Relay or High Power?

AN IMPORTANT OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

It may not be realized that the B.B.C. is opening one new station per month. The eight main stations called for under the licences having been erected and put into operation, and all within ten months of the formation of the Company, it was found that the fun was just beginning. An experimental relay station has been started up in Sheffield, and in April of this year we dropped into the one per month rota with Plymouth, followed by Edinburgh, and next week by Liverpool. In every case the stations have been opened by the Lord Mayor or Lord Provost of the city, usually accompanied by the Principal of the University, if there be one, and always with manifestations of great public interest.

Thereafter comes a sort of twin station to take care of the requirements of Leeds and Bradford. Originally it had been thought feasible to erect one station at Rawdon, midway between the two cities, but this scheme was abandoned owing to the impracticability of using sufficient power at Rawdon to give Leeds and Bradford a service equivalent to that possible with a separate transmitting plant of normal relay power in each. There will therefore be one studio, but two separate plants. Hull follows at the beginning of August, and to break the monotony of fixing up relay stations only, by this time we hope also to have a main station at Belfast in commission.

So far, no announcement has been made as to the cities to be provided with relays thereafter, but I am able to indicate what appears to be the most probable selections.

I think there has already been given in The Radio Times an indication of the method adopted in the recommending or choice of towns for this purpose. The factors under review are, briefly, civic importance, population, distance from a main station, influences militating against reception, e.g., shielding or jamming. From these considerations a figure of merit was mathematically produced and a suggested order submitted to the Postmaster-General.

Now it was considered possible to accommodate only ten relay stations in that part of the wave band which was reserved for relay station working. More could not be taken without encroaching on the main station section, to the prejudice of the service. The six cities already mentioned headed both lists produced, in this office and, independently, at the General Post Office. Then the question of the high-powered station swung somewhat unexpectedly over the horizon, and the possibility of the experiments being satisfactory and such a station actually materializing, has caused a revision of the list of suggested relays after Hull.

The claims of Norwich, Portsmouth, Bristol, and Brighton are, to those with knowledge of the peculiar reception disabilities and civic importance of each, of considerable weight. But they are all within sizeable distance of London, or, in other words, it is hoped well within crystal range of the possible high-powered station. It was, therefore, felt equitable that other towns not so situated should be proceeded with first.

Representations have been made to the Post Office and to the Company from a number of towns. They have come officially from corporations, from Radio Societies, and from other sources. They have had careful consideration in the light of the factors mentioned above, and within the limits imposed by the wave band and other technical details.

The position as it now stands is as follows, with reference, that is to say, to the proposed continuation of the one per month rota subsequent to the opening of the Hull Station in August. The B.B.C., in consultation with the Stories of the Gilbert and Sullivan Operas.

WHEN the B.B.C. arranged to broadcast some of the music of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas it was splendid news to listeners all over the Kingdom. Since the early days of broadcasting listeners have, I am told, written urgently and impatiently to beg for Gilbert and Sullivan.

Sir W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan have a place among the Immortals. Their works enjoy perpetual youth. The enthusiasm of the new generation equals that of the parents; generations yet to come will acclaim the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, quote their whimsical lines and sing their joyous airs.

Born in Theatreland.

A book of interest to listeners has just been published, "The Story of the Savoy Opera" (Stanley Paul, 5s.), by S. J. Adair Fitz-Gerald, who, before he became a journalist, was (in 1875) a youthful singer in some of the D'Oyly Carte operas. He has seen all the Gilbert and Sullivan works from the very beginning, and has known all those who took part in their production in the old days.

W. S. Gilbert was born whimsical; and born, by the way, in Southampton Street—the heart of Theatreland—and in the very building in which The Radio Times is published. At the age of two, we are told, he was kidnapped by brigands in Italy and had to be redeemed for £25; an early experience in the realms of drama and romance.

Beginning of a Great Partnership.

It was in 1871 that Gilbert and Sullivan had their first joint work, a two-act operatic extravaganza called "Thespis," produced. They had been introduced to each other at Sullivan's suggestion. The composer, learning that his friend, Frederick Clay (of "Songs of Araby" fame), was working with the author of the widely-appreciated "Bab Ballads," then being published in "Fun," asked to meet Gilbert and the two became friends at once.

As Gilbert was more or less pledged to continue his collaboration with Frederick Clay, and was even then writing "Happy Arcadia" for the German Reeds, and very probably "Princess Toto," to be done later at the Strand Theatre, it was not until 1875 that Gilbert and Sullivan really began their life-long partnership, when they were concerned together in the composition of the world-famous "Trial by Jury."

It was in "Trial by Jury" that W. S. Penley, of "Charley's Aunt" fame, who had begun at the Court Theatre at thirteen shillings a week, got his first chance. He had been one of the Jury, was in the chorus and was promoted to the part of the Second Notary.

Another to whom the operas proved a step to fame was George Grossmith, father of the present G. G.

A Lunch that Cost a Fortune.

Grossmith, like his father, was first of all an entertainer at the piano. He toured the country with a drawing-room entertainment called "A Piano and I," and it was at a private house that Sullivan first heard him sing. Grossmith was approached to take the part of the Magician in "The Sorcerer." The entertainer took some time to make up his mind. He was nervous about the future and asked to have a month's engagement certain. This was given.

Then said Grossmith to Carte—and his remarks seem peculiar in these days:

"Look at the risks I am running. If I fail I don't believe the Young Men's Christian Association will ever engage me again, because I have appeared on the stage, and my reputation as a comic singer to religious communities will be lost for ever!"

Carte replied, "Well, I daresay I can make that all right." Then a sudden idea occurred to him. "Come and have some oysters."

"I did!" records Grossmith. "I shall ever regret it! A lunch off oysters and most excellent Steinberg Cabinet infused a liberality into my nature for which I shall never forgive myself. Carte again broached the subject—after lunch—of the salary; and in the end I waived the extra three guineas a week. I calculate that, irrespective of all accumulative interest, that lunch has cost me up till now (Grossmith was writing in 1888) about £1,800."

Of all Sullivan's works, which are so truly English, none is more famous than "The Lost Chord."

A Masterpiece Composed in Sorrow.

It was during three distressing weeks, mainly occupied with watching by the bedside of his dying and much-loved elder brother, that the composer wrote this great song. Chancing to take up some verses of Adelaide Anne Proctor, he conceived their "musical equivalent," and set them to music there and then.

Later on, Edward Solomon wrote a hornpipe as a counter melody to "The Lost Chord," and received this protest from Sullivan:—

DEAR TEDDY,—I wrote "The Lost Chord" in sorrow at my brother Fred's death. Don't burlesque it.

With the production of "H.M.S. Pinafore" (Mr. Fitz-Gerald asserts) Gilbert began to "plagiarise himself" skilfully, several of the subsequent operas being "simply and delightfully the amazingly extravagant 'Bab Ballads' grown up."

A Famous Catch-phrase.

The author illustrates this statement with a number of quotations from the "Bab Ballads" which contain the main themes of "Pinafore," "The Gondoliers," and other operas. The Captain's song in "H.M.S. Pinafore" with its "What, never? Hardly ever," took the fancy of the public immediately the opera was produced.

But is there ever anything new? This "Pinafore" joke occurs in Persius. He says, "Quis hæc legat? Nemo mehercule. Nemo? Vel duo, vel nemo." ("Who will read this? Surely nobody. What, nobody? Well, hardly anybody.")

The Craze in America.

The pat phrases with which the libretto is sprinkled seemed, Mr. Fitz-Gerald tells us, even more in vogue in America than here.

"What, never? Well, hardly ever," had become more than by-words—they were a terror. It is told that one editor was compelled to forbid their use by his staff on pain of instant dismissal.

"It has occurred twenty times in as many articles in yesterday's edition," he sorrowfully lamented to them. "Never let me see it used again!"

"What, never?"

"Well, hardly ever!" replied the wretched man.

There were "darkie" "Pinafores" and German "Pinafores." "Dot 'Pinafore' expression vas a noosance," remarked a fat Teuton. "Auf you tole a veller somefings, he speaks nodings but von blame English. He say, 'Vot hardly, sometimes, nefer!' Vot kind of language is dose?"

The critics who wrote of the early productions questioned how long Gilbert's humour and Sullivan's music would prove acceptable.

One false prophet warned the public "that the pieces were quite ephemeral and would not survive their generation." That was forty years ago. To-day the B.B.C. is bombarded with requests for Sullivan's music, and a new generation, with head-phones and loud-speakers, sits entranced with his music heard through a medium of which he never dreamed.

LEONARD CROCOMBE.

Relay or High Power?

Post Office authorities, have recommended to the Advisory Board, to whom the Postmaster-General referred the subject, that the next cities in which relays are to be established shall be Nottingham, Stoke-on-Trent, Dundee, and Swansea. * * * * *

The Advisory Board had already recommended to the Postmaster-General that the system of erecting relays as carried out or planned up to August be continued, as being the most satisfactory method of dealing with the problem of ensuring reception to the greatest possible number of the simplest apparatus.

This was before the 15-k.w. station near London was thought of. If it does not materialize, owing to undue interference from or with existing services or any other cause, there remains to be solved the problem of working in somehow or other a service for the four cities whose claims are at present held in reserve. * * * * *

It is no small business to maintain the putting in operation of a new station per month; it is just as difficult to find suitable studio and transmitting sites for a 200-watt station as for a 1,500-watt one. The gear does not take so long to assemble, but the difficulties inherent in the former are quite as numerous and serious as in the latter. It has been ascertained that the rate of expansion is satisfactory to the Postmaster-General. Perhaps it is not altogether without credit, particularly to the engineering department, that it can be kept up and concurrently existing stations maintained at high efficiency, and development work in all directions carried on. There are problems to them and to the programme and other departments which are out of all proportion to the relative transmitting strength. J. C. W. REITH.

Tone in Broadcasting

An Interesting Study.

THE study of musical tone and quality as these are reproduced to the listener is the subject of an interesting article by Mr. Filson Young in the Times.

