Problems of the Programmes.

By J. C. SQUIRE.

[The writer of this article is a well-known author and journalist, and is Editor of the "London Mercury." His views on the ideal broadcast programme should prove both valuable and instructive].

THE programmes of the B.B.C. have lately been subjected to a good deal of criticism. The complainants come from the minority who think that the programmes are not "good" enough. I happen to belong to that minority; but I happen also to be sufficient of a realist to be aware that my tastes are not everybody's tastes, and that it would be a crime to inflict programmes which would altogether suit me upon the masses of my fellow-countrymen.

Let us try to face the question squarely. To do that, we have to realize the nature of the public, or publics, whom we are serving, or whom we desire to serve. First of all, let us make a rough division. There is no use in pretending that the majority of the population wishes to hear the music of Debussy or Ravel, or even to hear young poets reciting their works, or even to hear old poets reciting their works. To the majority of listeners, whether we think of the million licensees existing or of the whole population which may become licensees, these things are, and will be, caviare. They are not interested; or they do not understand; or they have a hard day and are only seeking for entertainment.

On the other hand, there is a minority keenly interested in good music, or even in modern music, or even in modern verse, who chafe and fret if they are served with a long series of fox-trots, one-steps, songs about lifeboatmen, and lectures about carburettors.

These are rough divisions, but there are all sorts of cross-divisions. People are not all of one piece; intellectual and artistic or unintellectual and inartistic. There are people who would be satisfied to hear a lecture about the fauna of Kent, but whose tastes in music are very elementary; there are people who have a discriminating ear for the latest music, but who do not in the least want to listen to sober lectures on difficult, or even serious, subjects. There are certain popular elements—in a programme—the after-dinner fox-trot, for instance—which are probably wanted by almost every individual in the country in an age when poets or Fellows of the Royal Society dance, and dance in the same measures as subalterns, housemaids, shop-assistants and American visitors.

Mr. J. C. SQUIRE.

There are, again, certain "high-brow items," such as operatic performances, which make a much wider appeal than other "high-brow items."

The B.B.C. for two years has been attempting the difficult task of pleasing all these publics and cross-publics with a single programme. The term "a single programme" may be disputed. There has certainly been a number of area programmes. But, in point of fact, one seldom finds that switching off to a provincial station is much good if one is looking for something less popular than the London Station is giving out. In the nature of things the country programmes are even more "popular" than the London

The Making of Military Bands.

What Kneller Hall is Doing for British Music.

MOST of us who are confirmed listeners are also confirmed critics of broadcasting. Each of us has his own notions of how broadcasting should be conducted. Some of us are more articulate about wireless than about anything else. The British Broadcasting Company, I believe, has yet to hear of an enthusiast who is unequivocally satisfied.

But one feature of the programmes that, so far as my own experience goes, has been as little carped about as any, and is evidently more widely appreciated than many, is the inclusion of the military bands—the band of H.M. Grenadier Guards, the Royal Air Force band, the Coldstream Guards' band, and others—that at intervals have entertained us from the various stations.

A Stimulant For Troops.

Without drawing invidious comparisons, it is fair, I think, to say that these bands have captured the imagination of listeners as no other bands could. Why? One may give as the answer that our liking for martial music is more or less primal. As Colonel J. A. C. Somerville, Commandant of the Royal Military School of Music, pointed out to me recently, "The pomp and panoply of glorious war" have been from time immemorial linked with music in some form or other.

"Until comparatively recently," said Colonel Somerville, "music, from the military standpoint, was looked on as a stimulant for troops going into action, or as a signal for the performance of certain evolutions. For this reason, the trumpet and the drum were for a long time the only instruments used by armies. Bartholmæus, writing in 1366, mentions that a 'trompe is an instrument properly ordeyned for man that fighteth in battayle . . . Men in old tyme usyd trompes in battayle to fere and affraye theyr ennyes, and to comfort their own knyghtes and fyghtynge men.'

Introduced by the Crusaders.

"Precisely how the British Army got its bands, or the rudiments of them, it is not easy to say. The Crusaders are believed to have introduced the drum; while it is known that a type of clarion, and a wooden pipe, called a 'wayghte,' were added by degrees. The fife was in use in the middle of the sixteenth century, drums and fifes being referred to in a record pertaining to a muster of London troops in 1540. At the battle of St. Quentin, in 1557, there was a trumpet to each English cavalry troop, and a drum and fife to each hundred men on foot. Here, I think, we have the first step in the formation of the military band as we know it."

Queen Elizabeth had a preference for military music, according to one chronicler, and often commanded a recital of kettledrums, trumpets, and fifes and drums combined.

Paid by the Officers.

By the middle of the eighteenth century, drum and fife bands were widely established among infantry regiments, the trumpet prevailing among the cavalry. From this period onward the military band proper began to take definite shape, the first mention of an organized "band of musick" being in 1760, the band in question being composed of trumpets, horns, bassoons, and hautbois, the last-named soon afterwards being displaced by the clarinet, said to have been introduced into this country by the father of Johann Sebastian Bach.

One of the earliest forerunners of the modern military band was the Royal Artillery band, formed in 1762, and based on certain bands already instituted in Germany. At this time, and, indeed, for a considerably later period, the military band had no official status whatever. The bands were composed of civilian players; they were engaged by the officers of the regiment, by whom they were paid.

At one time there was a decided preference for German players; at another Italians were in favour; and at another Negro drummers were much in demand. Traces of the last-named vogue remain in the leopards' skins worn by some drummers, and in the gyrations of the drum-major's staff, the last regiment to disband its black drummers being the 29th Foot, in 1843.

The Bewildered Duke.

The history of the British military bands up to this time is largely one of extraordinary divergencies in organization and instrumentation, each band being subject to the whims of its bandmaster, who pursued his course without reference to, or concern for, the progress of military music as a whole. It is a fact that our army bands of to-day are suffering, in at least one gravely important detail, from the muddle existing at this period, namely, in the matter of musical pitch, which differs from that of all other bands. The massed British bands at the Queen's birthday parade at Varna, in 1854, struck up the National Anthem in such a bewildering variety of pitches, that the Duke of Cambridge was moved, when he became Commander-in-Chief, to order that henceforth the National Anthem should be played in B Flat!

A Gulf Between.

It was through the Duke of Cambridge's initiative that the Royal Military School of Music, centred at Kneller Hall, Twickenham, came into being seventy years ago. Regiments were invited to subscribe to the cost of training bandmen and fully qualified bandmasters, and military bands began to take a more important part in regimental history.

Unfortunately, the Kneller Hall authorities standardized a pitch for military bands that fixed a gulf between military and civil music, with the result that ever since that time co-operation between the two has been quite impracticable. One of Colonel Somerville's aims has been to see this radical difference abolished.

Trained From Boyhood.

"The status of the military band in the world of music," said Colonel Somerville, "is rapidly improving, and composers of the first rank are now writing music specially for it. Most of our army bandmen, some of whom are very fine musicians, have been in training from boyhood, as members of the various schools and institutions from which most of them are recruited. At Kneller Hall each student is given a thorough grounding in such subjects as harmony, instrumentation, aural training, composition, elocution, choral work, and conducting. All the students in turn receive practical instruction in the last-named throughout the three years' course by means of the outdoor military band concerts in summer, and indoor orchestral performances in winter. An examination in the theoretical subjects is held two years after a student joins the school. His third and final year is devoted to the more practical aspects of the work."

That the military band is no longer regarded as being an inconsiderable force in music is due very largely to Colonel Somerville's own efforts to raise in every possible way the prestige of military music.

Problems of The Programmes.

ones, and the times are few when one can turn off London to find something more recherché (forgive the term) coming from Bournemouth or Birmingham, where resources are naturally not what they are in London.

How has the B.B.C. in the London Station done its work? As one who has at least glanced through most of its programmes, I think it has done it extremely well. There was a certain amount of groping at the beginning, but recently the programmes have, I believe, been as good as they could be. Complaints have been made. They have been made from two sides. We have had the minority complaining that they really don't want the Children's Hour, that they cannot bear "I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby," and that what they want is an unbroken stream of concertos, symphonies, Schubert, and Hugo Wolf rounded off with speeches and recitations by the greatest statesmen and the most accomplished men-of-letters of the day. This complaint is the one of which we have heard most.

There are people, no doubt, who are annoyed whenever they hear songs about "My Beautiful Garden of Love"; but it should not be forgotten that the B.B.C. is consciously boring a very large number of licensees every time that it permits somebody to talk sense about the League of Nations or to sing a song by Schumann or to play anything Russian except, perhaps, Rachmaninoff's "Prelude." My own impression is that the B.B.C. have not been conspicuously neglectful of their duty to culture or of the needs of the "minority public."

Nevertheless nobody is satisfied; nobody even approaches being satisfied. What is the deduction? The deduction is that it is impossible to please even the present large public of listeners—with a single programme. It is true that several programmes are available. As it is, the alternative service from the new high-power station reaches perhaps nearly half the population "on crystal." This is not enough. Agreed. But the point is really irrelevant. I have always believed that discontent will not be allayed or the possibilities of broadcasting fully exploited until at least two complete programmes are sent out side by side from the London Station every day. I am not suggesting an ideal; the ideal would be "one man—one programme," which is patently impracticable; I am only suggesting an approach to the ideal.

There is no question of branding one listener as a Philistine and one as a cultivated person, one as a sheep and one as a goat. The transition from one wave-length to another can be made, and will thousands of times a day be made, in an instant. But the regular, unintermittent programme for educated people ought to be there every week, for the minority to use all or most of the time, and the majority to dip into whenever they feel inclined for something less ephemeral than usual and whenever they are tempted by a theme which happens to be within their special field of interest. The London Station is an essential for programme No. 2; the music may be played anywhere, but executive talent is chiefly centred in London.

I am convinced that an "A" service, run every day from London, and run on the standards of the best concert-halls and the most educated magazines, would satisfy, as they are not being satisfied at present, the needs of tens of thousands of persons and would draw into the wireless net tens of thousands who have remained rather superiorly apart from it.

The Human Touch.

A Blind Girl's Tribute to Wireless.

[The following article was written by Miss B. Johnston, one of the blind readers in the stereotyping department of the National Institute for the Blind, and it gives a vivid impression of what wireless can mean to a person who is deprived of the priceless boon of sight.]

WIRELESS means so much to those of us who are unable to keep up with the times by reading the newspapers, and gives so much entertainment to those who would otherwise have none, that I feel a personal kinship with the people at the studios and stations who provide us with such excellent programmes.

When important events take place, there are lonely blind people who would know nothing about them were it not for the announcer at the broadcasting station.

A Link With the World.

To the blind, wireless is a means of overcoming social handicaps, and enjoying things that others enjoy.

Braille, for example, is a means to an end—that of acquiring knowledge; but broadcasting is a beginning which never should end, for, by it, the blind are enabled to take their stand with others in the existing world of intellectual enjoyment and pleasure.

Pleasure is as necessary to health as work, and pleasure such as the wireless offers is infinitely valuable.

To come home and listen to the news; then to a variety of entertainment, and thus quietly to feel oneself to be in the heart-centre of real brightness and movement means—to me, at all events—something similar to the acquirement of sight!

It is the link with the world as it is that we blind people need, unvenured by ridiculous, shallow sentiment.

Children Once Again.

The wireless play, again, is a great accomplishment in the broadcasting scheme; for to blind people a play loses nothing by the lack of scenery, and a chair by one's own fireside is more comfortable than the most comfortable seat in a theatre.

