November 20. Ninth Annual Arnold & Marie Schwartz Memorial Program—Biotechnology: How It Will Change the Practice of Pharmacy and Medicine, Arnold & Marie Schwartz College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, Holiday Inn located at New York city's JFK Airport. Contact: Dept. of Continuing Education, Arnold & Marie Schwartz College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, (718) 403-1065.

November 27–December 2. American Institute of Chemical Engineers, Washington Hilton and Towers, Washington, DC. Contact: (212) 705-7338.

December 1–2. Society of Cosmetic Chemists, Waldorf Hotel, New York City, NY. Contact: (212) 874-0600.

December 14–16. AAPS/FDA Workshop on In Vivo and In Vitro Testing and Correlation for Modified Release Dosage Forms, Loews L'Enfant Plaza Hotel, Washington, D.C. Contact: (703) 548-3000.

1989

January 29–February 3. AAPS 1989 Arden House Conference, Solids Unit Processes: Theory, Practice and Optimization—A Case Study Approach, Arden House, Harriman, NY. Contact: (703) 548-3000.

February 5–9. 28th International Industrial Pharmacy Conference, Barton Creek Conference Center, Austin, Texas. The University of Texas College of Pharmacy and Division of Continuing Education present the 28th Annual International Industrial Pharmacy Conference. This year's conference theme is "Management and Regulation of New Technology—Biotechnology, Electronic NDA's and Variability in Drug Response." Experts from private industry, government, and academia will present information from their experience on background issues and practical applications of workable solutions to actual and potential situations. The Conference is presented for the Pharmaceutical Industry, The Profession of Pharmacy, and other health related professions. The program is approved for 1.4 CEU's (14 contact hours) of continuing pharmacy education credit. For further information, please contact Dr. Salomon Stavchansky (512-471-1407) or Jennifer Myhra (512-471-6213).

February 21–24. Fourth International Symposium on Recent Advances in Drug Delivery Systems, Marriott Hotel, Salt Lake City, UT.