"The first thing that any consistent listener who knows how to control his own receiving set becomes aware of is the difference in the result according to the place from which the music or speech comes (writes Mr. Young). The British Broadcasting Company's studios are carpeted and draped so as to absorb everything that we call resonance, but which would be more correctly described as accidental sound.

"Concert rooms and large buildings, on the other hand, are extremely resonant, and they are full of accidental sounds, caused not only by echoes and reflections, but by people moving, shuffling, coughing, and even speaking and whispering. How far the transmitting microphones are modified for, or the amplifying valve power adapted to, these different conditions, I do not know; I am concerned only with the quality of the tone as it reaches me through the medium of my receiving set, which is of a standard type.

"With regard to the places in which the performance takes place, by far the best, so far as the musical results are concerned, has been Covent Garden Theatre. The orchestra there sounds more like an orchestra, the instruments and singers blend more naturally, and retain more of their individual character than anywhere else.

"The worst source of extraneous noise, echo, and resonance that I have experienced was a hall in Cardiff, from which a speech made by the Prime Minister was relayed a few weeks ago."

Official News and Views. GOSSIP ABOUT BROADCASTING.

THE final details in connection with the National Man Hunt, being organized by the Director of Programmes, are being fixed, and we hope to announce them at an early date. In the meantime those who intend to participate in this amateur detective work should keep open the evening of June 20th, which is the date provisionally fixed.

We have arranged, under the auspices of the Ministry of Health, to broadcast a monthly talk upon health matters. These are intended to be helpful to the community, and will deal with primary problems of health. The first will be given on the 19th June by Sir Henry Newman, K.C.B., M.D., Chief Medical Officer of the Ministry of Health.

The Blackpool Carnival, which takes place between the 11th and 21st June, will be shared in part by numbers of people who will be unable to be present in person. Manchester Station is arranging to broadcast parts of the musical programme in the Carnival twice during the festivities.

Listeners are already aware that in July there will be a joint meeting of the British and American Bar Association in London. On these occasions some of the most distinguished persons, both of America and Britain, meet for discussion of common problems, and this year the Pilgrim Club will entertain the delegates to dinner. We hope to broadcast the speeches at this function, which will be one of the most outstanding of the year.

Those who were thrilled with the broadcast song of the nightingale may look forward with interest to the broadcasting of some of the birds and animals in the Zoo. Tests are now taking place, and perhaps in a month's time, during the Children's Hour, we shall be able to transmit, with success, characteristic sounds of the hyena, the elephant, the laughing jackass, the lemur and the sea-lion. Other members of the Zoo may be included in this programme.

At the unveiling of the Glasgow War Memorial on the 31st May music played by the Glasgow Wireless Quartette from the Studio will be broadcast to those attending the ceremony. This will take place between 2.30 and 3.0 p.m., after which the speeches of Field-Marshal Earl Haig and the Lord Provost of Glasgow will be broadcast, as well as the dedication by the Rev. Laughlan MacLean Watt, of Glasgow Cathedral.

A correspondent from Alexandria informs us that all British broadcasting stations are received there daily on a four-valve set with sufficient strength to operate a loud speaker. Sometimes, however, atmospherics spoil both music and speech.

The world-famous carillon of Malines will be broadcast between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. on the 30th June. There will be a special recital on this evening which a microphone in the Market Square will pick up, and by a land-line connection with Brussels will then be broadcast to this country. It will be received at a place somewhere in Kent or Essex, again sent by land-line to London, and from there will be simultaneously broadcast to all stations. One of the most famous ringers in the world, Mons. Denyn, will take part in this performance.

Those who listen to the transmissions of the Savoy Bands will be interested to know that the broadcasting station in Stockholm has retransmitted on a number of occasions the music of these bands broadcast from British stations.

For the benefit of English and Swedish listeners it has been arranged to give a Swedish night from the Aberdeen Station on June 5th. This station is the one most regularly heard in Scandinavia, and is very popular. The programme attempts to be a characteristic one of Scandinavian musical art, and listeners who are anxious to enjoy it will find it on page 407 of this issue.

The speech of the Rt. Hon. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., to be delivered at the Dinner of Welcome to the Australian Rifle Team at the Queen's Hotel, Birmingham, on the 23rd June, will be broadcast by the Birmingham Station.

Mr. C. Leonard Woolley, who has been working under the joint auspices of the British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania, excavating in Babylonia on sites closely associated with biblical history, has agreed to broadcast three talks, beginning in July, on his work. He has brought to light many objects of art associated with the earliest period to which actual names of persons can be affixed—a period of at least 5,000 years ago, or from 2,000 to 2,500 years more remote than that of Tutankhamen in Egypt. The provisional titles of the talks are "Excavations in Babylonia," "Beginnings of History in Babylonia," and "Ur of the Chaldees."

The largest wireless station in the world is to be erected at Vancouver, and it will cost £400,000. It has been decided by recent experiment that this station would be able to transmit direct to London, China, Australia, via Fanning Island and South Africa.

A GIRDLE of wireless direction finding stations is to be placed round the British Isles for the assistance of mariners. A skilled navigator will be in charge of each station, and when a wireless message is sent from any vessel, the station will be able to give its exact position.

"Letters from Listeners" and the usual Song Article are unavoidably held over.

A Chance for New Dramatists. SPECIAL B.B.C. COMPETITION FOR PLAYWRIGHTS.

£50 For the Winner.

REALIZING the importance of the development of radio drama, the B.B.C. offer a prize of £50 for the best new and original play submitted to them.

The competition will close on August 1st. The winner will be announced in The Radio Times.

The B.B.C. reserve the right to broadcast any one or more of the other plays submitted under the competition on the payment of ten guineas per play.

MSS. must be sent to the LONDON PLAY COMPANY, 51, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.1, together with an entrance fee of 1s. 6d., which will be applied towards reading fees and other expenses.

Please note that MSS. are not to be sent to the B.B.C., or to "The Radio Times."

READ THESE RULES.

The B.B.C. offer a prize of £50 for the best new and original play submitted to them before August 1st, 1924, for the purpose of broadcasting.

The B.B.C. will be the judges in the competition and their decision shall be final. The winner will be announced in the press and from all broadcasting stations in the United Kingdom. On payment of the prize of £50 the B.B.C. shall thereby acquire a licence to broadcast the winning play from all stations in the United Kingdom for a period of one year from the date of the first broadcast performance of the said play, and thereafter at the rate of £2 2s. per performance.

The B.B.C. shall acquire no other licence whatsoever in the said play, all stage, amateur, publication and film rights being reserved exclusively by the author.

With reference to any other play submitted for the competition, the B.B.C. reserve the right to acquire, on the payment of £10 10s., the licence to broadcast such play from all stations in the United Kingdom for a period of one year only from the date of the first broadcast performance, and thereafter at the rate of £2 2s. per performance. All other rights in such play shall be retained by the author.

All plays entered for the competition shall be sent to the London Play Company, Authors' Agents, of 51, Piccadilly, London, W.1, together with an entrance fee of 1s. 6d. per play, which will be applied towards defraying the cost of reading fees and postage expenses.

The London Play Company will charge no commission whatever in connection with the competition on any of the plays submitted.

Authors should realize that a special technique is required for a play that is to be broadcast. If possible, they should listen to a broadcast performance of a play before they enter the competition. Since the actors cannot be seen by the audience, it is important that the characters should be so well differentiated in their manner of speaking as to be easily distinguished from each other. The best length for a play is twenty minutes, and in no case should it exceed half an hour. There should not be more than six characters. Religious, political and suggestive subjects should be avoided.

The B.B.C. can supply a supernumerary crowd as well as music and all kinds of incidental sounds.

Manuscripts must be written on one side of the paper only, and it is highly desirable that every competing play should be type-written.

It is expected that the winner will be announced early in September, and the winning play broadcast within a short time thereafter.

Members of the B.B.C. staff are not permitted to enter this competition.

PLEASE NOTE THAT MSS. ARE NOT TO BE SENT TO THE B.B.C., OR TO "THE RADIO TIMES."

Personalities I Have Met.

By Frank Dilnot, the Distinguished Journalist.

[Extracts from an address broadcast from the Overseas League, London.]

FRANK DILNOT

A FEW weeks ago I was received by President Coolidge at the White House, Washington. Through a string of officials, through a secretary's room which with its groups seeking audience recalled what one had read of Cardinal Richelieu's ante-chamber, I was taken through a swing door into a big guest-room, where a youngish-looking man sat, pen in hand, bending over some papers at a flat-topped writing-table. It was the President of the United States. He looked up in a quick, inquiring way, and a second later was on his feet to shake hands.

I had during that greeting a lasting impression of Mr. Coolidge. He is very upright, about five feet ten in height, looks to be in the middle forties, has well-brushed sandy hair, a long high-arched nose, a big mouth which droops at the corners, and the clear steady eyes of a surgeon. It would have been a hard merciless face but for two things—first the gentle reflected light at the back of his eyes, and second the extraordinarily low and pleasant tones of his voice.

Studied by a President.

This man with a reputation for being hard as steel in action has another side to him, that was abundantly clear to me from his sympathetic, almost musical, tones in conversation. He sank down in his chair, replaced a cigar in the corner of his mouth, and studied me with a kind of quizzical interest while I delivered a message of goodwill from Fleet Street.

I had heard he was a silent student of individuals. For the moment, I felt like a patient under the eye of a Harley Street specialist. Within two minutes that sensation had entirely disappeared as Mr. Coolidge, his eyes averted, with terse sentences in which there was never a word out to waste, discussed public matters.

The Lincoln Touch.

He has a good perspective of affairs abroad as well as at home. His directness, the way he went straight to the heart of a subject reminded me of all I had read of President Lincoln. Withal there was a trace of a hidden whimsicalness in him which was very delightful. He was an avid listener, but with all his intensity there was poise and restfulness about him. The whimsical trait in him broke out when at the close of the interview I gave him a hearty invitation from Fleet Street colleagues to visit us when he came to London.

He shook me heartily by the hand. "Do you know," he said, "I am inclined to give that proposition my most favourable consideration."