Organ recitals are (if I may so put it) inspiring in their very restfulness. When Sunday comes, with all its attendant thoughts, it is sweet to feel that our little crystal set can switch us on to our "Family Gathering" at the studio. We can hear the many "uncles" and "aunts" of the little children, and we ourselves become children again while listening to their pleasant stories.

We feel what good we can derive as a nation from broadcasting when the children are brought close to us by radio-magic, and blindness itself, with all its tragedy, is lightened—even conquered—for the time by that wonderfully subtle something which I should myself define as "the radio-human touch."

B. JOHNSTON.

WATER is not usually regarded as a source of inspiration, but Sir Alexander Houston, Director of Water Examination for the Metropolitan Water Board, had some very interesting things to say in his recent address from the London Station.

He pointed out that the seven million people of the London area require an average of 250 million gallons a day. This represents a weight of one million tons.

The shares of the New River Water Company, valued originally at £100, eventually reached a figure of £130,000 each.

As an instance of the importance of avoiding the waste of water, the lecturer mentioned that a single leaking tap may mean the loss of 55,000 gallons of water in a year.

Romeo and the Radio.

The Story of a Voice that Charmed. By Alfred Heard.

"I OFTEN wonder," remarked the Soprano, in a thoughtful tone, to the other artists in the waiting-room, "what idea the listener gets of the appearance of an artist he has never seen. I suppose the voice of the singer has some influence on the imagination of the listener?"

The Entertainer laughed sarcastically. "I happened to meet a young girl the other day," he said, "who had heard me over the wireless, but had never seen my classic profile. When she heard my name, she started violently. 'My Aunt!' she cried, 'I thought you were young and handsome! Were you a prize-fighter before you became funny, or did your mother drop you when you were quite young?'"

The Tenor, stout but presentable, smiled reminiscently. "The point you raise, Miss Claire," he said, "reminds me of an amusing, yet romantic, story of a keen business man who was passionately fond of music. There will be time for me to tell the story while the orchestra is playing Raymond, if you would care to hear it?"

Polite murmurs arose from the waiting artists, and the Tenor, clearing his throat and taking up a graceful pose, began. "Wilfrid Keene," he said, "might be described, vaguely, as an agent. He had a small office in the City and, in addition to a few clerks, employed a girl typist who also acted as his private secretary.

This typist, Mary Selwood, was a short, slim, and very pretty brunette. Always dressed very inconspicuously, she was brisk, businesslike, and, in the opinion of the male staff, distinctly stand-offish. Keene himself, a good-looking man of about thirty, and unmarried, did not appear to notice that his private secretary was more than ordinarily attractive, and treated her exactly as he would one of his own sex.

"As I said before, Keene was a great lover of music and naturally possessed a wireless set. It is more than likely that he will be listening to us to-night, by the way; or, perhaps, I should say most of us, because he abhors entertainers."

"I suppose he finds the efforts of the Tenor so much funnier," growled the Entertainer.

The Tenor chuckled, and continued. "Now, one evening, while listening to the London programme, Keene was much struck by a beautiful soprano voice. Glancing at the programme in The Radio Times, he learnt that the singer's name was Myrtle Brook; a strange name to him, and evidently a new artist. Possessed of a keen musical ear, he listened to the singer with delight, and conjured up visions of a tall Marguerite-like beauty with long ropes of golden hair. The vision haunted him, asleep or awake, and he looked forward with feverish eagerness to the next appearance of the unknown singer's name on the programme.

"In about a fortnight's time, Myrtle Brook sang again, and Keene listened enraptured. A man of impulse, he decided to send a box of flowers to the studio with a note expressing his great admiration of her singing, trusting to the B.B.C. to forward the parcel to her private address. A few days later, he was delighted to receive a few lines from Miss Brook, thanking him for his gift.

"The note gave no clue to the girl's address, but being by this time quite infatuated with the unknown fair one, Keene wrote again, and going somewhat into detail as to his private circumstances, with the utmost delicacy begged the girl to disclose whether her affections were engaged. If not, he implored her to grant him an interview."

"That young man should go far," remarked the Entertainer, admiringly. "He's wasted in the City; he ought to be in the country, selling condensed milk to dairy farmers."

"If you interrupt me, I shan't have time to finish the story," said the Tenor. "The girl replied, confessing that she was single and heartwhole, and that she was much impressed by Keene's letter. At the same time, she did not think it quite comme il faut to grant the desired interview, un-introduced as they were.

"Keene then lost his head completely; showered flowers, hot-house fruit, chocolates and even jewellery on his unseen inamorata. Obsessed with the idea that she was tall and fair, he referred to her as his stately golden-haired goddess, and finally, in a passionate epistle, asked her to marry him!"

The Soprano leant forward in her chair eagerly.

"Tell us quickly what Miss Brook replied," Mr. De Vere. "I am due to sing in two minutes' time."

With a careless gesture, the Tenor pulled out his cigarette-case, took out a cigarette and tapped it very reflectively on the back of his hand.

"The girl replied," he said, "that she would give him an answer in person on the following day. There would be no need to make an appointment; they could not fail to meet.

"Thoroughly puzzled, and in a state of great nervous excitement, Keene turned up at the office next day, sat down at his desk, and rang for his private secretary, Mary Selwood tripped in with her note-book and fountain-pen, and, instead of taking her seat at her own desk, went up close to Keene, perched on his desk, to his amazement, and in a demure voice said, very clearly: 'I shall be happy to be your wife, Wilfrid, dear!'"

"Great snakes!" cried the Entertainer, "do you mean to say—"

"I do," retorted the Tenor, calmly. "Mary Selwood had been studying at one of the colleges for some years; had decided to begin her career by singing for the B.B.C., and, after a satisfactory audition, had gone down on the programme as Myrtle Brook—her mother's maiden name."

"And did Wilfrid Keene marry her?" inquired the Soprano, anxiously, gathering her music together.

"I was present at the wedding," replied the Tenor, "and I can tell you that Keene is quite satisfied that his wife is every bit as attractive as the vision he conjured up when he heard her singing over the wireless!"

[We shall shortly publish another story in this Series.]

THE POTTERIES CHORAL SOCIETY, conducted by Mr. Carl Oliver, will broadcast for the first time from the Stoke-on-Trent Station on Friday, March 27th. This Society is well known in the district, and their programme should prove interesting to local listeners.

SCHUMANN'S Piano Concerto will be played by Miss Irene Scharrer at the London Station on Wednesday, March 25th, in a "Popular Classics" programme which will also include the first of the Brahms Symphonies.

Official News and Views. GOSSIP ABOUT BROADCASTING.

Well-Known Poetess to Broadcast.

LADY MARGARET SACKVILLE, the poetess, will broadcast for the second time from the Edinburgh Station on Thursday, April 2nd. She will give a short lecture recital on the Scottish Ballads, and the programme will be S.B. to all stations.

Light Music from London.

A pleasing change from the ordinary Sunday afternoon concert will be given at London on March 29th, when the programme will consist chiefly of chamber music of a light nature. The Quartet engaged is the Catterall String Quartet. Mr. Catterall has just retired from the leadership of the Hallé Orchestra, with which he has been associated for many years. Mr. Dale Smith, baritone, Miss Sidonie Goossens, harpist, and Mr. Angus Morrison, pianist, will contribute to the programme.

Far-Distant Listeners.

In The Radio Times postbag last week three letters of special interest were received. One was from Psawam, in the Bush of the Gold Coast, West Africa, recording clear reception of the Savoy Bands; another was from Heliopolis, Egypt, thanking the B.B.C. for an opera received on two valves from Bournemouth—"Every word clear and with good volume." This letter stated that the Bournemouth Station is received there every night, and generally very clearly. The third communication was from Bombay, and described an evening in the Bombay Radio Club, when programmes from Newcastle and London provided an evening's entertainment for the members.

A New Radio Singer.

Part of the programme to be broadcast from Edinburgh on Friday, April 3rd, will consist of a recital of operatic arias by Mlle. Lucy Romain. She was a pupil of Mme. Elena Gerhardt and Sir George Henschel, and this will be her first performance before the microphone. Mlle. Romain will sing, among other arias, "Batti Batti," from Don Giovanni, by Mozart, with cello obbligato, and a seldom-heard aria from The Taming of the Shrew, by Goetz.

Morse Practice from Sheffield.

The Sheffield Station will be transmitting Morse practice between 6.40-6.55 on Mondays and Thursdays from April 6th. In order that amateurs may have an opportunity of following the exact text of this practice, it will be taken from the "Official News and Views" in the current issue of The Radio Times.

"The Gamblers."

The popularity of two-hour plays at the Manchester Station has induced the "2ZY" Dramatic Company to prepare the production, under Mr. Victor Smythe, of The Gamblers, a play in three acts, by Charles Klein. The performance will take place on Monday, March 30th. The play is of the sensational type, after the manner of The Third Degree, by the same author. This play, it will be remembered, was the one with which the "2ZY" Dramatic Company opened their season in September last.

Manchester's Surprise Programme.

Owing to the collapse of some of the trunk lines to Manchester during the recent gale, when an S.B. programme was being relayed, the Station Director had hastily to provide an impromptu concert from some of the provincial stations. Manchester listeners apparently enjoyed the uncertainty of not knowing what the next item was to be. Accordingly, another surprise programme is being arranged by the station. It will be given on April 3rd, but the details of it will not be published.

A Religious Broadcast.

The religious service to be broadcast from Liverpool on Sunday, March 22nd, will be of particular interest to Roman Catholics. The address will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. T. E. Flynn, of St. Joseph's College, Upholland. The Catholic Choral Union Choir will also take part in this service.

Something New.

Something new in the way of programmes is promised by the Cardiff Station for Wednesday, April 1st. The performance will take the form of a music-hall show in two "houses," and no fewer than twelve different artists will offer "turns." At 7.30 listeners will be conducted to the first house of the "Colosseum," where Miss Helen de Frey, the coloratura soprano, will "top the bill." A feast of variety will be offered, including Warwick Braithwaite and his orchestra. Mr. Donald Davies will present his sketches of "Men, Music and Miscellanea." Somebody will syncopate, and the audience will stream out in good humour after the last turn by Miss Katie Goldsmith with her violin.

Topical Events by Radio.

Finding the evening still young, the "Parthenon" will be the next port of call, and here will be found a programme including Miss Mollie Seymour and Miss Nellie Norway, with violin and silver handbell solos; Mr. Olly Oakley and Miss Julia Larkins with a banjo, a piano and a gift for child impersonations; a boxing match which is guaranteed to last no longer than one round, and Mr. Sidney Evans, comedian. If time permits, a mystery item, showing the first Biograph of Topical Events by radio without the aid of television will be included.

Belfast's Afternoon Concerts.

The afternoon orchestral concerts on Tuesdays and Thursdays are a very popular feature of the Belfast programmes. Letters have been received from all parts of Ireland, Scotland and the North of England testifying to the success of the recent series of Haydn and Mozart Symphonies. On Thursday, April 2nd, the programme will be devoted to the more popular works of Dvorák and Brahms. Miss Rosa Knight will sing a group of songs by each, and the orchestra will include two of the Slavonic Dances of Dvorák, and the Largo movement of his New World Symphony, and two of the best-known Brahms intermezzi.

"For the Crown."

