"MIKE" Tames ADVENTUROUS STEPHEN FOX

STEPHEN FOX

... he wanted to "get away from it all" ...

THE radio curtain goes up on The Theater of Today each Monday evening with Stephen Fox the featured player. It happened that last winter, when conditions in this country were at their dreariest peak, Stephen wanted to "get away from it all," and decided that observing war between Bolivia and Paraguay in South America offered the maximum of excitement.

But he was wrong. Three days before he sailed, Stephen was introduced to Marion Parsonnet, dramatic director at CBS, who suggested that a debut before the microphone would be equally diverting. So Stephen stepped into a swashbuckling portrayal of the Duke of Buckingham in The Three Musketeers, which accounts for his nickname around the studios, "The Duke."

Try to guess at Stephen Fox's age. If you ask him he replies with a twinkle of the eye. "What? Over my dead body!" He's had the far-flung experience of an itinerant Methuselah, looks like a matinee idol, and has the enthusiasm of a college sophomore. So you may draw your own conclusions.

Tall, well-built, his face shows signs of an eventful life, from the wise grey eyes to his mouth, ready to spring into a smile beneath a precise mustache. He's always conservatively clad, always wears some hue of blue tie, and you're apt to see almost any sort of war decoration in his lapel.

Stephen is a noted raconteur, and when telling one of his marvelous stories, his face takes on an expression to match the mimicry in his voice—whether the locale of the story is Ireland, Scotland, Singapore or the East Side.

In his quest for excitement and adventure, Stephen may have cropped up anywhere within the last fifteen years. Capetown, Brittany, New Zealand, Buenos Aires and Hollywood are all listed in his log book. He has been everything from an actor, Legionnaire, gentleman jockey, to a bond salesman and a clerk in a general store. The reason for this variegated life is that Stephen likes variety of locale, and whenever he ran out of money on his travels, he had to resort to his own resourcefulness to earn enough to go on.

Though he is often mistaken for a Britisher, he was actually born in New Orleans, Louisiana. His father was an engineer of Scotch descent, his mother an Irishwoman. Through his maternal ancestors, he is a direct descendant of Turlagh O'Carolan, last of the Irish bards—who composed drinking songs familiar to the heart of every Irishman.

How a Mike Tamed An Adventurer

Far Off Places No Longer Lure Stephen Fox, for He Travels on the Air Waves

By Herman Theratt

His family moved to Dublin on business when Stephen was seven years old. The first evidence of wanderlust cropped up in the land of his ancestors, in fact. Every Christmas, Stephen's grandfather gave him ten pounds—or fifty dollars. Though his mother usually spent it for him, or placed it in a bank for safe keeping, when Stephen was eleven, his grandfather decided he was old enough to spend it himself. Stephen took it and blithely started off to see the world. He got as far as Liverpool, where his family finally traced him selling newspapers. He was cuffed, and brought back to school.

STEPHEN was in Dublin University when the war broke out, a little saddened by the culmination of a prank, in which it was discovered he had painted a mustache on a picture of the fiancée of one of the instructors. He ran away, joined the British forces, and saw a great deal more of the war than he had bargained for.

He was sergeant of his company when wounded in action in the battle of Blanc Mont, October 4, 1918. Three soldiers, one of them Stephen, crawled into a "fox hole" under heavy fire. A shell landed squarely on top of them. His companions were killed, and Stephen's bones were broken in so many places it is nothing short of a miracle he came out whole. The last piece of shrapnel was removed in 1932 at the U. S. Naval Hospital in Brooklyn!

He was promoted from a sergeant to lieutenant for gallantry in action at the battle of Blanc Mont, serving with U. S. infantry. Curiously enough, he commanded a platoon of the first battalion of Americans to march under the Arc de Triomphe! During his period of service he was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre, Croix de Belgique, and Order of the Purple Heart! He spent some time on the staff of General Pershing.

His experience as an aviator was brief, and to the point. It was discovered that due to his previous wounds, his sense of balance had been somewhat impaired, though he was perfect physically in every other way. On his solo flight he crashed into a flag pole, gliding down for a landing, and cracked up the ship. Stephen, with his customary luck, escaped unharmed.

Some time after the war, Stephen was stranded without money near Wiesbaden, Germany. This was not an unfamiliar predicament, and Stephen was stranded merely because he had seen to it that the end of the war was celebrated with a good time. He had planned to wind up the celebration in Paris, before sailing for America, but knew he had to make some money before he did get to France. Stephen had not mastered the German language fluently enough to apply for an exalted job, but he heard they were hiring laborers up the Rhine at Bendorf, so there he trekked—ready for anything!

HE talked himself into being hired as a stone mason's apprentice, on the construction of a big summer stone home on the side of a mountain. He heaved gigantic rocks for three weeks before he had enough money to proceed to Paris. There, he arranged to return home on a Japanese tramp vessel. This turned out to mean four weeks at sea with engine trouble all the way home, nobody to talk to—and no books to read. Probably nobody was gladder to see the Statue of Liberty than Stephen!

Home again, Stephen experienced various ups and downs as an actor. He studied for a short time at the American Academy, did stock in San Francisco, Springfield, Albany, New Orleans, and Philadelphia, and appeared in plays with Margaret Anglin and Elsie Ferguson. Four years were spent in Hollywood, taking various roles.

Somewhere in the interim, he was an observer for several foreign armies, Polish, Mexican and Russian. He also traveled with a Shakespearean company in Ireland! Every once in a while, Stephen would get an attack of wanderlust, disappear, and show up in some hitherto unplumbed section of the earth!

Returning to California after one of his pilgrimages somewhere in the Pacific, Stephen left San Francisco and started for Los Angeles, but had only enough money to get to Fresno! He arrived in Fresno without a penny, but since this predicament was not entirely a novelty, he knew just what to do. He hunted a job as a laborer. The foreman turned him down, explaining, "You'll never be hired as a laborer in those clothes!" As usual, Stephen was well-dressed. The foreman suggested he apply at the Southern California Edison Company, as they were constantly hiring men for an electrical project up in the mountains.

Stephen was hired as a paymaster's assistant, although he had not the slightest idea what the job was all about. However, he was sent off to a mountain camp, and at the end of the month the payrolls were so mixed up that there was nothing to do but fire him. However, by this time he'd made such a reputation as a raconteur that he was hired back as entertainment director for all Southern California Edison Camps, and traveled from camp to camp, organizing entertainments.

One of Stephen's best cockney stories—which is far more amusing as he tells it, is about an American who visited London in the days of the coaches. He was advised that the best way to see London was to hire a coach and sit beside the cabby, while he pointed out the places of interest, in the inimitable cabby manner. The American did so, and he drove through the streets of London at the cabby's side, enjoying his impromptu lecture tour. En route, they passed a grocery shop, and the grocer, a big stout man in a white apron, and his hands folded on his stomach, stood out front. The cabby took out a gold watch and dangled it on its chain, meantime nodding at the grocer, and smiling significantly and genially. The grocer nodded back cordially, and they passed on. "What did you do that for?" inquired the American, curiously. "Oh, it's only a bit of a joke between 'im and me," returned the coachman, informatively, "You see—'is father was hung!"

STEPHEN'S hobbies are collecting early American paintings, horseback riding and reading books on military tactics, and history of the theater . . . He always retires at 4 a. m. and rises at 8:30 . . . has two dogs, a Great Dane, McGinnis, and an Irish setter, Lady Pat . . . If he had a million, he'd start a theater in New York, produce plays he really wanted to produce, and paint a sign outside for the public, reading, simply "Come in or stay out."

And if you would ask nine out of ten persons who are familiar with the checkered career which preceded this soldier of fortune's venture into radio, they would probably guess that the plays he would produce would deal with intrigue and the Richard-Harding Davis type of adventurous heroes. But not at all!

For in spite of the fact that since his boyhood, Stephen Fox's footsteps have fallen into the more remote byways of the world, his literary interests do not lie in those channels. He would prefer plays based on the lives and loves of the world's great of other days, for he is a voracious reader of biographies, and he argues that in this world of ours adventure is dead!

Imagine one who has lived the life of Stephen Fox feeling that way about what life has to offer!

I wouldn't care to hazard a guess as to whether or not the taming of Stephen Fox has about it anything of permanency. And I do know you won't get much information along that line by asking him. For if you do, he'll reply with that mischievous twinkle of the eye which characterizes him.

"I never want to know," he will tell you, "where I'll be tomorrow."

But there is one thing I believe I can venture to say with some certainty, and that is that no matter where Stephen finds himself tomorrow, or the next day, or a year hence—that place will be where he can satisfy that longing in his soul to dodge the monotonous routine of existence.

Because if things aren't happening, he'll make them happen.

INTERVIEW - ING Meyer Davis
is an effortless proceeding. You present yourself at the

St. Regis Roof, the headwaiter escorts you to a retired table in an alcove, two waiters alternate in taking and serving your order, a third waiter solicitously opens and closes the window lest you be wetted by the recurrent windy downpours of a thunderstorm, the city reveals itself awesomely below in the lightning flashes, and Davis divides his time between you and leading the orchestra, considerably hovering by between courses and absenting himself when you would concentrate on bestial gratification.

