Radio as a National Asset.

By Lord RATHCREEDAN.

[Lord Rathcreedan was formerly Assistant Postmaster-General, and was connected with the Post Office during some of the most important stages of wireless development. In this article he discusses the position of radio as an industry.]

BEFORE the War, radio was little more than an aid to mariners. Passenger ships in most civilised countries were bound by law to carry wireless apparatus, and this regulation undoubtedly helped to foster the industry, although it could not be said that wireless was then of very great importance as an industrial asset to the nation. At that time, the number of firms manufacturing wireless apparatus was very small and, as far as I know, hardly one of them mustered more than fifty employees. To-day, in England alone hundreds of companies are turning out radio receiving apparatus in amazing quantities, while many of the largest firms number their employees by thousands, although broadcasting has only just celebrated its third birthday!

* * * * *

Before any new invention or process has become one of the staple industries of this country, a long time has usually elapsed. Everything new is looked upon as a "fad" until its worth is proved. Time alone decides its value. I remember the development of the telephone in this country, and recall the many years of patient research and toil which passed before those simple beginnings grew into the present gigantic system. But radio is becoming an industrial asset of first-rate importance in less time than any other recent invention, not excepting the motor-car, the telephone or the aeroplane.

People say that the British Government is slow to encourage anything new. I do not believe these croakers. It gratifies me to recall that the British Post Office, with which I was formerly connected, has done more to facilitate and encourage the development of radio than any other single force. When Marconi first mooted the possibilities inherent in his wonderful discovery, Britain gave experimental facilities to a then comparatively unknown man. It is interesting to recall, too, that all those epoch-making experiments of a quarter of a century ago, which culminated in the transmission of those mysterious "S's" across the Atlantic, and which made it possible for you to listen to-day, would perhaps have remained a wild, fantastic dream, had it not been for the practical sympathy and foresight of the British Post Office.

Lord RATHCREEDAN.

Motor-cars are very common in America. But it was stated recently that the radio industry is now the sixth largest in that country, and next in importance to the automobile industry. It is estimated that radio sales in America this year will reach the staggering total of £100,000,000.

Romance Behind the Bâton.

Stories of Famous Conductors.

YOU cannot see the conductor's bâton which regulates your radio music. Perhaps you have forgotten it. Yet, hidden in that little piece of wood, which beats up and down at every broadcasting station, are intriguing tales of laughter and tears, of humour—and even of death.

In its present form, the bâton is comparatively recent, but it is said to have been used in Italy during the sixteenth century. When a Frenchman named Charles de Brosses toured Italy, in 1749, he noted in his diary that there was "nothing more delicious than a young and pretty nun, in her white habit and a sprig of myrtle in her hair, beating time with all the grace and precision imaginable."

Winking at the Double Bass.

The first regular conductors were probably found in churches, because discipline amongst singers and players was necessary. The bâton was used originally more for keeping time than for obtaining expression. It served other purposes, too, for a choir-master would often crack his bâton over a naughty choir boy's head!

A semaphore system was used once for regulating the time of players, and Rossini related how he conducted by winking. The famous composer of H. Barbere was playing with a double bass and another instrument and conducted from the piano by winking at the double bass when he wanted him to play.

Although there is an entry in the diary of Samuel Pepys, who was a great lover of music, about women beating time to music, it seems that the bâton, as we know it to-day, was first used in 1810, when Herr Spohr conducted at the Frankenhäusen festival. He used a very clumsy, stumpy bâton, less than a foot long, rolled round with parchment. Speaking of the introduction of the bâton in England, he says, "The real conductor who gave the tempi was the first violin, who, when the orchestra began to falter, gave the beat with his bow."

Snuff and Energy.

But owing to the size of the orchestra, the first violin could not be seen by all the players. Spohr continues: "I took my stand with the score at a separate desk in front of the orchestra, and gave the signal to begin. Alarmed at so novel a proceeding, some of the directors would have protested, but I persuaded them to give me a trial. They became pacified."

It remained for Mendelssohn and Berlioz to popularize the art of using the bâton, and when they met at Leipzig, in 1841, they exchanged bâtons. Berlioz was probably the most vigorous conductor ever known. He indulged so freely in a kind of gymnastics that he was known to change his shirt during the performance, because he became so heated! You can imagine the scene when, during the first performance of his Messe des Morts, the conductor took out his snuff-box and had a delicate pinch during one of the most difficult passages!

The Man Who "Waved a Stick."

Conductors were not regarded favourably for a long time, and when Michael Costa was proposed a member of that exclusive club the Athenæum, a certain well-known duke objected to his election on the grounds that "a man who got up and waved a stick about in front of a crowd of fiddlers was nothing but a mountebank." Costa, however, was elected. He often conducted at the Crystal Palace, and had a clean, square beat. You would expect that from a man who was audacious enough to comb his hair in the middle of a performance!

Modern bâtons are usually turned out of maplewood, for the sake of lightness, and are generally about twenty-one or twenty-two inches long; but the first bâtons were seldom more than a foot long. They usually taper from three-quarters of an inch to three-eighths.

Sir Arthur Sullivan was an undemonstrative conductor, but he obtained splendid results from the Philharmonic orchestra. One of the last wielders of the bow, and a most remarkable conductor, was Strauss, who would stand facing the audience, his fiddle in one hand and the bow in the other, swinging his arms about vigorously.

The Eccentric Beethoven.

More remarkable still was Edward Grieg, who used to clench and open his left hand, which constituted a signal to his orchestra. Another famous conductor was in the habit of whispering to his orchestra during rehearsal: "No, not like that; like this!"

Great composers seldom wield the bâton with success, although there are exceptions. Schumann used to forget what he was doing; but, on the other hand, Mendelssohn was a remarkably fine conductor. Beethoven was very erratic. When conducting one of his symphonies, he would crouch down during the soft parts, and then, as the crescendo grew, he would spring up and fling himself about in an amazing manner.

A conductor who died through his bâton! It sounds far fetched, yet this happened to Lulli, who is one of the most lovable, yet pathetic, figures in musical history. He had an unruly temper, and was known to smash a player's violin in his anger. But he always paid for the damage afterwards, and took the astonished man out to dine. He conducted with a large stick resembling a walking stick, with which he pounded on the floor.

One day he missed his aim, and gave himself a violent blow on the foot. Gangrene set in, and he died.

K. P. HUNT.

"MY PART OF THE COUNTRY."

TO those who were fortunate enough to be able to hear the weekly afternoon talks last spring under the above title, it will be welcome news that their author and declaimer, "A. Bonnet Laird," has now published them in book form. The title is the same, the publisher Herbert Jenkins Ltd., and the price 5s. There are fifty little chapters, each complete in itself, besides many pleasing illustrations.

The talks themselves have brought the fragrance of the countryside into many town homes, and one feels certain that they and now this book will set adventurers and inquirers on foot with eager determination to witness for themselves some of the delightful and thrilling spectacles of which he tells, and to share in some of the many enchantments which the countryside offers to those with the seeing eye and the understanding heart.

The author writes simply and delightfully of the country in all the changes and processes wrought by season or weather: of flowers and fields and woods and rivers, of birds and animals, and of country folk, too. He does not say where his part of the country is, but we are told it is only an hour from London. The fact is that it might be almost anywhere, and it is good for us to be sent a-searching for the things he sees and hears wherever we may live. For if we seek, we shall find, and a new world will be opened to us. In these unromantic and busy days we need this kind of antidote, and here is a man whose perceptions are attuned to the things which most of us miss, and in the missing suffer. It is a book of revelation.

J. C. W. R.

Radio as a National Asset.

From a business point of view, the position of radio in this country is rapidly assuming similar levels. The millionth licence has long been issued, and owing to the erection of the Daventry High-Power Station, radio has been brought within reach of a greater public than ever before.

It is impossible to estimate, even approximately, how many people are employed in Great Britain in the manufacture of radio apparatus, but it certainly runs into many thousands. There is some satisfaction in knowing that when you buy a British radio set, you are helping British trade and helping to banish that spectre of unemployment whose presence is sapping the national vitality.

Unfortunately, the British market is flooded with foreign apparatus. Glancing in West-End shop windows, I have seen American radio condensers, coils, and even valves. People competent to speak of these technical matters assure me that these instruments generally are not up to British standards. For instance, I am told that there is no American low frequency transformer quite as efficient as the best British production, despite the high prices; and although uninformed folk think that America is a year ahead of us in matters radio, I believe I am right in saying that American radio listeners, or "fans" as they call them, have yet to appreciate fully the importance of using receiving valves specially designed for specific purposes, which here is regarded as elementary knowledge by the man who uses a multi-valve receiving set.

The truth appears to be that the Briton knows how to make the goods, but the American knows better how to sell them.

If you consider the technical development of radio during the past twenty-five years, you will find it difficult to say that any astounding or fundamental change has taken place since Marconi's original announcements. Amplifiers were old before the present radio public came into being. That latest of wonders, the super-heterodyne receiver, popular in the U.S.A. and now being imported here, was developed by Armstrong during the War. And the neutrodyne receiver, now enjoying a vogue, was worked out by Hazeltine and other pioneers before broadcasting was born!

In case it be thought that I consider the radio industry to be stagnant, let me dispel this impression. Hundreds of thousands of pounds are being spent on broadcasting developments, and on the erection of high-power stations. With a view of improving the quality and effective range of the transmissions, Captain Eckersley, of the British Broadcasting Company, and scores of the best radio engineers of the world are analysing each part of the process from the voice of the artist to the transmitting aerial. They are gradually making wonderful improvements, too.

