Next Week

NEXT week we reach the greatest moment in our life. With our next issue we walk out on a high, tight wire in full view of all the world. Our body will be clothed with spangles, the very brightest we can buy, and our heads will be held as proudly as any conqueror's, but we will know we are walking a wire that we never have walked before.

Before I tell you all about Next Week, may I first tell you something about the issue you hold in your hands?

HERE, in all sincerity, is a publication on which has been lavished much thought and toil. To be sure, it is not perfect, yet we feel that it is good.

We have added the beauty of a new type face which reduces eye strain and makes reading much easier than it was previously. We have added the beauty of eight thrilling pages of that latest form of fine printing, rotogravure.

In addition, there are more program details, more stations listed than ever before, more pages of news, more features. And pictures galore. In short it is a big, thick publication with every bit of forty-four large pages.

Now a word about our program pages. The program section, indeed, is our heart. We always have labored against the inevitable inaccuracies that must occur, but today our vigilance is increased; and what a task it is, can only be comprehended when you understand that RADIO GUIDE is not a single publication but is made up of fifteen different editions. And that we accomplish something each week which can not be equaled by any other medium in the world—namely, the publication of more than one hundred and five thousand separate station listings.

But this issue you now hold represents three other things, too, not to be seen in our table of contents.

The first is Honest Planning. With all our hearts we want to make RADIO GUIDE serve you and your needs completely. Your answers to my recent request for suggestions were both heartening and helpful. Our planning has followed and will always follow the dictate of "What do our readers want?"

THE second thing not visible in our table of contents is an Honest Effort to do a good job. Inevitably, mortals often stumble and make botches of their work. But often, too, mortals create things of either great service or great beauty. The latter is our goal.

The third thing, intangible but a part of all we do, is an Honest Ideal. And that is something we all, from lowliest printer's devil to president, can get excited about. That ideal is to represent truly the voiceless and often unconsidered radio audience. Tremendous and potent as they are, radio listeners are nevertheless maltreated and abused and even cheated. To see that the tuner-inner gets his rights is our hope and aim.

AND now to return to Next Week, and the tight wire we must walk.

The things of which I have written and the things we have done with this very number would not have been possible without great financial support. So, next week we make a change in our five-year-old price policy. Henceforth the price of RADIO GUIDE will be ten cents per copy. Next week we stake our future on the loyalty of our old friends and the worthiness of our work.

That is the tight wire we must walk—the tight wire of a new price.

You have valued RADIO GUIDE in the past, I know. In the future, I prophecy, you will value it even more. In the future, I promise, you will never regret the continued friendship and support which I now venture to hope you will grant us.

Sincerely,

Curt Mitchell

LET'S TALK SHOP

WHEN is a hillbilly not a hillbilly? And when is he a millionaire? Well, you won't believe it and we didn't either but the statistics show that last year umpteen million dollars went rolling down the mountains and into the pockets of an amazing assortment of ridge runners, eld hoppers, and gully jumpers. Who discovered the gold in them thar hillbillies? Who turned singing through the nose into a Big Business? You'll find the answers and a heap of others, too, in next week's story called "The Inside Story of the Hillbilly Business."

Johnny Marvin

OUR ear-to-the-ground man reports a certain ominous rumbling that has been coming out of the West and Midwest. At first, we thought it was either a new show rehearsing for the Lucky Strike program or Man Mountain Dean stamping about in a temper. Now we learn it is really only the upraised voices of a lot of old listeners of last year's Jack Benny show shouting "What's happened to Frank Parker?"

Well, sir, it's the darndest thing. We'd just written a story about Frank and his new program in the East and we're running it while it's still hot in our next number.

Frank Parker

LIKE to go places and do things? We mean exciting, expensive places like the Rainbow Room and Chez Paree? Then you'll be in your element next week when we invite you to make refined whoopie (oh, very dignified, indeed) in company with some of our best people.

Page 26 is your stamping ground and the words at the top say "Night-Clubbing with the Stars." Not a bad idea, either, if we do say so, and the stars with whom you go hand in hand through the joyful evening are radio's beauteous Joan Blaine and her swain Cyril Pitts. The club in which you dissipate the evening is Chicago's Chez Paree.

Joan Blaine

*That Is if His Name's
Charlie MacArthur, and
You Were His Wife, and as Sensitive as Is Helen
Hayes. But Let Her Tell
You How She Keeps Her Marriage Ledger Balanced*

By Dora Albert

WHEN Charles MacArthur, playwright and co-author of the Jumbo sketches, married Helen Hayes, now starring in The New Penny, seven years ago, he promised her, "Whatever happens, you will never be bored."

Recently a writer asked Helen, "Your marriage has been a great success, hasn't it?" "Oh, yes," said Helen. "It's been glorious. It's been like no other marriage. Of course, I probably shall kill Charlie in the end. In fact, I don't see how it can end any other way. Imagine being married to a man who has never, never bored you."

There is a price to be paid for not being bored, and Helen Hayes is paying that price.

Before Helen married Charlie MacArthur, she was, as Adela Rogers St. Johns once said, "a little queen idolized, gently ruling the court of admiring femininity which fluttered about the bright candle of her success and her genius."

Her mother, who had longed to go on the stage and who had lived to see her daughter fulfil her dearest ambitions, thought that everything Helen did was perfect. Her friends adored the young actress. To her fans, who saw her on the stage in beautiful Barrie roles, she was the Mary Pickford of her day. Whenever she appeared in a play they hung around the stage waiting to tell her how wonderful she was.

THOUGH there were a few young men who fell madly in love with Helen, they catered to her, just as her women friends had done. None of them was a strong, dominant personality. One young man even attempted to commit suicide because Helen wouldn't marry him. But the poison he had taken was pumped out of his system, and he lived to get over his infatuation.

When Helen married Charlie MacArthur she realized that if she wanted to keep him, if she wanted their marriage to be a success, she would have to be the one to make the sacrifices. No longer could she play the role of queen. She would have to make all the compromises that the average woman makes to keep her husband, plus. And in addition, her problem was complicated by the fact that Charlie wasn't an ordinary husband—that he was dynamic, erratic and unpredictable.

FOR this is the same Charlie MacArthur who on dull evenings in Hollywood used to throw gin bottles at the supervisors' houses; who once knocked out his managing editor on a newspaper because he forbade Charlie to keep a bicycle in the local room; who once chased Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State, down Fifth Avenue, yelling as he ran, "Yah, yah, Secretary of State! What are you doing here if you're Secretary of State? Yah, yah, Secretary of State!"

Living with such a man may be glorified fun, but it also has its hardships. You know how much patience and common sense it takes to live with the average man. Think then what extraordinary self-control Helen Hayes must exercise.

Let's start with a flashback. It was the year 1929, just before the famous "act of God" baby, Mary, was born. Helen was in the hospital awaiting the blessed event, and Charlie came to visit her.

"Helen," he said, his voice a hushed whisper, "I've got the most wonderful present for you. For you and the baby, Helen. Wait till you see it!"

HELEN had a premonition. She knew, you see, about Charlie and his wonderful presents. The wonderful present might be anything from peanuts to crocodiles.

"What is it?" she asked suspiciously. "Oh, it's a surprise," said Charlie. "I wouldn't dream of telling you about it."

When Helen came home with the new baby, she walked into the jade green and peach nursery. And there, right smack in the nursery, next to the

Charlie promised Helen that after they were married she'd never have a dull moment. That promise has required all the fine courage and good sense you see in her in this excellent camera study marriage easily in two days. And the average woman simply couldn't refrain from losing her temper if she were married to Charlie MacArthur. The things that man does!

Do you remember when the newspapers ran stories about Helen's new home at Nyack, New York. It was to be a beautiful home in formal, Victorian style. The doors of the living room were painted eggshell white. Shortly after the interior decorator had finished his work on these doors, Helen discovered Charlie plastering the doors with decalcomania flies, which are somewhat similar to the pictures we used to paste on our hands when we were children.

"I don't think these doors look natural without a few flies hanging about," said Charlie calmly.

Helen was furious. She ran to the porch to cool down. She felt like saying, "Charlie, if I ever catch you with those flies around here again, there will be the devil to pay."

BUT you don't keep a man adoring you through seven years of married life if you talk to him that way. Instead Helen said, "Charlie, if you want to play with those flies, okay. Stick them on the walls in the cellar, but do leave the living room alone."

So Charlie went down to the cellar and for several hours pasted the flies in odd and unusual positions. Finally he was through. Helen's eyes twinkled as she looked at his handiwork. He himself surveyed it with a pleased expression.

"All right, Charlie," she said. "I hope you had lots of fun. You're through now, aren't you?"

"Oh, no," said Charlie. "I'm saving two of the biggest flies to stick on the butter when you have company."

But these things have long since baby's clothes—soft fleecy garments and little baby dresses that were a dream—was the present. A huge English billiard table, which filled up most of the room.

"The room looked so empty I thought it would be nice to fill it," said Charlie.

IMAGINE how Helen felt! Imagine how you would have felt if, on the day you came back from the hospital, you found a billiard table in the baby's nursery! Another woman might have raised the roof. She might have stormed and screamed, "That table goes right out of here. How could you do a thing like that?" Perhaps Helen was tempted to say something of the sort. But she didn't. She just sat down weakly. She realized that Charlie was getting a great kick out of his present, even if she wasn't. And so she let the billiard table stay right there in the nursery, among the baby's toys. When Charlie and his friends used to come in and play billiards, little Mary slept in another room.

Women usually are tempted to try to change the men they marry, to tamper with their personalities. Certainly Charlie would tempt the average woman to try to change him into a sober, respectable and conventional person. But Helen is too wise to do anything of the sort. She knows that if she tried to change Charlie she would lose him.

Whenever Charlie has any extra money in his pocket, he buys a present for Helen. Any kind of a present that happens to strike his fancy. He says extra money in his pocket makes him nervous.

I know a woman who's always scolding her husband because he has a mania for buying different kinds of bird-cages. I don't think Helen would mind a thing like that a bit. No matter how mad Charlie's presents are, Helen never objects to any of them.

"There'll be a present for you this afternoon," Charlie once told Helen. That afternoon three men arrived, dragging with them a huge telescope of the kind used to look at the moon at Coney Island. "Where shall we put this, ma'am?" they asked.

"In Charlie's bedroom," said Helen firmly. And there it stayed, although Charlie dragged it across the continent with him to Hollywood when he went there to write the script for a picture.

AND then there was the time when he stole a sleeping policeman's hat and nightstick and sent them to Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Beside the sleeping policeman Charlie left a note signed with Peggy's name. As soon as he awoke the policeman rushed to Peggy's apartment and got there just as Peggy was taking a bath!

Life with a gay, irresponsible person like Charlie sounds delightful on the surface, but it also may be enough to drive a woman mad unless she learns to accept it philosophically. A woman who lost her temper could wreck that

Here are Helen and Charlie with little Mary, whose education was decided upon by flipping a coin

*"Where Shall We Put This, Ma'am?"
... And This Was a Large Telescope!
What Would You Have Done with It?*

ceased to disturb Helen. She looks at Charlie's faults with a calm and tolerant eye. In fact, she once told an interviewer that she keeps a marriage ledger, writing down Charlie's faults in red ink and his virtues in black. Helen insists that the figures on the black side more than balance those on the debit side.

SHE said once, "Too many married women get into the habit of saying, 'I simply can't stand Jim any longer. I hate the way he holds his cigarettes. I loathe the way he whistles when he's shaving. I hate the way he speaks to the children.' They harp and harp on the debit side, you see. They do not look—and finally they cannot look—on the credit side. And there always is one."

On the credit side of her ledger, Helen put the fact that Charlie is sweet to her on her bad days; he is sensitive, and although people make a practise of saying that he is irresponsible, they always come to Charlie when they are in trouble, and Charlie always helps them.

One morning she woke up feeling out of sorts. Charlie absolutely refused to leave the house until he had made her laugh first. He made up like a clown and kept popping in on her. At first Helen simply refused to laugh. But finally she couldn't help herself. She burst into gay, tender laughter.

"After that," she said, "I gave myself a little hug to think of the man I'm married to."

Helen, for her part, would do anything to please her gay, erratic, boyish husband. If Charlie asked her to, I haven't the slightest doubt that she would climb a tree to please him. I do know that she once dived to the bottom of a pool because she knew Charlie wanted her to.

It was last Summer, and Charlie MacArthur and Ben Hecht, his collaborator and fellow prankster (they've been called the Katzenjammer Kids of the movies) decided that the only way they could stay cool was at the bottom of a pool near Charlie's Nyack farmhouse. So Charlie went to New York and there he bought a diving helmet and a pump to go with it. Wearing the helmet proudly, Charlie dived to the bottom of the pool. While there he amused himself making gurgling noises and asking visitors sitting around the pool whether they could hear him.

FINALLY he tired of this sport and came up. "Helen," he breathed rapturously, "it's marvelous. Really it's the only decent place to me on a hot day like this. Please try it, darling."

The last thing in the world that Helen wanted at the moment was to dive to the bottom of a pool. But it was quite obvious that Charlie never would have another happy moment until she tried it, so she resignedly put on the helmet and let herself be lowered to the bottom.

When she came up, Charlie was

Helen as she looks when playing Queen Victoria in her current stage success, Victoria Regina beaming. "Wasn't it wonderful, darling?" he asked.

"Why, er-r, yes," said Helen. Afterwards she told a friend, "The air was terrible and there was a dreadful smell, but that was the only sensation I got."

Then there was the time when Helen first planned the decorative scheme for her swimming pool. In keeping with the formal pool, she bought white chairs and an exquisite white wrought-iron table, and put them next to the swimming pool. But Charlie had his own ideas about decoration. One day he came home with a peculiar table in the form of a steering wheel.

"That's for our swimming pool," he said complacently.

