QUEEN MARY of Hollywood! There seems to be an irresistible glitter and sparkle about those words. But the glamour surrounding Queen Mary, as set forth in the leading story in the next issue of your favorite publication, will hold you entranced . . . Queen Mary? Why, she's America's Sweetheart, Mary Pickford, of course. She's entertaining for everyone within sound of a loudspeaker in her new Parties from Pickfair program, so that all who listen may mingle with Prince George of Great Britain, the King and Queen of Siam, Albert and Mrs. Einstein, Princess Bibesco and—oh, scores and scores of celebrities . . . No matter what you've been thinking about Mary, perhaps feeling a mite sorry for her since her ideal marriage to Douglas Fairbanks culminated in a court of law, you'll get a new idea of her, one that will take her to an innermost corner of your heart, when you read all about Queen Mary as she is now, in her fabulous Hollywood home, Pickfair.

Mary Pickford

WHICH of the radio celebrities that you've been hearing for the past—let's see; well, go no farther back than one year. Which of the celebrities on the air you've heard during the past year gets the greatest amount of mail? From admirers? Would you say, for instance, Jack Benny? Leslie Howard? Lulu Belle? Connie Boswell? Well, you'd be wrong. Then who is it? Well, you'd hardly guess, so we'll tell: It's Edward MacHugh, The Gospel Singer . . . And we'll tell more: You'll find a story about him in the forthcoming issue that summarizes his life, reveals how he came to be a singer of hymns and of hymns only . . . And we'll go the whole way and tell all: We'll be mighty disappointed if the forthright sincerity of the man doesn't get you.

The Gospel Singer

THIS seems to be a time for tugging at your heart-strings. However, we miss our guess by a wide margin if you fail to be moved by the story of a woman you'll find also in next week's issue—a woman who is a fighter. She was told she never would walk again. Year after year she lay bed-ridden, with nothing—apparently—to console her but the disquieting news that she would remain so for the rest of her days. But she did have something else. And that was one great, immense quality that should be written here in letters that blaze. It was Faith . . . Yes, she's walking now. And more, she's on the air with three separate programs every week. She's Nellie Revell. You'll find her story under the title—Neighbor Nell.

Nellie Revell

Also hot off the griddle and waiting for you next Thursday are How a Smart Girl Gets on the Air, and all about one man Roxy forgot.

NOTHING that we have said or done for a long time has elicited such enthusiastic replies as the publication two weeks ago of the Listeners' Guild Creed. With but one exception, it has received generous and hearty approval. From every direction have come suggestions for additional planks. All of them are interesting and some of them are immediately workable. For instance, one reader writes:

"Can't we do something about continued stories on the air? They serve no useful purpose and merely keep the mind in continual ferment."

Another suggests the addition of a plank which would prohibit the playing of phonograph records. How many will agree with that, I wonder?

Truth in advertising is stressed by so many that we must conclude that the false claims of excellence of performance some advertisers make annoy an unusually large proportion of listeners. Another critic wants to drive all advertising whatsoever off the air.

The oddest plank of all comes from the South where a reader resents the voice-doubling that is now accepted radio practise. In other words, when Conrad Thibault is announced, she wants to hear him both sing and talk instead of having a more capable actor read his lines. A similar resentment is voiced against the substitution of an occasional new Betty for the old Betty, or a brand new Bob for the Bob listeners' ears have come to recognize.

The single exception I mentioned was the sweet old lady who wrote she agreed with all our planks except that on advertising. "Instead," she said, "I think advertisers should be permitted to take four minutes out of every fifteen. It's a small enough price for us to pay for the fine shows we receive."

There they are, a cross-section of the things real listeners are thinking about the biggest show in the world, radio. If you have a pet plank of your own, or an idea you would like to express, send it along. When they are all in we are going to take them up to the National and Columbia broadcasting networks and let them see just what their customers think.

ARE radio listeners entitled to know the truth about the creation of the shows which are their favorites? Are they entitled to news of the behind-the-scenes scheming which builds a simple idea into a coast-to-coast success? We believe they are.

In the series now running in Radio Guide called Exploding the Major Bowes Myth, we undertake to present the untold story of the phenomenally successful program which is now broadcasting's top attention-getter. Naturally, toes may be stepped on. Naturally, we take the side of the listener. We take his side because broadcasting must now and forevermore be designed to serve his best interests.

Broadcasting is a blessing or a curse according to the way it is used. It must never delude or antagonize or deceive.

In this series of articles there is no thought of exposing a program outstandingly popular. Instead, we expose the inaccurate myths and rumors which have piled up about that program. Instead, we tell a story as honestly as we know how. To do so is our conception of the highest service we can render our masters, the radio public.

What Emergency Forced Connie Boswell into a Blissful Event She Had Dreamed Would Take a Far Different Turn?

Observers might well ask which is the happiest—Connie or Husband Harold Leedy or the dog they hold here

WHY CONNIE WAITED FOUR YEARS

By Helen Hover

TO THE newspapers, Connie Boswell's marriage this past December ninth was just another news item.

To those of us who knew her, however, it was the final chapter in her brave and inspiring fight to be like other girls. It is just another example of the courage that has made her the most remarkable girl in radio.

For Connie has proven that no obstacle is too great. And she should know.

Connie, you may be aware, is lame. It's no secret, and Connie is the last one who'd try to conceal it from her fans. It just doesn't fit in with her frank and honest way of thinking. But in spite of the affliction that has denied other men and women every right to happiness, Connie today has Everything. Money, fame, glory, friends, and now—a perfectly swell husband whom she's simply cuh-razy about and who's just goofy over her.

It was no surprise to her close friends that Connie and Harry Leedy finally said the fatal words. The surprising thing, though, was that she got married without either Vet or Martha—her sisters and erstwhile trio-mates—being present! But that's just one of the amusing incidents that made her hectic, last-minute marriage perhaps the most unusual on record.

Harry Leedy has been in the background of the lives and careers of the Boswell Sisters since they first wah-de-dahed into a microphone. He's the reason, too, why Connie had the nerve to break away from the trio and step out on her own as a solo singer.

It's strange to think that it was Connie who has been the daring member of the trio. It was she who first put the idea into the heads of her sisters to commercialize the impromptu harmonies they hummed in their front parlor for Sunday company. It was she who made the plans to leave their New Orleans home and try the vaudeville boards. And when they were a terrible flop on the stage and had their performance cancelled, it was Connie who said to the weeping, homesick Vet and Martha: "We won't give up. Let's go to Hollywood!"

It was in Hollywood that they met the man who was to change the fate of their lives.

They had been voice-doubling for several movie stars, and were hanging around the movie lots when a young chap strolled over to them. He was slight-built, with stubborn, curly hair and an eager-looking face.

EXPLODING the Major Bowes MYTH

(Article Two)

IF YOU were the manager of a great New York theater getting $500 a week salary, you would think you were doing quite nicely, wouldn't you?

If you found yourself and a new sort of amateur radio entertainment being so favorably talked about that rich companies were offering you $5,500 a week for your services, you would think the Goddess of Luck was smiling on you, wouldn't you?

If you found that the public liked your show and the people presented on it so much that they would flock to theaters, and theater managers were willing to pay you an average of $3,500 a week for all the traveling troupes you could put on the road, that too would be pleasant, wouldn't it?

If a great motion picture company offered to make twenty-six talkie shorts of your radio entertainers paying you $2,000 per short, you would feel pretty good, wouldn't you?

If a magazine publisher came to you and wanted to publish a magazine named after you and would pay you for the use of your name, and another publisher hired you to conduct an amateur department for poets and artists, you wouldn't object to that income, either, would you?

And if, through all these amazing events, you were able to make millions of friends all over this continent, you could look back at your record with a great deal of sincere satisfaction and happiness, couldn't you?

All the above has happened since March, 1935, to the only two-million-a-year man in American show business, Major Edward Bowes. Two million dollars a year is the current rate of his earnings, according to the most accurate computations we can make. Not all of it is profit, but much is.

Financially, no one in the history of the show business rivals him. Al Jolson, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin have earned a single million in twelve months but until Ed Bowes came along the two million bracket was empty.

Nor has anyone ever won as many titles. A few of them, for instance, are Edward Bowes, Centennial Captain of Texas Rangers, Honorary Member of Dallas Chamber of Commerce, Honorary Lieutenant Colonel of Governor's Staff of State of Georgia, Honorary Member of Corn Cob Club, Honorary Member Town Club of San Francisco, Honorary Member of Ak-Sar-Ben in Nebraska, Honorary Lifeguard of Miami, Florida, Honorary Mayor-for-a-Day of West Palm Beach.

Which is pretty good for a man who spent most of the years of his busy life being a mere Major. A real dyed-in-the-wool Major, too. Many have doubted the authenticity of his rank. One curious story which has become part of the myth about Major Bowes that this publication has undertaken to explode relates that Gene Buck, famous song writer and former associate of Florenz Ziegfeld, took Ed Bowes with him to entertain some soldiers during the War. Upon introducing Bowes, he presented him with these words: "And here is the major."

That story has caused much misunderstanding and embarrassment to Major Bowes. For the record, Edward Joseph Bowes was formerly a Major Specialist, Reserve U. S. Army.

Another phase of the Major Bowes myth which our investigation explodes is that which claims he invented the amateur hour. Or that other amateur hours are imitations of his. So far as we can learn, Major Bowes has never made this claim, although the program has been announced regularly as Major Bowes Original Amateur Hour. The truth of the matter, we believe, is as follows:

New Yorkers know well the voice and personality of Perry Charles, of Station WHN. Back in 1924 or 1925 he inaugurated an amateur series on this station. Again in 1930, he produced another amateur series. But it was not until four years later that he hit upon the idea that was to make the WHN amateur show talked about. Major Bowes was directing manager of the station at the time, and in charge of all broadcasting.

AT FIRST, the broadcasts were like a hundred other amateur hours presented since radio began. But one night, Perry Charles and Fred Raphael, co-producers of the program, chanced on a tip that turned their run-of-the-mill program into a standing-room-only riot.

They went to the Golden Gloves boxing tournament and saw the fighters introduced into a ring darkened except for one light. As the light focused on each principal, an announcer would broadcast over the public address system their names and weights, their occupations, their ambitions and other personal information. Sometimes, the audience would laugh. Perry Charles and Fred Raphael noticed that the audience laughed most when big, hulking bruisers gave their occupations as perfume salesmen or millinery designers.

Right there, they got their big idea.

Major Edward Bowes is indeed a Major with every right to his title, besides being the Number One Money Man of Show Business

LET'S EXAMINE THE PAGEANT BEHIND SCENES

Back in their broadcasting studio Charles and Raphael began to use the same principles. Whenever a bad amateur spoiled the show they used the device they had heard at the Golden Gloves tournament, the gong.

It was this sort of amateur show with which Major Bowes, director of the station, became dissatisfied and took under his personal supervision. From that beginning has grown his impressive success of the present.

From that beginning he turned the amateur hour into a parade of human interest stories, into a parade of youth and middle age and even old age burning with ambition and yearning for one bright moment in the sun. Before he left WHN, a station one fiftieth as powerful as the great network stations surrounding it in New York, he had ninety per cent of the entire Manhattan radio audience tuning in to him.

PEOPLE began predicting then that he would soon go to a network. People began questioning then his right to take a show that had been WHN's own in the beginning and which had been developed during his own management of that station. Who owned it? The Major or station WHN? The answer was not evident until Chase and Sanborn gave Ed Bowes the offer he had been awaiting. It gave him a reported $5,500 a week and put him in charge of the program.

Then came the break. Lawyers were consulted. Resigning from his important position as manager of the station, and his vice-presidency in an important motion-picture company, he took himself and the Major Bowes Amateur Hour to the National Broadcasting Company.

That opening night was the cause of considerable nervousness on the part of the new sponsors. It was rumored that WHN might resort to an injunction to keep the Major off the air. An injunction served just before the broadcast would do it. Conferences were held, plans made hurriedly, whispered orders given. Let them try. Major Bowes' friends and employers had a magistrate and a bondsman, according to this story, ready to meet the injunction should it appear.

Opening night, Major Bowes and his hand-picked amateurs went on the air without a hitch. And very promptly all America became Major Bowes conscious.

Within a short time it became obvious that something strange and wonderful had entered the radio picture. Here was a program that offered hope to millions, that presented amateurs who did professional jobs of entertaining, that made people feel like good Samaritans when they answered the insistent plea of "buy Chase and Sanborn dated coffee."

In almost no time at all, Major Bowes and his performers were the Number One program on the air, sweeping the country with the current amateur craze.

Which gave rise to several serious happenings. First of these was the stampede to New York of amateurs from all over the United States. Kids with mouth organs and mothers with babies began to bombard the Major's office with pleas for a chance, to the tune of fifteen thousand letters a week. Others didn't wait but began to hitch-hike to the big city.

Some idea of the magnitude of the telephone task imposed every week may be gained from these operators photographed in New York recently, taking no calls except votes for the Major's amateurs

With the heart-breaking consequence that soon most of the city's relief shelters were crowded with amateurs who had spent their few dollars awaiting an audition or a call to appear for a broadcast. Penniless and alone, they learned then that it takes more than a petty talent to make good.

The New York Times of August 23, 1935, prints a story typical of the things that have happened to amateurs since they started listening to the lure of the Major's voice:

"Two blind Hoosier boys were led by kindly passers-by into police headquarters yesterday morning, the end of their 800-mile hitch-hiking trail from South Bend, Indiana, in quest of fame and fortune in minstrelsy.

"The younger of them, Roy Graveel, 18 years old, of Mishawaka, near South Bend, carried a 75-pound piano accordion, for which he still owes $60 of the $275 purchase price. At his side, tapping the marble steps with his cane, was 20-year-old Arthur Schwenk of South Bend . . .

"Before they left South Bend last Thursday, they wrote a letter to Major Edward Bowes, whose amateur hour is a national favorite on Sunday nights.

"They had a friend in Brooklyn, George Voges, also blind, of 282 Cooper Street. After an adventurous subway trip they found Voges all packed up ready to move. He got them shelter in the corner garage for the night.

"Aides of Major Bowes said that the sponsors of his program objected to blind artists taking part in the variety hour.

"Meanwhile the boys will remain in the care of the Juvenile Aid Bureau, to be returned to their parents if they fail to land a radio contract."

One day later, the Times carried another story. It said:

"Major Bowes denied last night that he had refused two blind Hoosier boys, who hitch-hiked here from South Bend, Indiana, an opportunity to appear on the amateur hour he conducts on the radio on Sunday evenings, because of their physical deficiencies.

"It was not that the two boys are blind, but these boys ran away from home, hitch-hiked to New York without my knowledge and then attempted to get a place on the hour," Major Bowes said. "I perhaps am to be considered most blameworthy, but I should like it understood that I don't want youngsters running away to New York for a chance on the radio. Amateur hours are being heard all over the country and they can enter one close to home."

Of the tragic heartbreaks caused by the tremendous popularity of this program, none was greater than the physical inability of one program to give everyone who yearned for it a chance. Those great-hearted youngsters always acted first, and thought afterwards. Had they thought first they would have realized that out of fifteen thousand applications a week, only from 700 to 900 could be heard. And from the 700 to 900, only sixteen or twenty would be selected. Even if selected, it guaranteed the performer only five dollars and a chance to perform once over the air. Their chance for success, a certain authority figured, was one in 70,000.

Finally, even the charity institutions of New York were forced to protest to Major Bowes as well as the other amateur producers. From the Emergency Relief Bureau came this pregnant statement, which said, in part:

"Amateur radio programs offering employment to winning contestants are drawing hundreds of destitute men, women and young people to New York City, where they become public charges. During the past four weeks more than 1,000 persons without funds for food and shelter have applied for public aid.

