Radio The Rival.

By GEORGE GROSSMITH.

[Mr. George Grossmith, who is playing in the musical comedy "No No Nanette," is joint Managing Director of His Majesty's, Winter Garden and Shaftesbury Theatres, and at the beginning of this year he was appointed Programme Adviser to the British Broadcasting Company.]

EVERY new method of entertaining or interesting the Public is received by its predecessors with one of the following feelings: Suspicion, contempt, amusement, tolerance, curiosity, hostility. Unless the débutant dies a miserable death within a year, it is then accepted in interested friendship, frank welcome, or at the very worst, resignation. The old sea-side nigger made rude remarks to the intruding Pierrot. They've now both joined a "Concert Party."

I personally assisted at the birth of three new healthy competitors in the theatrical arena—musical comedy, revue, and cabaret. At the time the first musical comedy, so described, was presented, there were no less than eight comic operas being given in London, and in the years that immediately followed the latter form of entertainment had its nose temporarily put out of joint.

I wrote and produced revues at the Empire Theatre for five years before they became a generally accepted form of entertainment. The strongest opposition was put up by the Lord Chamberlain. A revue was a stage play; it must not be played for more than so many minutes; or have in its cast more than so many speaking characters. These barriers were eventually withdrawn. Everybody's Doing It at the Empire, and Kill That Fly at the Alhambra, filled the entire evening's programme. Variety performers and legitimate actors joined forces, and the old music hall programme of "turns" began to topple, and revue became general; but no one was a whit the worse for it.

I produced, for Sir Francis Towle, the first cabaret in London. No difficulties were experienced until it was discovered to be a very successful attraction. Theatrical managers expressed the alarm that their audience might dine late and dance until it was time to attend the cabaret. The dance clubs were naturally up in arms. Here was an entertainment open to the Public, especially the stranger within our gates, where excellent entertainment and refreshment might be obtained without having to pay an annual subscription or be introduced by a member.

I helped to fight the case before the County Council. For a year the cabaret was robbed of its chorus, costumes, and scenery, and reduced to an entertainment personnel of "six people in evening dress." This was obviously ridiculous, and the newspapers were without a single dissentient in saying so. But all these three divertissements, musical comedy, revue, and the cabaret, were only new forms of existing entertainments.

Broadcasting, like moving pictures and gramophone records, came to the world as an absolute novelty, one bound to be popular and likely to be a serious and dangerous rival to the theatre, cinema, and concert hall. Its danger was the greater because, of necessity, it had to be a monopoly. Two or more companies operating in the same district could not supply our receivers at the same time. An etheric struggle between Tetraxini and John Henry were unthinkable.

Method, Combination and Finance.

The opinions of theatrical managers towards broadcasting have been pretty generally aired, and as friendly negotiations towards an agreement are on foot, I do not propose to express my own views here; but I am quite sanguine that an agreement benefiting both sides will be reached.

It must be conceded that the concert giver is the one most likely to suffer from the new rival, as concert audiences go chiefly to hear and not to see, and as a simultaneous broadcasting of the concert could give the latter no possible advertisement.

It is easy to imagine how broadcasting may hurt, and difficult to imagine how it may help, the concert world; and yet it may do so; it is all a question of method, combination and finance.

The Force of Public Opinion.

The playwright complained in the past that the cinema kept people away from the theatre and his author's fees were thus reduced. He now sells the moving-picture rights of his play for a far greater sum than he ever realizes out of that play in the theatre. The concert giver, presenting a great Diva at the Albert Hall, may bar that concert being broadcast the same evening in London; but there is no reason why he should not permit it to be broadcast throughout the rest of the Kingdom for a reasonable fee. This is only one of many ways by which the concert giver may profit.

While I realize that the B.B.C. manages now to work in harmony with the Press, I think that the force of public opinion will tend to promote rivalry in the future. The man-in-the-street, or, rather, the man with the head phones on, wants to know why the Press should have a "pull" any more than the theatre manager or concert agent.

A Perfect Combination.

A man may announce news from any public platform and, as far as I know, in Hyde Park and Trafalgar Square. Actors can, and do, announce sporting and election results from the stage; but the Radio may not. The newspaper not only forbids, but possibly adds insult to injury by publishing a two-column diatribe on "Dull Programmes." The B.B.C. might, of course, retaliate—"2LO" Literary Critic speaking: Listeners who purchase the Morning Messenger may have remarked on the recent dreary character of its material, etc.

Big brother Newspaper is perfectly right to keep back little-brother Radio as long as he can, but I venture to think that won't be very long. The Public generally gets what it wants in the end, and the Public wants its news hot and fresh and sometimes a little before the newspaper can deliver it. Will this hurt the newspaper? Not a bit of it. Jones will still want his paper where he can read his news, fresh or stale, and something besides news, at his own time, in his own way, and of the quality he prefers.

Moreover, unable to go to the football match on Saturday afternoon, he can listen through the phones to the whole contest being described, every kick, every run, by the Evening Intelligence expert on the spot. Jones has had to buy the Evening Intelligence, noon edition (he'll buy the late Night Special in addition) which contains a plan of the field marked in numbered squares—

"Harrison meets the ball at 14G and passes it to—wait a minute—Jackson at 13F. The latter has a clear field," and so on. Perfect combination of Press and B.B.C.!

No Mean Task.

I do not know what treaty, if any, American Broadcasting has with the Press, but I listened last autumn at a country-house in Up-State New York to a perfect description of the Yale-Princeton Match by a runner on the field; no mean task such description in American football, where members of the teams are changed during the game.

There was no indexed map of the field in the newspapers—that is my idea. I also heard on the same instrument without any change of coil the Eve of Election speeches of both Coolidge and Davis.

The recent tornado which laid waste a portion of Southern Illinois and adjoining States, with a loss of hundreds of human lives and millions of dollars in property, was reported by Radio to the entire nation hours before tidings of the terrible catastrophe appeared in the daily newspapers.

Ahead of the Press.

Sitting quietly in their homes, listening to the regular evening broadcast programme, millions throughout the Middle West were suddenly shocked by the announcement of the disaster coming, from a number of large stations situated north of the stricken region. The news was rapidly relayed all over the country by Radio, and before any morning newspaper carrying the story had gone to press, most of the population of the United States had heard about it through the receiving sets.

Soon after the first announcement had been made, a Chicago newspaper started organizing a relief corps of volunteer doctors and nurses, broadcasting the call over "KYW," the Westinghouse station at Chicago. A special train was to transport the volunteers to the South in an hour and a half.