If I had been in Helen's place, I would have told Charlie that I had already bought the table I needed and that this one would have to go right back to the store from which it came. But Helen has an idea that when Charlie likes something she must find a place for it somehow. The odd little table was immediately transferred to a place of honor beside the swimming pool, not far from the diving helmet and the pump. All the white chairs were painted dark brown and green to go with this new table. Charlie liked the effect immensely.

Charlie is always going in for new fads. Recently he bought a camera that takes pictures in color. Since then he has snapped so many pictures that Helen finally said, "Even the dogs around our place are becoming self-conscious."

CHARLIE'S ideas hardly simplify the servant problem for Helen Hayes. About two years ago Charlie MacArthur chose their gardener, an Italian who, like Chico in Seventh Heaven, is a really remarkable fellow. Charlie is particularly fond of this gardener because he believes that Freddie is even madder than he is.

If you know anything about gardening, you know that the first blooms are not as beautiful as the later ones, and should be cut as soon as the buds come out, or else the flowers will quickly go to seed. But Freddie absolutely refuses to cut those first blooms.

"Me no take life," he says, shaking his head sadly at the thought that anyone could possibly be so cruel.

Consequently, all the flowers in Helen's garden are always going to seed. "I don't want a garden that's going to seed," she pleads with Freddie. "You've got to cut the flowers."

"Yes, lady," he says. But he never does anything about it.

Last Summer Helen grew tired of begging Freddie to cut the rosebuds. "He's got to go, Charlie," she told her husband. But Charlie shook his head.

Believe it or not, Walter O'Keefe is trying to get an infrared plate of a brilliant idea for his next comedy skit

Aboard the Camel Caravan

By Howard Wilcox

IT WAS really the darndest thing. I mean what happened after Walter O'Keefe mentioned during his broadcast that his baby was ill. Walter is still flabbergasted by the results. And, frankly, so am I.

You probably know that Walter is as doting a father as you'll find north of the Bay of Whales. He is so full of "Let me tell you what my kid did today" cracks that you're not safe around him unless you're a doting father, too. Know him three minutes and he'll show you a picture of the light of his life (a) kicking both feet in the air, (b) scowling ferociously at the camera, (c) sucking a thumb. All cute as a first tooth and just as sweet as pie.

So when Walter's child took sick recently, what was more natural than that Walter should mention it to his millions of friends who listen?

Immediately, the reaction began. Telegrams arrived, first. Then letters written in a hurry by indignant parents. Then letters written lengthily and picturesquely, after due contemplation, by outraged mothers and fathers.

One and all, they denounced him. One and all they said to the irrepressible Mister O'Keefe, "You're a fine parent, you are. You're commercializing that baby. And besides, what's the idea of doing a broadcast when your child's sick? Any decent parent would stay home with him. Besides, we think you're not much of a parent anyhow. If you were, you'd stay out of those night clubs and stop all that night life and stay home and help raise your son."

To all those indignant letter writers, let me say something that I'm sure Walter O'Keefe wouldn't care to admit. Those letters hurt him a lot. Despite his general screwiness, his banter, his harum-scarum spoofing on his show, he's all wrapped up in that boy of his. The thought that a lot of people don't consider him the best parent in the world cuts deeply. I know that Walter hasn't been in a night club since the baby came.

HE'S a fascinating guy to watch, this Broadway hillbilly turned proud pater. He's as full of tricks and surprises as is the show he produces. Let's get aboard the Camel Caravan for a while . . . join the gay company of Louis Sorin, Glen Gray, the Casa Loma outfit, Ted Husing, Alice Frost and Deane Janis.

Caravan rehearsals are held in CBS' Little Theater on West 44th Street.

It's a bit early when we arrive at the theater, for the front doors are still locked. Into an alley we duck, and past the stage door, which brings us plump onto the stage. The platform is deserted save for a lone production man, who is wandering about forlornly. After ducking batteries of microphones and stage props, we finally find ourselves in the pit of the theater. The control-room men, always the first to arrive at a broadcast scene, are already fussing with their dials in the glass-enclosed booth directly under the stage.

One by one the cast straggles in . . . Glen Gray and his Casa Loma boys, weighted down with instruments . . . blonde Alice Frost, bundled up to the ears in a racoon coat . . . starry-eyed Deane Janis, who seems to have stepped right from the pages of a fashion book . . . fat Louie Sorin . . . serious-visaged Tony Cabooch, who looks more like a philosopher than a comedian . . . announcer Paul Douglas . . . bespectacled and brittle-looking Ted Husing, and finally O'Keefe himself, fresh from the barber's chair.

The musicians lose no time in setting up their instruments, and soon the churchly calm of the theater is dispelled by the torrid strains of a giddy-paced jazz tune. Glen Gray's voice is low—in fact barely distinguishable to us in the pit—as he directs and controls the flow of music. Several times he called a temporary halt to the proceedings to discuss a point of harmony with a faulty performer. Not once does he change that quiet, almost monotonous pitch of his voice.

Meanwhile, over in the far corner of the stage, O'Keefe and his band of thespians are running over their sketches.

The director, who is chewing vigorously on an extinct cigar, hovers about them with a stop-watch in hand, and occasionally jots down hasty notations upon a pad. There can be no mistakes or run-overs once a show is on the air, you know, and it is at these rehearsals that all the correcting and preening is done.

NO, no, it won't do," he calls at last. "That skit is terrible. It's as flat as stale beer! We'll have to rewrite it."

Glen Gray's tunicians continue to grind away at their melodies, and now Deane Janis has joined them, awaiting her cues to take up the vocal solos. More and more often Glen Gray drops his baton to race into the control room. He listens intently as the music pours into the booth through the loudspeaker, his face immobile.

Glen Gray heads the Casa Loma orchestra, yet he does his share of the puffing, along with the rest of the boys

If You're Looking for a Thrilling Trip Behind the Scenes While a Major Broadcast Is Being Prepared, Then Come on Along and Listen to—

Thus it continues, hour after hour. Gradually the show begins to take on a semblance of symmetry, and by dress rehearsal time the disjointed parts have been welded into a smoothly-gearred whole.

The dress rehearsal begins about 5 o'clock. At a given signal all noise and banter cease. The director and an agency representative sit enthroned behind the plate-glass windows of the control booth. Announcer Paul Douglas makes the opening announcement as the band softly plays its famed signature song, Smoke Rings. Walter O'Keefe breaks in with his "gangway, neighbors" salutation, and the band swings into an infectious rhythm. Deane Janis takes a vocal solo. Following another short announcement, the orchestra swings into a peppy medley. One by one the performers step up to the microphone . . . Ted Husing delivers a few moments of crackling comment on sports . . . O'Keefe, Sorin, Cabooch and Alice Frost re-enact a hilarious burlesque . . . Pee Wee Hunt forsakes his instrument to chant a hotcha scat song . . .

In the control booth eyes are glued to stop-watches as the rehearsal approaches a close. Yes, despite the rigid care, the rehearsal has run overtime. Forty seconds are sliced from the skit. A paragraph is deleted from Husing's sport talk. Other slight changes and variations are made, and in no time at all the show is ingeniously woven together again, with no breaks in the continuity. The Camel Caravan is ready to take to the air.

THAT'S how a hodgepodge of ideas is welded into a finished radio product. Now let us look at that product.

It lacks but a few moments of 9 p.m., Eastern Standard Time. The Little Theater is packed with studio spectators. The performers are grouped before the three microphones on the stage. You'd hardly recognize them now, for they're all decked out in formal dress. Deane Janis looks particularly striking in a shimmering green gown, with green evening slippers to match. Alice Frost is a vision in white.

But look! That isn't Glen Gray standing on the podium. Instead, it's Mel Janssen, the violinist, who conducts publicly for the Casa Loma orchestra. There's Glen grinning happily in the background, clarinet, saxophone and flute parked at his side.

THE air becomes electric as the magic on-the-air moment approaches. Paul Douglas holds up a warning hand. "Twenty seconds," he says. Then Mel Janssen's baton cues fifteen musicians into action. Bows scrape on fiddles, saxophones moan, trombones slide and drum-sticks flutter as the theme song reaches the air. The music flares up for a few beats, and gradually fades softly to silence. Walter O'Keefe, one hand thrust deeply into his pocket, steps up to the mike. "Gangway, neighbors. This is Walter O'Keefe . . . this is my hundredth broadcast for my bosses down there underneath the Carolina Moon . . . this is the hundredth time I've introduced Glen Gray to you . . . here he comes with Way Down Yonder in New Orleans."

Before it's done, Deane Janis steps to the microphone and waits quietly for the torrid rhythm to end. She stands with her head and shoulders bent forward, as if she were about to offer a prayer. Only when she receives the cue to sing does she straighten up. Gone is the prayerful attitude. Arms bobbing, hips weaving, she sings the torchy You Hit the Spot number.

After a short commercial dramatization, the Casa Loma orchestra again sweeps into rhythmic life. One of the musicians leaves the rear ranks and trots to a mike. That's Kenny Sargent. The girls in the audience stir

Deane Janis doesn't appear to be a prayerful type, yet when you get aboard the Caravan you'll see that she is restlessly, for Kenny's a dapper, handsome boy with a romantic voice. He sings a plaintive love ballad, and retreats back to his post.

Now comes the fun. Everyone decides to swap jobs, in honor of the one-hundredth broadcast. Listen:

"I've always wanted to lead an orchestra," opines Walter.

The audience roars at Ted Husing's response: "I'd like to be Deane Janis." Louie Sorin agrees to accept Walter's role. The net results are hilarious. It's pure nonsense, but the audience around us is roaring happily. A million loudspeakers are echoing to the burlesque—I wonder how many thought it funny. It would be interesting to know.

The hands on the clock push on. Paul Douglas darts an anxious look at the clock as Glen Gray's crew lurches and throbs through the final number. As the music fades Douglas steps to the mike with his hand against his ear.

THAT hand-against-ear attitude has fooled a lot of people. I first learned about it by doing the same thing you're doing—asking questions. Ethel Shutta was the girl I queried, and she gave me my little lesson right there.

"It's to hear yourself," she said. "Try it sometime."

And you try it yourself. Put your hand against your ear with the tip of the middle finger pressing the ear tightly so no sound can enter. Then hum to yourself. When you remove the finger pressure and the ear is open, the sound is not nearly so loud and clear as it is when you close one ear. With one ear open and one closed, the singer or talker is able to hear the orchestra that is playing and at the same time gauge the volume and pitch of his own voice. It's a trick that isn't known to many outside of radio. If you ever do a broadcast yourself, you can use it profitably.

NOW, Paul Douglas has finished reading his last line. All talk about the goodness of cigarettes and the quality of tobacco. It isn't entertainment exactly, but the way Paul Douglas does it certainly keeps it from being a bore.

He's through! Walter O'Keefe, crouching behind another mike, comes suddenly to life. Without a second's pause he says, "This is Walter O'Keefe, saying good nate and thank you!"

So the show ends. And good nate and thank you, Mr. O'Keefe, for a hearty half-hour of fun. We all hope your baby is feeling well again!

The makers of Camel cigarettes present the Camel Caravan over the CBS-WABC network every Tuesday and Thursday evening at 9 p.m. EST (8 CST; 7 MST; 6 PST) and two and one-half hours later for the West Coast.

Kenny Sargent—of course you recognize the name—the orchestra member who looks as snappy as his vocalizing sounds

LONELY

I started to say good morning to her, I felt that rasping in my throat which every singer learns to dread. Then I sneezed. I was catching cold!

Before I dressed I sprayed my throat. Then I hurried into the living room and tried the chorus of one song to the accompaniment of a phonograph record. My voice didn't break! Now if I could just last through rehearsal and then get home to nurse myself through the rest of the day, I'd be all right. I hastened downstairs where my car was waiting for me.

HUGE Studio A of Amalgamated, where rehearsals were held, was a bedlam. On the stage Don Milton, in his shirt-sleeves, was rehearsing the violins for a difficult passage, his long black hair flopping over his sweating face, while bassoon and clarinet players tooted away by themselves, oblivious of discord.

Happy Hannan, the comic on the show, wearing his ridiculous tiny hat, long coat and floppy shoes, made a face at me. Harry Moss, the announcer, winked a friendly greeting. Otherwise my entrance went unnoticed.

I could see Manzoni's broad stooped shoulders over the back of one of the long rows of chromium chairs that tonight would be filled with privileged spectators at the broadcast. He was deep in conference with the sponsor's representative.

I sighed with relief as I went straight to my own music stand in front of one of the microphones and began to sort out my score for the program. This was going to be easy! I needn't even see Manzoni before rehearsal began. And if I slipped away quickly, when rehearsal was over, perhaps I could avoid him afterward.

I WAITED, watching for my cue. Without a pause Don nodded in my direction. Then he called out: "All right—ready with Miss Logan's numbers. Let's have Red Sails."

He held his arm upraised, with forefinger pointed—Don never conducted with a baton. Then he brought it down, and the orchestra began to vamp.

He swung his finger to me. I hummed a bit to get the feel of it. Then I started in on the verse, singing across the mike.

Out of the corner of my eye I could see Manzoni getting up and going into the glass-enclosed, sound-proof sponsors' box, reserved for executives, where he could see everything that was going on and yet would hear the broadcast, not as it sounded in the studio, but through a loudspeaker, just as it would come to you in your homes.

From the first note I felt something was going wrong. The muscles in my throat kept getting tighter. I could feel that rasp coming back. Bar after bar I fought it. If I could just last until the chorus—then I'd be all right!

By sheer will power I kept my tones rich and round in spite of it. I thought I had won and was just beginning to breathe easily when a voice came booming out loud and metallic above the music.

I looked up. The orchestra stopped. It was Manzoni's voice, coming out over the playback, the loudspeaker in reverse, by which a person in the booth can talk to those in the studio through the sound-proof walls.

STOP it! Stop it!" he bawled again. "Miss Logan"—he was always formal in rehearsals—"please to come here. . . . Go ahead with the orchestra."

I crossed the studio, went up three steps and, opening a padded door, found myself in the small but luxuriously appointed room filled with a silence that seemed weird and menacing after the friendly hubbub outside.

