"Somewhere a Voice Is Calling."

By THOMAS BURKE.

[In the following article, Mr. Thomas Burke, author of "Limehouse Nights," "Whispering Windows," and other well-known books, makes some novel and amusing suggestions.]

THE baby science of radio, although so young, has already given us many benefits—some material, such as the saving of souls at sea; others less important, but still valuable. It has cheered sick people, and brought tidings and echoes of the great world into lonely places; but to me its most interesting achievement is that it has made us listen.

* * * * *

We all possess the five senses, but it is seldom that we fully develop them. Few people seriously use their eyes; few have a keen sense of smell; few really use the great gift that lies in their hands—the gift of touch—though that is the first instinct of the baby and of the lover. Fewer still really use their ears.

* * * * *

In this matter radio is helping us. It is quickening our slow sense of hearing, and making us sharply aware of voices. We hear the voices of our friends in conversation, and the voices of actors on the stage, but we have not, until now, completely listened as musicians listen to an orchestra. Half our attention has been through the eyes, looking at our friends, anticipating what they are going to say, or watching the graceful movements of stage figures. In radio we can employ but one sense; there is no distraction of the physical presence; and our ears are becoming more and more sensitive to the fine shades and the significant inflections of the human voice.

To many lonely people the voices of the announcers or of John Henry, coming out of nowhere, are clothed with character; and they become as familiar and as pleasing to the listeners as the faces of their friends. I know many old people who treat these voices as present companions and answer them with, "Oh yes," or "Quite so"; and numbers of people respond to the last "Good night," bidding farewell to a guest who is as actual to them as though he were visible and palpable.

MR. THOMAS BURKE.

I assume that all the announcers of the different stations are aware, by their correspondence, of the numbers of women who have fallen in love with them through their voices. If not, I can assure them that this has happened. All over England there are girls who listen eagerly for the voice of Mr. — or Mr. — or Mr. — (I leave the names blank, as I do not wish to create jealousy in the studios!) Whether, on a sight of the owner of the charming voice, love would develop or perish, I cannot say. It is a matter of taste; and we all know the story of the young man who married the soprano whose voice had enraptured him; and

The Songs I Like to Sing.

By Astra Desmond, the Contralto.

Miss ASTRA DESMOND.

I HAVE been asked to write a few words about my favourite broadcasting song, and I find myself, in consequence, in rather a difficult position. I have no permanent favourite. If I were told that in future I was to be doomed to sing but one song only, I should be horrified, no matter what the song might be for, though there are many beautiful songs in existence, I know of none of which I should not tire in time.

With me it is largely a question of mood. Sometimes I feel that I want to sing a certain song more than anything else in the world. The next day I may hate the thought of it. Besides, one passes through phases of enthusiasm for particular songs and particular composers. At least, I do. A batch of songs arrives from the publishers, and one among them strikes me as being particularly good. I learn it, and sing it on every possible occasion.

Good and Helpful Friends.

After a time, my fancy is caught by something else, and I suddenly find I am tired of the first one. It is of no consequence, because it is highly probable that my friends are tired of it, too. I drop it—but only for a time. A few months later, perhaps, I come across it when turning out my music, and sing it again. In this way, it becomes a part of my regular repertoire. I no longer think it the only song in the world, nor sing it in season and out of season, but I have made my mind up about it, and it is there for use when I think the occasion suitable.

It is not otherwise where composers are concerned. I pass through periods in which I feel I want to soak myself in the works of one particular writer whom I admire. But then, like the boy in the confectioner's shop, I find that over-indulgence brings satiety, and I turn away, only to return, I hope, later, with a more balanced appreciation. The list of composers who have affected me thus is long and varied. It contains the names of Bach, Handel, Schumann, Dupare, Debussy, Cyril Scott, and Granville Bantock, to name only a few. I have loved them all (musically speaking, of course!), got tired of them all, and concluded by making them all my very good and helpful friends.

Broadcasting and the Gramophone.

There are people, artists among them, who are loud in their lamentations over the success of the B.B.C. They talk as if the death-warrant of the legitimate concert had thereby been signed, and even the gramophone had been relegated to the scrap-heap of out-of-date curiosities. I am not one of these pessimists. If people like broadcasting better than the gramophone, I do not see why they should not be allowed to make their own choice. But I find they like both. They hear a good song on the wireless, and then buy a record of it, so that they may turn it on whenever they like.

In the same way they welcome an opportunity of hearing on the wireless a song which they already know from the gramophone. Thus broadcasting and the gramophone play into each other's hands to the advantage of both, and, as to the legitimate concert, no mechanical contrivance will ever supply the thrill of personal contact. The most enthusiastic supporter of the wireless will be ready to admit that it can never be quite the same as an actual performance in a concert hall, where the magnetism of performer and audience has free play to act and re-act. Neither will the artist ever willingly forego the thrill of appearing in person before an audience, and swaying it by the combined force of art and personality.

Nevertheless, wireless has advantages which the concert hall cannot claim. For myself, I always feel, when broadcasting, a greater freedom of choice in respect of songs than when singing at a concert. I am not worried with the feeling that I must not sing a certain type of song because it will bore a part, at least, of my audience. Anyone who feels bored can switch me off. And, as for the audience, well, one has only to look at some of the figures giving the number of people who possess wireless sets, to realize what the B.B.C. is doing for the musical life of the nation.

A Fairy Godmother.

How many hundreds of thousands of musical lovers there are who, for one reason or another, are unable to attend concerts, and to whom the B.B.C. has appeared like a fairy godmother! And, by the way, we are actually beginning to suspect that we are not quite such an unmusical people as foreigners have declared us to be. If that be so, then the B.B.C. will take a leading part in developing and educating the inherent musical taste and ability of the nation. It is a great responsibility, but it is also a great privilege.

(Miss Astra Desmond will sing at the concert of Sir Edward Elgar's works to be broadcast to all stations except Chelmsford on Tuesday, March 31st.)

Vogue of the Guitar.

A Popular Instrument Under Many Names.

Gaily the troubadour touched his guitar
As he was hastening home from the war,
Singing: "From Palestine hither I come,
Lady love! Lady love! Welcome me home!"

WE all know that song. It is one of our proofs that the guitar is an old instrument. It has been popular in many countries under many names. In Shakespeare, it figures repeatedly as the lute, and a really famous guitar, brought to Britain before Shakespeare's time, is kept and shown at the Royal College of Music. Its back is of tortoiseshell, combined with ivory, mother o' pearl and ebony. It is the instrument which David Rizzio brought with him when sent from Savoy as Ambassador to Mary Queen of Scots.

An Ingenious Scheme.

The vogue of the guitar in England, however, did not begin until just after the middle of the eighteenth century. It looked then, for a while, as if it were going to supersede the harpsichord and the spinet in public favour. Women of fashion took to selling their harpsichords, or exchanging them for guitars; and Jacob Kirkman, the harpsichord maker of Soho Square, had to consider what he could do to be saved from ruin.

His scheme was ingenious. First he bought the harpsichords which the women were anxious to get rid of. Then he acquired a number of guitars and gave them away to shop girls, and even to young women of dubious reputation. The result was that the guitar became vulgar, and the harpsichord once more became fashionable. The great ladies sold their guitars and bought back their harpsichords at prices which yielded Kirkman a substantial profit.

looking at her in the train after the ceremony, pleaded, "Mary, for Heaven's sake—sing!" I do not suggest that Phyllis or Joyce would make a similar request to Mr. Announcer; but there is a danger, and if Mr. Announcer values the happiness of young and loving hearts, he will keep himself hidden and exist only as a voice floating through the spheres and moving maiden fancies to clothe him in even fairer shape than his own.

All the women listeners that I know have their favourites among announcers, and listen idly to deputies or newcomers. They will analyse the voice for you, as they analyse the characters or the faces of their intimates. They like the way he inflects certain words; they like the timbre of his intonation; they like the friendliness that lies behind his accents, and they turn from the somewhat chilly, though, perhaps, perfect enunciation of another.

Unconsciously we put as much of ourselves into our voices as into our eyes or lips or our walk; most of us are only now realizing this. Having listened regularly for two years to the announcers and readers of the various stations, I feel sure that, though I could not risk a description of their appearance, I could give an accurate reading of their general characters—whether they are mean or kind, or hot-tempered, or suave.

The voice seldom changes. However my friends may disguise themselves with uniforms or beards, or the shaving of beards, there are two points by which I can always recognize them—two points of the human creature that never change—the voice and the back of the head. Faces alter; bodies alter; but the back of the head and the voice do not alter and cannot be disguised.

I can see trouble arising from this. I can see an announcer at some remote station being discovered by his heartbroken father from whom he ran away when a boy—simply by the way he pronounces his r's. I can see a heartbroken wife recognizing a voice in a wireless concert party, and tracking that voice across England from "2LO" to "5XX," and so to Birmingham, Nottingham, Stoke-on-Trent, Newcastle, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and Belfast, and discovering its owner in a studio; so that listeners in the British Isles will find a soulful rendering of "Bid Me Discourse," interrupted by "So there you are, you beauty!"

Or the girl enraptured of a voice might write a shy letter of appreciation, and the letter might draw a reply; and it might end in a meeting; and the maid's vision of a young, strong, silent Army officer would be shattered by the fact of a stout old Bodega actor who had played with Irving. Or one of the announcers might find among his correspondence a note in delicate handwriting on lilac-tinted paper, signed Marjorie, expressing the delight that Marjorie had found in his voice, and he might be moved, if the time of the year were spring, to answer Marjorie's desire for a meeting, and meet a bedridden old lady.

Knowing how deeply the voices of announcers have moved susceptible young hearts, which are proof against bronzed faces and handsome figures and clothes, but not against this novel enchantment of the invisible prince, I suggest that all announcers, before announcing the evening's entertainment, announce the fact of their marriage and their large family. That may mean the surrender of a large number of radio sets, but it will save a lot of trouble on the one side and a lot of hopeless heartache on the other.

Headphones by the Million.

Astonishing Results of Mass Production.

THOUGH the war had a paralyzing effect on industry generally, it certainly opened the eyes of our manufacturers to the advantages of mass production, and of late they have not been slow to apply to the needs of peace the methods by which, in the end, our Army was adequately supplied with munitions.

The most unpromising things to manufacture by those methods appear to be scientific instruments; but for some time several of these have been made on multiple principles, and a recent addition to their number is the headphone which is now produced in a factory in the Midlands with a system that is really amazing.

Perfect, but Simple.

This is a considerable achievement, because the modern headphone is not a scientific instrument merely; it is a scientific instrument of precision. When it was required almost solely for the reception of telegraphic signals, quality of reproduction and absence of distortion were almost negligible. But in broadcast receiving these things emphatically do matter. Tonal fidelity, in fact, is essential, and in the headphone produced by systematized manufacture it is attained.

To visit the factory is to get an object-lesson in planning and organization. At the outset, you see special machines everywhere—machines which, though they do their job perfectly, are yet simple. In addition to reducing the number of parts to the minimum, the engineers cut down the manufacture to pressing and stamping and assembly within a moulded container or ear-piece. Moreover, they dispensed entirely with screws, studs and nuts, which do not enter into the construction of the headpiece at all. So there are no intricate, bewildering masses of cogs and gadgets such as you find in some engineering works.