Has the reproduction of wireless telephony in our homes progressed in the same way? If you ask anyone with a musical ear if the radio rendering of a piece of music is as pleasant as the real thing, the answer will probably be in the negative. But reproduction is constantly improving and the deficiency is less to-day than it was even three months ago. Before radio can become a vitally important national industry, more research work will have to be done in the direction of improving reception.

That is only a matter of time. Prices are already settling down, on the basis of utility rather than novelty, and, before long, the home in Great Britain without its radio set will be an exception.

Laughing at Life.

By Finlay Dunn, the Entertainer.

MR. FINLAY DUNN.

I'M always getting chaffed about the paucity of hair covering my cerebral regions, so perhaps no one else will mind if I joke about their baldness.

Not long ago, I was performing at a charity matinee in which the conductor had even fewer hairs on the pate than I have—from which you will understand that he was a pretty bad case. In the middle of my turn, I stopped and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I think it is my duty to thank the conductor publicly for dressing his hair in the same style as I have done. It has saved me a good deal of embarrassment, and has made me feel like an old acquaintance."

The audience roared. But the conductor was furious. He came round to my dressing-room afterwards to fight me! I told him that my boxing manager was in communication with Jack Dempsey's manager on a matter of great interest to the boxing world! Then he shook hands.

The Laugh Was Against Me.

When playing at a hall in Stratford, a few months ago, I was amazed when thunderous applause greeted my entry on to the boards, for it was my first appearance in the district. I bowed—and blushed. Two minutes later, I realized that the Mayor and half the Corporation had just taken their seats in a box!

Another incident in which the laugh was against me occurred at a small town in the Midlands. I sat down at the piano and struck up my best song, but not a note came forth. Thump, thump, thump! but not a sound came out of that piano. Finally, the local stage manager rushed on and whispered that the workmen had taken the "works" out to clean them. I did my turn at the orchestral piano.

The "Flying Tenor."

At Leeds I learned how a singer can make a fortune on the halls. A friend of mine, who has a fine tenor voice, was always complaining that he never had a chance to display it. There was a man with a trapeze act "on" at the time, and the manager offered to let my friend sing what he liked if he went on to the stage with one of the wires attached to him.

Ready to do anything to get his chance to shine, he walked on and sang "Come Into the Garden, Maud" in his best manner. The man in the wings was evidently afraid that Maud would not come, for he swung the poor singer up to the flies! When my friend alighted, he tried again—"For the Night Bat Hath Flown Away." The practical joker behind the scenes again proved that even a tenor can fly. After his second flight he felt dizzy; but the house was wild with excitement and would have nothing else but an encore from the "flying tenor."

Why She Enjoyed It.

Landladies can be funny, too. I was once performing at a large private house, and as there was not room for all the guests in the house, I slept at the lodge. After the performance, the lodge-keeper's wife came up to me and said: "Oh, Mr. Dunn, I did enjoy your songs!"

She started to sob, and wiped her eyes on her apron. "You know," she went on, "you're exactly like my poor brother Bill. He dropped dead just when he was your age."

More sobs and wringing of hands. "And to think, Mr. Dunn, that you're going to sleep in the very same bed he died in!"

I thought I'd better be on the safe side, so I went to a local chemist and had a good sleeping-draught.

Those Talks!

Are There Too Many? By J. C. Stobart.

THE odd thing about people who write letters of protest to the B.B.C. is that, though they express the most diverse opinions, they are each and all of them convinced that what they are saying is the opinion of the vast majority. Sitting at headquarters and reading the letters that come from listeners satisfied and dissatisfied, one gradually forms the opinion that there is no such thing as the "average listener," and that the "man in the street" is merely a fable, so diverse are the tastes and preferences of mankind.

A Cure For "Highbrowism."

I feel sure that those listeners who, as I say, grudge every moment not spent on music and those who would have the whole programme devoted to concert parties, or dance bands, or classical concertos night after night, and day after day for ever, are really in the minority. At any rate, our post-bag shows a very considerable number of people who follow talks with interest and attention. We know this not only from the kind letters of appreciation which we receive, but from the number of well-informed correspondents who are ready to point out any slip that is made, or to argue against any controversial opinion that may be expressed.

Your genuine highbrow is the person who thinks of the public as the ignorant masses. It would cure anybody of highbrowism to come to Savoy Hill, for he would very soon discover how vast is the collective knowledge of our multitudinous audience. No point can be raised which has not among the listeners its expert critic.

Music Not Everything.

After all, it would be rather surprising if there were not a considerable audience interested in talks. Common experience shows that out of every dozen people, two or three have no great love of music, and one or two of them will probably be found to be almost tone-deaf. Wireless is installed and licences procured for many other purposes than the reception of music. Some people may be impatient of such things as Farmers' Bulletins, but they may be assured that there are some thousands to whom these are the most important feature of the week. This estimate may be confirmed by a glance at the newspapers. There is not one of them that does not deliberately provide food for thought as well as entertainment.

Some correspondents would urge us to regard our vast audience as consisting solely of tired folk, exhausted by the day's business, and incapable of attending to anything that is not sheer amusement. I do not believe that this is a just opinion. It is—thank goodness!—a great exaggeration to suppose that the majority of the population of these islands return home every day so utterly fagged out as to be incapable of giving serious attention to anything after the hour of 6 p.m. Half our theatres and more than half of our literature would come to an end if this were really true.

In Touch With Progress.

I am perfectly willing to agree that entertainment must form the staple of our evening's programme; but, after all, a normal person of reasonably catholic tastes can find entertainment in speech as well as in music, in prose as well as in verse. The B.B.C. have never taken the view that their duty is limited to purveying light entertainment. We have to fulfil various public duties and offer genuine service to good citizenship. We wish to keep our audience in touch with progress not only in music, drama and literature, but also in the domain of thought and knowledge. In reality, talk occupies a very modest share of the day's activities. It claims about one-sixth of the average day's programme.

For those who are specially interested in talks we issue a printed syllabus of the winter series, and we shall be happy to send a copy of it to any listener who will send us a stamped addressed foolscap envelope.

A few evenings ago, by way of introduction to my announcement of the Autumn Series of talks, I spoke of the difficulty of judging as to the popularity or otherwise of talks generally, since many of the letters on this subject were from people who disliked talks on principle. The others have not been slow to defend their tastes. Next morning upwards of 150 letters were waiting on my desk, and up to the moment of going to press, this number has increased to more than one thousand! This is independent of the letters received by the provincial stations—hundreds more having been received in Scotland.

From All Classes.

Among these there is not one dissenting voice from the chorus of calls for the continuance of talks as a vital factor in the programmes. These letters have come from all parts of the British Isles, and from people of all classes and followings, as the extracts hereunder will show.

This is the case for the invalid:—

I am so glad we are going to have such interesting series this winter. As I am an invalid and confined to bed for many years, your talks are a great boon to me as I feel by means of them I can keep up interest in many subjects that otherwise I should be debarred from.

Making Poetry Popular.

A schoolmaster stresses the value of modern literature:—

The inclusion of some good elocution items would be widely popular amongst school children. Personal experience has taught me that interest in a modern writer is greatly stimulated if the class have heard his voice over the wireless. Alfred Noyes was attacked with enthusiasm by one of my literature classes (average age thirteen) when they had listened to the magic of his speech in recitation of his own poetry.

A husband and wife study by means of wireless:—

We embrace the opportunity of expressing our warm appreciation of the excellent programmes of talks—they afford us so much pleasure and broaden our outlook, intensifying our interests in the Arts, Sciences and Nature, especially the latter.

In Unexpected Quarters.

An interesting anecdote comes from Bradford:—

I may say that I am one of those listeners to whom the talks are the "tit-bits" of the evening, and I have found amongst the great majority of my friends who listen a similar liking for them, particularly the travel talks. One finds this in most unexpected quarters; for instance, some little time ago I overheard two workmen discussing the talk on the "Djebel Druses" in quite an expert manner, and the explanation of their keen observations thereon leaked out when I heard one state "Yes, when I was in Egypt—"

The war, I think, created interest to a tremendous degree in the four corners of the earth, for many people who previously were most apathetic on such things.

These represent but a few of the many listeners to whom we must offer our grateful thanks for their help in relieving us of any doubt as to the essential part played by talks in the broadcast programmes.

Official News and Views. GOSSIP ABOUT BROADCASTING

Thought Reading by Radio.

PLANS are in hand for broadcasting a novelty of unusual interest on Wednesday, October 28th, at 10.30 p.m. According to present arrangements, it is proposed to suggest to all the ten million listeners of the B.B.C. that they should concentrate their minds on a series of special thoughts. The announcer from London Studio will indicate the sequence of these thoughts and the duration of each concentration. In a room specially prepared for the purpose, and absolutely removed from the Studio, a number of celebrities in various walks of life will endeavour to record the thoughts on which the listening public is concentrating.

At regular intervals, corresponding to the times at which each concentrated effort expires, those who are seated in the separate room will record on paper the impression dominant in their minds at that moment. The slips of paper will be folded and passed direct to the announcer, who will not open them until he is ready to communicate them to listeners. This experiment has considerable possibilities in a scientific sense, but it will no doubt also provide a measure of merriment for all concerned.

"Matters That Matter."

An outstanding event of our season will take place on October 6th, at 10.10 p.m., when Dame Henrietta Barnett, who is already well known to listeners, will meet with Sir Oliver Lodge to hold a discussion before the microphone on "Matters that Matter." These two distinguished speakers promise to go deep into some of the questions that are occupying the public mind at present, and to throw light upon problems of life, death and immortality.

Favourite Artists' Farewells.

Several well-known and popular artists are giving farewell performances before the microphone at London Station prior to leaving this country for tours and engagements in America and elsewhere. Miss Daisy Kennedy, the famous Australian violinist, will be heard on October 5th; Miss Norah Blaney and Miss Gwen Farrar on October 6th; Mr. Jack Buchanan, the popular revue star, on October 7th, and Miss Ella Shields, of music-hall fame, on October 13th. These special farewell performances will in each case take place after the second news bulletin, usually about 10.30 p.m.