A well-known Chicago doctor, at the time the first call was broadcast, was listening to a receiver in the store of an electric corporation. He had gone there with a view to purchasing a set for his home, and was having the instrument demonstrated when the voice of the announcer came in loud and strong with the appeal for doctors and nurses.

The cinematograph industry, at present little disturbed by the Radio innovation, is likely to be so when television is perfected and synchronized with the loud speaker. Then, we shall be able to drop into a B.B.C. picture palace, watch the Derby while in actual progress, and listen to an expert's running description of the scene, the crowd, the horses, jockeys, prices, and of the race itself.

But is this going to stop any appreciable number of people going to Epsom, visiting the regular movies, or buying an evening paper? Of course not, but it will make it difficult to call the programmes dull!

Old-Father Time, Thespis, the Muses, and fascinating Miss Close-Up, must all join hands with little boy Radio and sing—

"I want to be happy,
But I won't be happy
Till I make you happy too."

Fashion of the Flute.

By Francis Gribble.

HOW shall one fix the place of the flute in the orchestral hierarchy? No instrument had been more ridiculed; yet no instrument has been more fashionable. Dickens was particularly hard on it. One of his stock devices for making a character comic was to represent him as a performer on the flute. Dick Swiveller, it will be remembered, when disappointed in love, took to flute-playing as "a good, sound, dismal occupation," with the result that he was promptly called upon to leave his lodgings.

Other novelists, Charlotte Brontë among them, have made flute-playing the besetting sin of comic curates; and that is doubly cruel in view of the fact that St. Chrysostom called flutes "the very pomps and hotch-potch of the Devil."

At the Olympic Games.

Among the ancients, the flute was first very poorly and then very highly regarded. The change came, according to Aristotle, after the Persian war. The flute, at that strenuous time, stimulated the Greeks to prodigious valour. It consequently became "the thing" to play it.

Prizes for flute-playing were offered at the Olympic Games. The prize-winners were, so to say, the cinema stars of the ancient world. Their statues were erected by public subscription. They could earn as much as £200 for performing at a concert. They made themselves conspicuous by wearing yellow clothes and green slippers, and "to live the life of a flute-player" became a proverbial expression signifying ostentation and self-indulgence.

Royal Players.

Moreover, the flute has been the favourite instrument of many eminent men and women, including both famous kings and queens and famous authors. Carmen Sylva, the poetess Queen of Rumania, is said to have played the flute. Frederick the Great certainly played it, though his royal father forbade him to do so. Fanny Burney's father, who was privileged to hear him, reported that he played uncommonly well, and he himself said that many of his happiest political ideas had occurred to him while he was practising his scales. Yet Bach once said to Voltaire: "You are mistaken if you think he loves the flute: all he cares for is playing himself."

Paid to Go Away.

Oliver Goldsmith was another flautist of renown. In his youth he played the flute, accompanied by Miss Contarine on the harpsichord. Later, he defrayed the expenses of his Continental travels by playing the flute to all who cared to listen. He has himself told us, however, that he was a very indifferent player; and it is quite likely that he derived some of his gains from people who paid him to go away. One finds a reminiscence of his experiences in the passage in "The Vicar of Wakefield" in which George Primrose says:—

Whenever I approached a peasant's house (in France) towards nightfall, I played one of my most merry tunes, and that procured me, not only a lodging, but subsistence for the next day. I once or twice attempted to play for people of fashion, but they always thought my performance odious, and never rewarded me even with a trifle.

THE "First Query Programme" will be given from the Plymouth Station on May 22nd, when some well-known West Country artists will take part.

A prize of two guineas will be offered in connection with this, and the first three competitors will be invited to spend an evening at the Plymouth Studio.

Race for Television.

An Inventor's Remarkable Results.

TO see an event actually happening thousands of miles away is one of those alluring dreams that few wireless experimenters have not enjoyed. That this dream may soon be realised has been evident during the past few months, for at least four countries have run competitors in the race.

Early heralds have already anticipated the success of C. F. Jenkins who, in America, is working upon a machine by the aid of which it is hoped to see objects at a distance. In France, too, the Belin process of transmitting photographs by wire is being tested for the further development of sending the pictures by wireless; and reports of a similar system have also come to hand from Germany.

First Success in Public.

The first public demonstration of television; however, was given in London a short time ago by Mr. J. L. Baird, who is the son of a Scottish clergyman, and how Britain has secured this distinction forms one of the romances of radio history.

Searching for one of Nature's secrets, when unsuccessful, often brings to light another of greater importance. It was thus with Mr. Baird, for ten years ago, when an electrical engineer on the Clyde, he attempted to produce a speaking cinematograph film. This led him to experiment with selenium, the electrical resistance of which varies when light falls upon it, and it was then that he visualised the possibility of seeing at a distance.

Getting up at five o'clock in the morning to experiment requires more ardour than most people possess, but Mr. Baird often did this, and after two years of struggle, when success seemed near, his health broke down. At Hastings, some time later, he had the satisfaction of first transmitting the shadows of moving objects by wireless.

A System of Dots.

Lack of an efficient photo-electric device was one of the principal obstacles in the way of seeing actual objects by wireless. Mr. Baird found it difficult to construct a good selenium cell, and there is an appreciable time-lag between light changes and the corresponding current changes through the cell.

Television was waiting, in fact, for a photo-electric cell that would respond almost instantaneously to rapid changes of light, and the new colloidal cell that Mr. Baird has devised is the nucleus of his system. His success is also due to an improved optical arrangement, by means of which the picture to be sent is divided into thousands of dots, the light from each being presented in rapid sequence to the sensitive cell. The picture is reproduced at the receiving station by a succession of dots of identical intensity. Two waves are necessary to transmit these images, one representing the pulses of light from the picture, and the other which ensures their distribution at the receiver in their original form.

When We Have "Looking" Sets.

Nothing more than black patches on a flickering background can be seen at present, and although movements of objects at the sending station are discernible, considerable improvement will have to precede the marketing of this apparatus. Mr. Baird, however, has demonstrated a cheap and practical solution to the problem of television, a new department of wireless activity that has surely come to stay.

No familiarity with even the simplest crystal receiving set ever causes the owner to cease wondering, and it is not difficult to believe that a "looking" set will soon provide an indispensable addition to the enjoyment at present derived from the head-phones.

K. P. H.

Radio and the Child Patient.

A Boon for the Little Sufferer. By Dr. Alice Hutchison.

ALTHOUGH wireless affords extreme pleasure, and pleasure which does not stale with the passage of time, to a very large section of the community, there still remain many who, while fully alive to the marvel of this great discovery, yet heap abuse on it and adopt what may be styled a "high-browed" attitude towards it.