An Aristocratic Democrat.

Even the most violent Liberal or Conservative who does not know Mr. Ramsay MacDonald would like to meet the Prime Minister and find out what kind of a man he is. Let me try to sketch him for you from an acquaintance of many years' standing. The Labour Prime Minister has no semblance to the horny-handed son of toil, but has all the externals of the patrician—a duke and the son of a duke, very tall, very erect, with clear-cut features, waving grey hair and luminous eyes.

He looks as much an aristocrat as any Prime Minister this country has ever had. He talks like it, too. His deep voice has almost a caressing effect in conversation though on the platform it is sonorous and ringing. With all his graciousness, one is conscious of a reserve in Mr. MacDonald, a certain aloofness, some hidden Hamlet-like vision behind those deep-set eyes, and a gentleness behind the soft inflections of his speech which somehow mean more than his words.

It must be difficult even for his closest friends to believe that they know all of Mr. MacDonald all the time. I would not call the Prime Minister a wit, but he has a sense of quiet fun and can make a retort when it is called for.

A friend once told him that it seemed incredible a certain statesman should persist in his personal animosity to the Labour leader. What was the secret of it?

"Has he ever met me?" asked the Prime Minister. "No," said his friend. "That explains it," said Mr. MacDonald.

G.B.S. on Shakespeare.

If you want a contrast to the Prime Minister among our current notabilities, let me introduce you to the private personality of Mr. Bernard Shaw, a tall man with long greying beard, a bashful, deprecating expression, and the gentlest voice that ever dropped bitter sayings. First of all, in his sweetness you get the impression he is all anxiety to agree with you, and then suddenly in little more than a whisper he lets drop staggering audacities.

Talk to him on Shakespeare, and he will say in a tone of reverence, "I have a great respect for Shakespeare; he was a gentleman of my own profession. Of course he was no play writer. I have a far better play in my desk at home than he ever wrote. He was no poet either." However, he was not a man entirely without ability. He occasionally wrote very decent prose.

A WIRELESS TERM—THE TRANSFORMER.

Mr. Shaw is believed to be an agnostic. Once as editor of a daily paper, I received a note from Mr. Raymond Blathwayt saying that he had seen Mr. Shaw at a Salvation Army meeting joining in the singing. I published the paragraph in the paper. This inevitable letter was immediately forthcoming from Mr. Shaw: "Raymond Blathwayt was wrong," he wrote, "as I was not joining in the singing at the Salvation Army meeting. I was leading the singing. I did it so effectively that at the end of the service a Salvation lassie took me by the hand and said, 'We know, don't we?'"

The First Man to Fly.

I was in an aviation field at Dayton, Ohio, to watch demonstrations by a new war aeroplane, and I saw among the group of spectators a slim man of between forty and fifty who, in dress and poise, reminded me of a certain type of refined, well-bred Englishmen. He kept himself in the background among the visitors although he was evidently much sought after. He had dark blue eyes, dark hair, the straightest nose, and a trim little moustache touched with grey. There was something fragile and retiring about him.

That man was one of the daring geniuses of all time. It was Orville Wright, the man who first went up in a flying machine. I asked Mr. Wright about that memorable hour when he first left the ground. "My brother and I," he said, "were down in Florida on a lonely part of the sands there in the early morning. We spent a long time making final adjustments to the machine. A holiday-maker walking along the shore came and had a look at us and gave a grin. 'Do you expect to fly?' he said, and I replied 'Yes, if the conditions are favourable.' He sneered. 'Yes, you'll fly if the conditions are favourable,' he said as he walked away. He missed the spectacle of man's first ascent from earth in a heavier than air machine. I tossed with my brother Wilbur as to who should make the first ascent. I won. I went up, and though I was only a few feet above the ground and progressed for an inconsiderable distance, I, nevertheless, flew in the air."

Burns, the Book Lover.

Mr. John Burns, living in retirement at Clapham Common, retains the vitality and wit which lifted him from obscurity to his appointment as the first Labour Cabinet Minister in this country. That little torpedo beard, those beetling eyebrows, those flashing eyes and that deep musical voice remain part and parcel of a human dynamo.

His life is now devoted to his books. He has been collecting them since he was seventeen. If you are fortunate enough to be his guest, he will show you maps of the British Isles drawn by the Romans, rare old Bibles, beautifully illustrated, one of the earliest of English books made by monks on parchment ten years after Magna Charta was signed—and having made one's mouth water with his treasures, he will take down a tattered little volume and say: "That is the most precious book in my collection. That book is the beginning of John Burns. It is a copy of More's 'Utopia.' I bought it when I was a boy off a stall in the New Cut, Lambeth, for fourpence."

Why the Charwomen Scored.

Stories ripple from Mr. Burns. Let me give you a characteristic one. He was President of the Local Government Board when the King was crowned at Westminster Abbey, and, as Minister, he had control of the windows of the big Local Government Board Offices at the end of Parliament Street. Some were allotted to high dignitaries, some to royalties. The best room for seeing the procession was his own apartment on the first floor. He allotted that to the thirty-five charwomen who cleaned out the Local Government Board Offices. "My mother was a charwoman," he explained.

Nightingales Calling!

By A. G. D. West., Asst. Chief Engineer.

A MICROPHONE, a portable amplifier, a few batteries, and a drum of cable—such was our equipment when trying to find the best place to listen to the nightingale. Our search was not a very long one. Miss Beatrice Harrison, the well-known 'cellist, told us that at her home in Surrey there were nightingales singing every evening.

On our first visit to the old-world garden we were delighted. On every side of the garden there are thick woods, just now exhibiting the freshest green of spring, and the ground is blue with myriads of bluebells. In the evening, after the sun has set, nightingales commence their songs in the woods on every side, and sometimes we have counted as many as eight singing at the same time.

Challenge of the 'Cello.

The house is a wonderful sixteenth-century half-timbered building, and is surrounded by large beds of tulips which present a gorgeous blaze of colour. There is also in the garden a building which used to be the barn and pigsties. These have been converted respectively into a music-room and its porch, and this porch formed the centre of operations when placing our microphone in different positions to find where the best results could be obtained. It was in this wonderfully furnished music-room—which with its oak rafters, gallery, and large stone hearth reminds one of ancient baronial halls—that Miss Harrison, in playing her 'cello in the evenings, had attracted so many of these nightingales. She and her sisters have found that several of the birds respond to particular notes of the scale, and very often she is able to maintain a kind of conversation with a particular bird by playing certain notes to which the bird responds by singing the same tune.

Setting the Stage.

After taking stock of our surroundings and listening in various positions, we discovered one nightingale that sings always in a certain bush, only about one hundred feet away from one of the summer-houses on the lawn. The microphone was placed as close as possible to this tree and the land-line from London was brought to the summer-house, where the music from the bird was brought from the microphone and amplified.

I shall never forget the scene when we did our first broadcast. In the little summer-house with its thatched roof, an amplifier, a tangle of wires, a few odd switches and batteries. Outside on the lawn, several tortoises crawling about. Right at the other end of the garden, occasionally the barking of Mrs. Harrison's Aberdeen terriers. Venus just setting; a full moon, and quite close to it the brilliant Jupiter rising behind fleecy clouds in the east.

In Reply to Elgar.

At the time when we should have started there was not a sound to be heard. Then Miss Harrison brought her 'cello into the garden and started playing a few bars of Elgar's Concerto. It was not long before the birds began to sing, and in particular our friend in the bush by the microphone commenced his concert. He was, I believe, the strongest of all the birds that were singing during the evening. His song was rather intermittent, but there were no long pauses. I am told that in a week or so the tone will be more developed and more exquisite; the songs and notes will be longer, but the pauses in between will be longer also. Perhaps an opportunity will come of broadcasting him again, and it will afford an interesting comparison with the notes heard during our first attempt at broadcasting the nightingale.

PEOPLE IN THE PROGRAMMES.

A Great English Singer.

MR. ROBERT RADFORD.

ONE of the leading English bass singers is Mr. Robert Radford, who is a frequent broadcast singer.

Mr. Radford tells me that he was originally intended for a chartered accountant, but that he was "always dabbling in music." He showed so much promise as a singer that he entered the Royal Academy of Music on the advice of the late Signor Randegger. His debut was made as Brander in Berlioz's Faust at the Norwich Festival, in 1899. His first appearance in opera was as the Commendatore in Don Giovanni, at Covent Garden, in 1905.

Since then, Mr. Radford has been principal bass at every big Festival in the country, and he has sung numerous rôles in opera. Under Sir Thomas Beecham's management, Mozart's The Seraglio was specially revived so that Mr. Radford could play the part of Osmin.

Making Opera Popular.

A PART from his art as a vocalist, Mr. Robert Radford has done much to popularize opera in this country, for he was a prime mover in the formation of the British National Opera Company. It is not generally known that Mr. Radford is himself a composer, but, as he modestly says, "little of my work has seen the light, and then only under a pseudonym."

Mr. Radford is convinced that in wireless broadcasting lies one of the chief hopes for bringing the great masses of the British public into touch with the many beauties that opera can offer.

Did You Recognize Her Voice?

MISS KATE WINTER.

ONE of the most perfect broadcasting voices is possessed by Miss Kate Winter, who has appeared regularly at London and provincial stations for well over a year. She was one of the artistes in the much discussed "Query" Programme some weeks ago, and many of the competitors had no difficulty in recognizing her individual voice and art.

Although Miss Winter sings often in popular programmes, her desire is to take an increasing part in chamber music and similar programmes.

A Noted Quartette.

A MUSICAL combination that is popular at London Station is the Snow String Quartette, consisting of Miss Bessie Snow, Mr. Kenneth Skeaping, Mr. Ernest Tomlinson and Mr. Edward J. Robinson.

Formed in 1922, this quartette has appeared at numerous concerts in London and the provinces, playing both modern and classical works.

Mr. Robinson, the 'cellist, is the permanent first 'cellist to the Wireless Orchestra, and he has held that position ever since the early broadcasting days.