Helped by the Aeroplane.

Typical of the whole of the manufacturing operations is the making of the sound-box, which forms a single unit. Its composition is a non-resonating material, into which the magnet and pole-piece assembly are embedded—a process carried out in a steam-heated press worked by hydraulic power.

Incidentally, the sound-box is an outcome of other lessons, besides those relating to mass production, learned during the war. For some of the improvements embodied in it are due to making magnetos for aeroplanes. The composition used for moulding the sound-box was discovered in connection with that work, and the magnets are made of cobalt steel, owing to the experience gained with that material in the manufacture of magneto magnets. An aeroplane magneto must have a very strong magnetic field, and the magnet must retain its magnetism even when subjected to continuous rough usage for long periods. Magnetos with these qualities were made during the war, and this paved the way for the production of superior headphones.

Inspected at Every Stage.

Comparatively simple though the operations are, however, there is careful inspection in connection with them—an important feature of mass production. In some works, parts made like matches must be within 1-500in. or less of the required measurement, otherwise they are instantly rejected. Here there is inspection at every stage, followed sometimes by testing. Pole-pieces, for instance, are first inspected, and then afterwards subjected to a magnetic test, which consists in putting them in a specially-designed instrument and then withdrawing them, a resultant kick on a ballistic galvanometer indicating the flux density.

(Drawn by Alfred Leete.)

"CONFOUND THESE MODERN INVENTIONS!"

Great care is taken to make the inspection thorough and impartial. All inspectors work under a chief inspector, who is responsible directly to the works manager. So inspectors, not being subject to foremen, can reject parts or complete headphones without constraint or consideration of output.

Above the banging presses, on the top floor of the factory, is the assembly department—a large room that is a veritable human hive. Aligned along it are specially-designed benches, at which sit women and girls in neat blue overalls, some of the workers bent over spot lights, which supplement the general lighting when very fine operations are in progress.

One 'Phone in Fourteen Seconds.

These busy workers, to whom come all the parts from below, are divided into five sections, each of which produces complete headphones. Spool insulating, cord winding, attachment of leads, coupling coils and connecting to tags, fitting coils to magnets, connection of cords—these and other operations fall to a section. But every headphone is built up by passing it from hand to hand, no girl doing more than one little thing towards the complete headphone.

Such is sub-division of labour carried to the highest degree. It seems deadly monotonous, though women stand it well. In Birmingham you can see girls whose sole and constant task it is to roughen the edges of tins with a file—a process preparatory to making them air-tight. Nothing, surely could be more dull and uninteresting, but these lasses appear quite cheerful.

Next, and last, comes the despatch department, to which the headphones, each in a box numbered on a system that enables the date of boxing and the section that assembled the instrument within to be readily ascertained, are transported on a belt conveyor.

But before the headphones are finally passed, they enter a room where they are tested for reception. This is done by means of an electric transmission device, music from a gramophone taking the place of that broadcast from the stations. For this work blind ex-soldiers are employed, and they have proved themselves highly efficient.

As a result of this elaborate adaptation of means to ends, the factory—which employs two thousand hands, some of whom are engaged in making loud speakers—produces a headphone every fourteen seconds, or about twelve thousand a week.

T. W. WILKINSON.

England's Great Composer.

Elgar, the Self-Taught Genius.

A CONCERT of unusual interest is to be broadcast—S.B. to all Stations except Chelmsford—on Tuesday, March 31st, for on that date Sir Edward Elgar, O.M., is to conduct a programme consisting entirely of his own works.

There are probably few living musicians who are so indebted to their own labours for success as is Sir Edward. Born at Broadheath Common, Worcestershire, the son of an organist, who also kept a music shop, he early showed signs of his great musical talent. In spite of this latter fact, however, he was left more or less to his own devices, the whole expenditure on his musical education amounting to just over three pounds for a fortnight's tuition on the violin, and although he is now recognized as a master of orchestration, he never had a lesson on this difficult subject in his life. When quite a youth, he was apprenticed to a solicitor, but the law never appealed to him and he used to give violin lessons in his spare time.

Waltzes at Five Shillings Each.

In his early days, too, he added to his income by writing waltzes, polkas, etc., at five shillings a time, and nigger minstrel ballads for which he is said to have received eightpence each.

In 1879, he was appointed bandmaster to a Lunatic Asylum, where he coached players recruited from the attendants. It was in this capacity that he became familiar with almost every instrument, from the trombone to the big drum, and there are few instruments which he himself cannot now play.

But although he has been all his life absorbed in music, he is in appearance and manner not in the least like the usual musical genius. He is, indeed, typically English, both physically and in his mental make-up, and he is of such a retiring disposition that at first one is apt to think that he is a trifle proud. Those who know him well, however, are aware that Sir Edward is really one of the most genial and kind-hearted of men.

A Keen Sense of Humour.

As an instance of his extreme sensitiveness, some years ago he wrote to a fellow composer expostulating with him for having set to music two of the Psalms which contained anti-humanitarian sentiments!

Although Sir Edward is of such a reserved disposition, he has a keen sense of humour, a quality that he has possessed from his earliest years. When quite a boy, an amateur musician named Spark once played one of his own compositions at Elgar's father's house and all were loud in their praises except young Edward.

"And now what does little Edward think of it?" inquired the elated amateur.

"If you puff a spark too much, you will blow it out," was the future Knight's immediate and crushing reply.

More Appropriate.

Since he has become famous, his friends cherish many of Sir Edward's bons mots. Perhaps one of his best was made while he was on a visit to America. Like all celebrities who go "over there," he was literally hounded by the newspaper reporters in search of good "copy," and one night he was actually knocked up after he had gone to bed by an enterprising young pressman who explained that he had come as a representative of the Sun.

"A representative of the moon would be more appropriate at this hour," said the great musician promptly.

CHARLES TRISTRAM.

Official News and Views. GOSSIP ABOUT BROADCASTING.

A Listeners' Club For Sheffield.

ABERDEEN has its Listeners' League, and now the Sheffield Station has formed a Listeners' Club with a rather different purpose from that of a League, while in its object it is thoroughly constructive. The Club idea is, indeed, worthy of emulation. In Sheffield the membership stands at 2,500, or thereabouts. Community singing concerts have been arranged. The first will take place at Victoria Hall on May 15th, when an augmented orchestra will perform and Miss Mavis Bennett, who has already been heard from the Piccadilly Hotel, London, and Miss Ena Roberts will sing. An organ recital will be introductory to the programme. The concert will be the first of its kind to be held in the city.

A Concert From Amsterdam.

A pleasure is in store for listeners on Thursday, April 2nd, when a concert is to be relayed by Chelmsford from Amsterdam, via Hilversum. The Amsterdam Orchestra will play items by Mozart, Handel, and Brahms. Miss Thorna Durigo, a soprano of European fame, will sing, and the conductor will be Mr. Willem Mengelberg.

Bach From Soho.

Bach's Passion Music and St. Anne's Church, Soho, London, have come to be regarded almost as synonymous terms. That is because for more than half a century the music which typifies the Lenten celebrations has been given at the famous church near Piccadilly Circus. If Sir Joseph Barnby, one of the greatest organists of the Victorian era, who introduced the custom of giving the Passion Music at St. Anne's, were now living, we wonder what he would have thought of the broadcasting of the work to an unseen audience of two million or more people? Tests have recently taken place at St. Anne's, and it is proposed to transmit a performance of the work, with full orchestra, from Chelmsford ("5XX") on Friday, April 3rd, at 7.30 p.m. St. Anne's choir was one of the first church choirs to broadcast.

Lecture Recitals on Music.

Mr. Percy Scholes' Lecture Recitals, entitled "How Bach and Handel Made their Music," and "How Haydn and Mozart made their Music," broadcast from the Æolian Hall on March 14th and 21st, respectively, attracted a good deal of attention among music-loving listeners. Two further recitals of a similar character will be given by Mr. Scholes on March 28th and April 4th. On the former date he hopes to describe "How Beethoven made his music," and on the latter date his subject will be "Some of the Composers since Beethoven."

Three Popular Programmes.

Prior to the fortnight of British National Opera at Cardiff, in April, a special performance by the artists of the British National Opera Company will be given at Cardiff on Sunday evening, April 5th.

During the succeeding week, three Popular Programmes will be provided on different nights. Monday, April 6th, will be a Bristol night, intended specially for listeners of the West Country. Local artists will participate.

On the following Wednesday, the series of Welsh Hours will be continued, and on Saturday the seventh Request Programme will include, among other artists, Miss Constance Wentworth, and Mr. Frederick Lake, both of whom are already known to listeners in the West. These Request Programmes have been very successful, if the correspondence which is being received is any indication. Those who have written may be assured that their suggestions will be carefully considered.

A Novel Programme at Birmingham.

Birmingham Station is breaking fresh ground on Thursday evening, April 9th, when the programme will take the form of a complete evening of instrumental solos. This is a change from the general type of programme. Monday, April 6th, will be reminiscent of the Pilgrim's Progress night which was recently broadcast from the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. A special Beethoven Programme, conducted by Paul von Klenau, the well-known Viennese conductor, will include the Recitative and Aria, "The Incarnate Fiend," from Fidelio, and the "9th Symphony" (Choral). The artists are Miss Ursula Greville, Madame Alice Vaughan, Mr. Geoffrey Dams, and Mr. James Howell, with the Mixed Choirs of Wolverhampton Musical Society, the City of Birmingham and Station Repertory Chorus and the Augmented Symphony Orchestra. This concert will be relayed from Birmingham Town Hall.

An Afternoon of Chamber Music.

The London programme, S.B. to other stations, on Sunday afternoon, March 29th, will consist of chamber music. Several songs will be sung by Mr. Dale Smith (baritone), assisted by the Catterall String Quartet and by Miss Sidonie Goossens, harpist (whose photograph appears in the opposite page). During the evening programme an address will be given by the Rev. Thomas Nightingale, General Secretary of the National Free Church Council.

Radio and Language.

Radio offers some interesting possibilities as a potential factor in the development of language and the improvement of diction. In an attempt to realize the ideal of beautiful speech, the Belfast Radio Players will, on Wednesday, April 8th, broadcast two groups of verses spoken in unison by a small chorus. The rest of Great Britain will thus be given an opportunity of learning something of value from Northern Ireland.

On the evening of April 8th, the Players will present two new sketches of Ulster life and character, one of which, Horse Sense, has been specially written for broadcasting by Gerald MacNamara. Horse Sense is characteristic of the author's style in its original and somewhat fantastic satire.

Youthful Musicians.

The Barnardo Musical Boys are to give the local programme on Saturday, April 11th, at the Dundee Station. Their instruments include hand-bells, sleigh-bells, miniature chimes, ocarinas, marimbaphones, and an assorted collection of tinkling cymbals. On the miniature chimes they will provide a selection of Scotch airs, introducing "Duncan Gray," "Robin Adair," "Mary of Argyle," and "Highland Laddie"; and on the handbells "Bonnie Dundee," "Blue-bells of Scotland," and other pieces. Mr. Reginald Whitehead (bass) will sing some of his characteristic rollicking songs.