Especially noticeable was this during the time when one topic and one only engaged the attention of the wireless enthusiasts, and expressed itself in the question, uttered with breathless ecstasy: "Have you heard the nightingale on the wireless? It was so wonderful!"

To which the high-browed one replied coldly and shortly: "No, and I don't wish to." To him, the nightingale singing without his natural environment of deep-shaded woods and dense thickets in the expectant hush of the midnight or pre-dawn hours, would have been as meaningless as a sunrise without a sky, or moonlight without hills and vales and masonry on which to imprint contrasting lights and shadows.

The Linking of Continents.

Yet, just as in social intercourse we are often driven to acknowledge excellent points in individuals for whom we have previously experienced a strong sense of antipathy, so do many arrive at a full appreciation of the inexpressible wonder of the secret workings of wireless, which enable a voice to link two continents separated by miles of tempest-tossed ocean, and to deliver its message clearly and even gracefully.

One day a visit was paid in the poorer parts of the town to a bedridden young girl, lying, patient but wearied beyond words, in a tiny room, facing a dull brick wall. At the next visit she announced, with a radiant smile, that a very kind lady had presented her with a wireless set and that workmen were at that very moment arranging the outside apparatus in order that she might listen the same evening.

From Boredom to Happiness.

With the memory of this wonderful transformation, by the aid of a few wires and a head-piece, from boredom to happiness, the out-patient department of a children's hospital was entered, where lines of benches are filled by parents and children, waiting with more or less patience for the sound of the bell, which announces that the much-desired moment has arrived when the occupants of the two front benches may pass into the doctor's room.

Meanwhile, toddlers break loose from their moorings and challenge one another to race or to play "tig," till, with a reproof from a passing nurse or a tired mother, they are again deposited on the benches and enjoined to sit still—a hard task indeed for restless little bodies and minds. So hard is it, that, if we wait for a moment before passing on, we shall certainly see little feet, profiting by a moment of maternal pre-occupation, slip to the floor and continue races or "tig."

A Diet of Threats.

If we cast our eyes along the benches, we shall, here and there, pick out childish faces filled with anxiety, possibly even tear-stained. Some are on the first visit, apprehensive of what will happen in the inner room, perhaps having been brought up on a diet of threats: "If you're not a good girl, you'll see what the doctor will do to you when he comes!"

Others again, with memories of having been "hurt" on a previous visit (that "hurting" which all would wish, if it were possible, to avoid) sit with thoughts concentrated on that memory and hear not the comforting assurance that there will be no occasion to repeat the dreaded operation.

These faces stand out in sharp contrast with those of children for whom "going to hospital" has become a pleasurable outing. Yet even the latter will sometimes wear an air of boredom, and look with envious eyes on those children who, having had the good fortune to precede them, now file into the inner room.

When we are dealing with large numbers, as in the out-patient departments of hospitals, this process of waiting cannot, by any means whatever, be avoided, and may even, and frequently does, cover two hours, for those in the back rows.

A Happy Pilgrimage.

How often has the thought taken shape: "Can nothing be done both to utilise the time and to render it easier for little ones to sit still and for anxious minds to switch their thoughts on to some amusing or instructive topic, thus ensuring to them a temporary respite from worry?"

The answer seems to be: "Yes, wireless would meet the case, even if items were only arranged for an hour or an hour and a half."

Soon should we see a disappearance of unhappy or bored faces, forgotten would be the fear of being "hurt" or the anticipatory dread of entering the doctor's room for the first time. We can imagine that, in the case of a profoundly nervous child, the phrase "going to hear the wireless" might be substituted for "going to hospital."

We can also conceive the possibility of a child who has been thrilled with the account of all his brother or sister heard that morning "reporting sick" in order to join in the happy pilgrimage.

Then would the "high-browed" section unbend in approval and acknowledge wireless to be a saviour and a benefactress to children in distress.

MR. HAMILTON HARTY, whose broadcast performances from Manchester are familiar to listeners, is the conductor of the Newcastle Symphony Orchestra which was founded in 1914.

The conductors have been Miss Editha Knocker, of London, Dr. E. C. Bairstow, of York, and the late Mr. Julian Clifford, of Harrogate. The assistant conductors have been Dr. G. W. Whittaker and Mr. George Dodds, Mus. Bac., who still occupies that position. The Society carried on a full programme during the war.

At the present time, the orchestra consists of eighty members, and, in the opinion of Mr. Hamilton Harty, is the best amateur orchestra in the Kingdom. It has been the policy at its concerts to specialize in the Symphonies of Beethoven, Brahms, and Schumann, in addition to modern composers, and a number of concerti for various instruments have been given year by year with the most eminent soloists obtainable.

THEY are evidently more behindhand in some countries abroad than we are over the question of the broadcasting of stage plays.

Actors employed by Oslo (Christiania) theatres have been forbidden to work for broadcasting companies.

The managements also refuse to allow theatre performances to be transmitted, and according to the Secretary of the National Theatre, the theatres are not likely soon to change their attitude.

Official News and Views. GOSSIP ABOUT BROADCASTING.

More Music-Hall Favourites.

IN order to secure the services of the most popular variety personalities, the B.B.C. has decided to follow the music-hall procedure of engaging some artists for weekly periods. Messrs. Layton and Johnstone, the well-known variety stars, will appear in the London programmes for the week beginning July 6th. Mr. Bransby Williams, the famous Dickens characteriser, will be heard daily during the week beginning June 8th.

B.B.C. Wave-lengths to Change.

There are now fifty-nine main stations on the European broadcast wave band of from 250 to 600 metres. By judicious arrangement through the new International Broadcasting Bureau at Geneva, it will be possible to include eleven more stations in the same wave band. Applications have been made already for the allotment of these vacancies in the European ether.

Before these applications are dealt with, there will have to be some readjustment of the present distribution of wave-lengths and power. Some of the high-power stations are too close together geographically. As these plans develop, British listeners may expect slight alterations in the wave-lengths of all B.B.C. stations. These will not involve inconvenience and should be accepted in the general interest.

"Mr. Punch" to Broadcast.

Sir Owen Seaman, the Editor of Punch, will broadcast a talk from London on May 21st. His subject will be "Light Verse."

South Africa to Re-Broadcast Bournemouth.

