that assertion for you, if you are interested in the truth. That was not MY writing in 1982, but theirs. Since 1982, as it seems to have escaped your attention, further investigation and verification have shed new light on the incident. I reported that, too.

As for my memory being "not good enough to even determine the year of the event or the missile type," you're right about the year, wrong about the missile type. The wrong year was reported in the first National Enquirer article because I told them, "It was either 1964 or '65" and I did NOT check it further. Major Mansmann set all of us right on the date. He also set all of us right on the rest of my memory being just fine, thanks. He verified my report line for line as you might have recalled if you did speak with him. I'm sure that you may have heard about the selectivity of memory. I can tell you what the room looked like, smelled like, who was in it, what I was doing, what they were doing and what song was on the radio when the news came across that Jack Kennedy had been shot. The Big Sur incident had just such an emotional impact on me, Mr. Oberg.

MUFON UFO Journal, No. 251, March 1989

I was there. So I know.

Finally, the "tone" of my article has nothing to do with you or whether or not I was ever "interested in helping (you) conduct a proper investigation." The tone of my article has to do with the tone of my article. I mentioned you only as the most obvious and maybe odious example of the variety of cranks who contacted me. Anyone who invites me, as you did in your letter dated Feb. 3, 1984, which I have in front of me right now, to divulge "other top secret aspects of the Atlas warhead," goes immediately to the top of my personal list of gadflies and/or miscreants to be avoided. That's where you remain. How could you possibly harbor any illusions that I would wish to help you do anything after such an assinine invitation to betray my conscience and my country? I believe that I told you in no uncertain terms in my response to that letter back in 1984 that I am not one to divulge classified information to you or to anyone else. I regard you as dangerous. And frankly ... to paraphrase a famous line, I didn't give a damn whether you believe me or not. I have said what I have to say about this incident. It's all I intend to say. You can make of it what you like.

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Fund for UFO Research, I am writing to thank the Mutual UFO Network and its membership for its support of Stanton Friedman's proposal to do follow-up investigation of the "MJ-12" documents.

As many MUFON members know, we asked Stan last year what it would take to authenticate — or refute — the MJ-12 documents. He responded with a detailed proposal which would involve about four months of intensive research at a cost of approximately $16,000. Lacking that amount in our treasury, we went to the UFO community for support.

I'm pleased to report that to date, we have raised more than $15,000 to support MJ-12 research, and we have authorized Stan to proceed in his investigation.

We especially wish to thank Whitley Strieber's Communion Foundation for a matching grant of $5,000 for the project. This is the latest significant contribution Whitley has made to support UFO research; he was a contributor to the 1987 MUFON Symposium, held in Washington, D.C. and sponsored by the Fund for UFO Research. He also has contributed to the Fund's investigation of the Gulf Breeze sightings.

Also, we would like to thank MUFON International Director Walt Andrus for MUFON's contribution of $500 for the MJ-12 project, as well as MUFON members across the country who have collected money from individuals on our behalf. Without their support, we would have no immediate hope of resolving the MJ-12 controversy.

Whether the documents are authentic, a hoax or a mixture of information and disinformation, we believe the results of Stan's investigation will represent a major step forward in our understanding of the UFO phenomenon. Therefore, we appeal to the entire UFO community for its support.

We ask that you mail your tax-deductible contribution today to the Fund for UFO Research, P.O. Box 277, Mt. Rainier, MD 20712. Contributors of $50 or more will receive a copy of Stan's final report before it is released to the public. Contributions raised in excess of the amount needed will be used for further investigations into UFO/government secrecy.

Dear Editor:

In reference to issue number 249, January 1989, of the Journal, what can I say? It was like being a kid again! All your publications are interesting, but this was special.

My compliments to Bob Jacobs and Florenz J. Mansmann for speaking out about the Vandenberg Missile Case. The "Ohio Flap," by Richard P. Dell'Aquila was a mind blower. Bob Gribble's "Looking Back" is always read first.

As to MJ-12 and Crash/Retrievals: It is unfortunate that courageous UFO researchers are subjected to ridicule from colleagues. Big egos can be deflated, but orchestrated disinformation is not easy to deal with. This is to be expected when we do not know the motives of all those in the game.

Sooner or later — for better or worse — the truth will be dug out. Keep up the good work!

Dear Editor:

I'm becoming concerned about the increasingly casual use of the word "flap," and the resultant loss of its significance and usefulness.

Traditionally, a flap is a major, wide-spread increase in sighting reports and press and public interest. To use the word to describe a limited, localized upsurge in reports is to knock out much of its impact. And to use it for a few sighting reports such as "Ohio Flap" (issue 249, page 15) is to render it almost meaningless.