Another Radio Fantasy will be given at the Birmingham Station on Wednesday, April 1st. This is the fourth of the series and is entitled "For the Crown." The libretto is by John Overton, the novelist, who has chosen the period of the Cavaliers and Roundheads as the source of inspiration, a period which greatly lends itself to romantic and imaginative treatment. The music to which this fantasy is set has been specially selected for the occasion by Mr. Joseph Lewis, the Musical Director of the Birmingham Station, who conducted the recent performance of The Pilgrim's Progress at Covent Garden.

Plymouth's Request Programme.

The first "Request Programme" will be given from the Plymouth Station on April 3rd. Miss Kathleen Drake, soprano, will be supported by the band of H.M. Royal Marines, in light and popular numbers. Mr. Edwin Birch will give a Dickens recital, and Madame Delsie Elgar will join him in a duologue by Dawson Milward.

Life In The Ancient World.

The series of talks which Dr. R. W. Livingstone, Vice-Chancellor of the Queen's University, Belfast, is giving at the Belfast Station each Monday at 9.40, will be continued during April. His subject, "Some Views of Life in the Ancient World," is one with which he is well qualified to deal.

Dr. Livingstone, late fellow, tutor and librarian of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, has had a distinguished academic career, and he was a member of the Prime Minister's Committee on Classics in 1920. He has also published a number of books on classical subjects.

Plays at Aberdeen.

The first broadcast performance of the Rhapsody for Flute, Cor Anglais, String Quartet, Bass and two voices, by Mr. Arthur Blise, will be given at the Aberdeen Station on Friday, April 3rd. The following night Aberdeen will broadcast The Glass Panel, a comedy in one act, by Arthur Black, and Is It Possible? a sketch by Dorothy Langton.

"David Garrick" to be Broadcast.

The Leeds-Bradford Station Quintet, under Mr. Percy Frostick, will support Mr. William Macready and Miss Edna Godfrey-Turner on Friday, March 27th, when a series of plays will be presented, consisting of David Garrick, in four scenes; A Daughter's Choice; and Married Life, a farce in one act.

A Guessing Competition.

A Request Night and a Guessing Competition will be given at Bournemouth on Saturday, April 4th. The programme will consist of request items, and a prize to the value of £3 3s. 0d. will be awarded to the listener who sends in the most correct list of titles and composers' names of the items. Further details will be given in the programme.

Three Radio Dramas.

Three short plays are to be performed at the Stoke-on-Trent Station, on Friday, April 3rd. Mr. William Macready and Miss Edna Godfrey-Turner are then to present The Irish Doctor, a farce in one act, by J. K. Wood; A Daughter's Choice, by Donald Edwards, and Love in an Office.

Anatole France.

In the course of the French talk from London on Thursday, March 26th, M. Stéphan will continue his survey of the work of Anatole France. He calls this talk "Anatole France et l'Histoire," and in illustration of the points made, he will, at the end of the talk proper, give an account of Anatole France's celebrated story "Le Procureur de Judée."

Aberdeen's New Assistant.

Mr. Henry M. Fitch has been appointed Assistant at Aberdeen Station. He is an ex-regular R.N. officer who during the war held the dual ranks of Naval Secretary to a Vice-Admiral and Major, R.N. Division. During his Eastern service he was attached to the Staff of the Crown Prince of Serbia, and speaks Serbian.

For the Children.

Drama and its exponents, the romance of the commonplace, music and books, talks on the open country, the fairyland of science, folk songs, and similar subjects are to be dealt with by the various "aunts" and "uncles" who conduct the "Teens' Corner" of the Leeds-Bradford Station from Monday, March 23rd. This part of the programme will now take place between 6 p.m. and 6.15 p.m. daily. The Children's Corner of this Station will, from the above date, be conducted from 5.15 p.m. to 6 p.m.

PEOPLE YOU WILL HEAR NEXT WEEK.

[Lalson.
Miss MARJORIE SINCLAIR (Soprano) will sing at Belfast on Wednesday, March 25th.

[Foulsham & Banfield.
Miss MARGIA BOURN and Miss LENA COPPING (Entertainers) will be heard from Bournemouth on Monday, March 23rd.

A Self-Taught Musician.

It may be a wrong quotation, but a true saying, that "Some are born to greatness, some achieve greatness, whilst others have greatness thrust upon them."

In the middle category must be placed Mr. Albert Sammons, the well-known English violinist, who broadcasts from Birmingham on Saturday, March 28th. As an instrumentalist from the age of seven, it can truly be said that Mr. Sammons is one of the few self-taught musicians who have achieved any marked degree of fame. After earning his living for years as a member of provincial orchestras, he migrated to London, where he was not long in meeting with the recognition that was his due.

[Harris & Brooks.
Miss ROSE MYRTIL (Contralto) will sing at Cardiff on Monday and at Manchester on Friday.

Mr. ALBERT SAMMONS. [Holt.

It was when playing a movement from the Mendelssohn Concerto that he came under the notice of Sir Thomas Beecham, who was so impressed with his playing that not only did he ask him to join his orchestra, but appointed him, some twelve months later, as his leader. From that time success hard earned and well merited has followed Mr. Sammons.

Composer of "The Red Pen."

Mr. Geoffrey Toye, whose light opera, The Red Pen, will be broadcast to all stations except Chelmsford on March 24th, is the son of a late House Master of Winchester College. A distinguished musician, he conducted The Bluebird at the Haymarket Theatre before the war, as well as other well-known theatrical productions and Queen's Hall performances. After four years' service in the war, he conducted opera for Sir Thomas Beecham for a time, as well as some Philharmonic Concerts during the Seasons between 1918-1919. He has also conducted Gilbert and Sullivan Operas.

[Varinsky.
Miss NINA FFONORA (Mezzo-Soprano) will sing at Hull on Friday, March 27th.

[Maurice Beck & Macgregor.
Mr. A. P. HERBERT, the well-known humorist, is author of "The Red Pen," which will be broadcast to all stations, except Chelmsford, on Tuesday, March 24th.

Mr. GEOFFREY TOYE.

[Maurice Beck & Macgregor.
Mr. L. STANTON JEFFERIES, Deputy Director of Music to the B.B.C., will conduct the music to "The Red Pen" on Tuesday, March 24th.

Pieces in the Programmes.

A Weekly Feature Conducted by Percy A. Scholes.

BEETHOVEN'S "PASTORAL" SYMPHONY, No. 6.

THIS particular Symphony enters into every argument on "Programme Music," or "Absolute Music"—two technical terms which may be broadly defined thus: Programme Music is music which is avowedly written on some literary or pictorial basis (that is, on a "programme" of ideas outside music); Absolute Music is music which has no basis exterior to itself—music pure and simple.

When Beethoven wrote his Pastoral Symphony he was at great pains to have it understood as (to use his own words) "more expression of feeling than painting." Listeners may find interest in deciding for themselves how far this is true.

I.

"AWAKENING OF JOYFUL FEELINGS ON ARRIVAL IN THE COUNTRY."

(Quick, but not too quick.) The First Movement is simply a delightful piece of music in which you may, if you wish, ignore the title. It is, in fact, in the usual First-Movement Form; two Main Tunes are given out in the Exposition, developed in the Development Section, and repeated in the Recapitulation.

The FIRST MAIN TUNE is very simple. A short phrase is played by STRINGS, is repeated (slightly differently) and continued, other instruments gradually joining in until something of a climax is built up. This ends on a rapidly repeated chord in CLARINETS and BASSOONS, answered by a rising phrase (derived from the First Main Tune) in FIRST VIOLINS. These two answering phrases are both repeated three times, then the Violins lead in the—SECOND MAIN TUNE. When listening to this, it is interesting to try to decide whether the treble or bass has the more important melody. For here are heard two tunes at the same time—a smooth, waving one which FIRST VIOLINS start, and another (in slower notes) played with it and below it by 'CELLOS.

Note how, when First Violin and 'Cello have finished these little Tunes, each takes up the other's. Then the FLUTE enters with the slower-note Tune, and later other instruments, the volume of sound steadily increasing.

At the climax, the Strings are left to play still another short Tune. Two or three more are added. So we have here quite a group of tunes.

The Exposition ends in a whisper from the Strings.

The Development Section treats little but the First Main Tune. It and the Recapitulation maintain the feeling and style of the Exposition unbroken, and are very straightforward.

The Coda (or "Tail-piece") is long, but contains nothing new. It merely brings the movement to a satisfying close.

II. "BY THE BROOKLET."

In this Movement the impression is one of rippling along dreamily, without a pause.

One notices chiefly TWO SOLO 'CELLOS, MUTED, whose lines of melody are generally doubled, an octave above, by other Strings.

At the end, birds begin to sing. The trilling of the Nightingale is represented by a Flute, the high repeated notes of the Quail by an Oboe, and the lower call of the Cuckoo by the Two Clarinets.

III. "A VILLAGE FESTIVAL"

(Quick.) This is practically a country dance, German, of course, not English, though the first phrase is curiously B&A Irish fig. The village band is at times clearly burlesqued, with its typical doh-sch-doh bass. The festivities are suddenly interrupted by—

IV. "A THUNDER STORM."

This is thoroughly realistic. The thunder is sometimes violent (loud Drum-rolls) sometimes a mere rumble (Lower Strings). Upper Woodwind help to suggest lightning. The abatement of the storm is welcomed by—

V. "A SHEPHERD'S SONG—

THANKSGIVING AFTER THE STORM."

(Fairly quick.) A CLARINET begins a Tune in the shepherd's-pipe manner. It is echoed by a HORN.

This Movement, like all the others, except the First, does not seem to want a detailed analysis in a brief description of the Symphony.

BRAHMS'S CLARINET QUINTET.

(CHELMSFORD, THURSDAY.)

This is written for Clarinet and String Quartet (Two Violins, Viola and 'Cello).

It is not a mere show-piece for Clarinet, though it does, indeed, use all the best resources of the instruments. But the Clarinet is here very little more prominent than the Strings, and, in fact, this Quintet owes much to the Clarinet's capacity for taking an unobtrusive part in the general conversation with the Strings.

There are Five Movements, the Third being joined to, and almost an introduction to, the Fourth.

The FIRST MOVEMENT (Quick) is fairly complicated, but none the less beautiful. There are at least four short tunes, given in turn to most instruments impartially.

In the SECOND MOVEMENT (Slow) the Strings are muted. It is more lyrical, but the middle part of the Movement consists chiefly of elaborations in Clarinet and First Violin.

The THIRD MOVEMENT (Moving steadily) is exceedingly simple and hymn-tune-like. As already said, it is joined to the—FOURTH MOVEMENT (Rapid, but not too rapid, and with feeling). This is playful, whimsical, and has some interesting colour effects.

The FIFTH MOVEMENT (With speed) is an Air-with-Variations. The Air is in two sections, the second of which is repeated. There are five Variations, each with its own character. Towards the end, a suggestion of the First Movement becomes increasingly marked, until we come to the Coda, which is founded on the First and last Movements.

JOHN IRELAND RECITAL.

(GLASGOW, BELFAST, AND ABERDEEN, FRIDAY.)

John Ireland was born at Bowdon, in Cheshire, in 1879.

He has written music in most branches, vocal, and instrumental, but by far the greater part of his output, up to the present, has been Chamber Music, Piano Music, and Solo Songs.

His PHANTASY TRIO for Violin, 'Cello and Piano is a continuous work, but is in four definite sections. The second section is slower than the first, the third is a shortened repetition of the first, and the last is a lively coda.

His FIRST VIOLIN SONATA, on the other hand, has three separate Movements.