Recent tests in South Africa have revealed the fact that the Bournemouth B.B.C. Station is the best received of all European stations. So well do the Bournemouth programmes reach the Union that it has been decided to start regular re-broadcasting. Only some of the reasons for the superior audibility of Bournemouth at such a great distance have as yet been ascertained. Of course, Bournemouth has certain obvious advantages—the station site is nearly on a level with the sea, and its environment is clear of steel frames and extraneous electrical disturbances. Of the other British stations, Aberdeen approximates most closely to these conditions.

The Menace of Oil.

Mr. H. de Vere Stacpoole, the novelist, will broadcast from London on May 15th, taking for his subject the devastating effect on bird life of oil at sea.

Broadcasting a Command Performance.

The King and Queen will be present at the Adelphi Theatre on May 11th, when nearly every leading actor and actress on the London stage will appear in a Command Performance, the proceeds of which will be given to King George's Pension Fund for Actors and Actresses. Mr. Henry Ainley will introduce the part of the performance which is to be broadcast from 3.45 to 5 o'clock. The following are among the stage favourites who are offering their services for the occasion: Miss Sybil Thorndyke, Miss Gladys Cooper, Miss Heather Thatcher, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Beatrice Lillie, Miss Gertrude Elliot, Mr. Jack Buchanan, Mr. George Grossmith, Mr. Leslie Henson, Mr. Noel Coward, Mr. Nigel Playfair, Mr. Robert Loraine, and Mr. Ivor Novello.

Five Centuries of Dancing.

The dance has from all ages had an irresistible attraction for mankind, a fascination which we see to-day in the savage war dances and peaceful celebrations of uncivilized tribes as well as in the most up-to-date ballroom inventions of European nations. The London programme on Friday evening, May 15th, will include a series of dramatic episodes, each depicting a famous national dance. Beginning with the Festival of the Romanies (The Czardas), in the year 1423, the series will pass in turn through Spain, France, England, Russia, Scotland, and finally back again to England, with its jolly Maypole dance and Sir Roger de Coverley, enjoyed by the rustics on the village green.

The Scottish Church Assemblies.

The two great Scottish Church Assemblies begin their meetings on Tuesday, May 19th, and the opening ceremony of each will be broadcast. The two Assemblies are that of the Church of Scotland and the United Free Church of Scotland, and in the case of the former, a representative of the King is present in the person of the Lord High Commissioner, this year that dignitary being the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine.

In addition to the opening ceremonies, debates will also be broadcast for an hour or so in the evenings during the session, an important one being the Foreign Mission of the United Free Church Assembly. It is also hoped to broadcast the concluding ceremonies the following week.

"Education in Canada."

A talk on "English As She is Taught in Canada" will be broadcast from London at 4.50 p.m. on May 14th, by Mrs. H. A. L. Fisher, wife of the Rt. Hon. Herbert Fisher, formerly Minister of Education, and recently elected Warden of New College, Oxford. Mrs. Fisher is already widely known as a writer and lecturer on educational subjects.

Revival of a Famous Work.

The Cardiff Station programme for Wednesday, May 20th, contains an interesting feature in the revival of an old musical farce, May Day, or The Little Gipsy. It is a practically forgotten work which was first produced at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, in 1775, and it has not been played for over a hundred years. A rare copy of the libretto was found in the British Museum by Mr. Julian Herbage, and with the music scored from a figured bass contemporary copy in his possession, Mr. Herbage has re-arranged the farce for broadcasting.

The romantic way in which the work has been brought to light again, as well as the story of its original production, lend added interest to Cardiff's performance. May Day was written by Garrick for the purpose of bringing before the public the young gipsy singer, Miss Abrams, and the music was composed by Dr. Arne. Some popular radio vocalists will take part in the performance, and choral work will be provided by the "5WA" Choir.

Northern Numbers.

A Chamber concert of about two hours' duration will be broadcast from the Aberdeen Station, on Sunday afternoon, May 17th. Quartets will be played by the Wireless Quartet, and short pianoforte and violin recitals will be given by Miss Marie Sutherland, the station accompanist, and Mr. D. F. McCallum. Mr. McCallum is well known in Scotland, and is regarded as one of the violinists of the future. The opening number is the "String Quartet in E Flat Major," by Dittersdorf. This is the first occasion on which it will be broadcast from any station.

Listeners in the North are to have a rousing night on Monday, May 18th, when a programme of Scottish songs will be augmented by a recital of sea songs and sea chants by members of the Aberdeen Male Voice Choir, under the conductorship of Mr. Arthur Collingwood, F.R.C.O. Between the rendering of the choruses explanatory notes will be given by Mr. Collingwood.

Midday Concerts in Manchester.

The Tuesday midday Concerts, organized by Mr. Edward Isaacs in the Houldsworth Hall, have for some months been relayed by the Manchester Station and have formed a popular feature in their programmes. On Tuesday, May 12th, a special concert has been arranged, and listeners will have the opportunity of hearing a vocal recital by Miss Elsie Suddaby, soprano, and Mr. Frank Mullings, tenor.

A New Hull Feature.

It has been arranged that during the summer season the Hull Station shall broadcast Max Darewski's Band from the Spa, Bridlington. These performances will take place from 3.0 to 4.0 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays of each week, beginning on Tuesday, May 26th, and finishing at the end of September. This band is well known, not only in the East Riding of Yorkshire, but all over the country, and this arrangement should prove acceptable to listeners in the district of Hull.

"La Traviata."

On the afternoon of Sunday, May 17th, a performance of Verdi's Opera La Traviata is being given from the Manchester Station. The principals taking part are: Miss Gertrude Johnson (soprano), Miss Clara Chambers (soprano), Mr. Lee Thistlethwaite (baritone) and Mr. Herbert Ruddock (bass). They will be supported by the "2ZY" Opera Chorus, under the direction of Mr. S. H. Whittaker, and by the "2ZY" Augmented Orchestra, conducted by Mr. T. H. Morrison.

The Grenadiers for Birmingham.

On Sunday, May 17th, Birmingham Station will have, as its main feature, the playing of various selections by the Band of His Majesty's Grenadier Guards, by permission of Col. B. N. Sergison-Brooke, C.M.G., D.S.O., directed by Lieut. G. Miller, L.R.A.M. The vocalists will be Mr. Harold Howes (baritone), and Miss Alice Couchman (solo pianoforte). Among the band items are, Overture, "Sicilian Vespers," "Morceau Elegant" (duet for flute and clarinet, by Howgill), "The Song of the Horn" (euphonium solo by Flegier), and Grand Selection from Die Meistersingers, by Wagner.

A Repertory D but.

The programme from the Liverpool Station on May 15th is entitled "Musical Comedy and a Play."