The Snow Quartette have made a special study of the Vaughan Williams Quartette, Dr. Vaughan Williams having himself attended one of their rehearsals and having been present at two of their public performances of the work in London.

A Favourite Singer of Ballads.

MISS CARMEN HILL.

A FAVOURITE among the ballad artistes now before the public is Miss Carmen Hill, who is to broadcast from Bournemouth on Sunday, June 1st. Born in Scotland, she came to London to finish her vocal studies at the Royal Academy of Music, and it is only a few years since she first appeared at the Chappell Ballad Concerts.

Miss Hill has also sung at the Queen's Hall Promenade Concerts, and Symphony Concerts, besides having toured the provinces with Mme. Albani and Miss Evangeline Florence.

Romance in a Museum.

SIR CECIL HARCOURT-SMITH, C.V.O., LL.D., who is giving a talk from London, on June 3rd, on the "Romance and History in the Victoria and Albert Museum," is the director and secretary of that museum. He entered the department of Greek and Roman Antiquities in the British Museum in 1879, and since then has always been associated with such work. For two years he was director of the British School at Athens, and he has published various works on archaeology.

A Remarkable Concert Record.

A FAVOURITE wireless entertainer is Mr. Charles V. Wreford, whose speciality is West-country dialect recitations and stories. Mr. Wreford has appeared at all the principal concert halls in London, and also at twenty-one consecutive annual concerts given by the Devon and Cornish Association in London. He is engaged to appear at the twenty-second concert to be given at the Central Hall, Westminster, next November.

During the War, Mr. Wreford entertained our troops in France with Miss Lena Ashwell's concert parties.

Working Boys Who Like Shakespeare.

AN entertainer who broadcasts successfully from Newcastle is Miss Nora Ball, who has given many recitals both in England and on the Continent. Some time ago she started a successful little dramatic company among working boys and girls. They did modern work, but it is an interesting fact that they liked Shakespeare best.

Miss Ball has interested herself in girls' work for many years, and she helped to start the Federation of Girls' Clubs in Newcastle. She is now County Secretary for the Girl Guides in Northumberland.

A Talk on Japan.

PROFESSOR WILDEN-HART.

THE thirteenth of the interesting "Magic Carpet" series of lectures will be given from Cardiff on Wednesday, June 4th. The lecturer on this occasion will be Professor Bernard John Wilden-Hart, M.A., F.R.Hist.S., F.R.G.S. Professor Wilden-Hart knows Japan thoroughly, having been for some time professor of English and History and lecturer at the Imperial Japanese University, Nagoya.

His long residence in the land of the chrysanthemum enables him to speak with authority on the country, its people, and their customs.

Polarphone

“Science’s Last Word—Society’s First Choice.”

As pleasing to the eye as to the ear, Polarphone Instruments occupy an unchallenged position because they possess certain protected features in design and construction which make reception and reproduction purer and more faithful to natural sound. These features have not been and cannot be duplicated in any other than R.C.C. Instruments. (See note below on Tuning.)

The POLARPHONE 7-valve Cabinet, remote-control, Chippendale Model, finely brushed in polished mahogany.
 Price £120 : 0 : 0. B.B.C. Tax, £2 : 0 : 0.

Perfect tuning is ensured with the Polarphone and on all R.C.C. Instruments.

Polarphones and all R.C.C. Sets are tuned on the same system as used in the R.C.C. Installations of most big ships—i.e., by the Polar Condenser.

A special booklet, sent on request, explains the Polar Condenser fully. Apply to your nearest Polar Stockist or write direct to Radio Communication Co., Ltd.

Music in the Week's Programmes.

A Weekly Feature Conducted by Percy A. Scholes.

DELIUS' "CUCKOO" and "SUMMER NIGHT."

THE charming little tone poems, On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring, and Summer Night on the River, are scored for a small orchestra—2 Flutes (only one of them used in the Cuckoo, though), Oboe, 2 Clarinets, 2 Bassoons, 2 Horns and Strings.

(a) On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring is based upon two tunes. After a mere three bars of Introduction, the FIRST TUNE (quite short) begins; it has a rocking motion, perhaps suggested by the rhythm of a cuckoo's cry, and is given to STRINGS, with, in one place, little wisps of melody in Clarinet and Oboe woven in.

A little later the SECOND TUNE starts. It is a Norwegian folk-song, "In Ola Valley"; it runs on continuously from the previous tune, but its opening can quite easily be noticed from the fact that the FLUTE enters here (for the first time in the piece), doubling the first phrase of the tune an octave higher. (The entry of the OBOE, with the same phrase, a moment later, cannot be missed.)

There are several vague suggestions of Cuckoo-calls, as for instance by the two Clarinets, a little after the point just described. Soon, however, there comes an actual imitation of the bird's cry (marked "Cuckoo" in the score); it is allotted to the FIRST CLARINET.

This continues for some time, and then the piece ends with a repetition of the FIRST TUNE, very softly played, and at last fading into the distance.

(b) Summer Night on the River.

This is a much less simple score than the one just described.

The motion of a boat is subtly suggested throughout.

Some features are (1) Strings muted from beginning to end; (2) Gliding phrases moving by tiny steps, i.e. (for those who understand the term), moving "chromatically."

Note how, after a fairly long Introduction, the MAIN TUNE of the piece enters as a CELLO SOLO; once entered, it persists, being heard in one instrument or another almost everywhere to the end.

(These two little poems of Delius will be given from the BOURNEMOUTH Station on Friday, 6th June.)

MOZART'S G MINOR SYMPHONY.

Mozart is represented in the orchestral programmes of to-day chiefly by three of his forty-nine Symphonies, those in E Flat, G Minor, and C (this last often called the "Jupiter" Symphony).

All three were written within a period of six weeks—26th June to 10th August, 1788!

The one now under description, the G Minor, was composed in ten days, yet it is usually regarded as its composer's finest and most original orchestral work.

No Trumpets or Kettledrums are used in this Symphony; it is scored for 1 Flute, 2 Oboes, 2 Clarinets, 2 Bassoons, 2 Horns and Strings. The orchestration is charming.

There are Four Movements.

I.

Very Quick. It opens at once with the restless FIRST MAIN TUNE, given at first to STRINGS alone, and then continued with WIND instruments added.

After a big climax, there comes a bar's rest, and the SECOND MAIN TUNE begins. It is easy to recognize. As a contrast to the First Main Tune, it is restful in character, and, as the First was what we call "diatonic" (i.e., its notes mainly according to the key), the Second is "chromatic," sliding down in many places by the smallest possible intervals (i.e., by semitones).

Listeners with quick ears may note how this short (eight-bar) tune is taken in little snippets by STRINGS and WOOD WIND alternately, and then immediately repeated with the Strings' snippets now given to Wind, and vice versa.

The listener having now made acquaintance with the chief Tunes is in a position to follow the Movement. He will find that these Tunes, having been given out, as described (and, if the Conductor so decides, the whole Section in which they first appear repeated), are then discussed (or "Developed," as it is called) and finally repeated (or "Recapitulated").

II.

Moving Steadily. This is the Slow Movement of the Symphony. We now pass into a major key, and the mood becomes cheerful.

At the opening, and for some little time, only STRINGS are heard (except for some soft Horn calls). They are giving out the FIRST MAIN TUNE.

After a time there comes a passage in which a curious little rhythmic figure, a "two-note chirp," as we may call it, prevails for some time, various instruments, in turn, playing about with it.

This passage works up to a loud climax, with all the instruments engaged, and then ceases. Now comes in, softly, and at first in FIRST VIOLINS, SECOND VIOLINS and VIOLAS only (all other instruments silent), the SECOND MAIN TUNE, and a very beautiful one it is.

This is the material of the Movement.

III.

This is a very happy "MENUET AND TRIO"; in other words, two Menuets arranged in this order—1st., 2nd., 1st. (The word Trio, in this connection, has now no real significance.)

The 1ST MENUET is scored for FULL ORCHESTRA throughout. It has a rhythmic peculiarity which gives it much of its individuality—its phrases run mostly in three-bar lengths, instead of the normal four.

The 2ND MENUET is very much more lightly scored. At first only STRINGS are heard; then OBOE is added, and then FLUTE (Clarinet is silent throughout). Later can be heard the CELLO with a little upward phrase answered by FLUTE, OBOE and BASSOON with a downward one, and after this HORNS and STRINGS alone, and, still later, HORNS and WOOD WIND (Flutes, Oboes, Bassoons) without Strings.

IV.

Very Quick. This begins with a bustling FIRST TUNE, carried on at some little length. Then comes a sort of semi-colon cadence (FULL ORCHESTRA), and you feel that something new is about to begin. This proves to be the SECOND TUNE, very much contrasted with the First, inasmuch as it is in slower notes, is gentle in feeling, and is scored for VIOLINS and VIOLAS only. As soon as these instruments have ended it (which does not take long, for it is only brief), the following pleasant combination takes it over, and repeats it, with a few subtle little changes—CLARINET, immediately joined by BASSOON, and then by CELLOS and DOUBLE BASSES, and after a moment by the other instruments. Out of this material the Movement grows in the usual way (see remarks on 1st Movement).

Lightning and Your Aerial.

By P. P. Eckersley.

IN a recent technical talk I spoke on the subject of lightning and how to minimize its effects upon your wireless receiving apparatus.

It is very difficult indeed in a technical talk to indicate diagrams of connections so adequately as to show how precautions may be taken to overcome potential dangers. First and foremost, however, it must be realized that no precaution in this world is going to be absolutely perfect, and if lightning is going to strike the aerial, it is going to strike it willy nilly, just in the same way that even houses and chimneys with lightning-conductors on them have been known to be struck.

The only point of this article is to indicate how to arrange so that you are running the minimum risk. If you take the precautions I am going to indicate, the chances are literally millions to one against any danger arising.

The first and foremost principle that must be observed is to earth your aerial, and to so arrange your switching that the aerial goes direct to earth without the set being connected to the aerial or the earth in any way whatsoever.

