2008 Meeting (Pullman, WA):
Phytochemistry and Biology/Human Health

The Phytochemical Society of North America (PSNA) is a nonprofit scientific organization with membership open to those interested in plant biochemistry, phytochemistry, and the role of plant substances in related disciplines. Annual meetings featuring symposium topics of current general interest and contributed papers by conference participants are held throughout Canada, the United States, and Mexico. PSNA meetings provide participants with exposure to cutting-edge research presented by prominent international scientists, but remain intimate enough to allow interaction and collegiality. Meetings were previously held on the campus of the University of Mississippi in Oxford, MS (2006) and at the Danforth Plant Science Center, St. Louis, MO (2007).

2008 PSNA Meeting (June 25–30, 2008, Washington State University, Pullman, WA)

This year's meeting will be held at Washington State University, Pullman, WA, and will have an emphasis on Phytochemistry and Biology/Human Health. Information on the meeting can be accessed at www.pсна-online.org: abstracts for talks/posters are due on May 16, 2008. A preliminary list of invited speakers is given on the outside back cover of this issue.

PSNA Newsletter and Phytochemistry

The Society newsletter keeps members informed of new developments, and provides a forum for the exchange of information and ideas. Phytochemistry publishes many of the membership's papers, and members are eligible for a discounted subscription to the journal. If you would like more information about the PSNA, please visit our website (www.pсна-online.org), or contact a member of the PSNA Executive Committee. If you have material that you would like included in the newsletter, please contact the PSNA Secretary.