"The Belle of New York."

That ever-popular musical comedy, The Belle of New York, is to be broadcast from the London Studio by a touring company. This will probably take place in October, but the date has not yet been definitely fixed.

Evensong at Worcester Cathedral.

A broadcast of special interest to Midland listeners will be the transmission by Birmingham Station of Evensong from Worcester Cathedral on Sunday, October 4th, at 4.0 p.m. The opening voluntary, sung by the Choir, will be "Come now, Saviour," by Bach, and the anthem, which is unaccompanied, will be "There is an Old Belief," by Sir Hubert Parry. The closing voluntary will be the overture, Arminius, by Handel. The Choir is under the direction of Sir Ivor Atkins.

Liverpool Civic Week.

Liverpool Civic Week, a period set aside annually to encourage good citizenship and civic pride, and to commemorate Liverpool's wide activities and interests, begins this year on October 5th. The Liverpool Station is co-operating in these celebrations and will broadcast a special series of programmes which should prove of interest to all listeners on Merseyside. The Lord Mayor of Liverpool, Alderman

Thomas Dowd, will open the proceedings with a talk on Civic Week, from the Studio on Monday evening, October 5th. The musical programmes will include a Symphony Concert from the Studio, when the Station Choral Society will perform Stanford's "Revenge"; a nautical concert provided by the Cunard Steamship Co., and relayed from s.s. Franconia; a big community singing demonstration to be broadcast from St. George's Hall, when Mr. Percy Pitt, Mr. Joseph Lewis and Mr. Gibson Young, will be conductors, and a popular concert provided by the Merseyside Radio Association.

Storm and Calm.

There will be broadcast from London a special "Storm and Calm" programme on Monday, October 26th, from 8.0 to 9.0. The idea will be to convey the atmosphere of the equinoctial gales and the contrast of the period of calm which usually supervenes after these gales. A special radio play, entitled The Three Fishers, will be given during the period of the broadcast storm.

Bishop of Durham to Broadcast.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. Hensley Henson, Bishop of Durham, will broadcast a talk from Newcastle about "Durham Cathedral," on Thursday, October 8th. This will be S.B. to other stations.

Three Popular Mirth-Makers.

Among the popular stars who are appearing at London Station in the early part of this winter, are Mr. Arthur Wimperis, who has collaborated in many successful theatrical productions as a librettist, who will broadcast on October 9th, Mr. Max Darewski, the pianist and composer, who will be heard on October 12th, and Mr. Melville Gideon, the popular "Co-Optimist," who will be at the Station on Saturday, October 3rd.

Coming Manchester Features.

At Manchester Station, the programmes for the week beginning Sunday, October 4th, are full of variety and interest. Among the outstanding features are "A Dramatic Half-Hour," by the "2ZY" Dramatic Company, "Musical Comedy Memories," "A Scottish Night," and "One Hour at the Brighter Spot Cabaret." There will also be a Symphony Concert, including music by the "2ZY" Augmented Orchestra, and soprano and baritone songs by Miss Lily Allen and Mr. Lee Thistlethwaite, and a special pianoforte recital by Miss Marcelle Meyer.

The Coming of a New Science.

An interesting series of talks on psychology is to be given by the Rev. J. Jordan, D.D., Litt.D., F.R.Hist.S., from the Hull Studio. The first talk, on Friday, October 9th, is entitled, "The Coming of a New Science." It dispels the popular conception that the study of psychology is a morbidly introspective business and deals with the laws and principles of psychology as applicable to everyday life.

Famous Houses of the East Midlands.

Nottingham Station begins a series of talks on "Famous Houses and Churches of the East Midlands," on Tuesday, October 6th. Such famous houses as Chatsworth, Wingfield Manor, Haddon Hall, Welbeck Abbey, and Newstead Abbey will be dealt with, as well as the most famous churches of the district.

"Leaves from Ossian."

In the Feature Programme, on October 9th, Bournemouth will include one of Mme. Liza Lehmann's later and less-known compositions, "Leaves from Ossian." These settings have not hitherto come prominently before listeners, who are familiar with many other examples of this noted composer's work. Miss Kate Winter (soprano), Miss Esther Coleman (contralto), Mr. Eric Greene (tenor), and Mr. Roy Henderson (baritone) will be the vocalists, and they will be supported by the Bournemouth Augmented Orchestra and the "6BM" Chorus.

Zoological Music.

The title of an amusing and original programme offered by Belfast on Tuesday, October 6th, at 7.30, is "An Hour of Zoological Music," and the programme will include the performance of Saint-Saëns' "Carnival of Animals." This will be succeeded, at 8.30 p.m., by a lecture recital on Shakespeare's Songs, by Mr. Richmond Noble and Mr. John Vine, who have both specialized in this subject. After this will follow, at 9.30, half-an-hour of dance music.

More Empire Phono-Flights.

The series of "Empire-Phono-Flights" which Glasgow Station instigated, and which have proved so popular, will be continued on Monday, October 5th, when that concerning New Zealand will be broadcast. The programme will be run on the lines of previous radio visits to our Dominions, and three representative singers will sing songs of the country, including several Maori songs never before performed in Great Britain. Those two favourite speakers, Mr. Augustus Beddie and Mr. Halbert Tatlock, appear again, and, by permission of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Mr. H. F. B. Drew will act as guide.

Aberdeen Station's Birthday Programme.

Aberdeen Station is to have a birthday programme on Saturday night, October 10th. A certain amount of mystery is attached to this evening's fare, for its nature is to be deduced by listeners from the lines in Milton's L'Allegro. Indeed, the perusal of this poem will be a fitting preparation for the events of the evening.

"School for Scandal."

The first part of the concert at Plymouth Station, on Friday, October 9th, will be an "Old Time Programme," followed by "Twentieth Century." Two West Country favourites, Miss Florence Hoyten (soprano), and Mr. Archibald Bollard (bass-baritone), will contribute suitable vocal numbers, while Mme. Delsie Elgar and Mr. Ian Shepherd will read excerpts from Sheridan's famous School for Scandal and R. C. Carton's comedy, The Ninth Waltz. The Ciro Dance Orchestra, also known to local listeners, and Mr. Jack Train, entertainer, will take part in the modern section of the programme.

A Dramatic Programme.

On the evening of Friday, October 9th, Edinburgh Station will present a dramatic programme which will include the popular reciter, Mr. Augustus Beddie, who will recite "Tammis Tosh, Beadle," by Joseph Laing Waugh. Later in the evening, The Monkey's Paw, by W. W. Jacobs, dramatized by Louis N. Parker, will be performed. The musical side of the programme will be given by Miss Ella Gardner (soprano), and by Mr. Herbert More's Light Orchestra, which will play works by Verdi and Saint-Saëns, in recognition of the anniversary of these two composers, which falls on October 9th.

Two Mendelssohn Concertos.

In addition to other favourite orchestral works, such as the Rimsky-Korsakov Capriccio Espagnol, the instrumental concert at Glasgow Station on Wednesday, September 30th, will include two Mendelssohn concertos. Miss Daisy Kennedy will play the violin concerto and Mr. Edward Isaacs will play the G Minor Concerto for piano and orchestra.

PEOPLE YOU WILL HEAR THIS WEEK.

Miss KATHERINE BACON (Pianist) will broadcast from London on September 27th.

Miss DAISY KENNEDY, the famous violinist, is to play at the Special Concert on September 29th. (S.B. to all Stations except "5 XX.")

Miss HILDA DEDERICH (Pianist) is to play at London on September 30th.

Mr. MELVILLE GIDEON, the "Co-Optimist," who will broadcast from London on October 3rd. (S.B. to all Stations.)

Mr. EASTHOPE MARTIN, the well-known song-writer, will conduct a programme of his own compositions on September 28th from London, S.B. to other Stations.

Mr. MILES MALLESON, the playwright and actor, who will broadcast in Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" (S.B. from London to other Stations) on October 1st.

Miss SHEILA KAYE-SMITH, the distinguished novelist, will be among the speakers at the Forum Club Dinner on October 1st, to be heard by Daventry listeners.

Mr. PERCY FROSTICK, who directs the Station Quintet at Leeds-Bradford on October 2nd.

VERDI'S "OTHELLO," ACTS II. and III.
(DAVENTRY, THURSDAY.)

VERDI was seventy-three years old when his Opera, Othello, appeared. Sixteen years had gone by since he had last produced an Opera. He was to produce yet another, Falstaff, in 1893, when he was in his eightieth year, and these last two, Othello and Falstaff, are everywhere held to be his greatest works.

Shakespeare's tragedy, Othello, is followed very closely in Verdi's Opera. When the Opera opens, the Moor, Othello, general in the Venetian army of the fifteenth century, has already married the high-born Desdemona of Venice. He brings her with him on an expedition to Cyprus. Othello has aroused the jealousy of his confidant, Iago, by promoting the lieutenant Cassio over him. Iago plans the fullest revenge, and begins by involving Cassio in a brawl and having him deprived of his post.

ACT II.

Iago's aim is now to make Othello doubt the faithfulness of Desdemona. The setting of this Act is a hall on the ground floor of the Castle, with a colonnade and a garden at the back.

First of all, IAGO (Baritone) enters the hall with CASSIO (Tenor) and in a brief talk advises him to ask Desdemona to plead for his reinstatement.

Cassio goes out, and Iago sings his famous "Creed"—I believe in a cruel God (that is the literal translation: the translation generally used for performance begins Cruel is he).

