Broadcasting in Education.

By The Rt. Hon. H. A. L. FISHER
(Formerly President of the Board of Education).

I THINK that there is a definite and useful future for broadcasting in the scheme of national education. One of the difficulties which every country now experiences is the dearth of teachers, and more particularly of good teachers. How many complaints do we not hear of large classes! In how many of the smaller elementary schools are not the children condemned for the whole period of their school lives to listen to the voice of one, two, or three teachers often very sparsely equipped! How many children leave school without having their intellectual interests aroused at all! The difficulty of conveying an adequate education to boys and girls during the last two years of their elementary school life, especially in the villages, is notorious. It is a common complaint that at this stage school children appear to stand still.

Now the broadcast talks and lectures can never replace the living presence of the teacher. The main instrument of teaching must always be the immediate contact between the teacher and the taught, but broadcasting may usefully supplement the teacher by bringing variety and freshness into the work of the school. Through lectures and conversation so transmitted the children in our schools can come into relation with new minds and have opened out to them new prospects. Also there is something exciting itself in this new and mysterious mechanism for spreading the human voice which must intrigue curiosity. As between a broadcast lesson and a lesson directly given by a teacher in front of his class there is no real comparison. Other things being equal, the present teacher will always be more effective than the wireless voice transmitted by mechanism.

Knowing his audience and having experience of their little failings and limitations, the skilful teacher adjusts his lesson to the exact capacity of his class, sharpening his voice against the roving eyes and listless demeanour of the indolent, and making use of all the tricks of the oratorical trade to keep and sustain the attention of his audience. The ablest teacher whose voice is communicated by broadcasting has not these advantages; but on the other hand he possesses the great and arresting recommendation of novelty. The mere fact that he is not the ordinary school teacher, that he is a man singled out for this purpose as being specially skilled and distinguished, will certainly supply an additional stimulus to the audience to attend to what he is saying, and to make the best of it. A good broadcast lesson twice a week carefully fitted into the curriculum would be a great boon to our elementary schools, and not to the elementary schools only, though it is here that the need of this kind of stimulating novelty and widening of view will be most felt. All our schools are the better for occasional external lectures, and here is the mechanism cheap and convenient for providing lectures and lessons on a gigantic scale for all who wish to make use of it.

MR. H. A. L. FISHER.

It is not to be expected that everything will be perfect from the start. I apprehend that the art of broadcasting a lecture to an adult audience is none too easy, and that many faults of delivery or mechanism will need correction before their "educational transmissions" become as effective as they can be made. I should apprehend, however, though I have no knowledge of the technicalities, that the reception of the transmissions will be progressively improved, and that before very

"2LO" Calls to the Hebrides.

Listening in Lonely Islands. By George Blake.

Mr. George Blake is the novelist and dramatist, whose play, "The Mother," was broadcast recently.

MR. GEORGE BLAKE.

POETS and dreamers have always found in the very name of the Hebrides a curiously potent source of inspiration. Islands always appeal thus to the sensitive imagination; remote islands are irresistibly attractive. And those Hebrides that lie in the Atlantic off the west coast of Scotland are, in all truth, almost as remote from the main streams of industrial civilization as Tahiti. On the map, it seems but a step from the crowded streets of Glasgow to the shores of Skye. In fact, the journey is as full of changes and surprises as that from London to Paris.

Two conditions are responsible for this simple fact. The Hebrides are so infertile as to be unable to sustain a large and busy population. The Hebrideans are of a different race from that which populates the mainland. Actually they use in daily speech a different language—Gaelic; and their minds and tastes and outlook are different, altogether different. It would be the death of a Cockney to have to live—as I have lived—through the dreariness of a Hebridean winter.

Far from the Madding Crowd.

You have to imagine a virtually complete separation from the amusements and distractions of the city. There is no theatre—no picture-house—no trams, no trains, no traffic. Conversation, on a severely limited range of topics, is the only ordinary relaxation. It may be you will find on the larger islands that the gramophone has forced its way into the more prosperous households—but there are very few prosperous households. My island boasted no gramophone whatsoever. We were lucky if the morning newspaper from Glasgow reached us at six in the evening. Three days in the week, on the average, it failed to reach us, so frequent were the storms over the Atlantic.

"Modern Improvements."

Those island communities, therefore, being thus cut off from what we are pleased to call "modern improvements," are by a natural mental process inclined to be suspicious of such "improvements." I overheard an old man say of a self-binding reaping machine—the first he had ever beheld: "It's hellish!" This was not blasphemy. Old Calum meant what he said—that the machine was uncanny, the work of the devil.

And I have also seen, in a remote Highland village, awed groups of simple people discussing, at a safe distance, an aeroplane that had been forced to land in these wild parts. "It's no' canny," they said.

Competing with the Ocean.

These, of course, were the older people of the Highlands. The younger folks of to-day are hardly so ingenuous. These younger people, it is true, might have inherited the racial conservatism—but a certain political accident intervened to break the Hebridean spell. From "the lone sheiling on the misty island" the young men were called to war and made the acquaintance of a busier world of men than they had ever dreamed of. They took back with them to the islands a sprightlier philosophy of life than the islands had known before. And now—to come to the point—the gulf between city and island has been finally bridged, as newspaper and gramophone could never bridge it, by the wonder of wireless. Wordsworth wrote of

"... the Cuckoo-bird,
Breaking the silence of the seas
Among the farthest Hebrides."

Now it is the gay syncopation of the Savoy Orpheans which, relayed by Glasgow and Aberdeen, competes with the slow thunder of the ocean.

Ways and Means.

Let us not run away with the idea that these intimate wireless contacts with the life of the cities are to have an immediate effect on the inhabitants of every thatched dwelling on the Atlantic seaboard. I am no technician, but I fancy that a crystal set is unlikely to prove effective so far from the Scottish stations; and when you live in a Hebridean cottage, fighting for the bare means of subsistence against a churlish sea and a barren soil, you do not speculate in four-valve sets. No doubt, however, there are ways and means, even in the Hebrides, of acquiring cheaply the apparatus of reception from "5SC" and "2BD." And it is quite certain that the miracle of wireless is one whose benefits every island-exile of the new generation will hasten to enjoy.

A Romance of Science.

Here, then, is a romance of science. There are those who will deplore the fact that simple and unsophisticated people are now being touched daily by the eddies of our city life. That is a sentimentality I do not find myself sharing fully. That simple life of the Hebrides is pretty enough when viewed from the angle of him the Americans call the Tired Business Man. It is not so pretty at close quarters. It has its sombre side, even its ugly side. No sort of life stands in greater need of brightening. The Keltic Twilight is very well for the poet and suits him in certain moods. For those who have to live in its shadow always, there could be nothing more welcome and nothing more helpful than that it should be pierced by the shafts of the sunlight of the great world's gaiety.

Pomp for the Fishermen.

Yes, a romance! A cultured voice from London telling the world's news even to those cold and remote corners of the kingdom! A London girl singing to her sisters in the Outer Isles! The nightingale of Surrey, sending its thrilling song to drear islands where no nightingale has ever nested! The pomp of a Guildhall ceremony, and the sonorous voice of the Toast-Master and the trumpets ringing in the ears of a crofter-fisherman!

In Touch with the World at Last.

It must all sound very strange to these islanders. Some of it they will not quite understand. The affable John Henry can hardly expect that his dialect and idioms are understood by a people to whom English is a foreign tongue. Perhaps they laugh sometimes at the strangeness of it all—thinking London a queer, daft sort of place. But they will soon cease to laugh. Listening will become a part of their lives, and a useful and enjoyable part; they will be in touch with the world at last. And who will argue that the sons of men are not the better for those glimpses of wider horizons and those friendly, human contacts that broadcasting offers to them that dwell in lonely places?

In China citizens are forbidden to purchase or use wireless sets.

Broadcasting in Education.

long complaints of inaudible lectures will be seldom heard.

Meanwhile, the reports which have reached me of the experiments which have been made so far seem thoroughly encouraging. Sir H. Walford Davies, for instance, gave a lecture on Music last April, which was listened to with great appreciation by ten thousand children, mostly from elementary schools. A report received from twenty-seven schools of a lecture on Napoleon by Dr. G. P. Gooch was equally satisfactory. I hear that criticism of the lecture was, in every case, highly appreciative, and it was stated that the scholars followed every word with rapt attention.

I should like in particular to draw attention to the significance for the future of education in this country by these two instances. Sir H. Walford Davies and Dr. Gooch are, in their several lines, the one a musician, the other a historian, among the dozen most distinguished authorities in the country. Here is a mechanism which enables these eminent men to teach, at the cost of only one hour's exertion to themselves, ten thousand, twenty thousand, a hundred thousand elementary school children at a time, and that in such a manner as to provoke the utmost enthusiasm and interest.

The influence which the new art has it within its power to acquire imposes a corresponding responsibility. To inflict dull trash upon a million ears would be an insolent addition to the tedium which is already the common lot. It is not enough that broadcast lessons should be average. They should be excellent, good enough in every case to make up for the loss of the personal agency of the present teacher.

I have spoken of schools and school children, but the educational influence of broadcasting will not, of course, be limited to the classroom. It will be all-pervasive, but whether a blessing or a bore will depend upon the quality of the mind and nature selected for transmission. In any case, it is obvious that this astonishing mechanical invention will present to educationalists a great opportunity. It looks very much as if it would seriously contribute to the solution of one of the great universal problems of an industrial democracy: how to discover means of giving to millions of children and young persons necessarily dependent for their ordinary education on the help of un-specialized teachers, many of them untrained or only partially trained, a cheap and ready access to the best instruction in the country.

I have a great belief in the latent capacities of our race. What most of us need is a fair field of opportunity. In spite of all our schools and colleges, there is a vast amount of suspended intellectual animation in this country. But here is a new instrument for levelling up the educational opportunities open to our people. A poor, able young workman sitting in a village institute can, at the moderate expense of a crystal set, listen to the voice of one of the giants of science or literature. He cannot, indeed, question or challenge; but he can hear the authentic voice of the great man and derive direction and stimulus from him which may be of the greatest value to his development. A circulating library of spoken instruction given by the great teachers of the country would be a kind of popular university, open to persons of both sexes, of every age, and perhaps not least acceptable to the old and infirm.

Wireless Insurance.

Risks it is Unwise to Ignore.

EIGHTEEN months' experience of wireless insurance leads me to refer to this subject. The opinion of an individual on any matter is only of value in proportion to the weight of evidence behind that opinion.

The present efficiency of radio apparatus is the culmination of combined experiments arising from the brains of radio investigators, and he who would lock himself up in his own studio and be content with his own limited experience, ignoring that of the outside world, would make little progress.

Ruined Aerials.