The FIRST MOVEMENT is vigorous; it is built upon several well-defined short phrases.

The SECOND MOVEMENT is called a Romance—a title to which its lyrical, and at times passionate expression lives up.

The THIRD MOVEMENT is a Rondo—a quick (this time, very boisterous, dance-like) piece in which one Main Tune recurs frequently.

The Young Idea.

DEAR SIR,—During a hygiene lesson last week, in answer to the question "What poisonous air do we breathe out?" the class was convulsed with laughter by the answer "2LO."

Yours, etc.,

"THE TEACHER."

Why Jazz is Interesting.

DEAR SIR,—The writer of your article entitled "In Defence of Jazz," appears to have some wrong ideas on the subject which should be contradicted without further delay.

To begin with, he talks as if syncopation were a new thing which had been discovered quite recently. This is not so. As far back as the fourth century it was being used in hymn tunes and, since then, all the great composers have judiciously used it in their works.

Syncopation is briefly this: The making of an accent between two beats of a bar on what should really be the unaccented note. That is, the strong beat is tied so that it cannot take the ordinary accent, but must be silent. The result is that the accent is thrown forward upon the next beat, and just as when a jet of water is stopped for a second and, on being freed, flows on with renewed vigour, so the stream of music flows on with renewed vigour when it is released.

This form of expression is capable of making the most trivial and commonplace tune sound interesting when heard the first time, and that is why it is so popular with the "pot boiling" fraternity of so-called composers and the musically uneducated public.

But to say that jazz is an important contribution towards musical development is nonsense.

Modern dance music and popular songs are syncopated, and, as syncopation is no new thing, where does the important contribution to music come in?

Yours, etc.,

Belfast.

The New Tuning Note.

DEAR SIR,—I think a satisfactory solution of this problem would be achieved if the piano were used to play a prelude instead of the scale. As "E. K. F." says, the volume of the tone increases as the pitch lowers, and no indication of the true output of the set can be obtained.

A composition which would be ideal is Chopin's Prelude in A, a short piece of about twenty bars and of as uniform a pitch as, I think, could be obtained.

I am sure it would be both artistic and useful, because, when all is taken into account, the high whistle is very annoying.

Yours, etc.,

Talks in the Evening.

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent, "Mrs. H. E. M.," asks for music only from 7.30 to closing down time. Surely she overlooks the great army of workers who, like myself, have no chance of enjoying the afternoon talks, and depend entirely on the evening programmes.

While fully appreciating the musical items, I, and many of my friends, look forward to hearing the news bulletins, lectures, talks, and public speeches, and would be greatly disappointed if these were withdrawn from the programmes.

Yours, etc.,

London, N.

DEAR SIR,—I have been reading various criticisms of the music in the broadcast programmes, and I have come to the conclusion that those who sign themselves "Low-Brow" or "Middle-Brow" are themselves the only stumbling-blocks in the way to the love of music.

The average man is terrified by the word "classical." This is a word which, when applied to music, includes the music and musicians of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. To explain away his terror at this word, the unfortunate person invents a word for himself, "High-Brow." This is intended to convey that the music of the Great Masters is either (1) below his dignity as an upholder of the rights of the uninitiated to imbibe "music and morals" from across the Atlantic, or else (2) too deep and abstruse for his untrained intellect to enjoy. Such people are very broad-minded! There is a happy medium, though, and people in this state can enjoy both good and bad.

The fears of the "Low-Brows," are, however, groundless. If one were to play them a Mozart sonata, and tell them it was by the author of the latest fox-trot, they would thoroughly enjoy it; and if they heard a Schubert song, and were told that it was by the author of "Coal Black Mammy," there would be no bounds to their admiration.

For real "tunes" let them try the Masters. As soon as people realize that music, real music, is the expression of the emotions of men who had their loves, troubles, and joys, just like other men, then will the great works of Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Mozart, and Haydn, and the glorious songs of Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms, come into their own, and oust the jazz bands and saxophones which are plaguing the world.

Yours, etc.,

Manchester. "A LOVER OF MUSIC."

Studying Languages by Radio.

DEAR SIR,—As a student of the French language, I follow with avidity the broadcasting in that language, and the sympathetic understanding of the speakers in the matter of learners' difficulties is gratefully noted.

I presume that the frequency of these and other language lectures (e.g., Spanish from Manchester, by Mr. Bletcher) varies according to public request. I feel, however, that if the demand is small, this is to be regretted.

Reception from the Continent can hardly be quite so satisfactory—except, possibly, by valve sets. If, therefore, more frequent lectures could be found practicable, their educative value to the individual and to the nation could scarcely be over-estimated.

Yours, etc.,

Derby. "SANS FIL"

A Crystal User's Grievance.

DEAR SIR,—I wish to voice a grievance which listeners in this part of the world who only possess the humble crystal set have to suffer.

Frequently the B.B.C. broadcasts a play, or scenes from a play, revue, opera, etc., from a London theatre, and by some evil mischance we who can only pick up London through Chelmsford have, on those particular nights, had to put up with a very much less interesting concert at Chelmsford itself.

Can your readers picture our disappointment at being compelled to listen to a concert from Chelmsford on a night when London is broadcasting, say, The Beggar's Opera, that finest of musical productions of recent times?

One more complaint. The latest method of tuning in by piano is no improvement; on the contrary, it is worse.

Yours, etc.,

Newington, Kent. A. B. C.

Schubert's Place in Music.His Influence on Later Song Writers. By George L. Marshall.

EVER since Schubert's death, nearly one hundred years ago, his music has gradually become more widely known, until his name is now as familiar on programmes as that of Mozart or Beethoven. Quite recently there has been a sudden recrudescence of his popularity, fostered, perhaps, by a successful play dealing with an episode of his life—real or imaginary—set to his music, and to-day snatches of his melodies may be heard at street corners, not only in Continental cities, but in this country, as they doubtless were in Vienna when they began to capture the public imagination there.

Composed Over Six Hundred Songs.

To most people, Schubert is only known as a writer of songs, and it certainly is in this capacity that he has made the deepest impression on the world. But it should not be forgotten that he composed a great mass of choral and instrumental music, much of which is of the highest level. When he reveals defects, however, it is in these latter compositions and not in his songs, where he reaches sublime heights, and the whole range of them—he composed considerably over six hundred in his short life of thirty-one years—maintain a level of consistent excellence which is astonishing.

The first thing that strikes us about him is his amazing fertility. As Schumann said of him, "If fertility be a distinguishing mark of genius, then Franz Schubert is a genius of the highest order." He seems to have been incapable of expressing himself except in terms of music, and he even bashfully confessed when quite a boy that he could not help composing, for melodies seemed to keep flooding his brain and compelling him to pour them forth on paper.

Ideas Like a River.

It is a remarkable fact that although for some years he taught a class in his father's school, he had leisure to write such a quantity of things, many of them among his finest works, and it goes to show that, like Mozart, he was endowed with that rare gift of fluency which enabled him to commit his ideas to paper without the need of subsequent alteration.

This fluency was probably the cause of Schubert's only defect, not, of course, always apparent, namely, diffuseness and a lack of ability to mould his ideas into adequate and concise form. He sometimes seems to run away with himself from a sheer wealth of invention and to allow his ideas to spread themselves out like a river overflowing its banks.

His early music teachers, astonished by the fertility of his genius, seem to have ceased attempting to teach him the theoretical or, indeed, any other, branch of his art, and in later years Schubert himself confessed his lack of a sound knowledge of counterpoint and determined to repair the deficiency. Unhappily, he never survived to do so.

Making a Poet Understand.

The next point that strikes us about Schubert's music is the variety of his invention, and this is most clearly exemplified in his songs, where his remarkable ability to make his music appropriate to the words, stamps him as the greatest of song writers. A contemporary poet, a number of whose poems Schubert set to music, admitted that he never realized the full significance of his words until he heard them sung to the music of Schubert.

It would not be difficult to cite a host of examples in Schubert's songs of the complete harmony between music and words. He catches the atmosphere of a poem and transfers it to his music as no other song writer has done—at least, with such consistence.

Another characteristic of Schubert is his modulation, that is, the way in which he passes from one key to another. Sometimes he moves through several keys in as many bars, or suddenly changes from a major to a minor key, or the reverse, with striking effect. Frequently, he makes a song in a minor key end in the major, as in the case of "Her Picture," or "The Romance from Rosamunde." He seems to have been particularly fond of this mode of expression, although it sometimes takes him out of his depth.

His Lack of Knowledge.

His almost invariable practice of never altering his notes when once they were written down was bound sometimes to lead him into the paths of diffuseness which we have already noted. He was unwilling to polish and repolish his work as Beethoven did, apparently in the belief that it would give it an air of artificiality. Beethoven's laborious efforts, on the other hand, to make his compositions as perfect as possible, had the effect of making them appear spontaneous. Handel and Mozart wrote down their notes rapidly without subsequent alteration, but they had the advantage of a very complete knowledge of counterpoint.

Schubert was endowed with as great facility as either Handel or Mozart, but his lack of theoretical knowledge puts him at a disadvantage when compared with them.

Again, his modulations are sometimes rather clumsy, as in the transition from the first to the second subject of the "Unfinished Symphony." But Schubert's defects of workmanship are far outweighed by his inventive faculty, which puts him among the world's great masters of melody. He has not Beethoven's broad humanity, sublime ideas, nor his great moral force, nor has he Mozart's faultless simplicity both of form and idea. He was not a musical virtuoso like almost all other great composers, but he was a creative artist of the first rank and as a song writer he has no superiors.

"The Divine Fire."

We can detect a trace of sadness in his melodies, due, perhaps, to his life of hardship and poverty, and to the lack of encouragement from his fellow men. His gentle and unassuming nature would not permit him to impose the force of his genius upon others and thus gain the recognition and affluence which would probably have been the means of prolonging his life.

His influence on later song writers has been very great and the art-song, that is, a song that does not consist simply of the repetition of the same melody for each successive verse, owes its development to him.

"Truly, he has the divine fire," said Beethoven of Schubert, after he had come to know some of the work of his younger contemporaries, and such musicians as Schumann, Mendelssohn, and Liszt have paid him a similar homage.

A PROGRAMME of Chamber Music will be given from the High-Power Station on Thursday, March 26th, by the Snow String Quartet, assisted by Mr. Frederick Thurston, clarinet player, with songs by Miss Dorothy Helmrich, contralto. The programme will include Haydn's Quartet in G, Op. 64, a Brahms Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, and the Ravel Quartet in F. In addition, an interesting short Overture on the Hebraic Themes, by Prokofiev, the modern Russian, will be played by the Quartet, assisted by Mr. Stanford Robinson.

A Parry Gunn.
A Personality,

"FRA LIPPO LIPPI"
(Robert Browning).

Fra Filippo Lippi was a Florentine painter who lived from 1412 to 1469. Botticelli was his pupil. Circumstance made Lippi a Monk, but, not possessing the monkish temperament, he was given to breaking bounds and joining bands of roysterers in their nocturnal adventures. In this Poem (which, like all his best work, is dramatic in form) Browning imagines Lippi caught by the Watch on one of his night rambles. He makes friends with the Chief of the Guard, and to him expounds his philosophy of Art and of Life.

The Poem is generally acknowledged to be one of the clearest and finest existing expressions of the principles upon which the Italian painters of the greatest period founded their practice.

EMPIRE PHONO-FLIGHTS.

No. 1—CANADA.