Manzoni did not look up. I tried to read his face, but it was a mask.

"You have a cold," he flung at me accusingly over his shoulder. He spoke as though I had committed a crime.

"Can I help that?" I said.

"There is no excuse for a cold," he went on. "You have not followed instructions or you would not have a cold."

I stood there uncomfortably, not saying anything. A thin trickle of music came in from the studio. Manzoni flipped a switch and the silence was complete except for our voices. He wheeled in his big chair and faced me.

NOW," he blurted, "tell me, what did you do last night? Where were you? Why did you not come to the benefit?"

I had my little speech of defiance all ready. But somehow it would not come to my lips. His eyes were fastened on me. I felt my will crumple under his. I began to tell him how I had yielded to the impulse to go roller skating—even about the accident—the words rushed out until I had told everything—everything except any mention of Dan Corby. That I kept to myself.

"So," he said, assuming an injured air, "Manzoni does not know anything, eh? He tells you not to do these things because he is a spoil sport. You disobey—now you have a cold and you sing bad—very bad."

"I'll be all right tonight," I insisted. "Without a rehearsal?" he shrugged.

"I need hardly remind you this is for you the critical time. In two weeks your contract with the Noko people comes up for renewal. Since their product is a cold remedy, and you are the star of their program, they would hardly appreciate your indisposition—

LITTLE STAR

By sheer will power I kept my tones rich and round. I thought I had won when—"Stop it! Stop it!" Manzoni cried. "Miss Logan, please to come here." I crossed the studio and—especially should there be any publicity—even so much as a line."

Tears were welling up in my eyes. "But I've got to have some fun!" I cried, in rebellion. "I'm a normal human being—not a puppet!"

My shoulders began to shake with sobs. Manzoni looked up at me.

"They are watching you out there," he reminded me softly.

I realized then that I was letting myself go, in full view of the people in the studio. I struggled to control myself. When I was quieter, Manzoni continued:

"There is another matter. A more serious one. You have not told me everything that happened last night!"

I looked up, startled. The man's intuition was uncanny. But fear, more than anything else, kept my lips sealed.

"There is no more. I have told you everything of importance," I lied.

He made a Latin gesture of resignation.

on me. My parents were those pitiful objects—trouper who had never made the grade. "Pennington and Pierce, in Fifteen Minutes of Fun, Frolic and Fantasy." My earliest memories were of smelly red plush coaches, one-night stands and cramped dressing rooms. My only diversions such as I could invent in my imagination.

AND the work! In an effort to save their failing act and keep us all from starving, my parents had wormed me into the routine, prattling Hot Mamma songs in my childish treble!

Then the day when Manzoni had appeared in our dressing room, a fabulous creature from another world, with his gold-headed cane and frightening moustaches, his sallow face beautiful with excitement.

"If you do not wish to tell me, very well. But—a word of warning. I realize—I have only the claim of a manager on you now. You have been a good pupil. You have known the good side of me. A hard taskmaster, perhaps, but fair. Do not anger me. There is another side of Manzoni that is not so pleasant.

"I tell you this," he went on, "because you are curiously changed. You are a different Linda—restless, excited. Your cheeks burn. Your eyes are too bright. . . . What is it, Linda?"

I WANT freedom!" I told him. "I want to know life—to know real love—before it is too late."

He shook his head sadly.

"These things you have do not come to you for nothing. Have you forgotten then all I have done for you?"

Alas, I could never forget it. Young as I was, the sordid days of my childhood had made an indelible impression

"But this child has a voice!" he had stormed to my father. "It is criminal what you are doing to it!"

That night after the show, over a spaghetti dinner, the bargain had been sealed. Manzoni, voice coach with a reputation on two continents, would give up his other interests, devote himself entirely to me. And I, on my side, was to do exactly as he wished.

My mother, with tears streaming through her makeup, had said:

"She must go with him! Anything would be better than this life. And perhaps she will find the success we have missed."

"I guarantee it!" Manzoni had cried. And it was done.

He put me into a fashionable boarding school. I did not see Manzoni for several years, although he wrote me long letters laying down for me my daily conduct, what I should read, even what kind of thinking I should do. It seemed fair enough that he should take me out of school when I was sixteen and put me to work at what singing jobs I could get, in church choirs, at banquets, for Manzoni was (Continued on Page 17)

Linda Logan, brilliant singing star of the Noko program for the Amalgamated Broadcasting System, faces the fact that the contract she has made with her manager, Manzoni, is robbing her of every chance to live. Her rebellion is all the more poignant because Manzoni has been her husband, from whom she is divorced. Their star-manager relationship is a means of giving Manzoni some sort of return for his coaching, his boosting Linda to stardom—and Linda consents to it because she wants to be certain if she is in love with him, or if her affection is dead.

Her rebellion comes to a crisis when she disobeys Manzoni's orders and cuts a benefit to go roller skating in Central Park. The escapade is made very much worth while through her meeting Dan Corby, a likeable young man who has a way of getting into her emotions. In order to keep out any possible shadow from their brief romance, Linda gives him her real name—Lucille Pennington—and tells him, to cover her justifiable deception, that she is the great Linda Logan's secretary.

Now go on with her story:

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEURS

Heard on December 29

Here are the ten lads who asked the Major: "If we do good will you call us the Major Bowes Band?" They did, so the Major ups and labels the boys the Major Bowes Gold Medal Band!

If you've never heard of a xylophone and a horse mixing before, you are going to now. Since Evelyn Kenyan (who'd rather play polo) can't even ride a horse, she played The Whip on the xylophone

Here's James Winning, who should be called the Singing Carpenter, except that he hasn't had a chance to carpent for over a year. Anyway, he knows he "sings better than a lot of those opera singers"

Don't be alarmed. That's the kind of a face Paul Zbell makes when he imitates cats, turkeys, roosters and cat-and-dog fights

MAYBE you have read about the new electronic micro-telescope which sees through anything—even a radio joke. Well, I did too, and I asked Editor C.M. if he would buy me one of the gadgets so that I could listen to the opera and get more out of it. After much haggling (he wanted to spend the dough for TWO rotogravure sections for you instead), I loosened his purse strings with the threat that I'd tell you his middle name.

Finally I got the electronic wall-look-through—and, so 'elp me, they had included in the shipment a special seer lens that enables me now to squint at the future with deadly accuracy . . . something like FRED ALLEN'S recent amateur baritone fortune-teller.

And, just to let you in on the great benefits of this super-dooftickus, here are the results of my first few peeps. During 1936 (or mebbe 1937) the following will transpire:

THE WAYNE KINGS will add to their family circle a little brother for daughter Penelope . . . MORTON DOWNEY, who recently came back to the air for a breathing spell, will be papa for the umteenth time . . . It'll be quintuplets at the BING CROSBY manse.

Seymour Simons will write his name on the dotted line of a commercial radio contract with the scrivenering product of his sponsor—maybe.

FRED WARING and HORACE HEIDT will shake hands and consolidate their bands.

EDDIE CANTOR will tire of radio and announce that he has decided to concentrate on his motion-picture work . . . JOE PENNER will tire of motion-picture work and herald his return to radio with a brand new routine—almost.

Ex-Electric King Sam Insull will fold up his attempted Midwestern radio network and silently steal away.

PHIL BAKER will get peeved at the lack of Western outlets for his oil-financed Sunday mouthings and will hunt himself a new angel with wider networks . . . Myrt and Marge's love interest, VIN HAWORTH, will be discovered by the Hollywood cinemoguls and placed in competition with Clark Gable.

Mother Moran will get sick and tired of it all and take the first boat to Tahiti.

THE SINGING LADY will be starred in a Broadway musicale, but not a hotcha number; just a too, too sweet affair . . . AMOS 'N' ANDY will announce their plan to retire from active duties after a couple more years . . . KATE SMITH will marry a wealthy (or he will be after he marries Kate) farmer, or was it a fireman I saw in my electronic telescope?

Rosaline Greene will be married to a gentleman whose name begins with B, but it won't be Andre Baruch.

ONE MAN'S FAMILY will be made into a movie (Heh, heh! I was sure of that one before I electro-looked) . . . HELEN TRENT (Virginia Clark) and MARY MARLIN (Joan Blaine) will speak their I do's . . . FIBBER MCGEE and MOLLY will be recognized as a top comedy team . . . GENE ARNOLD will be back interlocking his own or a new minstrel show (because you, the public, already are clamoring for his return) . . . and PLUMMER will end the soothsaying right here and now and talk about what's really happening (and aren't you glad).

Off a Live Mike

HARRY SOSNIK'S been signed by the sponsor for twelve more months as music-maker for the AL PEARCE GANG; all of which should indicate that Al's mob is getting over too . . . Everyone—ranging from street sweepers to state legislators—seems to have sent a song to RICO MARCHELLI in his amateur song writers' contest. Result: the winner cannot be announced till February . . . VIN HAWORTH has been commissioned by Colleen Moore to make a midget model ship for the mantel of the living room of her celebrated doll house . . . LUM AND ABNER will be in Huntington and Charleston, W. Va., January 11-12 and in Louisville, Ky., January 25-26; they'll also do an RCA-MAGIC KEY guest turn in February . . . ELEANOR RELLA and REGGIE KNORR, radactors late of the Myrt and Marge cast etc., entrained—car, pooch et al—for Hollywood Sunday on a secret mission.

With the Band-its

Little Jack Little succeeds Enric Madriguera January 14 at Chicago's Hotel Morrison Terrace Room—and NBC booked Jack, long a Columbia standard bearer! . . . And my P-Man reports that Phil Levant will take the Bismarck (Chi) Hotel podium from Leonard Keller on January 17.

In Memoriam

EARL BURTNETT succumbed to peritonitis from a ruptured appendix last week at a Windy City hospital where he was recovering from an automobile accident suffered in September. Earl was a favorite maestro of the music business; was responsible for many stars and songs winging their way to fame. He it was who gave us the BILTMORE TRIO and ART JARRETT. He will be deeply missed.

The Show Hasn't Even Started

AND NOW . . . whoa there Plummer! Didn't you give prunes to the announcers who continually say that? . . . And now it comes time to tell you what a bang-up, swell and perfectly plumful edition RADIO GUIDE has in store for you next week. Don't miss it. And don't fail to read our editor's grand editorial on Page 2 of this issue . . . The whole staff is working day and night to bring you the greatest issue you've ever seen.

Step right up, folks—you ain't seen nothing yet—and get in line. The next show begins Thursday, and be on time at the news stand for your reserved seat copy—or you'll be sorry.

Inside Stuff

By Martin Lewis

JOIN in the chorus, folks. Now, all together, "Oh the music goes 'round and 'round—oh, oh, oh-oh, oh, oh!" And I'm wondering if your head is going 'round and 'round just like mine because every ork pilot seems determined to give this catchy tune a short life. When I first heard it I thought it was swell, but hearing it sceighty-eight times a day will cause anyone to groan.

It's the first song since Stormy Weather to get the broadcasting guys all hot and bothered. What's going to give you the big surprise, though, is that EARL BURTNETT, who passed away last week after an appendix rupture, had been playing this song for about a year, and I'm told it was his drummer, RED HODGSON, who wrote the song, and not MIKE REILLY and EDDIE FARLEY who have been given the credit.

The story as told to me will probably interest you. As stated, Burnett had been playing it for some time. His femme singer quit the band one week and departed for New York. One night the gal was taken to the Onyx Club where Reilly and Farley made music for the guests. It seems the songstress got into the spirit of things, as it were; and as her head went 'round and 'round she started to sing out loud: "Music goes 'round and 'round."

The bandsmen, being quick on the trigger, recognized a good number and made the gal sing it several times to get the proper musical notes and lyrics of the chorus, which they hurriedly jotted down. After adding additional verses the boys set out to put it over. There is no doubt they succeeded. Their sudden rise to fame got them a CBS wire in their night spot, and all this week they are entertaining the audience at the Paramount Theater in New York at a nice salary. Meanwhile the music publisher has his hands full trying to satisfy Red Hodgson, who has claimed authorship.

Song Control

ANYWAY, I think it's a consolation that some 3,600 songs under the control of Warner Brothers, many of which have been played much too often, will be given a needed rest, at least until their music publishing houses can reach an agreement with the broadcasters. Until that time many programs and baton wavers will have to do without their famous theme songs. Among them are: Abe Lyman, dropping California Here I Come; Myrt and Marge, Poor Butterfly; and Ray Noble, who will have to do without his own The Very Thought Of You, that he wrote for his signature.

Sponsor Tidbit

GEORGE OLSEN and his frau, ETH-EL SHUTTA, have been signed for a commercial series to start February 21 over an NBC network in behalf of a tooth-brush manufacturer. Right here and now I want to tell the sponsor they couldn't have selected anyone better to advertise their product. The Olsens have about the best sets of molars in radio. Smile, George!

Exclusive Rights

If you've listened to FRANK PARKER'S program on CBS Saturday nights, perhaps you've wondered who furnishes the music. It isn't announced so I got curious myself and I walked myself into the studio and discovered Red Nichols is the guy who waves the baton. You see, Red's name—and why they call him Red is a mystery because he doesn't have red hair—isn't used because his contract with the College Prom sponsor calls for the exclusive use of the Nichols tag.

And let me tell you something else I noticed on the FRANK PARKER show. Although PATTI CHAPIN is the gal who sings with Frank Parker, it's ROSEMARY DE CAMP who reads her lines.

Traveling Boake

NOW let's get down to some news that's news in every sense of the word. As you know we hear lots of news over the air from the Press Radio Bureau, Trans-Radio, United Press dispatches, besides a dozen or so commentators. But here's some inside dope that will have a new twist to this news chatter. There's a plan underway whereby BOAKE CARTER'S sponsor will send him by airplane to the scene of each day's big news story, and have him give the news right from the actual scene!