The best plan is to have your earthing switch out-of-doors, so that no wires of any sort connected to the aerial come into the house when you are switched to earth, and your switch, to be ideal, should be mounted on a big insulating base well away from the wall of the house, perhaps set up on porcelain insulators.

This is the ideal, and I have drawn a diagram to show how a double-pole, change-over switch should be connected. When you throw the switch to one side, the aerial is connected through one arm of the switch through a shorting bar, through the other arm of the switch, and down to earth. When the switch is thrown into the working position, however, the aerial passes through one arm of the switch to the aerial terminal of the set, through the set, back through the other arm of the switch, and so to earth. It is all very simple.

A Big Drawback.

This arrangement has a psychological drawback, and one which really must be recognized, taking human nature as it is. The switch is outside and it does not, so to speak, hit the eye. Furthermore, if at the end of a perfectly calm evening, when a storm seems a most unlikely thing, you are snoozing in your armchair, you will be very reluctant indeed to go outside and change over even so simple a thing as a switch.

Should the switch, however, be inside the room just by your set, it would be a quite simple matter to change it over when switching off at the end of a programme.

So far, I have not talked about lightning arresters. I think that they do constitute the best method of protecting your house automatically. The lightning arrester is simply a spark gap, as it were, connected across the aerial and earth terminals of your set, which offers an almost infinite resistance to the small energies you receive from broadcasting, but which, on a sudden, impulsive jerk from a lightning flash, coheres and shorts your aerial to earth, but leaves the set in parallel. It is a solution for the lazy man who refuses even to change over a switch, and who doubtless has a long bell-push beside his chair to switch on and off his filaments without getting up from his comfortable seat.

Need of a Good Earth.

Of course, it is essential to have a good earth, especially if you have a crystal set. Some valve sets work better without an earth because they tend to react more easily; but I do not like the arrangement; it is not right, and they are inclined to be frightfully unstable. At any rate, from the point of view of lightning, the earth must be good.

There are many people who tell me that they flatly disagree with my generalizations because their aerial works with such and such an arrangement which I do not recommend. This I do not consider germane, because there are bound to be one or two freaks in applying wireless to houses, and I can only talk in generalities. A good earth, I consider, may be formed from the cold-water system or from metal plates decently buried in the earth. (N.B.—A piece of wire which is stuck into the earth about six inches does not constitute a good earth; there should be a largish plate attached to the wire.)

Many ask me if they can earth to the gas mains. I should say it was inadvisable in the majority of cases, although I do know of people who get excellent results from it.

The reason I do not like a gas main for an earth is that the joints on gas pipes are usually made with red lead, which is not a good conductor, and, secondly, as a pure wireless earth the gas-pipe cannot be so good as the water-pipe.

When You Should Switch Off.

Lastly, one comes to the questions when to earth the aerial; when, in fact, is it dangerous to go on working the set, and when should it be switched off?

I said in my technical talk that if dry, crackling sounds were heard continuously, and if on the horizon black clouds were noticed and if the Weather Forecast had been saying thunder, then it is advisable to earth the aerial. The dry, crackling sounds, called X's, are a sign of thunder.

With a very sensitive set you can hear thunderstorms which are raging in Central Africa. With a set designed to listen to broadcast from a station some twenty or thirty miles away, which is the average set, you should not hear X's unless there is thunder fairly locally.

In any case, do not get into a panic. There is no necessity to take your aerial down for all the summer, as some people are suggesting. If you take the simple precautions that I have indicated, you need have no fear that there will be any danger to life or property.

Summer-Time Listening!

Programmes to Suit the Season.

IS broadcasting more a winter-time amusement than a summer one?

Assuming for a moment that people are going to listen less in summer time, what ought we to do about it?

Ought we to say, "Well, here's the summer come at last, shorten up the hours of transmission, close down all stations for a fortnight—send the staff on holiday, recuperate before the big autumn push"? Or ought we to say: "People must not be encouraged to give up the habit of listening. If there are rival attractions, broadcasting must be equal to them. Let there be special summer features, let us prove that we are equal to the occasion"?

Now, being unable positively to answer the question in the first paragraph of this article, and having two alternatives to the second question, we choose the latter alternative.

The underlying principle is that nothing we have ever done is worthy of repetition—in fact, that day by day in every way we have got to get better and better.

Music Is Music.

This is all very well, but how exactly are we to meet the special needs of summer time?

After all, music is music, it does not change like women's fashions in spring and autumn.

Here, then, we are in a bit of a quandary. Let us have music (say some) suitable for a loud speaker on the tennis courts. But how many people have loud speakers, and how many people put them on their tennis courts?

There are people to whom broadcasting is of real value and benefit, inasmuch as it puts them in touch with some of the good things in life. For them winter and summer make but little difference in the daily round. But since it is light later, we may argue legitimately that people stay out in the daylight longer and go to bed later. The hours of transmission should be later? We agree. This change starts this week and will continue till the end of September.

Giving the Giants a Rest.

We have started an afternoon concert of two hours' duration (4 till 6) on both Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, and a full hour's concert every other afternoon of the week. These afternoon concerts are to be light in character. Suitable, we hope, to punts and picnics.

The evening concerts, too, will be lighter in character. The music of Wagner and Beethoven, Handel and Schumann will not be heard so much. Instead, we will welcome those beguilers of our lighter moments, Puccini, Mozart, Sullivan, German, Fletcher, and a hundred others whose melodies will, we hope, put the listener into that mood of ease and sentiment so suitable to the upper reaches of the barometer.

Picking-up Wembley.

Then, of course, there is Wembley. Apart from special transmissions in the evenings, there will be a regular half-hour of Wembley twice a week from 9.30 to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

We hope to transmit not only the bands and orchestras in the various pavilions, but also the more human and interesting sounds of the exhibition grounds. The Engineers threaten to perfect a portable transmitter which can be wheeled about like a perambulator, and with this we hope to pick up all the hustle and jollity of the Wembley amusement park.

To make this more real, we are going to have our own showman to accompany the transmitter. He is going to describe the scene, deliver a running comment on everything you hear, and help you to visualize it all.

C. A. LEWIS.

Can You Talk to the Song Birds?

A Talk from London by E. Le Breton Martin.

OF all the thousands of nature-lovers who go for country rambles in these the most beautiful weeks of the year, how many are fully alive to the increase of pleasure that is theirs at the price of a quickened imagination and a speeding-up of observation powers?

For now is the time to listen to the singing birds, those of our feathered songsters who are with us all the year, and those of our guests, the migrants, who have wintered in warm climates thousands of miles away from our little island, and who, year after year, with amazing regularity, return to their favourite nesting-places in our woods, and fields and gardens.

Yet how many people can distinguish one bird's voice from another?

Open-Air Concert Halls.

Bird language is a most fascinating study, and once you begin to take it up, you will be astounded at the variety of melody in Birdland. It is, of course, impossible to convey phonetically the liquid notes that make our woodlands such wonderful open-air concert halls at this time of year. Yet, if you have the willing ear, you will soon be able to tell the different birds by their songs and voices, to "translate" the woodland cries for yourselves, to discover the haunts of many songsters undreamt of before.

Suppose you hear a tree-top bird that seems to say: "Chip cherry, chip cherry, chip cherry! Pretty sweet, pretty sweet, pretty sweet! Keep it up, keep it up! Kiss, kiss, kiss me!" you will soon learn what the thrush says.

The blackbird, on the other hand, doesn't talk. He flutes lazily and melodiously, is a whistler rather than a songster, though disturb him in the wood, or in the copse, and he will fly through the undergrowth "Check-check-check-check-checking" lustily.

Almost Human.

Most people know the yellow-hammer's song: "A little bit of bread and no cheese." Every country road in spring and summer is enlivened by his plaintive request. It is not such a matter of common knowledge that his cousin, the bunting, says: "A little bit of bread and—" without making the request for the cheese. Listen for the bunting the next time you are out for a walk. When you have heard him you will be able to tell the difference between him and the more gaily-coloured yellow-hammer, who is often nearly as bright as a canary.

"Spink, spink, spink, spink" is a common country cry. The chaffinch calls thus. He also has a monotonous, though not unpleasing, little song, which always sounds to me as though he were saying: "I'd like a great big glass of ginger-beer."

Voices You Cannot Miss.

The Ox-eye, or Great Tit, is another common bird of woodland and garden. In spring you will hear his bold "See-saw, see-saw, see-saw"—rasping, though decidedly cheerful.

The wren has an amazingly big voice for so tiny a bird. If you hear a sudden burst of breathless song from the middle of a bush or the bottom of a hedge, you may be sure it is a wren.

The green woodpecker is another bird with an unmistakable voice. Country folk call him the yaffle because of his laughing cry, best described phonetically by "glu-glu-glu-gluck." In Buckinghamshire the country people call him the wet-oiler, because, so they say, he always cries before rain.

The song of the skylark is one that has inspired poets innumerable, and it is, indeed, wonderful how a bird that mounts up and up towards the heavens until it becomes lost to the naked eye can continue to pour out its song and still keep breath enough for its arduous flight.

Bullfinches are shy birds, frequenting secluded spots where trees abound. You may sometimes hear a short, sweet, plaintive pipe, in a thick hedge or plantation, a most arresting sound when heard. You will also find it much easier to hear than to see a wild bullfinch.

Chiff-chaff and Willow Wren.

Of the migrants who visit us in summer, most people know the chiff-chaff, with his "chiff-chaff, chiff, chiff, chiff, chiff." He is an inconspicuous little fellow in appearance, as is another migrant, the willow-wren, whose song is sweet, and fast, and strangely regular, conveyed best by the words "tweedle-tweedle-tweedle-tweedle-tweedle," with changing inflections. Woods and thickets resound to chiff-chaff and willow-wren in the nesting season.

On a warm summer day one of the most soothing sounds of the countryside is the wood-pigeon's coo. If you hear a bird that says: "Take two cows, Taffy, take two cows," you will know at once that you are listening to a wood-pigeon. If you hear a pleasant, murmurous "coo, coo," it will be the turtle-dove, which is a migrant.