7.30.—Just a picture of one of these far-off parts of the British Empire. Many of us have, by reading, been to countries other than our own, and have imprinted on our minds vivid pictures which give unbounded pleasure—many of us have experienced that yearning to visit certain lands. To-night, then, "5SC" will ring up the curtain on Canada.

Make yourself quite comfortable, adjust your ear-phones, and if you act on our advice by lowering the lights, we feel sure you will receive a picture of the Dominion as it is to-day, with here and there a phase from the past, showing the struggles and successes of the great Pioneers.

The train will leave Quebec at 7.35. p.m., and we shall halt at Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Jasper Park, Vancouver.

First Phase: A Prairie Scene in 1870—twenty-one years after the Gold Rush.
 Second Phase: Fighting a Forest Fire by Aeroplane. (From A. Corbett Smith's "Riders of the Air.")

Third Phase: Captain H. G. Mansfield (Late N.-W. Mounted Police) in Songs, Recitation, and Stories of the Cowboys, with a word-picture of a "Prairie Policeman's Beat."

Fourth Phase: The Land of the "Midnight Sun"—The Land of "Mushers," Trappers, and Traders.

The Phono-Flight will include the following: Guide, GEORGE ADAM, of the C.N.R., DOROTHY ROBSON (Soprano), ELDER CUNNINGHAM (Baritone), AUGUSTUS BEDDIE.

Capt. H. G. MANSFIELD.
 HALBERT TATLOCK and his Dramatic Company.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER, CONDUCTED BY THE AUNTS AND UNCLES.

The Greedy Wolverine.

HULLO, children!

You have all heard of a wolf; but how many of you have ever heard of a wolverine? Here is an interesting talk by Captain H. G. Mansfield that will tell you all about this curious animal.

The wolverine is a most destructive beast. He is also greedy, fierce and mischievous, and he is often called the Glutton. This name he gets because of the habit he has of robbing the traps made and set by the trappers.

This rascal of a fellow is about the size of a retriever dog, though more heavily built and with shorter, stronger limbs. His fur is blackish-brown in colour, with a lighter band of fur starting on his shoulders, passing along the sides of his body and meeting again on the back just in front of where his short bushy tail starts. Like the beaver, he has also a thick woolly under-fur.

Specially Made Traps.

Though clumsy in appearance, he can be remarkably nimble, and when surprised can make off at a great rate. But he seldom moves out of his lair, except at night, when he rambles off in search of food.

I was once with an Indian when he found one in a trap specially made to try to catch this troublesome rogue. And how pleased the Indian was to find the wolverine in the trap, because if it had not been caught, it would have spoiled the traps by knocking them down and stealing the baits. These traps were set for marten—dead-fall traps they are called, and they are made of sticks and logs put up in a special way. This kind of trap is the best one to use as it is much more humane than any other. The Indian or the white trapper makes long lines of these traps, many lines running for miles up and along the sides of the forest-covered mountains.

When a wolverine finds the track or path made by the trapper, he usually follows it and diligently smashes each trap and devours the bait. And not only the bait, but often enough the beautiful marten caught in a trap. He is a lazy fellow and finds this way of getting food much easier than hunting it himself. Or, if already gorged with food, he will perhaps carry the marten away and hide it in the woods, or he may just tear it to pieces and leave the bits lying about.

A Bitter Foe.

Besides these rascally ways, he has been known to visit the camps of trappers in their absence and either destroy or carry away all the necessary things that the trapper needs so badly—food, blankets, snowshoes, and even pots and frying-pans. So you can realise how glad the Indian was to catch his enemy the wolverine and why he carried it so cheerfully on his back to the trading post. Not only had he got rid of one of the trapper's most bitter foes, but he had also secured a valuable skin.

But how different were the feelings of another poor Indian who was prevented by illness from making his usual visit to his traps. He was only ill a week and then round his lines of traps he went, to find that a wretched wolverine had paid them a visit. The Indian arrived at a place where he had placed a fox trap and was bitterly disappointed to find that a beautiful black fox had been caught and that the wolverine had eaten it all up with the exception of the tail and a few bits of fur.

The poor man came back to the trading post carrying the tail and feeling and looking dreadfully woe-begone, for he had lost a prize such as he might never catch again, for black and silver foxes are few and far between and very valuable.

Meeting the fur trader shortly after, I enquired as to what the skin would have been worth had the trapper brought it to the post intact. Wasn't I astonished when he told me that he thought the skin would have been worth over two hundred pounds?

So though the trapper's life is considered a hard and lonely one, prizes are won (and lost) at times.

Nothing like such a prize came my way, though I spent the whole of one long winter trapping, and though life was hard at times, I thoroughly enjoyed a great deal of it. What I liked most was being out in the great snow-bound woods alone with Nature in its wildest and purest state.

But once, when out with a comrade, we found that we, too, had been visited by a wolverine. We were slowly making our way through the woods up the steep slopes of one of the Rocky Mountains when we discovered that a number of our traps had been partially knocked down and the baits set for the marten taken.

Missed His Prize.

What a nuisance it was, for every trap had to be at least partially rebuilt and fresh baits placed in position. But what we feared most was that he had visited our camp at the end of our line and done a lot of damage there. Knowing what a destructive rogue the Glutton is, we quite expected to find our food supplies gone, our blankets torn to shreds and probably all our cooking utensils taken away and hidden in the snow. So on we went, making our way through the deep fresh-fallen snow and on approaching our camp—it was but a tiny shelter—we found, to our joy, that the wolverine had sheered off and gone away through the woods. If he had kept on a little further, he would have found, as we did, a splendid dark-brown marten in the very last trap before reaching our little camp.

So you see that the wolverine is an interesting rogue of a fellow, though he spoils himself by being so greedy.

THE PRINCESS WHO GIGGLED.

By LANGFORD REED.

The fairy godmother suddenly appeared before her.

ONCE upon a time there was a Princess who would giggle at the slightest thing, such as carrotty whiskers, a bald head, or at people who were rather fat, or rather thin, or who had big feet, or ears that stuck out, or who suffered from any other slight peculiarity.

At heart, she was as kind and sweet as she was beautiful, and serious misfortune always made her feel sad, so that she gave away most of her pocket-money to poor orphans and beggars, and adopted so many starving and homeless cats and dogs that a whole staff of servants had to be engaged to look after them. Her failing arose from the fact that, like some little girls to-day (and, I regret to say, some big ones also!) she had got into the giggling habit and when once the fit was on her, she found it hard to stop.

Her kind-hearted and foolish parents, instead of giving her a well-deserved smacking, tried to cure her by talking about serious and depressing topics, such as wet blankets and willow trees and sack-cloth and sea-sickness and thunderstorms and toothache, but the more they tried, the more she giggled.

So that the King and Queen were at their wits' end to know what to do.

Now it happened that her godmother was a fairy. She had been in the fairy business all her life and was most reliable. The Queen called on her for aid.

"Yes, I can cure her," said the fairy. "Put her in my charge for a day and give me a free hand, and I promise to return her to you unharmed and entirely free from giggling."

"Your suggestion commends itself to me," answered the Queen, "and if you are successful, there is nothing my husband and I will not do to show our gratitude, even to giving you half of our Kingdom."

"Don't mention it," said the fairy, "the satisfaction at a good deed done will be its own reward."

Thus it happened that when the Princess awoke next morning, she found herself in Fairyland. At first, she was delighted, but when she realized that she was a kind of prisoner, her joy changed to sorrow, especially when she discovered that she was an object of ridicule to the fairies for being so different from them.

"Isn't she big and clumsy?" they mocked.

And they went off into fits of giggling. Of course, beside her, they were tiny little folk and their voices sounded like mere squeaks. They teased her so much that she tried to catch them to smack them. But they flew up in the air, or made themselves invisible, and then pulled her hair or poked her in the back, making fun all the time at her clumsy attempts to catch them. She never giggled once, all the time she was in Fairyland, but was giggled at, till she hated the very sound of giggling. And by the time the day was over, she had cried more than ever she had done in her life, so that when the fairy godmother suddenly appeared before her, in the guise of a kind-looking old woman, with a funny hooked nose that almost met the point of her long chin, she did not giggle in the least, but only implored to be allowed to go home.

"Yes, my child, I think you can go home now," said the fairy, changing into her own beautiful self and waving a wand over her. "In a few minutes you will fall asleep, and when you wake up, it will be in your own little bed and all that has happened will seem to you a dream."

And it was just as the fairy said, and from that day the Princess was the nicest, jolliest girl in the Kingdom, full of fun, and always ready to laugh at anything worth laughing at, but quite cured of the foolish giggling which had been her one great fault in the past.

I hope you are not a giggling girl. If so, do try to cure yourself, or you may grow into a giggling woman, and that is very much worse.

Should We Laugh at These Now?

Comic Songs That Once Were the Rage. By Edwin Pugh.

WHAT goes to the making of a really good comic song: the idea, the words, the music, the chorus, the comedian's rendering, his voice, his acting, his personality, or all or any of these in combination?

I should say that first the words and then the music are its most important factors. There are comic songs which owe everything to the singer, and when sung by anybody else are not in the least comic. There are others—far rarer—which "get over" (as actors say) by virtue of the exquisitely quaint or irresistibly droll accompaniment to which they are set.

Chirgwin's "Cockney Coon."

I must give just one of these, Chirgwin's "Cockney Coon," which only a few of us oldsters have heard. The tune mainly consists of variations on an old-fashioned English air, "Merrily Danced the Quaker's Wife." Still, the words themselves are not so bad, and somehow, here and there, read curiously up-to-date.

You've heard about the coon 's to be married very soon?

Well, there's a coon that I know.

(There's a coon that I know.)

He don't rhapsodize about his Dinah's eyes,
He thinks more of rhino.

He thinks that Alabama is as far off as the moon,

He knows more of Ally Sloper—this little Cockney Coon!

On Sunday night he'll buy a cigar,

Monday night a fag.

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday night,

A penn'orth o' threepenny shag.

Friday night he'll borrow a screw till Saturday afternoon.

(A stave or two from the "Quaker's Wife.")
'Arry, the Cockney Coon!

Broad Humour.

Chirgwin belonged properly to the palmy days of those Veterans of Variety whose performances most readers of The Radio Times have heard over the wireless, and not a few, I daresay, have witnessed on the stage. It is roughly to that and to the immediately preceding period that my own memory goes back when I recall the music-hall of my youth. It is to that memory I must trust in giving my impressions of some of those nineteenth-century ditties.

There was a good deal of coarseness on the music-hall stage then; the humour was sometimes a little broad, the wit not always too refined. But it had one outstanding merit which the modern equivalent for the old-fashioned music-hall seems to me to lack. The songs of those days were never, or very seldom, in the baser sense of the word, suggestive.

Funny Choruses.

Take, for example, these two choruses of songs, of which I forget the verses, as I forget the singers. The first is of love in low life.

Since Lizer's been in love, all sorts of things occur.

She cleans her teeth and combs her hair,
She's bought such curious things to wear—
Straight! she makes the neighbours stare,
Since Lizer's been in love!

The other, also of low life:—

Since our Bill's been and joined the Army,
We're fit to bust wi' pride.
He looks so nobby in his soldier clothes,
With a stripe straight down each side.
And when he's out on furlough
All the gals in the street go barmy.
England's not in danger now—
Since our Bill's been and joined the Army!

Both these songs embody a really funny idea, and so could be sung by any mere blundering amateur and still be funny. As could also one of Gus Elen's earliest successes.