So it is with insurance. An individual cannot judge from his own limited views how great or small are the risks he runs in any particular event. Insurance companies alone can produce that volume of evidence or statistics which can be accepted as proof. An occasional news report or the sight of a fire-engine racing along is frequently the only reminder which many have of the risk of fire even at home.

The first policy specially drawn up to cover wireless risks was issued in October, 1922. The bulk of the claims made since then under wireless policies have been caused by breakdown of aerials and masts owing to gales and storm, and in quite a number of cases these have caused damage to property in the vicinity. Lightning has not caused much trouble, but the fact remains that there are many cases on record where aerials, property, and even wireless sets have been damaged. One of our Daily picture papers recently contained a photo of a set, completely wrecked by lightning.

Sudden Trouble.

Naturally, most operators shut down on the approach of a storm; but the presence of lightning is sometimes so sudden and unexpected that the apparatus is actually in circuit with the aerial at the time of the flash. Omission to switch over or earth the aerial is more common than one would expect. The most inexplicable case was where, in spite of the apparatus being out of circuit and the lead-in properly earthed at the time, lightning dislocated the whole set.

Experience shows that accumulators want watching. Naturally, the insurance does not cover damage which may be done by allowing acid to bubble over during charging, or by using an accumulator which leaks; but there are accidental circumstances under which accumulators have been the cause of much damage.

Theft is not unknown. Unauthorized persons, having obtained admittance to a house, have taken valuable parts.

Fair-Minded Enthusiasts.

Malicious damage done by the cutting of wires has been reported.

Aerial masts on buildings overlooking public thoroughfares and wires crossing public thoroughfares, may easily cause considerable trouble if they are dislodged and fall into the street.

It is not every claim which is lodged which can be admitted. An inconsiderate zealot will occasionally ask for a new valve to replace one which has been burnt out through his own fault; but my experience is that the wireless enthusiast is very fair-minded, and knows how to interpret his policy conditions aright.

It is a mistake to exaggerate risks—it is unwise to ignore them. The value of an insurance policy is best realized when the claim arises; but, meanwhile, it is just as well not to place too much reliance on your own carefulness.

Gossip About Broadcasting.

Ibsen's "Emperor and Galilean."

THE programme at the Glasgow Station on Friday, July 18th, includes Ibsen's Emperor and Galilean. This will be the first performance in Britain and will be produced by the translator, Isabelle M. Pagan.

This great drama, dealing with the life of Julian, the Roman Emperor known as "The Apostate," has made stage managers—even those of them who were attracted by the power and beauty of the setting and the character drawing—shrink from the enterprise of staging it. Extracts have been seen in Norway, and on rare occasions elsewhere on the Continent, but none of it has previously been produced in English. As in the case of Peer Gynt, its predecessor, it falls to enterprising amateurs in Edinburgh—chiefly students at the University and College of Art—to be pioneers in this play as far as the British Isles are concerned.

A Great Drama.

Suitable extracts from the dialogue, showing glimpses of Julian's life as a courtier in Constantinople, a student in Athens, an enquirer into psychical research at Ephesus, and a successful general in Gaul, will be broadcast.

It is a play giving much scope for decorative production, for lovely dance and pageantry, but the extracts broadcast will be suitably chosen from various talks between Julian and his friends, teachers and fellow-students, and with his ambitious young wife. Always, whoever the speakers may be, the subject is worth discussion; generally circling around life itself, and how to make the best and most of it.

The music introduced, including a wild Bacchanalian dance for the merry-making of the students in Athens, and another more dreamy and hypnotic in effect, used to create the requisite atmosphere before what would now be called the "materializing séance" at Ephesus, has been specially composed by Mrs. Frank Baily.

The Prince to Broadcast Again.

The International Advertising Convention to be held at Wembley from July 13th to July 17th will be declared open by the Prince of Wales about 10.50 a.m. on July 14th. We shall be broadcasting the speech of the Prince and Mr. Kellogg, the United States Ambassador, as well as the chairman's address, which will be delivered by Lord Burnham.

Important Agricultural Talks.

We have arranged with the Ministry of Agriculture to broadcast one general talk on agricultural matters each month at 10 p.m. This will be delivered by some distinguished authority. A more specialized talk once a fortnight will be given earlier in the evening. This is particularly intended for farmers, but we hope, too, that it will prove of interest to allotment-holders and to the general public. We hope to give further particulars of this scheme in the next issue.

An English Composer.

An hour of London's programme on July 14th will deal with the works of Mr. Benjamin J. Dale, a young English composer, who was to have taken part in a programme of his works in April last, but was unable to do so owing to his absence from England on account of ill-health. Mr. Raymond Jeremy who will take part in this programme is considered to be in the first rank of viola players. The music will be representative of some of the composer's best work, and the phantasy for viola and pianoforte which will be performed has seldom been given in public.

"La Bohème."

After broadcasting the speech of Lord Balfour at the Kelvin Centenary Dinner at the Connaught Rooms on July 11th we shall be broadcasting the last act of La Bohème produced by the British National Opera Company at His Majesty's Theatre.

A Guessing Night.

Bournemouth is to have its own Guessing Night on July 23rd. In the evening both local and national artists will sing well-known songs and the orchestra will play popular musical items. Listeners will be invited to guess the names of the artists, the songs, the music and the composers comprising the programme. Three prizes will be awarded for the three most accurate entries, and a week will be given to listeners to send in their efforts, the closing date being July 30th.

An International Evening.

Bournemouth will also have an interesting programme on Wednesday, July 30th, consisting as it will of international music. Songs of America, France, Russia, Germany, Italy, Spain, Belgium and Scandinavia will be given, and at the conclusion of each nation's contribution to the programme the orchestra will play the National Anthem of the nation.

The Pilgrims' Dinner.

On July 21st, about 9.15 p.m., at the Hotel Victoria, the Pilgrims' Dinner to honour Mr. Hughes, Secretary of State of the United States of America, will be held. Speeches will be given by the Chairman, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and by Mr. Hughes.

An Old-Time Music-Hall Programme.

Lately, much interest has been shown in the music-hall songs of long ago, and listeners will be interested to know that on July 31st, from 9 to 10 p.m., an old-style music-hall programme will be broadcast from London. There will even be the customary interval for refreshments!

The chairman will be Mr. Willie Rouse, who will call the names of the artists and songs, and the artists will include such popular veterans as Mr. Arthur Roberts, Mr. Leo Dryden, Mr. Jake Friedman, Mr. Charlie Lee, Mr. Frank Leo, Miss Lily Burnand, and Miss Sable Fern. Mr. Charles Coborn will sing some of his old songs, including "Two Lovely Black Eyes," and "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo."

Miss Ray Wallace will give impressions of Miss Vestal Tilley and Miss Marie Lloyd. Mr. Harry Thomas, the well-known clown, will give reminiscences of his father, "The Great Little Thomas," of the Mohawk and Moore and Burgess Minstrels.

WIRELESS waves travel at a speed of 165,000 miles a second, as compared with the rate of travel of light which is 186,000 miles a second. A signal transmitted from New York was re-broadcast from Warsaw and received again in New York after an interval of 0.054 of a second had elapsed.

Liszt, the Friend of Genius.

Milestones in his Career, by R. D. S. McMillan.

FRANZ LISZT.

TO generalize concerning Liszt—that is to say, concerning the man himself—is rather difficult, for there are so many standpoints from which one might regard him. On the one hand, we have the kindness of his nature, amounting almost to nobleness, and we know also that he was absolutely unselfish in his quest for musical fame. "You may be sure," he once wrote to Wagner, "that I have no vanity concerning my works. Were I in the whole of my life to produce nothing good or beautiful, I should none the less feel a deep and eternal joy in appreciating what I recognize and admire as beautiful and great in others."

On the other hand, we know that, like many men of genius, he had rather an ungovernable nature.

His Inclination Towards Religion.

Liszt was particularly enthusiastic over Wagner, to whom he extended much valuable moral as well as financial support; while once having heard some of the work of Grieg, the Norwegian composer, he wrote to the young man a letter of warm commendation, although he had never met him. Praise from Liszt was praise indeed, and the letter led to the Norwegian Government's granting its countryman a sum of money with which to complete his studies. This incident is typical of the unobtrusive manner in which Liszt did good.

Another trait in his nature was his inclination towards religion. From his earliest years the Church had attracted him, and if he had had his way—if his mother had not persuaded him otherwise—he would have dedicated his whole existence to this one end. Not until he had experienced many troubles of life was this early ambition realized: at the age of fifty-four (in 1865) he took orders and became a priest of the Roman Catholic Church.

But, while Liszt, the man, is a subject for endless speculation and always will be, there can be no division of opinion regarding Liszt, the musician. Both as pianist and composer, he raised himself to the very stars, and the judgment of time serves to strengthen his position as one of the most original musicians the world has known. He gave to posterity a new medium of musical expression—the symphonic poem—and in this particularity of his art he wedded the most beautiful thoughts to the most divine melodies.

His First Public Performance.

Like Mozart, Franz Liszt was a pianist of note before he was in his teens. Born in Hungary in 1811, he made his first public appearance when he was nine, and at the age of twelve he took Paris by storm. In this same year—1823—he played before Beethoven, who was so overcome that he embraced the child. It was about this time, too, that the management of the Opéra in Paris commissioned him to compose a work for them—and he a boy of twelve! In 1824 he played before King George IV, in London: a year later he appeared at Manchester.

With his mother, Franz decided to make Paris his home, and here he experienced his first romance, falling in love with Caroline de Saint Crieg, the daughter of a French Minister of the Crown. The father stopped the boy-and-girl affair, but so serious had Liszt been that his mother had to use all her powers of persuasion to dissuade him from taking up a monastic life. He was then seventeen and his concert tours as well as his compositions for the piano had made him famous throughout Europe. Curiously enough, it was not until later years that he was to turn his thoughts to instrumental works, in which he was to reveal the measure of his greatness; indeed, not until 1850, when he was thirty-nine, did he really begin to scale the heights of composition, and—as if he had suddenly "found himself"—within the eight succeeding years he poured forth masterpiece after masterpiece.

A Link with Wagner.

Some years before Liszt had met the Countess d'Agoult, better remembered under her pen-name of "Daniel Stern." The Countess had been married to a man nearly twice her age. She fell in love with Liszt and persuaded him to run away with her. Their daughter, Cosima, became Wagner's second wife, and thus was forged a matrimonial link between two of the greatest musicians of all time.

The period of his friendship with the Countess he had found most unsettling, and his frequent tours had left him little time for composition. The coming of the year 1847 marked a change, for then it was he met the Princess Carolyne Sayn-Wittgenstein. The Princess was married and separated from her husband, but there is no doubt that if she could have had the union annulled, she and Liszt would have married.

Inspired by Beauty.