News Notes

SOME hurried notes for yez: MARTHA BOSWELL, a third of the Boswell Sisters, was married on New Year's Day to MAJOR GEORGE L. LLOYD of the Royal Air Force . . . BABS RYAN will wait until she finishes her engagement at the Chez Paree in Chicago before departing for Miami, Florida, to marry JOCKEY BOB MERRITT . . . And Florida is where Bess—Lady Esther and Frances Moran of Today's Children—Johnson will spend a two or three weeks' vacation during February . . . I forgot to mention in my stork item last week another expected arrival—anyway, by the time you read this, JACK BANNER, the little guy who writes so many swell yarns for RADIO GUIDE, should be a proud Daddy for the second time. Congrats and good luck, Jack, and my best to Mrs. B.

Versatile Chester

IF AN actor turns singer, do you call that news? If so, CHESTER STRATTON is news. For months and months Chester has been doing all sorts of roles in CBS dramatic shows. For months and months he tried to get auditionEARS to listen to him sing. He finally succeeded, and they tell me he's good. If you want to convince yourself, listen to him on the LUD GLUSKIN show Tuesday nights.

Anniversary

DID you hear LAWRENCE TIBBETT sing on New Year's Eve? If you did, I'll let you in on a secret. One of the songs he sang that night was just for one person—Mrs. Tibbett. You see, New Year's day was their fourth wedding anniversary, and he sang the famous composition at a private concert where he met the attractive woman who is now his wife. After their introduction she told him how much she enjoyed that particular number, so now every year at the same time Tibbett includes it on his program.

Gloria, who is the Micky Considine of the Jumbo show, feels safe from an adverse fate while in the arms of her lover Matt Mulligan, played and sung by Donald Novis

ONE look at Gloria Grafton—she's the sweetly singing heroine of Jumbo—and you wouldn't worry about her very much. Instinctively, you'd know that she can take it.

The last year has proved that; proved that to the world and, most important, to Gloria herself.

Listen to these tough breaks. In the last year she'd been hired for, and rehearsed with, four musical comedies, but never appeared in even one. Her first radio contract was a sponsored one, but an automobile accident made her lose it. Twice she was screen-tested, but hers was the face that always wound up on the cutting room floor.

Seven spirit-breaking setbacks in one year! No wonder Gloria's outlook on life was hopelessly tarnished the vivid opening night of Jumbo. No wonder that in all of New York there was only one person who refused to believe that a new singing and dramatic star had been uncovered on the stage of the Hippodrome that very evening. That person was Gloria Grafton herself.

As she told me some weeks later: "In those days if I had been Mother Eve there'd have been two serpents in the garden and a worm in every apple. That's how unlucky I was!"

With the cards stacked against her, how did she get her One Big Chance in Jumbo? Well, to begin with, she did two very unorthodox things. First, she bought a ticket home to California.

SECOND, she got mad clean through. And the more she took stock, the madder she got. So the producers thought she was a nice kid with a nice voice, did they? That she should stick to the night clubs and forget the stage, should she? She'd tell them a thing or two before she returned home!

And she did! Furiously angry, she tracked down every producer in New York, and the things that Gloria told them about their lack of brains and perspicacity would fill a couple of asbestos-lined volumes. Satisfied at having burned her bridges behind her, Gloria Grafton prepared to return home.

Then occurred one of those curious little coincidences that often turn the course of one's life. She already had packed her belongings, and was killing some time in her room by reading a theatrical sheet, when fate directed her eyes to a tiny news item tucked away in an obscure corner:

"Dorothy Stone has left the cast of Jumbo, which is now in rehearsal. Producer Billy Rose is still on the lookout for a candidate to portray the role of Micky Considine, one of the lead characters in the production."

Gloria's sly eyes gleamed as she put down the paper. Funny how she'd overlooked Billy Rose in her berserk stampede through the ranks of the producers. Grimly she determined to call him—not so much in hope of landing the part in Jumbo, but because she wanted to tell him what she thought of him, too. She wanted a hundred per cent score before entraining for the Coast.

"Hello, Billy," she said sweetly over the wire. "This is Gloria Grafton. I'd like to try out for the part of Micky Considine. I understand it's still open."

ROSE'S answer ran true to form. "You're a sweet kid, Gloria," he replied. "And you've got a swell club voice. But I need an artist for that part—someone who can act as well as sing. Furthermore, you're much too tall. Micky Considine must be petite and dainty, for she'll appear in a ballet costume throughout the show." "I understand," was Gloria's grim reply. "But, Billy, I'll be passing your office shortly. You won't mind if I drop in for a few moments? No?—I won't ask you for the part again. Thanks. I'll be over soon."

A desperate hysteria gripped Gloria as she slammed down the receiver. Grabbing her hat and coat, she stormed into the street and hailed a cab. "I'm too tall, am I?" she gritted as the cab threaded its way through the traffic. Her feet beat a tattoo on the uncarpeted floor of the car. "I've got a 'club' voice, have I? And I can't act, eh?" Wrathfully she swung her foot, and suddenly her shoe clattered to the floor. She stared at the long, spike-heeled pump idly for a second, then stooping swiftly she retrieved the slipper and placed it back on her foot . . .

"Why didn't I think of that before?" she whispered as she settled back.

Billy Rose, impresario extraordinary, answered the telephone with an impatient snort. "Yes, yes, what is it?" he asked.

"A Miss Gloria Grafton to see you," answered his secretary. "Will you see her?"

Apparently he would, for a few seconds later Gloria was facing him.

"Good Lord!" said the startled producer, as the shoeless Gloria patted across the floor of his office. "Where are your shoes?"

"Park'd outside your doorstep," answered Gloria. "But you see, Billy, I'm not so tall after all, am I?"

A look of understanding dawned in Rose's eyes. "N-no," he smiled. "But, Gloria, you can't act in your bare feet!"

THAT was the opening Gloria was waiting for. "The part of Micky Considine calls for a ballet costume throughout," she replied inexorably. "And you know ballet slippers are perfectly flat!"

Billy Rose fidgeted with his watch. "Yes—but, Gloria, I want a girl who can act," he said. "A girl with real dramatic fire—"

That was as far as Billy Rose got. All of Gloria's pent-up emotions flared up and exploded as she saw her one opportunity slipping away. Furiously she launched into a tirade well calculated to strip the hide from a far thinner-skinned individual than Billy Rose.

Bitterly Gloria denounced producers who incessantly pleaded for new talent, and then refused to grant newcomers an audience. Her lithe, trim body swayed like a reed in the wind as she crossed and recrossed the office from door to desk, from desk to door. Shapely arms and legs moved furiously, as if they were controlled by an unseen, angry puppet-master.

And swiftly the shrewd eyes of Billy Rose narrowed. He said not a word until the girl paused for breath. Then:

"Sit down!" he commanded curtly. He picked up the telephone and instructed the girl in the outer office to call Hecht and MacArthur. Gloria waited, dumbfounded and defiant, while the call was completed.

LISTEN," said Rose at last, into the phone. "I've got the girl who can play the part of Micky Considine." Gloria gasped. "I've always known she could sing," Rose continued, "but until a moment ago I didn't think she could act. We'll meet you at the Hippodrome in ten minutes."

Gloria smiled as she told me how her courage deserted her and her legs turned to water as she stood on the stage of the great theater. Save for a few scattered lights, the huge house was dark and deserted.

"Away up under the roof in the top balcony were three little blobs," she tells. "Three little blobs named Hecht, Rose and MacArthur. They were up there because they wanted to test the carrying qualities of my voice."

"All right!" bawled Rose, his voice floating weakly down from that great distance. "Go ahead and sing!"

Gloria gazed about uneasily. There was no microphone. There was no sound amplifying system. There was no accompanist. How, she wondered amazedly, was she going to fill that vast auditorium with her unaided voice?

Gloria's soft, raven forelock trembled above her thin young forehead with the intensity of the thought, and her fingers fiddled nervously with the shoulder straps of her dress.

SUDDENLY she bristled, an angry gleam lighting the erstwhile calm of her eyes. So that was it! They had given her her chance solely to torment her. For a second she was tempted to storm off the stage, but resolve wiped out the feeling of fear and anger. She flung back her dark head, half closed her eyes, and began to sing.

"I sang," Gloria recalls, "at the top of my voice. I sang a song which I introduced to New York several seasons ago. Two Cigarettes in the Dark. But I was singing to three cigarettes, glowing faintly in the gallery. Three cigarettes with glowing tips that seemed like glittering, evil eyes in that monstrous, dark place. When I finished the song I was convinced that I had failed—that the trio in the gallery hadn't heard a single note."

"But down from their seats tumbled Hecht, Rose and MacArthur. And they were beaming. Hecht handed me a script, telling me to read a few passages. And the next thing I was handed was a contract."

The rest is radio and Broadway history. Today Gloria Grafton is at the peak. But few know, however, that Gloria Grafton is haunted by the fear that the voice which has brought her fame and fortune may leave her at any moment, without warning. For it happened once before, on the very eve of her first Jumbo broadcast!

After weeks of grueling, intensive rehearsals, Jumbo was ready to be launched on the airwaves. It was the afternoon of the final dress rehearsal—just five scant hours before the microphone was to send her voice into millions of homes from coast to coast, when Gloria discovered that Fate had dealt her another joker. She was unable to sing a note, or even speak above a whisper!

GLORIA still shudders as she recalls this nightmare experience. Put yourself in her place. For years she had prayed and dreamed and fought for her place in the sun, and now, just a few short hours before the fulfillment of these dreams, her voice had deserted her. Many women—yes, even men—would have wept bitter tears. But Gloria awaited the doctors, dry-eyed. Relief measures were tried, but nothing seemed to help.

CHIN out, head erect. Gloria went home while a substitute was summoned hastily to take her place in Jumbo. She wasn't particularly frightened or disillusioned. She was too numb for that.

That night the miracle occurred. An hour before broadcast time Gloria breathlessly rushed into the Hippodrome Theater, her voice completely recovered!

And the malignant jinx which had hounded her career hasn't returned since.

In the opening paragraph of this story I intimated that Gloria Grafton could "take it." Can she? I'll let you be the judge of that.

The Texas Company presents Gloria Grafton with Donald Novis, Jimmy Durante and others on the Jumbo show every Tuesday evening over an NBC-WEAF network at 9:30 p. m. EST (8:30 CST; 7:30 MST; 6:30 PST).

If you study the face of glorious Gloria, no matter how closely, you never could guess the heartbreak she suffered—the very genuine display of real emotion she had to exhibit—before she was given her coveted part in the super-spectacle him. We're going to blow him apart."

That, too, has its humorous points, but you get the general idea. Not hard at all, is it? Of course, there's one other tiny chore and that is to write a fifty-word-or-less paragraph telling "Why I Want a Scottie." That should be easy for any dog-lover.

Now, for some special information. Gabriel Heatter and the editor of RADIO GUIDE are to be the judges. Please get your entries in early. This contest closes at midnight on January 18. The next week, however, and each week henceforth until further notice, a different contest is planned. So if you don't win this week's Scottie, you may win next week.

The contest will be identical except that each week the question to be answered in the fifty word paragraph will be changed.

NOW, if all that is amply understood, get your wits to working for you. A pedigreed dog, blooded like the best, may soon be yours.

You'll discover who the week's winner is by listening Saturday, January 25, to Gabriel Heatter on his Week-End News Revue.

You'll like this man, Heatter. He's a product of the two-fisted hard-hitting newspaper school. You can tell it by the way he talks. And you'll like the job he does dishing up the high spots of a busy news week.

Tall, biggish, and the kind of guy who'll go through hell if there's a story in it, he packs a lot of excitement and adventure into his voice. It isn't phony excitement, either. When he talks about going under the Hudson River to see a tunnel driven through rock and sand, he's been there.

The public first got well acquainted with him as a result of his broadcasts of the Hauptmann trial in Flemington, New Jersey. Those talks of his, by the way, built up a genuine Heatter cult of listeners. And they're still "that way" about the big, brawny talker, which is only one of the reasons Scott's Emulsion is so well pleased with his program.

YOUR story may be on one of those programs just a week or so away—if you act now. And your old shoes may be chewed to rags and rubbish a fortnight from now—if you know a funny news story and send it to us.

Write it any way you wish, pen, pencil, or typewriter, and any length. But write! The first Scottie is tugging at his leash and rarin' to go home.

Rules

1. Contestants are required (1) to submit a funny news story and (2) fifty words or less on the subject "Why I Want a Scottie."
2. First prize will be one pedigreed Scottie dog.
3. First prize will be awarded to the contestant who submits the funniest story and gives the best reason for wanting a Scottie.
4. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded, and the decision of the judges shall be final.
5. Judges will be Gabriel Heatter and the editor of RADIO GUIDE.
6. Any contestant may submit as many stories as he wishes.
7. No correspondence can be entered into regarding stories submitted, and all stories, upon receipt, become property of RADIO GUIDE.
8. No employees of RADIO GUIDE or members of their families are eligible to compete.
9. Address all entries to Scottie Contest Editor, RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.
10. All entries for Contest No. 1 must be postmarked before midnight of January 18, 1936.

Gabriel Heatter will announce the winner's name and read the Scottie-winning story on his Week-End News Revue at 5:45 p.m. EST (4:45 CST; 3:45 MST; 2:45 PST), Saturday, January 25, over these stations: WJZ WFIL WBAL WMAL WBZ WBZA WSYR WHAM KWK KDKA WXYZ WGAR WCKY WENR KMT KSO WREN KOIL WMC WAVE WAPI WJDX WSM WSB

JUST when we were wondering what the first miracle of 1936 would be, comes a fellow with a lot of Scottie dogs and a lot of ideas and a lot of fine-sounding words. And he says to us, "I'd like to trade one of my dogs for a funny news story."

What in thunder, we thought, was a funny news story? Well, the fellow told us. The fellow, by the way, was Gabriel Heatter, the news broadcaster who has been doing such a handsome job these Saturday afternoons in behalf of his Scott's Emulsion bosses. The fellow, by the way, should know what a funny news story is because he's been in the news story business since long before any one of his Scotties was even a pup. If a funny one ever turns up, he knows it. But more about him in a minute.