You are, and you feel yourself to be, the guest of what his press agent describes as the only orchestra leader in the business who has made a million and held on to it. Everything is adequately and more than adequately arranged for you, so that it gives you no surprise when the interview itself starts with Davis's handing you two closely printed pages from THE ORCHESTRA WORLD with everything in them you might have thought to ask Davis about himself, and rather a number of things that never would have occurred to you.

"Will you," he suggests, "have a little something?" To this suggestion you willingly acquiesce, and immediately understand why it is more advantageous to interview in person even Meyer Davis, about whom the unidentified writer of the article in THE ORCHESTRA WORLD has written all you thought you wanted to know.

Davis came out of a ten years' retirement from personal conducting (except for very special and very high-priced occasions) to lead the orchestra on the St. Regis Roof this season. He makes no bones about the wherefore.

"I wanted to get on the air," he confesses. "I wanted that exploitation."

The man who has, at times, as many as a hundred and twenty-five bands exploiting his name throughout America, and never fewer than sixty-five, sought and got the added exploitation of four programs weekly on the National Broadcasting Company's network—and therein is revealed the trait that garnered millions and the favored acceptance of society and royalty for this whilom newsboy. He is ever willing and, moreover, eager to be exploited—in, of course, a sense diametrically different from that meant by social uplifters when they indignantly employ the term.

As to that million he has kept and the millions he has spent (he puts out yearly an estimated $4,000,000 in payrolls), he comments that it is hard to tell just what he is worth.

A LOT of things I paid for aren't worth that today," he says, "but we carry them on the books at the same figure. Whether I could cash in, I don't know. I wouldn't think of it."

For Davis has a real fortune in his steady income. He can afford to ride the hobby of a paper fortune that he need not calculate. He can afford to gamble with that fortune, too—and gambling, in the business sense, has been as characteristic of Meyer Davis's career as exploitation. The two combined have treated him felicitously.

"I've gambled with cafes, roadhouses, bowling alleys, amusement parks, about everything, and all in all, I've come out ahead," he observes. Just now he is gambling with a new idea in motion pictures; the production of a series of short films whose sole excuse will be to present stars of the radio world to movie-goers. In this gamble, however, Monroe Shaff has a higher stake, for though both Shaff and Davis have invested equal sums in the enterprise, Shaff's share represents all he has saved in five years as a director for Warner Brothers. Davis's is hardly a dent in his great means.

When Davis and Shaff have completed thirteen "shorts" featuring radio stars, and if the project prospers, they will go on with two series of six feature-length pictures.

This latest exploitation-gambling venture reveals that opportunism which is the third factor in Davis's success. It was the element in Davis's nature which embarked him on a consistently ascendant course.

Davis's musical training as a boy was involuntary and secondary. His parents intended him to be a lawyer. He had covetous eyes on a business career, and it was only when he saw the business possibilities in music that he became a maestro.

The Turkey Trot was the rage when Meyer Davis was a day student at George Washington University law school, earning a dollar or two an evening playing the violin for small dance parties. The United States Marine Band was the social orchestra of Washington, but the Marine Band gave the dancers waltzes, and the young blades and bloods wanted the 1910 version of ha-cha.

That Millionaire Orchestra Leader

*Meyer Davis, So They Say,
Is the Only Stick Waver

By Leo Fontaine

Canny Meyer Davis, eighteen years old, took a trip to the Barbary Coast in San Francisco, just about the time William C. Handy was turning over in his mind the harmonies that were to evolve into the modern blues, and returned with the syncopations that were to evolve into the modern frantic dance tempos.

HE organized an orchestra of five, bluffed himself into a social engagement and made such a hit that the hostess could not rid herself of her guests until three hours after the customary 2 o'clock goodnight. Within a year, the Marine Band had more empty dance dates than full ones, Meyer Davis's was the Society orchestra of Washington and Meyer Davis was organizing additional orchestras to send about the nearby country.

It was the beginning of a record of widening popularity whose high spots include a continuous engagement of two nights and a day at Newport while a certain young millionaire-politician's guests traveled all over the island, swimming, eating, drinking and dancing—and includes, also, the time he had his men working in eight-hour shifts, playing continuous music for a week and two days in the famous little green house of the Harding Administration.

Probably no orchestra leader of modern times can boast of having led his band for so many social celebrities, and certainly no other enjoys the privilege of fraternizing on equal terms with his patrons that Davis has won. Business is business, and Davis makes those who engage him pay through the nose—but play is another matter, and aside from business Davis finds his pleasure with the same people.

Indoor baseball is fun, too

And here's the whole Davis family: Emery, Mrs. Davis, S. Gareth, Meyer Jr., Marjorie Rose, Virginia Faith, and Meyer, himself

"I banked the checks, of course," he adds characteristically.

GETTING together a ninety-piece orchestra, although the average size of his orchestras is forty men, was no problem to Davis, for he applies the Ford assembly system to his bands. Certain men in his office arrange the instrumentations. Certain others choose the players. Then, on the night of the engagement, Davis, without rehearsal, conducts his synthetic orchestra. And, most amazingly, it invariably does a marvelous job.

Just a "fat, local kid" applied to Davis for a job of singing eight or nine years ago. She "didn't mean a thing," he recalls. But she was "crazy to work," she did not mind doing extra singing and she had a voice that made her popular with audiences. Davis paid her $7.50 a night.

"Big radio money wasn't even on the horizon," he explains.

The girl is now known to millions of listeners-in. She is Kate Smith and receives, as the unidentified biographer of Meyer Davis notes, her weight in gold, which is quite a bit of gold indeed.

Davis started Brook Johns, Harry Rosenthal, Lew White, Jacques Renard and Leo Riesman on their careers. But these items are only minutiae in the exhaustive store of incidents and experiences in the life of the "magnate of jazz" and the music master and companion to gay Society.

Davis, forty, tall, bald, spectacled, amiably business-like, a man whose appearance might be that of a banker or a Broadway producer, a corporation attorney or a football coach, retires when he can in the summertime to his sequestered place on Jamestown Island in Narragansett Bay, where he lies around in a bathing suit but doesn't go in the water.

There he enjoys quiet with his wife, the former Hilda Emery, whom he married sixteen years ago after meeting her at Bar Harbor. She is an accomplished musician, but she has never performed for pay.

Some day Meyer Davis is going to write his memoirs. And they ought to sell as well as Pepys' would have, had the elements of exploitation, gambling and opportunism been so effective in that beguiling diarist's day.

EVAN EVANS

... A Texas drawl . . . almost obscures the British accent of his youth . . .

EVAN EVANS is his real name. He explains that his Welsh ancestors had a habit of christening their children William Williams, or John Johns, and so he, too, was given a twin monicker. There's nothing theatrical or "put on" about it, neither is there anything "put on" in the character of Evan Evans. He's a charming, quiet person, and a Texas drawl, acquired while living in Dallas, almost obscures the British accent of his youth in England.

He spent many years following his father's footsteps in the cotton business, and became a dyed-in-the-wool, or perhaps it would be better to say, dyed-in-the-cotton business man, until one day he followed a hunch and gave up the security of his job to become a professional singer. That change took a great deal of daring and courage, but Evan Evans has never had cause to regret it.

He always had a yen for singing, always possessed a baritone voice that impelled friends to protest, "why don't you SING for your supper, and give up your job?" Many a youngster has been forced to abandon youthful dreams for practical purposes. So was Evan.

The owner of the pleasing baritone voice was born in Birkenhead, England, on the thirteenth of April, 1902. Though his parents were amateur musicians themselves, they had no use for it as a profession. Evan sang in the choir of Christ Church, Birkenhead, at the age of seven—and rather than longing, as most boys do, to become a railroad engineer—Evan wanted to be a great singer.

When he was eleven, he heard of a music festival at the town of Chester, fifteen miles from Birkenhead. Evan slipped out of the house, without telling his parents, and walked all the way to the festival, arriving hot and tired. He sang a solo, "The Minstrel Boy to the War Has Gone"—and received a gold medal, which he treasures to this day.

Further triumphs crowded into his youthful career. He sang for King George on his twelfth birthday, and was shortly afterwards placed in the choir of Liverpool Cathedral.

The song, "The Minstrel Boy Has Gone to War," became an actuality as far as Evan was concerned. In the year 1917, with three older brothers already at the front, Evan secretly—as far as his family was concerned—enlisted at sixteen and was put in training at Portsmouth, prior to being sent to the front. He was placed in the anti-aircraft section of the Royal Marine Artillery, and sent to Northern Belgium where he saw service until the Armistice. Evan was gassed, but he was so young that the horror of the experience seemed unreal. He was surprised upon his return after four years—a grown-up of twenty—to find the rest of the world so changed.

Evan explains simply that in going into the cotton business he followed "the line of least resistance." His family had dealt in cotton for years, and Evan was put to work as an apprentice with S. M. Bulley and Son, of London, earning the very nominal salary of five dollars a week.