Although this consummation was not to be achieved, Liszt was, fortunately for the world, to come under her influence at Weimar, whither he went to live in 1848 and where the Princess and her daughter also later took up residence. In 1850 he completed "Mazeppa," perhaps the greatest of his symphonic poems, the whole series of twelve of which he dedicated to the Princess. "Mazeppa," which is founded on Victor Hugo's well-known poem of the same name, is remarkable, among many notable qualities, for the manner in which Liszt conveys the suggestion of a galloping horse.

It will be agreed that the most popular symphonic poem is "Les Préludes," composed four years later—in 1854. This year was notable also for his "Faust" symphony. The other great symphony of his—"Dante"—he wrote in 1855. His symphonic poem, "Hungaria," and the Hungarian Rhapsodies were his tribute to his native country.

From 1848 to 1861 Liszt and the Princess lived in Weimar, during which time the little town rose to such heights of fame as recalled the days of Goethe and Schiller. In 1861 the Princess obtained Papal consent to the dissolution of her marriage, but at the last moment, when the church was actually prepared for her wedding to Liszt, some influence was brought to bear which resulted in the rescinding of the order. At this stage Liszt's thoughts turned with renewed earnestness towards the Church, and a few years later—in 1865—he assumed minor orders and became an abbé, later submitting to the tonsure. Thenceforward his compositions were mainly of a sacred character—for instance, the oratorio "Christus."

One of the pictures we have of these later years is Pope Pius IX, visiting Liszt and listening with rapt attention to the master's music. In 1886, in his seventy-fifth year, Liszt passed from the world's stage.

A Pioneer Company.

Birmingham's Successful Venture.

THE formation of the Birmingham Station Repertory Company was a milestone in the history of broadcast music. Before this project was carried out, Birmingham, like the other B.B.C. stations at that time, used to rely upon outside artists for the musical portion of its programmes. This was a definite handicap on performances calling for many rehearsals. However, it was suggested that a station repertory company for the performance of operas and other concerted music might be formed, and Mr. Joseph Lewis undertook the work. To-day it is undoubtedly one of the main features of "5IT'S" programmes.

Mountains of Letters.

A broadcast announcement that voices for choir work were required, together with a press advertisement for soloists, brought in a surprising response, and "5IT'S" staff had a particularly busy time in coping with the applications. Mountains of letters, endless telephone rings, and a stream of personal calls demonstrated that Birmingham and district was interested in the new idea. Every applicant had to be given an audition, but eventually the final selections were made, and two choirs, one large and one small, were formed. The soloists were selected by a process of elimination, according to qualifications and experience.

Special "Feature" Programmes.

As soon as the company was collected, the raw material had to undergo countless rehearsals. The difficulty of working these into a routine broadcasting day is not perhaps immediately apparent to the outsider, but in spite of various trials, among which was paramount the removal of "5IT" from Witton to the new premises in the centre of the city, the first performance, on August 22nd, 1923, was given without a hitch. This was Gounod's Faust, and brought in a host of congratulations. Evidently Birmingham approved the new notion. Since that date a number of complete operas have been given from the studio, including Tannhäuser, Il Trovatore, The Magic Flute, and, in fact, most of the more popular operas of to-day. Special "feature programmes" (such as "Memories of the Past," "Plantation Melodies," etc.) are also now undertaken by the repertory company.

The value of such a company is obvious. Co-operation between company and conductor is much more satisfactorily obtained where each recognizes the enthusiasm and loyalty of the other, and where a common ambition for the popularity of the station is the mainspring of endeavour. Another factor of importance is that the singers in such a company are receiving excellent training for the requirements of broadcasting, and by practical experience are learning to avoid microphone faults.

Sauce for Enthusiasm.

A glance at the output of the average choral society—some three or four concerts per season—shows that only exceptionally hard work could have produced such results as those obtained during the last six months by the Birmingham people, who number less than sixty in all. That their popularity is well established in their own area is proved by the recent reception given to the company when they gave a public performance in Birmingham Town Hall. Within two days of the preliminary announcement every seat in the hall was booked. Such encouragement is the best sauce for enthusiasm, and augurs good luck to the future efforts of the first repertory venture of the B.B.C.

Listeners' Letters.

[All letters to the Editor to be acknowledged must bear the name and address of the sender. Anonymous contributions are not considered.]

A Good Idea.

DEAR SIR,—There must be thousands of people, who would be glad to show their gratitude to the B.N.O.C. for the many hours of pleasure received by means of the broadcasting of opera. Every time I listen to a transmission of Opera, I put a sum of money aside, to be forwarded to the B.N.O.C. funds, at the end of the season. And if all listeners to the transmissions did this, it would result in a considerable sum and would be a practical way of showing the B.N.O.C. what we think of them.

Yours faithfully, ENA WESTLAKE.
Chesham Bois, Bucks.

Wireless and Watches.

DEAR SIR,—I have been interested in reading recently the statement made by a London firm that there are thousands of watches suffering from so-called broadcastitis. In other words magnetized by coming in contact with wireless listening sets. I really think it must be a joke. If not, I desire, as a practical watch-repairer for over fifty years, and also a listener for some time, to say that in all those years, I have only met with one real case of magnetism in a watch and that was before wireless saw the light. The writer states that before wireless came, 5 per cent. was the average, but now, 50 per cent. suffer from the trouble. I should like to have a look at some of them. I do not hesitate to say that it is all humbug, and wearers of their fifty-guinea watches have no need to be alarmed.

Yours faithfully, SAMUEL ISON.
Watford.

French Pronunciation.

DEAR SIR,—A passage in M. Stéphan's article on French pronunciation in The Radio Times can hardly fail to convey the impression that all systems of imitated pronunciation of French are ignominious failures, though in actual practice this is by no means the case.

No one pretends that English and French vowel sounds are strictly equivalent; nevertheless, it is possible to compile a system of phonetics, not difficult or complicated, which can be of the greatest practical use to students who are compelled to work without the help of a teacher.

It is not pretended that books giving the pronunciation phonetically will enable the student to speak French like a native of France. But neither can such a result be achieved even with the help of the best teacher, except in the case of young children. What is possible with a good system of phonetics is to acquire a satisfactory practical knowledge of French pronunciation enabling the learner actually to understand French people and to make himself understood.

It is unwise, therefore, to make so sweeping a condemnation of all systems of imitated pronunciation, some of which, at any rate, will enable people to learn French who have no opportunity of hearing it spoken or of receiving lessons. Are they to be told that they can never obtain from books some practical knowledge of French pronunciation? Surely, this is not the best way to promote the study of languages and to encourage beginners.

Yours faithfully, S. SECCOMBE.

The Seaside in the Home.

DEAR SIR,—The B.B.C. has already broadcast the nightingale and brought memories of the countryside to innumerable town dwellers. Why not broadcast the sounds of popular seaside resorts, so as to revive happy memories in those who, perhaps, cannot go to the sea?

Mile End. Yours truly, F.J.

PEOPLE IN THE PROGRAMMES

From Shop Assistant to M.P.

MISS MARGARET BONDFIELD.

UNDOUBTEDLY one of our finest women speakers is Miss Margaret Bondfield, M.P., who broadcast from London recently. Miss Bondfield is the first woman in history to be a member of the British Government, but as Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Labour few could be as well qualified as she is. When quite a young girl, Miss Bondfield was an assistant in an outfitter's shop, and later she became Assistant Secretary of the Shop Assistants' Union.

In 1899 Miss Bondfield was the only woman delegate at the Trade Union Congress at Plymouth when the historic resolution was moved which resulted in the formation of the Labour Party. Her public-spirited work has earned her countless friends, and she is affectionately known to thousands as "Our Maggie."

"The Welsh Nightingale."

A VOCALIST who is popular at London station is Miss Gladys Naish, who possesses a technique particularly suitable for broadcasting. A native of Cardiff, Miss Naish graduated at the University of Wales. Since she came to London a few years ago she has made rapid strides in her profession. Her first recital at Wigmore Hall was so successful that she was immediately engaged for the Queen's Hall promenade concerts.

Miss Naish has an exceptionally flexible voice, with a wide range reaching to F in alt, and she has earned the title of "The Welsh Nightingale."

Good Work for the Deaf.

MR. GEOFFREY E. DUVEEN.

A FEW days ago, Mr. Geoffrey E. Duveen broadcast an appeal on behalf of the Royal Ear Hospital from London Station. Mr. Duveen is a son of the late Mr. Henry J. Duveen, the well-known art expert, who brought together some of the most famous art collections in America.

In October last a sum of £25,000 was given by Mr. Geoffrey E. Duveen as the commencement of a new era of hope for the deaf. The gift was made by Mr. Duveen in memory of his father.

The Study of Otology.

IN order to attain a two-fold forward movement on behalf of the deaf, Mr. Duveen made his gift in two portions. To London University, he gave £10,000 for the establishment of a University Lectureship in Otology. It is hoped by this means to stimulate a new interest on the part of medical students in the study of the ear, and the discovery of new means to combat deafness.

The second part of the gift, a sum of £15,000, he allocated to the University College Hospital for the provision of the most complete and modern treatment of the deaf. At the present moment, negotiations are still taking place with the Royal Ear Hospital in Dean Street, Soho, regarding the best means of carrying out this proposal.

It is Mr. Duveen's intention to be satisfied with nothing less than an entirely new building, with all the modern facilities for surgery and practical research work by students of Otology.

The Catterall Quartette.

MR. ARTHUR CATTERALL.

THE famous Catterall Quartette, which broadcast recently from Manchester Station, has a high reputation among concert-goers. There are critics who set them up against the most celebrated Continental players; there are others who compare the finest Continental players with them!

Mr. Arthur Catterall is a brilliant violinist, and was at one time leader of the Queen's Hall Orchestra. He resigned to take up a Professorship at the Manchester Royal College of Music, and then got together his Quartette. He balances his artistic appreciation by a keen interest in Association football.

Mr. Johan S. Bridge, the second violin of the Quartette, is leader of the "2ZY" Orchestra.

Even a quartette as well-known as this, however, is not without its critics. One woman, who liked quantity, when asked by one of the members how she had enjoyed a performance, replied: "Oh, the Quartette is very nice, very nice indeed—but couldn't you make it bigger?"

Science and the Criminal.

A TALK of special interest was given from London on Friday, July 11th, by Dr. F. W. Crossley-Holland. The title was "Science and the Criminal"—a subject with which the speaker is well qualified to deal, as he is a barrister-at-law and a Bachelor of Science.

Dr. Crossley-Holland was for many years a research chemist and is a fellow of the Chemical Society of London. He has travelled a great deal, especially in Russia, and he is well known as a lecturer and author.

Many Prizes.