Right now, we're telling you about this new weekly contest Gabriel Heatter and RADIO GUIDE have cooked up between 'em.

TO BEGIN with, we present herewith a fascinating game of wits. The rules thereof are in an adjacent column. They are simple and easy to follow. All you've got to do is . . . tell us a funny news story.

Which brings us back to the question: what is a funny news story? Well, it has to be news first. That means you may see it happen or you may hear about it or you may read it in the papers. Second, it has to be funny. For instance, remember the story of the elephant that was riding in a trailer out in New Jersey last month? The trailer capsized and the elephant fell out. When the machine was righted and the trainer tried to get his Jumbo back aboard, Jumbo refused. The trainer led Jumbo around the block in an attempt to get her mind off her recent accident. She circled the block willingly but still refused to climb back on the trailer. After two days of vain wheedling, the trainer was forced to walk Jumbo the remainder of the distance home—twenty-five dusty miles.

That, we submit, is a funny news story. So is the one about the ex-convict who stole an empty automobile and then, learning it was a squad car, turned on the radio and heard the police in another car report "We've sighted him. We're gaining on

RIDE FOR LIFE

Calling All Cars

At Seventy—Eighty and up They Sped Through the Streets of Cleveland — a Squad Car Intent upon Catching a Maniac Before He Turned a Triple Shooting Into a Quintuple Murder

By Arthur Kent

IN ALL the twelve years of her life, little Miss Beverly Martin never had seen a gunman. Of course, that wasn't strange: very few nice people know gunmen, and Beverly decidedly was a nice young person.

She was sitting with her mother, Mrs. Florence Martin, in the family car. They were parked at the curb, on a street in downtown Cleveland, in front of the B. F. Keith Building. It was nearly noon on Saturday—a clear October day—and Mrs. Martin was checking her shopping list. There was a new warm coat for Beverly and a pair of sensible shoes for school. For the house . . .

Mack Bush and Norm Townsend walked past the Martin car. Mack and Norm were smart-looking fellows. Their clothes were natty, their haircuts were smooth, and their polished shoes twinkled as they stepped briskly along. But Mack and Norm were not nice people. Many a well-cut coat hides a well-oiled gat.

Up eleven stories in the B. F. Keith Building went Bush and Townsend. Leaving the elevator they turned down the hall, passed beyond a door bearing the inscription: "E. S. QUINLAN JEWELRY CO."

There were two men behind the long showcase in the jewelry establishment. Bush—who had cased this job—knew that the gray-haired gentleman near the window was Edmund S. Quinlan. A younger, larger chap was his son Herbert.

"What would it cost me," Bush asked mildly, "to have this stone set in a ring?" The jeweler leaned closer—stretched out his right hand for the jewel.

"Put your hands up!" Bush didn't raise his voice, but its new tone should have warned the younger Quinlan. Surprised, he jerked up his head. Saw the little steel ring that was a gun muzzle. It was pointing straight at his stomach.

"You, too!" Norm Townsend snapped at the older man. With startled eyes, Quinlan Senior obeyed. His arms trembled as he raised them. "And keep 'em up, you old —!"

THIS was too much for Herbert Quinlan. Utterly without thought of his own safety, he commenced to charge around the end of the counter which separated him from the two thugs—and their pistols. And as he did so, the creases deepened about the mad eyes of Townsend.

"Crack!" Townsend's pistol kicked ever so slightly. Young Quinlan straightened, stiffened—then jack-knifed to the floor, face down.

For an instant the father paused, stunned. He saw the wolf's eyes of those two thugs upon him. He saw their guns, trained upon him. Then jerking down his hands, Edmund Quinlan ran the length of the counter, stooping to reach the body of his rash but courageous boy.

That instinctive stooping saved the older man's life.

"Crack!" The slug which was fired at the father's stomach tore instead through the lobe of his ear. But Edmund Quinlan scarcely felt it. Kneeling on the floor, he gathered his dying son in his arms, as the two murderers ran out the door.

"Phone—police!" gasped out the indomitable Herbert. And so it happened that even as Bush and Townsend forced a cringing elevator operator to speed them down eleven floors to the street, this message was winging to police radio patrols throughout Cleveland:

"Calling Cruiser No. 1 and Detective Cruiser D-1 . . . Man reported shot in a robbery in the Keith Building, at East 17th and Euclid . . . All cars be on the lookout for . . ."

BUT a traffic cop who was on duty at the corner—Patrolman Fred Blazier—did notice the sprinting Townsend. He saw him dash to the left front door of the Martin automobile.

"Hey, you!" cried Patrolman Blazier. At the sound of his voice, mother and daughter turned. They saw the policeman running towards them. Like something in a bad dream, they saw the hard face of Norman Townsend, a few inches from the car door.

Up came Townsend's right hand. The policeman was reaching for his gun as he ran, but the man with the hard face fired first. And Beverly screamed as she saw the policeman fall down in the street.

"Get over there or I'll kill you!" A voice that was inhuman, a snarl, the rasp of a night bird, invaded the car as the door was wrenched open. A man who was not like any man Beverly ever had seen, punched her mother and pushed her from behind the driving wheel. The little girl crouched in terror at her mother's right side. She screamed without stopping.

"Don't hurt my baby!" the woman pleaded. The car started with a jerk that nearly tore the rear end out. Townsend's mad eyes flicked to the right, then back to the street.

"Shut her up or I'll kill her!" he yelled, in a voice that rose to a scream. "I'll shoot her heart out, and yours, too, if you don't shut up!"

WILD with fear, Mrs. Martin looked back. Far behind them, the policeman lay. People were running towards him. Hardly knowing what she was doing, the distracted woman pushed Beverly into the back seat, and climbed over to join her. As she did so, the car lurched around a corner and she was thrown heavily against the side. Little Beverly shrieked continuously. For a while the maniac behind the wheel paid no attention. But to his two victims in the back seat it seemed that the city careened around them wildly as he took corner after corner on two wheels.

Meanwhile, radio cars were swooping down around the Keith Building. First to arrive were Sergeant Anthony Koryta and his squad. Swiftly this experienced officer called an ambulance for Herbert Quinlan, and while a surgeon attended to the torn ear of Quinlan's heartbroken father, Koryta drew from the latter a description of the murderers. This was immediately broadcast. And then the story of their escape from the . . . (Continued on Page 41)

A PLAYBOY CAN MAKE YOU MISERABLE

"You must admire the poor fellow," Charlie said. "I've never before met a gardener with such a great love for life." And so Freddie stayed on.

They did, however, finally fire the expensive decorator whom Charlie hired because he had such original ideas. While the farmhouse at Nyack was being decorated, Helen and Charlie took a trip to Bermuda. While there they discovered some gay and glamorous posters, mostly pictures of fruit and such, and bought half a dozen of them for five dollars. These they sent home, planning to paste them up in their playroom. Until they got home, they wrote the decorator, he could put them up in the dining room. They thought that he'd stick them up tentatively with thumb tacks.

When they returned home, they found that the decorator had mounted the posters on canvas panels. Three Italian painters were at work painting a marble-like frame in different colors around the posters. The decorations for the cheap posters cost $5,000! To match the marblelike decorations on the wall, the floor was decorated with layers of rubber patterned like marble!

This time Charlie did not protest when Helen said they'd simply have to fire the decorator! He was a little upset anyway, because the first time he took a bath in the teakwood bathtub the decorator had designed, the tub leaked. For once the joke was on Charlie!

During his years as a reporter in Chicago, he had one unerring trick which he used whenever he wanted to drink. He would bring some friends into a barroom, introduce them to the proprietor as smallpox patients, and when the proprietor fled in fear, he would take possession of the barroom.

Helen Hayes is intensely serious about her work. Charlie MacArthur possesses undoubted genius, but acts as if his work were just a lark. His attitude undoubtedly worries Helen frequently. But she never scolds.

In Hollywood, the three expensive Barrymores had been hired for Rasputin, but the script wasn't ready. The producers came to Charlie and begged him to write the script in a hurry. He promised to slave on it for the next forty-eight hours. A few hours later a friend found Charlie sunning himself at the Santa Monica Beach Club.

"I thought you were working, Charlie," said the friend.

"Oh, no," said Charlie, "I've been swimming. And I've had a grand time thinking how much dough this swim of mine is costing the studio."

In spite of all this, during all their married life, there was only one time when Helen really lost her temper with Charlie. It was during those hectic days when she first arrived in Hollywood to make The Sin of Madelon Claudet. The day before she arrived, Charlie spent $50 on silk stockings and lingerie, which he tossed carelessly around his apartment as a joke on Helen. The effect was so realistic that Helen didn't speak to him for three weeks!

Helen Hayes is presented in The New Penny by the General Foods Corporation every Tuesday evening over an NBC-WJZ network at 9:30 p. m. EST (8:30 CST; 7:30 MST; 6:30 PST); and every Monday over an NBC-split network at 12 midnight EST (11 p. m. CST; 10 MST; 9 PST).

Casting Reflections

Dear VOL: The only good thing I heard on the Show Boat program last night was the suggestion contained in the precurtain talk between Lanny Ross and Captain Henry that Conrad Dabault was likely to be back on the program in the near future. Let's do more than talk about it. Give 'em "Hail Columbia" through RADIO GUIDE until they get right again. Please excuse slang—I feel like cussing.
Augusta, Georgia J. P. S.

Conrad is already back and a great many people are happier. Rumor says that RADIO GUIDE's story, Cupid Is a Pooch, (page 3, Dec. 14) helped.—Ed.

To Bea or Not to Bea?

Dear VOL: In a recent issue of a very intellectual and exclusive publication, Mr. Derms Taylor—one of the wittiest and most versatile of gentlemen—included Miss Irene Bea Beasley in his perfect radio program.

We listeners don't need college degrees nor other distinctions in order to enjoy Miss Beasley's singing. Her clever arrangements, enhanced by her soft, pleasing voice, appeal to us all. We accept a great deal of poor material on the air, but when our desire to have Bea Beasley back with us is so obvious, why doesn't some sponsor make up to real talent?
Flushing, New York Jane Greenberg

RADIO GUIDE agrees with both Mr. Taylor and Miss Greenberg; Miss Beasley's talent is too fine to be wasted.—Ed.

D. Arnold Sponsor!

Dear VOL: Apparently other listeners feel as I do that the sponsors of Greater Minstrel made a big mistake when they let Gene Arnold go. I had a curious feeling of bewilderment the first evening I tuned in and found him gone. That show literally is his baby, for he was the first to see the possibilities of the minstrel show for radio.
Fort Collins, Colorado Isla Sutherland

Our "Open Letter to Gene Arnold" (Jan. 11), explained why Mr. Arnold no longer heads his famous show.—Ed.

M. & M. vs. A. & A.

Dear VOL: Why, or why can't we have Myrt and Marge at 7:15 instead of 7 so we can also get Amos and Andy? I'm sure the public would be glad to be able to get both programs as it would save so much squabble at home when some want one and some the other.

Birth Control

Dear VOL: I have just read Mrs. Rhodes' letter in your December issue. If she thinks it is criminal to publicize anything as personal as having a baby, there is nothing that can be done about it. But she is unreasonable to speak for the nation in declaring that radio would be better off without the girls. There are those of us who are simpleminded enough to enjoy Clara, Lu 'n' Em and, knowing New England as we do, realize that the girls couldn't be more true-to-life if they were the characters they portray instead of three very clever college graduates.
Newtown, Connecticut Peggy

Clara, Lu 'n' Em are leaving radio (RADIO GUIDE, Dec. 28) so future children may be born without disrupting either their broadcasts or family life.—Ed.

At the Cross Rhodes

Dear VOL: In reply to Mrs. Harry Rhodes of our home town whose letter appears in this week's RADIO GUIDE, speaking of self respect, I think your idea of self respect is warped somewhat. I won't comment on Clara, Lu 'n' Em's program as I don't have time to listen to them. But as for Lulu Belle, I think she's fine and it's plain to see she's a natural born comedienne and I enjoy her programs very much. And about the stork affair, it is as nature intended and the papers are full of blessed event articles concerning famous people, so where does your idea of self respect come in? More power to Lulu Belle.
Racine, Wisconsin Mrs. John Cherney

Mrs. Cherney is right, RADIO GUIDE and Mrs. Rhodes agree. A stork affair is as nature intended, indeed.—Ed.

Sheehan's Believin'

Dear VOL: Beatrice Blage well might have listened to the story which a commentator related recently. It ran something like this: A young man boasted that when advertising announcements were rendered over the radio he stuffed his ears. When asked if he would attend a dinner and leave without expressing his appreciation to his hostess he admitted that he would not. What is the difference?

Music in the Air

By Carleton Smith

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI was to have conducted the General Motors Symphony concert this Sunday, January 12, before he left for his Winter vacation in California. However, a last minute change in plans cancelled this appearance, and we will not have this chance to note the difference in this orchestra's performance under his baton. And that is a pity, for Mr. Stokowski, whatever his Dionysian interpretive gifts, is, in addition, the world's finest orchestra drill-master. No orchestra sounds any better, as sound, than his Philadelphia ensemble.

No Philadelphia Orchestra Broadcasts
YOU may have wondered why Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra have been on the air so infrequently this Winter. It is because they have found no sponsor, and Mr. Stokowski believes that a sustaining series injures the orchestra's chance of being sought commercially. He cites, as an illustration, the Philharmonic-Symphony now in its sixth season as a sustaining feature. Therefore, he is keeping himself and his orchestra scarce on the air, in the belief that public demand and the rarity of the commodity will increase its value.

Children's Concerts

THE opening program in the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society Concerts for Children and Young People is entitled: Recapitulation of Instruments and the Percussion Group. ROMAN TOTENBERG, young Polish violinist, will be soloist in the third movement of Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole. (January 11, CBS at 11 a. m. EST; 10 CST; 9 MST; 8 PST). Others will be Sibelius' Finlandia, the overture to Handel's Messiah, Rudolph Ganz' Animal Pictures, part of Tchaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite, and Navarra by Albeniz. The children present will sing the Welsh air, All Through the Night.