Why not return the word to its original meaning, and use others, such as "local wave" and "sighting increase" to describe the minor upsurges in activity?

Just a thought ...

New Project Blue Book

Project Blue Book, The United States Air Force investigative arm for Unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs) has been reorganized as a civilian research and investigative association, comprised of, but not limited to, present and former Air Force and other U.S. government agency personnel. The new Project Blue Book, officially name-approved by the United States Air Force, will study future UFO sighting reports, but devote further in-depth studies to the older, classic, sighting reports from the mid-1940s through the 1960s.

The Night Sky

By Walter N. Webb
MUFON Astronomy Consultant

March 1989

Bright Planets (Evening Sky):

Mars and Jupiter lie near each other high in the SW sky at dusk. The dimmer Mars (21 times fainter at magnitude 1.1 passes 2° above the brighter giant world (magnitude -2.2) late on the 11th as they set in the NW shortly before midnight. The 4-day-old Moon and the Pleiades are not far from the pair.

Bright Planets (Morning Sky):

With Venus hidden in the solar glare, Saturn remains the lone planet in the morning sky. The ringed world (magnitude 0.5) rises in Sagittarius in the ESE about 2:30 AM in mid-March and stands low in the SE at twilight. It passes only 14 minutes of arc below the planet Neptune on the 3rd, the first of a triple conjunction between these two in 1989. Although 8th-magnitude Neptune might be glimpsed in binoculars, a telescope will afford a better view of this rare conjunction. Look for the shape of Neptune's very tiny disc by using high magnifications.

Partial Solar Eclipse:

The new moon hides part of the Sun on March 7 from the central U.S. to Alaska and Hawaii. The eclipse ranges from about 80% obscuration and 2 hours duration to about 9% and 1 hour long in Iowa. Percentages and times of maximum eclipse for several cities: Anchorage, 80% at 9:13 AM AST; Seattle, 57% at 10:10 AM PST; Los Angeles, 36% at 9:50 AM PST; Denver, 24% at 11:17 AM MST; Des Moines, 9% at 12:35 PM CST. Do not look directly at the Sun! For safety, project the Sun's image through a telescope eyepiece, or through a pinhole in a card, onto a white surface.

Moon Phases:

New moon — March 7
First quarter — March 14
Full moon — March 22
Last quarter — March 30

The Stars:

During this harbinger month of spring, Leo the Lion creeps ever closer to the celestial meridian in the south. Astride the meridian at 9 PM (mid-month) lies the faintest of the 12 zodiacal constellations, Cancer the Crab. Look for a dim patch in the crab and then focus binoculars or a telescope on it. It is a wedge-shaped "swarm" of stars popularly called the Beehive.

Cancer is centered between Leo and Gemini the Twins. The Twin Stars Pollux and Castor form the heads of the two brothers, while their stick-figure bodies and feet are rather easily seen along with arms extended to the right and left. Castor actually is a triple star (telescopically), and each of the trio is itself a close pair (spectroscopically). So the entire system is composed of 6 stars!

The brilliant stars of Orion and the Dog Star Sirius still are prominent in the SW.

Friedman, Timothy Good, Linda Moulton Howe, Jennie Zeidman, and John O. Lear. Five of these speakers will relate intriguing new information involved in the U.S. Government's conspiracy to hide the real evidence behind the UFO phenomena.

John Lear, State Director for Nevada, will serve as the host chairman with Hal Starr, State Director for Arizona, Co-Host Committee. Reservations for rooms may be made by writing or calling the Aladdin Hotel and Casino, 3667 Las Vegas Boulevard South, Las Vegas, Nevada 89109 or telephone (702) 736-0111 or (800) 634-3428. its doors in 1969, but many of the investigators of the earlier reports found that the most important cases were then, and still are to this date, listed as "Unidentified." While some possible answers were made on many reports at the time, most "answers" did not fit the actual reported sightings, and were later proven not to be the objects reported by reputable observers, including those persons who were in high-level government positions when they made the reports. The "answers" did not fit the reports.

The new Project Blue Book will be directed by industrialist Bill Pitts, a veteran investigator for civilian UFO organizations and various government agencies. A high-level research team will re-evaluate the older reports and endeavor to determine whether the objects reported were solid, metalliclike structures and could be extraterrestrial, an hypothesis long considered as the predominate answer.

In a statement released to the media, Pitts said: "We will be seeking first-hand information, and materials, from individuals personally involved in the earlier saucer-era sighting reports, and will greatly appreciate receiving from any such person, or members of the immediate family, any copies of sighting reports, photos and movies, especially on plane-gun cameras, if available.