The play is The Workhouse Ward, an Irish comedy, by Lady Gregory, and is to be performed by the Station Repertory Players (under the direction of Mr. Edward P. Genn), who will be giving their first performance on that evening.

An Acrostic.

An interesting feature from Glasgow is the broadcasting, on Thursday, May 14th, of an Acrostic. This is something entirely new in Query Programmes, and listeners are asked to guess, not the items, but merely the names of composers and a few descriptive substantives, and clues are given in the programme.

PEOPLE YOU WILL HEAR NEXT WEEK.

[Noyano.
Miss CARMEN HILL (Mezzo-Soprano), is to sing at Birmingham, Cardiff and Manchester next week.

[Hay Wrightson.
Mr. HENRY AINLEY, who will recite Byron's "Manfred" at London on May 10th.

Miss WINIFRED FISHER (Soprano), who will broadcast from London on May 10th.

[Russell.
Gen. Sir IAN HAMILTON, who will broadcast from Dundee on May 10th.

[Downey.
H.R.H. PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT will broadcast an appeal on behalf of the Middlesex Hospital on May 14th.

[Henn.
Mr. STENSON COOKE will give an S.B. talk on "Road Upkeep and Taxation" on May 16th.

Miss DOROTHY FULLER HOBBIIE (Contralto) will sing at Dundee on May 15th.

[Conard.
Miss RACHEL HUNT (Contralto) will be heard at Manchester on May 10th.

[Maurice Beck & Margaret.
Miss HELEN DE FREY (Soprano), who will sing at Bournemouth on May 15th.

Pieces in the Programmes.

A Weekly Feature Conducted by Percy A. Scholes.

JOSEPH PARRY'S "BLODWEN."

(SWANSEA AND CARDIFF, FRIDAY.)

DR. JOSEPH PARRY was born in 1841 and died in 1903. He was the foremost Welsh composer of that period. His music definitely belongs to that period in its methods and style. This performance of Blodwen, is, so far as the writer knows, the first broadcast performance of a native opera at a Welsh station, and is, therefore, something of an historical event.

Blodwen is in the manner of Italian nineteenth-century opera. The music is written in separate Recitatives (declamatory passages approximating to speech, as contrasted with definite melody), Solo Airs or Songs, Duets, Quartets and Choruses, with the Soloists and Chorus occasionally combined.

The composer uses a few Welsh national airs.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—LADY MAELOR (Contralto) is alone in a room in Maelor Castle. It is the eve of the marriage of her daughter, Ellen, to Arthur of Berwyn.

A MESSENGER (Tenor) enters and sings a brief Recitative, then retires. He has returned with a letter from Sir Howell Ddu, who is expected, with Blodwen, whom he has adopted, to be present at the wedding.

LADY MAELOR sings of the coming festivities and prays for grace for Ellen.

The SERVANTS are now heard singing, behind the scenes, in praise of Ellen and Arthur.

Soon IOLO THE BARD (Bass) enters and sings his blessing.

The MESSENGER then announces the arrival of Sir Howell and Blodwen.

(His description of Blodwen is a short example of Penillion Singing. For the benefit of English readers, it must be explained that this is an old Welsh custom, in which the real tune was played on the harp, whilst the singer sang an improvised melody against it. Here, the tune is the first two lines of "The Ash Grove.")

SIR HOWELL (Tenor) and BLODWEN (Soprano) come singing of their own Snowdon, "the home of the eagle."

SCENE II.—The Wedding Scene. "The bells ring. ELLEN appears in her wedding dress." BLODWEN gives her a bouquet, wishing her happiness. CHORUS murmurs a blessing. A MONK (Bass) now intones the marriage ceremony, and the CHORUS follows with a joyful Waltz Song.

After a short Recitative by THE BARD, who regards the propitious stars, ELLEN (Soprano) and ARTHUR (Baritone), sing Our cup of bliss is full at last.

This Scene is brought to a dramatic close by the entry of three SOLDIERS, whose leader sings, In Henry, King of England's name, I come, The keys of this proud castle to demand, or to demand the lives of those within. LADY MAELOR, however, scorns them, and the Welsh are loud in their cries of defiance.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Hunt is meeting. HUNTSMEN enter singing. But THE BARD comes, reading the ominous heavens and foretelling war. However, the hunt has set off; but SIR HOWELL stays behind and is heard to sing of Blodwen, whom he loves. BLODWEN, in hiding, has heard him, and coming forward, sings a love-duet with him.

LADY MAELOR now appears and tells, in an Air, how these two recall her own youth.

A MESSENGER brings her a call to arms from the Prince of Wales. "Already Henry's forces muster strong."

The HUNTSMEN return singing.

SCENE II.—SIR HOWELL and ARTHUR sing a long duet full of patriotic sentiment. There follows a war-like SOLDIERS' CHORUS, then a SEMI-CHORUS sings a prayer for Heaven's favour, and finally Sir Howell, Arthur and the soldiers unite in singing To arms! To arms!

ELLEN bids Arthur farewell, pinning a white ribbon on his breast. She sings an old Welsh Air. BLODWEN follows her example in taking leave of Sir Howell.

Then the Soldiers' Chorus is renewed.

SCENE III.—A MESSENGER brings Lady Maelor news of the fierce fighting, and of the prowess of Sir Howell and Arthur. But Lady Maelor summons THE BARD, who foretells distress. CHORUS echoes his words.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—ARTHUR, grievously wounded, lies on a couch in the Palace. ELLEN is nursing him. Arthur sings The food of life is ebbing. A Monk enters, and, holding a crucifix before Arthur's eyes, gives him his blessing.

Ellen then begins the old Air which she sang when Arthur went off to fight—but now her words are O! my Arthur, must thou leave me? Arthur, growing faint, takes up the tune, begging her to pray for her country.

Arthur dies, and a distant bell tolls. The Scene ends with a FUNERAL MARCH. BLODWEN begins the lament, and LADY MAELOR, the MESSENGER, and IOLO THE BARD take it up. Then a CHORUS OF MOURNERS joins in.

SCENE II.—In Lady Maelor's Room. The MESSENGER tells of disaster in the battlefields. LADY MAELOR and BLODWEN both inquire anxiously about Sir Howell. But the Messenger knows nothing of him save his prowess, and Blodwen sings, Ye breezes that blow from the mountains, Bring tidings of Howell, I pray.

LADY MAELOR has dreamed of fierce conflict; THE BARD declares Cambria's "final doom," and describes the end of the fighting, when Sir Howell was made prisoner and put into Chester Castle.