He proved such a satisfactory worker, that the company sent him to its branch in Dallas, Texas, where he became a "buyer and classer." Which means simply that Evan's job was to inspect as many as 1,000 bales of cotton, classify it as to grade, and decide what class to send to Russia, or France, or England—according to the type deis where Evan gets his fine style of singing Negro ballads—first hand, and over a long period of years working in the midst of negro cotton rousters.

He also fell in love with a southern belle—Texas style. Evan and Ruth Haughton sang in the same choir in Dallas, and it wasn't long before they were both standing at the altar of the church. They have one child, a daughter, Rosemary, nine years old.

IT WAS this same southern belle who was the power behind the throne in encouraging Evan to give in to his hunch, take two weeks' leave of absence from his job as cotton buyer, and journey to New York—where again he did not know a soul—to seek an audition at Juilliard School of Music. They had been married six years, their friends were all in Dallas, and they had a young child—but Evan took a chance and left for New York alone, with all his wife's good wishes as a stimulant to success.

Evan had an audition before Mme. Sembrich, Mme. Schoen-Rene, and other teachers at the Juilliard School. They told him that if he wanted to take the chance of giving up his job, and studying for a while, they were certain he could make a success of a career as a professional singer. Furthermore, they offered him a scholarship.

That was all Evan needed as an incentive. He accepted the scholarship, and rushed back joyously to Dallas to tell the news to his wife. Evan sold his house, his car, fired his servants, and uprooted from his job. Then the Evans moved to New York.

Two weeks after Evan began his studies at Juilliard he got his first professional job in New York as soloist at the Broadway Presbyterian Church. His ambitions were operatic, and he did not realize that he would be side-tracked and won over by radio.

He had an audition for a part in the Opera Comique productions, and won the role of baritone lead in such operettas as the "Chocolate Soldier," and in operas as "Merry Wives of Windsor." He sang in these productions for several years, meanwhile continuing his studies.

Evan decided to take time off and go to Europe to perfect his studies, so he left for eight months in Germany and London in the summer of 1929, and returned to the U. S. after a grand period of study and sight-seeing, wondering what would be the next step in his career.

To his amazement, upon his return, he received a letter from the president of a large network, asking him to come for an audition. Evan was very much puzzled at the request, for hitherto he had had no interest in radio, nor endeavored in any way to have an audition at the microphone. Upon his arrival in the president's office, he inquired, "How did you happen to think of me?" As an answer, the executive shoved some three hundred letters across his desk. Upon perusal, Evan discovered they had all been written by friends in Dallas, who had heard he was in New York, and wanted to hear him on the air. Evan was pleased, but embarrassed. He sang for the network, and received his first job on the air.

In January, 1930, Evan Evans made his debut over CBS on a program which was on the air for a year, and was his real send-off in radio. Since then he has appeared steadily on many commercial and sustaining programs. His most thrilling broadcast was the international broadcast to England, when he sang the Toreador song, and knew that his father and mother were listening, some 3,500 miles away. During that time he has continued his studies, because Evan believes that it isn't the breaks of fortune, but good consistent work that enables you to go places and do things.

He is of a reserved appearance. His brown hair is streaked with grey around the temples, lending a distinguished appearance to a youthful face.

The Evans have a small circle of friends, do not attend many parties among the professional crowd, and enjoy books, good music, good plays, and as much outdoor life as possible.

manded. Evan did not know a soul in the United States, so going to the wild west was quite an experience. He warmed up to the American people, and has grown to look upon Dallas, rather than London, as his home town.

Dallas taught him a number of things. It taught him to care for fried chicken (southern style) instead of cold mutton (British style). He was fascinated by the darkies' spirituals, sung while they worked with cotton bales. That

The Showmanship School

YOU GO to West Point to be a soldier; you go to Annapolis to be a sailor—but if you ever went to Ziegfeld, you can be a radio star.

I have often been asked what it was about the late Mr. Ziegfeld that stamped its indelible impress upon all those of us who had the good fortune to be associated with the master showman.

My memory of the early days of radio is very vivid. I recall how the producers of Broadway shrugged their collective shoulders at this infant's first faint cries. Even Mr. Ziegfeld himself gave it scant thought. He and the rest were too engrossed with the manner in which the talking pictures were exacting their heavy toll from the box offices of the legitimate theaters.

But even then under the banner of the immortal Ziegfeld were great stars, those who were to be great stars, and some who were never destined for the heights of radio. Glance through the roster of the favorites of the air, and you will find it remarkable how many of their number were graduates of the Ziegfeld school of showmanship. It is that which I have been asked so often—what was that elusive quality the master showman possessed which he seemed able to impart to those lucky enough to have received their education in his hard school?

And my answer is that I do not know. I only knew that of all the current outstanding stars of the air, every single name that comes to mind is a name that once adorned a Ziegfeld program.

For after radio had survived its precarious infancy, it came into its own unheralded. Although we of the theater were not then conscious of its power, and the ballyhoo which has always been attendant upon the entertainment field did not sound its trumpet for radio along Broadway, it did cast a shadow which did eventually alter the course of life along the great white way.

For from the rank and file of the artists, many found fame and fortune. Others went down into oblivion.

I suppose we all really like to talk about ourselves so I will commence with my own case, which is one in fied, alone of all the big producers, became keenly alive to the possibilities of the industry, and into it he injected much of the color that accounted for its rapid rise from a fad to a great institution.

Several years ago a smiling, blond haired young man brought an aggregation of musicians from his native Oregon. The style in which he transformed the hard and cacophonous jazz melodies of the post-war era caught the ear of Ziegfeld, who engaged him at once.

The orchestra became one of the big features of "Kid Boots" which starred Mary Eaton and Eddie Cantor, and under the Ziegfeld banner the orchestra achieved tremendous success. Later in the "Follies of 1926," in which I played, I met the smiling, blond haired young man, and today he is my husband, George Olsen.

I have mentioned Eddie Cantor. There is a Ziegfeld protege who made good in radio in a big way. Before his radio debut, his entire theatrical career was spent for I have never claimed to be an author.

I think it is a strange thing, the manner in which the master showman even now posthumously directs the greatest of our radio entertainment. In his later years, Ziegfeld, and actresses were subjected played a large part in their subsequent radio successes. For you will note that all the Ziegfeld graduates whom you hear over the air have a polish and finesse which can be traced to the great showman. Ziegfeld was always exact, and he demanded that from those who worked for him.

And in radio, above all other forms of entertainment, exactness is essential.

On the stage, the miscue, the slip up in a line of dialogue, or even a lackadaisical performance due, perhaps, to indisposition, might be excused and covered up to an extent. And there is always another performance of the same show tomorrow night. But each radio broadcast is a pre-point. Radio has not been unkind to me. It has been an exacting master, and its demands are many. Like an ogre, it constantly devours the best of material—yet I have come to love it.

We who formerly were of the stage are familiar with that strange tension and suspense which hovers about an opening night. And each appearance before the microphone is another opening night. Some believe that a veteran radio artist loses much of that tensility, but personally I have not found that to be true. The unknown something which emanates from the sending end of a microphone is as thrilling to me as the dinner coated audience of a typical Broadway opening.

But I have wandered a trifle from what I had started to say. After all, you must bear with me, under the aegis of Ziegfeld. And Cantor possesses to a marked degree that magic spirit of showmanship with which Ziegfeld seemed to imbue all his disciples.

Ruth Etting is another graduate of the great school who has brought her vast talent to the airwaves. Before her engagement by Ziegfeld, she found the path to fame rough and shoddy, but Ziegfeld's acute sense of what the public wanted told him at once that in her poignant voice was a gold mine. After having appeared in two or three Ziegfeld productions, Ruth made her appearance on the airwaves, and her success eclipsed by far that which she had achieved on the stage.

JACK PEARL is a case in point. Pearl was a featured comedian in many Broadway productions, but it was not until after he had become associated with Ziegfeld, and absorbed some of that magic which the master showman imparted to his stars, that he rose to fame on the air.

Paul Whiteman has felt the touch of that Ziegfeld magic.

Fannie Brice is another. The foremost American comedienne who is becoming more and more popular through the medium of the radio can trace her rise directly to the training which she experienced at the hands of Ziegfeld.

I do not believe anyone could tell you the secret of the manner in which Ziegfeld picked his winners. It is legend of the stage that his judgment of ability was so uncanny that it has never before nor since been matched. Those who enjoyed the privilege of having been associated with him will tell you freely that his ability to bring out talent in an individual was peerless.

My own opinion is that the rigid teaching of exactness and theatrical psychology to which all of Ziegfeld's actors miere and a closing; each turn you do before the sensitive and critical microphone is heard by thousands of critical listeners.

I remember distinctly the instance of one of the great prima-donnas of musical comedy. Her stage activities had extended over a period of more than twenty years, and it was her boast that she would never grow old—not so long as she was able to sing. Directly after an appearance in a successful Broadway musical show, she appeared as a guest artist on a radio program.

The next day she knew that at last she had grown old. The highly sensitized microphone had brought out all the little flaws and shortcomings in her voice—flaws and shortcomings which the resonant sounding boards of the theater had kindly mellowed and muffled.

AND that is what I mean when I stress the attention to the little things which becomes second nature to one who has worked under the banner of Florenz Ziegfeld.