Sir Thomas Beecham

A MOST colorful figure from contemporary English music circles is our guest these Sundays (CBS at 3 p. m. EST; 2 CST; 1 MST; 12 noon PST). He is SIR THOMAS BEECHAM, a rather Oriental-looking man with a Van Dyke beard, who is presenting a festival of English music and Mozart symphonies with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra.

Sir Thomas, now fifty-five, has had much fun since he inherited millions from his father, a well-known business man who acquired his fortune in the manufacture of pills. Founding orchestras has been a special hobby, and he has given many concerts in London, "as remarkable," according to

Groves, "for the enterprise of their programs as for the sparseness of their audiences." At one time he lost five million dollars on opera, and he himself says: "My most successful season of opera was in Russian. No one understood a word of it."

One amusing tale about him is that on a warmish afternoon he went promenading in a heavy overcoat. As he walked he grew warmer and warmer. Finally he hailed a taxi, opened the door, deposited his coat in the cab. Telling the chauffeur to follow him, he continued his stroll.

His platform manner has been described as "highly unconventional. It betokens the enthusiastic amateur (in the best sense,) who practises his art as a sport, as something to enjoy . . . He is never tiresome. He never opens his mouth except to say something bright. Even an orchestra appreciates that . . . and they like his peppy tempi, his electric rhythms, and his incisive accents."

Sir Thomas finishes his stay with the New York Philharmonic Symphony Sunday, January 19, and then spends a week with the Philadelphia Orchestra before he sails back to England.

LONELY LITTLE STAR

broke, having spent everything on my education.

When my parents died several months later, just a few weeks apart, Manzoni was made my guardian. I was singing in tough night clubs in Chicago then, but I was so young and innocent; I didn't know what it was all about. Manzoni saw to that.

We were married on my twenty-first birthday. But it didn't work out. When Manzoni offered me my freedom, I took it. And I never had known whether he was really being generous or whether it was just another scheme to keep me under his domination by remaining as my manager.

I sat down across from him. "I haven't forgotten," I said, "but you couldn't give me happiness. You admitted it. Haven't I a right to seek it for myself?"

He reached out and took my hand. "Listen," he said, and his face shone with a fanatic light, "we can't stop now. We're in sight of the Promised Land—fame and riches. Later—later there will be time for you to seek happiness. Why, you can buy it!

"But now you excite yourself," he soothed. "You worry about your cold . . . I will solve this for you. There will be no rehearsal. You go home at once and rest. Tonight will be request night—you sing old songs, only those you know by heart, that you can sing in your sleep. Go now, go—go—go!"

He began to shoo me out of the room almost before I knew what was happening to me.

Going home through the park in the chill Fall air, depression came over me, a numbing fear that it would always be like that. Whenever I had decided to strike out for myself, Manzoni, by coaxing or threats, would somehow get the better of me. I hugged my secret meeting with Dan to my heart.

I thought about Dan a lot that afternoon as I lay stretched out on my bed in my negligee. Finally I decided to call Sheffield House to see if there were any messages, although I hardly expected to hear from him yet.

But sure enough, he had left word for me to call him at his office.

The sound of his cheery voice was like a tonic to me.

"I've got a swell idea!" he said. "Why don't you come over and cook dinner for me tomorrow night?"

I had agreed before I realized that I hardly knew how to boil water!

I think it was the prospect of seeing Dan which got me through the evening's performance. I forgot to worry about my cold, and my voice flowed

Medal of Merit

Above you see them in two of the few photographs ever made of the popular pair broadcasting — Amos, left, and Andy

I ONCE heard George Bernard Shaw say there were three things he would never forget about America. The first two were the Rocky Mountains and Niagara Falls. The third was Amos 'n' Andy.

Many years have passed since Amos 'n' Andy and Announcer Bill Hay formed the triple threat team that was to conduct the most successful attack on gloom our kilocycles can remember. Measured in terms of radio life, the three of them are creaky-kneed ancients. Amazingly, the fine fun of their broadcasts today is still as rich as it was in the beginning.

So we nominate Amos 'n' Andy to receive the first medal of Merit ever awarded by RADIO GUIDE.

It is fitting, we think, that the largest and oldest radio publication in America should point its editorial finger occasionally at great artists or programs. Henceforth, this medal is to be a monthly feature. It will recognize and reward outstanding ability, originality, or conspicuous contributions to the art of broadcasting. Because Amos 'n' Andy have brought a needy world the gift of laughter, because they have never permitted a smutty remark to color their program, and because millions of listeners love them, we present to them the RADIO GUIDE Medal of Merit.—C.M.

Their day's stint done, the boys leave the Chicago NBC studios for a brief chat about how they think they went over—and also for a very badly needed rest orous. They're not supposed to own up to any flaws. Bad business, don't you know. But Jane is much too frank and honest. a person to hide behind such petty arguments. And she talked for what I think is a noble reason. Because her story, besides being a valuable one to others who stutter, is also an inspiring one to the great number of folks who think they are burdened with an unsurmountable handicap.

AND that's why, to the readers of RADIO GUIDE, Jane Froman is telling for the first time the inside story of how she conquered her handicap. "This is the first time I've conducted an interview myself," said Jane, delighted as a kid about to take her first train ride. It was true. I remember in the past, hubby Don Ross always had come to her aid by doing the talking for her. It was too awful to watch Jane struggle with words. But now he sat nearby, encouraging her by a nod or a smile to continue. "You remember, Helen, I had received quite a few offers from practically every moving-picture company in Hollywood for the past three years. But I never took them up. I was afraid. How could I possibly say lines in the movies? This Summer, however, I took the chance. Don was going out there to appear in a film, and anything else. I thought I was doomed to stutter the rest of my life. "The teacher listened to me and then told me, 'You can overcome your stutter only by great sacrifice. It won't be easy. You'll have to live up to the rules rigidly. If you break them even once, you'll have to start all over from the beginning.' "That didn't sound very encouraging, but I learned that she didn't tell me the half of it. Talk about sacrifices and rigid rules! Listen to what I had to go through: "First I had to overcome every trace of nervousness. I had to be perfectly relaxed. Calm. I wasn't allowed to lose my temper. I wasn't allowed to get the slightest bit ruffled. I, who love activity and hustle and bustle, had to sit back with folded hands like a nice old lady. Believe me, it was hard! Don acted as a perfect buffer and worrier for me so that I didn't have the slightest occasion to be upset about any little detail. Why, I wasn't even allowed to drink coffee! Might get on my nerves. You can see what precautions were taken to make me as placid as a cow. "Then came the greatest ordeal of my life. I was ordered to stay absolutely silent for seven days and nights. Not a word, not a syllable was I allowed to utter. Unless I agreed to

Jane's profile is one of the most appealing among the starlets who were called by Hollywood's moguls

Any help Jane could give herself toward overcoming that cursed defect, she did. Note the hand to her face when she hit a high one

Here is Jane with the very automobile she was driving when she had to crawl for a traffic cop

The allure and the charm radiated by Jane have won for her the Hollywood prediction that one day soon she will be among the cinema immortals. From this camera study, surely you agree?

THE other day my telephone brought me one of the biggest thrills of my life. "Hello, Helen"—it was a warm contralto, smooth and even as dropping cream—"this is Jane Froman. I just got back from Hollywood. How are you, hon?" Nothing to it, was there? But to those of us who are very close to Jane, that simple greeting—uttered unhaltingly and flawlessly—was an important event. It signified the end of Jane's nineteen-year-old curse! For Jane Froman, who had looks, talent, fame, fortune, love—had everything, it seemed—had also a most horrible handicap. She stuttered. Terribly! It was heartbreaking to watch her try to talk. Of course you knew that Jane stuttered. The story has been told again and again. But strangely, weirdly, her stuttering didn't show in her singing. It was only when she talked. That's why, when you saw her on the vaudeville stage—if you were lucky enough to have caught an eyeful of this lovely girl—you didn't hear her do a thing except sing. Some of the stories that had been told about her said that the stutter had been banished, licked. But that's because she did nothing on the air either but sing. The terrifying, embarrassing habit persisted in her speech. But now— I had received letters from Jane in Hollywood hinting about her "speech cure." But never did I expect such a change from the stumbling faltering to the normal flow of words now at her command. She had achieved the near-miracle. "How did she do it?" everyone wants to know. I asked Jane. To many radio stars, discussing personal defects is strictly tabu. Stars are supposed to be glam-

WANT to feel sixteen and bubbly again? Want to stay as young as you are?

Then, madam, take a nice big waste-basket and chuck all your youth-restorers and preservatives into it and promptly donate it to the first junk man who'll cart it away.

There's a new and nicer way to stay young these days—and it doesn't have a thing to do with hip lines and double chins and crow's-feet. It's a change you make on the ol' noggin—inside—and it's about ten times as powerful as anything that comes in bottles, jars, bobs, beauty parlors or diets.

It's your ideas. It's your opinions. It's the way you think about things. They are what actually make you young or old!

And for proof of that I give you the person who told me so—Irene Rich, the youngest oldster in the radio world and the envy of a nation full of women. You've heard her on the air and you've seen her pictures and most likely you've often wondered the same thing I did: "How in the world does she do it?"

Well, here's how. I found out straight from the lady herself. And I believe after you've read the details of her youth plan you'll agree it's the best bonafide rejuvenator you've ever found, and incidentally the cheapest. It doesn't cost a thing but common sense and the scrapping of a lot of old-fashioned ideas.

But first I have to tell you what Irene Rich is really, honest-to-goodness like—in looks, personality and everything. Since, if she's the star example of what this new youthifier will do for you, you've got a right to see the finished product in all its glory.

IRENE RICH is forty-four years old. She has been three times divorced; she is the mother of two grown daughters, the eldest of whom is twenty-five. If you had dropped into the swank Junior League Room of the Waldorf the other day, and sat at luncheon as I did with Irene, you would have looked across the table at your idea of a well-dressed young Park Avenue matron. For that classification is the closest I can come to telling you what she is like.

Her tailored street dress was black flat crepe with a wee gold collar and shiny buttons marching down the front. Her furs were silver fox, her jewels a diamond bracelet and two large rings; and her smart black hat hugged one eye with just the right degrees of restraint and dash. Her suede pumps were medium-heeled, her perfume a subtle outdoorsy daytime odeur, and her accessories quietly correct.

Her makeup? Lightly lipsticked with a mere suspicion of rouge. Her manicure—natural. Her hair is long and undyed dark brown, and she wears it in a coil on her neck. She uses no mascara, her eyebrows are unplucked, and her teeth, you notice when she talks, are particularly nice. Her complexion is flawless but there are a few little wrinkles in the expected places, and the lines of her throat and jaw are not so firm and rounded as they must once have been. Her figure, however—the famous Irene Rich figure—is as near perfection as it can be. Slim-hipped, full-chested; nicely proportioned ankles and calves.

YOU sit across from her, then glance at other feminine diners from among New York's Four Hundred, then look at Irene again. And you think you've found the proper pigeon-hole for classifying her: the well-dressed young Park Avenue matron somewhere between, say, thirty and thirty-five.

But then she talks—and ten minutes later, great heavens—you realize you've got to yank her out of that pigeon-hole. And you never find just the right one to put her in again! Because this morning she was up at six for a canter in Central Park, and this afternoon she's going to kidnap daughter Jane out of Miss Finch's School and drive her in the new family Ford to Southampton for the weekend. And she's just bought a small Connecticut farm she's going to live on and run herself next Summer, and Monday she's flying to Hollywood for a few days, and her latest hobby is soap-carving and you should just see the castile giraffe she finished this noon.

AND last night she attended three broadcasts and had the time of her life because she loves seeing broadcasts and she washes all her own handkerchiefs and nighties because she's fastidious about laundries, and yes she does go out with men and loves masculine attention, and she's as absolutely goofy over her daughters as an old hen with two chicks, and some day she aspires to be the grand old lady of stage, screen and radio, and really and truly her career is just beginning to begin.

"And I've had more fun in the four years since I passed forty than I've had in the rest of my life put together. Do you know why? Because I haven't an illusion left! I don't mean that I'm disappointed and cynical—I mean that Winter or Summer, Irene gets as much fresh air as her duties permit. Her interest in dogs is founded in part upon the forced daily airings they require of her lovely age. It really is. Do you know why? Because there's something divinely respectable about it. People just don't criticize what a woman-over-forty does. Somehow they don't expect her to be able to have the joy in living she formerly had. Consequently it's comfortable to be my age. I'm having the time of my life and I love it!"

That's Irene Rich. And if that's not youth—then I'm a toothless old crone! Ask any oldster on radio row and you'll discover Irene is admired because she's such a lovely and real lady. Ask any youngster and you'll be told how swell, how modern and how much fun she is because "Well, she's just so darn young and everything."

And how has she kept her youthfulness? Really and truly how? She has up-to-date, tolerant opinions. Young ideas.

"And as long as I can keep my ideas modern," she told me, "my appearance can age but my joy in living—never! A woman can't help but stay youthful if she thinks youthfully, for I believe (Continued on Page 43)

In the Death House

With a Month or So to Live, These Men Have no Contact With the World Save Radio. What Programs do You Think They Select? The Facts Will Astonish You

By John Brock

THE last message of the outside world to the men who die for murder at Sing Sing—is a radio broadcast. Not a program especially prepared, but a run-of-the-mill program, the kind that you or I might choose and indeed might even be listening to at the same time. Sometimes it is an orchestra playing a set of gay rhythms; once it was Guy Lombardo. Sometimes it is a variety show with gags and clowning and songs: I have in mind the time death came to a man who a short time before had listened to Alan Courtney's show over New York's local station, WNEW. Once it was a news broadcast.