"Never interdooce yer donah to a pal,
'Cos the odds is ten to one he sneaks yer gal.
He will stand her wheelks and porter,

Take her where he didn't oughter—so!—

Never interdooce yer donah to a pal.

(Take my tip!)

Always keep yer optics on yer gal!

And—"The Brick Came Down." Three Irish labourers are debating whether they shall knock off for the day or go on working. "Let's toss up for it," says one—"with a brick. If the brick stays up, we will stick it out. If it comes down—"

The brick came down,

We had the 'arf a day. . . .

Fell Designs.

But the rest of the chorus is quite unworthy of the originally humorous idea. Then there is the man who married the tattooed woman, who insists on practising her art on him. Hear his plaint when she has accomplished her fell designs:—

All over me—all over me!

There's Indian ink all down my legs,

And ships of war and Easter eggs!

I'm just like a picture galler-ee,

You ought to look at the views of London—

All over me!

A little coarse? Maybe. But, after all, a healthy kind of coarseness, which its humour, like the humour of the following, surely condones:—

I will sing a song of faces

That you meet in different places,

At the police-court and the races,

And the Band of Hope.

Everybody's got 'em,

If you only spot 'em.

Some have mivs (faces) like dustmen's sieves:

They make 'em up and fake 'em up in places.

Every creature without warnin'

'S got to put up with the face he's born in. . .

The School of Lewis Carroll.

And so on. There's a rich inconsequentialness (if I may use the word) about that song, which, however remotely, does belong to the school of Lewis Carroll, Edward Lear, and other like Victorians. This also belongs to the Victorian era, but is more in the vein of Mr. Jerome K. Jerome.

When father papered the parlour,

You couldn't see him for paste!

Dabbing it here, dabbing it there!

Paste and paper everywhere!

Mother got stuck to the ceiling,

The children to the floor!

You never saw a family

So stuck up before!

Borrowed from Dickens.

I cannot conclude without giving at least one sample of a most peculiar form of humour in the way of the comic song which once had a tremendous vogue. Each verse described some unwise proceeding on the part of someone, which led to the inevitable result that—

His funeral's to-morrow,

My poor heart aches with sorrow!

No more he'll sleeve a card,

For I hit him rather hard—

And we're going to plant him to-morrow!

That last idea, by the way, of planting instead of burying the corpse was borrowed from Dickens, who, incidentally, not only enjoyed listening to, but likewise enjoyed singing, the various kinds of old comic songs that I have tried to describe. And if that great humorist and humanist delighted in that rough-and-ready humour, we surely must believe that there could never have been anything very wrong with it.

"The Red Pen."

Story of The Opera.

[On Tuesday, March 24th, this Ballad Opera will be broadcast for the first time to all Stations, except Chelmsford. The author, Mr. A. P. Herbert, is one of our best-known humorists, and the music is by Mr. Geoffrey Toye. This synopsis will enable listeners to follow the opera with greater interest.]

THE scene is Hyde Park; the particular spot, the orators' corner. Several of them are orating now. The strains of the "Red Pen" are heard approaching. This is the revolutionary marching song of the General Federation of Poets and Writers. The G.F.P.W. are coming to demonstrate for the nationalization of the Industry. Their leader is HENRY WORDSWORTH.

HENRY announces the strike of his members and states their demands. Soon no one is left but Comrade DAFFODIL SMITH, the Assistant General Secretary, and the reporter, SAMUEL SLATE.

Sir ROBERT QUINT, M.P., Minister of Drains, comes to the place with his personal staff, the Hon. MICHAEL GRAY, Private Secretary, and Miss MARY JANE BLAKE.

MICHAEL suggests to DAFFODIL that a solution of the trouble would be to have Sir ROBERT as Chief at the proposed Ministry of Poetry. He subsequently proposes to her, but she is secretly in love with "Stephen Byrne," the unknown author of the "best sellers," "Peppermint," and "Caramel." HENRY, in his turn, proposes to MARY JANE, but she is secretly in love with "Stephen Byrne." HENRY hints darkly that he is "Stephen Byrne." (Trio: "Who is my lover?") MARY JANE goes out, pursued by HENRY. DAFFODIL is no sooner left alone than the reporter emerges from behind the trees. He has overheard all except the name of the man she loves.

Sir ROBERT returns. SLATE asks him to confirm the rumour of his new appointment.

Sir ROBERT now mounts the tub to speak. HENRY demands to be arrested. The audience threaten the Minister. DAFFODIL presents their ultimatum. Sir ROBERT must be its Chief.

ACT II.

At the Ministry of Verse. (Song: "Monday Morning.") MARY JANE enters. HENRY WORDSWORTH is strolling out of the Office.

DAFFODIL is still being pursued by MICHAEL, but she cannot forgive him for his imposture of "Stephen Byrne." At length, he convinces her it is true.

Sir ROBERT comes in to hear the weekly Departmental Competition.

The staff decide they must change the Minister and decide upon "Stephen Byrne" as his successor.

They are departing when Sir ROBERT wants to know what the crowd of civilians is that has drifted into the Office. They are a deputation of Consumers of Poetry.

The Minister has letters to dictate to MARY JANE. One of them is for her, a proposal of marriage. She must officially decline, as she is another's, namely, "Stephen Byrne's."

The Deputation is let in. Their suggestion is that public confidence would be restored by the appointment of a practical poet, for instance, "Stephen Byrne."

The menacing and sinister Red Pen is heard approaching. HENRY and DAFFODIL hear a procession of poets and place a red Pen against Sir ROBERT'S heart. They demand his instant resignation, and intimate that his successor is to be "Stephen Byrne." "And who is he?" asks the Minister. "'Tis I," declare MICHAEL and HENRY, with one voice. Sir ROBERT begs their pardon. "It is he," and explains how it happened. Thus, he remains in Office. (Finale.)

Making Your Set Worth While.

The Delights of "Reaching Out." By P. P. ECKERSLEY, M.I.E.E.

HAVING given a brief survey of those parts of the transmitting system which deserve mention, I now have come, by easy stages, to your receiver. But here I am confronted with so large a field that I scarcely know where to start. It would seem logical first, however, to give some hints on matters common to all receivers.

I realize that there are two schools of listeners; those who are content, or are forced, to listen to their local station only, and those, more fortunate, who can afford to have apparatus to cut out their local station and who (theoretically), with but a turn of the wrist, can transfer themselves from Paris to Madrid, to Berlin, to Aberdeen, to Manchester, or even to America.

A Democratic Service.

British broadcasting has been framed to be democratic, and at the moment, thanks to relay, main and high-power stations, eighty per cent. of the population of the British Isles may receive a programme on a crystal set. Publicity has been given to this fact, and we have spoken with some pride that we have so nearly, and in two years, arrived at so democratic a service. In the minds of some, however, the reaction to our policy has been to think that we, as responsible for the transmission, are keen advocates of crystal sets per se. This is erroneous.

Our policy of providing possible crystal reception in all the densely populated areas has been prompted by two considerations. Firstly, we know that if it is possible to receive broadcasting on a crystal in a certain area, then the listener within that area, whatever set he may use, is sure of one programme at least that is entirely free from interruption (except oscillation).

Radio's Greatest Function.

In the second place, we realize that wireless, if it is to fulfil its greatest function, must be democratic, and we, therefore, within the limits of the art, make it possible for those of us who have not a great deal of spare cash still to participate in the pleasures of listening. Thanks to our policy, the average listener's capital outlay need not be more than a few pounds, and his subscription is only ten shillings yearly. Had we been content to abide by our original contract and only erected main stations, the fifty per cent. of the population outside the crystal areas might, with some justice, have asked why they should be less favourably treated. I would once more emphasize that we do not favour the crystal set itself when we speak in terms of crystal areas. We use the term to define a wireless condition of such an area.

How, then, has our scheme affected the listener who wishes to be able to roam further afield, who realizes that wireless has the added fascination of being able to allow the user to pick and choose his programmes, both British or Continental, or even American?

Some would answer that by erecting such a multiplicity of stations we have forced him, even though he is rich enough to afford more complicated sets, to listen to his local station. Here I am on delicate ground, because with some sets it is certainly true that the erstwhile "reacher out" is condemned to a local programme. It is, however, possible that his set has, in the natural course of events, become obsolescent, and that had he a more selective arrangement, his local station would be no bar to excursions out to "fresh woods and pastures new." The listener may, at first sight, be irritated to think that he has sunk capital in a set which cannot cut out his local station; but he must remember that the art is expanding rapidly.

My American trip left me with a profound admiration for the selective qualities of many American sets. It is possible with the better types of such apparatus to live almost under the shadow of transmitting aerials, and yet to be able to roam afield undisturbed by the nearby station. I cannot speak in the highest terms of the quality of some of the sets that I heard; but I was only in the States a very short while and I would be foolish to assess all practice in terms of the few sets I sampled. In certain sets the two desirable qualities were combined in a remarkable degree; in the majority of cases, I was not so favourably impressed.

"Distant Listening."

I merely bring in this discussion to show that sets can be designed to cut out the local station, and, of course, many sets exist on the British market to-day which are quite as selective as is necessary to give the listener a wide choice of programmes. Let the listener not be hasty in criticism, bearing in mind the fact that British manufacturers have been severely hampered by the competition from the home maker who has few of their difficulties, and by the fact of a trade depression consequent upon the war. My arguments are called to disabuse the feelings that exist in certain quarters that our policy has prevented the possibility of developing the ubiquitous quality of wireless.

Before leaving this subject of "distant listening," let me warn people that, while it is an interesting hobby, there are many technical difficulties which tend to mar the pastime considered as an artistic enjoyment. I tried the other night, during the Glasgow "late rota," to listen to that station. All I heard was a "far, far away echo" of Scotland amid a chorus of cat-calls, shrieks and whistles that would put Inferno to shame, even if all got their deserts.

Distant listening is all right if too many people, each with wholly inadequate and badly-handled sets, are not trying to listen too. Distant listeners frequently foul their own nest. Jamming from spark stations never goes very well with a programme, however well executed. Night distortion and fading do not improve the reception considered as an artistic enjoyment. Atmospheric, crashing in here and there, are confusing, and apt to be out of time and tune with the music.

Fascinating Hours.

In spite of all this, some stations come in very well, and one can derive real pleasure from picking them up. I have spent many fascinating hours waiting for a station to give its call sign; I have enjoyed the romance of it all, and do not let it be thought that I am attempting to discourage anyone from going in for a branch of wireless which must always be a lure to anyone with a spark of imagination.

Primarily as a public service, however, we must remember that but a small percentage of listeners can afford to indulge in the delights of "reaching out," but to those who can, I say, without fear of contradiction, that with a suitable set nothing stands in their way, and a democratic and a ubiquitous service exists contemporaneously.

Reasons For the Long Wave-Length.

One last point before I leave this general discussion. The High-Power Station, working on 1,600 metres, has been criticised as introducing a factor which complicates receiver design. Many say that we ought to work the station between 300 and 500 metres. It is true that it is not easy to design an all-purpose receiver with a 1,600-metre adjustment. Again, however, it can be done. Our reasons for the long wave-length were threefold:—

(1) Having regard to the many unselective (usually home-made) receivers on the market, and remembering the small number of available wave-lengths, a high-powered station would, if working between 300-500 metres, interfere with the existing service.

(2) Short waves give night distortion, fading, and shielding more than long waves, and the station was designed to give service over large areas.

(3) The jamming on short waves is so acute that we should have hardly improved many areas as regards uninterrupted reception had we not used a wave-length far removed from marine working.