"Also, first-hand knowledge, or proof, of any alleged UFO 'crash-retrieval' situation would be appreciated. Any such information received will be handled in strict confidentiality, and persons sending such materials will remain anonymous. All materials will be returned in their entirety. Any person who may have been under 'gag-restrictions' in the past should come forward immediately, while they are still able to do so to assist us in this investigative endeavor of the world-wide phenomenon."

Headquarters for the new Project Blue Book will be at Pitts' office, 506 North 2nd Street, Fort Smith, Arkansas 72901. It is this address, centrally located in the United States, to which all materials should be sent.

Director's Message

By Walt Andrus

May 31, 1989 will mark the 20th Anniversary of the founding of the Mutual UFO Network, Inc. (MUFON), originally known as the Midwest UFO Network. With the departure from the UFO scene of both APRO and NICAP, MUFON is now the oldest or senior UFO organization in the U.S.A. and also the largest in the world. Every member must be congratulated for their individual contribution toward achieving this worthy distinction. The key to this success may be directly attributed to the "grass roots" structure of the organization and the state leadership, whereby everyone is a part of the overall investigative and research team. The organizational structure of MUFON, as prescribed in its bylaws for leadership succession, assures that it will continue to be viable for another 20 years, or until a resolution of the UFO phenomenon is achieved.

As the Editor alluded to in the February 1989 MUFON UFO Journal, with consecutive issue number 250, it has surpassed all other UFO publications, including some of those founded in the 1950's. (Yes, we must be doing something right.) Accolades to all of you have made this possible, starting with Mrs. Norma E. Short, the first editor of SKYLOOK.

MUFON Award for 1988-1989

The Annual MUFON Award plaque for the most outstanding contribution to UFOlogy for 1988-1989 will be presented at the MUFON 1989 UFO Symposium in Las Vegas, Nevada on July 1, 1989. The actual contribution or work is not confined to the calendar year of 1988-89, but may include significant accomplishments during the past five years. Nominees or candidates for this award may reside anywhere in the world. A person may be nominated by submitting his or her name with a written paragraph stating briefly why their candidate should receive the award, listing the nominees accomplishments and recognition in the field of ufology. Anyone may submit the name of their candidate to one of the members of the MUFON Board of Directors, listed in the MUFON 1988 International UFO Symposium Proceedings, plus George R. Coyne, Jennie Zeidman and Robert H. Bletchman. The deadline for receiving nominations from Board Members is April 1, 1989 in Seguin, Texas. A ballot will be enclosed with the May 1989 issue of the MUFON UFO Journal so all members and subscribers may vote for their choice for this prestigious award. The deadline date for return of ballots will be specified on the ballot.

Eastern Regional Director

Three candidates have been nominated for Eastern Regional Director to fill the vacancy created when Joe Santangelo's term expires on the Board of Directors this year. Listed alphabetically, they are Stephen J. Firmani, State Director for Massachusetts; Robert L. Oechsler, State Section Director for Arundel, Howard and Calvert Counties in Maryland; and Donald M. Ware, State Director for Florida. A ballot is enclosed in the March 1989 issue of the Journal to all members in the Eastern Region of States so they may cast their vote for Regional Director. The deadline date for receipt of ballots in Seguin, Texas is indicated on the ballot. Every member is encouraged to vote, since this is your opportunity to select the person that you feel will best represent the eastern states on the MUFON Board of Directors.

New Officers

Scott H. Colburn, residing in Lincoln, Nebraska and former Assistant

State Director, has been promoted to State Director for Nebraska, replacing Ray W. Boeche. C.L. "Chuck" Brooks of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, who recently resigned as State Director due to new employment in Colorado, has accepted the position of Assistant State Director for South Dakota. Favorable employment opportunities with another firm made it desirable for Chuck to remain in South Dakota. Jean Waller, State Director for Oklahoma, has appointed Robert G. Davis to the post of Assistant State Director for Investigations. Bob resides in Oklahoma City.

William I. McNeff, State Director for Minnesota, has approved the two following appointments as State Section Directors: Mark D. Anderson of Fergus Falls for Otter Tail and Wilkin Counties; and Donavon "Don" Johnson now living in Fertile for Polk, Norman, and Mahanomen Counties. Mr. Johnson was a State Section Director in North Dakota before moving to Minnesota. Other new State Section Directors selected during the past month are: John W. Komar, living in Memphis, Tennessee, for Shelby, Fayette, and Tipton Counties; Paul A. Ferrughelli of Wayne, New Jersey for Passaic County; and Jeffrey N. Sargent, residing in San Marcos, Texas, for Hays and Comal Counties, replacing John and Mary Sanders who have similar positions in Beaumont, Texas.

When Scott A. Caldwell became State Director for Alabama, he appointed Bert D. Ballard of Tuscaloosa as State Section Director for Tuscaloosa, Bibb, Greene, Hale, and Pickens Counties.