In radio, because of the commercial aspect of the various programs, each one must be timed to the exact second. The show must go on at a certain set time, and each second must be accounted for until the last musical note designates the finish. More care must, of course, be exercised with orchestral and vocal music on the radio than on the stage, because the radio audience uses only its sense of hearing, which, naturally, becomes more acute to the detection of the slightest flaw than when the eye is distracted as on the stage.

And so, despite the fact that the Ziegfeld stars today do not perform in a setting of the brilliance with which the master cloaked their efforts, his spirit creates about them an aura of color, and their successes stand as monuments to the greatest producer of all time.

And I do not believe radio will ever realize fully the vast debt it owes to Mr. Ziegfeld, although those of us who had the good fortune to have been associated with him will never forget ours.

And for that matter, while I have the opportunity here, I am going to presume upon the understanding and kindness of my readers to pay just one more tribute to that eminent man we all loved so well. For it is not radio alone which is indebted to Florenz Ziegfeld for the legacy he left to radio—the whole world might fittingly join. For every man and woman and girl who ever was associated with Mr. Ziegfeld benefitted from that association.

I know that there is not one person who ever worked under the great showman who will not echo my words.

DEAR Voice of Experience: I have a four-year old daughter who is as willful and stubborn as she can possibly be. The only way that I can make her obey is by spanking her and occasionally by threatening a whipping. When I do spank her she will yell loudly enough to notify the entire neighborhood of what is going on.

But here is a peculiar angle to my problem. We are living in an apartment house and just across the hall from us lives an old maid. Two weeks ago when I was threatening to spank my daughter, even before I had laid a hand on her, she yelled to the high heavens and my spinster neighbor ran out in the hall and yelled at the top of her voice for me to stop treating my child like an animal or she would have the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children on my neck. I was so stunned that I did not go on with the whipping and my daughter was keen enough to recognize a point of vantage which she had gained, so that now all I need to do is to threaten to whip her and she sets up a howl which, of course, I cannot stand for, so instead of whipping her I have to put my hand over her mouth and promise this, that and the other thing to keep peace.

I realize that if I allow this to go on my little daughter will get the upper hand of me, so I am appealing to you to know just what to do and whether or not this woman can carry out her threat against me which has me very much worried.

AN ANXIOUS MOTHER

ANSWER: Little mother, you have reason to sign yourself "Anxious Mother," because you are very much mistaken when you say that you are fearful that your little daughter will get the upper hand of you. She already has it. She's the boss, and she knows it.

All children, whether we realize it or not, recognize their own inferiorities as they compare themselves with the adults in their immediate family. Children are self-centered enough to want their way and to want attention, and it does not take them long to find out just what manner of means to use in order to attain their ends.

Your little daughter has learned to put on a pretty good act. And now she's not satisfied to have just you for an audience, she wants to attract the attention of the entire neighborhood. To your daughter she is the hub around which her little world revolves and already she is trying to extend the length of the spokes in the wheel.

There is no question but what there is some justice in the interference of the woman across the hall, not that she has a right to dictate to you as to how you shall discipline your child, but if your little daughter is, as you say, howling to the high heavens, naturally friend daughter is disturbing the peace and if these howls became chronic there is no question in my mind but what suit could be started by any of these neighbors against you and your family for "disturbance of the peace." As to her ability, however, to bring the wrath of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children upon you, that is another matter, and unless she could show actually that you were being brutal to the child there is absolutely nothing that she could do or that the Society could do.

My chief concern is not in the entertainment value for the neighborhood of your daughter's yowls, but of what you are doing to that daughter and what you are allowing that daughter to do to herself and your family through the superior position that you are allowing her to assume on the family tree.

In my series of pamphlets, (which are now available), I have one monograph on the subject "The Pampered Child," and another on "The Nervous Child," both of which would be quite valuable for you to study and practical for you to put to use in the handling of this young daughter of yours. It may surprise you and others, but I am prepared to prove the following statement: Practically none of the so-called nervous children have anything wrong with their nerves. I believe that you and many other parents are going to find in these brochures some mighty valuable hints in the matter of rearing and disciplining your children. I suggest that if you want one or both of these you send me a three-cent stamp for either one, or two three-cent stamps for both and we will be glad to mail them to you.

DEAR VOICE OF EXPERIENCE: I missed your broadcasting very much and hope you have had a wonderful vacation. Please answer my problem: My husband is in the Lina State Hospital for the Insane and I find it very hard to keep myself and daughter, whom I have looked after and kept in school, as she is not old enough yet to quit.

I have been told I am entitled to State compensation since my husband was my only support. He was first at the Massillon Hospital, but was released and later taken back and transferred to Lina, where he has been for the past five years.

It is possible for me to get compensation or can a woman in my position get a divorce? Please answer in the Guide.

JANE

ANSWER: First, let me commiserate you over your present condition and also for being married to a man who is virtually dead to you even though still alive.

It is impossible for me to have at my fingertips, the laws of every one of the forty-eight states concerning the many problems of legal bearing which are sent to me. My advice to you, therefore, would be that you get in touch by letter with the Legal Aid Society, Cleveland, Ohio, and present the same problem to them that you did to me, and I am sure that they will be in a position to advise you.

I would ask you to see a local attorney, but from the content of your letter, I can readily realize that you have not the fee necessary to consult a lawyer. However, I am sure that you can rely implicitly upon the advice that you receive from the Legal Aid Society. I hope that the advice will prove of a practical nature for you.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE: I do not know if this letter will reach you unless I can borrow the price of a stamp. I am nineteen, and have tried to get in radio broadcasting, but so far had no luck. I had an audition in two radio schools, but, unfortunately, I have no money to enroll. One of them sent me a letter a few days after the audition and here's a part of it: "You have nice radio quality, can do boy's parts, but you need a great deal of training." I have also asked for an audition on several stations, but generally they say I can't get an audition unless I have had some experience.

I am still hopeful, although I am losing confidence every day. Mother says keep trying, but father doesn't think I'll ever amount to anything. He says you have to have a drag to get into radio, but I don't agree with him.

Please advise me as early as you can in the RADIO GUIDE. I will be awaiting your reply.

STANLEY

ANSWER: There is no question, Stanley, but what your father is right in regard to some radio stations. As in any other activity, so in broadcasting, there are some studios where "pull" is necessary in order to get on, even for sustaining. Fortunately, however, this is not true on all stations, for many penniless young men and young women have, through sheer merit, worked their way up from independent stations to the networks.

You're only nineteen, you're young, you have ambition and just because you have not been able to make the grade as yet, doesn't imply that you have reached the quitting point. You are fortunate in having a mother to inspire you and to encourage you not to quit. I know a number of artists that have tried for years before they received recognition even on local stations, who number themselves among the big names today in radio.

My suggestion is to find something to keep you active, but not lose sight either of your ambition or your zeal for broadcasting, and somehow, somehow an avenue may open up for you when least expected. I give you my best wishes for success.

Dear Voice of Experience: I have been following up your page in the RADIO GUIDE and feel certain that you can advise me on a problem that confronts me now.

I have been going with a young fellow for almost two years and am quite sure that we love each other. This fellow is quite daring, what I mean by that is, he will take almost any kind of dare, without consideration of the consequences.

A few nights ago he was dared to do a thing which he considered trivial but he was caught and put under arrest. He was given a short term in jail. There was quite a piece in the paper and since we live in a small town, the papers and people exaggerate anything that happens.

Now my father thinks if I continue to be friends with him, it will ruin my reputation, but I just seem to feel that we love each other too much to let anything matter.

Voice of Experience, please help me to solve this problem, as your decision means much to me.

BUNNY

ANSWER: I can understand your father's attitude Bunny, in wanting to shield you from the malicious gossips who are ready even to pull to pieces the character of the friends of those who get themselves into trouble. So, if I were you, I would not feel unkindly toward my Dad.

On the other hand, many a boy by his foolhardiness has gotten himself into the same kind of mess that your friend now finds himself in. Not a malicious criminal at heart, just a mischievous youngster. Frequently friends turn their backs on a chap after his first offense, with the result that many of our boys who were not criminally inclined, after one sentence in jail, find themselves shut off from former loved ones, and figure that there is no use to try a comeback and eventually become habitual criminals.

Again, the sweetheart or wife of this type of a young fellow is many times his only anchor, and the love and devotion of this one person has saved them from a criminal career after the first offense has been paid for by imprisonment.

Do you not think it would be advisable, therefore, for you in some way to let this boy know that even though others have lost faith, that you still believe, though others may shun, that your friendship is still his? That when his debt to Society is paid there will be at least one who will welcome him upon his return to freedom? I am of the opinion that if you have rightly adjudged the boy's character, it may be that you will become the means of saving him from a criminal career, and believe that you will not only be justified in such an attitude, but if the boy is worthy of you, your fidelity and your faith may become the bottom rungs of the ladder which he can later use for climbing to success. If he is the kind of a fellow he should be, he will in turn take you up that ladder with him. I sincerely hope that he is.

DEAR VOICE OF EXPERIENCE: Does it pay to be good? You may have thousands of letters similar to mine and I know the ultimate answer is "Yes, it pays," but may I add, "not financially."