As he finishes, Desdemona is seen walking in the garden with Emilia (Iago's wife and Desdemona's attendant). Iago soliloquises as he sees Cassio join them.

OTHELLO (Tenor) now enters, just in time to catch sight of Cassio taking leave of Desdemona. In a long scene, Iago subtly, but thoroughly arouses in Othello suspicion of these two. At the end of this scene, the people of the island and the sailors throng the garden bringing gifts to Desdemona, and singing.

DESDEMONA (Soprano) presently enters the Hall, and Othello is much stirred by his love for her; but his suspicions are roused in earnest when she begins to plead for Cassio, and he repels her moodily.

EMILIA (Mezzo-Soprano) has come in with Desdemona, and picks up her mistress's handkerchief, which has fallen to the ground. The dialogue between Othello and his wife now develops into a QUARTET. Desdemona, with the humblest contrition, asks for pardon, if she has ever unwillingly offended, and vows her unbroken love; Othello broods over their love.

Iago wrenches the handkerchief from his wife; while she, Emilia, asks what evil he is planning. The two women go away, and Othello continues to brood. Suddenly his patience gives way and he turns fiercely on Iago, and flings him to the ground, telling him to prove his suggestion.

By and by Iago tells of Cassio's talking in his dreams of Desdemona, and of his having a handkerchief of hers in his possession.

Othello's frenzy is now complete, and he kneels and calls on "yonder marble heaven" to witness his oath of vengeance. Iago joins his oath to Othello's.

ACT III.

Iago and Othello are in the Great Hall of the Castle. After a HERALD (Bass) has announced the approach of the Venetian Ambassador, the two men exchange a few words. Iago withdraws, and Desdemona enters, and there follows a long scene between her and Othello. He demands the handkerchief, which she cannot produce. Othello is by turns ferocious, urgent and ironical; Desdemona is perplexed and distressed. She is, finally, thrust aside.

After a soliloquy by Othello, overcome with grief, Iago returns to tell him to hide and observe Cassio, who is coming. Othello retires as Cassio enters.

Iago now cunningly contrives a suggestive conversation with Cassio for Othello to overhear. Cassio produces Desdemona's handkerchief, which he has found in his room. The Scene ends with a Trio, Iago and Cassio apostrophizing the handkerchief, Othello (in the background) crying out against their treason.

Soon trumpets are heard on all sides, proclaiming the arrival of the Venetian envoys.

LONOVICO (Bass), the Ambassador, is loudly acclaimed by the people. He delivers a despatch to Othello, in which the Venetian Government recall him, appointing Cassio in his place.

The whole of Othello's party is present, including Desdemona. Othello is fast losing all self-control, and the others, astonished and puzzled, have to restrain him.

When Othello seizes his wife furiously, she falls to the ground, and sings Yea, prostrate here I lie in the dust. A big "ensemble" follows; consternation and foreboding are expressed by Desdemona, Emilia, Cassio, Roderigo (Tenor, a Venetian gentleman, secretly in love with Desdemona), Lodovico and the People; Iago urges Othello on to vengeance.

At last, Othello rises with a shout, and drives away the horrified crowd. Delirious, left alone with Iago, he falls in a swoon. The crowd is heard outside crying Hail, hail, Othello! Iago stands over the motionless body; See here the Lion! he says.

MENDELSSOHN'S VIOLIN CONCERTO.

(GLASGOW, ABERDEEN, EDINBURGH and DUNDEE, WEDNESDAY; BELFAST, FRIDAY.)

Mendelssohn's only Concerto for Violin and Orchestra is among the most popular of all Concertos. It deserves its popularity, for it is a light-hearted, pleasurable work, and while there is plenty of delicate elaboration in the Solo part, the musical value hardly ever fails.

The three Movements of the work are intended to be continuous, but a break is often made after the First Movement.

I.—Very quick, impassioned. There are two Main Tunes in this Movement. The first is given out at once, at a high pitch, by the Solo Violin. The Second (which is delayed for some time) is a placid melody played by a quartet of Flutes and Clarinets (Clarinets at first on the top), while, below, the Soloist sustains his lowest note.

Most of the Movement is made out of these two Tunes. At the end, if there is no break, a Bassoon is left suspended on a long-held note, which leads into—

II.—Moving gently. After a few introductory bars, the Solo Violin begins a long, tranquil "Song without words."

III.—Following on the Second Movement, there is a passage of meditation and indecision for Strings (led by the Soloist), then, with a preliminary fanfare, we are plunged into the lightest, most delicate, fleet-footed of dances.

[Listeners are reminded that we do not consider anonymous letters for publication. Preference is given to letters which combine interest with brevity. The Editorial address is 8-11, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.2.]

For Women Listeners.

DEAR SIR.—It would be a great boon to women if the afternoon Concerts of the B.B.C. were to begin at three o'clock, instead of four o'clock, as at present. Many mothers of young families get a quiet hour at this time of the day, when the housework is done and the children are at school and they can sit down to needlework or knitting. As things are now, no sooner do the mothers begin to listen at four o'clock than the children arrive home from school, clamouring for their tea, and there is no more quiet.

Yours, etc.,

Merton.

"A MOTHER OF FOUR."

Too Late?

DEAR SIR.—Do you not think that the Weather Forecast is broadcast too late in the morning? By 10.30 a.m. the average farmer has started his men to work, so that the forecast is no use to him. I propose a time between seven and eight o'clock.

Yours, etc.,

Little Hereford, Salop.

P. C. PRICE.

To Encourage Young Composers.

DEAR SIR.—Would-be composers have great difficulty in getting their works performed, and here is where the B.B.C. can be of service in helping and encouraging them.

Why not devote, say, one night per month to the performance of these compositions and invite composers to submit their music, which might be passed by the B.B.C. Musical Committee as being suitable and worthy of being broadcast?

I am sure if this matter could be arranged, it would not only encourage composers to develop their musical gifts, but be interesting to the listener.

Yours, etc.,

"CHIEF D'ORCHESTRE."

All In English?

DEAR SIR.—In a recent issue of The Radio Times, Mr. James Johnson makes a suggestion that operas should be broadcast in English. I would go still further and suggest that all songs should be broadcast in English.

Yours etc.,

Reading.

W. H. C.

Names for Radio Sets.

DEAR SIR.—Referring to your correspondent's request for a new short name for a receiving set, I suggest "Receptor," which is from a single quite good Latin root, "recipio"—I receive.

Yours, etc.,

Darwen.

ALEX. MACIVOR.

"Radiophone"?

DEAR SIR.—As a new name for a receiving set I suggest "Radiophone" as being appropriate.

Yours, etc.,

Shirley, Southampton.

WM. R. WILKINS.

Church Bells by Radio.

DEAR SIR.—I see that further transmissions of church bell ringing are to be made. Why not some of the beautiful peals of bells in London? Some of these rings are the finest in the country. No doubt the authorities of St. Martin's, Trafalgar Square, and other London churches could arrange with their ringers to give listeners some real bell music, such as can be obtained from such methods as Stedman, Double Norwich, etc.

Yours, etc.,

Heston.

Learning French by Radio.

DEAR SIR.—I want to make a suggestion concerning French for students. We insular people hear so little of the real French language spoken that very few even well-educated students are good listeners at present. A talk in French is just a little above most of us.

On the other hand, a short story or passage read from a book is received with joy. The two short stories by Daudet, "The Last Lesson," and "La Mort du Dauphin" were exactly what students need. To hear the story well read in real French, while the eye follows the page with complete perception is a most instructive lesson for young students.

The book should be continuous, as many of those who need the help most are not able to buy French books galore. Such a reading for twenty minutes once a fortnight would be much and widely appreciated, and would be a real service to international goodwill.

Yours, etc.,

Northampton.

A. E. MOORE.

A Choice of Stations.

DEAR SIR.—I would like to suggest how steps might be taken to give broadcasting a wider appeal.

It seems that there is room, under the present facilities of the B.B.C., to give a variety by means of a choice of stations. Living in a town near to Sheffield, Leeds, Nottingham, and Manchester, I often find that all these stations are relaying one programme, and that the same as Daventry, which is within the reach of a crystal set from here.

It seems unfortunate that stations within reach of a crystal set from Daventry should give the same programme. The ideal of catering for small sets is not only generous and democratic, but also necessary, since it leaves less excuse for one-valve holders to oscillate by tuning in for distant stations. Sheffield and Nottingham should not only avoid relaying Daventry's programme, but should avoid both relaying the same programme. When Nottingham relays Aberdeen, Sheffield should relay London, these two relay stations being next-door neighbours (except when there is a special programme).

At present, we have a group of stations in the same area all giving the same programme, and this is wasteful duplication when two such stations can be reached by a small set. If two or three good programmes were relayed each night and no one of them delivered to next-door neighbours in stations, and if each of these programmes were of a quite different nature, those who would be dissatisfied would be negligible in number.

Yours, etc.,

Chesterfield.

EDWIN H. BOYCE.

S.B. on Saturday.

DEAR SIR.—Referring to the letter of "A. R. F." may another sufferer express the exasperation occasioned by the Daventry Station's persistent avoidance of the Saturday-night's London programme, which provides a light and amusing fare particularly suitable to an end-of-the-week frame of mind?

Those who, to escape the almost incessant Morse on the shorter wave-lengths, tune in Daventry, are switched off on this evening to another station giving a programme often entirely opposed in spirit to that offered by London, and it would seem desirable that the Director of Programmes should unbend, and abandon, for at least one night, his ambition of wishing always to educate the provincial public, who would occasionally like to join in the mirth.

Yours, etc.,

Falmouth.

Voices and Brick Walls.

By Lionel Logue.*

THE above title may be a little puzzling, as, at the first glance, there seems very little analogy between such a beautiful thing as the trained speaking voice and such prosaic things as brick walls.