THE London Welsh Male Choir which will broadcast from London on the 13th July, was formed in 1901, under the conductorship of the late Mr. Merlin Morgan, well known as Musical Director to the Daly and Gaiety Theatres. It has been most successful in gaining prizes for choral singing, including first prize at the Semi-National Eisteddfod held at the Queen's Hall in 1906; second prize at the International Exhibition at Bristol, being beaten for first place by a very narrow margin, in 1914; and the first prize at the Semi-National Eisteddfod at Central Hall, Westminster, last year.

The choir has appeared at many other festivals and functions, and has also sung to the prisoners in the four largest prisons in London. It is normally eighty voices strong.

A Noted 'Cellist.

MISS BEATRICE EVELINE.

ONE of the earliest wireless favourites of the B.B.C. is Miss Beatrice Eveline, the 'cellist, who has played for it since the early days. She has a high place among English women instrumentalists, and has had a successful career since she began to learn the cello at the early age of seven. Miss Eveline has toured with Miss Carrie Tubb and Miss Margaret Cooper, and she was very popular in France and Malta with the Lena Ashwell Concert Party during the War.

La Liaison.

The following talk will be broadcast from the London Station on July 15th. It is printed here in French so that students may follow the speaker word for word.

LES consonnes finales d'un grand nombre de mots français ne se prononcent pas, comme par exemple, l'a du mot "un," l'e de "j'avais," le t de "il permit," l'r de "léger"; toutefois, lorsqu'elles sont suivies d'un mot commençant par une voyelle ou par un h muet, ces consonnes reprennent tout leur valeur et se prononcent avec le mot suivant, comme dans "un enfant," "j'avais un livre" "il permit à son fils de voyager," "un léger effort."

Cet enchaînement s'appelle en français une liaison. La connaissance de l'orthographe est indispensable à l'usage correct des liaisons qui, pour cette raison, donnent à la phrase de l'élégance et de la tenue. C'est pourquoi la liaison, qui est de règle dans la poésie et qui d'un usage courant dans la prose soutenue, dans la lecture et dans la langue oratoire, ne doit s'employer que rarement dans le langage usuel afin d'éviter l'affectation.

Toute liaison devrait avoir pour effet d'enchaîner d'adjoindre les sons d'une phrase, cependant une répétition trop fréquente du son "s" est désagréable à l'oreille, des phrases comme "nous les avons envoyés assez adroitement," nous vous avons avertis assez tôt" manquent d'harmonie, il vaut mieux réduire à deux le nombre des liaisons consécutives et dire, "nous les avons envoyés assez adroitement" nous vous avons avertis assez tôt.

La liaison n'a plus sa raison d'être si elle est faite gaucheement, c'est pourquoi les difficultés de son emploi doivent être surmontées de bonne heure par l'étudiant étranger qui n'est malheureusement que trop enclin soit à hésiter sur le mot suivant, laissant la consonne pour ainsi dire en suspens entre les deux mots, comme dans "nous (s) en (s) avons" soit à donner à celle-ci une importance exagérée, comme dans "nous sommes (s) allés." Il avait (t) été, qu'on doit prononcer sans effort "nous sommes allés." "Il avait été."

Parfois, une liaison faite mal à propos obscurcit le sens d'une phrase et il en résulte des calembours comme le suivant: "Il ne fera jamais une bon maria, il est trop homme de terre."

Il faut remarquer que certaines consonnes changent de valeur dans une liaison:

L's et l'r se changent en z, ex: les autres enfants, dix hommes.

Le d se change en t, ex: le grand ours, il prend un livre. Le g et le c muet de "respect," "aspect," se changent en k, ex: un sang impur, le respect humain;

Et devant "ans" et "heures" l'f de "neuf" se change en v, ex: neuf ans, neuf heures.

Enfin, le son nasal de "bon," "plein" et souvent aussi de quelques mots comme "certain," "ancien" se change en a et e, ex: un bon endroit, un bon à rien, en plein air, un certain élève.

Les liaisons sont obligatoires, même dans la conversation ordinaire, entre les mots étroitement liés par le sens, comme:

1. entre un article et un nom ou un adjectif, ex: les enfants, les heureux ménages.

2. entre un adjectif et un nom, ex: ces arbres, un excellent ami, et vice versa, entre un nom et son adjectif, bien qu'il y ait une tendance à lier les expressions au pluriel plus fréquemment que celles au singulier, ex: des efforts inutiles, un effort inutile, des objets imperceptibles, un objet imperceptible.

3. entre un adverbe et un adjectif, un verbe ou un autre adverbe, ex: trop avancé, ne rien avoir, très habilement présenté.

4. entre un pronom et un verbe ou un autre pronom, et vice versa, entre un verbe et son pronom dans les phrases interrogatives et impératives, ex: on a vu, allons-nous-en, comprend-il.

5. après une préposition, ex: en attendant, chez elle; exceptions "selon" et aussi "vers" et "envers" dans la majorité des cas, ex: selon/elle, vers/eux.

6. après le mot "dont," ex: le livre dont elle parle.

7. après le mot "quand," ex: quand il viendra; cependant exception faite de l'expression "quand" est-ce qui suit la règle générale; "quand" interrogatif est rarement lié, ex: quand/êtes vous venu, quand/aurez vous fini.

8. après "être" et "avoir" employés comme auxiliaires, ex: il est arrivé, elles ont attendu.

9. dans certaines expressions toutes faites, ex: mot à mot, pot-au-feu, pied-à-terre, tôt ou tard, petit à petit, d'un bout à l'autre.

Certaines consonnes finales ne peuvent être liées au mot suivant; ainsi—

1. l's de mots comme "paradis," "souris," "mépris," "refus" qui ont cet s au singulier, ex: un refus/absolu, un mépris/écrasant.

2. le c muet de "accroc," "banc," "tabac" ex: un accroc/irréparable, un banc/l'ombre.

3. l'f muet de "fusil," "gril," "persil," "outil," ex: un outil/util.

4. le z de "nez," et de "riz" ex: nez/à nez, du riz/au lait.

5. le d de "chaud," ex: le chaud/et le froid.

6. le t de "lit" et de "tort," ex: à tort/et à travers, un lit/en cuivre.

7. le t, le d, le h muets des terminaisons en rt, rd, nd, ex: il part/en courant, un regard/approvoisé, un aplomb/imperturbable.

8. les consonnes muettes à la fin des nom propres, ex: Jean/est arrivé, Paris/est une grande ville.

On ne fait pas de liaisons avec les nouns au singulier (Continued at foot of col. 1, page 128.)

B.T.H. Loud Speakers are made in three types as under:—

Form C1	£3 . 0 . 0
Form C2	£5 . 5 . 0
Form D (electro-dynamic type)		£12 . 10 . 0

The B.T.H. C.2 Loud Speaker, illustrated, is the most popular pattern for general use. It is fitted with a variable air-gap screw allowing of that minute adjustment which is necessary for undistorted reception. It is very attractive in appearance, having a polished "swan neck" horn, the flare of which is enamelled a pleasing brown colour. The cobalt steel permanent magnets of the telephone are really permanent, and are unaffected by changes of polarity in the outside connections.

We also make Crystal Sets, Valve-Crystal Sets, Valve Sets, Headphones, Amplifiers, Valves (including the new B5 Valve, 0.06 amp.), Tungar Battery Chargers, etc., etc.

"HUGH THE DROVER."

THIS opera is to have its first public performance on Monday evening, when the British National Opera Company are to give it at His Majesty's Theatre. The Second Act is to be broadcast from all Stations.

A couple of years ago I published in the Observer an account of a conversation with the composer about this work, and I reproduce here an extract from this:—

"What is the nature of the work?" was my first question.

"Well, to answer that, I must tell you something of its history," Dr. Vaughan Williams replied. "The thing began twelve years ago, when I first met Harold Child. I pressed him to write me a libretto that should be a sort of English parallel to Smetana's The Bartered Bride. I stipulated that it should hinge around a scene from Borrow's Zincala, which described a gypsy and a prize-fight, and I also wanted to introduce the Fowlmere May-day Song, which I had lately heard. Also I suggested (or between us we evolved the idea) that the form, situations, etc., should be conventionally operatic, as this was for both of us a first attempt at opera. (As a matter of fact, the libretto is not at all conventional, except superficially, as that would be impossible for Harold Child, but he did his best!)"

"I have heard the work spoken of as a 'Ballad opera.' Is that correct?"

"Well, it is and it isn't! I call it a 'ballad opera' because it is frankly made up of songs and ensembles, with recitative in between. I meant to use a lot of traditional tunes—as things turned out I have hardly used any."

"And when and where is this opera to be heard?"

"I've already waited ten years, and shall probably wait ten more."

Happily, the modest expectation of the last paragraph has been falsified.

I give below a brief synopsis of Act I, and a fuller synopsis of Act II, the latter designed to lie under the listener's eye, as the performance proceeds, and to acquaint him, to some extent, with what is proceeding on the stage.

ACT I.

(A Cotswold Village; About 1812.)

A fair is in progress. MARY, daughter of the CONSTABLE, is much distressed at the prospect of her marriage the next day (May-day) to JOHN, THE BUTCHER, whom she regards as a sort of domesticated brute; she longs for a "free life under heaven." Her AUNT JANE is cajoling her when HUGH, THE DROVER, appears and gradually fascinates her with his song of the joys of the road. These two are irresistibly drawn to one another.

Presently the SHOWMAN comes, announcing that John the Butcher will fight all comers for twenty pounds. Hugh accepts, but insists that they fight for the hand of Mary. John is knocked out, but he and the Constable contrive to denounce Hugh as a French spy. The crowd turns against Hugh, and he is taken off to be put in the stocks.

ACT II.

The Market Place at four o'clock on May-day morning. The Constable's house is on the right, the Turnkey's on the left, the Inn in the centre. The BALLAD SELLER (Tenor) is at times to be heard singing in the May-day, and sounds of revelry proceed from the Inn where JOHN (Baritone) and his friends are drinking the night away. HUGH (Tenor) is in the stocks, brooding over his fate and Mary's.

Presently the revellers come out of the Inn and disappear, after taunting and striking Hugh. John says he is "going a-maying for Mary."

MARY (Soprano) now comes out of the Constable's house to set her lover free. She sings, "Turn, sullen key," to which Hugh, when freed, replies, "Bend, sullen knee." Mary is now seized by a sudden shrinking from sharing his life of roaming. Hugh quickly overwhelms her with bitter taunts, then inspires her with courage, and they sing a long, enraptured song together.

They are just slipping away when the CONSTABLE (Bass) calls to AUNT JANE (Contralto) for his boots. (The TURNKEY (Tenor) invariably echoes him.) Hugh gets back in the stocks, and hides Mary with his cloak.