There may be a higher power which finally rights wrongs, but what good will that do to one who insisted upon remaining "a good girl"?

I am in your line—radio. I have work which is novel and until two years ago was not on the air. I introduced it and six stations copied it immediately, just as they copied your program (I was even broadcasting from your first Eastern station at the time you commenced). The same stations which have copied your act have copied mine. I was to go on a network—until I said, "No."

Having a cold and placid nature, I did not respond to the affectionate disposition of a certain executive. My network program was to begin next month. I gave up other plans to perfect myself. I gave up other jobs; I made contacts to follow up my radio program and now, today, I am informed that my idea has been adopted, and that they are planning to use in my stead one of my six imitators. I wrote the program, I planned the continuity, the ideas being used are all mine—just someone substituted instead of me.

The trouble is I have no proof that these programs are mine, for they had to remain in the hands of the agency whose word is as good as mine.

GOOD GIRL

ANSWER: There is some similarity between this letter and the one written from Chicago by Stanley, so it seems that Chicago is not the only place where a kind of pull is necessary in order to get on. Probably if you had given me your name and address (and I never divulge names to anyone), I would have recognized you for I know most of the artists, at least by name, who broadcast from the first Eastern station which presented my work.

Be that as it may, despite the fact that it does not seem to pay, I congratulate you upon having maintained your standards. Fortunately, there is in radio, as in other fields, a prevailing spirit of fair play. There is also a final court to which problems such as yours may be submitted for adjudication.

I would get affidavits from friends who had heard my program over the air and append these to the continuity which you say you originated, showing the dates when that continuity was offered by way of the air. I would check up and find the later dates when imitators began to spring up. With this data, I would also send a full and complete statement covering the whole history of the case to the Federal Radio Commission, and I can assure you that if your agency has connived to transfer your material to another, after you have established precedence on the air, the Federal Radio Commission will investigate that agency quite thoroughly.

PLUMS and PRUNES

By Evans Plummer

BASEBALL has broken into another rash over radio. You recall, two years ago, when the major league club owners all but about threw the broadcasting booths off the top of their grandstands. In most cities, the trouble was ironed out.

The Chicago American and National League clubs, the White Sox and Cubs, didn't mind radio a bit. As a result, Chicago baseball became probably the most radio glorified in the country. This year five stations fill their afternoons with strikes and balls.

But several cities had different ideas. Cleveland made it tough for radio. Philadelphia put the clamps on. In New York, only the World's Series is etherized. And Cincinnati signed a pact giving the mike rights to WFBE, affiliated with a newspaper.

On last Friday, September 1, with less than 1,000 paid gate, Sidney Weil, president of the Cincinnati Reds, refused to allow broadcasts of the Cubs game with his team in Cincinnati except by WFBE. He would not allow ticker-tape service to WBBM, WGN and WMAQ, Chicago, which were carrying the game for sponsors.

After a petition from WBBM, he declared Chicago stations could have the tape reports providing power was reduced so that their broadcasts would not carry for more than 100 miles from Chicago. WMAQ and WGN complied. WBBM did not. Its officials attempted to lease a 'phone wire from Cincinnati and rebroadcast the game from WFBE's description, but the Cincinnati telephone company refused the permit. In desperation, WBBM rebuilt the game from Western Union telegrams of inning-by-inning flashes from a man in the Reds park.

From our vantage point the affair is quite silly. In the first place, the Reds have a very poor team. In the second, WFBE cannot be heard very far. In other words, who cares? Or is Mr. Weil trying to cover up his team's weakness?

At that, Chicago would have a better afternoon radio service if the broadcasting were limited to two, or at the most, three stations. We are inclined to boo the whole business.

Dr. Frank Vizetelly, eminent lexicographer, has been listening to the radio. Or so it would seem. The observation is made because we are in receipt of his new book, "How to Speak English Effectively." All announcers should give it a look. In fact, the eminent doctor developed his text from instructions delivered to the members of the announcing staff of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Still, we DO hope everyone doesn't start talking like announcers.

Plums and—

PRUNES to the two-minute break in the Chicago (and, we understand, points south and west) outlet's rendition of the Jolson-Whitman program last Thursday, August 31. For such boastful-of-efficiency organizations, one would be led to believe that the networks would have duplicate equipment available for just such emergencies. And while we are at it, we wonder just how much time the big chain sponsors lose through sloppy local station operators and "one-minute" announcements often placed ahead and after their programs by the local stations?

Friday, September 1, was a good radio night. In fact, Friday is usually a most plumful evening. First of all, we ducked the very good competing "Let's Listen to Harris" and didn't, just to be sure to miss none of the Fred Allen-Portland Hoffa-Roy Atwell antics with music by Phil Ducey and the excellent Ferde Grofe. Gags, situations, music and commercial win plums. The low spot was, in our estimation, a rather weak characterization of Mae West. We've heard much better.

Followed the loose hut fast and always laughable Phil Baker ham revue. Our biggest stitch in the side was when Bottle interrupted the impersonation of Durante-Pitts doing "Romeo and Juliet" with the remark. "Pardon me sir, but the garbage man's here," to which Baker cracked, "Tell him to wait. We'll be through with the script in ten minutes." Many plums to Armour for having the good sense to permit their comedian to kid the show.

First Nighter came on next with "The Main Attraction" during a melodramatic moment of which dare-devil June Meredith fell too far for her man and paralyzed her optic nerves, etcetera. Are we hasty in presuming that the radio audience needs better scripts? First Nighter has a good cast; splendid direction—but those scripts! Prunes. Please, Mr. Sponsor, make the plots a little thicker.

For a rollicking and friendly program, Linn and Abner supply just what you need in their Friday night contribution. Their "Sociable" is just that, and the music (Sept. 1) of the Maple City Four and the Gaylord Trio was very easy to take.

Have you been doing any listening Sunday afternoons? No? Perhaps the out-of-doors has been too stiff competition, but if you, like we did, will spare a few minutes next Sunday to catch the Vee and Johnny hill at 3:45 p. m. CDT (NBC stations), you'll not regret it. Sorry, Vee and Johnny, that these plums have been so late in arriving, but take a crate now.

Why hasn't someone dramatized "The Nebbs" cartoon for the radio? At the risk of being tagged a "log-roller" by radio comedians and the like, we'd like to put it on the record that of all the strips tried (some of which have been very successful), it is our opinion that Sol Hess's Nebbs family has the greatest chance of being a world-beater.

What's What

MYRT AND MARGE will definitely return to the air late in September. The Jean Paul (freelance mikenam) Kings will be tuning in children's programs in February. Hal Totten set a new chin marathon on a recent Thursday when he described 112 innings of ball. Little Jackie Heller has our best wishes upon his scheduled second altar attempt, this time with Natl Greeley. Wonder what Irma Glen's favorite roulette number is? Irene Wicker, back from N. Y., rested last week-end in the north woods with Irma Phillips and awaits a call for Paramount screen test for "Alice in Wonderland." Phil Baker has been renewed by Armour for another thirteen weeks beginning September 22. NBC has signed Tony Caboch (now at WLW) and expect to use him to bait Budweiser.

And Happy Jack Turner is deserting Cbi-NBC October 1 for WHAS, Louisville, and a local commercial that pays—well, more than NBC did. Maybe Pat Kennedy will have to desert the chain mike likewise to prove his worth.

Mary Steele and hubby Bob (NBC voice) Brown are vacationing, but Bob won't return to enbee-sea. He cut one of the red tapes, or something. Phillips Lord, who has occupied the World's Fair Dance Ship (formerly tenanted by Tex Guinan's hotcha pirates), with his Seth Parker troupe, will be made a lieutenant commander in the Maine naval reserve by Governor Brand on September 25, Maine Day at the fair. This puts Lord on a par with Vallee, permitting him even to use a megaphone in hailing ships. Margie Damerel, who busted an arm falling into a fireplace on the coast, reports that she was not patting her back, and that at present she is busy tending to her knitting. and I'm Hawthorth, the alluring Jack Arnold of M&M, has returned to Chicago, greeting us with the crack, "Wife Jean was shocked beyond words to learn in your column that she was to become a mother. Although her first inclination was either to begin hemstitching small squares of cloth or to sock you in the eye, she decided merely to correct you." Well, she otta know.

Frau GRIEG and SINDING

By Carleton Smith

NORWAY is the land of Grieg. You have seen it and felt it and known it from his music, and so it is that you go to his home as a pilgrim.

Trollhøgen (the hill of the gnomes) is a few miles up in the heights above Bergen. There the unaflected man, the Northland's greatest musical genius, lived and wrote. Near the old frame house—simple as it is, with its inspiring vistas of tree and water—you feel close to the spirit of his music.

The morning I was there, a howling wind full of rain shrouded the place in misty wistfulness. The little pavillion down the hill by the water's edge, where he did much of his writing, looked deserted, lonely. The mood was sombre. The granite slab that covered his ashes was planted firmly in the side of the hill he had trod so often, and the plainly carved "Edvard Grieg" impressed itself in my memory. Few composers have so simple or so fitting and powerful an epitaph.