"East to West."

Glasgow Station will give, on Saturday, April 11th, the first of a series of public concerts to be broadcast from St. Andrew's Hall. The programme, which will be relayed to Chelmsford, is entitled "East to West," and represents a musical journey across two continents, beginning in Japan with the "Japanese Suite," by Gustave Holst, played by the Augmented Station Orchestra. The idea will be to move in song and music westwards through Asia and Europe.

Liverpool's Welsh Night.

Liverpool is living up to its reputation, gained in another connection, as the "capital of Wales." At the request of a large number of listeners, who, if the truth be known, probably include many émigrés from the Principality, the Liverpool Station is giving a Welsh night on April 3rd. The orchestral works to be performed include the "Welsh Rhapsody," by German, and the vocal part of the programme is to be provided by the Liverpool Cymric Vocal Union, a male voice choir of some fifty members, who will render a programme of Welsh part-songs and solos.

Plymouth Composers.

Following on the recent local Composers' Night at Plymouth, Mr. Morris Gilbert, who took part in that programme, is giving a recital of his own compositions from the same station on April 8th. Some further compositions of his will be rendered by Miss Hilda Baker (contralto) and Mr. Albert Hosie (violin) with the Station Trio. Mr. Gilbert will include a recital of music by Mr. Gerald Phillips, a Plymouth composer of increasing popularity. The Lyric Male Voice Quartet and Mr. George Scantebury are contributing to the programme, and the latter will give a dialect recital, entitled "Jan on the Underground," by the well-known dialect writer, Jan Stewer.

"The Elements."

Titled programmes are invariably welcomed by listeners, in spite of the fact that the single theme interwoven with such a programme often cannot be appreciated by some listeners, owing to the inevitable interruptions which occur from time to time while they are listening. The programme from London and Chelmsford, on Friday, April 3rd, is entitled, "The Elements," and all music and speech—and even the humour, which is to be contributed by Mr. Ronald Gourley—will have some connection with air, fire, or water. The artists are Miss Thelma Peterson, mezzo-soprano, Mr. Stuart Robertson, bass, and Mr. Anderson Tyrer, pianist. An interlude in the last half-hour will be given by "Quips," this being his twelfth "World in Anecdote" talk on "Work and its Worries."

Burlesquing the Composers.

The London programme on Saturday evening, April 4th, will be provided by the orchestra, with English concertina solos by Miss Christine Hawkes, songs by Mr. Cyrus Garside, baritone, and humour by Mr. Jerome Murphy, the Irish entertainer, with Miss Toni Farrell. Miss Farrell is perhaps better known as Alison Travers, composer of many ballads. She is a pianist with a pronounced sense of humour in her work, which usually takes the form of playing a fox-trot in her own attractive way, repeating it, and then burlesquing the styles of great composers.

Violin and Piano Sonatas.

The Novelty Trio are to give a short entertainment for half-an-hour at London, from 7.35 p.m. on Thursday, April 2nd. The Chamber Music will include violin and piano sonatas played by Mr. Albert Sammons and Mr. Evelyn Howard-Jones, who have recently collaborated in producing the second "Delius" Sonata. They will play this and also Beethoven's Sonata in F, which is better known as "The Spring Sonata." Mr. Herbert Heyner will sing seven songs from Schumann's "Dichterliebe," in English, and a group of modern English songs.

PEOPLE YOU WILL HEAR NEXT WEEK.

[Maurice Beck & Macgregor.]

Miss GLADYS MERREDEW (entertainer) will give character studies from London on March 30th.

A Brilliant Harpist.
NO musical die-hard in defence of the principle of an all-male orchestra could sustain his case against the claims that could be made on behalf of Miss Sidonie Goossens, who is now widely known to the public as a member of the "2LO" Quartet and solo harpist from various B.B.C. stations.

She is a member of the Royal Philharmonic, Queen's Hall, Royal Albert Hall, and Eugène Goossens Orchestras, and last year toured the country with the London Symphony Orchestra. Miss Goossens is also a member of the staff of His Majesty's Theatre, where her first important engagement was in the production of Chu Chin Chow.

[Crowther.]

Miss SIDONIE GOOSSENS, who will broadcast from London on March 29th, and from Newcastle on April 2nd and 3rd.

Mr. HERBERT HEYNER (Baritone) will sing at London on Thursday, April 2nd.

[Harris.]

Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., who will personally conduct a concert of his own works (S.B. to all Stations, except Chelmsford) on Tuesday, March 31st. An article on Sir Edward appears on page 3 of this issue.

[Langfr.]

Miss WINIFRED SMALL (Violinist) will play at Bournemouth on April 3rd.

[Maurice Beck & Macgregor.]

Mr. ANGUS MORRISON will broadcast a piano-forte recital from London on March 29th.

Miss ADELINE SENIOR (Soprano) will sing at Bournemouth on April 3rd.

Miss GABY VALLE (Soprano) will broadcast at Manchester on April 1st.

[Nesona.]

Mr. JOHN VAN ZYL (Bass) will sing at various stations next week.

[Maurice Beck & Macgregor.]

Mr. NORMAN NOTLEY (Baritone), a popular contributor to radio programmes.

Pieces in the Programmes.

A Weekly Feature Conducted by Percy A. Scholes.

ELGAR EVENING.

(ALL STATIONS PROGRAMME, EXCEPT CHELMSFORD, TUESDAY.)

OVERTURE IN D MINOR (AFTER HANDEL).

THE Handel Orchestra no longer exists. Try as we will, we cannot to-day reproduce its tone-colours and tone-balance, and herein lies the justification for Elgar's brilliant re-orchestration.

The piece consists of three sections, as follows:—

I. Majestic. A slow Introduction of a firm and resolute stamp.

II. Quick and joyful. In a free, fugal style, growing largely out of the "Subject" with which the Violins open.

III. Majestic. A brief closing passage, modelled on the Introduction.

The score has lately been published by Messrs. Novello (7s. 6d.).

OVERTURE "IN THE SOUTH."

In the South (Allassio) is a musical record of impressions of Italy—more especially of "a glorious afternoon in the Vale of Andora," with snow-tipped mountains on the horizon, and the blue Mediterranean, and with ruins at hand, suggesting thoughts of the strife and power of the old Roman civilization.

The tunes out of which "In the South" is constructed are all Elgar's own. One of them in the middle, a tune of pastoral feeling, has been spoken of as an Italian folk-tune, but the composer states that this is an error.

"In the South" was first heard in 1904.

FUNERAL MARCH from "GRANIA AND DIARMID."

Grania and Diarmid is a drama by W. B. Yeats and George Moore, for which Elgar wrote incidental music.

The Funeral March follows the death of Diarmid, wounded in a bear-hunt.

THE "ENIGMA" VARIATIONS.

The plan of this, Elgar's most widely popular work, is as follows:—

A. Tune: nine Variations upon it. An Intermezzo.

Three more Variations: A Finale.

The reason the Tune is called "Enigma" is curious. It seems that it is so written that another tune (one well known to us all) could be played with it, and even, it is said (though this seems amazing) with each of the Variations. Another interesting thing is the dedication of the piece, "To my friends pictured within," each of the Variations being preceded by the initials or nickname of the friend "pictured."

Taking this piece section by section, its course is:—

THE TUNE (Gently moving along). Note this carefully as it is played, for it offers the clue to all that follows. It falls into three sentences, as it were—six bars in the minor, four bars in the major, and then the first six bars repeated much as before, but ending with a major chord.

After pausing a moment on this chord, we pass into a whispered passage that leads into—

VARIATION I. (At the same speed). Dedicated to C.A.E., i.e., C. Alice Elgar, the composer's wife. The Tune is started very softly by FLUTE and CLARINET (Doubled by Violin and Viola tremolo).

VARIATION II. (Quick). Dedicated to H.D. S.P. A rapid run-about theme is treated sometimes in the Violins, sometimes in the Wood-wind. The original Tune, after a time, appears underneath this in 'CELLOS and DOUBLE-BASSES.

VARIATION III. (Pretty Quick). Dedicated to R.B.T. A very happy treatment of the Tune, mostly by the Wood-wind. At the opening the OBOE has it.

VARIATION IV. (At a good quick speed). Dedicated to W.M.B. This gives the Tune much in its original form, with much added force.

VARIATION V. (At a moderate speed). Dedicated to R.P.A., i.e., R. P. Arnold, son of Matthew Arnold. This is a rather solemn Variation. At the opening the Tune is heard in 'CELLOS, DOUBLE-BASSES and BASSOONS, the Violins working against this a new Tune.

VARIATION VI. (Gently moving along). Dedicated to "Ysobel" (said to be the composer's daughter). At the opening, bits of the Tune are heard in the Lower Strings, but with the intervals widened (it is said that Ysobel is fall and has a bold stride). After a few bars a VIOLA SOLO is a prominent feature.

VARIATION VII. (Rapid). Dedicated to "Troyte" (said to be A. T. Griffiths, an architect). The Kettledrums are the heroes of this Variation; playing very vigorously a little figure founded on the opening of the Tune. Another feature of this Variation is a short ascending phrase that constantly begins very softly, works up to great loudness, and then begins again softly.

VARIATION VIII. (At a gentle, rather quick pace). Dedicated to W.N. (said to be Winifred Norbury, of Malvern). A very graceful Variation. Note at the opening two Clarinets (running parallel, six notes apart). This Variation ends with a note softly held by the Violins, which serves as a link with—

VARIATION IX. (Slow). Dedicated to "Nimrod." This Variation is throughout very dignified, yet full of feeling.

After a brief pause we start afresh with—

VARIATION X., INTERMEZZO (At a gentle, rather quick pace). Dedicated to "Dorabella" (said to be Miss Pinny, of Malvern). This can barely be called a "Variation," as it makes little reference to the Tune. It is fairy-like in its delicacy. Muted STRINGS and WOOD-WIND give out little chirps and twitters, and then there creeps in a soft VIOLA SOLO.

VARIATION XI. (At a good rapid pace). Dedicated to G.R.S., i.e. the late Dr. Sinclair of Hereford Cathedral; note how his active organ pedalling is continually suggested in the Bass.

VARIATION XII. (Gently moving along). Dedicated to B.G.N. A SOLO 'CELLO begins, and the other 'Cellos then join it. Perhaps B.G.N. was a 'cellist. Without a break we pass into—

VARIATION XIII. ROMANZA (Moderately Quickly). Dedicated to * * * (said to be Lady Mary Lygon). The original tune is not much alluded to here. The piece is supposed to represent a seascape, for * * * was on a voyage when it was written. A CLARINET SOLO, of two bars' length, opens the piece. The VIOLINS take up this little bit of Tune, and, after them, the FLUTE and OBOE. Soon there comes a little CLARINET Tune of a few descending notes, which Elgar, in his score, has placed in inverted commas. It is a quotation from Mendelssohn's Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage Overture.