But the Turnkey raises a false alarm that the "spy" has escaped, and he, the Constable, and Aunt Jane emerge in their nightgowns and proceed to search for him. Very soon, of course, they find he is, after all, safe in the stocks, and they go back to bed, leaving the Turnkey on guard.

The Turnkey very soon falls asleep, and the lovers are once again escaping when, as the day dawns, they hear in the distance the soldiers who are coming to arrest the "spy." Mary makes Hugh promise to do as she tells him, and they get into the stocks together.

Presently JOHN returns, bringing a branch of may, and singing below Mary's window. Other TOWNSFOLK also come with their may, singing a May-day song. John's importunity quickly reveals the fact that Mary is missing.

The CONSTABLE and TURNKEY and AUNT JANE appear, and a general search is beginning when John finds the two lovers in the stocks. Mary refuses to leave the stocks while Hugh is there, and sings as she sits, "Here on my throne . . . beside my King."

The Constable disowns his daughter, John at first refuses her, then says he'll take her until he's tired of her. Mary now denounces him and appeals to the crowd. Most of them are Mary's friends, but a few men take John's side, and a general riot follows. The Constable, the Turnkey, and Jane go indoors out of the way.

The SOLDIERS now arrive, and after considerable bullying by the SERGEANT (Baritone) of the Constable and everybody else, and particularly of John, whose officiousness is quite ineffective, Hugh is produced.

The Sergeant at once recognizes his old friend the drover, calls everyone a pack of fools, and takes John to make a soldier of him. Hugh is now, of course, the hero, but Mary and he refuse to become domesticated, and in spite of much protesting and cajoling, take the road together, singing.

[The libretto of this new opera can be obtained from J. Curwen and Sons, Ltd., 24, Berners Street, London, W.1, price 1s. 6d. net.]

JOHN IRELAND'S "MAI-DUN."

This Symphonic Rhapsody for Orchestra was written in 1920-21. It is inspired by that huge earthwork, Maiden Castle, near Dorchester, which is known as Mai-Dun in the works of Thomas Hardy; and it conjures up the rugged life of prehistoric England. In spite of its elemental grimness, there is a feeling of exultation (and, perhaps, exaltation) throughout.

(Mai-Dun is to be broadcast from the London Station on Thursday, July 17th.)

An American inventor is said to be giving demonstrations in Italy of what is described as a secret system of wireless transmission, which is claimed to render possible transmission on a combination of wave-lengths known only to the receiving station, and to allow the same transmitting or receiving stations to send or receive more than one message at the same time on the same wave-length.

LEARN HOW TO PLAY

BY THE BEAMISH WAY.

A. E. BEAMISH, the famous Davis Cup Player and British Olympic Games Representative, offers to teach you Lawn Tennis by a novel and original postal system that will enable every pupil to receive INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION and expert advice.

THERE is nothing so humiliating as the feeling that you are "letting your partner down." There is nothing so exhilarating as the knowledge that spectators are watching your play with admiration.

YOU may be a beginner, begin on the right lines. YOU may already play a good game—make it a GREAT game.

OUR PUPILS RANGE from NOVICES to COUNTY PLAYERS

Read what MISS E. RYAN, the WORLD FAMOUS PLAYER, who recently won a set from Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, in a great match at Wimbledon, says:—

"I think you have hit on the very idea for teaching the young generation on the right lines, and a course of remedial instruction must have most beneficial results, particularly under such a keen enthusiast as yourself. The dearth of instructional facilities has always retarded the progress of finicky promising players in this Country, but you have solved the problem."

Britain's Biggest Cathedral.

A Unique Service to be Broadcast from Liverpool.

AN event of historic importance will take place on Saturday, July 19th, with the Consecration Service of Liverpool Cathedral. This will be the first service of its kind held in the Anglican Church of this country since the one at Salisbury some 700 years ago.

The whole service will be broadcast, and people in all parts of the country will be able to share in the interest and solemnity of this unique event.

The Cathedral, when completed, will be the biggest in Great Britain, and will rank in size next to that of St. Peter's at Rome. It will be bigger even than the famous Cathedral at Milan, and at least as big as that at Seville. It will be more than double Westminster Abbey in extent, much bigger than St. Paul's, and York Minster, and about three times the size of the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Westminster.

A Wonderful Young Architect.

No such attempt at an ecclesiastical building has been undertaken by the Church of England since the dissolution of the monasteries after the Reformation. The structure is a great work of art, and is a definite modification of English Gothic architecture expressing a noble conception finely executed.

The architect—a Roman Catholic—Mr. Giles Gilbert Scott, R.A., has a wholly romantic connection with the Cathedral. A grandson of Sir Giles Gilbert Scott, R.A., who designed the Foreign Office, and the son of Mr. George Gilbert Scott, the architect of St. Agnes, Kennington, he submitted his plans and designs for the Cathedral in open competition with architects of wide repute. One of them was his own master, Mr. Temple Moore, and great was the surprise, therefore, when Mr. Scott, in his early twenties, had his work accepted by the Cathedral Authorities. All of his drawings were done during the short hours he was free from his daily work.

A Record of Self-Sacrifice.

The foundation stone was laid by King Edward VII, exactly twenty years ago, on July 19th, and only half the Cathedral is yet built. It will take some fifteen or twenty years to complete the structure, even with sufficient funds available.

The Cathedral will cost some £2,000,000, which is being raised by public subscription. It will contain one of the most beautiful books ever made. In it will be recorded the names of those 35,000 men from the Liverpool district who fell in the Great War, and who, as one of its pages, autographed by the King, says: "Left all that was dear to them, endured hardship, faced danger, and finally passed out of the sight of men by the path of duty and self-sacrifice that others might live in freedom."

The stained-glass windows of the Lady Chapel are designed with the idea that they shall serve as a chronicle of the deeds of good women. Among those thus commemorated are St. Osburger, the mother of King Alfred; Queen Margaret of Scotland, who aided in the Reformation of the Scotch Church; Elizabeth Barrett Browning, the poetess, and "all who have seen the Infinite," Kitty Wilkinson and "all poor helpers of the poor."

"Catherine of Liverpool."

This woman who became known as "Catherine of Liverpool" was born in Ireland, in 1786, but settled with her husband in Liverpool in humble circumstances. When in 1832 cholera broke out in that city, she was the foremost of devoted workers, nursing the sick, and washing their bedding and clothing in her own home.

The Cathedral stands on one of the highest points in the city, and will be to Liverpool what St. Paul's is to London. It will be a physical landmark for miles around, on sea and on land, and a spiritual refuge for countless generations to come. H.P.

Saving Life by Radio.

The Use of Wireless in Emergencies.

WIRELESS communication had not long been an accomplished fact before it was instrumental in saving life. Indeed, had it not been for wireless, the passengers and crew of the s.s. Republic, which collided with the s.s. Florida on January 23rd, 1909, must have wholly, or in part, perished. Fortunately, assistance was obtained by wireless, and everyone was saved.

This is, I believe, the first instance in which wireless was directly responsible for saving life.

Wireless also plays an important part throughout various countries as a safeguard to life and property. Its use by the police in tracking dangerous criminals, and in traffic control on such occasions as the Derby, is becoming increasingly frequent.

Fighting Forest Fires.

In conjunction with aeroplanes, in America, its assistance is called for to help in fighting forest fires. When one of these dreaded conflagrations occurs, aeroplanes keep portable ground stations informed of the progress of the fire, the direction of the wind, etc.; this enables the fire-fighters to make preparation in the direction in which it is progressing, and to give people whose lives and homes are endangered ample warning.

When cable communication is interrupted for any reason, wireless takes its place, and instead of being out of touch with the world till repairs are effected, telegrams go on their way as if nothing had happened. So, too, in countries where floods are prevalent and cause breakdowns in the telegraphic apparatus, wireless is generally resorted to, so that a continuous service may be maintained.

Wireless now forms an important item in the arctic explorer's outfit. When any serious mishap occurs, it is practically his only hope. One cannot help conjecturing, whether some arctic expeditions would have had such a fateful ending had it been possible to have equipped them with wireless apparatus.

Aiding Those at Sea.

How many people living ashore all their lives, with a qualified physician residing in the next street should they fall ill, realize that it is a daily occurrence for ships to sail from our ports with no doctor on board. Should one of the crew fall ill, he is treated by the captain, or more probably by the chief steward, neither of whom can be expected to possess a very profound knowledge of medicine. If the man's illness be serious, his chances of recovery are certainly much less than if he were living ashore.

However, now that the great majority of ships are equipped with wireless, advice can be sought from another ship in the vicinity carrying a doctor. Not as satisfactory as having him sitting by one's bedside! certainly not—but it increases one's chances of recovery considerably.

Help for the Lighthouse Keeper.

An actual instance having some bearing on this subject occurred about three years ago. The keeper on a lighthouse in the Red Sea met with an accident; the nearest medical aid was at Aden, and the delay in bringing help to the injured man from there would have been serious. The wireless station at Aden sent out a message inquiring for a ship with a doctor on board. A response was not long in forthcoming, and when that particular ship arrived at the lighthouse, the doctor was put ashore in time successfully to treat the injury.

Thus we find, with increasing frequency, that whenever anything goes wrong, wireless is there ready to help. F. A. C.

Broadcasting in Ancient Times.

A Talk from Edinburgh, by GEORGE MACDONALD, C.B., LL.D., F.B.A.

SEVENTY or eighty years ago the peoples of Europe and America did not stand very much above the Greeks and Romans in regard to communication between persons at a distance. Indeed, I am not sure that in some ways they were quite so far forward. If we could accept a story current in the Middle Ages, we should have to admit that a great deal of ground had been lost. Old chroniclers say that in the interior of each of the two walls which the Romans built across Britain there was an arrangement so cunningly contrived that, when a trumpet was blown on one side of our island, it was immediately heard on the other. This, of course, is nonsense. The ancients had no device for the transmission of sound. All their systems of long-distance signalling depended on the eye, and on the naked eye at that. They had no telescopes. They did not even have spectacles.

Talking With Flags.

Probably it was because they had no telescopes that they made so little use of flags; for, unless flags can be accurately read and distinguished, the message they are intended to convey is unintelligible. However that may be, the ancients employed them only for quite general purposes. Thus, a red flag hoisted on a particular hill at Rome meant that a hostile attack on the city was imminent, while a standard displayed on another hill was a summons to the citizens to assemble for public business.

Since the invention of wireless telegraphy we hear very little of the heliograph. Twenty or thirty years ago it was considered to be of great value, particularly in countries blessed with clear, bright skies. The main feature of the apparatus is, as you know, a mirror which catches the rays of the sun and translates an alphabet into flashes. Given an alphabetic code, messages of any length can, in favourable circumstances, be conveyed quickly and safely over a stretch of many miles.

Signalling by the Sun.