Yes, they're ordinary programs to you who loll and listen critically with thumb and forefinger on the dial, ready to switch stations the moment you get bored. But no program is ordinary to a man who has four things left to do in this world; eat, sleep, listen to the radio—and die. The last thing he does on earth is to put aside the earphones—the last thing before he walks behind the man of the cloth up the one-way corridor which leads to whatever lies beyond this life.

HE WALKS with a trace of laughter on his lips, left there by a factory-made gag spun into the air by perhaps a fifty-dollars-a-week radio comedian. He walks carefully lest he stumble, and it may be the strain of a violin he heard that morning which gives power to his legs and keeps them from trembling. The tears and gaiety and complications of the world are with him, storming through his spirit; life, injected into his ears via the ear-

Warden Lawes, above, frequently broadcasts the story of a death-house inmate whose only interests in what life is left are eating, sleeping and radio phones by radio, is in him as he prepares for the dreadful moment. And for that reason it is somehow easier. A shutting off of the receiver. The clipping of the antenna. A sudden silence.

A PRISONER sentenced to death has anywhere from six weeks to a year in the death house before he is executed. Except for the visits of relatives and the prison chaplain, his entertainment must come from books or the radio. These men who have committed violent crimes are not book readers—nor are they prayerful creatures; and so in most cases the radio is all they have.

There are no loudspeakers in these cells, only earphones. Nor are there dials to twist, to hunt for a change of program in and out of the airwaves. He can indicate to the prison authorities the programs he dislikes, the programs he prefers, and his wishes may be granted, as they are most frequently. But the choice ultimately is theirs. And he must take what he gets. His tastes, however, have become known in the years since radio first was introduced in Sing Sing. And very rarely does a program that will cause pain or discomfort get in.

When Warden Lawes in his own programs has a story to tell of a man who paid with his life, that story does not get into the death house. No programs dealing in death—no tales of great suffering—nothing is admitted to the phones of the condemned men that is likely to remind them of what lies ahead.

PUT yourself in the place of one of these men. If you had a month or so to live and you were locked in a narrow cell, with a radio your only tie with the world you were about to lose—what programs would you select? Would you pick the melancholy numbers, to help you weep for yourself—or would you seek to escape into the worlds of tomfoolery, the worlds of Jack Benny, Walter O'Keefe, Stoopnagle and Budd, Eddie Cantor? Would you get religion and yearn for the slow music of vespers—or would you strain for pieces of hotcha?

To help you, let us take an individual case. This is a young fellow of twenty-three whose home for a time was the death house. A lad of great strength. Passionate, ambitious—he was too impatient for the slow unfolding of fortune. He tried to hurry it with a hold-up. He murdered a bank cashier. Now he was going to die.

It is his third day in the death house. There he lies, stretched on his cot trying to remain tough . . . trying not to think of what's coming . . . trying to forget the girl he will never hold in his arms again . . . his brain weaving and ducking like a boxer trying to evade the crowding thoughts.

Always too active a youngster to be much of a radio listener, he now grabs the earphones. In desperation he listens. His whole body is packed into

It's thrilling — it's the current rave among dance bands—it's a new revival of Will Osborne's — it's detailed for you here by one who knows

By Marvin W. Strate

YOU won't see any sense to that title for quite a while yet, because, like any kid with the frosting off the cake, I save the best for last. But wait until you hear!

Back there at the turn of the century, Toronto, Ontario, was a thriving Canadian city with a lot of people living in it, including a Mr. and Mrs. Osborne. In 1905 they had a little son named William, a charming chap whose fame was strictly limited, at the time, to the members of the Osborne clan. When he tried to pronounce his name it probably sounded like water dripping in the sink, because he gave up the attempt and called himself Will. He was at the tender age when he spoke his own instead of the King's English, but ever since he has never bothered to add the extra syllable and it is by that name you know him today.

At this same tender age it was his pleasure to make the air hideous with the pounding of pots and pans, which, in most youngsters, is taken as a sign of surplus energy. In the case of the Osborne sprout, however, it was the drums of destiny, no less, although even he himself didn't know it until he had to be told by others. For you see, he thought all along that he was a pianist. This peculiar habit of thought was an outgrowth of his boyhood piano lessons and, they told him, had little establishment in fact . . . But all this happened later.

IT WAS no prodigious early talent he evinced, but he liked to make noise—remember, he pounded pots and pans—and when he went to St. Andrew's College he saw his opportunity. Every self-respecting school must have its own band, and this was young Osborne's chance. He played the piano. He was a slight boy—never did weigh a great deal—and the director took that fact as his excuse for switching young Mr. Osborne to the drums. He said he needed the exercise—said it would build him up so he could play rugger or hockey, which Canadians play as if skates grew on their feet. But Will caught wise. He was quick that way. The director really preferred having him do his drumming where it would do some good—on the drums.

ALL that pounding of pots and pans as a child now stood him in good stead, because he had a well-developed sense of rhythm which he applied vigorously, if unconventionally. Even at school he used to get in some good licks and rim shots just for his own amusement, and for a while he was pretty sure he could outroll any other three drummers together—and, just to make it harder, simultaneously. But he never got the chance, because in the school band he had to bat out a one-two-three-four, or a forthright ONE-two-three, ONE-two-three if the director said so.

All of which cramped his style. He wanted to get into the kind of music where a drummer could DO things with a drum, make it talk and suggest a lot of things with the judicious use of a brush, insinuating-like. But still he had an idea that he was a pianist, and it was that idea which made him leave school and wander hopefully, if forlornly, down to New York on the chance of getting a job. This was along about 1922, when dance music was really sinking into the mind, or rather the feet, of the public, and a bright young musician found things booming—even if radio didn't amount to more than a string of dots and dashes at that time.

Will Osborne got in with a Meyer

Will hasn't many days of the working year to spend like this. So he's making the most of a Southern cruise he took recently

Note the easy grace that Will uses when leading his orchestra

Davis society band, one of many such groups which are rented out by the night to play for deb parties and the like. Meyer Davis is the Ford of dance music, turning out the stuff practically on a conveyor belt. It's always a good beginning for a young fellow because he gets a thorough foundation and no silly notions about his own importance while acquiring an education. But here again he met up with that insistence that he should do his drumming on the drums and not on the piano, and Mr. Davis hauled out the drummer's mold and poured young Mr. Osborne into it. This time the form took, and a drummer he would be, and no foolishness about it.

IN 1924, however, the bug bit him, and he decided to drum up a little business for himself, on his own. Radio was making the first noise that didn't sound like dots and dashes about this time, and he went on the air from the Club Kentucky over WMCA. The rest, as almost everybody says sooner or later, is history.

Back in Toronto, St. Andrew's College has a big hall. When Will Osborne was a punk he used to air his vocal chords there without a great deal of success until he picked up one of the cheer leader's megaphones and warbled through that. He doesn't say he invented it; it was just something that would help him fill the hall. With noise, you dope!—not people. (That part came later.) But that certainly makes him one of the earliest megaphone boys and somehow, being accustomed to singing into something, the early mikes didn't offer much opposition to a fellow who really put his mind to it. When his voice went out over the air people recognized it as something new and different—and pleasing. Because, you see, it sounded intimate, as if he were singing to and for that particular listener; and that was a far cry from the fellow who stood up in a great auditorium and made the paint flake off the proscenium with his volume. The public, and this is lesson number one, liked it.

They didn't call it crooning yet; they didn't even call it names, because, as I said, they liked it. But if you want to call singing close up to a microphone with a light, pure voice crooning, that's what it was. He has a resonant quality and an easy delivery that were just made for the microphone technique, and in spite of all arguments he probably was the first to use it properly. More of this later.

IN 1927 Will went with WMCA as director of the house band, which is what the boys in the business call a studio orchestra, still using the same seven pieces with which he had started his public appearances. When the occasion demanded they would fill in up to twelve and thirteen in various combinations. It was with this outfit that he played his first commercial for CBS,

RADIO BABIES

The wonder and the magic of radio, the entertainment world's baby industry, is eclipsed by only one other miracle —and here you have it, six ways

Vin Haworth, the romantic thrill of Myrt and Marge, is shown above with Mrs. Haworth and their own little bundle of romance

Sandra Jean is the lucky youngster shown at the right with her parents, Burns and Allen—gone more daffy than ever since Sandra Jean came —BUT daffy over her

The sturdy youngster below is Gary Evans Crosby, an armful for any mother, but twice so for his petite mother, the former movie star Dixie Lee

Below: Chester Lauck—sure, he's Lum of Lum and Abner—will have his daughter Nancy a radio star or he'll —he'll quit wearin' woollen mittens, by gosh and cracky!

The Phil Bakers may boast about touring, music, top comedian spots and what not—but here are their real pride and joy—little Stuart Henry and his sister, Margot Eleanore, a darling pair

Ray Perkins—of the piano-playing, singing Perkinses—bravely undertakes to tell his small nephew, Ray II, all uncle knows about stamps and stamp-collecting

At Your Station

WITH the unseasonable ice and snow practically forgotten already around Dixy, Slippery time down South is no longer the sectional theme song. But there is an echo of the storm in a recent advertisement in the Macon newspapers acknowledging a utility company's debt to radio in general and WMAZ in particular.

Service by the gas company had to be cut off for four hours and WMAZ was of inestimable help in acquainting consumers what to do in order that the pressure might be restored. The mishap had to occur—of all days—on Christmas.

Obviously Associated Press defiance of radio as a news transmission agency has abated. WMAZ, Macon, reports the big international news communication company's local journal approached it recently with a proffer of its bulletins if the station would abandon its Transradio Press affiliation. The shift has been made and four newsreadings a day are scheduled.

GWENDOLYN FARRELL, Golden Quarter-Hour star, recently was soloist at the Winston-Salem, North Carolina, musicians' presentation of the Messiah.

Two bands have been engaged by WBIG for the two President's Birthday Balls to be given simultaneously at Greensboro, January 30. They are Less Brown's Blue Devils of Duke University and Lew Gogerty's popular players. Both will be broadcast by WBIG.

WMAZ Gossip

THAT UNEXPECTED blending of police calls with regular station broadcasts recently has been done away with after a worrisome search disclosed the cause of the interference. A control room microphone had developed a circuit exactly in tune with the police radio antenna, a block from WMAZ studios, and for a while the strains of Silent Night were shattered by reports of celebrants beating their wives.

Events at WRVA

its tenth anniversary recently it was necessary to refer to some old schedules in order to set up a fitting program. Prominent on the offering for the station's second program a decade ago, was the name of PAT BINFORD, who sang the current hits, Sometime and Yes Sir, That's My Baby. The Corn Cob Pipe Club m.c.'s debut was that inauspicious but he is plenty widely known now thanks to the big network over which the show is aired each week.

What its legislators are doing will be an open book to the WRVA audience. For 60 days the Richmond station will maintain broadcasting facilities right in the state capitol opposite the WRVA studios.

ADOPTION of 17-hour schedules at WRVA prevents the close association of employes which existed when they all worked a straight stretch together. So the station execs recently sponsored an old-time oyster roast at which everyone burnished up friendships grown tarnished from lack of contact.

Affairs at WQAM

WQAM STAFF threw a studio party in honor of the coming marriage of JENNIE RAY NALL, of the production department. Entire proceedings were recorded and the record, together with a silver service, presented to Miss Nall.

The Old Kentucky Clocker returns to the WQAM airways under the Tropical Park banner.

WQAM broadcast an interview between Captain Al Williams flying high over Miami, and city officials gathered in the studio, as part of the air meet pick-ups. . . Captain HOWARD HARTMAN, author of The Seas Were Mine, in a new series of commercial adventure programs over WQAM. Has incorporated two juvenile characters to attract the youngsters' attention.

LONELY LITTLE STAR

free and full. Afterwards, Manzoni told me that I'd never been better.

The following evening I set out for Dan's room with my arms loaded with lamb chops, potatoes and green peas. I had persuaded him to let me plan the dinner—with a reason. There, surely, was a meal I couldn't go wrong on!

As I waited on the stoop for the door to click, I noticed a hard-faced, heavy-set man in a tan trench coat, walking along hesitantly as though looking for a house number. But I thought nothing of it at the time. The door-latch clicked and I ran up the stairs.

What a kick I got out of fussing around the tiny closet kitchen!

I could see Dan watching me admiringly as I moved swiftly from the kitchen to the card table set in the living room, my heart in my mouth for fear I would make a mistake.

"Gee!" he said suddenly. "Seeing you around here makes a guy realize how lonesome he really is."

Somehow that made me feel tender toward him. I reached out and ruffled his hair as he passed by. He caught me to him and gave me a long, breathless kiss.

A little restraint fell on us after that. We ate dinner quietly, by candle light, in front of the tiny fireplace. I begrudged the speeding minutes, feeling in the warm, intimate friendliness like a traveler who has gone a long way in the dark and comes at last in sight of a brightly lighted farmhouse.

After we had cleared the dishes away we sat talking and he began to ask me questions about Linda Logan. It brought me out of my beautiful dream with a start. Some time I would have to tell him who I was. Would it be better to tell him now and risk breaking the spell—or cling to this fragile, illusory happiness which I was at least sure of for the moment?

I was turning it over in my mind when he blurted:

"Anybody would certainly be a sap to marry a girl like Linda Logan, wouldn't he? Why, with all that money and fame, he wouldn't be any more than a lap dog, would he?"

I started to argue with him spiritedly until I began to realize I was skating on thin ice, and quickly changed the subject.

In the middle of our conversation I realized it was getting late. And there was tomorrow's rehearsal and the performance to be gone through with. It took a little arguing to persuade Dan that I didn't need him to escort me home.

We agreed to see each other soon. He kissed me again, and I hurried down the steps and along the street, watching for a taxi.

I looked behind me to see if there was one parked at the curb—and saw the heavy-set man in the tan trench coat come out of an arcaaway. I began to walk fast. I could hear his pace quicken behind me. A taxi came along and I hailed it. Through the rear window I saw him hail a cab, too.