Do not think that it is like the curate's riddle: "What is that which has legs—creeps up walls, carries its house on its back—and barks like a dog?" the answer being "a snail."

But when it was pointed out to the curate that a snail does not bark like a dog, he replied that he had put that in himself to make the riddle harder!

Do You Breathe Correctly?

Now, in this instance, the brick walls are not mentioned to make it harder; but rather that you may realize that they are there when the following courses are open to you:—

You may go over them; walk around them; or, better still, avoid them altogether.

It seems almost incredible that such a natural thing as good speech should be so very often produced in such an unnatural way. If you ask any recognized teachers of voice production how many of their students breathe correctly, you will be astounded at the reply. I am certain that it will not be one per cent.; therefore, we come to our first brick wall—Defective Breathing.

We can safely say that this is the main defect of those who have to become efficient with the voice—therefore, the way to avoid the first brick wall is to breathe correctly.

Hard to Listen To.

Look around you and listen to the voices you hear—hoarse, rough, indistinct, and most unmusical. They can all be put in the same category as the performance of a friend of mine who was a brilliant pianist, and whose work once took him to a railway construction camp. At the local hotel, one Saturday evening, he played the usual jazz and popular melodies. At length, one of his friends asked him to play something good and, being in an artistic mood, he responded with one of Chopin's Ballads. Finishing, he sat for a moment and there was a long pause. Finally, a long, lanky platelayer, who had listened impassively, said:—

"Say, mate, is that hard to play?"

My friend replied: "Yes, very hard!"

"Well, you can take my word, it's harder to listen to!" So with untrained voices, they are, indeed, hard to listen to, and the well-modulated, sweet-toned voice is the exception, and not, as it should be, the rule.

The second brick wall we come to is: Defective Voice Production.

Ills That Follow.

Even after the breathing is conquered, the voice can be spoilt in production, that is, being taken through the vocal ligaments in an incorrect way. The ill that follows bad voice production are very great—the harsh, unmusical voice which so often carries with it a perpetual sore-throat—the voices that are too high, and too low—the voice that is perpetually husky, and it is possible to produce a voice so incorrectly as to produce aphonia—that peculiar state of only being able to speak in a whisper and in some severe cases not being able to speak at all. This is caused by the vocal ligaments going out of action, or, as it is generally called, not vocalizing.

The work of coaxing the voice back under these conditions is most fascinating, and the reward of hearing in a few weeks a well-modulated voice where, before, there was only a faint whisper, is gratifying to both patient and specialist.

The third brick wall is: Incorrect Pronunciation and Enunciation.

These two faults are of the gravest nature. Of what use is the sung or spoken word unless it can be heard and understood? As a boy, at church, I often wondered why the soloist used to sing so enthusiastically about such a mundane thing as "Bringing in the cheese," and it was only years afterwards, when I read the lines for myself, that I realized that he meant "Bringing in the sheaves."

Torture of the Spoken Word.

Nothing is more distressing than defective speech when it reaches the magnitude of a stutter or a stammer. I know of nothing which will build so huge a "brick wall" as this defect; the only consolation being that, with hard work upon the part of the student, it can now be cured in about three months; but the ignorance that is shown under this head is appalling.

People who have these defects can, in most cases, sing quite easily and shout at games without any difficulty; but the ordinary procedure of buying a tram-ticket or asking to be directed in the street, is untold agony.

Those who had to deal with these cases during and after the war know what a tremendous aid Vocal Therapy was and is—by bringing them the relief of the sung word from the torture of the spoken one.

"Dandy" Accents.

People who are slightly deaf can generally hear those who, when speaking to them pronounce their words distinctly and slowly, much better than those who shout and depend upon the volume of sound to do the work. A slow, distinct enunciation is to be preferred at all times.

In the United States, some years ago, I had occasion to accompany an Australian to purchase a pair of boots. The salesman took a long time, trying on unnecessary pairs, until we were both irritable and tired, and my friend firmly insisted upon leaving with the last pair tried on—whereupon, grasping his ankle, the salesman leaned back and in a burst of confidence, said:—

"I could listen to you talk all night—you've got the dandiest accent I've ever heard!"

He was probably the first Australian he had ever listened to.

The High Road to Perfect Speech.

I am sorry to say that "dandy" accents are not common around us—the brick walls account for most of them.

The secret of the whole thing is the ability to understand just what is wrong, and work hard to eradicate the fault.

Unfortunately, the ordinary man is very often not conscious of his own speech defects—like the poor, they are always with him—and his friends are too kind to point them out—and it is only when he gets under a specialist or teacher, whose business it is to be candid, that he discovers what a trial he must have been to his long-suffering friends.

A little argument upon the subject of your speech defect can do no harm, particularly if it be with one who understands the curative work. He will be able to point out to you all the obstacles, and if you rise to the ground the brick walls of Defective Breathing, Bad Voice Production, Incorrect Pronunciation and Enunciation, you are indeed on the high road that leads to the open fields of pure and perfect speech.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

NEWS FROM THE AUNTS AND UNCLES.

A Wicked Uncle.

A MERRY spirit is reigning in the Manchester Children's Corner. Auntie Hilda is having her work cut out to keep Uncle Eric in order. In fact, he grows more naughty every day. He is always interrupting Uncle Victor's detective stories, and when Uncle Ted starts talking about sylvan brooks, he advises him to go and have a look at the Irwell. There is a rumour that the other Uncles tried to give Uncle Eric a "cold tub" in the Irwell one day to cure him; but as it was more likely that he would be poisoned than drowned, they abandoned the attempt.

Musical Revues for the Children.

A popular feature which has just been introduced into the Manchester Children's Corner is the presentation, on alternate Saturdays, of a special musical revue, composed by Uncle Victor and Uncle Eric.

The numerous nieces and nephews of Manchester are also taking the opportunity of coming into the station to see their Aunties and Uncles on Saturdays between three and four o'clock.

A Jolly Picnic.

A very jolly picnic, organized by Miss Kathleen Gunn, of Bournemouth, who promised it to her little friends when she talked to them as Auntie Mysterious, was held on Saturday last.

Miss Gunn and three of her office colleagues, Misses Jones, Vernal and Harrison, arrived at the Waterfall, Chewton Glen, about 9.50, where they waited for forty-one nieces and nephews to meet them at 10 a.m.

There was great excitement when the Bournemouth bus arrived. Miss Jones called out: "Look, Miss Gunn, here they are!" and Auntie Mysterious looked up to see the road smothered in Fairy Leaguers.

The party immediately made for the shore and started at once with "rounders" to warm everybody up, as it was quite chilly. Afterwards, there were races, leap frog, etc. There was a pathetic appeal from one little person of twelve years for a wheelbarrow race, which most went through heroically, even the older ones. Then several had a lovely dip, after which all were glad to indulge in a real good lunch.

A request was then made from several to go for an excursion in the Glen, which they did, leaving Auntie Mysterious with the younger ones to play twos and threes, Cat and Mouse, and last, but not least, a three-legged race.

We then proceeded to a hut where a big urn was provided for tea, and at five o'clock we made our way back to the Waterfall, where three hearty cheers were given for Auntie Mysterious.

There is now a rumour that a social meeting in the winter will be the outcome of the picnic.

What Was It?

Little surprises are the order of the day at the Plymouth Studio, for the children of the West are firm believers in the salt of variety. So, the other day, the Aunties and Uncles determined to stimulate their young listeners with a quick change and a puzzle!

Modern songs had made the Studio reverberate and had put a somewhat unusual strain on poor old Mike; then there was a pause, and suddenly Uncle Bret rose in rebellion, and showing much unrestrained emotion, began to sing the oldest folk-song in England.

Now what was it? Your ideas on the subject would be interesting.

Important Concerts.

The first of the series of Children's concerts, organized by the People's Concert Society, in co-operation with the B.B.C., takes place to-day, September 25th, and the programme, each part of which will be prefaced by a brief introduction, will include Symphony No. 40 in G Minor (Mozart), which has Four Movements, and the following well-known short pieces for orchestra: Träumerei (Schumann), Minuet (Boccherini), Gavotte from the opera Mignon (Thomas), and Fiddle Dance (Fletcher). At the end of the first part of the concert the audience will take part in a five-minute sing-song.

Bustle Among the Bulbs.

Glasgow's Bulb Competition has begun and, judging by the number of letters and cards received by Auntie Cyclone and the Uncles, this competition is going to be ever so popular.

Auntie wishes badly that she might be able to look into all the little dark cupboards in the homes of her large family, just to see how many wee bowls are hidden away, to be brought out into daylight in about six weeks' time. Probably the Miniature Hyacinth Bulbs will be so conceited, for apart from the fact that the largest blooms will get prizes, they are all going to be taken to stay in the children's wards in various hospitals; so, of course, the flowers will be the biggest ones that have ever been seen!

It is to be hoped that none of the children will make such a dreadful mistake as Uncle Toccers did. He proudly planted his bulb, without getting instructions, and brought it for inspection. Now, can you guess what he had done? No! Well, the bulb was planted with its poor little head in the earth and, to crown all—that hyacinth was an onion! Poor Uncle Toccers!

UMPELDINK.

By CLARENCE WINCHESTER.

Jimmy and Jasmine looked on with wonder,

I DON'T suppose you've ever heard of Umpeldink. He lives in a little wooden hut on Pook's Hill; and, to look at, he is just as funny as his funny name. But, although he is funny, you cannot help liking him—because he is very good to little boys and girls who get lost in the mists of the hills.

Nobody knows where Umpeldink came from, and nobody knows where he is going to. He doesn't even know himself, for he always walks backwards and—like a lot of boys and girls I have seen—he doesn't look where he is going. (Perhaps you are like that, too!)