"The Division of Unattached and Transients of the Emergency Relief Bureau reported that last month an average of 300 amateur entertainers weekly found themselves stranded and had applied for food and shelter at the shelters provided for transients by Federal funds, and the Municipal lodging houses maintained by the Department of Public Welfare.

"The city's relief shelters are being crowded by the transient entertainers, who include entire dance bands, choirs, instrumental and voice quartets, actors, singers, musical saw players, tap dancers, humorists, monologists, etc."

LAST Sunday night Major Bowes stated that an amateur's letter of application had to be postmarked from the metropolitan district. Rightfully, New York doesn't want any more penniless performers.

For several weeks now, and increasingly of late, critics have been demanding that something be done about the amateur hours. For example, Alfred Harding, editorial director of Actor's Equity Association, a group affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, says:

"The main things Equity holds against the so-called Amateur Hours is that real amateurs derive little if any benefit from them. I know of few bona fide amateurs who have been graduated from these contests to professional work and none of them, so far as I know, is outstanding in the field. Those few who made the grade would have managed to do so anyway and their standing would probably have been better for having been known as

"May I come in?" . . . So Seymour Simons eases his patter and his music into your home

THIS BAND COMES TO YOUR HOUSE

By Marvin W. Strate

WITHOUT paying much attention to the radio—my chair-side companion and, unlike most other companions, one I can shut off if its chatter tires me—the evening paper had been occupying me for some time. Suddenly I was disturbed by an unexpected knocking at the door. It was startling, because the hour seemed rather late for visitors; but before I could do anything about my unexpected guest my radio reassured me. It was just some screwy bandleader selling some personality, and I thought I'd heard everything anybody had thought of in that line. But I had something to learn.

A warm, intimate speaking voice spoke to me, personally, sitting there beside the old box. That voice was low-pitched, almost a whisper. This was the fellow who had knocked at the "door" of my radio before entering my home, and such courtesy should be rewarded.

I thought of all the programs that start with a blared announcement by strained vocal cords, sounding as if what was being said was of vital importance, only to find that it was a high-pressure artist trying to make me buy Schmalz' Pills for Schprains and Chillblains. Naturally this fellow was different. It was late, and he didn't care to disturb anyone dozing in his chair with the radio left on. This, in short, was a gentleman announcer.

And that's the way I first made the acquaintance of Seymour Simons. He had an idea that people, the ones who listen to radio, are all pretty much like the ones he knew back in Detroit as a child; and because of that it was a good idea to talk to them as if he had known them all his life. It was a sure-fire idea because it happens to be true.

Seymour Simons asks before he enters your home, and then that low voice—while it's perfectly possible to hear every word he says—makes you welcome the sudden change from the train-calling type of announcer; makes you want to turn up the volume a little, just to be sure you don't miss something. And it would be too bad if you happened to lose the customary gem of the evening.

Seymour, you see, is something of a humorist. Not, perhaps, of the Ben Bernie variety, who periodically lays them in the aisles, but a fellow very like the one you know in the corner store who says such funny things. You know, it's not so much what he says as it is the way he says it.

Seymour Simons is simply an orchestra leader who thinks of things he wants other people to know. He gets a bang out of broadcasting, and he confides in the mike as if it, too, were an old friend instead of a black demon waiting for hapless victims to become tongue-tied in front of it. The best way to get some idea of his method is to listen to a broadcast. This will sound very cold in print, of course, and not nearly so intimate and friendly as it does over the air—but tune in some night.

Anyway, he asks "May we come in? Thanks . . . Come on, gang. My, it's nice in here . . . cozy like." And you know he's admiring that new lounge chair under the reading lamp, the one the kids all chipped together to buy for the folks on their last anniversary. And then he commences his program of soft, unobtrusive dance music. No brass. Lots of people are annoyed by brass, it seems, and Seymour uses none—either in his band or in his announcements.

FIRST a r-r-r-rhumba"—he rolls the R—"my, my, a r-r-r-rhumba on Sunday night! Tsk, tsk, tsk! Not quite respectable for Sunday night. But here it is." And the band plays a rhumba. Not a lot of clatter and bang in the background, either, which is some people's idea of a rhumba.

"Now April in Paris. No—Midnight in Paris . . . I can remember the town, but I can't remember what happened!" And a lot of good, solid business men think fondly of their last convention, the one in which their exploits had to be told to them the next day because they unaccountably forgot. And Midnight in Paris gets played smoothly, in a neat arrangement. Then he rings a bell and announces: "Look out, Seymour's going to sing. This is radio's most considerate vocalist. I always ring a bell before singing, so you can cut out 'until it's over." And he sings a number, and frankly I've heard worse. At the conclusion of his outburst he laughs diffidently and says: "Ah, well—it makes the other vocalists sound better, anyhow . . ." And he lets one of the other vocalists capitalize on that fact.

A medley is in progress—he plays a lot of medleys; a chorus, once over, of several past hits, done in smart arrangements, with clever modulations from one key to the next. While the music is playing Seymour sidles over to the mike, his eyes following a pair of dancers on the floor. "Um," he remarks softly, "those are things I get a kick out of. An elderly couple, both gray-haired, dignified, waltzing by. You don't see that old-fashioned graceful dancing much any more. Makes you feel good."

THEN he introduces an old-time favorite. "Margie—the old-timer—shades of Benny Davis." And he ought to know, because Benny Davis wrote it, and Seymour used to play piano for Davis; but we'll get around to that part later. And so the program hurries along. You don't realize that time has gone so fast. Have you ever noticed that if you like a thing a lot you're always surprised when it's over? A lot of good dramatic radio serials leave that feeling. You've come to know the actors so well that they seem like real people, and you're sorry to have them go. Until next time. And how the time flies!

A sweet band, but still not sticky sweet. Good forthright playing, intimate, well-bred, pleasant, amiable. All those adjectives help describe the music. Strings, saxes, an agile guitar, a discreet piano. The guitar doesn't ape Eddie Lang, and the piano doesn't imitate Eddy Duchin. What an unusual combination! And both in the same band.

"Gotta go, gotta go, gotta go," says Seymour. "Ah, gee, gosh, gotta go. It was nice being here. Thanks. This is Seymour Simons, conducting the gang out at your house and back to the Continental Room. C'mon, gang." And away he goes.

After he's gone you actually look around trying to recall which chair he was sitting in. Sounds silly, huh? Well, I don't blame you for thinking so after reading it in cold black print.

A Sweet Band, but Not Sticky Sweet—with Playing That's Intimate, Well-Bred, Pleasant and Amiable — That's Seymour Simons'

But try listening to him some time. It may look like a lot of bilge and eye-wash, but it's amazing how well it takes over the air. And you want to know why? Because Seymour Simons means it. He's really enjoying himself, and so far as he's concerned he's actually got the band grouped around the piano in your home, and you're a bunch of darned swell people he's known and liked for a long, long time.

WHAT manner of man is he? Like I say, he was raised in Detroit, born there January 14, 1896. So he's had time to get mellowed a bit. He's no punk wading in over his depth. People have to live awhile before they soften up a bit.

As a child he was set to learning the piano and, as a sort of sideline, the cello. Remember, kids, those hated piano lessons frequently pay dividends in some form or other. If you don't grow up to lead your own band some day, at least you'll have an idea what the bandleaders are doing, as a result of them. And that way you can have a peek more fun.

Like many another radio entertainer, he started out to be something quite different. Seymour Simons is a graduate mechanical engineer, and the University of Michigan gave him permission to place the cryptic letters B.S. in M.E. after his name back in 1917. But while he was juggling a slide rule in pursuit of engineering, he was also composing for the Michigan Union opera while in school.

His engineering training led him into the Air Service during the war, and after this interruption was out of the way he began writing music professionally in 1919. His first big song was Just Like a Gypsy for the Nora Bayes show, Ladies First. Those were the days when a song hit sold over a million copies, and this was one.

But he was back in Detroit in 1923, and it was there that he got his thumb in the musical pie all the way up to his elbow. For he organized a band of his own. It opened at the old Capitol Theater for two weeks, and then took to the road on a theater circuit. A curious thing about it was that Fred Waring's bunch had opened there just two weeks before Seymour Simons did and, as he says, Waring has been just two weeks ahead of him ever since. At that time these were the only two bands on tour through the picture houses. They were the days . . .

This was the first band under his name, and it contained a versatile bunch. It was a combination much like the present one, what they call in the trade "2 brass, 3 sax, and 5 rhythm." The rhythm in any band is usually piano, bass, drum, and banjo or guitar. In this case there were two pianos, and Seymour played one of them himself. Three of the boys doubled on violins, which always affords an opportunity for novel arranging, and the banjo—intrepid soul—doubled on the harp. He was probably the first harpist to play in a regulation dance band combo, and he was looked upon as a traitor by all the legits.

Back in 1920 Seymour and the previously mentioned Benny Davis, having written some songs, journeyed out to an old brick barn in Newark. This, my dear people, was station WJZ. Both the transmitter and studio were under one roof, and the latter was a mustily draped affair, acoustically primitive. The only persons to hear this important broadcast were a few hardy individuals who dared to brave sudden death by tinkering around with a crystal receiver.

But much music has flowed under his baton since those early days. A happy marital venture ended tragically, leaving Seymour a widower with three children. His eldest is now ten. Theater and dance dates have kept him busy. He is one of the many who consistently purvey excellent dance music over a period of years without ever experiencing the fantastic break which shoots some youngster to fame overnight in this unbelievable field of entertainment called radio.

And one more thing. This distinctively intimate style of announcing his own programs originated when he organized his present band in 1931. It has been used continually ever since. I asked him if he used a prepared script before each time on the air, and he ruefully confessed that he wished he had sometimes because, being spontaneous, certain things said under the stress of a bright idea had unfortunate results. Once spoken over the air, there is no recalling them. But at the same time it is the very lack of preparation that makes his programs amusing. He says the first thing that pops into his head and, his being a pretty good head, most of the time the things he says are funny.

AND Seymour Simons is no copycat. His style is his own. He doesn't rely on catch phrases or inane formulas, and the type of laugh he gets is more likely to be a quiet smile or chuckle than it is a hearty guffaw. It's a personality program, true enough; but the personality is not the hard working kind in which every effort is bent to bringing down the house, laying 'em in the aisles, or whatever the counterpart of that operation is in radio.

So, you have here the intimate closeup of another vertebra in the solid backbone of our popular music. There are dozens and dozens of men in the business, who dispense excellent entertainment without a great deal of ballyhoo. Each year radio listeners hear new names in the band world, some of which are destined to become the big-timers of the day after tomorrow, and the two-timers of the day after that; but through it all the men who grew up in the business go on, like the well known brook, seemingly forever.

A BRIDE at FIFTEEN

By Dora Albert

IF YOU had a fifteen-year-old daughter and she came to you and said she was madly in love and wanted to get married, what would you do? Would you give her your blessing or would you tell her it was just puppy love, and that she was crazy to think of getting married at her age?

If her fourteen-year-old daughter Joy came to Louise Massey, who heads the Westerners on the Show Boat hour, and told her something like that, Louise would be heartbroken. She probably would ship Joy off to a private school in the hope that she would get over her dream of romance.

Which may seem paradoxical, for Louise herself was married at fifteen and has been ideally happy ever since. But she wouldn't want for her daughter the responsibility she faced.

Louise was born in Midland, Texas, and brought up on a ranch in New Mexico. She was the only girl in a family of seven boys, and her father brought her up, too, as if she had been a boy. At an early age she learned to shoot, to ride and to rope.

Whenever there was a dance or any sort of affair in town, Louise could count on her brothers to escort her to it. Her brothers all idolized Louise, and made her their pal and confidante. Very early in her childhood it became apparent that Louise could sing and play the piano beautifully, and they admired her talent as well as the courage and skill she showed on the ranch.

When Louise was fifteen, romance came into her life in the strangest way imaginable. She met a tall youth, of light complexion and handsome, in a drug-store having an ice-cream soda.

Her parents said they disapproved of the way she had met Milt Mabie, and who was he anyway? And was that really his name?

It was really his name, she said, and his father owned a large hardware business. Milt had just returned from the Castle Heights Military School in Tennessee and was helping his father with the business, dressing the windows and so on. And he was really quite wonderful. He wasn't satisfied with just being a hardware man. He was an excellent musician, and maybe some day he'd do something about it.

BUT in spite of all her protests, her mother and father began to worry, because Milt was at the ranch so darn often! And though he and Louise's brothers became very good friends, they had a hunch that it wasn't just on account of the brothers that he came.

So her father called Milt aside and said: "Milt, you're a very nice boy and I have no personal objection to you, but Louise is very young and I don't want her getting ideas. And so, though I hate to say it, I wish you wouldn't come out to the ranch so often."

"But Mr. Massey, I'm in love with Louise."

"That," said Mr. Massey, "is just exactly what I was afraid of."

When Louise heard that Milt had been asked not to come so often, she was very angry. She tossed her brown curls indignantly and said: "What are we going to do?"

"I don't know," said Milt miserably. Finally they decided that Milt would go to Oregon for six months—and if this love of theirs wasn't the real thing, of course they'd both get over it.

"But I don't know how I can stand not seeing you for six months," Milt admitted.

Louise didn't say anything but her eyes were moist.

"Do you suppose they were ever in love?" Milt asked. "Do you suppose they remember what it's like?"

"I guess they've forgotten," said Louise.

Six months away in Oregon didn't make Milt forget a thing. Always there floated before him the image of Louise, starry-eyed and dark-haired. He wondered if she was bearing their separation any better than he.

She wasn't. Six months away from Milt made her realize that this wasn't puppy love but the real thing. She didn't care what her parents said. They didn't understand. She wondered how Milt was bearing their separation.

Milt came back.

"I can't help it," he told Louise's parents. "I'll never stop loving Louise."

Louise's father went to see Milt's father.

"I have nothing against your son," he said quite gruffly, "but Louise is fifteen and he is nineteen. At that age they can't know real love. I wish you'd tell him to stay away from my daughter."

MILT'S father looked wretched. "Listen," he said, "in my family there were just two of us, my brother and myself. When my older brother was nineteen, he fell in love, just as Milt has done. Our parents broke up the romance. They wouldn't let him see the girl. And as a result his life was ruined. I don't approve of this romance between Milt and your daughter any more than you do. But there's one thing I won't do. I won't interfere."

Finally Louise and Milt decided to get married. There wasn't anything else they could decide, feeling the way they did about each other.

"I THINK IT'S TAKING AN AWFUL CHANCE"

Within a year after they first met they were married. They vowed to each other that they would stick to one another in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer, for better and for worse. And they have done just that.

"One reason I guess our marriage has lasted," Louise told me recently, "is that I always have kept some outside interest. About a year after we were married I had my little daughter, Joy. Even then I resisted the temptation to settle down. I did all the things a girl of sixteen normally does. I had a colored mammy who helped take care of the baby. And I went back to school. I continued with my voice lessons. I even went to business school."

As you might imagine, it wasn't an easy problem for a fifteen-year-old girl and a nineteen-year-old boy to make a success of marriage. However, in palling around with her brothers, Louise had learned the necessity of give and take, of tolerance. That quality was most essential in the first months of their marriage.

For Milt, to put it bluntly, was frankly, openly, jealous. He could hardly believe his good fortune in winning this glorious child-woman. If another man so much as looked at her, he quaked inside.

There was the time Louise was invited to sing at a big party that the Rotary Club of their county was giving in honor of one of the state Senators. It was a great honor for a fifteen-year-old girl, and Louise accepted eagerly. She was applauded with enthusiasm. When the floor was cleared for dancing, the Senator danced with one of the girls at his table, and then turned to Louise and asked for a dance.

Her husband nodded his permission. Louise and the Senator swept through that dance. When it ended, he asked for another dance. What could she say? She couldn't refuse, since he might regard that as an insult. Again they danced.