The above is not an apologia; it is a statement of fact which will, I hope, stimulate further discussion. We realize that the whole subject bristles with contentious matter; but the views set forth above briefly indicate that, in our opinion, our service, within the limits of the art, fulfils democratic ideals and yet provides variety for those who can afford to benefit by its widest potentialities.

Dear old Party (Listening for the first time): "Here you are—take these ear things! I won't listen to such nonsense. Here's a man talking about what the Prince of Wales did in 1750, and I know for a fact that he's only just over 30 now!"

The ebonite cap of the earpiece is screwed on by special apparatus to a marked degree of tightness. It is almost impossible to remove it without a wrench. This means more accurate clearance distance between the diaphragm and the faces of the pole pieces and guards against distortion. But what is more important, it defeats any casual attempt to unscrew the caps which, once done, destroys the Matched Tone adjustment.

British Manufacture.
(B.B.C. Stamped.)

When we assemble the Matched Tone Headphones we select, by means of a special apparatus, two earpieces whose electrical properties closely agree. One by one the earpieces are tested by vibrating the diaphragm of a fixed telephone receiver with an oscillating current. The vibration is transmitted by a closed column of air to the diaphragm of the one on test which is adjusted immediately beneath the permanently fixed example. It then vibrates in sympathy, thus causing a current to flow through the bobbins. The volume of the current is indicated on the dial of the testing apparatus. Any two 'phones which closely agree are matched and are assembled in one headphone, hence Matched Tone. This means greater purity, strength and sensitivity. Obviously, the joint energies of both earpieces in perfect unison means redoubled effectiveness in all these three qualities. Ask your Dealer for Brandes.

The Table Talker is another Brandes quality product at moderate price. Its full round tones are wonderfully clear and pleasing. The horn is matched to the unit so that the air resistance produced will exactly balance the mechanical power of the diaphragm. This means beautiful sound-balance. Gracefully simple of line, it is finished a shade of neutral brown and is twenty-one inches high.

"THE GIFT OF TONGUES."

Truth's Remarkable Report on the New "Direct" Way of Learning Languages.

WRITE FOR FREE PARTICULARS TO-DAY.

"ONE hopes that full advantage may be taken of this unique opportunity of gaining fluency with facility."

So says the famous journal Truth in a remarkable report on the new "direct" method of learning French, German, and Spanish.

The method investigated by Truth is directed by correspondence by the well-known Pelman Languages Institute.

This method enables you to learn French in French, Spanish in Spanish, and German in German. No English is employed. There is no translation. There are no vocabularies to be memorised. Grammatical complexities are avoided. And the system of instruction is so simple that even a child can understand it.

The Path to Fluency.

"The Pelman Languages Institute," says Truth, in a report entitled "The Gift of Tongues," "presents to the English student a book written entirely in French or German or Spanish and enables him to read it through with complete understanding, without once referring to a dictionary. From the first the student is free from the translation hindrance. He learns naturally and easily to express his thoughts directly in the foreign tongue, and for this reason his speech is fluent and idiomatic."

"The Pelman system," continues the report, "is a well-planned scheme which reveals new words as they are needed. No more than one new word is introduced at one time in any sentence, and each new idea is treated so thoroughly as to ensure its being both understood and memorised before proceeding to the next. The meanings of common nouns are pictorially suggested, and the names of abstract things are introduced into the text in so subtle a manner and used in so many different combinations that their meaning is also unmistakable."

Personal Tuition.

Although the Pelman method of learning French, Spanish and German is taught entirely through the post, each student receives personal tuition. As Truth remarks:—

"Despite its simplicity, the Pelman Languages course is very thorough, and leaves little to chance. If any loophole remains where the student may possibly go wrong, or be mystified at any point, he is speedily set right through his worksheet, his mistakes being corrected with helpful annotations, and his difficulties elucidated by one of the skilled tutors employed for this highly important work. In short, he enjoys the inestimable advantage of personal tuition, which must specially commend itself to those who have failed to learn languages through class work. By this means his personal interest, application, and intelligence govern his rate of progress, his own particular difficulties being explicitly dealt with at length."

Remarkable Tributes.

Everyone who has adopted this new method is delighted with it. Here are a few typical letters received from readers who have taken one or other of the three Courses:—

"I find the Pelman method is the best way of learning French without a teacher." (H. 682)

"By your method, which is gradual and sure, the pupil learns more in one year than in four years by the ordinary method." (S. M. 163)

"In the space of eight months I have learnt as much Spanish as I learnt French in eight years at school." (S. K. 119)

"I find it both interesting and instructive. The method appeals to me, and I shall certainly recommend it to anyone I may meet who desires to acquire a thorough and practical knowledge of the French language in a pleasant and easy fashion." (L. 111)

"Although I disliked languages intensely at school and did not believe they could be interesting, I decided to try your system and have found it 'perfect'—one becomes fascinated almost against one's will." (M. 668)

"Every lesson has made me regret the time wasted previous to commencing your splendid system. I cannot speak too highly of it; as it is so interesting and makes study a pleasure." (L. 277)

"I have enjoyed my lessons very much and think the Course is simply wonderful." (K. 293)

"With regard to Part I., I have found this most interesting. The method employed seems to introduce one to a knowledge of the language quickly and effectively." (H. 112)

"The French Course is certainly a brain-wave on someone's part; although I am fairly fluent in the language there is a lot to learn even in Part I." (C. 118)

"I am very well satisfied with the result of my French Course. I have often tried to learn French at different times (I am 57 years old) and have tried most of the advertised systems. Yours seems to me to be the most practical and thorough. I hope you will make a great success of these Courses—they certainly deserve it." (C. 155)

"I have found your Course in every way satisfactory and it has improved my knowledge of German very much indeed. The way in which all the different rules are set out makes it very easy to master the trickery of the German language. I shall have no hesitation whatever in recommending you to any who may be interested in learning foreign languages in the shortest possible time." (G. H. 139)

"I should like to say again how very interesting the two Courses have been to me. When I first saw your advertisement I doubted if it was possible to read the booklets which contained no word of English. But I may truthfully say that I have read and understood each one in turn, without having to consult a dictionary once." (W. 614)

"The Course has been a godsend to me, for I have very bad health and spend nearly all the winter in bed. Until I began to learn French with your wonderful system, I found time hang very heavily on my hands. I am delighted with the progress I have made, and even while ill I find I can both study and enjoy French by the way you teach it. I never knew anything so absolutely simple—doing away with all the drudgery in beginning a language." (L. 458)

"I have already recommended the German Course to one student, who has struggled for years under the old, and happily obsolete, methods, and I was able truthfully to describe your system as the only one which makes acquiring a vocabulary not merely inevitable, but simply inevitable." (G. B. 122)

Hundreds of similar letters could be quoted did space permit.

This wonderful new Pelman method of learning French, Spanish, and German is explained in three little books (one for each language).

You can have a free copy of any one of these books by writing for it to-day (using the following coupon) to the Pelman Languages Institute, 950, Bloomsbury Mansions, Hart Street, London, W.C.1. State which of the three books you want, and a copy will be sent you by return, gratis and post free together with a reprint of Truth's report on the new method.

LONG RANGE AT LOW COST.

Hitherto powerful sets have been chiefly notable for their high prices.

A Loud Speaker Set, therefore, selling at £4:10:0 must mark a distinct and economical advance in receiving equipment.

Although the Little Giant is but a two-valve set, these two valves do the work done by the three or four usually employed in the ordinary type of long range Loud Speaker Set. They also do it without the instability often found in complicated reflex circuits.

The tuning is done by turning one single knob so that no skill at all is required to operate the receiver satisfactorily.

With Headphones the range of the Little Giant is almost unlimited, whilst good results with a Loud Speaker can be obtained anywhere in the country.

Complete with Loud Speaker, full equipment and tax paid, the set sells for £10:5:0, a wonderfully low figure considering what the equipment includes.

Don't fail to hear one of these sets. If you live in London visit Messrs. Yeates, Ltd., of Store Street. If not, go to your local retailer, or write direct to us at Park Royal, and we will send you full details.

“If you're using 7/22s you're sitting in the back row of the gallery, the 'Mars' will put you on the front row of the stalls—”

This heading makes no appeal to the technically-minded but it graphically suggests the difference in efficiency between 7/22s aerial wire and 'Mars' aerial wire which supersedes 7/22s.

If your crystal set's volume gives you the impression that you're on the back row of the gallery—don't blame the set. Take down your present aerial and fix a "Mars." The increase in strength and clarity will put you on the front row of the stalls. You will be able to hear every word—every whispered aside. You will be able to hear every note—even when the bars are marked pianissimo.

This announcement is not technical but it is by no means wholly imaginative. 40,000 "Mars" enthusiasts have proved the claims implied by the comparison we have made.

You can buy 7/22s at "gallery" prices—two shillings or so for 100ft., but 9/6, the price of the "Mars" gives you a seat in the "Stalls" of wireless for the long life of this durable super cable.

The "Mars" consists of 84 strands—not 7. Each strand in the "Mars" cable is spirally wound and thus air-insulated—an exclusive "Mars" characteristic. The "Mars" has 80% greater surface area than 7/22s and gives 50% greater efficiency.

Obtainable from most wireless dealers. If you have any difficulty in obtaining, send P.O. for 9/6 to:

How long should a Valve last?

THE one principal factor that determines the length of life of any valve is the temperature at which the filament is run. If such a discovery were possible, a "cold" valve requiring no heat—from electric batteries or otherwise—to drive off its electron stream would possess an indefinite life.

* * * * *

It was with this thought at the back of our minds that we set about designing the Wuncell Valve. At all costs filament temperature must be kept down to a very minimum. That our efforts have been crowned with complete success can be gauged from the fact that when the Wuncell is working in daylight its glow is practically invisible—while even in the dark it is merely comparable to the dull red embers of a dying match.

* * * * *

The Wuncell Valve gives exceptional results because it has been built upon radically different lines. Instead of obtaining low consumption by thinning down the wire used in the filament at the risk of fragility, the Wuncell filament has been specially manufactured to throw off a greatly increased electron emission. As a result, considerably less heat (or battery current) is required to operate it.

* * * * *

Before you buy your next Valve be sure to see the Wuncell. Examine the filament for yourself—compare it with any other Dull Emitter and you will readily understand why it has such a phenomenally long life. After all, it is the length of time that a valve lasts that will count most with you.

TRUEMUSIC MINOR Loud Speaker 21/-

T. M. C. No. 2a Headphones
4000 ohms, 19/6.

T. M. C. No. 3 Lightweight Headphones 4000 ohms.
Weight only 6½ ounces, 22/6

The "Minor" reproduces all kinds of Broadcasting perfectly. It will do full justice to the most elaborate set, and will get the best out of a small one.

Its performance will delight you.

All the family can enjoy Broadcasting for the cost of one pair of phones.

Finished outside in nigger brown, with copper-plated terminals, the "TrueMusic Minor" is one of the most pleasing and attractive on the market. The inside of the horn is of lacquered copper, giving a bright and cheery effect—yet it does not need polishing.

The resistance is 2,000 ohms.

If you cannot get a "TrueMusic Minor" Loud Speaker at your favourite Wireless Shop, we will supply you direct.

For "DX" working or a crystal set, T.M.C. Headphones are just what you want; sensitive and clear-toned. They are comfortable to wear, and absolutely reliable, for only the best materials are used in their manufacture. Remember that all T.M.C. apparatus carries a twelve months' guarantee.