VARIATION XIV., FINALE (Quick). Dedicated to E.D.U. This is a very elaborate piece of some length. In its course there appear memories of some of the earlier Variations.

SYMPHONIC PRELUDE, "POLONIA."

This was written during the first year of the war, as a tribute to Poland and with a dedication to Paderewski. It was first played at a concert in the Queen's Hall in aid of the Polish Victims Relief Fund.

Most of the tunes used are Polish melodies, but an obvious exception is the typically Elgarian tune near the opening.

"The Wireless League."

DEAR SIR,—As an enthusiastic listener, I am astonished that it should have been thought necessary by a certain daily newspaper to inaugurate a so-called "Wireless League." It proposes to get seats for listeners on the Board of the B.B.C. Surely, this is unnecessary. What would be their duties, and would they be remunerated? If so, by whom? The B.B.C. know quite well what listeners think, and they do not want inexperienced people on their Board.

"Technical advice" is another of the League's objects. This is all very well in its way; but a league is not necessary to disseminate it. Any listener can get what he wants from books and from the wireless Press.

In what earthly way can the League better the Programmes? Only by criticizing, and as I have said, the B.B.C. already know their critics' opinions.

Personally, I think that many of the criticisms of the B.B.C. are most unfair. Is it realized that the Company has only been in existence for a little over two years? Is it realized, too, that they give eighty-four different programmes every day? Could any league of listeners make things one whit better? I think not.

A great deal is talked about "free competition," but this is nonsense. If there were to be more than one Broadcasting Company, the confusion would be endless, and eventually they would have to co-operate—or even to amalgamate.

The extraordinarily inappreciative attitude of a large section of the public towards what has already been done for the small sum of 10s. yearly makes one almost believe that gratitude is dead. But it is not really dead, and I think that if another League could be started of B.B.C. admirers, the "grousers" would have an eye-opener.

Yours, etc.,

London, N.W.

Wireless for Hospitals.

DEAR SIR,—I have received a copy of the Oxford Times, from which I learn that, as a result of my appeal from "2LO" on December 29th last, no less a sum than £600 has been raised in the City and University to equip the Radcliffe Infirmary and the Eye Hospital with wireless. The supporters of the scheme include the Bishop of Oxford and the Vice-Chancellor.

It would be interesting to know if any other city or town has done as well as this.

Yours, etc.,

Hove.

KEBLE HOWARD.

Audiences in the Studio.

DEAR SIR,—Listeners generally, I have no doubt, are delighted to learn that there is the prospect of programmes being performed before real audiences. Much as they appreciate the good work of the studio, it was just that needed to give the "atmosphere" of reality, and probably, too, the performers themselves will be "bucked up" immensely, for they sometimes seem very tame and tired.

I feel sure also that thousands of listeners would be grateful to the B.B.C. if they would make it a condition of their "job" that all announcers should clearly announce the name of their station between every item. This would be not only a boon, but a blessing, as thereby a vast amount of "shrieking" would be spared us through listeners striking in and trying to tune into some particular programme.

Yours, etc.,

Exeter.

Is This a Record?

DEAR SIR,—I should like you to know that as I was unable to be home to listen to the Tetrizzini concert, I telephoned home from public call-boxes on three occasions during the evening, and received portions of the programme by having an earphone held before the mouthpiece of the home telephone. A friend and myself were able to hear Mme. Tetrizzini splendidly, without even placing the telephone receiver to our ears; and, in fact, the reception was so good that her voice comfortably "filled" the call-box.

My receiving set consists of detector valve and one low-frequency amplifier, with reaction—indoor "Electron" aerial in basement room—no earth, and eight pairs of 'phones in series distributed to the top of a five-storeyed house.

Am I justified in regarding the above as an achievement? And do you think many people heard the concert in so novel a way!

Yours, etc.,
London, S.W. A. H. R.

Wanted: More Music.

DEAR SIR,—With regard to the letter in The Radio Times on "Wanted—More Music," surely it is necessary to have a careful definition of "music" before the point can be dealt with satisfactorily.

The music to which one can listen whilst engaged in other occupations or amusements must obviously engage a part of one's mind only. Therefore, it is not great music—in the highest sense of the word. To enjoy great music, we must give up our whole selves to the business of listening. We have to work (often unconsciously) for all our pleasures.

Unhappily, there are many people who have not the spare time in which to create for themselves this pleasure. And (sadder still) there are many people with no inclination for, or understanding of, this pleasure. They have never found the secret. For these, a programme of good, light, gay, strongly rhythmic music is undoubtedly necessary. A part of one's mind is sufficient to absorb this.

Yours, etc.,
Carshalton. D. M.

"Great Singers of Yesteryear."

DEAR SIR,—Whilst agreeing with most of the above-mentioned article, I would ask you to make a slight correction. Maas, the finest tenor of his day, was Joseph, not Edward, and he did not die from the effects of damp sheets. He caught a bad cold whilst fishing (a favourite pastime of his), which developed into rheumatic fever and killed him on January 15th, 1896.

His monument (erected by public subscription) stands in West Hampstead cemetery, and a scholarship in his name was established by the Royal Academy.

Yours, etc.,
Stamford Hill. C. E. G.

A Good Idea.

DEAR SIR,—Prior to getting my set fixed, I really did not know what a vast number of friends and acquaintances I had. Now they turn up in battalions, and as I have only five sets of headphones, I can only accommodate ten of them at once.

We have recently reopened our Cottage Hospital here, so I am having a collecting box where all can see it, and all listeners will be invited to drop a copper in the box, the proceeds to go towards fitting a wireless set for the use of the nurses and patients. If the other owners of sets fall in line with this, we shall soon be able to accomplish the object in view.

Yours, etc.,
Morecambe. "BRADMORE."

A Song of Merrie England.

The Story of "The Floral Dance." By A. B. Cooper.

THERE are certain songs which, once heard, refuse to be banished from the memory. Such a song is "The Floral Dance," the idea for which Miss Katie Moss, the author of both words and music, picked up at New Quay, although the real "quaint old Cornish town" of the song, is Helston, twenty miles away on the other coast of the Cornish peninsula.

Helston is the home of the Floral Dance, a survival of Merrie England; but the natives call it the Furrice Dance. Whether it has any connection with the goddess, or whether its origin is quite different, is a moot point, and is likely so to remain, but true it is that to this day, to the sound of the

Fiddle, 'cello, big bass drum,
Bassoon, flute, and euphonium, playing a tune immemorally associated with it, the people, young and old, rich and poor, are

As I walked home on a summer night,
When the stars in heaven were shining bright,
Far away from the footlights' glare,
Into the sweet and scented air
Of a quaint old Cornish town;
Borne from afar on the gentle breeze,
Joining the murmur of summer seas,
Distant tones of an old-world dance,
Played by the village band perchance,
On the calm air came floating down

I thought I could hear the curious tone
Of the cornet, clarinet, and big trombone,

Fiddle, 'cello, big bass drum,
Bassoon, flute, and euphonium,
Far away as in a trance

I heard the sound of the Floral Dance
And soon I heard such a bustling and prancing.

And then I saw the whole village was dancing.

In and out of the houses they came,
Old folk, young folk, all the same,
In that quaint old Cornish town.

Ev'ry boy took a girl by the waist,
And hurried her off in tremendous haste,
Whether they knew one another I care not,

Whether they cared at all I know not;
But they kissed as they danced along.

And there was the band with the curious tone
Of the cornet, clarinet, and big trombone,

Fiddle, 'cello, big bass drum,
Bassoon, flute, and euphonium,

Each one making the most of his chance,
All together in the Floral Dance.

swung into the dance, as it goes down the street, into the front doors of the houses, and out at the back, and on again to the throb of the drum.

When I asked Miss Katie Moss to tell me about her famous song, she said: "I was engaged to sing and play on a concert tour through the British Isles, with the Zancigs, immediately after their first successful season in London.

"I was engaged to sing songs with my own violin obbligato, and songs also at the piano. It was a delightful tour. Among the many seaside places we visited was New Quay in Cornwall, and, strolling homeward, after our performance, I thought I heard, in the far distance, the throb of a drum, and then there came the faint sound of music, and I caught the rhythm of a quaint little tune to which one felt one must dance. I think it must have been just such a tune the Pied Piper played, and which made all the children dance out of town.

Presently, as the music approached nearer and nearer, I saw that the musicians were accompanied by a lot of folk, all dancing and jigging. It was a charming sight on that starlit evening, and such a quaint little band of music! I stopped, fascinated, watching the dancers. Presently one of my colleagues in our entertainment party caught hold of me and tried to draw me into the dancing throng, but I laughingly resisted, escaped, and presently went home.

"Bother That Tune!"

"However, when we were all having supper together in our hotel, the little tune haunted us. We could not get it out of our heads. Someone would say: 'Bother that tune!' then, a moment or two later, would be humming it again, and beating hands and feet gently to its catchy rhythm.

"Needless to say, it fascinated me, and finally led me to try and express something of the little pleasing episode in verse and music, the result being 'The Floral Dance.' That, however, was some time later when I was engaged professionally on another tour and had arrived at Manchester. I was all alone in my 'digs,' and to amuse myself I wrote the song just as it is sung to-day.

"I have little doubt the folk at New Quay, many of whom were visitors, had seen the Floral Dance, or 'Furrice Dance' as they quaintly call it, which is so well known a feature of Helston, the dance taking place every year on May 8th. This dancing in and out of the houses is supposed to bring peace and plenty during all the rest of the year, and is said to come down from pagan days, a religious rite, really, in honour of Flora. We know that the Phoenicians used to come to this coast long before Julius Caesar began our history books with 55 B.C., and they may have introduced so charming a goddess to their British acquaintances!

An Immediate Success.

"However that may be, I sent the song to Messrs. Chappell, who accepted and published it, and Mr. Thorpe Bates sang it first at a Chappell Ballad Concert. It was an immediate success, and was soon on its way all over the world. I myself have heard of its being sung in the Flowery Land—China."

Miss Katie Moss was born in Bayswater, her parents being both in the musical profession. She says that it is to her mother chiefly—she was an Associate of the Royal Academy—that she owes her success, although her father gave her her first lessons in singing. Like her mother before her, she went to the Royal Academy, winning the Westmoreland Scholarship, the Ritson Memorial Prize for singing, the Dove Prize for general excellence, and the Hine Prize for composition, that is to say, for the best ballad written by anyone under seventeen.

Since the great success of "The Floral Dance," Miss Katie Moss has written many others, such as "Come, Join the Dance," "The Land of Orange Trees," "Moonlight," and "Grey Flowers of Dusk." Listeners will recall several of these being sung on the wireless at various times. But it is not every day that the most talented composer hits upon so happy an inspiration, both in words and air, as that perfect combination "The Floral Dance."

["The Floral Dance" will be sung at London Station, on Saturday, April 4th.]

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER, CONDUCTED BY THE AUNTS AND UNCLES.

A Chat About Cats.

HULLO, children!

Probably most of you have one or more cats at home, and you will certainly like this talk about these pretty animals by Theodore Ruete.