It is interesting to note that the principle of the heliograph was familiar to the Greeks. Herodotus tells us that in 490 B.C., after the battle of Marathon, partisans of the Persians flashed a signal to them from the top of Mount Pentelicus by letting the sunlight play upon a burnished shield. This signal was doubtless of a general character and carefully prearranged, for we hear nothing of any code at so early a date. Codes, however, do not seem to be altogether a modern invention. Something very like semaphore signalling is described by Vegetius, who wrote towards the close of the fourth century of our era. He says that news was sometimes transmitted by the alternate raising and lowering of beams of wood attached to towers. That plainly suggests a code.

So far, however, I have been speaking of subsidiary methods only. I come now to the principal one. Long before the Hebrews were led by a shining pillar into the Promised Land, fire by night and smoke by day were firmly established as affording the readiest means of signalling from a distance. You have only to think of Macaulay's "Armada" to realize how important the system of beacons was in this country until comparatively lately.

But the ordinary beacon had a very limited use. Like the Roman flags I spoke of, it could only convey some prearranged message—usually a warning. Besides, the whole system could be set ablaze prematurely by the chance kindling of a fire in the neighbourhood of one particular station.

A Prehistoric Method.

Ancient history, too, often speaks of mistakes and misunderstandings, that did not always turn out so happily as the accidental blaze that drew Robert the Bruce from Arran to the Ayrshire coast. But even in those early days there were some who had left these crude beginnings far behind. The empire of Persia between the sixth and fourth centuries B.C. stretched from India to the western shores of Asia Minor. It was a marvel of organization. It offers, for instance, the first example of an efficient postal system. More than that: there was a highly-developed state service of fire-signals. If we can believe Aristotle, the Persian King—seated in his capital at Susa—was fully informed within twenty-four hours of every important event that happened in any part of his vast dominions. Aristotle does not explain how it was done. But Greek analogies show that it was not impossible.

The oldest known writer on the art of war, who flourished soon after 400 B.C., describes a clumsy invention of his own. In each station was an earthenware jar of exactly the same capacity—say, five feet deep and twenty inches in diameter. Each jar was pierced near the bottom with a small hole, the holes being of exactly the same size. Normally these holes were plugged and the jars filled to the brim with water. On the surface of each there floated a large round cork, having a tall rod fixed upright in its centre. The rod was marked off into two-inch lengths, within each of which was inscribed a sentence such as "Enemy cavalry approaching," the inscriptions on all of the rods being identical.

A station wishing to signal to its neighbour hoisted a lighted torch. A torch raised in reply meant that all was ready. Both torches were then lowered simultaneously and the plugs withdrawn. As the water trickled out, the corks sank slowly and with them the rods. When the length on which the message it was desired to send was opposite the brim, another torch was hoisted as a signal to insert the plug and read the news to be conveyed.

Slow, But Sure.

That, you will see, was very cumbersome, and made no allowance for unexpected happenings. Two hundred years later, in the second century B.C., we find a method in use which, if slow, was equal to all emergencies. Each signalling post had two stations, one to the right, the other to the left. The officer in charge had five tablets, each divided into compartments numbered from 1 to 5. In each compartment was a different letter of the alphabet. The number of torches necessary was ten for each post, or five to each station. When a signal was to be sent, all ten were hoisted. Ten hoisted in reply showed that the other station was on the alert. After a brief interval of darkness, the signalling station hoisted any number of torches up to five at each of its two stations. Those on the left gave the number of the tablet to be referred to, those on the right the number of the compartment. The combination thus meant a particular letter, and words, sentences, despatches, could be spelt out with unfailing accuracy and in cipher, if required. Time was needed, but we are assured that with practice a very high speed could be attained.

Traces of an Ancient System.

That was the best that the ancients could do. It was, I think, better and more systematic than anything our own forefathers succeeded in achieving until quite modern times.

If anyone were to ask me whether any traces of the old broadcasting system still survive in Britain, my answer would be "Yes." At intervals of a quarter of a mile along the Roman road in Perthshire one can still see a series of low mounds. These were dug into twenty years ago, when they proved to be the remains of wooden signalling towers exactly like those that are sculptured on the great column of Trajan in Rome. They probably belong to the first century of our era, when the native Caledonians were the enemy. Much more elaborate were the tall towers of stone which, as we have learned in quite recent years, were built by the Romans two or three centuries later at vantage points along the Yorkshire cliffs—at Huntcliff, Filey, Scarborough, and elsewhere. They were meant to give warning of danger from the sea.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

CONDUCTED BY
UNCLE CARACTACUS

A Visit to the Queen's Doll's House.

HULLO, children! There is something very fascinating about any doll's house, isn't there? And the Queen's Doll's House is the most wonderful one in the world. Everything in it has been produced by the greatest artists and best craftsmen of our time.

It took nearly three years to make, and we can well believe it. The house and everything in it has been built to the exact scale of one inch to the foot. In other words, just one-twelfth the size they would be for real-life usage.

The front of the house is 100 ins. long. Its narrower sides are 5ft. 2ins. wide. Two grass plots of velvety green, with a broad, well-kept path between, lead up to a door, outside which sits a very intelligent-looking terrier waiting to be let in. Looking back we can see the lawn mower, 3½ins. high.

A Race of Dollomites.

On either side of the garden gates poplar trees, each 2ft. high, keep guard. The gates themselves are of the most beautifully wrought iron, and as we pass out to take a last peep at the garden we see the perambulator, where the baby of the house sleeps wisely in the open air.

The outer walls of the house are of wood, painted and carved to represent Portland stone. At the four corners of the parapet on top you notice the patron saints of England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland.

The back of this house is just as perfectly finished and windowed as the front.

We have to think of this house as belonging to a race of little people called the Dollomites—people about 6ins. high like "Tinker Bell" or Gulliver's "Lilliputians." These little people have children and the children have playthings; so that the furniture in the drawing-rooms and sitting-rooms is for the grown-up Dollomites; the furniture in the nursery for the Dollomite children is smaller, of course, and the dolls they play with are smaller yet, in proportion.

The Main Hall.

We enter the main hall. It is an imposing affair, complete with knights in armour, one clasp a battle axe, the other a jousting pole. Facing us is the gleaming marble staircase with its beautiful balustrade. Two hanging lanterns of exquisite workmanship light up the lovely painted ceiling. Through an archway on the left we find the lift. Press a numbered button for any floor you want and it stops most obediently.

The Queen's Doll's House as seen from the outside

Stepping out of the lift at one of the floors, we find ourselves in a lobby with a servant's bedroom on the left, and at the other end a box-room with the most fascinating little trunks, hold-alls, and hat-boxes stored tidily on its shelves. Trunks, of course, don't come up in the passenger lift, but by service lift from the basement. There are two more servants' bedrooms on this floor—called the upper mezzanine floor—but we will go just below to the nursery.

First we come to the Princess Royal's room, and if you wait till she goes to bed you will hear her cry out, for a naughty brother has put a pea in her bed. This pea had to be so tiny that it could only be grown under a microscope. Here we go through a door leading to the Queen's sitting-room, and on into the night nursery with its tiny swing cradle of apple-wood, inlaid and bound with silver and lined with ivory; and a high-chair any baby would be proud to sit in. We go through the bathroom to the wonder of wonders—the day nursery. How very fortunate these Dollomite children are! They seem to have everything: A cabinet gramophone, with records the size of a half-penny, a piano, a rocking-horse, a Noah's ark, a marvellous railway, and two cupboardsful of toys besides.

Next we peep into the linen cupboards, stocked with blankets and coverlets, many of them about the size of your two middle fingers.

Newspapers, smaller than luggage labels.

Now come along the back-stairs passage to the marble gallery overlooking the grand staircase, and slip down quietly into the library. Here we find the shelves filled with beautifully bound books—about one inch high—written by the best living authors, poets, and playwrights.

Real copies of the daily newspapers—each smaller than a luggage label—lie waiting for readers; a fountain pen almost too small to pick up, is ready for your letters; an A.B.C. the size of your thumb-nail will tell you the times of trains. A fine set of chessmen stands waiting for players. In one corner is the gun-case with a row of sporting guns—no longer than your finger, perhaps, but perfectly constructed breech-loaders. Underneath is the safe, with a minute insurance policy covering the entire contents of the house. Below the library is the garage complete with six luxurious motor-cars—all splendid reproductions of the real thing—as well as a motor-cycle and side-car and an ordinary "push-bike."

Miniature Kitchen Utensils.

Turning toward the back of the house, we come to the kitchen. On the long table tiny scales, a rolling-pin, and pastryboard, and midget apples fill you with longing to try your skill at baking in the huge ovens.

The scullery is fitted with deep washing-up sinks, and hot and cold taps placed low so that the water will not splash up; and the big stack of tiny plates are quickly washed and put into the drying rack. The silver is sent to the butler's pantry for cleaning, and the knives are put into the knife machines.

It would take pages to describe the dining-room with the gold plate and a dinner service that can be laid out on an ordinary dinner plate; the magnificent paintings, the elegant bathrooms, the wardrobes, the carpets, and a thousand and one other marvels of beauty and minuteness.

"I've got you!" she said, and kissed him again and again. "You're mine now!" and, hiding him once more upon her breast, she began to run again.

"I wonder where we're going to!" Sabo said to himself. He was sure it would be somewhere interesting.

Would there be elephants, he wondered, and a garden with a lily-pool?

SABO IS STOLEN.

By E. W. LEWIS.

ONE day, Uncle Harry arrived in his car to take Isobel up to London to see the shops and her favourite play. Sabo thought that he was to be left behind, but, just at the last moment, Uncle Harry picked him up with a laugh, saying, "Come along, Rub-nose!" and fastened him on the top of the radiator.

Sabo had the time of his life. It was glorious. The road ran backwards beneath him with dizzy swiftness; the hedges rushed past on either side; little houses appeared, and the next moment, had gone by; the wind whistled through his hair, and took his breath away.

They went more slowly as they passed through a little town, and on a car coming in the opposite direction, Sabo saw a Black Cat just in the same position as he was. The Cat must have been startled at the sight of him, for her back was arched and her tail was stiff, and she glared at him with her yellow eyes.

After a long time the hedges disappeared, and the road ran between rows of tall houses, and there were tram-lines, and horses pulling heavy wagons, and multitudes of buses and taxis and cars of all colours and sizes. This was London. Sabo thought that it was the most wonderful place he had ever seen, far more wonderful than the forest.

Shortly afterwards they turned into a quiet street; the car drew near to the pavement and stopped. Uncle Harry and Isobel got out, and went up some stone steps and through a door. The car was left by the kerb. Turning his head, Sabo saw two eyes fixed upon him.

The eyes were in the head of a small girl who was standing on the edge of the pavement quite near to Sabo. They were blue eyes, and were open very wide. The girl was smaller than Isobel.