A few days later, Frau Nina Grieg, his widow, was to tell me how like him it was. "He would have no show, no display," she said. "And they have changed our house inside, fixed it up a little. Grieg was more simple—He would go out to take a walk and then come there with a melody and write it down. He thought music was melody."

I met this charming, white-haired

CHRISTIAN SINDING AND CARLETON SMITH
"... Sinding likes to walk amid the trees ..."

lady—87 years young—at Voss (Knut Rockne's birthplace) in the midst of the mountains. She surprised me by her interest in music in America, her discourse on contemporary composition and the future of music. She spoke fondly of Percy Grainger, who knew and studied with Grieg.

And so modestly she said when I left her, "Now I believe his music will go on. It will live. For a time I wasn't sure."

Christian Sinding

ANOTHER experience to be treasured was an afternoon in Oslo with Christian Sinding, Norway's greatest living composer. That affable old gentleman tells you of his visit to America and amusing tales of his teaching at the Eastman School in Rochester. He recalls how he sat in the Biltmore Hotel in New York in the early days of radio, and heard his own "Rustle of Spring" come out of a box. "My wife and I were like country people. We could not understand at first."

It was an even greater thrill, he says, than when he saw his first film in Paris. "I was excited by the railway train and I thought it would come and hit me." He says, "The radio has improved like the cinema, and now everything comes out of our box. We can even hear your Metropolitan on winter evenings."

From his honorary residence in Wergeland's Grotto—a national shrine adjoining the Royal Palace—Sinding likes to walk among the surrounding trees. You can see him taking out the little music book that is always in his pocket, and writing in it. Sometimes, his wife told me, she found his sitting up in bed during the early hours of the morning, writing out a tune that had come to him, and which he would harmonize the next day. "But I write a great many notes that I can never use. I must burn them," he said with a shrug of his shoulders.

An Idea

SINDING is promoting in Norway a campaign to teach every child to read music. He contends that public education should enable every student to understand the staffs and symbols of musical writing, the same as he understands the language of poetry or of the newspaper.

And he is correct. When you have read music before you hear it, and then after an inspired hearing you go back and read it again, it becomes a part of you. It is yours. It means something to you other than a pleasant sound, and you have a basis for more reasoned judgment.

Americans should consider this possibility. We think we have no time for such activities. But we would enjoy the symphonies, the concerts, and our radio much more fully. Public libraries furnish all scores today, and many of them are seldom used.

Think what a treasure-house would be opened to our youth and to ourselves if we could but read the language of music. It is most difficult, if not impossible, to understand a language you cannot read, notwithstanding that that language is universal in its appeal.

FREE The Souvenir Supreme (The Library Edition of the Official Century of Progress Book)

- This blue linen-covered library edition, with its silver imprint, is yours for a year's subscription to Radio Guide, the National Radio Weekly, at a cost of $2.00.
There are 160 pages and 240 pictures that tell the complete story of Chicago and its second World's Fair.
This handsomely bound One Dollar book contains a pictorial history of the city since the days of Father Marquette, through the days of Fort Dearborn, the Great Fire, and until today.
The World's Fair is shown in all its glory. Stories by foreign consuls and commissioners tell why the Fair is "International." Today's Chicago is shown in entirety.
There are views of the parks, churches, theaters, hotels, railroad depots and of the city's leading industries.
The book is FREE with a one year subscription to Radio Guide.

This book retails at $1.00. A copy will be sent prepaid to you at this price.

BOYS Spending Money for YOU!

Dear Boys: School is about to open. There are, no doubt, a number of things you would like to have for that time, but you do not like to ask mother or dad for the money. Don't! Earn the money. It can be done in a few hours each week by selling Radio Guide in your own neighborhood. Send your name and address in at once. Be the first boy in your neighborhood to sell. Remember—the first boy makes the profit.

All-American Band!

Charleston, W. Va.

Dear V. O. L.:
O. K. youse guys and youse gals. Let's get together and start smething new. I have in mind an All-American orchestra. Why can't we all send into V. O. L. our own version of the most talented maestros and musicians, combining all of them in what might be called the All-American dance band?

I feel that an All American orchestra is possible to fit together and that is exactly what I am about to introduce to you all. I hope that other listeners will form their own version of this All American band and send it in to V. O. L., too. Of course I know right now that some of the listeners will not agree with my choice but here goes anyway. Are you listenin'?

What, No Etting!

Mankato, Minnesota

Dear V. O. L.:
RADIO GUIDE of June 18 carried a complaint from Hirst headed "What, no Etting?" and I want to get something of my mind now. First we lost the Boswells, then Ruth Etting. Believe it was the general opinion that when Chesterfield had these two with Street Singer Tracy that they had the best balanced program on the air.

Speaking of the Boswell Sisters, radio listeners owe them much. They brought to us a style of song that seemed to fill a vacant space in air entertainment. Many other groups and trios have subsequently taken it up but none of them can click like this bunch. Connie stands almost alone in her class; surely no radio artist sings more sweetly than she. Listen to her three or four times and one just has to camp on her trail.

From the large number of Boswell admirers that I've come to know in the few States that I make I must believe that in the coast to coast audience there are literally millions of them. Certain it is that the sponsor who puts these girls on for the coming radio season will make many lasting friends.

For Miss O'Dair

Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Editor:
I haven't been reading RADIO GUIDE very long but I think it is a swell paper. Radio is my hobby and I was glad to find a paper that would give me such good articles on my favorite stars and programs as your paper does. I think George E. Shumard, Jr., is wrong. A person who listened to orchestra music on the radio much could certainly distinguish the orchestras with such distinctive ways of playing as Guy Lombardo, Rudy Vallee, Wayne King, Ben Bernie and Fred Waring. Two others I think are very easy to distinguish are George Hall and Frank Westphal.

To Miss Helen O'Dair of Boston: Your mistake; Lanny Ross had his tonsils removed several months ago. I don't know the exact date but I know the last time he missed singing on the Showboat program that was the reason. Personally I like Lanny Ross best of all radio singers. I think he has a grand voice. But then, of course, everynne has a right to his own opinion. Thanks for your V. O. L. page. It gives radio listeners a good opportunity to air their opinions.

V. S.

Who Is Helen O'Dair?

North Platte, Nebraska

Dear V. O. L.:
I've read RADIO GUIDE for quite a while. Never, however, have I seen such a display of ignorance as in the letter written by Helen O'Dair, panning Lanny Ross. Who does this Helen O'Dair think she is anyway? Oh well, what's her opinion against a millinn others?

Maybe Lanny isn't perfect. Well, who is? Maybe his voice hasn't any depth. If it's depth she wants why not listen to Conrad's deep river voice. I wish she'd drawn herself in it only I don't think Conrad would like that. I suppose she likes these yodelers with voices that would scare even the goats in the Swiss Alps. She should go to the Alps. I've heard that goats and huts go good together.

If anyone doesn't like Lanny or the rest of the Showboat troupe, I wish they would write me about it. Then I wouldn't have to confine my answer to 200 words.

Josephine Ranny

A Hanshaw Fan

Daytona Beach, Florida

Dear V. O. L.:
I have been secretly boiling over with the statement in a recent issue signed "Radio Bug" from Greenwich, Conn., and also note that "Ann" from Easton, Pa., has taken exception to the same letter, so I can stand it no longer.

How in the world "Radio Bug" can say that my Annette Hanshaw is the worst female singer along with Rudy as the worst male singer I can't understand unless he or she is just kidding and reversing the decision, because to my mind and long musical training, Annette's singing and rich voice is the most wonderful of that type on the air at this time, that I have heard. Other contraltos may have had more musical training and I know they have because Annette does not read music. I have heard, but she has them all beat with just her natural voice.

Florida Fan

Bernie Cummins

Lincoln, Illinois

Dear V. O. L.:
I don't see why there isn't more said about Bernie Cummins' great hand. I think he has the best band on the air. How about putting Bernie's picture in RADIO GUIDE soon? I think Guy Lombardo is terrible. He plays the same rhythm all the time. Jan Garber is a little better, but not much. Where is Joe Sanders now? He has a fine orchestra. I don't see how anybody can put Wayne King way down in the cellar with Guy Lombardo. Wayne King has rhythm plus. He has variety, too, and Lombardo surely doesn't have that. I still say Cummins has them all beat and RADIO GUIDE is A Number One, too.

M. B. B.

A Jones Fan

Delanco, New Jersey

Dear Voice:
I like your paper, chiefly because it can hand it out and if you print this I'll know you can take it, too. In Bandstand and Baton, July 31, you stated "although Isham Jones has left his Atlantic City spot, he is still fed to CBS listeners several times weekly." I waited until August 5, then after checking up on the Jones' broadcasts, wrote you that he had not lost his spot there. Since then I have patiently (?) waited for your correction. What's wrong? Don't you acknowledge your mistakes? Please correct this.

In addition to that error, he is not "fed" to listeners. The best orchestra on the air does not have to be "fed." They are anxiously waited for and I most certainly mean Isham Jones. A word to G. H. Casa Loma arrangements are neither particularly advanced nor difficult. Please notice that every fast number he plays is an exact copy of the Jones' arrangement. Oh yes, G. H., don't you just love Kenny Sargeant's sweet soprano? One more thing: Isham Jones, not Glen Gray, introduced "Blue Prelude."