Umpeldink has a big round head and a small fat body, and his large laughing eyes are always blinking. Some people say he is a wizard, because he always returns lost children safely to their homes and when the grown-ups go to look at this queer fellow, they can never find him.

But Jimmy and Jasmine, brother and sister, of Jordan Cottage, assure me that they have seen him. And they wouldn't tell a fib to their uncle, would they?

Jimmy and Jasmine climbed up Pook's Hill to hunt for watercress, and when the time came for the sun to go to bed and for the moon to get up, they could not find their way back for mist.

"Oh, Jimmy, we're lost!" cried Jasmine. "Oh, Jasmine, we're lost!" echoed Jimmy. Then there was a silence, later broken by a squeaky little voice which said:—

"I am Umpeldink. Whatever do you think? I am Umpeldink. My eyes they always blink! Please do not make a sound, For I am Umpeldink. And I walk the wrong way round!"

"Oh, my!" said Jimmy and Jasmine. "What funny noises!"

"Noises!" exclaimed Umpeldink. "That was my sweet voice. I see that you are lost." He walked towards them backwards.

"I do believe he's a guy for November the Fifth; but he's dressed himself up too early." It was Jimmy speaking.

"And how can you see that we are lost if you walk backwards?" Jasmine asked.

"I see right round the world and up the other side," replied the queer little man. "Besides, I heard you say you were lost, so I saw with my ears as well, didn't I? Children of the Grown-Ups can't see out of their ears like that!"

Jimmy and Jasmine looked on with wonder. Umpeldink still stood with his back to them, and when they tried to talk to him face to face, he let them catch just a glimpse of his smile and then turned his back on them again.

"He has a very jolly nose," said Jimmy. "And his eyes are like blue porridge plates," said Jasmine. "I just caught sight of them." "There's no such thing as blue porridge," said Umpeldink. "You mean blue plates for porridge. I think you are very rude infants."

"We are not rude," remarked Jimmy. "We are lost!"

"Very well, then," gurgled Umpeldink. "I will guide you to your home—Jordan Cottage."

"He knows where we live," Jasmine whispered to her brother.

"I know where everyone lives," claimed Umpeldink. "Didn't I tell you I could see all round the world and up the other side? Jordan Cottage is on the way. Come along."

They found Umpeldink a gay friend. He took their hands, but still walked backwards as they tripped down the hill.

Jimmy decided to ask a question. "Will you please tell me, Mr. Umpeldink, why you walk that way and not nose first?"

"Because," replied Umpeldink, with a laugh, "I used to have a little dog for a pet and he was always dragging behind. He never would keep up with me, so I had to keep looking round. Soon I found it was easier to keep an eye on him if I walked backwards, and it became a habit."

"What happened to the dog?" Jimmy asked.

"Lost him," said Umpeldink. "He ran on in front one day, and I found walking backwards such a habit that I couldn't walk the other way. As he never walked right round the world, I couldn't catch him up. Ha, ha!"

At that moment they reached Jordan Cottage, and Umpeldink vanished suddenly. Jimmy's mother and father asked them where they had been.

"To see Umpeldink," the children replied. "And to gather watercress."

"You've been up to mischief," their mother remarked. "Watercress doesn't grow on hill tops. If you had looked where you were going, you would have been home earlier."

So there!

An Answered Prayer.

The Moving Story of : Great Hymn.

YOUNG people of to-day do not feel so affectionately towards the great hymns as did their parents. It is doubtful if, in these days of motoring and week-ending, many homes retain the old custom of family singing—sacred and secular—on Sunday evenings. Radio, too, must have helped the decline of a restful habit.

Except to serious musicians, the family musical evening, of which many of us who are still young have pleasant memories, no longer appeals, for we can get music of finer quality and in greater variety from our wireless receivers.

Sung From the Heart.

In some respects this is all to the good; in many cases "the neighbours" must be thankful! Still, those were pleasant Sunday evening hours in our childhood's days. I am reminded vividly of my own Sunday evenings at home whenever I hear "Lead, Kindly Light," or "Abide With Me."

The fine rendering of "Abide With Me" given by Mr. Rex Palmer from the London Studio on occasional Sunday evenings is more musicianly, but we also sang from our hearts if on a scale less sweet.

This preamble was suggested by an interesting correspondence in recent issues of The Times.

"Abide With Me" has been sung during the concluding tableau of the Tattoo in the Wembley Stadium, and the drama associated with its composition has been discussed anew. The hymn was written in September, 1847; two months later the author died. He was the Rev. H. F. Lyte, a great-grandfather of Sir Arthur Pearson, the publisher, and founder of St. Dunstan's Hostel for the Blind.

"Fast Falls the Eventide."

Another great-grandson of the hymn-writer, Mr. W. Maxwell-Lyte, wrote to The Times the other day as follows:—

"As one of the few living descendants of the author of the hymn 'Abide With Me,' which nightly thrills the great audiences in the Wembley Stadium, I have been greatly interested in the correspondence in The Times. It is only those who know the tragic circumstances under which this beautiful hymn was written who can explain the inner meaning of the words 'Fast falls the eventide.'

"My great-grandfather, the Rev. Henry Francis Lyte, the author of the hymn, was vicar of Lower Brixham, in these days a picturesque little fishing village on the shores of Torbay. He was the author of numerous poems and hymns, some of which are in 'Hymns Ancient and Modern.' During the latter part of his life he devoted himself to the service of the humble fisher folk of Brixham, among whom were many of his best friends.

A Last "Good-bye."

"His labours undermined his health, but he persisted in his noble work until his health broke down completely under the strain and his doctor told him he must go abroad at once. He was then dying of consumption. He preached his farewell sermon the following Sunday evening in Lower Brixham church and, after the service, walked slowly home to his house at Berry Head. It happened that on that night there was one of those glorious sunsets which are sometimes to be seen at Torbay. The sun was setting in a blaze of glory and the purple hills of distant Dartmoor stood out darkly against a flaming sky. In the foreground was Brixham harbour like a pool of molten gold. Several times on the way home the poet stopped to rest and to gaze on this wonderful manifestation of Nature. We can well imagine his feelings. He had just said 'Good-bye' for the last time to his parishioners, and he knew that he had only a few weeks at most to live. The setting day reminded him insistently of his life, which was drawing swiftly to its close.

"It was during this walk that he prayed that before he died he might be allowed to write one message of consolation to humanity which would endure for ever.

"On arriving home he went to his study and there and then wrote the immortal hymn which has enriched our language and brought comfort and consolation to millions. His prayer was, indeed, answered.

The Triumph of Faith.

"No one who knows the circumstances under which the hymn was written can sing it without feeling some of the emotion which inspired the poet as he wrote about the eventide of his own life.

"The final verse, which is, perhaps, the finest and most beautiful of all, represents the triumph of faith and hope over despair:—

Hold Thou Thy Cross before my closing eyes,
Shine through the gloom and point me to the skies,
Heaven's morning breaks and earth's vain shadows flee,
In life, in death, O Lord, abide with me."

There we have the moving story of a hymn that has touched the hearts of countless people all over the world.

Mr. Lyte also composed a melody for his words, but it is seldom heard now. Dr. Monk's splendid work, "Eventide," has become recognized as the ideal tune for "Abide With Me." This melody was—like the words—written in a few minutes. With the late Sir Henry Baker, Dr. Monk was editing "Hymns Ancient and Modern." They were considering "Abide With Me," when Dr. Monk returned home and wrote his great melody—in a quarter of an hour!

SONGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW.

"Hindu Song" ("Chanson Indoue").

THE Hindu Song from Rimsky-Korsakov's opera, Sadko, will be sung by Miss Annette Blackwell at Newcastle on Saturday, October 3rd. The French words are by M. Delibes and L. Laloy. The following English translation (which we publish by permission of the publishers, Messrs. Hawkes and Son) is by Fanny S. Copeland.

UNNUMBERED gems in vaulted caves lie treasured,

Beneath our sunlit seas lie pearls unnumbered;

Great is the wealth of Hindustan.

'Mid those hazyon waters

On a rock of sapphire

Dwells the bird called Phoenix,

With a woman's features,

Singing songs of Eden

With surpassing sweetness,

Screening all the ocean

With her glorious plumage.

Whoso hears her singing,

All things else forgetteth.

Unnumbered gems in vaulted caves lie treasured,

Beneath our sunlit seas lie pearls unnumbered;

Great is the wealth of Hindustan.

It will interest listeners to know that of nineteen S.O.S. messages broadcast from London during August, twelve were successful, six were unsuccessful, and one result was unknown.

Winter Wireless.

Putting Your Set in Trim.

NOW is the time thoroughly to overhaul your wireless apparatus in preparation for the coming winter. Your outdoor wireless apparatus has probably had no attention for many months.

Rain and fog, frost and snow, will find the defects which you may miss by any casual examination. And you can be pretty certain that those defects will only fully develop on the night when you most particularly want to hear the broadcast programmes.

Is Your Aerial to Blame?

That is the law of cussedness which applies to most things, and, of course, it will be raining hard, particularly in your garden, on that night.

So make sure that your aerial pole is sound. Aerial wires generally last a long time, but quickly get choked with soot and dirt, particularly in the big cities. Thus, they lose much of their effectiveness in intercepting the signals from the transmitting stations.

Even if you do not renew the whole wire, as many experts advocate, you should do so occasionally, because the cost is only a few shillings. It should be taken down and the dirt rubbed off.

And look out for broken strands. An aerial defective in this way can easily set up unwanted noises in reception, for which you will wrongly blame your set.

Dirt, the Enemy.

Clean the insulators. A dirty insulator cannot do its work properly, particularly in wet and foggy weather. Low-power and long-distance stations cannot be satisfactorily heard except on a 100 per cent. efficient aerial system.