You have only to hear the nightingale once to be able always to recall the wonderful song of the King of Warblers. He nearly always begins with a "jug-jug-jug-jug." Then he will give a few more melodious notes and so develop into his wonderful cadenza, which begins very low down on his register, rising to a wonderful swell of music, to finish up again with the "jug-jug-jug-jug" that is one of his chief characteristics.

Many people seem to be under the impression that the nightingale only sings at night-time. It is then, of course, that he is at his loveliest; but if you know his haunts, you may hear his song all through the day during May and June.

The Hoo's of the Owl.

Now, although the owl cannot be classed exactly as a songbird, mention may be made of him here for the simple reason that many people seem to believe that there is just one species of owl, and that they all say the same thing: "Tu-whit, tu-whoo."

There are at least eleven varieties of owl that have been known to visit this country, though there are only three sorts which are really common, the Little Owl, the Brown Owl and the White Owl. The Little Owl does not, as do the other two, confine himself to the night-time for his hunting, and if you happen to be going through a wood and hear over your head a sound like a large cat mewling, you can be pretty sure you are listening to a Little Owl.

The Brown or Tawny Owl is a lover of woods and forests. He says "Hoo-hoo-hoo-hoo-hoo," as well as occasionally uttering a harsh scream. The White or Barn Owl builds in church towers, old buildings and barns. He hoots very rarely, but screeches—a harsh, drawn-out tee-whit.

Mouse-Like Cries.

Another example—there are five varieties of the titmouse which are common in this country, the Great Tit, the Blue Tit, the Cole Tit, the Marsh Tit and the Long-tailed Tit. Each of these little birds has a distinctive note. The Great Tit we have already had occasion to mention. The Cole Tit says "Chee-chee-chee." The Blue Tit says "Tsee, tsee, tsirr," the Marsh Tit says "Witgee, witgee," the Long Tail says "Zit, zit." In other words, the whole family utters notes which all have something in common, and which are, nevertheless, quite distinctive, so that it is perfectly possible to train the ear instantly to differentiate between all these mouse-like cries.

If, then, the next time you go out for a walk you keep your ears open, you may be able to identify the voices of a few of the birds I have mentioned. If you do, it will probably incite you to take up the study more carefully, and you will find that by thus retaining your faculties to enjoy the song of the birds and pick out their various notes, you will not only have added a great pleasure to your walks abroad, but will be encouraged still further to study the fascinating world of Birdland.

ENGLAND SPEAKS.

By ALFRED NOYES.

[Exclusive to "The Radio Times."]

I AM England, who first gave
Freedom and Justice to the slave;
England, whose voice and triumphing sea
Crowned with law your liberty,
And taught my free-born sons to heed
What I taught kings at Runnymede.

I am England, who first broke
Tyrants with my thunder-stroke,
Who broke an empire round Cape Wrath
And strawed its wrecks before my path;
Shattered the haughty fleets of Spain,
And, when my tyrants rose again,
Burst every link of every chain,
Flung my may-flower to the breeze
And sailed to the Atlantides.

Head-winds call to royal sails!
Rise, then—Scotland, Ireland, Wales,
Plunge thro' the storm with steadfast helms,
And find for Freedom mightier realms.
Bring nations, once again, to birth,
At the undiscovered ends of earth;
Cities and nations of free men
To speak with my sea-speech again.

For, since it is my hand that flings
To Freedom all your conquering wings,
The sea that girds and guards my walls
Shall thunder in your council-halls;
And when each English lane and coomb
Grows white with stars of hawthorn bloom,
You shall lift up your heads and say,
The sea-wind brings the scent of may
Across the seven wide seas to-day.

Across those boundless leagues of foam
It shall still draw your memories home,
And you shall hear the sea-wind sing
This tale of Freedom, and her Spring.

[The Tale will appear exclusively in "The Radio Times" next week.]

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER. CONDUCTED BY UNCLE CARACTACUS

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tit at Home.

HULLO, Chi'dren!

I suppose that you are all very fond of birds, and many of you keep them. I always think myself that wild birds are more interesting than those kept in cages. Do you agree? Here is a talk about some wild birds, by M. Catherine Wiens, that I am sure you will like to read.

I am very proud; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tit condescended to take a house quite near my windows this spring.

As a matter of fact, I put the house there for them and made up my mind that they should take it, not that that made any difference to their plans, for they took such a long time to decide on it. For weeks they popped in and out of its little round door, and sometimes they would stop inside a long time, and at other times they would only just peep in and then fly off again.

Making the New House.

Mrs. Tit was evidently most particular, because on several occasions she came out with something in her beak, looking rather cross, and saying all sorts of things. I am afraid it was not quite clean and tidy enough for her. However, after keeping me in this state of anxiety for some time, I noticed one morning that they had made up their very particular minds at last, and Mrs. Tit, instead of carrying something out of the nesting-box, was now taking something into it. Soon she was to be seen rushing in and out of that little front door as if she had a train to catch.

I wonder how many soft feathers she carried in during the day to make the new house all soft and warm inside. Besides feathers, moss, and wool, Mrs. Tit showed a special liking for the end of a rope that secured her cottage to the apple tree. She found this very useful and, standing on a twig, or on her own roof, she used to pull at it until her beak was bristling with fibres and she had turned the rope-ends into loose bushy tails. She really looked as if she had a large moustache when she flew in with her beak full of rope.

She worked hard for days and days; but Mr. Tom Tit was lazy, and though he flew to and fro and gave her lots of good advice, and went in to see if she was getting the house nice and tidy, he did not help her one little bit.

Very Bad Manners.

One day I lifted up the roof of Tom Tit's cottage and looked inside. They don't much like you to take their roof off; but I was curious! And what do you think I saw? Thirteen tiny white eggs, all arranged neatly in a circle.

Mrs. Tit came along before I could get away and hide, and she saw me looking in. And she flew to tell Mr. Tit, though she had her mouth full of feathers. And they both came as near as they dared and said a great many things. Perhaps it was well that I did not understand bird language. And she still had her mouth full of feathers all the time she was talking, which was bad manners. They made a great deal of fuss. You see, they like to be quite private in their own house.

So I did not go again, but I peeped from the window, through a chink in the curtain, and every day for about ten days I saw Mr. Tit being terribly busy. At last he was doing some work. For Mrs. Tit was sitting on the thirteen eggs and keeping them very warm and her devoted husband had to bring her food all day.

On the tenth day when I passed Tom Tit's cottage, I heard a lot of little squeaks and squeals and this time I could not resist looking inside. And there I saw ten yellow beaks all wide open asking for breakfast.

Every day they grew bigger and bigger and got greedier and greedier, and poor Mr. and Mrs. Tit had hard work to feed so many babies.

And when they were old enough to fly, they crawled out one after another, and flew into the trees round about, little round fluffy balls of green and yellow. You see, they did not have to learn to fly, like some birds; they knew how!

Prowling Cats and Noisy Humans.

Poor Mr. and Mrs. Tit were nearly distracted, following each one in turn; but as they all flew in different directions, they soon gave it up as a bad job, and called to their babies to keep near them, because there were so many things in this new world, and they were not all as nice as little fat grubs and warm sunbeams.

There were plenty of things that were quite unnecessary in a world of baby tits, such as stealthy, prowling cats and large, noisy humans, and even certain birds who were harmful to them. All these the fluffy yellow balls had to learn about and beware of. So you cannot wonder that Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tit were so flustered with nervousness the first morning their babies took to flight, can you?

Sabo in the Moonlight.

By E. W. Lewis.

SABO was awakened in the middle of the night by the sound of voices. He sat up. It was dark. The voices seemed to come from the hearth where the embers of the fire were still burning. It was a chorus. Sabo listened with both ears; and this is what he heard:—

“Join hands! About him turn!
Come on, you fellows,
Dance round the Bellows,
For Bellows makes us burn.”

Just at that moment a broad beam of moonlight came through the window, and fell upon the Persian rug in front of the fire; and Sabo saw a strange sight.

In the middle of the ring stood the Bellows on one leg, with his ears cocked and his mouth open: and all round about him in a circle stood the logs which had not been burned during the day, but would surely be burned in the morning. They had left their basket by the fireside, and were dancing on the hearth.

They were a mixed lot, of all shapes and sizes, Beech and Elm and Oak and Sycamore; and while they sang the chorus they danced round the Bellows in a ring. Then they stood still, while each sang his own verse in turn; and after each verse, they danced round and sang the chorus again:—

“Come on, you fellows,
Dance round the Bellows,
For Bellows makes us burn.”

The Beech-log sang the first verse, in a deep bass voice; and this is what he sang:—

“Upon my branches high
There nests the gentle dove,
I spill upon the ground
The nuts that squirrels love.

Oh the Beech and the Oak and the pretty Rowan-tree.

All grow upon a hill, and are fair to see.”

Then the Sycamore cleared his throat and sang with a merry swing:—

“Some trees have branches thick,
And some have leaves that prick,
And the Yew will make you sick,
Little cow, don't eat him any more!
But I'm the Sycamore—
I'm the Sycamore!”

Then the Oak, in a round voice and with a rollicking manner, jumping his chest up and down as he sang, and ending with a long loud note:—

“Oh! the Oak, the Oak!
Is a jolly old bloke,
A jolly old bloke is he!
He lives a mighty span,
Far longer than a man
Unless that man Methuselah should be!”

And the Elm sang his verse to the tune of Three Blind Mice; the first two lines very deep and solemn, and the next three lines quick and lively, ending as solemn as he began, with his voice right down in his boots.

“Dear old Elm,
Dear old Elm,
You grow so grave by the long road side,
Your head is high and your branches wide,
And you've usually got a hollow inside,
Dear old Elm!”

They all laughed when he had finished; and the Bellows said: “Dull old Elm! I should say! It takes ten times more of my breath to blow you than all the rest put together!”

“Don't mention it,” said the Elm-log; and they all joined hands and danced the chorus:—

“Come on, you fellows,
Dance round the Bellows,
For Bellows makes us burn!”