I no longer had any doubt about it now. I was being shadowed.

"A cab is following us," I told the driver. "I'll give you five dollars if you can lose it."

Who is the shadow in the tan trench coat? What is his purpose? How long will Linda be able to keep her identity secret from Dan Corby? You will find another heart-stirring instalment in next week's RADIO GUIDE.

MAN CAN NOW TALK WITH GOD

"A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Galilean Carpenter, and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles," is attracting world wide attention to its founder, Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted teacher, author and lecturer.

"Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, "to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did"—it believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also," He meant what He said and meant it literally to all mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana," in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an Unseen Power or force "so dynamic in itself that all other powers and forces fade into insignificance beside it"—how he learned to commune directly with the Living God, using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal being may find and use it as Jesus did. He is now offering this treatise free to every reader of this magazine who writes him.

If you want to read this "highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story of the discovery of a great Truth," just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, 403 1st Street, Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and postpaid without cost or obligation. Write the Doctor today.—Copyright 1935, Dr. Frank B. Robinson.—Advertisement.

NEW KIND OF IRON Burns AIR
Super-Speed Amazes Housewives-Pays Agents
Housewives everywhere are enthralled by the speed, efficiency and economy of the new Diamond Belt Heating Iron. Better than gas electricity-at 1/4 the cost. No wires, no hose, no attachments to bother with. Quick, regulated, uniform heat. Safe ironing time in half, from big washing for only 1c. Burns 50% air-only 4% common kerosene (cual oil). Handsome, rustproof, EMBELUM finish insures lifetime service. No wonder agents like Morris and Weine have made up to $15 and $25 in one day. HOME TRIAL offer, and proof of big money opportunity. ANRON LAMP & MFG. CO., 783 Iron St., Akron, Ohio

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL
It Is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Noisy Connections
NO MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and sleet when using an F. & H. Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Equals an aerial 75 ft. long, stands 50 ft. high, yet occupies only 1 1/2 inch by 1 inch space behind your radio-guaranteed to give you nationwide reception or your money back.
BETTER TONE and DISTANCE GUARANTEED
Sensitivity, selectivity, tone and volume improved. No lightning danger or unsightly leads and aerial wires. Makes your set complete in itself. Forget aerial wires and troubles-move your set upstairs.
NOT NEW-VALUE ALREADY PROVED
On the market for years, 80,000 satisfied customers in U. S. and foreign countries. In use from the Arctic Region of Norway to the Tropics of Africa. Chosen by Government for use on Naval Hospital bedside radios. Each factory tested on actual long distance reception; 100% not better test-two and connect to light socket-no current test-no danger of shocks or fire cuts.
5 DAYS TRIAL
Mail coupon at once. Pay postman $1.00 plus a few pennies postage on delivery. If not entirely satisfied, return within five days and your dollar will be refunded without question.
JUST MAIL THIS COUPON-
F. & H. Radio Laboratories, Dept. 39, Fargo, N. Dak.

Boys Playing in Barn Discover Old Book Worth $5000

Two school boys playing near an old barn found a book that looked interesting. Imagine their joy when, on investigating, they discovered it was a valuable edition of "Venus and Adonis". The American Book Mart, the largest company of its kind in the United States, will pay $5000.00 for each copy of the same edition. They also want to buy thousands of other old books of all kinds (bibles, almanacs, old letters, etc.) old newspapers and magazines. Many published only five and six years ago are valuable. A single book that looks worthless may bring you $50—$100—$500 or even $5000 in cash! Is there a fortune hidden in your old trunks, attic or basement? Better investigate now! Send 10c today to American Book Mart, 140 S. Dearborn St., Dept. 1501, Chicago, Ill., and they will send you latest list of old books they want to buy and cash prices they will pay!

RAY BLOCK is 33 years old. JOE PLOTKE'S theme song is Quicker Than You Can Say Jack Robinson. BILL JOHNSTONE takes the part of Bob Redding on the Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch program. (M. P., Knoxville, Tenn.)

THE NORTHERNERS are WALTER PONTIUS and WESLEY SUMMERFIELD, first tenors; GUNTHER DECKER and WILLIAM ROSS, second tenors; GEORGE GRAMMER SMITH and ARNOLD H. EDMONDS, baritones; LESLIE ARNOLD and WILLARD ANDELIN, bass. (Mrs. J. S. O'N., Utica, N. Y.)

FRANCES LANGFORD was born in Lakeland, Florida, April 4, 1913, and is not married. Her last two moving pictures are Broadway Melody of 1936 and Collegiate. Her weight is 100 pounds, and height is five feet and one-building was being pierced together. When this investigation was finished, Koryta and his men left the building to return to their precinct station.

"Sergeant!" A squad-man shoved through the knot of gaping spectators. "We just got a radio flash! One of them jewelry robbers shot Patrolman Fred Blazier. He escaped by kidnaping a woman and a little girl in their car. Every radio car in the city is on their trail!"

And every radio car in the city was on their trail. However only one arrived on the scene in time to take up active pursuit of the fleeing murderer. That was the cruiser under the command of Detective Lieutenant Kurt Gloeckner. An excited truck driver pointed out the direction Townsend had taken.

"Come on, boys!" roared Gloeckner. The speedometer of Gloeckner's radio car reached 84 before that wild ride ended. Whole city blocks went past like single office buildings. The road was a roaring torrent that leaped at that carload of detectives, and blew past. Automobiles and trucks loomed with incredible suddenness.

And then they sighted their quarry. Ahead, careening along at a mere mile a minute, was the Martin family sedan. "Look out!" Gloeckner shouted. For the left rear door of the sedan suddenly flew open. Little Beverly rolled out—out of that car which was traveling at 60 miles an hour—and fell directly in the path of the police car.

Detective Osborne nearly wrenched off the steering wheel. The squad car spun to the right on two wheels, grazed the fender of a parked truck, swerved back and skidded on its way. But it missed, by inches, the head of little Beverly Martin who lay in the street in a pitiful heap.

Now Osborne jammed the accelerator flat. The police car leaped alongside the sedan. They ground fender to fender.

And then two sub-machine guns tore the life out of Norm Townsend. Jammed down upon the floor, in the back of the car, Mrs. Martin was sobbing hysterically. She was only half conscious.

Mack Bush was caught hiding in a car that was parked behind the Keith Building.

That's about all there is to tell—except to mention that while Patrolman Blazier lay in the hospital with Townsend's bullet in his abdomen, this message went out to all Cleveland:

"All cars . . . Calling All Cars . . . Patrolman Fred Blazier is badly in need of blood transfusions . . . Volunteers please telephone Headquarters . . . All cars . . ."

Every radio cop in Cleveland volunteered. Blazier lived.

airing a New York diamond house. Yes, it was along in the next couple of years that the famous squabble broke out over whether Will Osborne or Rudy Vallee was stealing each other's stuff.

But the important thing about Will Osborne today is no longer the voice. From now on it will be the orchestra. Every bandleader happens on something new at least once in a lifetime, and by the law of averages it finally got around to Will Osborne. Whiteman discovered the super-laminated arrangement; Abe Lyman (another drummer, by the way) made accordiana; Hal Kemp discovered or at least popularized the Mickey Mouse style, or bounce or clip rhythm.

This year Will Osborne turned thirty, a tall, lean young fellow with crisp dark hair, dark eyes, and a firm jaw that must mean business. Ten months ago he took a new band and began developing the idea—his idea.

And now maybe you will see some sense in the title of this piece, because Osborne is using plenty of slide and slip in his new band. He resurrected some instruments you wouldn't believe unless you saw them. In a flock of his arrangements he is using three SLIDE TRUMPETS along with his regular three trombones! A slide trumpet is a miniature trombone that looks like it belongs in the toy department of some department store.

This writer calls the shot: Osborne in the corner pocket with plenty of slide. Listen for the coming style. Nothing is new under the sun, but by taking something old and coupling it in a new manner, Osborne joins the ranks of the band stylists after having led the pack with a vocal style that came in with radio and isn't dead yet.

THEY MADE HER CRAWL

obey completely, the doctor would have nothing more to do with my case. This was one of the stiffest battles of my life.

"Don realized the awful strain I was going through and tried to make a joke out of it. He brought me stacks of little scratch pads, and in no time at all we were playing a new game, 'Don't talk—scribble,' and managing to get a few laughs out of it.

"When some intimate friends came over and asked how I was, I got writers' cramp scribbling answers. So Don had some slips prepared saying, 'I'm fine today, thanks'—or—'Bearing up nobly. Won't you sit down?'

"The seven days dragged like seven years. But the morning of the eighth day gave me the big thrill of my life. I was actually scared just before I opened my mouth. How would I speak now? I felt like a blind person who's just had the bandages removed and is afraid of what he might see. I opened my mouth. 'Good morning, darling. How do I sound?' It was true! I spoke without the slightest falter. I could hardly believe my own ears... I burst out crying like a baby!

"But that was only the beginning. 'I had to change my speech habits entirely. I was to talk with a rhythm now. If you think it's easy, try saying, 'Gibeme—acup—ofcaw—fce.'

"Once I passed a red light and the policeman came over to me and bawled me out. I debated with myself for a minute. Shall I continue my swing and probably be hailed to court for insulting an officer, or shall I break the rule just this once? Then I remembered those seven awful days of silence, and made up my mind that jail was better than going back to that. So I said, 'I'm sorry of—ficer—I did—n't see the—light up there.' He thought I was making fun of him, and of course I got a ticket.

"I had to recite poems' all day long, too. The poems were a great aid in getting me to talk in that swiny rhythm.

"Finally, at long last, I was ready to begin work on my picture, 'Stars Over Broadway'. I had pretty well conquered my stutter; it came back only when I was very excited or nervous. I was to remember, above all, to remain perfectly calm. Always!

"I stood before the cameras, letter perfect and all ready to go into my lines. Then suddenly, from all sides,

I was bombarded: 'Lights—Camera—Action.' All this caught me unawares and blew me up completely. I opened my mouth—and started stuttering once more. I ran off the set weeping.

"The directors were most sympathetic. Said they'd try it again with a minimum of noise, but Don wanted to cure me—not cuddle me. He had me sit around the studio all day, getting used to the barrage of shouts and noises, until it sounded perfectly normal and sane to me. Then, next day, when I faced the camera again, all the shouts didn't faze me a bit, and I went into my lines perfectly.

"I'm not exactly cured yet. Don't forget—you can't break a lifelong habit in a few months. But I still keep up my poems, and once in a while I go back to my rhythm talk. And maybe—if I get up enough courage to go through it again—I'll go on another silence bender."

RADIO IN THE DEATH HOUSE

his ears, listening as no free man ever listened. Two comedians are on the air. Their patter comes in:

Judge: Rastus, you are charged with having stolen a chicken from the henhouse of the plaintiff. Are you guilty or not guilty?

Rastus: I'se not guilty.

Judge: The evidence is insufficient. Case dismissed.

Rastus: Does dat mean, Jedge, dat now I kin eat dat chicken?

Not much as jokes go. You on the outside might smile at it. The man howls with laughter. And with that guffaw, so loud it brings the guard hurrying, he begins to relax. Thereafter, the earphones never leave his head. They become part of him. Windows through which to see the world. Doors through which to escape from his thoughts. Everything interests him, even the blurring of announcers solemnly proclaiming the virtues of yeast and lipstick and coffee.

What is his favorite? You never could guess. It is the United States Marine Band concerts! Oddly enough, this is the choice of almost all the condemned men. Why this is so, we can only imagine.

Any orchestra pleases him, any from Cab Calloway's to the Philharmonic. Classical selections are a trifle above his head, although they fill him with a gentle emotion. Jazz irritates him. It suggests women, perfume. That's not so good.

After the Marine Band, he has a great many others which jostle for his second choice. Most of these are the radio vaudeville shows, the kind put on by Rudy Vallee, Walter O'Keefe, Fred Allen, and the others.

The third type of program he goes for is the news broadcasts.

Those are the shows preferred by one man who lived nine weeks in the Sing Sing death house—and died. You whose corridors are all two-way, what would you choose, I wonder?

Think it over, you who have years ahead of you, the whole world to gambol in—what five programs would you pick? No more, no less, just five—and then click! But for them . . . a double click, one turning the juice out of the earphones, the other turning it on in another and less merciful contraption.

A WOMAN'S AS YOUNG AS HER OPINIONS

that all of a woman's external life, her appearance and interests and so forth, are determined by what she really and honestly thinks inside."

So let's see what Irene Rich thinks, inside, about the burning questions of the day.

COCKTAIL DRINKING: "I say yes to cocktail drinking, provided a woman does it in dainty moderation."

SMOKING: "I consider smoking purely a matter of personal taste. No smart woman, however, would indulge in it to the extent that it affected her health or beauty."

PETTING: "If it's genuine, affection is one of the sweetest things in the world."

CAREERS VS. MARRIAGE: "Marriage and a career at the same time? I say NO! as loudly and emphatically as I can. It won't work! I've tried it three times and I know it won't work except in the very rarest cases where the wife is almost a super-woman."

CHARM AND CLOTHES: "I've got a theory about charm. I believe charm in this day and time is about half and half between brains and beauty. The day has passed when curls and complexions and ankles constituted appeal; these days men like brains! The old saying about 'be intelligent but don't let him know it' is as passe as pompadours. Be intelligent and don't let him forget it! And be as physically charming as you can at the same time.

"Have few clothes, if you must, but have each outfit in perfect taste and style and quality. And if any artifice will really improve your appearance—a hair dye, padding in your clothes, reducing treatments—go right to it."

THE WOMAN IN THE HOME: "The woman who runs a home is in business. She's in the business of being a woman, and it is and should be a lot of fun. I've never seen a woman who really enjoyed home-making whose marriage wasn't a huge success."

Irene Rich broadcasts every Friday as a presentation of the Welch Grape Juice Company, over an NBC-WJZ network at 8 p. m. EST (7 CST; 6 MST; 5 PST).