When undertaking these overhauls, remember that the higher your aerial, the better results you get. Another ten or twenty feet in height, particularly at the house end of the wire, might make a material difference to reception. Forty feet high and sixty feet long is an excellent layout.

The lead-in is another important part of your outside equipment. A lead-in tube gives the best results, but many people rely on a piece of insulated wire carried into the house through a hole in the window frame.

Constant movement soon frays through the insulation, causing leakage of the currents which the aerial picks up.

Avoid the Gas-Pipe!

A bare-wire lead-in should be as far removed from the brickwork of the house as possible. Even without actual contact signal strength is lost by the proximity of any conductive element to your lead-in.

A good "earth" is as essential as a good aerial. There are now many excellent devices which will assist you to get the very best results from your set, and which most listeners can use without having to rely on a water-pipe to earth their sets. Give your set the shortest possible path to earth. It will pay you, and don't use a gas service pipe for the purpose. It may be dangerous if you do. There may be several soldered joints, both in your aerial and earth systems. See that these are absolutely secure.

It is the same with your receiving set. Test all joints for bad connections.

If your set is of the crystal kind, with a cat's-whisker detector, the crystal may have got dirty. A good way of cleaning it is to brush it gently with a paint brush.

Another method is to remove the crystal from its setting and wash it with petrol or benzol. However you do it, be careful not to finger the crystal more than possible.

Valve sets are naturally more complicated. All these things are necessary preliminaries to the full enjoyment of winter's wireless.—T.W.D.

The Truth About John Henry.

By SYDNEY A. MOSELEY.

"HULLO, everybody! John Henry calling. Oh, it's all wrong!"

There is hardly a listener who really fails to listen at the sound of the quaint, plaintive call. Aye, when John Henry uses the formal "Hullo, everybody!" it is indeed everybody he is addressing.

Of course, it would be absurd to say that everybody raves about John Henry. There does not live the idol or super-man, much less the humorist, who can count the world his friend. Just as there are varying types of listeners—some merely half-listeners and some not even that—so there are many brands of humour, broad, subtle, wittily suggestive and suggestively witty!

Wasted Effort.

Each of us has his own particular type of funny man, the eyebrow, the knockabout, the dialect, the raconteur.

Some comedians of world renown used to bring down the house, while I would wonder whether I was ill or merely brought up badly, because I couldn't raise a laugh.

Humorists sometimes complain of wet blankets in their audiences. "Everybody else in the hall was shrieking with merriment and one old stick didn't even smile," one told me. Another said he determined to make "a moody man" in the front row laugh, but, although he tried his hardest, he failed.

What wasted effort! And what a complete misunderstanding of psychology. The unmoved man, of course, might have been deaf, but, in that case, I wager he would have laughed at what would appear to him to be the comedian's dumb antics.

Seriously, though, that man might have been unmoved for several reasons. He might not have been attuned to that particular brand of entertainment. He might be a sentimentalist—he might be in love—and while appreciating the surroundings of a place of entertainment, he might be enjoying his own day-dreaming in the atmosphere which he most appreciated.

As Rare as Radium.

Yet the main reason why some people do not laugh at humour is because its cleverness appeals to them more than anything else. And you can't shriek with merriment at cleverness. "That's a good joke," one might say wholeheartedly, while another, who does not appreciate the humour so completely, gives out guffaws of laughter.

I sat next to a friend of mine at a pierrot show once.

"Well, what did you think of it?" I asked him.

"Quite good—quite good," he replied.

"But you seemed awfully bored," I said. "You didn't laugh once."

"Oh, but I really liked it all the more. I took it all in."

Disappointed humorists please note.

Real humour is as rare as radium. Any impresario, editor or publisher will tell you of lifelong searches for the man who can lighten the burdens of existence by making us laugh. The B.B.C. took a tremendous risk in "finding" John Henry and, as they say, "playing him big." John Henry, at any rate so far as the metropolis is concerned, was unknown before the advent of broadcasting. I never heard of him till he was introduced to a critical world from "2LO." Whether he had a reputation up North, I do not know; but it enables one to make a better critical survey of his work at the microphone by not having known about him before.

Has John Henry justified himself to the public and to the B.B.C.? Has he merely emulated the meteoric careers of many big finds, shooting high up at first and then descending ingloriously to the ground? In a word, is John Henry as good as he was, or as good as he should be? Or, again, does he depend, as so many stars do, upon skilfully conducted propaganda? Many great stars are "made," not born!

A Trying Task.

Now, the fact that I am writing this article for The Radio Times does not in the least influence me. If I thought that John Henry had outlived his popularity, or, as happens to most of us, he had grown stale, I would not hesitate to say so. To be critical, one need not be hard and unfair. The harsh man is never a fair critic; neither is the ill-informed. One must be in possession of all the facts.

To maintain a consistently high level of humour is most difficult and the most trying task imaginable. To be constantly original is as hopeless as trying to be funny to order. Yet, just imagine how rare is original humour. Some of our best-known comedians sufficiently illustrate the great scarcity of fresh ideas. The majority of them use the same "gags" year after year. Let us be kind and mention no names.

A famous comedian in the last West-End show I saw hardly altered a line, a "gag," or an expression from those he used when I first saw him twenty years ago. They were not even his own ideas, but were, in a manner of speaking, syndicated among the whole community of funny men, so that one saw and heard duplicates, triplicates, all over the country.

One writes this more in sorrow than in surprise. Read the humorous newspapers. Are not nearly all the jokes brazen chestnuts, or old friends masquerading in fancy dress? To use the musical phrase, they are variations on an old popular theme.

New Successes on Old Lines.

Therefore, my sympathy goes out to those who try to amuse us. There are a good many artists at the microphone whom I envy, but John Henry—never! Besides being without the many "props" which help the stage humorist, J. H. has to do something fresh every time he makes his call. It is no use announcing that "John Henry will repeat his latest success," because the latest success must be a new success. And he must maintain interest nevertheless along the old lines—an inconceivably difficult task, for Fickle Jade rules human nature as steadfastly as Blossom rules John. We tire of the things we love best. The song of yesterday which stirred our emotions, to-day but brings a yawn. The companion who interested us then, now bores us.

Judging, therefore, from the broad standard, the truth about John Henry is that he fulfils his rôle as premier of laughter-makers to the B.B.C. as well as any humorist in this country could. I do not know of any other humorist who has won his spurs in other directions who could so successfully and so consistently fill the rôle.

"Let it Rip!"

There may be those, of course, who prefer him when he occupies the centre of the microphone à la sevl.

Others would have those bright character sketches where, with the aid of such excellent contrasts as Blossom, Lizzie, and the rest, one is able to appreciate the inimitable dry humorist all the more.

I began this article with the comment that no humorist can expect to find the whole world at his feet. And if I may offer one word of criticism, it is this—in those half-hour skits there sometimes seems to be an atmosphere that suggests self-consciousness. Through the loud speaker the impression that is conveyed to me is that John Henry and his party make too serious an effort to "put it across."

It is the kind of strainedness that one sees on occasions of first-nights of theatres.

My suggestion to you, John Henry, is this: Let it rip! You are going along quite nicely and your latest efforts are better than ever. They are bright, witty, and amusing. Possibly, the longer you and your team work together, the easier it will be for you all to throw off this suggestion of restraint. You can all afford to forget the microphone. Your world of listeners can't applaud you so that you can hear and be encouraged; but, believe me, we are all with you.

Mrs. Brown: "Mary, Mr. Brown has been getting Coblenz on his crystal set."
Mary: "It isn't my fault, mum, I dust it every morning."

The Best "earth" on Earth

The Climax Earth gets right to the root of the matter, does its job thoroughly and cuts out all possibility of any loss, and to-day the best earth on earth is

THE CLIMAX RADIO EARTH.

THE CLIMAX RADIO EARTH (Prov. Pat. 17653)—the low-loss direct tubular earth. Far better than the old-fashioned water-pipe or gas-pipe earth. The latest pattern is provided with flanges, which break up and help to fill in the earth around the tube thereby preventing any rocking of the tube in the ground. In addition the projections on the surface of the tube provide water courses which make for perfect electrical contact. Ready for use. Easily fitted. Maximum efficiency.

Length approx. 30 ins. ... Price 5/-
Climax Insulated Low Loss Earth Lead, 20 ft. ... Price 1/8

THE NEW CLIMAX AERIAL INSULATOR. (Registered Design No. 708718.) This will stand four times the flash-over voltage of the ordinary cheap shell or egg insulator, while it has far less capacity to earth. It is made of the same High-Tension vitreous porcelain as the 100,000-volt insulators on High Power transmission lines. It will stand a direct pull of hundreds of pounds. It is entirely non-hygroscopic. It cannot absorb moisture even if fractured. IT INSULATES PERFECTLY DURING RAINFALL. It is self-cleaning on all surfaces. Price per pair, 1/-.

The Climax Insulated Shock Absorber Set, comprising set of four Climax Low-Loss Aerial Insulators and two Climax Aerial Shock Absorbers, 3/- per box.

THE CLIMAX LIGHTNING ARRESTER.

Made in the multi-gap quenched spark principle. Provides atmospheric discharge and lightning discharges with a straight path to earth of very low resistance. Protects the set whether in use or not. NO SWITCHES NECESSARY. The mica insulating discs and series multiple gaps ensure complete absence of sparking effect, leaving your signals at maximum strength. The glass cover protects the gaps from becoming semi-conducting due to dirt, damp or other interference. Price 7/6 complete, ready to fit.

THE CLIMAX POPULAR CRYSTAL SET.