SCENE III.—THE PRISONERS in Chester Castle are lamenting their fate. (The tune they sing is an old Welsh Air.) Lady Maelor, Blodwen, and the Bard have been allowed to visit Sir Howell, who is condemned to die on the morrow.

SIR HOWELL sings his farewell to Blodwen. Then LADY MAELOR and THE BARD sing The spirits of Warriors . . . look down. Next the ENGLISH CROWD are heard rejoicing outside, whilst BLODWEN, LADY MAELOR, SIR HOWELL, and THE BARD in the prison sing Woe to our land!

Suddenly a stranger enters with a message for Sir Howell. He turns out to be RHYD GWYN (Bass), father of Blodwen, and a national hero, thought to be long since fallen in battle.

After greeting Blodwen, he gives his message: the King is dead, he himself is released after twenty years' captivity, and holds a warrant from the Court ordering the pardon and release of all prisoners.

The prison doors are thrown open, and all ends in general thanksgiving.

In the course of a big Chorus are heard the strains of the March of the Men of Harlech.

It was recently announced from Melbourne that the wireless station at Richmond Hill, Long Island ("WAHG"), which succeeded in transmitting to Australia the sound of a locomotive bell, has won the silver cup offered by Sir George Barlow, of the Broadcasting League of Australia. The distance between the two stations is 12,175 miles.

The Prophet and His Own Country.

DEAR SIR,—I protest against the innumerable criticisms which are being fired at the B.B.C. The grumblers should be far away from England and experience the delight of coming home after a hard day's work to listen to a delightful concert which takes one back to the Homeland again, or let them try tuning-in to a Continental station, and find out how it feels to have advertisements howled at them between every item. Do they know that the B.B.C. is held up as a model of efficiency in every country except England? It is simply a case of the prophet and his own country over again, and I and many others wish long life to the B.B.C., which has done so much to bring pleasure to dwellers in far countries.

Yours, etc.,

"SAPPER."

Jazzing the Classics.

DEAR SIR,—Why, in the jazz age in which we are now living, when new dance numbers are being published literally by the score every week, must we fall back on some of our most famous classical compositions and thus cheapen them simply to satisfy the desires of a jazz-crazed world?

Why must we take the compositions of the masters and say? "We will show you how these ought to be played"? It has already had its effect. When these items are now heard at a good classical concert, a certain portion of the audience will smile blandly and whisper to one another: "Did you hear the Savoy Bands play that as a fox-trot last night? It was ripping." Others say nothing; but, if you will cast your eyes on the ground, you will see their feet moving instead. They are, in a moment, in a totally different sphere. They imagine themselves in a ballroom instead of a concert hall, and the real meaning of the composition being performed falls upon blank minds. The members of all the most celebrated dance bands are undoubtedly wonderful players on their respective instruments, but if they can sit down and turn some of our greatest classics into ragtimes, they cannot possibly be real musicians in the true sense of the word.

How much better it would be if we could only learn to try and be original, leaving other people's work intact. We of to-day are not capable of improving upon the exquisite melodies of the great masters. These men are no longer in our midst, but their compositions, happily, will always remain with us. It is our duty, then, to see that their works are kept sacred.

Yours, etc.,

Kersal, Manchester.

"Listen Before Criticizing."

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent, "W. B.," makes a good point in saying "Listen before criticizing."

Not infrequently I have kept on the headphones to hear something I did not expect to appreciate, and I have had a number of pleasant surprises in this way, because the speakers have had a fascinating way of dealing with their subjects.

The Victory of Music.

DEAR SIR,—A well-known and distinguished man of letters remarked, in the course of a recent talk from London: "I know nothing about broadcasting and care less."

A little later on, he professed doubt as to whether some of the latest discoveries and inventions of science would be productive of any real and lasting good to humanity.

Two criticisms at once suggest themselves, and the first is that to know nothing about broadcasting is to admit an ignorance inexcusable in an otherwise well-informed person; to care nothing about broadcasting when using that very medium for the purpose of making an appeal indicates a lack of sincerity.

Further, the speaker can hardly have realized that broadcasting is doing for music the very thing that he himself desires for Shakespearean drama, and that the "victory" of music is being rendered more complete than the "victory" of Shakespearean and other drama can ever be. For this, the true artist will render thanks to broadcasting, and will further the interests of artistic education by enlisting the too often despised aids of science.

Yours, etc.,

Bridge of Weir.

A World Wireless Language.

DEAR SIR,—I read with some surprise Mr. R. de Poynton's conclusions that English would eventually become the world's radio language.

While I must admit that the adoption of English as the world's wireless language would be very convenient to some of us, from a selfish point of view, I do feel that a national international language is a contradiction in terms. Surely, it is asking too much to expect the language which is serving as a medium of speech within the boundaries of a country also to fulfil the rôle of "Lingua Franca."

From a practical point of view, also, English is eminently unsuitable for a broadcast language; its vowels and diphthongs are much too indistinct, and its syllables are too frequently slurred. Spanish, or Italian, with their fine open vowels and sharp and distinct consonants, would be more practicable, if any national language could be practicable.

Those countries which are admittedly progressive, such as Germany, France, and Denmark, are regularly broadcasting Esperanto in their programmes (the first to the extent of nine stations weekly), and it is reported that shortly a transmitting station will be opened in Geneva, from which Esperanto will be the only language used for foreign reception.

Yours, etc.,

Ipswich.

Clearly Heard in Vienna.

DEAR SIR,—On Easter Monday the B.B.C. transmission, ending with twelve bell strokes, was received with exceptional strength and purity in my loud speaker. The strength was such that the sound could be heard very well three rooms away. My set is a one-valve with reaction coil strengthened by one simple low-frequency amplifier. My aerial is indoors under the roof, and consists of four wires, each twelve metres in length, forming a hollow box, the wires being one metre apart. My down lead is twenty-seven metres.

You will perceive that it was without any outdoor aerial or three-valve apparatus that I heard the very beautiful transmission so distinctly.

Yours, etc.,

A Test That Failed. By Alfred Heard.

"YOUNG Drake was telling me a yarn the other day," remarked the Tenor, to the assembled artists. "Most of you know Drake, now starring in the revival of Dorothy, and you also know the sort of extravagant yarn he delights to tell—en règle on the beach at Narragansett, but outré outside Charing Cross post office! To try and pass off a 'Secret Theatrical Society' yarn on me as 'perfectly true, old lad!' Black Hand Gang in Bedford Street! Ha! ha! I reprov'd him in somewhat scathing terms, and begged him to remember that he was not speaking to a credulous young rustic such as a bookmaker or a stage-manager!"