But before that dance was finished, Louise noticed as she whirled over the floor that her husband was no longer sitting at their table. Where had he gone? Was he offended with her? All thought of the Senator gone from her mind, she mumbled vaguely: "Please excuse me," and darted out of his arms in the middle of the dance.

She found her husband on the balcony puffing at a cigarette.

"Were you angry, darling?" she asked him. "I'm so sorry."

"Why, er-r, no," he said. But she understood. His eyes, filled with pain, told her what he had been going through.

To him the Senator wasn't a notable who had to be catered to. He was no different from any other man!

THEREAFTER when they went to a dance, Louise would have one or two dances with other men, but most of them with her husband. When he was jealous of some other man, he would kid Louise gently about falling for him, and after that Louise would let him strictly alone.

Compromise. It's a word in so many married people's vocabulary, and usually it stays right there—in their vocabulary. Rarerly do they carry out the idea. Louise did.

When they first bought the furnishings for their home and started to arrange them, she was horrified at Milt's ideas of interior decoration. He was used to dressing up windows in his father's store, and it seemed to the poor girl that he was trying to arrange the furniture in their home the way you'd arrange a window display. He put all the artistic pieces in one corner of the room, instead of spreading them out over the whole room. Louise thought her home, when he had finished, looked just like a window showcase. But she didn't say a thing. A month later she changed the furniture around her way. Another month went by and she let Milt dabble with it again. In the end they learned to compromise between their two very different tastes, and now the effect is very nice indeed.

How did they get into radio? One day Louise and her husband were visiting at her father's ranch. Also visiting there was Charles F. Horner, of the Kansas Conservatory of Music. Louise and her husband and her brothers Dott and Allen played for Mr. Horner's entertainment. Louise played the piano and sang. Dott played the violin and the trumpet. Allen played a banjo and a guitar. Louise's husband played the bass viol.

MR. HORNER was impressed. "You know," he said, "I manage some acts on the Chautauqua circuit, and I think you youngsters are wonderful. I wish you'd come on the circuit with me."

"I'd hate to see you go without someone to take care of you," said Mr. Massey.

"Why don't you come along, father?" asked Louise. "You could play the fiddle and the five of us could get up a nice act."

Mr. Horner agreed to the idea, and so all five of them toured the Chautauqua circuit for two years. Reports from different towns proved that theirs was the most popular act on the circuit.

Then Louise's father went back home to New Mexico, and the rest of the little troupe continued on to Kansas City, where they made their radio debut over station KMBC, after two months of hardships and privations. In Kansas City they met Larry Wellington, who played in a dance band, and who joined their act; he's been with them ever since.

They made their debut as the Westerners in Chicago over WLS, and became known through Uncle Ezra's Radio Station and on the National Barn Dance programs. A shrewd agent, Ed Wolfe, heard of them, and brought them to New York, where they auditioned for the advertising agency which handles the Show Boat hour. Immediately after the audition, Tiny Ruffner went downstairs into the control room and said: "All right. They're signed."

It's probably the fastest sale on record in radio.

But to get back to Louise's marriage. The question of two incomes in one family is a rock on which many marriages go to pieces. In Louise's home they solve it by having her husband pay all the bills—the rent, the food and so on.

He's the head man! All Louise's money goes into the bank against a rainy day.

"Of course," Louise told me, "if I set my heart on something ultra-expensive, I can buy it out of my own money, but I find it usually works out better in the long run if I suggest I'd like to have it. Then my husband buys it for me and he's much happier than if I bought it for myself."

Though he's head man, Milt Mabie knows what it means to be considerate, too.

Proof: He brings his wife a cup of coffee every morning before she gets out of bed. That makes her feel cheerful for the rest of the day.

And still for a' that and a' that, if Joy Massey told Louise tomorrow that she was in love and wanted to get married, Louise would be just as heart-broken as her mother was when Louise got the same idea into her head.

"Most girls of fifteen aren't ready to make the compromise you have to make if your marriage is to be a success," said Louise. "They haven't gone out with boys enough to know their own minds. They aren't accustomed to handling boys. Several couples we know got married about the same time Milt and I did, and I think ours is the only marriage made by anyone in our group that has lasted. Marry at fifteen? I think it's taking an awful chance."

The Maxwell House Coffee makers present The Westerners with the Show Boat hour every Thursday evening over an NBC-WEAF network at 9 p.m. EST (8 CST; 7 MST; 6 PST).

Louise will pose in her store outfit, sure — but she likes nothing better than to be in old pulling leather

Linda Logan, brilliant singing star of the Noko program on the Amalgamated Broadcasting Network, owes much to Manzoni, her manager, for her rise from obscure vaudeville to stardom. Her marriage to Manzoni ended with divorce; but in order to give him some adequate return for all he has done for her—also because she isn't sure whether she's still in love with him—Linda continues with him as her manager. However, his rigid regime to keep her fit and at the top of her game robs her of personal freedom, romance, life.

She rebels, and meets a young man named Dan Corby: she is greatly attracted to him. For reasons of her own she deceives him by telling him that she is Linda Logan's secretary, and gives him her right name, Lucille Pennington. On a day when she goes on a picnic with Dan she misses an audition for the most important hour on the air, the Kleartone. Manzoni is furious, and makes her promise that until he can arrange another Kleartone audition and until she goes on the air as the hour's star, she must not see Dan. Manzoni makes a flying trip to Florida to get her a second audition. Manzoni lands the contract. True to her word, Linda stays away from Dan—but she writes him. And he, unable to stand the separation, comes to see her. He declares he didn't get the letter she wrote him—as Lucille.

Now go on with her story:

(Part VII)

THERE was no doubt that he was telling the truth. What could have happened to it? "See here, Lucille," Dan said, and his face was serious, "I told you before and I tell you for the last time, we can't go on like this. Now when am I going to see you?"

"Tonight!" I was jubilant. "After the show the fireworks'll be all over. We'll go out and celebrate—just you and I. I know a little Hungarian restaurant on East Eighty-Third Street where they play native tunes."

"Now you're talking!" he said. "Shall I pick you up at the Playhouse?"

"No . . . I've got to break away from the crowd. I'll meet you at Fifth Avenue—the corner by the British Empire Building—at ten-thirty. And, oh, Dan I've so much to tell you!"

"I've got plenty to tell you, too," he said.

But I could not discover from his tone whether it would be something I wanted to hear.

I had just returned to the apartment when Manzoni appeared.

"I have checked on every detail. You have nothing to worry about," he assured me.

The Kleartone Hour was to take the air at eight-thirty. At six-thirty I was dressed. By seven I had eaten my slim dinner of a little beef soup. And I had nothing to do.

I called Manzoni on the house phone. "I'm getting so nervous I can't stand it," I said. "I'm going on to the theater."

For a wonder, he did not object. The bustle of activity, the house porters laying the carpets, placing the microphones, testing the lights, calling back and forth in voices that echoed through the empty theater, reassured me, raised my spirits.

A fifteen minute variety show with a small regional network was to go on

"I'm getting so nervous I can't stand it," I said. "I'm going on to the theater"

LONELY LITTLE STAR

When the Results of Linda's Harmless Deception Threaten to Ruin All—What Can She Do?

at seven-forty-five, so I went up the iron stairs to my dressing room to change from street to theatrical make-up, for without accentuated coloring, pronounced rouge, and eye shadow, my face would have been lost in the glare of the floodlights.

I was just smearing on the cold cream base, a towel over my shoulders, when there came a knock and immediately the house manager put his head in. He looked grim.

"I don't want to make you nervous, Miss Logan," he said, "but you've got to be told. Crane, the engineer on your show, was out in New Jersey on that plane that crashed today. We just got a call from him—and he's marooned in a farmhouse. Snowdrifts have blocked the roads. He won't be able to make it. We've got to use a substitute."

I've never made it a practise to give way to temperament, but this was too much for me. Tears of anger stung at my eyelids.

"What'll we do now?" I said angrily. "You can't get anyone at this hour who can handle my voice."

"It's all right," he soothed. "The man who monitored the show just before this is already on the job. He's new, but he knows his stuff. He won't let you down."

I was far from reassured. The engineer who sits at the volume controls watching the flickering needle of the indicator can make or break a star.

"Can't we rehearse even one number together?"

The manager shook his head.

"The house is filling up. John P. Tracy, the president of Kleartone, and his family are in the sponsor's box."

The president of Kleartone—here! Why, he must have come up from Florida for the opening. Why hadn't Manzoni told me?

It was all I needed to throw me into complete panic. Just then came the page's call:

"On stage for the Kleartone Hour!"

I put my make-up on slap-dash with a hand that shook. I had to support myself on the iron rail as I went down to keep from falling.

AS I stepped into the wings, Joe Haynes, the announcer, was holding up his hand for silence. Watch in hand, he stood waiting for the On Air sign to flash red. A mystic hush was over the house.

That second of silence before a show takes the air is always the most dramatic in radio, the one moment when one can feel the great, farflung, unseen audience.

It was the zero hour and I reacted to it, with all my training as a trouper coming to the rescue. Panic slipped from me, and I touched the spray of orchids at my shoulder and waited.

At last I had courage to look at the glass-enclosed lower left box, converted into the sorcerer's chamber of a control room with its flickering lights and dials which were always mysterious to me.

I wanted to see the man who held my fate in his deft fingers. But when I saw, my hard-won courage deserted me completely.

Dan was that new man at the controls—my Dan!

Panic gripped me. For an instant I had the wild impulse to run away—throw aside forever my radio stardom—bury fame and career at the very threshold of topmost success. My love for Dan, my burning desire that remain unsullied, were so strong! Suddenly nothing else mattered to me but Dan and my love for him.

What would he think when he saw me? Could he condone my deceit?

FROM my vantage point in the wings I could see Dan quite plainly, moving about in the eerie flickering lights of the control booth.

Now he was standing up, adjusting the loudspeaker through which he would hear my voice just as it comes into your home . . . And now he was seated—and my last faint hope that I might yet be mistaken faded and died. In the clear, white glow from the control desk his features were too plainly recognizable.

So that must have been what he had to tell me. He had gotten his job at Amalgamated. If I had only known! But how could I have foreseen, because of a mishap, that one of his first assignments would be as control engineer on my program?

He hadn't seen me yet. But I knew I had no chance of escaping recognition.

The microphone into which I was to sing was placed not twenty feet

COCAINE CALLS THE CARS

Cokey Knight Killed a Cop and Started a Chain of Murders the Northwest Will Not Soon Forget

By Arthur Kent

IT WAS a black November night. The scene was a country lane, not many miles from Seattle. Somewhere close at hand in the darkness, chickens squawked querulously.

At the side of this little road, a police car stood parked. It was empty, the door beside the driver's seat open, the engine running. The lights and the police radio were turned on. The radio spoke:

"Calling car 12 . . . Car 12 . . . Call your station . . ."

Ten minutes passed. Fifteen. The radio spoke again:

"Calling car 8 . . . Car 8 . . . Proceed in search of Deputy Sheriff Thomas P. Meehan . . . Search for Deputy Sheriff Meehan, who was dispatched to investigate a suspected chicken-stealing and has not reported. Meehan's destination was . . ."

The radio voice droned on. The engine of Radio Car 12—parked there on that dark country lane—continued to turn over smoothly. And the bright lights of the parked car went right on burning. But Deputy Sheriff Meehan made no move to answer the summons of his loudspeaker.

DEPUTY Meehan lay huddled in the road beside his car, a police pistol beside him. In the exact center of his forehead was a little blue-black hole, not much bigger around than a fat lead-pencil. Again and again the loudspeaker spoke his name—gave him instructions which Meehan was powerless to obey.

Shortly after the shooting of Deputy Meehan, an automobile dashed into a little tourist camp just outside Seattle. From that car William Henry—Cokey—Knight ran into the tiny cabin in which his sweetheart, Jean Miller, already had retired.

They drove all that night. And they kept right on driving, with very few stops, until they reached Butte, Montana—where Knight had spent most of his life, and where Jean had lived with her sister, Mrs. Florence Benevue. That drive just about ended the romance between Jean and Cokey. For the wearer the drug addict became in that forced drive, and the more his jangled nerves cried for dope, the more this small-time, petty criminal began to worry about the murder.

"You'll never live to turn me in!" he snarled at Jean. "I can read your mind, baby! Better not make a break to rat on—"

"Oh shut up!" the girl screamed. By the time they reached Butte they were practically hating each other.

THEY patched things up when Jean went back to live with her sister Florence, and Cokey Knight took an apartment in the same building. But the twitching thug's suspicions remained. Things came to a head the night before Christmas. Cokey had given Jean some new clothes. This took all his money, and he had to give a shady money-lender his gat for security for a five-dollar loan, so that he could buy dope. When this ran out he asked Jean for the return of her new coat, so that he could take it back and use the money for more cocaine. The girl threw all the new clothes in his face, pushed him out of her sister's apartment and said: "We're through!"

Cokey jittered with fright. Now, he figured, she'd surely turn him in. Murder, as Macbeth pointed out, begets more murder. It tends to become a habit. So Cokey scraped up five dollars and redeemed his gun. Then on Christmas Day he came back to Jean's place.

"Jean won't see you!" Florence Benevue told him. "My sister is through with cheap crooks like you. Get out!"

But Cokey went in. He pushed past Mrs. Benevue and yanked the gun out of his pocket. Meanwhile, Jean had run out of the apartment's back door and into the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Betty Clifford, the building manager.

"Get the police!" Jean shrieked. "He wants to kill me!"

FRANK WALSH, Mrs. Clifford's son-in-law, immediately went out the front door to get help. His wife left with him and sat in their car which was parked on the street outside. By this time Cokey Knight was hammering on the back door of Mrs. Clifford's apartment.

"Let me in!" he yelled. "I've got three bullets for Jean and one for myself!"

Florence Benevue followed him out into the hall. Desperately she tried to snatch at the gun. Cokey snarled and fired. Mrs. Benevue clapped her hands to her neck. Blood from a flesh wound stained her dress. Eyes frightened, whimpering, the wounded woman ran back into her apartment. Knight turned and fled to his own rooms.

Meanwhile, young Frank Walsh had found the aid he had left his mother-in-law's apartment to seek. Meeting a friend who once had been a policeman, Harry Kinney, he telephoned police headquarters. Then the two of them returned to the apartment, while the Butte police broadcaster gave the alarm:

"Calling Car 10 . . . Car 10 . . . Go to the Merriam Block Apartments on South Main Street . . . a man with a gun . . ."

Car 10, with Officers Tom O'Neill and James Mooney—famed for his work on the Weyerhauser kidnaping—arrived at the building just as Walsh and his friend Kinney came running back. With the officers in the lead, the four of them went to the apartment of Knight, whither the excited women-folk directed them.

COKEY was standing beside the bed. His face was twitching. His hands were by his side. As the officers came bursting in the drug-fiend jerked up his gun.

O'Neill was halfway across the room. He sprang. Officer Mooney went for his gun.

O'Neill was dead before he fell to the floor. For Cokey fired just as the officer sprang, and he hit him where he had hit Deputy Meehan, the Seattle officer—right through the forehead.

"Damn you!" Mooney raged. His gun was out, and for the hundredth part of a second Fate hesitated. But even as the policeman's finger was squeezing the trigger, Cokey the killer fired. And fired again. Mooney's two arms sagged awkwardly to his sides and his gun clattered down, leaving him helpless.

"Now I'll kill you!" howled Cokey, turning his gun on Kinney and young Walsh, the two unarmed men. He fired. Kinney ducked. The bullet went over his head.

"Wait—" the newly-married young Walsh began. He got no further, for a lead slug from Cokey's revolver ripped through his cheek-bone and bored into his brain. Walsh fell, dying.