She stared at Sabo, looked up and down the street, and stared again; and her eyes seemed to get bluer and bigger.

"Oh! shouldn't I just!" she said in a low voice. Then she stepped off the pavement, and was now standing in front of Sabo, and her head just came up to the top of the radiator where he was sitting.

She touched him with her hand, and looked away towards the door through which Uncle Harry and Isobel had disappeared. Then, with a snatch and a tug, she tore Sabo down from his place, hid him underneath her shawl, dodged across the street, and began to run as if the man with the white gloves were after her!

At last she stopped running, and, under a dim archway, she took Sabo out from beneath the shawl, held him up before her face, and gave him a big kiss.

No wasted energy here!

The T. T. Races.

The wonderful T. T. Races held every year in the Isle of Man provide thrilling tests of endurance for men and machines. The diminutive engines which propel these machines at the terrific speed of a mile a minute for hours on end, must work like clockwork and deliver every possible ounce of power.

Certainly there is no wasted energy in motor-cycles competing in the T.T. Races!

A comparison

There is a very useful comparison for Valve users here. As every wireless enthusiast should know, the whole principle of the 3-electrode valve lies in a filament heated to produce a flow of electrons. This electron stream travels towards the Anode and the Grid. In the Cossor Valve, the filament is arched and almost totally enclosed by the hood-shaped Anode and Grid. The result is that practically the whole of the electron stream is usefully employed.

—and an example.

But, on the other hand, in a valve with a straight filament and tubular Anode a very large proportion of the electron stream leaks out at either end, only to strike against the sides of the glass. There never was such an obvious case of wasted energy.

The explanation

This, then, is brief explanation of the reason why the Cossor Valve is so particularly efficient in detecting weak signals when other valves are inoperative, and able to give a remarkable amplification with a complete absence of distortion.

—and a moral for you.

Next time you purchase a Valve remember the moral of the wasted energy and select a Cossor—five minutes will make you a permanent user.

B.T.H. RADIO VALVES

These three valves will satisfy all your valve needs. The R valve is unexcelled as a "general purpose" valve: the B5 valve, taking only 0.06 amps. at 3 volts, is far and away the best valve for use in portable or other dry battery sets: the B4 valve, taking 0.25 amps. at 6 volts and with an amplification factor of 8 to 1 is the only valve of its kind on the market. A B4 valve used as a low frequency power amplifier will give you all the extra volume you need for satisfactory outdoor reception. All three valves are made by special processes under patents owned by the makers.

Prices are as follows:

Five Mistakes

*we corrected for you
in Shaving Cream*

The five main complaints men made about some shaving soaps were these:

1. Lather too scanty. So we made Palmolive Shaving Cream to multiply itself in lather 250 times. A tiny bit — just one-half gram — suffices for a shave.
2. Slow action. So we made a Shaving Cream to act in one minute. Within that time the beard absorbs 15% of water. And that makes a hard beard wax-like.
3. Dries on face. The lather of Palmolive Shaving Cream maintains its creamy fulness for ten minutes on the face.
4. Hairs lie down. That is due to weak bubbles. Strong bubbles are essential to support the hairs for cutting. And Palmolive bubbles are strong.
5. Skin irritation. The blend of palm and olive oils makes Palmolive Shaving Cream a lotion. It brings one fine after-effects.

We ask your permission to prove these things — to send you a tube to try.

We have worked hard to excel in Shaving Cream and have produced a sensationally good one. Do us the kindness to post this coupon, for your sake and ours.

A Valve for Every Wireless Circuit

D.F. O.R.A.

THE MULLARD DULL FILAMENT O.R.A. was designed to serve the same general purposes as the famous O.R.A., but supplied by ordinary dry batteries.

It is robust in construction and can be easily recognised by the oblique setting of the anode.

As detector the D.F. O.R.A. requires only 20-30 anode volts, and as amplifier up to 100 anode volts provided suitable negative grid bias of 2-5 volts is used.

Write for leaflet V.R. 11a, Dept. R.T., for further information on this useful receiving valve.

BUY A BATTERY THAT'S GOING TO LAST!

PYRAMID HIGH-TENSION BATTERIES DO!

The secret of the success of the PYRAMID is its electrodes, which are 30-40% heavier than those usually employed, and consequently stand up to considerably longer life.

For clear and true reception it is most essential that the H.T. Battery should possess certain qualities—it must be silent in operation, consistent in output, capable of fine variation, and operative over a long period—in short, it must possess all the distinctive features of the PYRAMID.

Shave with the Enthusiasm of Youth—

In our youth we shaved eagerly . . . and, perhaps, let it be whispered, needlessly. But now in maturity, we shrink from it, shirk it, miss our train because of it. Yet there is a way to restore the shaving enthusiasm of youth. Use Gibbs Shaving Cream—"the cream of shaves" and absolutely British.

Gibbs Shaving Cream is made on a new principle with the sole object of producing a super-lather and a softened skin.

It is a rich, copious, closely-woven lather that retains moisture and softens the beard right through, holding it in position for the swift clean work of the razor.

How smoothly your razor will glide through the fragrant foamy fleece.

The liberal proportion of cold cream contained in Gibbs Shaving Cream leaves the skin smooth and comforted as if newly massaged.

Try to-day this newest way to shave and know what a delight shaving can be.

FREE TRIAL TUBE

Because we are convinced that Gibbs Shaving Cream will give you the best shave you have ever had, we can afford to send you a trial tube for nothing. Send us on a postcard your own name and address and the name and address of your chemist, and three days' luxury shaving is yours.

You CAN earn more money

Don't allow hesitation or doubt to keep you back from the bigger pay and the better things that will be yours when you have qualified for them.

You can—you WILL—earn more money when you know more about your calling.

All the world now agrees that a specialised vocational training is necessary to success. The question for the ambitious man who is desirous of something much better in life than he now enjoys is: How can I obtain the training that will raise me above the crowd? Here's the answer: From the International Correspondence Schools.

This institution originated spare-time training by post. It is by far the largest organisation of its kind in the world. It has teaching centres in eleven countries and students in fifty. 1,000 British I.C.S. Instruction Papers—specially prepared for correspondence tuition—are marvels of clearness, accuracy, and practical helpfulness.

Make up your mind now that you will find out at once what I.C.S. salary-raising training can do for you. As a first step——mean long-wearing comfort!

She is particular about her hair—and rightfully too—but she willingly wears “Brandes.” Their specially constructed headband displays an almost human solicitude, more particularly “male” solicitude, for a woman’s “crowning glory.” A gentle pressure on the crown of the head, a firm clasp to the ears and the rest of the headband held well away from the hair. So comfortable that they can be worn for hours, the beautiful tones of mellow clarity ensured by the “Matched Tone” feature is undoubtedly the reason she would wish to retain them for so long a time. Obtainable from any good Dealer.

terminées par un son nasal, ex: un bien, indissoluble, une position, exemplaire.

Les terminaisons en er et es des verbes de la 1^{re} conjugaison à l'infinitif et à la 2nd personne du singulier du présent de l'indicatif ne sont pas liées dans la conversation ordinaire, ex: il vient de tomber, à genoux, elle a du rester, en arrière, mais il est nécessaire qu'elles le soient parfois dans la poésie, ex: Que vient chercher, ici la roi qui vous envoie? (Racine)

Et détester, un mal qui t'a rendu meilleur. (A. de Musset)

La conjonction "et" et les adverbes "non" et "enfin" ne se lient pas au mot qui les suit, ex: parents et enfants, elle est à moi, non à vous, enfin il partit.

"Aie-en-ciel" et "chât à banes" se prononcent au pluriel comme au singulier.

Dans "corps à corps" l'e ne se prononce pas. Aucune consonne ne peut être liée aux nombres "un," "huit," "onze," ou aux mots "oui," et "yacht," ex: un grand huit, un ouï catégorique.

Johann Sebastian Bach

Johann Bach was born in 1685—the year that witnessed the birth of Handel. From his earliest days he showed a marked love for music. Yet his parents prohibited him from using his elder brother's scores. Bach, however, undaunted used to rise at night and steal away to copy them by moonlight—permanently injuring his eyesight by so doing.

WHEN one considers the wide variety of instruments in the orchestra to which the Loud Speaker has to respond, in a perfectly lifelike manner, it is obvious that some means other than the ordinary telephone principle of a flat diaphragm must be used.

In the Brown Loud Speaker, you have an entirely different method of reproduction—the only true method of preventing distortion. If you could examine one you would find that the diaphragm is cone shaped, and anchored at its centre to a steel reed. The steel reed in its turn is made to vibrate to and from the poles of an electro-magnet. Thus the diaphragm moves only from its centre outwards, exactly like the mica diaphragm on the sound box of a Gramophone.

Whenever the Brown Loud Speaker is compared on actual tests with any other no one can fail to be struck, with the masterful way in which it renders the extremes of the harmonic scale. From the shrill tones of the piccolo to the deep notes of the double bass, every instrument is reproduced with lifelike fidelity. Before you decide on your Loud Speaker, get your Dealer to give you this test—you'll be convinced at once.

There is no limit. All you need is our Catalogue—if you have not a copy send 3d. to-day and see how cheap everything is. Remember all our components and Sets are fully guaranteed.

Peto-Scott's Wireless Book contains full explanation of Radio and describes many types of Sets with full diagrams and over 80 different circuits. A most useful Book. Post free 1/5.

The "Popular Wireless" Simplified Receiver.

The finest one-Valve Set for long distance work. Uses the Circuit evolved by the Technical Editor of "Popular Wireless." Because the valve amplifies each signal twice, it is sufficiently sensitive to receive every B.B.C. Station at good strength on the 'phones, and if within 5 miles or so from a Station it will operate a Loud

Speaker. Will cover all wave-lengths (including Chelmsford). Coils and Valve extra £5-5-0

Marconi Royalty 12/6, B.B.C. tax 6/-
The Marconi Royalty and B.B.C. tax do not come within the 10% Bonus Scheme but the Receiving Set does.

Sets Installed Free of Charge.

Write to-day for particulars of our new service scheme in which we send a technical man up to 50 miles from any of our Branches entirely without cost to you to install a new Receiver.

The Famous S.T.100 Receiver.

The most popular Receiver of the year. At 50 miles from a B.B.C. Station it will operate a Loud Speaker, while from any spot in the Country it will pick up all B.B.C. Stations and most Continental Stations on the headphones. Uses two valves, but by the reflex principle employed one valve is used twice. Every Instrument individually tested upon an Aerial under actual working conditions and fully guaranteed. Excluding Valves and Coils.

Marconi Royalty 25/- extra. B.B.C. fees 11/- £7-0-0

The Marconi Royalty and B.B.C. Tax are excluded from the 10% Bonus Scheme but the Set is included within it.