Howard Myers

Likes Jolson

Haulton, Maine

Dear Editor:
I read RADIO GUIDE regularly and enjoy every feature of it. I like to feel that I know the radio stars and not their voice alone. RADIO GUIDE certainly does get one acquainted with them; the articles in your paper are so friendly and intimate, I wouldn't miss them for anything. I do think some of the criticisms are unfair though. In the Plums and Prunes section the week of August 13-19 Evans Plummer stated that Al Jolson rated only a prime.

Bernie and Wynn

Norwich, New York

Dear V. O. L.:
Ran across a RADIO GUIDE in which Ben Bernie was shown as Jazz King. I have nothing to say about his orchestra. It may be the finest in the world but his talk is the silliest I have ever listened to. I tune him out every time he comes on. He and Ed Wynn are on a par, though along different lines. They are both asses and it is too bad to pay so much for such poor stuff over the radio. Ed Wynn is offensive. I think such as Bernie and Wynn are insulting the intelligence of the radio audience when they think people will listen to or can enjoy programs such as they offer.

Orchestra Notes

Waterbury, Connecticut

Dear V. O. L.:
Here are a few notes about what famous orchestras are doing: Buddy Harrod has just finished a tour of Connecticut. Jacques Renard is also playing one-night stands besides his regular broadcasts. Don Bestor besides his band into our state for a hallorom engagement at So. Norwalk. Larry Funk drew the largest crowd in three years at our premier ballroom recently. The Casa Loma is Connecticut's favorite band. They play at many Yale affairs besides appearing in other parts of the State. Teddy Black's band has disbanded. His drummer is now playing with Larry Funk and his cornet player is with Lombardo. Jack Pettis is now at the Ritz Carlton in Atlantic City and can be heard over WPG. Dick Fiddler has extended his engagement at Lotus Gardens and will not tour until late. Emerson Gill who played at Lotus Gardens before Fiddler, made his first visit to Connecticut recently. He is now doing ballroom work.

One For Kemp

Stonchurst, Penn.

Dear V. O. L.:
Pardon me while I go into raptures about Hal Kemp. In my opinion he has the best band on these United States. His vocalists also deserve a big hand. Why don't you run a story and let's have some pictures of Hal and his band. I agree with Ed Hall when he says that Kemp should have some more publicity. There are lots of people who've never even heard of him. Ray Noble also has a swell band—wish he'd come to America. And Glen Gray and Jimmie Grier. I think your magazine's swell. I've been reading it for months. But let's hear about Hal Kemp.

And Now Joe Sanders

Louisville, Kentucky

Dear V. O. L.:
It does my heart good to read all the letters about Joe Sanders. I have no right to say that the Night Hawks are the best band on the air, but in my opinion they rate A No. 1. After all, hasn't the name Coon-Sanders and then Joe Sanders stood the stiffest test of all? That of time. Back in the early twenties when radio was too much of a novelty to be a nuisance Joe and Connie started a successful and lasting campaign against sleep. Joe has nimble fingers on the keyboard, natural rhythm and a style no one dares copy. But what if someone did? He could never go over like the original. If a chain picks him up next season, I sincerely believe it will have no regrets, but a host of satisfied tuner-inners. How about RADIO GUIDE giving us a little news of Joe Sanders soon?

ALONG the AIRIALTO + + +

With Martin Lewis

EVER since Fay Webb took Horace Greeley's advice (or perhaps it was on the advice of someone else) and went west, rumors have been circulating to the effect that Rudy of the Vallee's would hitch up with his blonde vocalist, Alice Faye, after his divorce from the Wehls.

However, this head scribe is a bit skeptical about it all, and only because of those regular long distance calls that Rudy makes to Santa Monica, California, where resides the estranged Fay.

Could he have been crooning "Love Come Back to Me" when he held the receiver in his hand ninety-seven minutes during one of these calls, one midnight last month? How's about it, Rudy? Your public wants to know and I'll tell them if you'll tell me.

WHY do NBC announcers dislike getting assignments to do their stuff atop the snooty Waldorf Astoria hotel roof, where Jack Denny makes the music? You can't answer it, hey? Well, I'll tell you.

This high-hat hotel is the only hostelry in New York that charges the announcers who plug their hotel over the air, regular menu prices, such as thirty cents for a cup of coffee (you can imagine the rest) besides the cover charge of two dollars per person. If you read this W. W., how about hurling some of your scallions at the management?

Recently it was Jimmy Wallington's turn to do the spiling from the Starlight roof. After the broadcast, Jimmy felt like indulging in some 3.2 but didn't feel like paying a cover charge for the privilege, for which we can't blame him. Jack Denny suggested that Wallington sit down, satisfy his thirst and sign his name to the check. "Nothing doing," said Jimmy, whereupon Paul Small, Denny's vocalist, dared Jimmy to go down to the drug store, purchase the brew and bring it up to the roof.

No sooner dared than done. Down the elevator went Jimmy, returning in a few minutes with three bottles tucked under his arm, and they all drank happily after, of course, without paying the cover charge.

Short Shots

BOB TAPLINGER'S "Meet the Artist" interviews will return to CBS around the end of September. . . . Abe Lyman, the lanky maestro, will soon be doing a Sunday afternoon CBS commercial. . . . Arthur Pryor, Jr., son of the famous military band leader, will direct the "March of Time" programs when those news dramatizations are brought back to CBS next month. Pryor directed the original "March of Time" series three years ago. . . . Irene Beasley, the "long, tall girl from Dixie," who used to sing on lots of CBS programs a while back, has been seen around those studios of late and may land a commercial or so on that web soon. . . . I hope so, because this southern lass deserves a good break and she has the stuff. . . . Although they don't say so on the air, the comic "Cousin Anna" who'll return on the new Bourgeois "Evening in Paris" series on CBS, is the actress, Agnes Moorehead. She's also heard occasionally in another Zasu Pitts-like rustic characterization as Mrs. Jones, the deadly peril of the highways, in the dramatized commercials on Irvin Cobb's oil programs. . . . When Singin' Sam's series of shaving cream airings start up, the veteran troubadour will be heard on the West Coast for the first time. . . . Tito Guizar has landed a CBS commercial to start for a cleanser in October.

RED MEN HONOR RADIO ORACLE

When The Voice of Experience returned from his vacation aboard the steamship Monarch of Bermuda, high officials of the Improved Order of Red Men boarded the vessel and invested him with life membership in that order. The photograph shows the officials placing on the Voice's head a war bonnet similar to that which was presented to President Roosevelt when he was made a member of the order.

Harriet Lee has joined the Happy Bakers on their Columbia programs—which reminds me to wonder whether she'll compete to hold her title of beauty queen for the coming Electrical Show at Madison Square Garden. The blonde beauty was Miss Radio at the last of those affairs, held in 1931, when she was a sustaining singer on that network.

Big Show

THEY'RE all wondering about the talent lineup for Columbia's new hour-long Linit "Bath Club Review" series, scheduled to start in October. It looks like Jane From- man, Julius Tannen, Ted Husing, Nino Martini, and Erno Rapee, with a large orchestra and chorus. . . . The Travelers quartet advertise motor fuels over Columbia, but they had to charter a special train to make personal appearances over Labor Day weekend! . . . Big Freddy Miller's informal baritone goings go from WABC locals to the network, with Freddie vocalizing one period less a week than before for twice the financial emolument. . . . Irvin S. Cobb has joined the Radio, Stage and Screen Stars NRA Committee which is headed by his fellow Columbia artist, Kate Smith. The Paducah humorist is also adding the sicker screen to his many activities. He has just contracted to do a number of shorts for a new film organization, in which he'll tell some of his famous after-dinner stories. He'll also serve as editor of the Humor from the Press department of this new outfit.

Will Rogers may never even be asked back on that oil program, because the sponsor feels that George M. Coban is an even bigger draw than the cowboy philosopher. His last Sunday night's Radio Parade was a honey. They've taken up Coban's first option at $6500 a program. Coban, incidentally, is intrigued with the Revelers' singing and he's even promised to write some "oob wab" songs, as he calls them, for the Revelers'

THE EDITOR'S MAIL BOX

A. E. I., Belleville, Ill.—Red McKenzie is not with Paul Whiteman's Orchestra any more. He is not broadcasting.

E. D., Springfield, Mass.—Helen Board is twenty-seven years old and weighs 130 pounds. She has brown eyes and brown hair and is heard on such CBS programs as Andre Kostelanetz Presents, Light Opera Gems and the Cathedral Hour.

Mrs. E. C., Bethlehem, Pa.—Phillips Lord is making ready to go on a world cruise in his own boat. He has entirely recovered from the illness which took him to a hospital early this spring.