"All my enemies die!" yelled Cokey Knight, dashing out of the apartment, down the stairs and into the street.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEURS

Heard on February 2

Here's Kenneth Matheson from tonight's honor city, Duluth, Minnesota, the multi-nationed son of a gold-medal tenor from Scotland, who sang I Want to Go Back to My Little Grass Shack—in Swedish dialect! Ninety-nine pound Peggy Dean, right, who sells silk stockings, made a blues number of Rhythm in My Nursery Rhymes

Believe-It-or-Ripley—this upside-down lad, below, is named Smoky Joe, and although he admits he can't sing much, he sure can dance—on either pair of extremities

Jack of All Instruments—no, don't call him anything else, for he won't like it!—won himself a spot on a vaudeville unit by playing tunes on a sweet potato, harmonica, tin flute, and many other instruments

ETHEL SHUTTA and GEORGE OLSEN are fighting for first mention this week. Ethel because she was held up and robbed, and George because of his writing, with Bob Rice of his band and George Westphal, a successor to The Music Goes 'Round and Around. But the two of them are together in print with the news of the premiere of their Celebrity Night program slated for the night of February 22. Joe Cook will be their first celeb.

The new Olsen-Rice-Westphal tune, designed to razz the famous Music Goes 'Round smash hit, is tagged It Won't Go 'Round Any More and its lyric tells of how the musician dropped his horn, bending it. Hurray!

As for the robbery, Ethel was bound for Chicago's College Inn and a broadcast with hubby George and band, when motor bandits curbed her car, shooting toward but not at her chauffeur to make him stop. They took about ten thousand dollars' worth of jewels and a mink coat from the songstress, but the loss was insured.

Arriving almost late for her program, Ethel's first number peculiarly was Shooting High and her second, Indians in the Trees. The laugh of the latter is at the end of its lyric:

"While racketeers and scalpers take our shirts and let us freeze,
"Oh give us back those Indians and give them back those trees."

ORDINARILY I am not one of those to shout, "I told you so." But I shall in shouting hallelujah over the two new contracts signed by the suave comedian Frank Fay. As predicted here, he has made good. He'll work thirteen more weeks for Rudy Vallee and then, starting next July, will have his own show sponsored by Royal Gelatin. July also will see One Man's Family begin selling Tenderleaf Tea.

I sincerely hope that Fay's radio success will lead to a reconciliation with his peachy ex-wife, Barbara Stanwyck of the screen. They were a great pair; then threesome, with son Dion. They belong together.

Yoo-hoo, oh Mr. Fred Allen—this is Plummer, not Portland, sending you a choice flock of the bestest plums for your riotous show of February 5. My chuckles were loudest where you demonstrated that anti-snoring device and when you burlesqued Major Bowes.

When you read Inside Stuff you'll know almost all about Jack Benny's stop-off in the Windy City, but I want to tell you—particularly you girls—that Kenny Baker is just as sweet a kid as he sounds on the air. He's that naive and unspoiled—and he's one of the handsomest radio menaces to the home life of ordinary married men. But girls, get out your handkerchiefs. Despite the buildup above, and even though Kenny is but 23 or 24 years old, he is married, and happily.

ROMANCE CORNER: Robert (Joe Marlin) Griffin is planning for an elaborate church wedding to re-marry his new wife, nee Fuller. Bob and Marge aren't so sure their first ceremony, which took place in Mexico, is binding—and they like each other . . .

While waiting in the offing for an appointment with Loretta Poynton, Brer Stork is casting a weather eye in the direction of Joan (Mrs. Frank Bering) Winters. He's going to provide a playmate for Nancy Ann Bering . . . St. Valentine's Day is a heartbreak for Virginia (Helen Trent) Clark. That was his name, and they met on that day two years ago—but the affair is all over now . . . Not so the singer Lucille Long-broker O. E. Zehr business, for that was made into a permanent contract recently.

RIPLEY Cartoon Corner: There's a real Professor Kaltenmeyer in Idaho. He's a retired high school principal and has never heard the show bearing his name! . . . There is also a Lynn Corry 'way down in Tennessee, a Ransom Pratt in Grand Forks, Nebraska, and an A. Gump, so 'elp me, in Hometown, Indiana.

SOCIETY COLUMN: There's a very good chance that H. Wallace Caldwell, lesser half of Olga, Countess Albani, may be nominated for Governor of Illinois. If so, the Countess' Life is a Song contract will end in time for her to campaign for him—which she insists she will do.

And, Countess, if he becomes the Gov. what will we call you—Mrs. Gov.? Or Countess Mrs. Gov.? Oh well, let it pass.

If, one of these chilly nights, you miss hearing Herbie Kay, Harry Sosnik, George Olsen, Will Osborne or any other of your favorite ork pilots now located in the Windy City, you may charge it up to James Petrillo, music union chief, who threatens a strike unless the cafes and hotels raise the $2-an-hour pay of musicians to $3 and give them one night off each week.

Mr. Petrillo seems irked likewise that anyone except the Music Corporation of America should book bands into Chicago.

I wonder what is responsible for his deep and unflinching affection for MCA?

PODIUM POTHOOKS: Jan Garber would have you know that he plays hotter music than Guy Lombardo ever did, so why all this shout about similarity? He told me so himself . . . the day last week he entertained at his home and I met and played with his seven-year-old daughter Janis, a great youngster who goes to the University of Chicago academic school, wins without cheating at solitaire, and would rather read the funny papers than listen to daddy Jan's—or Guy Lombardo's—music! . . . Ted Lewis will open March 13 at the Terrace Room in Chicago . . . Clyde McCoy's band is at the Roseland Ballroom, New York City . . . the other Clyde, Lucas, of the Life Saver Rendezvous show, has just signed to make a series of movie shorts starting March 11 . . . Milwaukee's Schroeder Hotel likes Seymour Simons so well they'll keep him at least another month . . . And the rest of the Wayne King itinerary for now is: Feb. 13 week, RKO Boston Theater, Boston, Mass.; Feb. 20, Pottstown, Pa.; Feb. 21 week, Earle Theater, Washington, D. C.; Feb. 28 week, Stanley Theater, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Inside Stuff

BY MARTIN LEWIS

JACK BENNY blew into Chicago one day last week on his way East, and was given a very cold reception. If you think I'm kidding, you're mistaken. The fierce wind blew from every direction, and the thermometer registered thirteen notches below the zero mark. And if you don't think that's cold—how are the other Eskimos? Having come from the mild California clime, you'd imagine Jack wouldn't like it so much; but when I met him for lunch at noon he told me he had been out walking for about an hour and loved it!

THE first thing Jack asked me was about my recent operation, and how I was feeling. I told him I was okay now but I did have a lot of trouble. He replied: "Marty, you don't know what trouble is until you try to write a radio broadcast every week and make it funny." I confess I immediately felt guilty because of the unkind words about some of the Benny programs (printed on this page) that I and some of my readers thought unfunny. Anyway, Jack added that inasmuch as I had such a close call from death I should appreciate all radio programs and say only nice things about them. I caught on very quickly but didn't say a word—I was content to let the matter drop.

ONE more thing about the Bennys that I know will interest you: They arrived in New York on Thursday, February 6, the morning after their good friends George Burns and Gracie Allen left for the coast. So what happened? Jack and Mary moved into George and Gracie's apartment in New York, and have the use of their automobile besides.

When George and Gracie reach Hollywood the Benny car will be at their disposal, and everybody is happy.

FRED WARING has been in town for the past two weeks playing at the Chicago Theater. When I saw him in his dressing-room one night he was a mighty tired lad. He only did four shows that day, had one more to go and rehearsed between each show for his broadcasts the following day. While hurrying to dress for the last show he was having his dinner, which consisted of crackers and milk—his favorite dish, by the way. In the meantime, the boys in the band were gulping sandwiches and coffee just before the curtain call.

The Waring Gang, totaling forty-five travelers, suffered only one casualty thus far. Poley McClintock lost his frog-voice and couldn't talk, much less sing. That is why you didn't hear him wah-hooing in his individual baritone manner during one of their broadcasts from the Windy City. And folks, it was a treat for sore eyes to watch Priscilla Lane tap dance. She does The Truckin' in the act, and if Fred doesn't be careful some one is going to grab her off and make another Eleanor Powell of her.

If present plans go through, Richard Himber will have an entire new set-up starting with his CBS broadcast the first week in March. The idea is to present a different comedian or comedienne every week, such as Frank Fay, Beatrice Lillie, Joe Cook, etc.

SHOULD Gene Arnold ever decide to put a minstrel show on the air Monday nights in competition with his old program, I think he would grab all the listeners; that is, if I can believe the many letters I receive from readers in protest to Gene's removal from that oil show.

Perhaps some of you have been wondering what has happened to Annette Hanshaw, who was heard last season on CBS' Camel Caravan. Asked about it the other day, Annette said "I'm still waiting for the kind of show I want." Annette has had offers. There is no doubt about that. But she has her heart set on a show which will have her in the role of an actress as well as a singer. If such a show doesn't come along this Winter, it won't bother her much, for this is her first vacation from the mike in four years and she has a nice big savings account.

I WENT over to the station to see George and Gracie when they passed through Chicago. George was telling me about the dinner they attended in honor of President Roosevelt given by Vice-President John N. Garner. George introduced his bitter half to the V. P. and Gracie naively chirps, "I've heard of vice but I didn't know they had a president for it."

Tea at the Ritz vacates its afternoon spots on CBS effective February 28. After that, the program will be heard once a week at nights if CBS can clear a desirable period of time. Until then the program will vacation.

JIMMY WALLINGTON tried so hard to keep his romance with pretty Jean Rogers of the flickers a deep dark secret, but it just couldn't be done. So any week you can expect Jimmy to make a real announcement in his own behalf—Jean is to become Mrs. Wallington. In the meantime, they are whispering sweet nothings into each other's ears via long-distance.

Benay Venuta, the CBS songstress, was able to keep her secret for a long time. I just found out that Benay was married on the Q. T. to Doctor Ken Kelly of Chicago. The marriage is said to have taken place last October at Ossining, New York.

HANDSOME Jerry Cooper of the Tea at the Ritz and Musical Toast programs denies that he eloped with Jean Mitchell, Hollywood Restaurant beauty. But Jerry may be fibbing, because he's always seen with the stately show-girl, and maybe he feels that a wife would hurt his feminine following.

WHEN you listen to Lawrence Tibbett next Tuesday night you can visualize him standing in front of the microphone in blackface, because that's the way he will be made up. Tibbett is appearing in a Metropolitan Opera production and will have to rush from the stage to the studio.

IF YOU tune in to educational programs, take my tip and lend an ear to the Your English broadcast heard on Sunday p.m.'s over the NBC network. You will be amazed how easy it is to make a mistake in pronunciation.

The helpless but brave Officer Mooney just managed to stagger out of the apartment building, arms a-swaying uselessly, in time to see Cokey leap on the running-board of a car containing three boys, and heard him shout:

"I've just shot four people! Now you kids'll have something to talk about! Get out or I'll kill you!"

It was after that that they organized the entire countryside to hunt down the drug-crazed murderer. And the link which drew together the efforts of police officers and posses in scattered communities was radio.

Montana has no regular police radio as yet. But all police cars carry a regular broadcast-band receiver. And whenever a serious crime situation arises, the commercial radio stations KGIR and KGHL cooperate.

As Cokey drove, that Christmas Day grew darker and darker. It had been snowing, and now the flakes fell faster and faster. By nightfall the roads were beginning to be choked with drifts.

At nine o'clock Knight's stolen car stalled. Cursing, he tried to buck the drift. Then he attempted to turn the car around. It slid into a ditch. For one hour Cokey worked frantically, trying in vain to get that car back on the road. Long ago his supply of the drug had given out. Each minute he worked there, alone and cold in the blackness of night, brought increasing agony. Finally he gave up. Turning, he walked back five miles to the nearest ranch house.

Floyd Woods, ranch hand, was alone. Everybody else on the place had gone away, visiting friends for Christmas. Woods had cheerfully insisted that he didn't mind being left alone.

Woods got out of bed when Knight knocked on the door.

"I got to get to town!" Knight cried. "I'll take you in," Woods said.

Quickly he dressed. Then taking a couple of five-gallon gasoline cans and a funnel, he led Knight to the garage. The two men filled the gas tank. Woods started the car.

Then Cokey Knight calmly shot the kind-hearted Woods through the forehead. He shoved the dead man over, climbed behind the wheel and drove away. He disposed of the body by dumping it over a bridge into the Madison River—where it was found frozen the next day.

Until Friday morning the killer eluded posses by skulking in the bush. Then he made his way to a little house on the outskirts of Butte. Tired, hungry and twitching for lack of his drug, Knight still was shrewd enough to realize that Butte would be the last place in which the authorities would expect to find him.

He knocked gently on the door of the little house. A slim, black-haired woman opened it, and shrank back when she saw Knight.

"You know me, Mrs. Gilligan?" he croaked. He and the husband of this woman once had worked together, on one of the few occasions when Cokey had tried to earn an honest living. "Can I come in?"

"Well, I don't want you here," the woman bravely replied. "We heard what you did, killing people." But even while she was speaking, Cokey had pushed her back into the house. He followed, gun in hand.

"Yeah!" he snarled. "You heard what I done, eh? Well, you're gonna feel what I'll do next!" He shut the

STAR POLL MOUNTS

TABULATION has commenced in RADIO GUIDE's third annual Star of Stars Election. As the ballots pile up, certain favorites begin to loom as popular choices. Is your favorite among those out in front? If not, blame no one but yourself.

This is one Election that is strictly in the hands of the listeners. The choice is not a predetermined one. It comes directly from the hearts and hands of those best qualified to select the winners in the eleven fields of radio covered by RADIO GUIDE's referendum—you and you and you who comprise the great national audience.

By this you can see how important it is for you to get behind those whom you feel are entitled to wear the laurel of leadership, and getting behind them means only one thing. That is, vote. Vote early and often. Everything has been done to make voting simple and easy. In order not to make voting a financial burden, the coupon ballot printed here has been made in a size suitable for pasting on a one-cent post card. And remember, if you are like many of the fans and want to vote several times for your favorites, obtain a number of the ballots and after filling them out enclose them in an envelope or send them by parcel post. But do it early, because—as everyone knows—the front runner has the best chance in any race. It may be true that the race is not always to the swift—but if you're putting up any money, the contestant with the greatest speed is the best bet.

After you have filled out your ballots, mail them promptly to the Star Election Tellers, care of RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois.

The stars themselves are counting on their admirers to lead them to victory. Do not praise them in one breath and neglect them in the other. Be loyal and vote. Not tomorrow—not next week—but right now!

professional performers from the beginning. The remaining contestants in these amateur nights, both of radio and vaudeville, are actually professional actors, singers, dancers and instrumentalists who appear under the guise of amateurs. In that guise they work for considerably less money than they would receive for professional work, and make it correspondingly hard for outright professionals to secure engagements.

"It is quite true that Major Bowes and perhaps some of the other impresarios in this field have opened some dark theaters, or have introduced living actors into programs on which they did not ordinarily appear. But there is no reason to suppose that a comparable troupe of professionals, handled in the same way, would not have done at least as well. Roxy's Gang, which also got its start at the Capitol Theater, was always a strictly professional group and it was always an attraction wherever and whenever it played, whether on the air or on a stage. The one difference is that its members were paid a good deal more than these amateurs. That, perhaps, is one of the reasons why amateur hours have become popular.

"There is no law against exploiting the ambitions, hopes and dreams of men and women, but Major Bowes has other and better accomplishments to his credit to which he may legitimately point with pride."

Despite the critics, despite the rumors of professionalism and stories of "expert" amateurs, the Major Bowes Amateur Hour runs on, out-distancing even Eddie Cantor who recently switched his hour in order to face less formidable opposition.