* * * *

It has always struck me as strange that some folk should thoroughly dislike, and often even abuse, cats, since the work Puss does for mankind is both varied and valuable. But perhaps she has only herself to blame for men's treatment of her, for her manner frequently shows that she considers all of us quite beneath contempt.

We may even harbour a vague, secret fear of cats, which can look at us in a dreadful, fascinating sort of way, never practised by a dog. You must have noticed that vacant, yet penetrating glance Puss sometimes turns upon us. A regular startler of a stare! Yet it has its value! For when brought to bear upon the lower order of creatures, particularly if in anger, it is able to exert a strong mesmeric influence upon them, which has more than once been the means of saving a man's life.

Pussy as a Snake Charmer.

An army officer friend of mine in India once, when walking on to his veranda, accidentally trod upon the tail of a cobra that was sitting up, ready to strike him. He expected instantly to feel the prick of those death-dealing fangs, but the blow was not given. Not understanding the delay, nor the snake's extraordinary stillness, he glanced across the veranda, when he saw his cat there, crouching forward, its eyes steadily fastened upon the snake. This reptile, indeed, was perfectly powerless to stir, and was easily killed.

On another occasion, when sleeping on a cot on his veranda, the officer awoke to find a huge cobra, with head erect, lying upon one side of his bed, while his faithful cat, her green eyes glistening in the darkness, was blazing defiance across his body at the snake.

Although naturally scared, the officer succeeded in crawling from under the coverlet and reaching for his gun, while Puss still kept the snake chained in her mesmeric grip.

Wishful to test this remarkable power, my friend momentarily placed his hand in front of the cat's eyes, when the snake at once showed signs of life, relapsing into stupor again on the hand being quickly withdrawn. The reptile appeared to be dead, and actually was as stiff as any stuffed specimen. It even allowed itself to be poked about with the gun, without showing the slightest signs of life.

Warned of Attacks.

In the war Puss's hatred of gas gave warning many times of the enemy's attacks, and thus was the means of saving thousands of lives. One whiff of the poisonous fumes was quite enough for her! Up went her fur, and with tail on end, she at once began to whine her disgust and dread. The War Office, consequently, sent thousands of cats to France and Belgium, where they also proved invaluable for their attentive destruction of rats and other vermin.

Many a person has been saved from a burning building by the keen sense of danger possessed by a cat! The animal's terror has often awakened human beings from sleep, and thus given them time to effect their escape.

Besides Puss's worth in this and other directions, however, it is good for us to have her around the hearth, in order that our protecting love for some weaker creature may be daily called upon. Some folk imagine that a cat doesn't value this affection so much as would a dog. But what does that really matter to you or me? For in the end, the love we spare to our pets reacts upon ourselves, thus doing us the very best possible service.

Kindness to a cat, moreover, often has been many times repaid. A woman I was visiting the other day told me that her cat formerly was actually a stray one. For many mornings in succession it had been upon her doorstep, begging to be allowed to come in, but she had always repulsed it. At last, however, my friend thought she would give Puss a trial, because of the pestering mice. On going downstairs next morning, she found her newly acquired cat mewing and trying, by every means, to attract her attention. So she followed the creature, which led her to a cellar, where lay—what do you think?—five mouse-tails in a row.

Puss rubbed herself against her new mistress, and, glancing up, seemed almost to say: "Now may I stay? Am I not worth keeping?"

So she was allowed to stop and she soon rid that house of its mice. But whenever she kills a mouse, she always takes her mistress to inspect its tail.

The Bird in the Clock.

Another friend of mine couldn't understand how the door of a certain cuckoo-clock in one of her rooms came to be upon the kitchen-floor. She duly replaced it, but found it there again next morning, and this performance continued for several days. One morning, however, she happened to rise somewhat earlier than usual, when into her kitchen marched Puss, carrying the little wooden clock-door, which it solemnly laid down in the usual place.

After a time, my friend put back the little door upon its slight wire-hinges, while she determined to watch what would happen next day. Peeping into the room then, she saw Puss watching for the cuckoo to come out. At the striking of the hour, the cat actually sprang at the lifeless bird, but it proved too quick for her.

Puss, however, caught the door as it slammed to again upon the cuckoo, and tearing it from its frail little hinges by the powerful stroke of her paw, carried it off triumphantly.

A BIRTHDAY EVERY DAY.

By LANGFORD REED.

"Oh dear!" sighed Dorothy, as she lay in her little white bed thinking of the lovely birthday she had had, with enough presents to stock a small shop and the most scrumptious party that ever was. "Oh dear! What a shame it is that one cannot have a birthday every day!"

Had she been older, I do not think she would have had such a foolish thought, but she was only seven, and at that age we are not quite so sensible as we are at ten or twelve.

"Good evening, Dorothy!" chirruped a little voice a few feet away, and, by the gleaming of the night-light, she saw that it proceeded from a tiny Puck-like creature, about the size of a half-burnt candle, who was perched on the foot of her bed.

"I'm 'Half-a-Jiffy,' one of Father Time's fairies," explained the mysterious visitor. "He heard your wish and sent me to grant it. He couldn't come himself, as he is listening to-night."

"I'm sure it's very kind of him," said Dorothy. "Oh, a little thing like that is nothing," replied the fairy, airily. "Henceforth you will have a new birthday every day, but don't blame me if you soon grow tired of it."

"I should not think of being so ungrateful," exclaimed Dorothy. "I am sure it will be lovely."

"We shall see," said Half-a-Jiffy. Then he vanished.

And it happened just as he had foretold, for every day Dorothy had a new birthday.

She liked it at first, but, after a time, grew tired of being expected to eat birthday cake for tea every day, and to have it in company with a large party of children, and even her presents began to pall upon her, for she collected so many that she had nowhere to put them.

But worst of all was a drawback she had never foreseen, and that was that she aged so quickly! You see, at the end of a fortnight she was fourteen birthdays older, which made her a young woman of twenty-one!

Not being a fairy, I cannot explain Dorothy's case, although I can guess that Father Time, to teach the foolish child a lesson, had crowded a year into a day with every birthday she had.

The awkward part of it was that her parents and twelve-year-old brother did not grow older at the same rate, for, you see, they had not wished to have birthdays faster than usual.

You can quite understand that this made things very muddling, especially since Dorothy's rapid growth obliged her to have new clothes every day.

But it was much worse at the end of three months, for then Dorothy had had nearly a hundred birthdays and looked and felt like a very old woman. Her parents, who were only about a third of her age, were frightfully worried about it, for according to their reckoning she was only seven and a quarter. Her case excited great interest, and eminent scientists and doctors came from all parts to see her until she longed for peace.

"Oh, if I had only been content to have had birthdays in the same way as other children!" she sighed. "What will become of me at the end of a year?"

On her hundredth birthday her brother was wheeling her along in a bath-chair down the High Street when they met an old friend of the family, an elderly man whose fussy interest in her case worried Dorothy exceedingly.

"Ah, Bobby!" he exclaimed, "and how's your sister this bright morning? Nearly a hundred, is she not? Wonderful!"

Dorothy felt a strange thrill run through her, and she sat up indignantly. "You're a stupid!" she said. "I'm a little girl of seven, and I'm not going to stay in this silly old bath-chair any longer."

And giving a sudden spring, she fell—right out of bed! You have guessed it; her strange experience was all a dream. But it cured her, and she will never again want more than one birthday a year as long as she lives.

Brandes Superior
"Matched Tone"
Headphones

British Manufacture
(B. B. C. Stamped.)

All Brandes products carry our official money-back guarantee, enabling you to return them within 10 days if dissatisfied.
This really means a free trial.

.....every one of these advertisements will show an added advantage in the construction of Brandes Headphones.

The lock-nut on the receiver yoke is a clutch that tightens and holds the receivers firmly in place when satisfactory adjustment has been obtained. This point prevents the receivers from slipping, keeps the headphones in correct balance without possibility of working askew and makes the headband follow the natural line of the head. The whole family can wear them with comfort.

Obtainable from any reputable Dealer.

Have you heard about Matched Tone? It is the unusual constructive theory of Brandes Matched Tone Headphones which has gained such universal approbation among wireless experts. Entirely original methods are employed to match the two earpieces in tone, sensitivity and volume to exactly the same degree. Obviously, the fact that both produce as one means just double the effectiveness in purity and strength, and greater ability to bring in the distant signals. Brandes are sold with a definite money-back guarantee. Ask your Dealer for them.

The Table Talker is another Brandes quality product at moderate price. Its full round tones are wonderfully clear and pleasing. The horn is matched to the unit so that the air resistance produced will exactly balance the mechanical power of the diaphragm. This means beautiful sound-balance. Gracefully simple of line, it is finished a shade of neutral brown and is twenty-one inches high.

Wireless in Every School?

Radio as the Teacher's Ally.

THE gramophone, the cinema, and the wireless receiving set have made possible enormous new developments in education. They are new educational agencies of far-reaching importance, though considering the length of time each of them has been a working success, broadcasting has made the greatest steps.

The gramophone had long been a popular possession in scores of thousands of homes before it was used on any scale for educational purposes. The tardiness with which it was adopted in schools was in large part due, no doubt, to a prejudice against it. This prejudice is happily breaking down, and for musical purposes and the teaching of languages it is finding its place as a necessary part of the equipment of the school.

Teaching History by Films.

The cinema, again, has by no means won for itself the recognition which it deserves as an instrument of education. I do not think that this is because of any prejudice against the film. It arises very largely through the expense which would be incurred in providing schools with the necessary apparatus and films. I anticipate in the future that in the central halls of all our schools provision will be made for a screen, and geography, history and natural science will be taught with the aid of films. Such films already exist, but their direct educational value is not obtained by their exhibition as part of the ordinary programme of the picture-house.

Wireless, which seems to me, as a mere amateur, far less efficient technically than either the gramophone or the cinema, and which, in many ways, is still in the experimental stage, has during the short time that a wireless service has been available, made extraordinarily rapid strides as an educational agency. Its educational programme is broad in conception, varied in its content, and wide in its appeal. It includes special transmissions to schools in London and the Home Counties during the afternoons, an adult educational scheme (some items of which will be of interest to younger folk, as, for example, the talks on "Everyday life in early times," by Mr. Quennell, than whom there is no better guide) and "late talk for the general public."

Not The Real Thing.

I am, however, more concerned at the moment with the use of wireless in the schools. I do not think that it can take the place of the cinema or the gramophone; but I believe it to be even more important than these in the range of its possibilities. The cinema is unrivalled in its way, and will always be needed to supplement mere verbal description or exposition. The gramophone provides a permanent record which can be utilized whenever needed and, in the school, at such times as may be convenient. The teacher with the gramophone is not dependent upon the times determined by the B.B.C. But the gramophone gives a reflected image, not the real thing. The hearer listens to the speaker or the singer at second-hand.

Mobilizing The World's Brain Power.

The wireless receiving set brings the listener into direct contact with the human voice. Somewhere, whether at "2LO" or elsewhere, there is a living person actually speaking or singing or playing an instrument. But if the broadcaster is missed, he is missed for good. There is no question of putting the record on again!