"I also have a strange story of warnings and threats to tell," said the Baritone, "but, as I am afraid you would class me with young Drake if I told you that it was perfectly true, as indeed it is, I will say no more!"

"My dear Ainsley," protested the Tenor, "if you say your story's true, we believe you. You are not a young irresponsible like Drake! As an elderly—"

"What!" cried the Baritone, menacingly.

"As an elderly aunt of mine said the other day," continued the Tenor, imperturbably, "Mr. Ainsley has such an impressive manner; he looks so trustworthy!"

The Baritone's face relaxed. "Ah! De Vere," he said, "I hope to have the pleasure of meeting your aunt in the near future."

"Mr. Ainsley," murmured the Soprano, "we should all like to hear the story. Warnings and threats sound so exciting. Pray do not keep us in suspense!"

Clasping his hands behind his back, the Baritone paced backwards and forwards for a minute or two. "It concerns an old friend of mine, who, for the purpose of the story, we will call Ralton. He is a singer of some repute and fairly well-known to listeners to the broadcast programmes. You must know that Ralton was engaged to a pretty, but, to my mind, somewhat affected girl, to whom we will give the fictitious name of Doreen Walton. She seemed to be very fond of Ralton, and it may be that I was over-critical.

"Now, one evening, on arriving at the broadcasting station to fulfil an engagement, Ralton was handed a note which had been left for him, so he was told, by a well-dressed youth. Opening the note, he was astounded to read the following:—

'You are advertised to sing "Vulcan's Song" to-night. You are warned not to sing this song, but to substitute "The Foreador's Song from Carmen."

'BY ORDER OF THE RED CIRCLE.'

"To say that Ralton was surprised on reading this effusion would be putting it mildly. After making inquiries from all who had seen the messenger, he decided that it must be a practical joke, and resolved to ignore the warning. Ralton is a particularly level-headed, sensible man, and not at all likely 'to get the wind up,' as the saying is, over an anonymous communication."

"I say, old man," observed the Tenor. "Do you know whether your friend Ralton had ever belonged to a secret political society?"

"No, I am quite sure he had not," replied the Baritone, "and he was not the sort of man at all likely to do so. Anyhow, he sang 'Vulcan's Song,' and the other songs he was advertised to sing, packed up, and left the station."

"And he was kidnapped on the way home!" cried the Soprano, looking very concerned.

"No, indeed!" rejoined the Baritone, with a smile, "nothing so romantic happened. He saw his fiancée the next morning and told her about it. She expressed great anxiety, and begged him to take no risks. Ralton laughed, and promised to be very discreet.

"In a week's time Ralton was due to sing at the broadcasting station again, and on arrival was handed a letter. Tearing it open, he was amazed to find another warning from the Red Circle!"

"By Jove!" cried the Tenor, "another one! What did the wretches say this time?"

"Oh, the letter was in the nature of a final warning," said the Baritone. It read:—

'You will sing "The Windmill" in place of "The Erl-King" to-night. If you ignore this second, and final, warning, the blow will fall.'

'BY ORDER OF THE RED CIRCLE.'

The Soprano gave a muffled shriek. "What did Mr. Ralton do? Wasn't he scared, Mr. Ainsley?"

"The letter got his back up; he ignored the warning, and sang 'The Erl-King,' Miss Claire. I might say that, knowing Ralton as well as I do, I cannot imagine him doing anything else. Now, this is the strange part of the story. When he saw his fiancée the following afternoon, she greeted him with unusual warmth, and threw him off his balance by saying, 'I am so glad, darling, that you stood the test so well!'"

"Test!" Ralton ejaculated, in a mystified way. "What test?"

"Why, the little test Amy Goodwin and I arranged. The Red Circle test, we called it!"

"Eh!" exclaimed Ralton, "the Red Circle test!" Then, as a sudden light illuminated the darkness of his understanding, "Do you mean to say that you and Amy Goodwin sent those silly, threatening letters to test me? What the Dickens is the game, Miss Walton?"

"Miss Walton!" faltered Ralton's fiancée, in a tone of great reproach, "surely you're not angry? Amy said how romantic it would be to test your bravery by sending warning letters as if they came from a secret society. It was fun. O-of course, I knew that you would come through the test with flying colours!"

"Oh, you did, did you?" said Ralton, who did not see the romantic side. "You remember the story of the Lady and the Glove, I suppose?"

"Ye-es, darling," replied his now trembling fiancée.

"Well, just try to imagine that you are the Lady and I am the idiot who picked up your glove; the sequel's the same, anyway. Good afternoon, Miss Walton!"

"By Jove! My turn to sing! I'll just add that Ralton's still single!"

THE B.B.C. transmits S.O.S. messages in cases of life and death urgency, where either an address is unknown or uncertain or where there is no alternative means of communicating with the person wanted.

During the first three months of this year, forty-six S.O.S. calls were sent out from London. Of these, twenty-six were definitely successful, five were unfortunately too late, six were successful, and in nine cases the result was unknown.

In response to many requests, the Belfast Station will broadcast on Monday, May 18th, a programme of "Memories," consisting of music that was popular about a decade ago.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER. NEWS FROM THE AUNTS AND UNCLES.

A Gift Worth Having.

NOT long ago some child members of the Birmingham Station Radio Circle very kindly presented their cousins of about the same age in the wilds of North Wales with a receiving set for the reception of "5IT." The set was provided with a loud speaker, and on the first night it was installed they arranged with Uncle Edgar that a message should be sent to both of their little friends.

This was duly carried out, and a few days later a letter was received to say that the effect of the unexpected message was to make one of them pale with excitement and the other to ejaculate rapidly in Welsh: "Mother, he's talking to us!"

Snooky, who needs no introduction to Birmingham listeners, has recently been presented with a new motor-car, and many inquiries have been received as to whether he has had an accident yet; but although Ambrose and Klatchie have laid several traps for him, he has not yet run over even a chicken.

Edinburgh's Child Entertainers.

An interesting regular feature of the Edinburgh Children's Corner is the Children's Pianoforte Trio, which broadcasts a short programme during the Children's Hour once a week. The programme, which lasts about twenty minutes, is divided into two parts, the first being devoted to a movement from a classical trio, such as Mozart or Beethoven, and the second to music of a lighter kind, such as dance and popular music.

The performers themselves are in their 'teens, but their cleverness may be judged from the fact that the 'cellist is a pupil of Suggia, while the violinist has played Concertos with orchestra in public on more than one occasion.

A Successful Bournemouth Concert.

The concert raised by the New Milton members of the Fairy Flower League at Bournemouth realized over £23 net profit.