Probably, the reason is that it is conducted by as expert a showman as the world has seen since the famous Phineas Barnum. Another reason is that it provides the listener with a show that is uncommonly entertaining.

That entertainment is no accident. It is planned both wisely and well. Behind the scenes wheels revolve within wheels. When an amateur's voice reaches a listener it is no longer an accident of ambition and opportunity. It is staged showmanship.

The facts which follow, as background, will help fill in the picture.

Major Bowes' contract is for a long term, the exact length unrevealed. All indications are that it is for five years and operates in this manner: The original contract provided for six months straight. At the end of this six months, the sponsor had the privilege of renewing his option for another six months. Then, when the second six-month period is up, Chase & Sanborn can still take up its option. In other words, it runs in six month stretches with the sponsor holding the option privileges.

The cost of the show to Chase and Sanborn involves the cost of the network, the salary to Major Bowes, a salary to Graham McNamee, the cost of maintaining the telephone voting setups, the cost of a man who travels around the country to take care of arrangements in the honor cities, and other smaller items such as the salary of the production man in the studio.

The salaries of the two pianists are paid by Major Bowes, who also pays the amateurs, manages the movie shorts and the theater units, takes care of expenses of amateurs in getting to the various units, and pays for his own staff of assistants.

Regarding the telephone setup: In Radio City as many as 100 telephone operators have been on duty at one time. This number is smaller now.

The honor city of the night has all the way from 30 to 100 operators, depending upon the size of the city and the number of calls expected.

Approximately 30 tabulators are used in Radio City, where between 18,000 and 20,000 calls come in.

When a city is selected to be the honor city, a representative of Chase and Sanborn contacts the local telephone exchange in advance and makes arrangements. It is usually on a basis of a flat rental of exchange facilities. The local exchange always has on hand a list of operators available for extra duty and these are hired. The exact amount paid the operators is not available. It is in the neighborhood of $2 for the 90 minutes of work.

Sometimes the local exchanges refuse to handle the job. That is usually due to this: Some cities have flat rates for telephone service which means that the number of calls made does not affect income in any way. Therefore, the heavy voting means only added work for the exchange. Exchanges often say that such increased use of the phone as this voting involves ties up their local service. So they often refuse.

COLUMBIA, South Carolina, for example, we are told, refused to be an honor city despite the fact that State Senator Bates made efforts to arrange it. The phone exchange there just wouldn't handle the matter.

Now, what happens to an amateur who has been promised an audition? Auditions are held from Tuesday through Friday from 2 till 6:30 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., by two of Major Bowes' assistants, Bessie Mack and Bob Reed. While gathering material for this report on the Major Bowes program, RADIO GUIDE sent its representative to see such an audition. He reports:

"The studio used is down a back corridor in the RCA Building. The hall on each side of the studio was lined with folding metal chairs where the amateurs waited their turn. At 3:15 o'clock on this day I counted 56 amateurs waiting their turn. I talked to several and found that they had just written a week or two before, so there was no indication in this incident that they had been pushed around or wrote second letters with sob material in order to get a hearing. Most of this bunch looked like nice sort of people. It was amusing to see the NBC pages direct amateurs to the proper studio and then turn and smile.

"I interviewed Bessie Mack and she gave the following information:

"The amateur who receives the most number of votes is not necessarily awarded a job in one of the units or in one of the shorts. The popular belief is that the winner of the first four places or so get such contracts. That isn't so. The units are made up of those who best fit into them from a showmanship standpoint.

"For example: The first place winner for several consecutive weeks might be a baritone. Well, the units have baritones. So they don't add on more baritones, unless one of the new discoveries is so good that a replacement is made. In that case, it means that one of the unit baritones is dropped and one of the new ones put in to replace him.

THIS unit business is a bit complicated. There are now twelve units around the country. A thirteenth unit is being formed. Others may be formed if the demand merits.

"When the first units were formed, the best of the amateurs were picked for them. The best, naturally, were not always the ones to receive the most votes. Also, in forming the units, care was taken to have them well balanced. There would be a singer of popular songs, perhaps an imitator, perhaps a trio, et cetera. In other words, the completed unit was to be capable of putting on a well-rounded vaudeville act in itself. This is just as any theater manager would do—pick acts of a different nature for a well-balanced bill.

Miss Mack explained it this way: The unit stays as is, unless one particular member does not click, in which case he is replaced. Or perhaps some amateurs drop out of their own accord. In this case replacements are made. Then there may be times when a local town specially requests a certain amateur, in which case the request is usually granted. For example, perhaps Jack Zilch of Chicago is on tonight and this is Chicago voting night. Let us say that Jack is high in the running. The manager of a Chicago theater has booked a Bowes unit, so realizes the pull he would have for a better box office if Jack appears in the unit and that is made known over the air. So Major Bowes sends him Jack. Maybe Jack plays with the unit only so long as it is in Chicago. Maybe he is kept on permanently. It just depends.

"Since that is the case, I asked Miss Mack what happens to those amateurs who are unit material, but who can't be used at the moment because no replacements are needed. In this case (and it happens weekly) they are merely held on tap. It may be several weeks before an amateur is called upon to join a unit. Maybe he never appears in one. 'Held on tap' is what's door behind him, and smiled a bitter smile. He was looking at two little children—David Gilligan, five years old, and Baby Hazel, two.

"You want them kids to live, don't you, Missus?" he asked. The pale mother was too frightened to do anything but nod. "Then here!" The killer reached into his pocket, brought out a dollar bill. "I gotta eat, see? You take this dough and go to the nearest grocery. I ain't afraid you'll tell nobody I'm here. Because if you do—"

Slowly he pointed the pistol first at David, then at Hazel.

What could the mother—what could any mother—do? The little black-haired woman went to the store, returned and fed her hated guest.

About five o'clock Jim Gilligan came home from work. Knight met him inside the door and jammed the gun in his stomach.

"Come in and shut up!" croaked the killer.

"My God!" cried Gilligan. "The whole State's lookin' for you!"

For an hour this husband and father pleaded with Cokey Knight to go away. Finally Knight said craftily:

"I'll go if you'll get me some medicine first."

But something in his look, or his tone, warned Gilligan. Instinctively he realized that this ruthless killer was planning to wipe out his entire little family. In the desperation of that moment Gilligan learned to match guile with guile.

"We won't go," he said flatly, "unless you let us take our children away from here!"

"No!" snarled Cokey. "Them kids stays with me till I get the medicine."

It was stalemate. Knight held the gun—but each moment the awful gnawing in his nerves grew worse. Finally the craving won.

"If I let you take them kids," he temporized, "where'll you go with 'em?"

"Why," said Gilligan, his heart leaping with hope, "to their grandmother's place, just down the street. The Missus'll take the kids there while I go to the drug store for you."

And suddenly, beaten by his craving for cocaine, Knight gave in. Muttering awful threats, he let the little family leave the house.

Mrs. Gilligan took her children to their grandmother's, and Jim Gilligan went to the drug store—to phone the police. Once again, radio spoke:

"Attention all cars in or near Butte . . . Knight is hiding in the home of James Gilligan, at . . ."

Swiftly the house was surrounded. Then, at a signal, assistant chief of police Jack Duggan broke in the door, hurled a tear-gas bomb into the house.

"Come on out, Knight!" he cried. "The house is surrounded!"

There was no answer. But a piece of cardboard, blocking a broken pane, moved slightly. Cokey Knight was training his gun upon Jack Duggan for a final murder.

Duggan fired from the hip. Straight through that cardboard went the police bullet—and in the little four-room Gilligan house there was the sudden thump of a heavy body's fall.

Cokey Knight died in the hospital three and a half hours later. Radio, aided by his own craving for cocaine which destroyed the uncanny cunning the drug had engendered, had finally caught up with the mad dog of Montana.

Music in the Air

By Carleton Smith

MY POLICY," said Edward Johnson, now general manager and formerly a tenor at the Metropolitan Opera House, "may be expressed in a little twist of the Golden Rule: I am doing unto others as I have wished for a long time to be done by."

Mr. Johnson was seated in Giulio Gatti-Cassaza's old office, at Mr. Gatti's old desk, but not, he was at pains to point out, in Mr. Gatti's huge old swivel chair.

A new cheerful setting seems as appropriate for Mr. Johnson as the old, somewhat stuffy surroundings were for Mr. Gatti. For Edward Johnson is a man in his fifties whose youthful figure long has been the envy of other grand opera tenors. His reddish brown hair now is touched with gray. He smiles easily, and when he does his eyes, which are shrewd and kindly, are full of humorous sparkle. He answers questions readily, openly. You can hear him speak every Sunday (NBC at 3:30 p.m. EST; 2:30 CST; 1:30 MST; 12:30 PST) when he presides over the Metropolitan Opera Auditions.

"My plan for next season? Well—new people in old roles; new roles for the favorite singers of former seasons—there you have my plan in a nutshell. This year we have Carmen for Rosa Ponselle, Rigoletto for Larry Tibbett, Leonore in Fidelio for Mme. Flagstad.

New roles for the favorites—and you are all hearing some wonderful new people in the old roles."

And there you have it from the Chief himself.

Treats to Come

The Metropolitan Opera broadcast for February 15 (NBC at 1:55 p.m. EST; 12:55 CST; 11:55 a.m. MST; 10:55 PST) is Verdi's Il Trovatore, with Kethberg, Martinelli, Meisle, Bonelli, Lazzari, and Gennaro Papi conducting. The opera scheduled for February 22 has not been announced.

THE Minneapolis Symphony returns from a month's tour and resumes its weekly broadcasts Thursday, February 20, at 11:30 p.m. EST; 10:30 CST; 9:30 MST; 8:30 PST. They will continue until that organization concludes its season on April 16.

Susanne Fisher, whom we have been hearing on the Metropolitan matinees, is the General Motors soloist Sunday. Nelson Eddy is scheduled to appear on that hour February 23, Arturo Toscanini and Dusolina Giannini on March 1, Charles Kullmann on March 8, Josef Hofmann (in my opinion the greatest pianist ever to face the microphone in this country) on March 15, Grace Moore on March 22, and Yehudi Menuhin concludes the series on March 29.

Gilding the Lily

Sirs: On a recent program, the violinist with the Medinah Ensemble chose Carrie Jacobs Bond's Just Awearin' for You. Let us hope that Mrs. Bond did not hear the rendition.

How any musician can appear before the public and defame the composer of a perfectly beautiful song, by disgracefully changing its tempo to suit his own personal whim or fancy is beyond the conception of anyone musical. Were he compelled to sing the song and words in the same tempo, he might then realize the ridiculousness of his interpretation.

To end a number by substituting one or more false notes is equally bad, though a rather common practice—for shame—among egotistical musicians, not one of whom would be capable of composing the composition used or one equally as fine.

In summing up: We earnestly hope the time may come when composers stipulate and insist that their compositions be rendered as written; otherwise, permission to use, not given. When that day arrives, better music will prevail from mike to stage.

Marshall, Minnesota F. C. Shardlow

That vague claim, "My own arrangement," is one of the bitter radio elements with which we have to put up in order to get the sweet. It tends to make original composition sort of a thankless task.—Ed.

He Hopes Not

Sirs: Is Mr. Woolcott off the air permanently? He was the best radio entertainer to those who appreciate his jewel edged words, his apt figures of speech, penetrating imagery, his apt applications combined with authentic information.

How can radio educate when announcers say "efficient, official, occasion, awlternate," and construct sentences which would not pass a third-grade test?

Don't say it! I'm not an old maid nor a school teacher!

My family enjoy all the symphonies but the ballyhoo entertainers vociferate so loudly that they drown out all the low soft melodies of the instruments. Is this entirely the fault of my radio? Thank you.

Peoria, Illinois Mrs. Henry Johnston

The Town Crier has expressed himself both for and against a return to radio but some sponsor doubtlessly will deem his delightful sophistries of enough merit to warrant bringing Alex back. And I'm sure he'll heed the call. Woolcott loves any opportunity that will provide upwards of a million listeners to his observations.—Ed.

Here's Howe to Winch

Sirs: I am writing a reply to that letter written by Frank Winch saying that there is nothing of real entertainment value on short waves. His statements are entirely without backing.

In the first place he says that it is impossible to check on any foreign program in advance. I refer him to a column in this very magazine Radio Guide, by Charles Morrison. Also most of the leading stations send program listings in advance of their radiation—for example Rome, Berlin, Madrid, London, etc.

He also says that the programs are blurred. I refer him to the transmissions of any leading short-wave station, and he will find that reception is much better than on the regular broadcast band, and entirely free from static and interference.

Tuscaloosa, Alabama William Howe

A Gene Arnold Rally

Sirs: I want to say "Please" to all the Gene Arnold fans, very loud. Everybody wants him back on his own program. There is not, and never will be, another Gene Arnold.

We miss his kind, wonderful, easy voice. I just will not believe what gossips say about him. A man surely cannot do all they say and yet have such a wonderful mind. His readings and singing are always inspiring.

I don't miss much over the air. I have listened to Gene Arnold a long, long time. He was always a gentleman. He can't be replaced. We want him back—please.

Dover, Ohio Mrs. H. J.

Their Nose for News?

Sirs: Why—oh, why must radio sports announcers speak so nasally? Voices of announcers at actual games may be expected to soar with excitement, but my real complaint is against the daily commentators of current sports events. They don't merely speak nasally; they SHOUT that way. Regular announcers have to be good. Why not these offenders? Please, station managers, can't you do something about this?

EST Shown: for CST Subtract One Hour

RECEPTION from Europe has been very enjoyable this week, with Daventry, England, stations GSF (15.14) and GSC (9.58) taking first honors. DJB, Zeesen, Germany (15.20), star morning station for the past two months, is worth listening to at present only during the American hour, now heard from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. daily except Sunday. DJC, Zeesen (6.02), is best from 9 to 10 p.m. EAQ, Madrid, Spain (9.86), is best from 6 to 8 p.m. and is one of the most consistently received European stations. It is a pleasure to listen to the excellent announcing of the lady newscaster from Rome, over station 2RO (9.635) daily from 6 to 6:15 p.m. The English news from France is usually well received from Pontoise (11.88) at 7 p.m.

The most easily heard transmissions from Asia are those that originate in Tokio, Japan, and are heard over short-wave stations JVN (10.66) and JVP (7.51), from 4 to 5 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays. These transmissions seldom start until about 4:20 p.m.

With the approach of cooler weather in the southern hemisphere, reception from the Australian stations shows some improvement. Present schedules in effect are: VK2ME, Sydney (9.59), Saturdays, 1 to 3 a.m.; Sundays, 5 to 9 and 9 to 11 a.m.; VK3ME, Melbourne (9.49), 4 to 7 a.m. except Sundays; VK3LR, Melbourne (9.58), 3:30 to 7:30 a.m. except Sundays.

Reception from Central and South America continues good.

Saigon, French Indo-China, pioneer station in the far East that closed down in 1931, soon resumes a regular broadcasting schedule. Experimental transmissions are already taking place daily at 6:40 p.m. on a frequency of 9.52 megacycles.

ACCORDING to World Radio, experimental station PCJ, located near Eindhoven, Holland, soon will be replaced by a new station near Hilversum, which will boast a power of 60,000 watts. PHI, Huizen (11.73), is to continue working but with a new aerial of increased efficiency.

Radio Suva, short-wave station VPD at Suva in the Fiji Isles (13.075), has been coming in much better during the last two weeks, according to James Moore of San Francisco. Considering its low power, it is being heard with almost local volume. The phrase "Hello, listeners" serves as a good identification of the station as it is BLONDE Barbara Clark, the 19-year-old South Bend, Indiana, girl, claimed that it was Nelson Eddy and his baritone and not the music that had her goin' 'round and around!