The direct educational advantages of broadcasting can hardly be over-estimated. It provides the teacher with a new ally, to supplement his efforts. Wireless makes it possible to mobilize the world's scientists and historians, poets and musicians, travellers and inventors behind the teacher in the class-room, to reinforce his efforts, and to bring the whole juvenile population during the formative years of life into living contact with those who, in one way or another, are fashioning or interpreting the civilization which will be the prestige of the citizens now in the schools.

The British Broadcasting Company has the opportunity of maximizing the influence of scholars and others, whose sphere of influence to-day is severely limited. It can provide men and women with special knowledge and experience, or special attainments, with a world platform. It can do for the whole juvenile population on all subjects of educational interest what the Christmas Scientific Lectures of the Royal Institution do for the few. The teaching of literature, science, history, geography may be revived, and, indeed, revolutionized with the assistance of wireless.

The Still Small Voice.

But, apart from this, broadcasting has a further psychological importance. There was a time when teaching relied almost entirely on the spoken word and the intellectual processes of memory and reasoning. More recently, it has made its appeal, in part, through the eye and the hand. It has been argued—and, no doubt, with some truth—that the appeal through the eye to the understanding may go too far, though the use of the pictorial and diagrammatic illustrations and the cinema film must always form an integral part of our educational apparatus and equipment. Nevertheless, there is an undoubted place for more abstract methods and for the exercise of concentration and imagination.

Herein lies a special contribution of broadcasting. The still small voice coming out of the void makes a call on the concentration which the cinema film and even the spoken word in the classroom can never make. Moreover, appeal is through the ear alone. Its whole impression must be created, not by illustration and motion, as in the film, not by the visible personality in the classroom, but by sound. It, therefore, exercises the imagination in an especial degree.

A First-Class Slogan.

After all, wireless is but in its infancy. Its educational implications have not yet been fully apprehended. It is clear, however, that its coming marks the beginning of a new era in education. It can never supersede the intimate influence of the teacher in the school; but it can invest the personality of the teacher with greater power and greater opportunities. Whilst the relation of broadcasting to education is being closely studied, and, indeed, in order to enable the problem to be better understood and experiments carried out, the installation of receiving sets in our schools should be extended. There are few better educational slogans than "Wireless in every school."

It is reported that official tests in Denmark have demonstrated the practicability of giving wireless directions to ships passing through the Cattegat to facilitate their passage in foggy weather.

NEARLY all Europe will be able to listen to Esperanto programmes when the station now being planned by the Esperantists becomes an actuality. The station will be erected at the summit of one of the hills above Geneva, and its programme will be intended for Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, France and Spain.

It is hoped that the station will be in operation by the early summer.

Disguising The Set.

By Robert Magill.

OUR wireless set still flaunts itself in all its pristine glory of wires and batteries and valves. True, it hardly matches the marquetry cabinet, or the Chippendale occasional table, both of which are priceless—the former because I haven't paid for it yet, and the latter because you couldn't sell it at any price. But no matter. Every now and again I pack that wireless set into a box, but in a week or two it outgrows it and sprouts another valve, so I have given up the effort to tidy it up in despair.

My friend Jones is of sterner mould—or, rather, his wife is. She would not be without a set, but she is not going to have her drawing-room look like a marine store dealer's. Her set has to behave itself.

Foiling a "Cat" Burglar.

Cabinets are not æsthetic enough for her, and she felt that she had found the solution when she saw a set that looked like a Jacobean side-board. This lasted until a cat burglar got in one night while they were at the theatre, and spent half an hour opening the thing with a chisel. He seemed quite hurt about it when the police captured him, for instead of finding their silver, he had been rewarded for all his trouble by the information that the police were broadcasting his description on account of a previous burglary. He had switched on the local news!

Incidentally he ruined the set; but Jones was insured, and Mrs. Jones purchased a second affair that looks like a bureau book-case. It answers quite well, excepting when somebody tries to take a book down, and damages the connections behind the dummy covers.

Thought It Was His Wife.

Their old loud speaker, of course, was long ago relegated to the attic, to be replaced by a large female figure holding a screen. Jones is shortsighted, and in the dim light one evening he told me that he spent some time in apologizing to this thing, until he discovered that it wasn't telling him about coming in with his muddy boots, but was explaining that a depression was arriving from Iceland. He had mistaken it for his wife.

Personally, I fail to see the reason for all this camouflage. A year or so ago an attempt was made to sell pianos disguised as settees, or coal-scuttles, or anything but pianos. And it failed utterly. It failed because the makers had not studied the psychology of piano buyers. When a man can afford to owe the money for a piano, he doesn't want to hide the fact. On the contrary. His only trouble is that he can't advertise the fact enough.

To Impress the Insurance Man.

And the main use of a piano is not to provide music. We get better music nowadays from radio. The piano exists so that we can keep photographs on it—and also to give a tone to the establishment. Many a family would never hold up its head again if there wasn't a piano in the parlour to impress the insurance man. Maybe there are only a few rusty old wires in it, for nobody ever plays the thing, but the effect is the same.

And as with pianos to-day, so with wireless to-morrow. If you haven't a set, you will be socially ostracised. Then why disguise it?

I can even foresee the day when people will be working in the other direction. Poor, but proud families, unable to afford more than a home-made crystal set, will collect a few used up batteries, an electric bulb or so, and leave them about carelessly on a table, just to impress visitors, and make them imagine it is a three-valve set.

Edward The Peacemaker.

A Great King and a Great Personality. By Sir SIDNEY LEE.*

[Few books of recent years have aroused greater interest than Sir Sidney Lee's biography of King Edward VII. which he is writing from original papers at the request of King George. The first volume has already appeared, and the second will be published later. In the following talk Sir Sidney gives an interesting description of some important events in the late monarch's life.]

AT King George's request I have been writing from original unpublished material a biography of our late King, Edward VII. The first volume, bringing my story from King Edward's birth until his accession to the Throne, a long period of over fifty-nine years—came out recently.

It is in the reason of things that King Edward should be the theme of a full biography, whether from my own pen, or another's. For the half century ending with his death on May 6th, 1910, King Edward excited a livelier interest than any other man of his epoch, not only in this country and the Dominions, but all over the world. Generations coming after us will seek knowledge about so prominent and so fascinating a figure.

The Aim of Biography.

Biography, an old writer asserts, is the safest way to protect a great memory from oblivion. At any rate, it is obvious that Greek and Roman biographies of Greek and Roman heroes have worn better than marble monuments in their honour. The true aim of biography is the transmission to posterity of a full and fair account of a human being who has arrested and prolonged contemporary attention. Not every king or prince possesses the characteristics which are likely to stir future interest and curiosity. But the like of King Edward's distinctive personality is very rarely seen among men, whether they be princes or no. His personality amply merits the tribute of biographic commemoration.

His Gift For Friendship.

What were the elements of this personality which makes King Edward everywhere a living name to-day, fifteen years after his death? To my mind, there were combined in King Edward in a supreme degree such qualities as these: a humane zeal for promoting happiness and harmony in all relations of life, private and public; an unceasing alertness of interest in all phases of human activity; an unflinching respect for all kinds of genuine achievement; a rare aptitude for business and organization; an intuitive shrewdness of judgment; a ready and pleasing gift of tactful public speaking.

No man was a more chivalric friend.

"I may and have many faults," he wrote to Lord Granville in 1882, "no one is more alive to them than I am; but I have held one great principle in life from which I will never waver, and that is loyalty to one's friends, and defending them if possible when they get into trouble. One often gets into scrapes in consequence, but I consider the risk worth running."

Where Gossip Erred.

The genial charm of his character may be more important than his exploits, but throughout his career his close observation of foreign affairs often influenced to the national advantage the relations of Great Britain with foreign countries.

At the same time, no one is likely to ignore, now or hereafter, the late King's love of pleasure and his enthusiasm for sport. Gossip of his own day often represented him as the superman of pleasure who neglected the serious side of life. Gossip erred. I do not think that anyone who justly weighs the authentic evidence which I have collected will question my conclusion that his intense vitality and his versatility of mind brought within his range of activity nearly everything that is grave as well as most things that are gay. It is this comprehensiveness of outlook on the world which makes him memorable.

[Downing.]

King Edward VII.

A Wise Counsellor.

The late King was no student of books, nor can he be called a profound thinker; but few men have had a wider or more varied experience of life. His mind worked rapidly and intuitively, and before he came to the Throne, his counsels on many subjects, notably on foreign affairs, were sometimes ignored to the world's loss. In certain foreign crises he urged a point of view which, though it bore little fruit at the time, has been amply justified by events, and might, if adopted promptly, have saved the world much tribulation.

Here is one instance. King Edward, while Prince of Wales, was untiring in his denunciation of Prince Bismarck's autocratic policy at home, and his aggressive policy abroad. King Edward believed in constitutional government, which gives the people's wishes full and peaceful scope. He was equally opposed to autocracy and to revolutionary forms of government. Very early in his career he impugned, with justice, Prince Bismarck's "blood and iron" principles of rule.

The Kaiser's Wrath.

When King Edward was a young man of twenty-three, Prince Bismarck contrived to wrest by force from the little power of Denmark the two provinces on the Baltic Sea of Schleswig and Holstein. Thus, Germany acquired the great port of Kiel and set about building the Kiel Canal, which promoted Germany's naval ambitions in rivalry with our own fleet. Denmark was the country of King Edward's wife, Queen Alexandra, who, happily, is still with us. King Edward fully shared his wife's indignation at the cruel injury which Prince Bismarck wrought on Denmark.

In the case of Schleswig, the wrong done Denmark was especially flagrant because the inhabitants there have always been preponderantly Danish. It was, therefore, a relief for King Edward to learn that Prince Bismarck, when he seized that province, promised that at some unspecified date or other the inhabitants should freely decide by plebiscite whether they would remain a part of Germany or a part of Denmark. But Prince Bismarck did not keep his promise. The appeals of Schleswig to vote on this crucial question he never answered. He finally revoked his promise altogether.

King Edward boldly but ineffectually appealed to the British Foreign Secretary some fifty years ago to hold Germany to her word. Tenaciously did he press in the years that followed the claim of Schleswig to the holding of a plebiscite. He brought upon himself the wrath of the ex-Kaiser William II, on that arrogant potentate's accession to his Throne, by urging the redress of Schleswig's wrongs.

There was no result then, save an outburst of the ex-Kaiser's anger. But King Edward's chivalric championship of Schleswig ultimately won the day, though not in King Edward's lifetime. The peace of Versailles of 1919, which was the outcome of the recent terrible war, righted Schleswig's wrongs on the lines that King Edward had urged. Schleswig, under a clause of the treaty of Versailles, was accorded a plebiscite, and in 1920 all but a fraction of the province reverted to Denmark.

Sympathy with France.