Sylverex users become our Ambassadors

There is never a disappointed Sylverex purchaser; our most rigorous system of triple-testing makes it impossible for a faulty Crystal ever to be labelled "Sylverex." Not only is Sylverex sensitive all over and right through, but it is also consistently sensitive, so that whether you buy Sylverex in the Strand or in Edinburgh, or anywhere, you always get a picked specimen. Thus every Sylverex User becomes our Ambassador—spreading the news of Sylverex amongst his friends, and even, as this writer has done, telling his local Dealers about it, too.

"Will let all his Wireless Friends know that he has FOUND A WINNER."

"C. F." of Hythe, Kent, writes:—"The 'Sylverex' Radio Crystal I received from you on Monday last is the best and by far the most sensitive that I have had. I tried it on Monday night, and no matter where the Catswhisker touched, it was sensitive, and the signals were both loud and clear... I have seen the manager at —'s this morning, and told him the result of my trial, and shall see others during the week. For I think that others should know of a good thing. It means a lot to me, as my health will not let me go out at night, and the Wireless is my only pleasure... I shall let all my wireless friends know that I have found a 'Winner.'"

That Straight Line Protects You

WHEN your lightning-arrestor device puts the aerial lead and the earth in a straight line, your aerial is a definite protection to your house.

A house with an aerial and a Pressland Safety Lead-in is safer than a house without an aerial.

It is futile just to connect aerial and earth terminals on your set, or to adopt any device that does not connect aerial to earth outside the house. Lightning will not follow angles; it takes a straight line.

The Pressland Safety Lead-in

Is a self-contained discharge-gap, and provides for an external earth-wire. It is scientifically shaped to form a perfect insulator—free from surface leakage.

More than 40,000 titles were suggested for this wonderful picture.

THE immense and totally unexpected response to our simple little Competition has caused us no little embarrassment. Many of the titles are so clever and so appropriate that it has been necessary for us to delay until next week our decisions.

Certainly the fact that such a large number of readers of "The Radio Times" have taken the trouble to write to us is a positive proof of the esteem in which BROWN Wireless Headphones and Loud Speakers are held throughout the whole country.

HEARING IS BELIEVING

IN your own interests, before choosing any wireless set, at least hear the Cosmos Radio Valve Set. Then you will understand why it is called the Musicians' Set. It gives you all the music; balanced, not compressed and distorted; coloured, not plain: pours it out like wine and not like water. Such purity of reception, such preservation of the colour and character of music has never been attained in the whole range of wireless. You can listen to it at almost any wireless dealer's. Failing this, write to us for the name of a dealer near you where you may hear it.

Your holiday.

This year try the holiday that is different. Explore new country and enjoy a healthy restful change free from irksome routine.

THE NORFOLK BROADS with their natural beauties and quiet old-world villages will enchant you. They are 120 miles from London and consist of 200 miles of safe inland rivers and lakes situated between Cromer, Lowestoft, Yarmouth and the fine old city of Norwich with its Cathedral and Castle. Splendid fishing, bathing, etc.

You hire from us for a week or longer a fully furnished wherry, yacht or motor boat which becomes your floating home, moving when and where you wish, inland, not on the sea. If desired we can supply an attendant to manage the boat and do all cooking. You only have to enjoy yourself. The cost, including boat, food, etc., averages £4 per head per week.

We will gladly send you full details and help you with information and advice.

Send at once 2d. postage for our 192-page booklet containing particulars of 300 yachts, wherries, motor boats, houseboats and bungalows, also caravans we have for hire and long article "How to enjoy a Broads Holiday." Also craft on Dutch canals, Rivers Thames, Ouse, and Cam.

Straight to Earth

"Yoicks! Tally Ho! Straight to Earth!"

The CLIMAX COPPER EARTH is the best form of direct earth. It is ready for immediate use. The specially designed armoured point allows it to be easily driven into the ground. The perforated tube enables water to be easily introduced into the surrounding earth. It takes up little space and is not obtrusive. It is far better than the old-fashioned earth, with its ugly and inefficient wire trailing through the house, followed by a bad joint on to a wandering water-pipe.

If you are troubled with—
Weak signals,
Intermittent signals,

Electric Main disturbances,
Local set interference,
Muddy reception,

the probable cause of the trouble is an inefficient earth. Get a better earth to-day. GET A CLIMAX COPPER EARTH.

The enormous success of the CLIMAX RADIO EARTH has given rise to a flood of imitations of doubtful efficiency. Protect yourself. Look for the name CLIMAX on the cap.

Any radio dealer can supply. If difficulties are put in your way, or substitutes offered you, please send your 5/- direct to us, and we will send you the genuine CLIMAX RADIO EARTH by return.

THE CLIMAX JUNIOR CRYSTAL SET DE LUXE.

A very attractive crystal set in a small, beautifully finished mahogany case, carrying a brilliantly polished panel with silver finished fittings. The detector is the well-known Climax Sure-Set Plug-in detector, fitted with micrometer adjustment. This detector can be set quickly and easily, and is very stable when set. It has all the advantages of a permanent detector with the advantage that you can adjust it. The miniature switch enables the wave length to be changed over to Chelmsford without using any loading coils. Tuning is by variometer, and is very sharp and efficient. When not in use, the aerial can be switched direct to earth, thus giving complete protection against lightning. Price 21/-. The highest possible grade of crystal set at the lowest possible price.

THE CHILDREN'S SET.

There are many parents who would like nothing better than to give their kiddies a Wireless Set. The endless enjoyment that children could obtain from wireless would be worth all the toys in the world. But it must be a set that will not go wrong, that will not require adjustment of any kind and that is not beyond the understanding of children. For the first time this has been done by the discovery of the R.I. Permanent Mineral Detector Crystal Set.

This wonderful little Set makes things

S.T.100 increased 30% in Volume/ merely by changing a Crystal.

"... It may interest you to know of the results I have obtained using a 'Uralium' Crystal on my S.T. 100 Reflex Receiver.

"I make no boast of any freak long range receptions, although I can get most of the European stations, but since replacing the crystal in my set for a piece of 'Uralium,' I have consistently obtained signals, not only of an increase of 30% in loudness, but of a purity which really surprises me... All the fidgeting to find a good 'spot' is done away with, since 'Uralium' seems to be one large Sensitive Spot."

Such is the experience of a "Uralium" user, set down in these brief extracts from his letter to us. In fact, many hundreds of crystal or crystal-valve set users are daily replacing their old crystal for "Uralium" and finding such remarkable results to follow.

You should, however, be governed by unbiased opinion in the selection of your crystal, and you will be well advised to consult any user of "Uralium" as to its exceptional qualities.

“What can you expect when you didn't look for the name?”

Every super-product sooner or later has its imitations. And British Ericsson Telephones have not escaped. Colourable imitations both in appearance and name (but not in efficiency) are being offered the public.

Look for “Ericsson” stamped on each earpiece. If absent the telephones offered you are “continental” imitations.

Back in 1909 the Admiralty adopted Ericsson British Telephones as standard. In 1917 in the gruelling tests of war the R.A.F. did the same. Their efficiency both as regards sensitivity and robustness secured this distinction. Since then we have immensely improved their sensitivity and to-day they stand supreme as “The World's proved best Telephone.” Prices at all good dealers:

You can easily
identify any Station
by its wave-length

—here is the Instrument that will do it for you

EVERYONE with a Valve Set needs a wavemeter. It is the only method of finding out the exact wavelength of the Station you are receiving. But there is a further use for it. Supposing you know the wavelength of the Station you want to pick up, you can set the Wavemeter operating on that wavelength and rotate the Condenser dials on your Set until you hear its buzzing. You now know that your Set is tuned to the exact wavelength and that the Station you want will be exactly at those Dial settings.

A Wavemeter will double the pleasure of Broadcasting—in fact, it will enable you to pick up many stations you have never heard before. This instrument has been built according to the actual design published in "Modern Wireless" (Feb.) and is contained in a polished mahogany (or oak) cabinet. Fitted with Silvertown buzzer, best quality Peto-Scott Square law condenser, and Siemens battery.

Completed with two coils to cover 250 to 600 metres (higher wavelengths need additional plug-in coils) and fully calibrated with spare blank chart for higher wavelengths - £3-15-0

This wavemeter is also available in complete sets of parts for home construction, 30/-.
 Cabinet extra: Oak, 12/6,
 Mahogany, 15/-.
 Coils extra at list prices, but any suitable plug-in coils will suffice.

Why not build your own
Set and save money?

No need to pay for a ready-built Set if you can build your own and save the money. We can supply a complete range of first-class Valve Receivers—from a Crystal Set to a 7-Valve Set ready for screwing together. All the components are ready built, tested and guaranteed. You save pounds by building your own and gain invaluable experience. Our Service Dept. will complete success and will help you after you have built your Set if necessary. Send 3d. for a copy of our Pilot-Chart to-day.

Here is the 32-page Pilot Chart which everyone who is going to build a Set should have. It contains illustrations and specifications of 30 different Sets, send 3d. for a copy to-day. We also issue a 48-page illustrated Catalogue of Components for Experimenters, 3d. post free.

a coil of wire

Not an ordinary Coil of Wire—not an extraordinary Coil of Wire—but a special Coil of Wire; a Wire which, known as Electron, the World's Wonder Aerial, has brought immeasurable pleasure to countless Wireless enthusiasts. Gone is the trouble of erecting an Outside Mast with its unsightliness and uncertainty. To-day, Electron, the clean GALE-PROOF Aerial, can be fixed any how, anywhere—with sureness of perfect reception.

a special box

For such a special Aerial it was necessary to have a special Box. For public protection, we created a distinctive Box printed in blue, which should not be mistaken: Insist upon Electron Wire, genuine Electron Wire in the special Box, at the nominal price of 1/8 for 100 feet. Twenty pennyworth of sheer happiness.

a wonderful result

Wonderful results can be obtained from the most mediocre set, if you use Electron Wire, The Supreme Aerial. Daily we receive letters of goodwill expressing delight from users all over the world. Give your set a new life with Electron Wire. It is not so much the price you pay—no aerial can ever give as good a result as Electron Wire, more especially bare wire which will rapidly corrode and require constant attention. Buy a box of Electron Wire NOW.

There is a shop on the way home.

ON SALE EVERYWHERE.

Spring

A wonderful time of the year—Spring! The promise of sunshine, the promise of flowers and the promise of the great outdoors. Let our hopes include music, song, dance and romance—through Sterling radio—this Spring!

For you and yours!

Here is a radio receiver that pleases like the flowers of Spring, but the pleasure it brings lasts longer! With the Sterling "Anodion One" all the joys of broadcasting are for you and yours indoors and outdoors, through the Spring, through the Summer, and for the years to come.

These claims are no idle phantasy of the season, for Sterling have never made anything in radio that did not keep its promise. There is no one, whether radio expert or amateur, who has ever failed to receive through Sterling products the wonder and charm of music, song and interest with an efficiency that is without equal.

The truth of this claim is in your hands to test by inquiry where you will. Dealers are always happy to demonstrate Sterling products.

The "Anodion One" is a highly efficient one-valve receiver giving splendid results often at considerable distances under favourable conditions. Tuning is effected by means of a Sterling Square Law Condenser in conjunction with Sterling Tuning Units, the complete range available covering a wave-band of 275-7600 metres. The instrument is mounted upon a highly finished desk-typed hinged cabinet. With B.B.C. coil, but without accessories.