Miss Clark trailed Eddy throughout the Midwest while the singer was on tour. Her only comment, "I like to hear him sing," speaks for his popularity in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana.

TED TRAVERS, who was heard over this outlet with Art Kassel, refers to Irene Dunne, of screen fame, as Aunt Irene! Travers appeared in the pict, Stingaree, along with Miss Dunne and Richard Dix. He is the son of Charlotte Ryan, former star of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

'Tis a secret! Tom Slater marched down the aisle recently. Our informant claims that the missus was a school marm.

WCKY Gossip

ARTHUR AINSWORTH did himself proud on the WCKY tribute to King George, aired the night before the late monarch's funeral. Some of the announcers known as biggies might have profited by Arthur's reading of the verses from Kipling.

CHARLEY TOPMILLER and the "Mrs." (Alma Ashcraft) are thinking of writing a book on how to start the new year wrong. Top's parents, in Bowling Green, Kentucky, sent the newlyweds an antique table and a specially-made cedar chest. The transfer company received it too late in the day so they stored it in the warehouse until next day's delivery. THAT NIGHT THE STOREHOUSE BURNED TO

THE GROUND—and so did the Topmiller presents!

WHY CONNIE WAITED FOUR YEARS

Martha, Vet and Connie may have played with puppets before Connie's marriage, but a prankish fate made puppets of them when the ceremony actually came around

"I'm Harry Leedy," he said. "I work here, too. You girls have unusual voices. Why don't you try radio instead of second-fiddle singing for the stars? Now look . . ."

There was no mistaking his sincerity. The girls took note of his high forehead. They liked the way his thin hands gesticulated as he outlined his plans for them. From then on, Harry Leedy directed the course of the Boswell Sisters.

Well, you know what happened. The three girls zoomed to be the biggest money-makers in radio. Careers aren't made by luck or just by good voices. Leedy did their fighting, their managing, used every ounce of his shrewdness to set the girls in the proper spotlight.

That was his business. And he made a good job of it.

HOWEVER, it wasn't business that made him shelter Connie as he did. It was a familiar sight to see him lift her like a baby and carry her from the studio to her car waiting outside. And it wasn't business that made him a steady dinner guest at the Boswell apartment until even Lulu knew that she must make corn fritters every night for "that man." And it wasn't business that made him stay with Connie evenings and try to beat her at backgammon.

For four years he knew he was in love with her. And for four years Connie looked at him through the sooty fringes of her black eyes and said: "Maybe. I want to be sure."

What Connie wanted to be sure about, I don't know. Certainly she knew that without Harry she'd have no reason for living.

Perhaps, though, she wanted to be sure that Harry's love for her wasn't based on sympathy. She wanted to be sure, you see, that he loved her because she had a tumbling mass of raven-black hair, and because she had red-satin lips and because she had a piquant nose and because she had a swell sense of humor and because she had large, far-apart eyes and because—Well, you understand what she was driving at. Like every normal, slightly vain, love-befuddled girl, she wanted to be sure that her man loved her for herself.

Connie hated pity. Frankly, she didn't need it. Because outside of walking and dancing, she does everything she wants. She was tired of people who openly admired her for her Courage and her Pluck. They were hindering her efforts to be like other girls, and caused her to look with a slight suspicion on people who were too nice to her. And that's why, though her heart was bursting to say yes, and she had no reason to doubt his love for her, she waited . . .

It was a very unromantic case of pesky appendicitis with Harry that made Connie take the Lohengrin leap.

"I won't go to the hospital until you marry me," he insisted.

"But—but Harry—"

He shook his head emphatically.

"When we're married, I'll go."

Well, what could you do with a man like that?

SO CONNIE, who had dreams that when she would become Mrs. So-and-So, she would wear her mother's white satin wedding gown, and have Martha and Vet and the whole family around, now put in a long-distance telephone call to New Orleans for Mama to join her for the ceremony without delay. And here was Martha in Washington with her soon-to-be-husband, Major George I. Lloyd, and here was Vet in Texas with her new husband, John Paul Jones, and Connie had promised the girls that when and if she got married she'd have them near her. And now they couldn't join her and oh, she was so upset and so happy and so mixed-up and this was the grandest moment of her life and she was close to the weeps—there, she was crying, and what was she to do?

SO MAMA rushed from her New Orleans kitchen where she was busy preparing corn pones, and caught the first train to New York. And then she sped away with Connie and Harry and a Best Man, and with blurry eyes she saw her daughter married in the upstate country home of a nice, friendly judge who had known Connie and Harry for years, and who said he knew all along that they would marry but he had lost hope at the long wait and was just going to tell them a thing or two and now—here they were before him with a marriage license!

Before the Judge opened his book, Connie took a picture out of her pocketbook and solemnly placed it on the mantelpiece facing her. It was a picture of Martha and Vet. Even though they were hundreds of miles away, at least they were looking straight at her on this Day of Days.

And right after the ceremony they had eggs and tomatoes and no wedding cake—Harry wasn't allowed to eat pastries!—but it was as gay and intoxicating a wedding meal as any champagne-and-partridge feast.

THE next day the bridegroom was trundled off to the hospital, and Connie, a worried wife if ever there was one, lurked about the corridor pestering the doctors and nurses about her Harry until they finally had to let her in to see him, even though visitors weren't allowed.

Connie kept her marriage secret un-

Connie loves the activities that take her outdoors, in so far as she can indulge them with her friends til she could tell her sisters all about it, face-to-face. And then when Martha married her Major on New Year's day, she let the news out in the form of a double-wedding announcement.

And now Connie is starting on her own career in all earnest. Vet is too happy dashing to South America and back with her oil millionaire husband to want to come back to New York and a career—for a while, anyway. And Martha is developing into one of the most popular hostesses in Washington. Which is perfectly okay with the new Mrs. Leedy, because her proud young husband wants the world to know her as one of the finest solo singers that ever crooned a love ballad into a mike. And anything that Harry says is just fine and dandy with Connie.

Thus, Connie is embarking on a new career and a new life. And I can't help but think she'll make a grand success of both. Somehow or other, Connie Boswell has that knack.

The makers of Coca-Cola present Connie Boswell in Refreshment Time, with Ray Noble, Wednesdays over the CBS-WABC network at 9:30 p.m. EST (8:30 CST; 7:30 MST; 6:30 PST).

THE COVER PORTRAIT

HAD it been left to him, the portrait of Leslie Howard with his daughter, Leslie, Junior, never would have appeared on this week's RADIO GUIDE cover. Because right now Leslie Howard is not in the market for publicity.

He doesn't even feel that it is necessary to publicize his 10-year-old daughter, Leslie Ruth, known as Leslie, Junior, who twice has appeared with him in radio dramatizations and whose portrait is displayed with his on this week's cover. He was delighted with the acclaim with which she was received by the radio audience—but would like to soft-pedal any glory.

Not that Howard depreciates the value of publicity. But he feels that the sudden and amazing whirl of popularity in which he had been enveloped already has been over-exploited; and he seeks a spell of peace and retirement from the public eye except as he appears in his performances.

His sentiment about the whole matter is readily understandable when you take into account his route to international fame. He left his native England to come to this country little more than a clerk who dabbled in dramatics.

Then, after his success here, he returned to England to be lionized and feted; greeted as a returning hero. And the taste of it all was a trifle bitter. He didn't see why he had had to cross an ocean to attain fame. He felt that all he had accomplished in America would have been possible at home.

So now that he is back in this country where he made his name, he fears that he will be over-fed to the public, with the result that they will become tired of his name and face long before he really has reached the apex of his art. The Great Lover role is one he doesn't crave. To him the very attributes which are extraneous ones and endear him to feminine listeners are purely natural and shouldn't be set apart as distinctive characteristics.

The makers of Hinds Honey and Almond Cream present Leslie Howard every Sunday over the CBS networks for Eastern listeners at 2 p.m. EST (1 CST; 12 noon MST), and for Western listeners at 9 p.m. PST (10 MST; 11 CST; 12 mid. EST).

BING CROSBY REBELS

*If You're Amazed That This Easy-Going Crooner Can Rise
on His Hind Legs and Scrap,
Then You Don't Know the Cause*

By Katharine Hartley

Bing and his wife Dixie Lee, below, seldom revolt against each other but when they do the feathers fly

A LEOPARD can't change the size of his spots—but it appears he can change their color.

For years, as you no doubt know, Bing Crosby has been just about the easiest-goingest guy in the entertainment business. Song pluggers might have a hard time getting Larry and Everett Crosby, Bing's business managers, to listen to their songs—but they always could find an attentive ear in Bing. Advertising tieups might be turned down cold by Bing Crosby, Inc., but let the advertiser's representative catch Bing in a corner and he'll invariably come away with a signature. A secretary will make excuses for the busy Bing for not appearing at a benefit, but if Bing hears about it he'll be there just the same. And many is the time that Everett, doing his manager's duty, has held out for high money for Bing on some deal—only to have Bing agree to the deal for less money—"because what's the use of arguing?" he will say. "Let's settle it for whatever they want. Then they'll be happier about it."

Not long ago a clause was inserted in Bing's picture contract, which said that if his next picture didn't start on a certain date Paramount would have to pay Bing an extra $125,000. Bing also had the right to select the songs he was going to sing in that picture. Along came that certain date, and the picture wasn't ready to start. Paramount's treasurer drew a check for $125,000.

But when Bing saw it he said, "Oh, forget it. I guess maybe I held up the picture a little bit myself, because of all those songs I turned down."

And he tore up the check.

NOW all this is leading up to just one thing. Naturally with these and many more incidents to justify it, Bing had a reputation for being the easiest and most agreeable person to work with in the world. He could always see the other fellow's point of view, and had no false pride about giving in to it.

Everybody thought he was just swell. That is, everybody but his business-manager-brothers. Quite the contrary, they thought this altruistic streak in Bing had gone far enough! To make matters worse, when Bing returned to the Coast he brought along with him nine new racing horses which he had bought at Saratoga, and which, together with the horses he already owned, promised to eat him out of house and home.

But anyway, you can imagine that things were coming to a crisis. Bing hadn't been on the air on a program of his own since last Spring, when his program for a soap company ended. He had had countless offers since from many big advertisers, but Bing had been in no hurry to accept any of them. And here it had come to be October already!

Pressed on the matter, Bing admitted that the reason he hadn't accepted any of these offers was that they all required him to continue straight-singing shows. And what he wanted was a big variety show in which he could act as master of ceremonies!

WELL, the reverberations of this explosion could be heard all around the Paramount lot, where Crosby, Inc., has its offices. It resulted in a conference—an argument, rather—which lasted well into the day and, wonder of wonders, at the end of the day good-natured Bing was still sticking to his guns and hadn't given one little inch. Brothers Ev and Larry took headache powders and went home and told their wives that something—they didn't know what—had happened to Bing.

Bing was on the war-path. He wanted a big show! Bing, who hated rehearsals and would rather spend time at the race track than at a studio—wanted a big show, which would mean twice as much rehearsing and take twice as much time to produce as the little shows he always had done! Bing wanted to be master of ceremonies! Bing, who never had handled a lengthy script in his life—Bing, who seldom had spoken on the air, except to announce his own songs—wanted to risk his reputation by becoming master of ceremonies as well as a singer! There was no understanding the fellow.

But the wives advised them not to worry. Bing never was unreasonable, you could always touch him on some

It won't be long now until you'll be hearing little Gary Evans Crosby in imitations of his famous father. They're in the midst of a rehearsal here angle. "Probably by tomorrow he will have forgotten all about it."

But Bing did no such thing on the morrow. He still wanted a big show. He still wanted to be master of ceremonies. And there was a glint in his eyes no one had seen there before. Nothing was to be done about it—except for Everett to go East and to spread the word through the radio and advertising world.

It was about that time that Paul Whiteman's contract with the Music Hall program was finished. The Music Hall was looking for a new star, and they decided that Bing should be it. But at first Bing said "no"—for the very simple reason that Paul Whiteman had given him his first break years ago, that they had been friends ever since, and Bing wouldn't think of taking over his friend's hour!

HOWEVER, Whiteman himself soon put an end to that nonsense—via long distance calls and an exchange of numerous and expensive telegrams. He persuaded Bing that business was business, and that there was no one in the world he would rather see take over the show. He suggested that he ease Bing into the program, and introduce him himself to the Music Hall audience by tuning him in on the program from the Coast for four shows before Bing took it over entirely.

Bing was none too happy about it at first, but anyway he agreed to do it. And then came the news that Bing's old sponsor had hired Paul Whiteman to carry on in Bing's place for the magnificent sum of $10,000 a week—and Bing threw his hat joyously into the air.

The swap of shows seemed fair enough now, and Bing flung himself into making plans for his new show in earnest.

But Bing's revolting moments were not yet over. Everyone knows that the Music Hall always has played to a large visual audience, as well as to millions of listeners-in. As a matter of fact there is scarcely one big program today which does not have a visual as well as a radio audience. Most radio people have come to believe that audience applause is even necessary to a program—so necessary that applause records often are used to help the applause sound even more tumultuous. But Bing had quite a different idea. He requested that there be no studio audience.

THIS request was practically revolutionary, and as such it was battled at first. But again Bing showed a spirit that people doubted he possessed, and argued for his cause. In opposition to every big star on the air, he believes, and always has believed, that a studio audience hinders rather than helps a show.

"I don't see how it's possible to satisfy two audiences at the same time," he explains. "And if you're out there in front of a couple hundred people, you can't help but be more conscious of them than you are of a million unseen people—yet a sponsor is paying to reach radio audiences. Besides, I still think that the radio audience is bound to be a little jealous of those fellows sitting in the front row. Maybe I'm wrong. I don't know. But at least I'm going to stick to what I think is right."

Bing never has worked with an audience, except when he has made guest appearances on some shows which did have a studio audience. And even at those times he figuratively and literally turned his back on the studio audience and concentrated on "giving all" to that little old microphone. The last time I saw him do this was on the big three-hour program that celebrated the opening of the new NBC studios in Hollywood. Everyone on the stage and in the audience too was dressed in formal evening clothes, and when Bing was announced he sauntered onto the stage in a brown sport suit and a muffer.

Everyone laughed. But even then

Bing refused to be impressed by that swanky audience out front, promptly turned his back on it, and sang softly into the microphone.

People distract him too even at rehearsals, and his rehearsals therefore are always closed to visitors.

BING pleaded with such fervor for his cause that eventually his sponsors saw the logic of his reasoning, and agreed to let him try it his way. So it was that the first all-Bing Music Hall program went on the air on January 2, without a studio audience. As Bing explained it at the beginning of the program, "We decided to do away with the middleman."

Just the same the boys in Jimmie Dorsey's orchestra, and other performers in the studio with Bing, are told to feel perfectly at home and to laugh and applaud when and if they feel like it—which they do, when and if they feel like it.

The whole setup, as a matter of fact, is pretty typical of Bing. He is, above all, a sincere, unaffected person—and he wants his show to be that way, too.

So, though Bing may have staged an unexpected revolt he is in many ways unchanged. He still can turn easily from singing to golf shoes, and get a kick out of both. Even though he's got what he wants now—a big variety show—and even though he's an all-important master of ceremonies as well as a singer, he's still the same old Bing.

As he said on a program not long ago, when Jimmie Dorsey said, "Okay, Chief—"

"Don't Chief me! I'm still strictly the crooner around here."

And the good-natured crooner he still strictly is!

ROMEEO is Just Around the Corner

By Mary Jacobs

These Stars Thought That Cupid Had Passed Them By—But They Learned That Fleeting Arrows Are Apt to Strike Any Time, Any Place

If Martha Mears, above, hadn't come to New York and auditioned when she did, and sung for the one orchestra in the world that contained her future husband—but there's no room for supposing. The Kelvin Keeches, left, romanced in Constantinople, of all places!