A set with a highly efficient tuning system. Fitted with Climax superb Crystal and Climax unique design Cathode-ray. Price for 300-500 metres wavelength, 12/6. (Shortwave and Daventry adjustable loading coil, 3/6.

the Table-Talker

TRADE MARK

*re-designed and improved
—and at a lower price*

Never is a Brandes instrument considered free from any further need of investigation. Our constant study of acoustics is continually revealing secrets of the science of sound as applied to radio. In a word, we are always "bullying" the electrical impulse to see if it is possible to improve its transformation to audible sound. A re-designed and improved Table-Talker is one result of efforts in this direction. Pleased, also, that we can produce such a useful loud-speaker at moderate cost, we are "whipping" up the production to be able to sell it at a reduced price. It is, of course, covered by the Brandes guarantee to either return the purchase money or replace the instrument if you happen to be dissatisfied in any way.

Any good dealer stocks Brandes.

The horn of the Table-Talker has been re-created to aid in the production of clearer and more rounded tones. The new goose-neck design is the result of research in radio acoustics which definitely establish its value in relation to the diaphragm fitted. One feature remaining unchanged is the patent material used in the construction of horn. It softens and absorbs any suggestion of harshness and avoids metallic resonance. It is now possible to control volume and selectivity with the small lever located at the rear of the base, and to tune-in to a finer degree. Elegantly shaped, it still has that tasteful neutral brown finish and felt-padded base. Height 18 ins., bell 10 ins.

Ask your dealer for the Table-Talker.

Like wine, the Wuncell improves with age—

IT is a remarkable fact that the Wuncell—alone among Dull Emitters—actually improves with age. Whereas in most dull emitters the filament loses much of its emission through course of time, that used in the Wuncell actually gains in productivity of electrons.

The Wuncell filament is unique. It is built up layer upon layer under an entirely new process. As a result it is exceptionally robust. When next you get the opportunity to examine a Wuncell compare its filament with that used in any other dull emitter—or even in any bright emitter. You will be amazed at its thickness. It is practically as stout as that used in the average bright emitter. Yet its wonderful economy of current will enable a six-volt accumulator (with its cells re-connected in parallel to give 2 volts) to give 70 hours' use where it gave but 9 before.

Couple that exceptional economy with the fact that the filament never gets hotter than a very dull red and you will readily realise that even if Wuncells cost twice as much they would be much cheaper in the long run than any bright emitter.

Eventually you'll use Wuncells—why not begin now? Buy them one by one as your present valves become useless. If they will save you money in a month's time, they will save you money now.

"I have tried the crystal and am pleased with it. It is O.K. and in engineering language O.K. means pretty near perfect. I have tried no end of crystals and all kinds of sets—valve sets included—but for London given a decent crystal set and a good crystal there is nothing to beat the quality and purity of tone. There was a man once who was asked if he could play the fiddle and he replied that he did not know because he had never tried. The Cosmos Valves are in no such doubt. They reproduce the tone of the violin perfectly, and never confuse it with any other instrument. Wonderful instrumentalists, the Cosmos Valves.

This combines remarkably efficient rectification with good high and low frequency amplification and works successfully off a single 2 volt accumulator or dry batteries.

A.45 (Bright Emitter Type)

This type is an excellent "General Purpose" valve which gives brilliant results. It combines the advantages of other high and low frequency valves in the one valve.

Ethophone V. (Mark V) complete with four Burndept Super Valves, coils and instrument leads; without Bolters - £35 : 0 : 0.

The new model Ethophone V.

The Super-Vernier Dial affords a complete solution to the need for fine adjustment in the selective wireless receivers of to-day. It gives a 7:1 reduction by means of a friction-driven epicyclic gear. This gear ratio of 7:1 has been selected after very careful trial as giving the best possible results and velvety smoothness. The simple mechanism (illustrated below) is absolutely noiseless and completely free from backlash. This component of the Ethophone V. is a standard Burndept Product.

is a very fine instrument, giving excellent results wherever it is used. It employs four valves and is built in a polished mahogany cabinet fitted with double doors. Besides being handsome in appearance, the Ethophone V. (Mark V) is perfect in every technical detail. Its reception range is from 150 to 200 miles but better results are quite usual. A special self-contained selective device is incorporated. The Ethophone V. is fitted with four Burndept Super Valves which are fully guaranteed while both tuning condensers are fitted with Burndept Super Vernier Dials. This Dial, being a new Burndept product, is of special interest to all wireless enthusiasts. On the left is a full description and an illustration showing the mechanism of the Super-Vernier Dial.

Reproduction*

The RADIOLUX AMPLION
Large Mahogany Model.

The

RADIOLUX

Series

of hornless Loud Speakers introduces the nearest approach to the ever-present ideal—perfect reproduction of Radio Broadcast.

This new masterpiece blends the art of furniture design with the science of electro-acoustics.

Here the living voice and true perspective in musical reproduction are within the immediate reach of all interested in Radio. Sensitive to a degree, loud in its fullest measure, with unequalled brilliance and clarity, real music at last enters the home upon the trail of the Wireless Wave, providing an AMPLION is there to voice its accents.

The Radiolux series of cabinet styles is available in several alternative forms of varying capacity at "utmost value" prices, ranging from £4 15s.

For those who may still wish to procure the hitherto standard horn models, available in the Junior variety at even lower costs, the manufacturers continue to offer the famous "Dragon" range, a series known in every quarter of the globe.

It is a business principle of the House of Graham that every AMPLION user shall secure the best possible results, and an unconditional guarantee of satisfaction with the advantage of free service is extended to every purchaser of a genuine

DO AS I DO

Makes all the Difference in the World

I would never ask you to do as I did in the early days of broadcasting. That would involve you in more than wasted money and temper.

But I do ask you to do as I do now.

No matter how perfect your set may be, you can only obtain perfect reception by using the right valve.

I have found the most wonderful valve—a real master valve—with majestic volume, great range and purity of tone. A valve that means solid happiness from the moment you take it from its attractive box.

You can put an end to mediocre reception to-day by asking for—

Efescaphone RECEIVING SETS

Efescaphone Receiving Sets are ideal for family use. They are simple to tune, safe in the hands of a novice, and can be relied upon to give satisfaction at all times. With the 4-valve Nelson Efescaphone (illustrated) no extra coils or tuning devices are required to tune in any station working on a wavelength between 150-4,000 metres. That means you can bring in Daventry by the turn of a switch in place of the local station.

STOCKPORT.

The thanks of all Crystal users ought to be extended to you for exposing the 'Crystal' profiteering ramp. I was doubtful as to whether a good crystal could be sold at the low price of Sixpence, and simply as an experiment bought one of your 'Mighty Atom' Crystals and the results were simply astonishing, every spot sensitive and the volume is really remarkable. I have tried nearly all the much advertised brands and I may say the 'Mighty Atom' is as good as any and better than many. Good luck to you. Super Economy B5

THE feature of the B5 Valve is that its current consumption is so small— $\frac{1}{16}$ th of an ampere—that dry batteries of very small dimensions can be used. It is, therefore, the ideal valve for use in portable receivers, or wherever accumulators are undesirable or impracticable. As an all-round general purpose valve it is unsurpassed. Its electrical characteristics are given below:—

Filament Voltage	-	-	-	2.8 volts
Filament Current	-	-	-	0.06 amp
Anode Voltage	-	-	-	20 to 80 volts
Anode Resistance	-	-	-	17,000 ohms

The B5 Valve is as good a detector and amplifier as any bright-emitter, but only takes $\frac{1}{16}$ th as much current as the latter.

Fifty Years Ago

Now—as then—Pioneers

FIFTY years ago! Cobbled streets—knifeboard horse-buses—ladies on their croquet lawns alarmed almost to fainting-point at sight of a “telegraphic message”—yet already Ericsson’s were deep in the study of the new and miraculous science of telephony. The experience of those early pioneers lies at the root of Ericsson supremacy to-day.

In Ericsson headphones, that most difficult problem of all—uniform sensitivity over the whole scale—has been triumphantly solved. As the music enters the microphone, so it is reproduced, in full volume, yet without harshness, without distortion, without loss of tonal quality.

Brown Crystavox.

Brown H2.

—here are three world-famous Brown Loud Speakers

THE Brown H1 Loud Speaker has acquired an exceptional reputation on account of the purity of its tone and its remarkable volume. Whereas most Loud Speakers make use of a flat diaphragm attracted by the poles of an electro-magnet (similar to the ordinary telephone), the Brown utilises an entirely different principle—that of an aluminium cone-shaped diaphragm anchored to a reed of great sensitiveness. This method of construction permits a much more faithful rendering of both the high and the low notes with an entire absence of the distortion often attributed to Loud Speakers. An external screw permits of the reed being set for its most sensitive position.

The small Brown Loud Speaker (Type H2) has been designed essentially for use in the small room where the loudness of the large model is not required. Since identical principles of the large type are employed (although reduced in size) the purity of its tone and its faithful reproduction are fully retained. In such a small Loud Speaker the correct shape of the horn is of paramount importance and the remarkable volume of sound produced by an instrument standing but 12 inches high is a tribute to its scientific design.

The Crystavox is a Loud Speaker working direct from a Crystal Receiver without the use of Valves or other Amplifiers. It is merely connected direct to the Crystal Set in place of the Headphones and, with the addition of a small six volt dry battery, it is immediately ready for use. It should be understood, however, that the Crystal Receiver must already be capable of producing loud signals (which should be heard with the phones 12 inches from the ear) before the Crystavox can be used.

For those living within easy crystal range of a Broadcasting Station, there is no better method of obtaining loud speaker results than by the use of the Crystavox. Perfect purity of reception, ample volume, absolute simplicity, practically no upkeep costs—these are the advantages of the Crystavox Loud Speaker.