S. F., Greenwich, Conn.—Mark Smith plays Uriah Cadwalder, Irene Hubbard plays Mrs. Jameson and the part of Mr. Jameson is taken by Wright Kramer on the Show Boat. The singing Mary Lou is Muriel Wilson and the speaking Mary Lou is Rosaline Greene, Molasses and January are Pick Malone and Pat Padgett. The personnel of the Show Boat boys appeared in last week's mail box. Tiny Ruffner's real name is Edmund Ruffner. The tenor who sang on the Musical Grocery Store of June 10 was Scrappy Lambert. The part of the Spanish senorita on July 6 Show Boat was taken by Peggy Allenby. Lanny Ross has not written his autobiography. "Ca C'est Paris" is the theme of Evening in Paris.

R. S., Peekskill, N. Y.—Address Happy Jack Turner and Vic and Sade at the National Broadcasting Company, Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Illinois. South Sea Islanders can be reached at the NBC, 711 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

N. J., Westville, N. J.—Art Jarrett is no longer with Phil Harris' band. He is broadcasting with Sid Lippmann from the Coconut Grove, Hollywood. Sylvia Froos has been playing vaudeville and not broadcasting. Ted Husing is CBS' oldest announcer in point of service and Milton Cross is NBC's. Milton Cross has been connected with the NBC since 1921. Orchestras on commercial programs are paid by the sponsor and staff orchestras are paid by the station. Dance orchestras playing by remote control are not paid.

T. G., Chicago, Ill.—Henri Gendron is playing one-night stands and various dance places in and around Chicago. Whereabouts of Doug Peppard and Tom Brown, Jr., unknown. Wayne King is an American.

M. L. L., Lafayette, Ind.—Lawrence Salerno is still broadcasting over station WGN, Chicago and can be reached at that station, care of the Drake Hotel. Happy Hank Harrington was forced to retire from the air because of ill health. However, he can still be reached in care of WGN.

Why Holmes Lost

AN OIL company was all set to buy Taylor Holmes but the directorate turned thumbs down solely because Holmes had been on a competitor's show for four weeks. The Sisters of the Skillet, battling where Holmes used to hit, have had a two-week option taken up and may go on until Ed Wynn comes back. . . . Eddie Cantor was supposed to broadcast from the Coast starting this Sunday, but the program will be sent from the Coast without him for a dozen weeks, with Schnozzle Durante and Ruth Etting substituting for the hanjo-eyed boy. Good luck, Ruth, glad to see you're back on the airwaves again and I'm sure so are your host of fans. . . . Sponsors are becoming fiddler-conscious, and are asking prices for Jascha Heifetz, Mischa Elman and Ejrem Zimbalist, with two of the bow boys definitely interested—at a price and at what prices!

James Melton and Johnny Marvin, lonesome singer of the air, are the latest of the air crew to cancel vaudeville engagements because cooling systems are beginning to damage their voices—and radio jobs are too valuable to risk loss of voice by making personal appearances.

Send Your Gags

JULIUS TANNEN is the first comic to dare the public to send in gags—he threatens to use them—and his mail is piling up with even older gags than the average radio material writer would think of—all labelled "original"! . . . Jane Froman turned down a sweet wad of dough to fly coastward to sing three songs in Joan Crawford's new picture, "Dancing Lady." She likes radio too much. . . . The manager of Lee Sims and Honny Bailey tells them he has them all set but he doesn't say where or when—and they're casting eyes back Chicago-ward. . . . NRA note: The Men About Town trio turned down two jobs this week on the ground that with five jobs a week they are too busy, thank you. . . . Victor Young, the maestro, agreed to fly to Chicago for five programs only after his manager took out $100,000 term insurance on his life.

Ethel Barrymore will go radio, but she won't audition. A sponsor can audition any material he chooses—after the first lady of the theater has been signed.

Questions

WE KNEW someone would ask it sooner or later. Letter recently received at Columbia from a fan who asks "Does Mildred Bailey sit and rock in her rocking-chair at the microphone when she broadcasts?" . . . Another fan asks the CBS question-answers: "Is Bing Crosby bald and does he wear a tepee?" . . . Dave Rubinoff kept an anxious eye on the weather reports all during the recent hurricane. His complete musical library, weighing over two tons, was en route to the coast by boat for the Hollywood broadcasts. The S. S. Pennsylvania, on which the music had been shipped, was in the heart of the storm area during the blow but escaped trouble. . . . Kate Smith turned down a cigarette offer because she didn't think it quite the thing to ballyhoo ciggies after singing hosannas for cigars. . . . Tommy McLaughlin, that romantic bachelor boy, will bring his baritone strains back to CBS again at the end of September, when "Threads of Happiness" will be resumed. . . . Buck Rogers in the 25th Century returns to CBS soon, four times a week, under new sponsorship.

REVIEWING RADIO

By Mike Porter

(Ear-cupping a la Louis (N. Y. American) Reid) with apologies, of course

ONE thing that hasn't come to the ear-cuppers, and which has thus far been overlooked or ignored by the radio rajahs, is the broadcast of an electrocution. Nor have the caliphs of the kilocycles ever managed to put a criminal trial on the air. Making an execution of a condemned man audible through the descriptive powers of a McNamee or a Husing would not be a futile factor in the conquest against crime.

So Al Smith is now a turbaned rajah of the radio! It is debatable whether his new dignity in the broadcasting scheme will convert him to the universal pronunciation of the modern word for "wireless." Al insists that a college professor once assured him that "radio" was not improper. As the shah of the newly reorganized WMCA, will Al be heard more frequently, without the auspices of the political pundits? An Al Smith on the air once a week might be a very satisfying entertainment feature, if there were music to go with his comedy.

When the crooners fell into the profound depths of oblivion months ago there seemed to be a finality about their fate. But the beefy and buxom B. A. Rolfe gives them a new lease on life by reviving their amorous bleats in ensemble under the choral system and temporarily at least we shall become familiar again with the lunar beauties of the Carolines and the torch dirges linking unappreciative hearts with frigidare systems. It is, in a sense, a defiance of the dictum of the overlords of the studios who had hoped to detour from the realm of the slob lyric, into the more progressive paths that lead to Broadway, whence had started a march of the mines to the moneyed meadows of the microphone.

At that, Broadway is having its day in the air, the newest of the neophytes being the flag-waving and versatile George M. Cobau, who has found a seat among the air's mighty, without even the preliminary tryout.

The purse-strings of radio, drawn tightly during the depressed summer by the barons of broadcasting, seem a little looser with the decided pickup in commercial business and the cheerful optimism of the NRA shouters. The rajahs say things are looking up and there are hints of a new impetus to enterprise. The gaps left in the radio schedules may now be filled entertainingly. There is a nice system of exchange with Canada already under way. No satisfactory exchange, on a steady basis, has been accomplished with Europe. Stalin and the Kaiser remain the two notable holdouts. Imminent recognition of Russia by the United States may bring Stalin's voice and philosophy to the earcuppers before long.

THE rajahs are more sorely troubled by a code of ethics associated with the traffic in wave-lengths than by the NRA clauses. It is a nice conundrum proposed by Harold S. Lafount, of the Radio Commission, which asks whether Donald Plann, of WMCA had the ethical right to pander to a company formed by the scions of great wealth—the Whitneys and Ryaus, the commercial rights of his station, while retaining the license, without formality of a complete transfer of license to the operating group. The licensee, say the rules, has an obligation to the public that cannot be transferred. But there is not much likelihood of an investigation of the WMCA deal, as asked by Lafount. The Commission nabobs sanctioned the arrangement.

Probably nowhere else do so many paradoxes thrive as in the temples of radio. The ear-cupper is surfeited with light and nonsensical tunes and humor as during the darkest days of gloom and depression. And when the gloom is dispelled by better times and a growing optimism, come the sad, sorrowful lyricists who pen dirges and melodic dramatics about heartbreaks and loves that have gone on the reefs. There's not much sense or rhyme or reason to popular music. It is to the ear-cuppers and the rest of the country, simply popular, and like the hot-dog, in demand at all seasons, regardless of timeliness or temperature.

The comics never die—nor, so it seems, do the demands for them. Perhaps there is no real demand for more funny fellows—except among the sponsorial seers, who see wit climb to the plush-covered throne, and who, by imitative impulse, are moved to try to duplicate the trick. Milton Berle comes now, from stage and short-movie, to serve as a jester for the Old Gold stint. And next comes Joe Penner, from the bailiwicks of vaudeville, which, like the stage play, is bowing its way out under the pressure of radio. This means a glut of the humorous hombres by early Winter, with Pearl, W'yu, Cantor, Stoopuagle, and the rest of the phunny phalanx again riding the crests. The droller wits, I like better. The Cobbs, and Brouns and Woolcotts have a finer subtlety. They decry the giddy gags dug up from the Joe Miller Books, and given, occasionally, a modern twist. The Cobbs and Brouns and Woolcotts are not professional trouperers. They dig deeply for their sallies and their drollery. They lose too, much of the bulk of the audience, perhaps, by requiring the ear-cuppers to give more than fleeting attention to their smoothly delivered, and sometimes satirical expressions. The Wynns and Pearls and Berles will be killing the lads and ladies in the armchairs, when the lights of literature are back at their typewriters and journalistic sophistries.

Maybe the rajahs are right. The ear-cuppers will, for the next ten years, anyhow, beckon Berme and boo at Beethoven!