I have told a similar story on a greater issue. I have shown the intensity of King Edward's desire at the end of the last century that Germany should voluntarily give back to France, in the interests of European peace, the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. In spite of his German kinship, King Edward assimilated very early a lasting sympathy with France—with French sentiment and with French people. Prince Bismarck in 1871 made a tragic error when he outraged French pride by robbing France of her two cherished provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. This wrong King Edward sought to persuade Germany to redress—alas! in vain. Here, again, the Treaty of Versailles in 1919, which gave Alsace and Lorraine back to France was faithful to the spirit of King Edward's pacific counsel offered many years before.

Many and Varied Interests.

But King Edward's enlightened interests ranged over home as well as foreign affairs. He played an active part at the end of the last century in efforts to improve the housing of the people and to make for aged persons due provision when they were past work. I might cite, too, evidence of King Edward's profound interest in medical research. He anxiously hoped for the discovery of cures of such scourges of the human race as cancer, consumption, and leprosy.

I am now writing my second and last volume, which deals with King Edward's short reign of nine and a quarter years. No Sovereign of this or any country had served so long an apprenticeship as Heir to the Throne. Yet of all our thirty-six Sovereigns since the Norman conquest, only three have reigned for a briefer space than King Edward. But save, perhaps, in the case of King Henry V., who had a few months' longer innings, no King's popularity is likely to claim more general attention from history.

Joy in Life.

King Henry V. is the only happy hero among the kings in Shakespeare's great royal gallery. Shakespeare's other kings come to tragic ends, owing to flaws in their characters. (Shakespeare is only in part responsible for the portrait of King Henry VIII.)

King Edward was not a great general like King Henry V. King Henry V. was the conqueror rather than the friend of France. King Edward, on the other hand, has to his credit the heroic aid which he rendered to the linking together of England and France in bonds of amity and good understanding. But King Edward resembles Shakespeare's only happy royal hero in many notable respects—in his joy in life, in his patriotism, in his broad humanity, in his expansive sociability, and, perhaps, at some points in his love of pleasure and youthful enjoyment of a practical joke.

Endurance

OUR greatest athletic test, the Oxford and Cambridge University Boat Race, turns our thoughts annually to the fruits of endurance. The story of the hard and long training by members of the crews, individually and collectively, under rigid discipline acts as a morale and simile to the pathway of all achievements in life. Each member of the crew knows that success depends upon him personally, for only by the perfection of each member of the crew can harmony of the whole be achieved. The history of past successes spurs them on, ever with the aim to do "better" than the past "best."

This is true of Burndept Apparatus. Each component is subjected to rigorous examination and severe tests, while each stage of assembly is supervised for perfect workmanship. The completed set is tested under varied conditions for the "pulling-together-power" of its components, and is pushed out on to the swift stream of competition, worthy of its maker's name and traditions.

Purchase Burndept by its name—substitutes are not the same.

The Ethophone V., a powerful four-valve instrument, is a tuner, receiver and power amplifier combined. It has a guaranteed reception range of 150 to 200 miles, much greater ranges being quite usual. The instrument is designed for the use of dull-emitter valves under proper conditions. Tuning is effected by three simple controls and a special device for the reduction of "interference" is incorporated. The wave-length range is from 100 to 5,000 or more metres. The panel is free from untidy wires, as all terminals are conveniently placed at the back of the cabinet.

The Ethovox Loud Speaker reproduces broadcast speech with clear and mellow tone, and is capable of giving great volume without distortion. The mahogany coloured swan-neck and flair are gracefully shaped, making the instrument pleasing to the eye. The diaphragm is adjustable.

Ethophone V. (No. 1508) without valves or batteries, £30. Marconi Licence, £2 10 0.

Ethovox Loud Speaker, 120 ohms resistance (No. 203) or 2,000 ohms resistance (No. 204), £5.

THE MASTERSINGERS

SUPPOSE you heard the "Prize Song" from "The Mastersingers" sung without instrumental accompaniment! You would be enchanted, no doubt, by the tune as a tune. But you would be hearing the "Prize Song" in skeleton—so to speak—robbed of its soft, melting harmonies, its orchestral tints.

Now, it is just here that the Cosmos Radio Valve Sets so delight the most exacting musician. They preserve the texture of the music. They give every part its full value. If the full orchestra be playing, each instrument will enter in, in its full character and colour, and the overture will be in your own home what it is in the concert hall—in the centre of the concert hall—a blend of many tones. That is why the Cosmos Radio Valve Sets are known as the Musicians' Sets.

HEARING IS BELIEVING. In your own interests, before choosing any wireless set, at least hear a Cosmos. You can listen to it at almost any wireless dealer's. Failing this, write to us for the name of a dealer near you, where you may hear it

Exit the Dry Battery!

THEORY and practice—even in wireless—cannot always be said to progress hand in hand. Apparatus or circuits which according to all the laws of physics or electricity should perform perfectly frequently fail to function as they should. Such a case in point is the use of Dry Batteries with Dull Emitters.

When the first Dull Emitters were placed on the market a new era was prophesied in which dry batteries would take the place of accumulators. That, at present, there is no likelihood of this being realised must be apparent to all clear-thinking wireless enthusiasts.

Time and again it has been proved that unless the dry battery is very large—and consequently expensive—it cannot possibly cope with the requirements of several Dull Emitters in use at one time. You should remember that the working of a Valve—whether rectifying or amplifying—is a very delicate operation. The filament current must be absolutely constant, otherwise electron emission will vary and upset the whole balance of the Receiver.

Dry batteries are not built to give a constant output—they were originally developed for ringing bells and other intermittent work. They have to generate their own electricity, and in so doing are apt to polarise. Their output fluctuates: at first it is high and then it falls off. All the time you need to keep constantly adjusting the rheostats to be getting the best results.

But compare them with the small accumulator. No matter whether you use an accumulator for five minutes or five hours its output is perfectly constant. It does not generate its own electricity—it merely stores it against demand. For economy, too, the little portable accumulator stands supreme. A small initial cost and a few coppers every few weeks is all you need to spend if your Set is equipped with Wuncells.

This simple explanation will prove to you why the Wuncell—designed to operate from an accumulator—is able to give results which for sensitiveness, purity of tone and volume, are far away ahead of ordinary Dull Emitter Valves. Cossor users will naturally expect great things from the Wuncell, and they will not be disappointed.

What are the latest improvements in Radio?

WHAT are the latest improvements in radio: how far has so-and-so invention been developed and how will it affect or influence listeners-in?

What new circuits have been devised; what additional benefits are to be derived from their adoption? What is a suitable set for me to build next, or How can I make my own components? All these and many other questions of an analogous character are fully dealt with in the Splendid New Issue of "Modern Wireless" now on sale throughout the Country. This, your favourite journal, excels itself by its fearless originality and exceptional brilliance displayed in the current number which includes articles from writers whose names are household words. These experts contribute a really interesting, instructive and powerful work for the general benefit of the radio public.

All experimenters will appreciate a serious endeavour on the part of G. P. Kendall, B.Sc., to assist their entry into the field of superheterodyne reception, which is very little known to most British enthusiasts. The article is entitled "AN EXPERIMENTER'S SUPERSONIC RECEIVER," and the set, which is described in full detail, is thoroughly practical and effective. It is especially designed to facilitate general experimental work on the superheterodyne, and is used by the author himself for this purpose.

Readers desiring to construct a useful set without delving unduly into the intricacies of wireless technique have been fully provided for by A. D. Cowper, M.Sc., who describes "A SIMPLE SELECTIVE SET." This receiver, as its name implies, ensures selectivity, and its construction should be well within the capabilities of the modest enthusiast.

In addition to this there is an interesting article by Percy W. Harris, M.I.R.E. (Assistant Editor), giving most valuable advice to those who, owing to lack of information on some minor points, have hitherto hesitated to step into the field of constructors and experimenters.

That other grades of our readers have been suitably provided for will readily be seen from a brief glance at the contents selection.

If you contemplate a new receiver, or an addition to your existing set; if you wish to augment your knowledge of wireless or test a new circuit, "Modern Wireless" will show you how, and, moreover, in the most interesting and economical manner.

The B.T.H. Monogram on a valve means a great deal to the buyer. For one thing, it signifies an exceedingly high vacuum produced by a special B.T.H. process. It means a valve which has been thoroughly tested in every respect before leaving the factory. Above all, it signifies a valve of great sensitivity, absolutely free from distortion, a valve which will last longer and give much better results than "soft" foreign (or English) valves.

The Secret of the Tone of an Organ

The voice is in the mouth of the horn,
and not in the box.

The whole basis of music is one of vibrations and harmonics, but the feature that makes or mars perfect music is the way in which the harmonics are produced from the vibrations. Given a solid magnet structure and a correctly proportioned diaphragm you can take it that your vibrations will be really good, but the resulting harmonics depend entirely upon the way you use those vibrations.

The great art of the organ craftsmen lay in their master-knowledge of harmonics, and the secret of their greatest achievement was the voicing of the pipes.

THE RADIOSUN LOUDSPEAKER

is the only loudspeaker with the mouth of the sound chamber voiced like an organ. You can guess the immense difference this makes. Every intonation is reproduced from the vibrations of the diaphragm in perfect form, giving real music throughout the range of wireless broadcasting.

The RadioSun Loudspeaker was designed by an organist and engineer; that is why it can give you the purest music. Remember it is voiced like an organ, and it is the only loudspeaker with this supreme feature of design.

The entire magnet system is unique. Watch for further particulars of this wonderful loudspeaker in our advertising.

Louden Valves

THE Loudon Dull-Emitter at 13/6 combines the undoubted economical upkeep of the Dull-Emitter, the low initial cost of the ordinary "bright" valve, and the Silver Clear qualities common to all Loudens.

Its current consumption is only 0.1 amps, which is 1/7th of the consumption of the ordinary type of valve or 1/4th of that of the standard Loudon. This reduces your accumulator bills correspondingly, so that the small extra first cost is rapidly repaid.

Your accumulators will run very much longer without recharging so you save trouble as well as money. The life of your accumulators also is greatly increased, as they discharge at a much slower rate when these valves are used.

No alterations need be made to your set to install these Valves, as they work off a 6-volt accumulator. Their use, therefore, does not involve disposing of an expensive battery.

The price of 13/6 brings a first-class Dull-Emitter within the reach of everybody. 13/6 is very little more than you have to pay for an ordinary "bright" valve.

It also has the Silver Clear qualities for which Loudens have justly become famous. Perfectly clear and distortionless reproduction is not the least of its good points.

Ask your nearest retailer for one, as its use is not only a revelation in clear reception but also a revelation in valve economy.

Should your local retailer for any reason be unable to supply you, write direct to us and your order will receive prompt attention.

Awaken your receiver to vigorous, tuneful life!

GIVE to your home the added pleasure of the perfect radio reproducer—the "Sparta." The voice that makes your receiver a living thing—faithfully re-creating the performance exactly as it is given before the microphone.

The "Sparta" is the Speaker of combined excellence—the supremely good combination of good components, conceived by master designers, built by master craftsmen. Clear in tone and rich in volume, it reproduces with vivid realism the delicate shadings and overtones of a melody, the subtle inflections of the voice—the personality of the artiste himself.