They were getting a little tired now, but the Fir-log did not mean to be left out. Besides his verse had a joke in it:—

“Pins and needles, needles and pins,
I shed in showers profuse, O.
Summer or winter, it matters not;
For a gale I do not care a jot;
Other trees are a rattle-tattle lot,
But the Fir is always spruce, O!”

The dance was just about to break off when, down from the top of one of the pictures hanging on the wall, a sprig of Holly which had been left over from the Christmas decorations tumbled and ran across the floor and joined in the circle. She piped her little song in a clear voice:—

“Holly, Holly, where do you grow?
I grow in the wood all deep in snow.
Holly, Holly, why are you green?
So that I may be more easily seen.
Hollytree, Hollytree, your berries are red!
And why not? and why not? the Hollytree said!”

And then the moon went out. All was darkness again. Sabo could hear the sound of shuffling feet as the logs made their way back to their basket, still humming the tune:—

“Come on, you fellows,
Dance round the Bellows,
For Bellows makes us burn!”

Then all was silent. Sabo lay awake. He tried to remember some of the verses. But all he could remember was:—

“Dear old Elm,
Dear old Elm,
You've usually got a hollow inside,
Dear old Elm!”

And as he said this over and over in his mind, he began to nod, and fell asleep.

From a popular viewpoint, probably the best-known of Wagner's operas is Tannhäuser, while his most stupendous work is Der Ring—really consisting of four operas to be performed on successive nights. All these and many others, including Lohengrin and Der Meistersinger, are invariably broadcast during the British National Opera Company's Season.

Master Musicians No. 2.

Richard Wagner

NO one reading the life of Wagner can fail to be impressed with the tremendous difficulties the great composer had to overcome, not only in his early years—when often he was almost reduced to starvation—but right up to his death in 1883.

Wagner was a reformer, and for many years he ploughed a lonely furrow. In his hands the opera was changed from a disjointed affair of separate airs, duets and finales and developed into a magnificent dramatic spectacle, co-ordinated by one master mind.

Such innovations naturally created intense controversies in musical circles, and although the great composer reached the allotted span of three-score years and ten, he did not live to see a single one of his operas attain any real degree of international fame.

The Loud Speaker reception of Wagner's Operas brings forth this peculiar point: since augmented orchestras are required to obtain such majestic effects, there is a danger of the Loud Speaker being overloaded and the music being confused.

aluminium diaphragm is anchored to a tuned reed and therefore attracted in one central position only.

The largest users of BROWN Loud Speakers are staunch opera-lovers: obviously they choose the BROWN because its unique construction permits it to give a more truthful rendering.

The user of the BROWN, however, is safe from this defect, because its cone-shaped

B.T.H. RADIO VALVES

THERE are no better valves in the world than the three illustrated above. The R valve for general purposes, the B5 valve (0.06 amps) for use with dry batteries, and the B4 power amplifying valve (0.25 amps) meet all requirements of experimenter and listener-in.

The amber-tinted bulb of the R type and B4 valves and the silvered bulb of the B5 valve are the outward and visible signs of a perfect vacuum. The colouring of the bulbs is an incidental result of a process which produces a high and permanent vacuum. Bear this point in mind and buy B.T.H. valves always.

Le Cor.

Par Alfred de Vigny.

The following Poem will be broadcast from London Station by M. E. M. Stéphan, on Tuesday, June 3rd. It is printed here in French so that readers of "The Radio Times" may follow the speaker word for word. In this way, listeners will be enabled to correct any errors of pronunciation.

I.

J'AI ME le son du Cor, le soir, au fond des bois,
Soit qu'il chante les pleurs de la biche aux abois,
Ou l'indien du chasseur que l'écho, faible accueilli,
Et que le vent du nord porte de feuille en feuille.

Que de fois, seul, dans l'ombre à minuit demeuré,
J'ai souri de l'entendre, et plus souvent pleuré !
Car je croyais ouïr de ces brois prophétiques
Qui précédaient la mort des Paladins antiques.

O montagne d'azur ! ô pays adoré !
Rocs de la Frazona, cirque du Marboré,
Cascades qui tombez des neiges entraînées,
Sources, gaves, ruisseaux, torrents des Pyrénées ;

Monts gelés et fleuris, trône des deux saisons,
Dont le front est de glace et le pied de gazons !
C'est là qu'il faut s'asseoir, c'est là qu'il faut entendre
Les airs lointains d'un Cor mélancolique et tendre.

Souvent un voyageur, lorsque l'air est sans bruit,
De cette voix d'airain fait retentir la nuit ;
A ses chants cadencés autour de lui se mêle
L'harmonieux gémissement du jeune agneau qui bêle.

Une biche attentive, au lieu de se cacher,
Se suspend immobile au sommet du rocher,
Et la cascade nuit, dans une chute lumineuse,
Son éternelle plainte aux chants de la romance.

Ames des Chevaliers, revenez-vous encore ?
Est-ce vous qui parlez avec la voix du cor ?
Roncevaux ! Roncevaux ! dans ta sombre vallée,
L'ombre du grand Roland n'est donc pas consociée !

II.

Tous les preux s'étaient morts, mais aucun n'avait fui,
Il reste seul debout, Olivier près de lui ;
L'Afrique sur le mont l'entoure et tremble encore,
" Roland, tu vas mourir, rends-toi, criait le More ;

" Tous tes pairs sont couchés dans les eaux des torrents," Il rugit comme un tigre, et dit : " Si je me rends
" Africain, ce sera lorsque les Pyrénées
" Sur l'onde avec leurs corps rouleront entraînées."

" Rend-toi donc, répond-il, ou meurs, car les voilà,"
Et du plus haut des monts un grand rocher roula.
Il bondit, il roula jusqu'au fond de l'abîme,
Et de ses pins, dans l'onde, il vint briser la cime.

" Mérei, cya Roland : tu m'as fait un chemin,"
Et jusqu'au pied des monts le roulant d'une main,
Sur le roc affermi comme un géant s'élança,
Et, prête à fuir, l'armée à ce seul pas balance.

III.

Tranquilles cependant, Charlemagne et ses preux
Descendaient la montagne et se parlaient entre eux
A l'horizon déjà, par leurs yeux signalés,
De Lutz et d'Argeles se montraient les vallées.

L'armée applaudissait. Le luth du troubadour,
S'accordait pour chanter les saules de l'Adour ;
Le vie français roulait dans la coupe étrangère
Le soldat, en riant, parlait à la bergère.

Roland regardait les monts ; tous passaient sans effroi,
Assis nonchalamment sur un noir palefroi
Qui marrait revêtu de housses violettes,
Turpin disait, tenant les saintes amulettes :

" Sire, on voit dans le ciel des nuages de feu ;
" Suspendez votre marche : il ne faut tenter Dieu.
" Par monseigneur saint Denis, certes ce sont des âmes
" Qui passent dans les airs sur ces vapeurs de flammes.

" Deux曹alrs ont rebul, puis deux autres encor,"
Ici l'on entendit le son lointain du Cor.—
L'Empereur étonné, se jetant en arrière,
Suspend du destrier la marche aventureuse.

" Entendez-vous ? dit-il—Oui, ce sont des pasteurs
" Rappelant les troupeaux épars sur les hauteurs,
" Répondit l'archevêque, ou la voix étouffée
" Du vain vert Oberon, qui parle avec sa Fée."

Et l'Empereur poursuit ; mais son front suocieux
Est plus sombre et plus noir que l'orage des cieux.
Il craint la trahison, et, tandis qu'il y songe,
Le cor éclate et meurt, renait et se prolonge.

" Malheur ! c'est mon neveu ! malheur car, si Roland
" Appelle à son secours, ce doit être en mourant.
" Arrêtez, chevaliers, repassons la montagne !
" Terrible encor sous nos pieds, sol trompeur de l'Espagne,

IV.

Sur le plus haut des monts s'arrêtant les chevaux ;
L'écume les blanchit ; sous leurs pieds, Roncevaux
Des feux mourants du jour à peine se colore,
A l'horizon lointain fuit l'étendard du More.

" Turpin, n'as-tu rien vu dans le fond du torrent ?
" J'y vois deux chevaliers : l'un mort, l'autre expirant.
" Tous deux sont écrasés sous une roche noire ;
" Le plus fort, dans sa main, élève un Cor d'ivoire,
" Son âme en s'exhalant nous appela deux fois."

Ideu ! que le son du Cor est triste au fond des bois !

Yesterday the Coherer
— to-day a Cossor.

It is a far cry to that memorable December's day nearly 25 years ago when the first wireless signals ever sent across the Atlantic were received on a Coherer at Signal Hill, near St. John's, in Newfoundland.

Experimenters in those days had no thermionic valves to help them. Instead, we know that their apparatus was so delicate and easily put out of adjustment that reception was often more a matter of good luck than judgment. And instead of an aerial anchored to a huge kite swaying in the breezes five hundred feet above the ground, the modern wireless enthusiast can often receive strong signals from powerful land stations several thousand miles distant on a mere 20 feet of wire running round the picture moulding.

For long-distance work to-day there is one Valve universally recognised as being developed to a high pitch of perfection for this specific purpose—the Cossor P2.

To distinguish it from other Cossor Valves it has a red top. If your Set uses high-frequency amplification (practically all Receivers with more than one Valve do), then be sure that the one on the extreme left is a Cossor P2—no other Valve can give you such results. Cossor efficiency (whether P1 or P2) is due to its unique construction (patented throughout the world), for its hood-shaped Anode traps practically the whole of the electron stream. Incidentally this improved design has many other advantages. For instance, its curved filament—arched for strength like an old bridge—is self-supporting and cannot sag.

Therefore the normal life of any Cossor is considerably greater than any valve with a long and slender straight filament.

It is the careful contemplation of such facts that has lifted the Cossor so high in the opinion of wireless enthusiasts to-day.

"A fascinating piece of apparatus"

THAT is the description given to a "Cosmos" Radiophone by a NOTTINGHAM user, from whose testimonial we give extracts as follows:—

JOHN W. SHIPSIDE,
79, Haydn Road,
NOTTINGHAM.
April 27th, 1924.