When Frank Tours married Helen Clark the tongue-waggers said "A Broadway marriage can't last"—but look!

like? He'd be the last man in the world you'd ever marry, you insist. And you mean it. Well, don't be too sure. Ol' debbil Cupid may be laughing up his sleeve at you—for this boy may be the Prince Charming you'll accompany to the altar.

Ask Tiny Ruffner, the announcer you hear on Show Boat. Six foot six, brown-eyed, good-looking Tiny whom all the girls crowd around after the broadcasts!

He can tell you all about girls who begin by disliking you, and end by marrying you. For that's just what happened to Tiny and Florence Kowalewska.

Perhaps you are discouraged because your boy-friend, whom you've been going around with for years, shows no signs of proposing. Don't give up. One of these days he'll wise up to himself and pop the question. That is the story behind the marriage of Frank Tours, the orchestra leader you hear on the John Charles Thomas program, and with the House of a Thousand Eyes.

His is one of the few Broadway marriages that has lasted, and I think will last forever. When Frank Tours met Helen Clark, the actress, he was known as a typical Broadway playboy. Wine, women and song was his motto. Marriage? Why, that was for fools who believed in Santa Claus. He had seen enough of Broadway marriages to realize they couldn't last. Though he went out with Helen Clark for many years he never spoke to her of love and marriage.

"If the truth is known," Frank Tours told me, "I took her out more because her hours coincided with mine than because I was particularly smitten with her. She was a nice girl—and that was all."

At first Helen felt sure he intended to marry her. Nearly all the men she knew found her attractive. And Frank certainly showed her plenty of attention. As time went on she became puzzled. She was falling deeply in love with him; he seemed perfectly content to remain only a good friend.

"What a pal you are," he told her one day, while they were horseback riding through Central Park. "I never knew a girl could be such a true friend. Don't you hope our friendship will last for a long time?"

"Of course," she smiled at him. "It's swell." But her heart kept crying, "Why is he such a fool? Doesn't he realize how I feel?"

YET he might never have proposed to her if he hadn't gone home to England for his Summer vacation. On the way across Tours felt decidedly out of sorts. He had grown so accustomed to Helen that he had begun to take her for granted. Though there were plenty of young and attractive women on shipboard, he found himself thinking of Helen, of her quick smile, her eager brown eyes, her ready sympathy and understanding.

Impatiently he pushed the thought from his mind. He had nothing to gain by falling in love. Certainly he was the last person in the world to fall. He

SO YOU'RE discouraged and disgusted. All your girl friends—yes, even the homely ones—meet fine men and are being married off. Here you are sort of the last leaf on the tree!

But don't worry, sister: throw the blues out of the window and take heart again. Your Prince Charming, your Romeo, is just around the corner. And when you least expect it he'll arrive on his white charger (Ford to you) and carry you off, to live happily ever after.

You don't believe me? You think that's all nonsense? Then listen! I want to tell you the romances of some of our radio Romeos. The girls they married didn't realize at the time that destiny was bringing their mates to them, either.

Certainly blond, tragedy-ridden Nina Alexandrovna Darskaya never expected to marry Kelvin Keech, the NBC radio announcer whom you hear on the Billy and Betty, Pop-Eye, Warden Lawes and Fireside Recital programs.

Nina, a member of the Russian nobility who had fled from the Bolsheviks, had no interest in men. She was bitter, bewildered by the sudden turn of events which had hurled her from a high seat in Russian aristocracy to the lowly job of hostess in Maxim's Restaurant in Constantinople.

Then one day Kelvin Keech came to Maxim's with his band, The White Lyres. Soon the women of Constantinople began to flock to this cabaret. For Kelvin was young and romantic looking. Women of wealth and social position flattered him with their attention.

HOW different was that slim, quiet, gravely smiling girl who carried her head with a proud, aristocratic air as she walked from table to table! Though she wore the regulation black and white uniform of Maxim's, there was something in her bearing, in her whole attitude, that spoke of breeding and culture.

Kelvin decided to speak to her. "What is your name?" he said. She shook her head, and answered in a stream of Russian. Keech never had realized that harsh language could sound so caressing.

Finally he understood. "You can't speak English? Is that it? Well, then there are a few things I must tell you. If you do not understand me, so much the better. I must get them off my chest. Do you know you are very beautiful?"

This time she told him in German that she did not understand. Kelvin knows no German.

"I am afraid that I am beginning to fall in love with you," he said gravely. "But here is a language you must understand."

He held out his arms to her, and motioned her to dance. This she understood, and they danced together.

The next day Kelvin Keech enrolled at a school of languages in Constantinople. He had made up his mind that he would learn enough Russian to pop the question in Nina's native tongue... And so began the romance that led to marriage.

ANOTHER woman who found her Romeo just around the corner when she was convinced her dream man did not exist was Esther Fisher Bourdon, who married Rosario Bourdon, concert master for Jessica Dragouette's Cities Service program.

Esther, a wealthy, petted society debutante, was bored. Yes, definitely bored. Of all the eligible young men in Philadelphia who courted her, there wasn't one who piqued her curiosity. She was fed up with these giddy youths who floated from party to party. She thought they were extravagant, conceited, weak-willed parasites. She wondered wistfully if she ever would meet anyone who would awaken in her a new emotion, who would stir in her some feeling other than indifference.

She wondered if love was something one merely read about in books. Was it a fiction that the press agents of love—the novelists, the song writers—had created?

She was having dinner one day at the Walton Hotel in Philadelphia with a young society man. The dinner didn't interest her. Neither did the man. But there was nothing she could do about it. If she didn't go places, she would be branded a wall-flower.

Suddenly her escort accidentally upset a glass of water. It drenched Esther's new powder-blue gown! She looked up startled. Waiters began running to her table. And the other diners in the restaurant attracted by the noise, began craning their necks to see what was up, even as you and I.

Rosario Bourdon, young, ambitious and earnest, was dining in the restaurant with a friend. He had no eyes for girls—and certainly no time for them. But he, too, was distracted by the disturbance, and looked around. He heard a man's voice saying loudly, "How could I ever have been so stupid?" He heard a girl's sweet tones, laughing, "Oh, don't worry about it. It's nothing." He looked at the girl: tall, slim, brown-haired and blue-eyed. Never had he seen a girl like her before.

Without stopping to think he gasped to his companion: "There's the girl I'm going to marry."

There it was, out. It seemed as if some power outside himself had made him speak. The other man laughed.

"You're crazy," he said. "That girl is Esther Fisher," one of the wealthiest debutantes in Philadelphia. Why, your salary as a cellist wouldn't pay for her silk stockings."

But Rosario didn't listen. He moved heaven and earth till he found someone who knew Esther, and who saw to it that they were both invited to a musical, where they were properly introduced.

Yet, after having met Miss Fisher, Rosario was so tongue-tied by embarrassment that he could hardly speak.

"For someone who claims he's been trying to meet me for weeks, you don't seem to have very much to say to me," Esther finally told him. Then the dam broke, and Rosario poured forth everything that was in his heart and soul. He told her how he always had worshipped beauty, and how he had sat transfixed when he first saw her. Because of her, he intended to work like a slave with his music, so that some day... He left the sentence unfinished. But she understood.

And she was fascinated by the ambition, the energy, the sincerity which made this young man so different from all the others she had known.

They went to musicales, concerts and operas together. They found that they loved the same things—and that they loved each other.

Is there some boy you know and dis-nervous energy motivating everything he does, says or thinks. It is impossible for him to be still. When he is not working on his syndicated newspaper column, magazine articles or preparing his weekly air program, he is golfing—excellently, by the way—bowling, or merely squirming, at which he is also expert.

MEDIUM in height, medium-blond, and completely sun-tanned, Jimmie is considered handsome by most women . . . and men, too, for that matter. He has been divorced twice, the last time from peppery little Dorothy Lee, the ex-Wheeler and Woolsey screen foil; and at the present time he is not married. A peculiar idiosyncrasy marks his temperament. He likes a great many people. Yet he does not care whether they like him. The reverse action is equally true.

From childhood he has been driven by a great fear of poverty and dependence. And it is this haunting dread that is largely responsible for the success he has achieved in almost everything he has undertaken, from press-agentry to radioing.

Figured in dollars and cents, Jimmie occupies a secure financial posi-

Jimmie with his famous gong that you hear him use on current movies

THERE'S no quicker way of starting an argument in Hollywood, or with Walter Winchell followers, than by mentioning the name of James, Jimmie (I-do-mean-you) Fidler, broadcaster of Hollywood news, nonsense and knockouts. As commentator de luxe, direct from Hollywood, he occupies on the NBC network the niche formerly glamourized by Walter Winchell from New York, before Winchell started fooling around with national and international problems. Now Jimmie alone is exclusively occupied in airing the cavortings of Hollywood movies, their makers and their madneses on a solo program.

As an air personality plugging the pretties of a famous lipstick, Fidler, spelled Morse Code, clicks into your home as a soft-spoken young man who probably would talk with a marked Tennessee drawl if it weren't for the fact he has only fifteen minutes to tell his tales; and so an unruly staccato delivery emphasizes what was originally just a good old Southern accent.

If you're interested in Hollywood—and many millions are—there's little doubt but that you'll get your airings worth out of Jimmie's program, and after a careful checkup of letters concerning his broadcast there is nothing to indicate that you are electrified, shocked or even startled by his reports of Hollywood goings-on!

Jimmy has a gift for enraging Hollywood that has, in turn, angered, annoyed, bewildered and puzzled him.

He never has been able to figure out why his personal antipathy toward a given picture should raise such a round robin of ire when something just as bad, or worse, may be featured on the drama page of the newspapers the next morning.

He never has been able to understand why a Blessed Event announced eight months in advance of the date, should annoy a lady star "when it's sure to be printed in a couple of weeks, anyway!"

He modestly disclaims having originated the open letter form of address to movie stars . . . yet they are the most troublesome excerpts of his weekly fifteen minutes.

In moments of solitary wrestling with this problem he has come to the conclusion that there must be something personal and pointed to the spoken comment, that the written word does not carry. He cynically calls attention to the fact that thousands of nice things he orates about Hollywood are overlooked for a dozen misuses—and Jimmie is always surprised when they turn out that way—they touch off battles royal between himself, the stars, the executives and the publicity departments.

NOTHING in his recent broadcasts has set off such a flare as his open letter to Carole Lombard, intended by Fidler to be an amusing little sally into romantic lightness, and interpreted by Lombard devotees as a malicious campaign to ruin Carole in the eyes of her fans. Fidler chided Carole for inviting all of Glenda Farrell's boy friends to her parties . . . and never inviting Glenda.

The idea amused Jimmie. It may have amused you. But it shook the back teeth of certain people in Hollywood. It started a protest letter of indignation, and a trade-paper editorial demand that "something be done about Fidler!"

When he gave a certain Warner Brothers picture a "no bell" review, that organization temporarily barred him from the lot.

WHEN he said Miriam Hopkins shouldn't leave her fan mail at the studio for the already overburdened stenographers to answer, and should employ a secretary to do it, Miss Hopkins did everything including consulting a lawyer. Yet, in a current magazine a writer titled a Miriam Hopkins story "I'd Hate to Want the Same Man Miriam Wanted" . . . and there was no excitement at all!

When Fidler rumored the Clark Gable separation ten hours before it happened, a rival commentator observed a week later, that he hadn't considered the news sufficiently important to put on the air!

But Christmas night, when Jimmie put on a program that was all sweetness and light, Hollywood shrugged a bored shoulder and asked: "What's the matter with Fidler this week?"

No wonder there are moments when Jimmy wonders . . .

On August 24 James Marion Fidler will be 36 years old. But he doesn't look it, and he won't look it fifteen years from now. More than an air of youthfulness, he carries an aura of juvenility. It is intensified by the tion. But it is useless to tell him that. He must be continually plotting, planning and working to keep off the steps of the poorhouse. He insists he saw too much bitter poverty in his early youth in East Tennessee, where his family moved soon after his birth in St. Louis.

I first met him about twelve years ago when he was a live-wire press agent for movie stars in Hollywood. His list of clients since, included the late Lilyan Tashman, Edmund Lowe, Betty Compson, Marian Nixon, Sue Carol, Helen Twelvetrees and many others when they were at the height of their careers.

TO THEM Jimmie Fidler was more than a press agent. He was the electric plug that band-wagoned Sue Carol, practically an unknown, into a $2500 weekly contract with Fox, and captained Lilyan Tashman into her profitable title of the "best-dressed woman in Hollywood." Jimmie was the first free-lance publicity man to do away with the usual blah line of press-agentry, and to market his people as sensational and interesting, with faults as well as virtues.

When the studios finally clamped down on free-lance publicity men for contracted stars, the bottom fell out of Jimmie's lucrative business. He had saved money and he might have struggled along on the publicity outskirts of Hollywood for years. But he saw the handwriting on the wall in the movie field so far as he was concerned, and he sensed radio as the next big public-interest development.

His first radio break came accidentally when Dorothy Jordan requested that he appear with her on one of the Hollywood on the Air programs in one of their star-interview skits. Their interview was so successful that Jimmie remained on the program for two years without a cent of pay as interviewer to the guest stars.

IT WAS Jimmie's job to get the star to make the appearance, write the interview script and announce a great part of the program. In spite of the fact there was no money involved, Hollywood on the Air was a remarkably profitable experience. He studied voice culture with Josephine Dillion, divorced wife of Clark Gable, who was coaching movie stars for the talkies. He haunted the broadcasting studios learning the ropes. A true publicity man at heart, he admits he did everything in his power to promote himself via the air!

But of all the advantages of his Hollywood on the Air program, the Fidler fan club was the most important! As a press agent he always had firmly believed in the power of personal contact with the followers of his clients. When he became a fan letter receiver himself it is natural that he should put his beliefs into sincere practice. He is perfectly honest when he says that fan mail is a source of great happiness to him. Every letter he ever has received, has been answered. At the present time there are eleven thousand members in his club, The Regulars. The contact is so close that Jimmie maintains an album of hundreds of snapshots of his friends, and they in turn have many informal snaps of him, autographed and personal. Weekly letters go out to his fans advising them of his radio activities, columns and magazine stories. He personally edits a small Hollywood news sheet filled with comment, interviews and reviews. This labor of appreciation coupled with his regular professional activities keeps him at his desk through the entire day and most of the night.

His Hollywood on the Air engagement had begun accidentally. But there was no accident about the way Jimmie went out after a program for himself.

When big advertising agents from New York would visit the West Coast they were inevitably visited by the ambitious young salesman who continually touted the advantages of a program of Hollywood chatter and gossip directly from Hollywood, the most publicized town in the world. Many of them turned a deaf ear to it, insisting that Winehell had tied up the field.

But Jimmie was not to be downed, and in the Spring of 1935 the representatives of his present sponsor decided to give the idea a try on a thirteen-week contract. As you know, that contract is now running into its fourth renewal and rates as one of the most attention-getting single features, without benefit of orchestra, special acts or movie star appearances, on the air. On January 16, 1936, its network was switched and changed from Wednesday to Tuesday night because of growing listener interest!

A great many people are curious as to where and how Fidler obtains the material for his personally conducted weekly tours on what's doing and what's hot in Hollywood.

Like everything else he has ever undertaken, his air career is conducted along strictly business lines. With a staff consisting of two contact men, a secretary and two stenographers whose sole duty it is to help him handle his fan mail, the Fidler organization occupies a large house on a quiet street in Hollywood. It has been whispered in Hollywood that he has fifteen outside eyes on his payroll; and his critics are convinced he has a spy in every studio and an ear in every social group. But knowing Jimmie and his personally conducted business philosophy, I doubt this helter-skelter and random manner of collecting his material. Assistants he has . . . and needs . . . but I believe his material is collected, assembled and prepared by that dynamo of energy, Jimmie (Mr. Hollywood) Fidler, himself . . . and let the chips fall where they may!