All good dealers stock the "Sparta." Ask for a demonstration and let your own ears prove how extraordinarily good its reproduction is.

Type "A." - - 120 ohms.
 Type "H.A." - - 2,000 ohms.
 Type "H.H.A." - 4,000 ohms.
 £4. 15. 0.

Every component used in the "Sparta" is the outcome of equally careful thought—it is, in fact, the co-ordination into one instrument of all the worthwhile features in Loud Speaker construction.

 Type "H.B." 2,000 ohms, £6. 0. 0.
 Type "H.H.B." 4,000 ohms, £6. 0. 0.

All Type "B" Speakers are characterised by the patent 6-position tone selector. This consists of an ingenious arrangement of blocking condensers, which smooths away all trace of harshness, resulting in a remarkably pure distinctness of tone.

The "Little Sparta" Loud Speaker.

A small brother of the full-size "Sparta." The perfect miniature Loud Speaker, attractively finished in dull black and oxidised silver. In its construction is included an adjustable diaphragm. Made in 120, 2,000 and 4,000 ohms.

Price 55/-.

21/- TRUEMUSIC : MINOR :

We do not guarantee that the TrueMusic Minor will work unaided from a crystal set. But several purchasers have, nevertheless, written to us to say that it will do so quite satisfactorily. That is sufficient proof that with one stage of amplification this remarkable Loud Speaker will give results rivaling in tone and volume those of many larger and dearer models. Ordinary headphones weigh about 1/2 lb., whereas T. M. C. No. 3

Lightweight Headphones weigh only 6 1/2 ounces. They are, therefore, well worth the extra half-crown. (Note that the earpiece attachments do not catch in feminine hair, and the connections are 6 ft. long, thus ensuring all-round comfort.) T.M.C. No. 2A Headphones are 3/- cheaper than the No. 3 Headphones. They are just as good, but slightly heavier, and both give signal reception that is "Clear as Crystal."

Arrangements are being rapidly completed so that you can buy all T.M.C. products from every wireless retailer. If, however, you have any difficulty, we will supply you direct. When writing we shall appreciate it if you will send us the name and address of the retailer who is unable to supply.

Every super-product sooner or later has its imitations. And British Ericsson Telephones have not escaped. Colourable imitations both in appearance and name (but not in efficiency) are being offered the public.

Look for “Ericsson” stamped on each earpiece. If absent the telephones offered you are “continental” imitations.

Back in 1909 the Admiralty adopted Ericsson British Telephones as standard. In 1917 in the gruelling tests of war the R.A.F. did the same. Their efficiency both as regards sensitivity and robustness secured this distinction. Since then we have immensely improved their sensitivity and to-day they stand supreme as “The World's proved best Telephone.” Prices at all good dealers:

A BRITISH BATTLE CRUISER

H. M. S. REPULSE

On Land and Sea

Loud Speaking Telephone Apparatus manufactured by THE HOUSE OF GRAHAM is used throughout the British Navy and adopted by many Foreign Governments, as also by leading Shipping Companies in all quarters of the Globe.

With over thirty years pre-eminence in every field of Loud Speaker application, the utility, technical efficiency, and reliability of GRAHAM instruments are conclusively demonstrated.

Just as the most exacting requirements of Naval and Maritime experts have been adequately met by production to meticulously accurate standards, so the present-day needs of Radio reception have been fully satisfied in the evolution of the AMPLION Loud Speaker.

A Product of The House of Graham

Many patented and therefore exclusive features contribute to the superlative qualities of the AMPLION, recognised as the World's Standard Wireless Loud Speaker, and acknowledged as synonymous with

"Better Radio Reproduction."

Obtainable from AMPLION STOCKISTS and Wireless Dealers everywhere.

THE CHILDREN'S SET.

There are many parents who would like nothing better than to give their kiddies a Wireless Set. The endless enjoyment that children could obtain from wireless would be worth all the toys in the world. But it must be a set that will not go wrong, that will not require adjustment of any kind and that is not beyond the understanding of children. For the first time this has been done by the discovery of the R.I. Permanent Mineral Detector Crystal Set.

This wonderful little Set makes things EVER SO EASY—There is only one knob to turn. No adjustment of any description. Perfect reception always.

Complete in polished mahogany cabinet. Price £2-2-0.

HOLIDAYS AFLOAT ON THE NORFOLK BROADS

BETTER THAN THE SEASIDE

Ask your friends about it.

This year try the holiday that is different. Explore new country and enjoy a healthy restful change free from irksome routine.

THE NORFOLK BROADS with their natural beauties and quiet old-world villages will enchant you. They are 120 miles from London and consist of 200 miles of safe inland rivers and lakes situated between Cromer, Lowestoft, Yarmouth and the fine old city of Norwich with its Cathedral and Castle. Splendid fishing, bathing, etc.

You hire from us for a week or longer a fully furnished wherry, yacht or motor boat which becomes your floating home, moving when and where you wish, inland, not on the sea. If desired we can supply an attendant to manage the boat and do all cooking. You only have to enjoy yourself. The cost, including boat, food, etc., averages £4 per head per week.

We will gladly send you full details and help you with information and advice.

Send at once 2d. postage for our 192-page booklet containing particulars of 300 yachts, wherries, motor boats, houseboats and bargos, also caravans we have for hire and long article "How to enjoy a Broads Holiday." Also craft on Dutch canals, Rivers Thames, Ouse, and Cam.

BURIED TREASURE

We all love stories of buried treasure, with their old and yellowed charts, their strange tales from the lips of stricken men, their cryptograms, their expeditions, their hopes and failures.

But in the world of practical affairs there is only one sure and certain way of finding buried treasure.

BURY IT YOURSELF.

The CLIMAX COPPER EARTH is the best form of direct earth. It is ready for immediate use. The specially designed armoured point allows it to be easily driven into the ground. The perforated tube enables water to be easily introduced into the surrounding earth. It takes up little space and is not obtrusive. It is far better than the old-fashioned earth, with its ugly and inefficient wire trailing through the house, followed by a bad joint on to a wandering water-pipe.

If you are troubled with—
 Weak signals,
 Intermittent signals,

Electric Main disturbances,
 Local set interference,
 Muddy reception,

the probable cause of the trouble is an inefficient earth. Get a better earth to-day. GET A CLIMAX COPPER EARTH. The enormous success of the CLIMAX RADIO EARTH has given rise to a flood of imitations of doubtful efficiency. Protect yourself. Look for the name CLIMAX on the cap.

Any radio dealer can supply. If difficulties are put in your way, or substitutes offered you, please send your 5/- direct to us, and we will send you the genuine CLIMAX RADIO EARTH by return.

THE CLIMAX JUNIOR CRYSTAL SET DE LUXE.

A very attractive crystal set in a small, beautifully finished mahogany case, carrying a brilliantly polished panel with silver finished fittings. The detector is the well-known Climax Suro Set Plug-In detector, fitted with micrometer adjustment. This detector can be set quickly and easily, and is very stable when set. It has all the advantages of a permanent detector with the advantage that you can adjust it. The miniature switch enables the wave length to be changed over to Chubbford without using any loading coils. Tuning is by variometer, and is very sharp and efficient. When not in use, the aerial can be switched direct to earth, thus giving complete protection against lightning. Price 21/.

Charge your accumulator at home

THE TUNGAR solves the battery-charging problem for all whose houses are electrically-lighted by alternating current.

It is connected on one side to any lamp-holder or wall-plug, and on the other to the battery (the work of a moment). It starts charging as soon as it is switched on. There are no chemical or mechanical complications—its operation is purely electrical and there is nothing to get out of order. It requires no attention and can be left on all night.

The Tungar saves expense and trouble, increases the life of your battery, and enables you to charge any time, night or day.

THE wonderful clarity of a Brown Loud Speaker renders it an easy favourite with the children. And its rugged construction will enable it to survive the rough handling which is inevitable with kiddies playing around the room. No matter whether you choose the homely H.2 or the magnificent Type Q you are assured of the same excellent workmanship. While for volume and tone the patented Brown tuned reed system is entirely without equal.

WHICH?

Brown lived next door to Jones. They both made their sets. Same sort of Components—same valves—same condensers, in fact same everything, except for one small thing—and that was all the difference. Jones fretted, whilst Brown sat continually "listening in." In no way was Jones' reception to be compared with Brown's. And that provoked Jones sadly. You see, Brown methodically soldered the wiring of his circuit. Jones despised that as unnecessary—and called soldering a finicky and difficult job.

Soldering is made simple by using the wonderful FLUXITE, so follow Brown's example and solder your connections right away and so avoid imperfect reception.

FOR THOSE WHO WANT THE BEST Here is the new Dunham Receiver. BETTER THAN EVER.

Dunham instruments have already established themselves as being by far the most efficient on the market and the new model now ready is as far ahead of the old model, as the old model was ahead of other receivers.

SUPER STRENGTH—SUPER QUALITY—AND SUPER RANGE—and the same everlasting guarantee. The new circuit arrangement makes Dunham instruments by far the most efficient, and their beautiful finish gives them pride of place in every home.

The "DUNHAM" 3-Valve Receiver.

Ranges of 400 to 500 miles on the loud speaker are quite ordinary achievements and the foreign stations come through very well. Spain for example being rendered clearly on the loud speaker, results being equal to most four valve receivers and superior to a good many more. Receiver only (new model) £10 10s. 6d., plus Marconi royalty fee 37s. 6d., or absolutely complete and including royalty, etc., £16 19s. 6d.

THE HOME TURKISH BATH HABIT.

"Once a week I say 'good-night' half-an-hour earlier than usual. It's my Gem Turkish Bath night. Two or three minutes' preparation and the Cabinet is ready; another two or three minutes, and I step in, close the folding door, button the flap and sit down in restful content for the heat to do its good work. Very soon I am glowing all over; then I begin to perspire—at first gently, then profusely. It's time to get out. I unbutton the flap, open the door, step out, have a cold sponge down, then a brisk rub down, then to bed. Next morning I feel grand. Limbs supple, brain clear—it's good to be alive. The Cabinet should be in every home in the land."—A Delighted Customer.

THE GEM TURKISH BATH CABINET gives all the benefits of public Turkish bathing with the privacy and comfort of home. It is compact and portable and lasts a lifetime. Those who use it regularly need never fear winter ills and chills—colds, coughs, influenza, rheumatism, lumbago and the like. Used and recommended by Doctors. Booklet free.

The PAD that relieves the pressure

Without doubt, the "Kumfi" De Luxe Ear Pad marks a new era in wireless. Instead of the discomfort caused by pressure from the hard surface of the headphones, we now have a soft, resilient, velvety ear pad which relieves the pressure and enables us to listen-in in comfort. The services of the "Kumfi" Ear Pad do not end there. It eliminates exterior noises, absorbs all moisture, and, being antiseptic, keeps the ear-pieces hygienic and clean. Each pad is self-adhesive and only needs pressing against the ear-piece of the headphone. They are equally simple to remove.

'KUMFI' De Luxe EAR PAD

If your Wireless Dealer cannot supply, send 1/3 to the makers. The pads will be sent POST FREE.