The 3-Valve Dual Receiver

As advertised in "Modern Wireless." This Reflex Set is particularly useful for long distance work and has already become very popular. A thoroughly good Set able to operate a Loud Speaker 40 to 50 miles from a B.B.C. Station and to receive them all comfortably in the 'phones. An instrument you will be proud to own and which will afford you lasting enjoyment. Aerial tested and fully guaranteed. £10-10-0

Marconi Royalty 37/6 extra, B.B.C. tax 20/- extra. Tax and Royalty excluded from 10% Bonus Scheme.

MIND-TRAINING IN SUMMER-TIME

How Readers are Spending Profitable and Pleasurable Half-Hours this Summer with the Wonderful "Little Grey Books."

HUNDREDS of readers are spending pleasurable and profitable half-hours this summer with the "Little Grey Books" issued by the Pelman Institute.

They are wonderful little books these. Everyone who has read them says so. And those who have not yet had the opportunity of reading them little realise how much real pleasure (as well as profit) is being secured by those who are now training their minds by means of the New Pelmanism.

What Miss Lillah McCarthy says.

"Pelmanism," says Miss Lillah McCarthy, "is now my Sunday recreation—twelve Pelman books and a garden chair. As the sun goes down and the wind gets a little cold, I put on a warm woolly jacket, take a dose of this new mental tonic, and at once experience a sense of rest and content."

"After this pleasant exercise I feel braced up, ready for my week's work, and sure that I shall be able to do my best."

"That is the secret I have learnt from Pelmanism—it makes you do your best; and, moreover, it makes your best better than you thought it possible to be. I am now a Pelman enthusiast, and am prescribing my remedy wherever and whenever I encounter a friend who would be better for it—there are many who would."

A Most Absorbing Game.

"And," she adds, "Pelmanism is a most absorbing game, and one which each player can learn for himself or herself. At any convenient moment one may take up the 'Little Grey Books' and enjoy real mental recreation—to employ that much-abused word in its proper sense."

"Surely, when pleasure and instruction can be combined—when, in addition to acquiring knowledge which will stand us in good stead throughout our lives, we can also find the most intense interest and enjoyment in its study—a double purpose is served."

"But, in my experience, Pelmanism does more than educate in the ordinary sense of the term."

"It recreates the mind, fills one with a new energy for work, stimulates one to a greater determination of will-power, and increases the capacity for concentration."

Fascinating Exercises.

The "Little Grey Books," twelve in number, which, together with the exercises and examination papers, constitute the famous Pelman Course, cover scientifically the whole field of scientific Mind-Training, and, as Miss Lillah McCarthy says, they are extremely interesting, not to say fascinating, from the first page to the last.

The very first book grips your attention, and as you continue the Course the deeper becomes your interest and the more efficient becomes your mind. Each book in turn prepares you for the next, and the exercises become more absorbing as the Course proceeds.

These exercises have been carefully devised and selected by expert psychologists, and are in themselves a delight to those who practise them. And not only do you take a delight in practising these exercises, but you experience at the same time the deep gratification of feeling and knowing that your mind is rapidly becoming more and more efficient.

"The Perfect Feel of a 'Fourer.'"

Just as a cricketer experiences an intense feeling of gratification when at last, as the result of skilful coaching and careful practice, he is able with graceful ease and the minimum of effort to crack the ball to the boundary, so you, after practising Pelmanism for a few months, feel the same pleasure and gratification at finding yourself able to do things easily, smartly, and efficiently, which formerly were quite beyond the compass of your mind.

There is perhaps no sensation quite equal to the feeling of perfect mental mastery and intellectual fitness developed by Pelmanism. With your mind working accurately, clearly, and rapidly, and with all your intellectual powers co-ordinated, and acting under the full control of your will, work becomes a pleasure because you know you are doing it well: doing it, too, with plenty of time to spare.

Master of Your Surroundings.

Instead of being hustled, confused, and anxious, as perhaps you were before, you are now able to carry out your daily duties calmly, serenely, and without fuss or undue effort. You are the master of your surroundings and of your work.

All this Pelmanism helps you to do and to be, and by the time you have finished the Course, you will have secured a complete mastery of the science of scientific mental training which you will then be able to apply immediately, as so many thousands have done, for your own personal profit and advancement.

The New Pelmanism, in the opinion of the well-known journal Truth, is a great improvement on the former Course—"100 per cent. better" in fact—and evidence pouring in daily shows that it is just what men and women require in order to increase their Efficiency, to add to their Earning-Power, to qualify for Higher Positions and to make full use of the opportunities of advancement that are constantly occurring in Business, the Professions and other walks of life.

Yet, despite its wonderful results, the Pelman Course takes up very little time. You can obtain the full benefit of the system by devoting, say, half an hour daily, or an hour every other day, to this most pleasant mental exercise, and the books are printed in so handy a size that you can carry one of them in your pocket or bag, and study it in the train, or on the beach, or, as Miss McCarthy does, whilst sitting in the garden.

A full description of the New Pelmanism is contained in a book entitled "The Efficient Mind," which every reader who uses the coupon printed below can obtain to-day gratis and post-free. With it you will receive some striking evidence of the way Pelmanism is helping men and women to make good in all manner of directions, given in their own words. Don't miss this opportunity. You can obtain a copy of "The Efficient Mind" and full particulars of the Course free of cost, by sending this coupon to-day to the Pelman Institute, 95, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1.

If Big Ben could hear his chimes!

IF Big Ben could hear his chimes reproduced by the new General Radiophones he would indeed be a proud timepiece.

General Radiophones are different. Their ready response to signal intensity of 0000000011 of an ampere is an achievement which places them far above all competitors for efficiency.

A new method of matching the earpieces by means of specially invented visual gauges, and the incorporation of a carefully designed sound box, ensures singular clarity and natural reproduction.

General Radiophones are unrivalled for strength and finish, and they weigh only 7 ozs.

Ask your dealer to demonstrate General Radiophones to you. If you have any difficulty in obtaining, write direct to us, giving local dealer's name and address. Write for leaflets of G.R.C. goods to Dept. K.

FAMOUS FOR EFFICIENCY

All the World's Our Stage

The Ethophone V links the two Hemispheres

THE Ethophone V. is renowned all the world over as the standard medium for eliminating the feeling of distance and bringing the news of the world into your own home, be it situated in the heart of great cities, the centre of prairie or veldt, the backwoods of Australia, the plains of India, the sun-baked spots on the Equator, or the frigid Polar regions.

Whenever you see an atlas, remember few coasts are too remote for the Ethophone V.

The powerful Ethophone V. Wireless Receiver is a Tuner, Receiver and Power Amplifier combined, employing four valves. It is remarkably efficient in long distance reception and with suitable Burndept Coils will receive any station within its range on any wave-length. Write for prices and further details.

As a British firm employing British labour and manufacturing our apparatus from British materials, we are exhibiting at the British Empire Exhibition, Wembley. We shall be pleased to show you our instruments, components and some interesting pieces of furniture containing an Ethophone V., at our Stand in the Palace of Engineering, Avenue 13, Bay 13.

ELECTRON WIRE

THE PERFECT AERIAL

which needs no Insulators, will increase efficiency by 50%,
and is cheaper than bare wire.

CLEVER ADAPTATION OF SCIENTIFIC FACT.

NOT only does "Electron" wire make the most perfect aerials—as a matter of fact in many instances quite abolishing the necessity for outdoor aerials, with all their complicated accessories—but it is equally perfect as earth wire and lead-in, and for extension of the 'phones, loud speakers and batteries.

Wireless experts agree that the ether waves flow only on the surface or skin of the conductor which carries them. Therefore, aerials which consist of several small wires stranded together are more efficient than a single wire of thicker gauge.

THE BEST CONDUCTORS.

It is also an established fact that SILVER is the finest conductor, closely followed by TIN. Silver is not only too expensive to use generally as an aerial, but for many technical reasons it is impracticable.

On the other hand, Tin, an expensive conductor, four times the value of copper, lends itself admirably, inasmuch as it can so easily be coated on other wires of the necessary strength and durability, so that it fulfils the purpose of a perfect conducting "Skin."

THE SECRET OF "ELECTRON" WIRE.

That each separate strand of wire is scientifically coated with a skin of pure tin.

Enthusiasts who are using "Electron" Wire in all parts of England and America report wonderfully clear results with either crystal or valve sets. The high-frequency currents penetrate the protective coverings, all incoming signals being held. Suspend "Electron" Wire where you will, lead direct to the set (no separate lead-in required), use "Electron" Wire for the earth, and a greatly improved reception will be the result.

EXTEND YOUR 'PHONES or loud-speaker to any part of the house or garden with "Electron" Wire, which being insulated with vulcanised rubber, no further insulation is necessary. You may allow it to touch anything anywhere, indoors or out-of-doors, in perfect confidence. "Electron" Wire has no equal at ten times the price.

INDOOR AERIALS.—"Electron" Wire has been used with great success,

- Round the Picture Rail,
- Parallel across the Room
- Round a Fire Screen,
- Round a Cupboard Door,
- Along the Corridor, and almost everywhere.

"Electron" Wire is ideal for all kinds of Indoor Aerials, Frame Aerials, etc. There is plenty of scope for experimenting. Try every possible way of erecting, and quite likely some new arrangement will be found which will be of great help to others. The Set should be as near as possible to the Aerial. Lead in at right angles in one continuous length.

The Craig, Laxey, Isle of Man.
March 25th, 1924.

Gentlemen:

The aerial wire arrived last night. I erected it this morning (taking no care, and without insulators), between the chimney stacks of two houses. The lead-in has a side angle of 60°, a hole bored in the door frame, and the wire passed through to the set, about 30 ft. carried round the room, as I did not wish to cut it.

I was ready for the 3.30 afternoon transmissions, and was agreeably surprised, the music and singing came through perfectly clearly, and very pure in tone, and about double the volume I usually get on 70 ft. double aerial I have been using.

You may be sure I shall advise my friends to try it.

This evening's transmissions were better than the afternoon's.

This on three valves all B.B.C. stations, Brussels and P.T.T. Paris to-day, and at 11.10 I was trying a new resistance and got a new station, Plymouth, testing, and I have reported to Plymouth, stating I was using your aerial wire.

Yours faithfully, (signed)... John W. Walton, J.P.

PUBLIC WARNING.

Buy Electron Wire in BOXES ONLY. Take no substitute.

If Electron Wire is the Aerial you want, be careful that you get it. Some dealers try to deceive you. They make coils to look like Electron. They know the way to sell you another wire is to make it seem like Electron.

Buy Electron Wire in BOXES ONLY.

AVOID DECEPTION. Don't buy another wire made to look or to sound like Electron. That cheats you of something you prize.

LOOK AT THE NAME AND THE BOX.