"Some time ago you were good enough to send me an attachment for fitting to the detector valve of my wireless set to enable me to pick up Aberdeen. I must apologise for not writing before, but I am afraid I must partly blame your goodness for manufacturing such a fascinating piece of apparatus as the 'Cosmos' Radiophone. It has far exceeded my expectations with regard to performance. I had a Loud Speaker attachment for 'Columbia Graphonola' and I can truthfully say that, with the set nicely tuned, we get absolutely pure music and speech. . . . If at any time you have an enquiry from Nottingham from anyone interested in one of your sets, I shall be extremely pleased to give such an one an opportunity of hearing the set I have here. I have already proved to quite a number of friends that a wireless concert is worth listening to if the set is a 'Cosmos' Radiophone. . . ."

This Spanner of the Atlantic plumps for Ericsson Phones

... I think it will greatly interest you to know the wonderful results obtained by using your 4,000 ohms 'phones (2 pairs used in series). Mr. Coombes and myself were the only amateurs in Southampton (as far as can be gathered) that got replies, speech, music, etc., from America (during recent tests). In reply to inquiries locally, re 'phones used, I speak very highly of your 'phones, and am recommending them to all amateurs working. For long and short distance working, their efficiency and superiority CANNOT be equalled. . . .

T. H. Cutler,
24, Floating Bridge Road,
Southampton.

MR. CUTLER has been a serious experimenter since 1909 (the year the Admiralty adopted Ericsson Telephones as standard). His opinion, therefore, of Ericsson Telephones carries weight.

Let his experience guide you. After all, the telephones are the heart of the set, however good. Let your next pair be Ericsson's—whether searching the Transatlantic ether, or listening to British broadcast. Users tell us that Ericsson 'Phones sing when other makes are dumb.

But be sure they are Ericsson's BRITISH 'Phones—not "Continental" imitations. Look for "Ericsson, Beeston, Notts," on each earpiece.

"AN ETHOPHONE V. in the home means music at will without worry." That is the truth about the Ethophone V., and the title of a new booklet about it, two pages from which are reproduced above. In the left-hand page, the possibilities of the Portable Model are strikingly suggested.

The Ethophone V. is capable of receiving broadcast anywhere in the country. It is a Tuner, Receiver and Power Amplifier combined, employing four valves, which may be "bright" or "dull-emitter." It is made in several forms, from a serviceable cabinet to a luxurious mahogany desk, resembling a lady's escritoire.

But, at this season, most interest will be taken in the Portable Model. As shown above, the Ethophone V. in this form is built in a morocco leather case. Just a few feet of wire slung from a tree-branch can be your aerial and the instrument will enable you to listen to broadcast anywhere. The various models of the Ethophone V. are fully described in the booklet mentioned above which is yours for the asking. Fill in and post the coupon now.

Fifteen years' actual manufacturing experience combined with exhaustive technical research work enables us to produce the famous "Matched Tone" Headphones so immeasurably superior to their more commonplace brethren. What is "Matched Tone"? Theoretically simple, this feature is of greatest value as a means to faultless reception. Both earpieces are subjected to strenuous tests to ensure the perfect harmony of one with the other and all possibility of blurring caused by signals in conflicting keys is entirely absent. Obviously, the "Matched Tone" process must mean perfect tone synchronisation and a consequent increase in volume together with mellifluous purity. Get Brandes from your Dealer.

Can the H.T. Battery be abolished?

—read about this intriguing problem in the most fascinating issue of Modern Wireless yet published.

THE June issue of Modern Wireless, on sale from Saturday, May 31st, is unquestionably the most interesting number yet produced.

Five Star Features

1. A brilliant article on the whole question of the possibility of eliminating the high-tension battery in radio receivers, by John Scott-Taggart, F.Inst.P., A.M.I.E.E. This article deals in a dispassionate manner with the whole subject, pointing out what has been achieved in the past, exactly what can be done to-day, and the trend of future development. This article is full of innumerable circuits and contains that critical and analytical element which every enthusiast wants whenever special interest is focussed on some development. The author is probably the best known authority on valves in the country, and his views have been awaited with great interest by the 100,000 readers of Modern Wireless.
2. A fascinating article on the construction of a two-valve high-tensionless receiver using double-grid valves and giving loud-speaker results. Provision is also made to enable the Set to be used with ordinary valves and the usual H.T. battery.

3. At the last moment it has been possible to include in this issue of Modern Wireless a circuit devised by Mr. A. D. Cowper, M.Sc., for using an ordinary valve for high-tensionless reception. Mr. Cowper has gone one better than any other investigator in using the sort of valve that everyone already has, and the secret is fully disclosed in this issue.

4. Another highly important article is one by the inventor of the ST. 100 circuit, John Scott-Taggart, F.Inst.P., A.M.I.E.E., who describes the most effective method of adding a stage of high-frequency amplification in front of the ST.100 so that three valves are used. This circuit gives all the volume obtainable with the ST.100, but doubles its range.

The fullest constructional details are given for making a highly-effective Set, using this circuit.

5. A most interesting article by Mr. Percy W. Harris on a five-valve long range receiver on which all the B.B.C. stations may be obtained on a loud-speaker. The set is undoubtedly an ideal one for very long ranges, and the operation of it is simple in the extreme, although two stages of high-frequency amplification are employed.

An excellent Issue to start with — order now.

The articles on high-tensionless receivers are not only of interest to the technically trained, but will prove of vital value to all listeners, whether they derive pleasure from the programmes, or also from the experimental side of wireless. Those who desire to try the new circuit will be able to convert their existing sets readily. Whether you propose constructing a set new or not, the remarkable selection given in this issue of Modern Wireless makes it desirable that in any case you should buy the issue at once and keep it for reference.

They say it's the Best

"The local wireless dealer arranged some demonstrations of your 'Sparta' Loud Speaker. . . . I was so struck with the excellence of the reproduction that I persuaded him to lend me the instrument over the week end for private experiment. These experiments and tests I have now carried out, and . . . the claims of your advertisements are not exaggerated. There is a difference—and quite a considerable one. . . . In comparison with my standard instrument I find that there is practically no difference on the higher notes, but a very great improvement on the reproduction of the low notes and a fuller and richer rendering of harmonics. . . . I may say that I had previously heard very good reports of the 'Sparta' from the technical staff of 'Amateur Wireless,' to which I am a constant contributor. (Signed) E. H. R."

"I received the loud speaker. . . . I must say I am very pleased with the results. Please put three more on order and deliver one at your earliest. (Signed) W.R."

"For various reasons I have not been able to get my loud speaker into commission until this week, but I started it up on Thursday and am extremely pleased with it. I think the tone is quite the best of any loud speaker that I have heard. (Signed) P.W.P."

"The 'Sparta' Loud Speaker is supreme in tone, workmanship and price, and will make a name for itself before it has been on the market long. Its excellence is marked. From a satisfied user. Wishing you every success. (Signed) J.A.G."

"I have recently been experimenting with your loud speaker, type H.H.A. 4,000 ohms, and have obtained some very interesting results. . . . Manchester comes in quite well on one crystal and L.F. amp. One detector valve, I.H.F. and I.L.F. make the signals far too strong for an average sized room, and Birmingham and Aberdeen are very good. These experiments have been carried out on 'Straight circuits' tuned anode, and I have found no distortion whatever. (Signed) F.H.S."

"Still another thing is the sensitivity of your Loud Speaker, to-night I picked up on it Brussels, which I think is nothing short of wonderful."

"The finish, too, is everything anyone could wish for. I think 'THE INCOMPARABLE' would be a more fitting name for it instead of 'Sparta.'" (Signed) F.S.

"I wish to heartily compliment you on your production, the 'Sparta' Loud Speaker. I purchased one from your local stockists, some little time ago, and can only say that, in my opinion, it is the best. Used on a homemade set, without power valve, and on sixty volts H.T., results are excellent. At the price, it is in a class quite by itself." (Signed) C.T.R.

"With regard to the performance of the loud speaker, this is quite exceptional. In comparison with three of the best known varieties on the market, one of which costs more than twice as much, the 'Fuller' gives a greater degree of amplification, but what is far more important, the reproduction is immeasurably better in tone.

"By using the tone control adjustment a more faithful rendering of speech or music than I have yet heard produced by mechanical means can be obtained.

"It is noticeable that although results are exceptionally good, especially as regards volume with only one stage of low frequency amplification, there is a total lack of distortion with the increased volume of sound obtained from a power amplifier.

"An unusual feature also of this loud speaker is that the voice or music being reproduced is not accompanied, as is often the case, by an undercurrent of unwanted sound. Even when mal-adjustment of the receiving apparatus produced the usual rushing sound, accompanied by squeals indicative of the mis-use of reaction, the loud speaker appeared to act as a filter, and the reproduction did not suffer appreciably, though with telephones the sound was unbearable.

"To sum up, I think the 'Fuller' Loud Speaker, given suitable publicity, has an assured future owing to its exceptional merits.

"It has impressed me so much that I should like to keep the one sent me for my own use, and would be grateful if you would ask Fullers to invoice it to me accordingly. (Signed) H.C.A.K."

"During a visit to England not long ago, your 'Sparta' Loud Speaker was recommended to me as one of the best on the market." (Signed) K.B.

"Seeing your Advert, 'Worth Listening To,' I agree with you. I have tried several makes, but I cannot get one to equal yours."

"I am sending you a photo if you wish to use it. Your 'Sparta' is capable of giving the purest reproduction I have ever heard." (Signed) P.G.K.

"I purchased one of your Loud Speakers type H.H.A., in preference to five other well known makes. I have since every night received all the B.B.C. Stations on it. The set I have is a three-valve 1-1-1—the volume of sound and clarity of same is astonishing, and seeing that L.F. transformer is only a cheap one, I wonder what it would be with a good one.

"I must thank you for your kindness in sending the Speaker down on approval, and am pleased to tell you that it beat an _____ and a _____ speaker, for quality and natural rendering." (Signed) S.M.