The makers of Tangee Lipstick present Jimmie Fidler and his Hollywood gossip every Tuesday over an NBC-WEAF network at 10:30 p.m. EST (9:30 CST; 8:30 MST; 7:30 PST).

Symbol after a program, like (sw-9.53), means that program is broadcast on short waves on 9.53 megacycles.

NOTICE: The programs as presented here were as correct and as accurate as the broadcasting companies and RADIO GUIDE could make them at the time of going to press. However, emergencies that arise at the studios sometimes necessitate eleventh hour changes in program listings, time, etc.

Bell indicates religious services and programs. Star indicates high spot selections. If your favorite station is not listed at quarter or half hour periods, consult the time listings immediately above. The chances are that a network program of 30 or 60 minutes' duration is on the air at a quarter-hour when you do not find your station listed.

End of Sunday Programs

ON SHORT WAVES

used frequently by the announcer during the daily transmissions from 12:35 to 1:35 a.m. S. R. Daniels of Suva has written to Earl De Haven of the California Broadcaster reporting that a new station, ZJV, will be inaugurated shortly on 880 kilocycles. This station probably will be relayed by the new transmitter of VPD which is now under construction.

The Swedish government announces that arrangements have been completed for the erection of the long-anticipated short-wave station. Programs will be similar to those from Daventry and Zeesen.

A verification of reception John Shanks, of Russellville, Tennessee, has received from short-wave station HIL, apartado 623, Trujillo City, Dominican Republic (6.51), states that the daily schedule of operation is from 11:40 a.m. to 1:40 p.m. and from 6 to 9 p.m. daily.

Broadcasters from the trans-Pacific mail plane China Clipper are now being heard regularly via the short waves on the West Coast. The transmitter call is WOEI, and frequencies heard are 7.495 and 8.665 megacycles. Relays to this country for re-broadcast purposes have been effected through Kahuku, Hawaii, station KIO (11.68).

WE HAVE received so many reports of reception of various Soviet commercial stations that we believe a little information along this line would not be amiss. Probably the best heard is RIO, Baku, U.S.S.R. (10.16), which communicates two ways with RNE, Moscow (12), and RIR, Tiflis (10.08), almost any night between 12 and 1 a.m. RIR, however, may be heard best in the mornings between 8 and 10 a.m., talking with either RNE or RIM, Tashkent (15.25). Women announcers are used frequently on these commercial schedules and French is the language usually employed. RIM has been coming through recently with a very fine signal slightly higher in frequency than Pontoise (15.24). Tashkent is in Turkestan, north of Afghanistan. Another station often heard nights is RKI, Moscow (7.52). RKI acts as a radio central for the various Soviet telephone circuits.

John DeMyer of Lansing, Michigan, reports that at 8:30 a.m. he heard RV15, Khabarovsk, U.S.S.R. (4.25), announce an English broadcast every day for that period. A woman announcer gave all program items in English and carefully spelled out every letter of the address. It is hoped that at last we may receive verifications from this station, now that someone who can read the English language is used. DeMyer also reports that PMY (5.17) is putting through such a strong signal in the early mornings that the conclusion would be that it has increased its power.

$100 Book Bought At Rummage Sale for 25 cents

A young man, visiting his home town, dropped in at a rummage sale and bought a copy of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for a quarter. A few days later he learned the book was a first edition and sold it for a nice big check. It pays to know which books are valuable! The American Book Mart, the largest company of its kind in the United States, will pay $100.00 for each copy of the same edition. They also want to buy thousands of other old books of all kinds (bibles, almanacs, old letters, etc.) old newspapers and magazines. Many published only five and six years ago are valuable. A single book that looks worthless may bring you $50-$100-$500 or even $5000 in cash! Is there a fortune hidden in your old trunks, attic or basement? Better investigate now! Send 10c today to American Book Mart, 140 S. Dearborn St., Dept. 2001, Chicago, Ill., and they will send you latest list of old books they want to buy and cash prices they will pay!

NEW! SCIENTIFIC AERIAL
Use the Scientific Aerial With the Dual Connection
The DUAL CONNECTION, a new feature exclusively our own, gives better distance and positive performance on all electric radios (pat. pend.). This aerial can be installed without tools by anyone in a minute's time. Goes right inside the radio completely out of view and it does not use any electric current. No climbing on roofs. For short or long waves.
NO OSCILLATING OR WHISTLING
This DUAL type aerial uses a new scientific principle which completely eliminates this annoyance as commonly experienced on inside aerials. It also eliminates lightning hazards, ugly wires, etc. Enables the radio to be readily moved when desired. A complete aerial in itself—no other extra to buy. Permanently installed and requires no adjustment. Ends aerial troubles forever. Send order today.
Try One 5 Days at Our Risk—More Distance and Volume
Enclosed find $1.00 for Scientific Aerial, prepaid. If not pleased will return after 5 days for refund. Check here if desired sent P. O. O. D. $1.00 plus few cents postage. No C.O.D.'s to Canada.

Not an experiment, but fully tested. Many users report over 3,000 miles reception. Gives triple the volume over regular inside aerials on many sets. Guaranteed for 5 years. Distributors and dealers write for sales proposition. Agents wanted.

done. Right now, many of those now being held on tap will go into Unit No. 13, in formation. So the amateurs selected for that unit must wait until Bowes is ready for them.

"Since the amateur getting the greatest number of votes is not always used in a unit or short, what becomes of him? The answer is: nothing. He just goes on home.

"Miss Mack assures me (and I believe it is true) that the Major does actually try to help them whenever he can. So if John Doc sang, got the most votes, got no job, he can rely upon the Major to champion his cause if something turns up. But as Literary Digest says, the chances are 200,000 to 3 that anyone will click professionally, so the chances are John will be left out in the cold.

"All of this brings up the question: Why have any voting at all? It's just an added expense. I suppose the answer to that question is just to create audience appeal, stimulate competition and sell coffee.

"Miss Mack tells me that the amateurs in the units are paid sums ranging from $60 to $125, depending upon whether it is a single act or a group of persons such as a quartet. The Bowes organization pays the transportation of the amateur to the unit, and the transportation of the unit. The amateur must pay for his own Pullman, hotel bill, food and stage clothes.

"Major Bowes operates his own Artists Bureau. This, his office says, is for their protection from managers who might do the kids dirt. Before they go on the air they are required to sign a contract which ties them up with the Major's company.

"Although Miss Mack didn't say so, I believe the contract stipulates that the amateur agrees to work under Major Bowes' management and pay him ten per cent of all earnings as commission.

"The number of applicants for auditions is amazing. Approximately 15,000 letters a week are received.

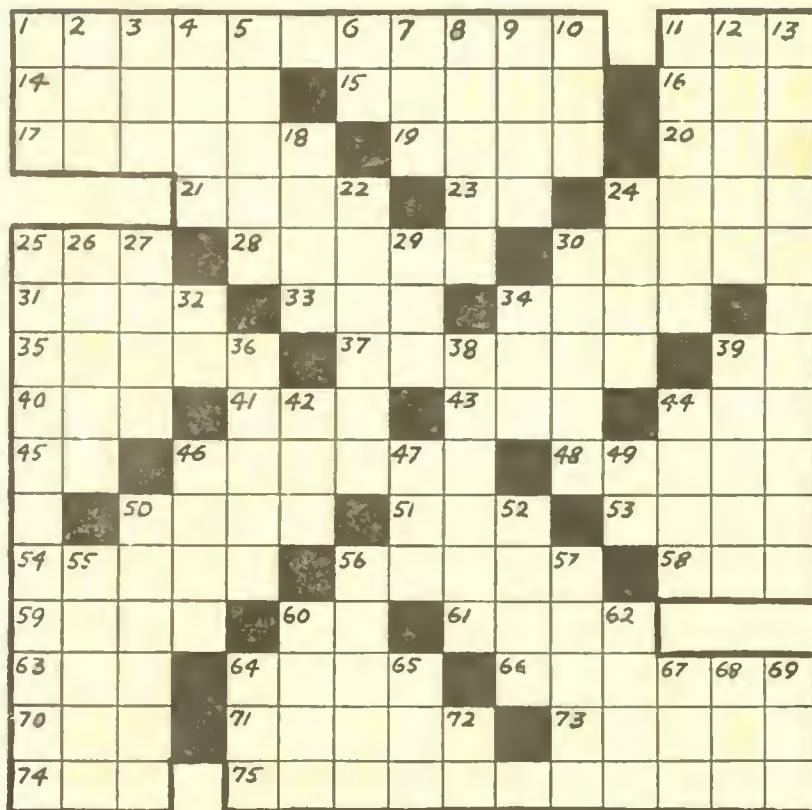

"The Bowes office, for example, employs four persons who do nothing but open letters. Two others do nothing but read them and sort them. But here is a significant fact I think our readers should know. Whether or not an amateur appears for audition depends upon his letter. I don't mean to indicate that the sob story gets him an audition, for Major Bowes does try to give all who fit his program a hearing on those Tuesday to Friday auditions. But all amateurs who want to be actors or actresses, for instance, are automatically thrown out. Poetry readers, most comics, public speakers, et cetera, don't get a hearing. Out-of-towners are usually thrown out.

"The others—the novelties and the musicians—are herded in like sheep on Tuesdays and Wednesdays and Thursdays and Fridays. They do their little pieces. Then what happens?

"This is the story as I get it from Bessie. Those who are usable are noted and their names are filed. The others are politely told that they did nicely and that if the Major can use them they will be contacted. As a matter of fact, they are forgotten.

"The others—the ones who are usable—are kept on file. Then when the Major builds a Sunday show he draws from that file. In this way he can usually get a well balanced program as he has at his command all types of performers. For example, there may be 100 usable sopranos, but only two or three a week can be broadcast.

"Since all amateurs are heard in auditions before appearing on the program, why, then, is the gong ever used? Well, people expect the gong once in a while. In fairness to the Major, it may be said that he doesn't always know who is to get the gong. His assistants run in a bad one now and then just for the gong. So the Major may know that this Sunday there is to be a bad one who will get the gong, yet he doesn't always know which one of the amateurs it is to be."

It's a strange tale, this story dug from behind the scenes of our greatest program. Now with these facts known to us, we are ready to turn to the greatest hazard it has ever faced. That threat is one Major Bowes does not discuss on his programs. That threat, nevertheless, is one that many listeners have come to suspect.

It is the threat represented by the "professional" amateur. It is the suspicion that many of Major Bowes' amateurs are professional entertainers. Is this true? Have experienced entertainers been represented as amateurs by Major Bowes? Has he done this knowingly? What does he consider an amateur?

Our investigators have interviewed amateurs and "professional" amateurs. Their stories will be told in next week's article.

Read more Explosions of the Major Bowes Myth in next week's issue of RADIO GUIDE.

ERRATA

IN ARTICLE one, two minor errors were published. The first referred to Daniel Frohman as the late Daniel Frohman. This was an inadvertent reference to his famous brother who was lost in the Titanic disaster. The second placed Major Bowes' income for his motion picture shorts at $1,000 per picture. We now understand his contract calls for the production of 26 shorts within a year at the rate of $2,000 each.

ROMEO IS JUST AROUND THE CORNER

attributed his low spirits to other things. He was tired. He was homesick. Once in London, with his family, he'd forget all about Helen.

But it didn't work out that way. While in England he visited his four brothers, all of whom had married. He played Santa Claus to their youngsters, whom he adored. And he found himself wondering if he was so wise after all—if single blessedness was such a blessing.

As though she were reading his thoughts his mother said: "Why don't you get married? You love children so, you ought to have a few of your own. When you get married I'll consider my life's work complete."

Her words stirred Frank. "There's a girl in New York, isn't there?" his mother asked.

And to his own surprise Frank heard himself saying, "Yes, there's a girl."

It was the first time he had acknowledged to himself that he was in love with Helen.

"On the whole trip back to the United States," he told me, "I was in a state of fear, of turmoil. What if Helen didn't love me? What if she had met someone else? I kept reproaching myself with what a fool I'd been."

Fortunately, Helen was still as much in love with him as ever. She had long since given up hoping that Frank would propose. But she had been unable to forget him. So they were married. And today, the dream of Frank's mother is fulfilled. For Frank and Helen have five children of their own.

Then, we mustn't forget the girls who have, without lifting a finger, found themselves face to face with destiny. Martha Mears, for instance. She came from a tiny Missouri town by way of St. Louis and an encouraging manager. The day she walked into the National Broadcasting Company studios for her audition, she was just another lonely youngster with the flame of ambition burning bright in her heart.

The job she got wasn't a very good job measured by the golden measuring rod of radio, but it was a start. A start in more ways than one, Martha was to learn. For one of the orchestras with which she sang effected her introduction to a smallish, darkish, magnetic man who played the violin. His name was Sidney Brokaw. He's playing now with Ozzie Nelson's orchestra.

Before anyone knew it, well . . . it's the old story over again. If she hadn't come to New York and if she hadn't taken that audition and if she hadn't sung for that particular orchestra, things romantic might have just floundered along. But they didn't. They were married. Now, they have one child.

Those are the true stories behind some radio romances and some radio romances. In all, five happy marriages witness to the notion that you can tell. Sometimes, whether we know it or not, Romeo is just around the corner.

LONELY LITTLE STAR

from where he sat—placed there purposely so that singer and engineer with a nod or a glance could understand each other and work as one.

And how would he feel when he did recognize me? Could I blame him if he were furious at finding out for himself in this sudden and shocking way that the girl he had known and loved as a little stenographer was in reality Linda Logan, the famous and high-salaried radio star?

If I was wrong in my innocent deception, in not having told him before this, I paid for my folly a thousand times as I stood there, the nails of one hand digging into the clenched palm of the other, listening to the crash of the opening fanfare as though it came from a different world, and fighting a wild impulse to run away, off the stage, out of the theater, to lose myself in the crowds.

Suppose Dan was as angry as he had every right to be? Aside from his personal opinion of me which I hoped I could set to rights as soon as I saw him, he literally held my career between his thumb and finger—the thumb and finger resting ever so lightly on the two little knobs—one that controlled the sound of the orchestra—the other, the sound of my voice.

Should he so choose, there were a thousand ways he could wreck my performance and do it so neatly that the average listener would not realize what had gone wrong. He could bring the orchestra in loud, over my more delicate tones, drowning them out; he could change my voice from soft to loud so quickly that it would seem to slur and screech. He could do any one of several things so subtly, so cleverly, that no one would ever know he did it.

If only I could see him, talk to him, tell him everything—yes, even about Manzoni and my unhappy marriage—I was still confident that Dan would understand.

But there was no time now. No way I could reach him.

But wait—there was a way. With my eyes!

The orchestra had stopped with a crash of brasses. The announcer was reading from his script:

"Next we have the pleasure of hearing one of the most outstanding artists in America today; the singer who, after attaining nation-wide fame as radio's Glamour Girl, tonight makes her debut as star incomparable. I am happy to present Miss Linda Logan. She brings you now a selection from Il Forze Del Destino."

The orchestra went into the familiar overture with its sense of impending menace that made my heart pound. I came out of the wings. I was dimly conscious of a sea of faces beyond the footlights.

It seemed a hundred miles across that bare open expanse of stage to the microphone.

I dared not look at Dan. I felt that old nervous tightening of the muscles of my throat. I caught the orchestra leader's eye. He smiled at me—and then it seemed as if everything went—

Will Linda be able to carry through with the broadcast? Can she go on facing life if Dan casts her aside because of her deception? There is no chance to avoid him, and yet—Next week's issue of RADIO GUIDE will contain a thrilling instalment of this powerful human document.