Great was the delight of the members of the League when they heard that a further £21 had been received at the office under the heading of "Anonymous." Thus, £44 has been received within two days to swell the Cot Fund.

It has been a bright and popular feature from the beginning, and the young listeners of the West have enjoyed the weekly "At Homes" held in the studio, every member of the Radio Circle having been entertained.

A continuing feature of this transmission is a series of talks by Uncle Jim on his experiences in West Africa, while Uncle Clarence is just about to tell a story of his trip to Dartmoor, with special reference to its antiquities.

JUVENILE SUNBEAMS.

Here is a photograph of Mr. W. Mottershaw's Dutch Choir of Juvenile Sunbeams. They often broadcast during "The Children's Corner" at the Nottingham Station.

Weekly "At Homes" at Plymouth.

The Plymouth Children's Corner has five "Aunts" and "Uncles" who regularly take part. The "5PY" Radio Circle has 1,250 members, all of whom take an active interest in the installation of loud-speaker sets in the local hospitals. They have completed four, and are busy increasing the membership to give a fifth installation.

The Children's Hour transmissions have Choir "The

The Mysterious "Brownie."

On Mondays and Wednesdays Auntie Una of Newcastle gives the children talks on famous men and on Nature subjects. These talks are illustrated with songs by Mr. Andrew Fraser, the blind pianist, who is a great favourite with the children.

Thursday is "Brownie's" day. Precisely who "Brownie" is must not be divulged. He is a mysterious person, of a somewhat discontented disposition, whose dismal voice is so well-known among Newcastle children.

Tuesday has for long been sacred to Uncle Nick, who is a host in himself. An important item each day is the announcement of the new members of the Fairy League—an organization which has now reached considerable dimensions.

Manchester's New Uncle.

The Manchester children have recently acquired a new Uncle—"Uncle Eric" (Mr. Eric Fogg, the Station accompanist). He enjoys speaking to the children, but he is at his best and happiest when he is playing to them.

"A Fairyland of Music."

On Saturday, May 23rd, "A Fairyland of Music," by Ernest Austin (Methuen and Co.), will be broadcast during the "Children's Corner" at Manchester.

GEOFFREY'S REWARD.

By A. COLEMAN HICKS.

"Here, take this!" said Geoffrey, given him a wonderful pocket-knife with four blades.

But no one had given him what he wanted more than anything, some new records for his gramophone.

However, with half-a-crown he had saved from his pocket-money, and the five shillings his father gave him, he had a total of seven shillings and sixpence to spend as he liked, so he made up his mind to go into the town and buy the records himself.

Having a whole holiday in honour of the occasion, Geoffrey asked if he might go and buy what he wanted so much.

"Certainly," said his father. "Be careful of your money, though; your pockets usually have holes in them."

So Geoffrey started out in high spirits to walk the mile into Bromford, their nearest town.

On the way, he passed a row of cottages with small gardens in front, and in one of these he saw a little girl crying bitterly, with her arms round the neck of a dog who did not seem to understand it at all. Geoffrey knew the little girl, whose name was Amy, her mother had sometimes done odd work at his father's house, and, going into the garden, he asked her what was the matter; but she could not speak for sobbing.

Just then, Amy's mother came to the door and Geoffrey noticed that she, too, looked as if she had been crying.

"We've got to lose poor faithful old Spot," she told him; "we've had him since Amy was a baby five years ago, and it's making us all so miserable."

"But why?" asked Geoffrey.

"Well, you see, Master Geoff, we haven't the money for his licence—7s. 6d. it is—and Tom, my husband, is ill upstairs and I haven't sixpence to spare for anything that is not really necessary. Tom is taking it to heart too—he was that fond of the dog."

Geoffrey felt very uncomfortable, and a lump came in his throat. He had just the sum in his pocket that would make these three people happy, but he did want those records! He had a hard struggle, but fresh sobs from Amy decided him.

"Here, take this, Mrs. Jenkins, I don't want it, and you can pay the licence, so old Spot won't have to go," and he hurried away down the path without waiting to hear her thanks.

At the gate, however, he met his uncle, the doctor, who had come to visit the sick man.

"Hullo, Geoff, been talking to Mrs. Jenkins? Good boy, to come and cheer them up," and he hurried into the cottage.

Geoffrey wandered away feeling rather doleful. He had so longed for those records, and now it would be weeks and weeks before he could possibly save enough money to get them.

When he got home, his sisters began to ask about his purchases, and Geoffrey told them all that he had lost his money, for he was not the sort of boy to tell of his good deeds.

There was a dreadful silence, and then, "I told you so," said his father, sternly. "Really, Geoffrey, you should be old enough now to be trusted with a little money; but it seems useless to let you have it."

Poor Geoffrey slunk off to bed much earlier that night to forget his sorrows.

Joy came in the morning, however. There was a large parcel for Geoffrey, and when it was untied, he found six of the latest records—just the very things he had wanted.

There was also a note for him in the parcel, it simply said:—

"DEAR GEOFF,—

One good turn deserves another.

UNCLE FRANK."

and out dropped three new half-crowns,

The Ethophone V.—a receiver you would be proud to own

This Tuning Condenser is so well designed that it absorbs less than 0.05 per cent of the power applied! It is absolutely noiseless and the movement is very smooth because of the special construction of the bearings. Dust covers, which eliminate hand-capacity effects, are fitted.

This Anti-Capacity Switch is the master control of the Ethophone V. In the "off" position all batteries are disconnected; in the "low power" position, three valves are in operation; and in the "high power" position, all four valves are in use. The capacity between the elements is so low that this Switch may be used with perfect success in circuits carrying radio-frequency currents.

Ethophone V. (No. 1508), without valves or batteries, £30; Marconi Licence, £2 10s.

THOSE who want to enjoy the programmes of a number of broadcast stations—British, Continental and perhaps American—do not always want complicated apparatus. They wish to get good results with as little trouble as possible. To produce such a receiver is a distinct achievement, for the instrument must be powerful and selective, and the controls must be simple and few in number. That instrument is the Ethophone V. This famous four-valve Burndept receiver gives excellent results and its reproduction of speech and music is really natural and absolutely free from distortion. Its reception range may be estimated conservatively as 150-200 miles, but much greater ranges are quite usual. The Ethophone V. will receive on all wave-lengths from 100 metres upwards. There are three tuning controls and a special device which minimises "interference" is incorporated. The panel is free from untidy wires as all terminals are placed conveniently at the back of the cabinet.

It is interesting to note that the Ethophone V. is built of standard Burndept Components, three of which are described on this page.

Write for particulars of the Ethophone V. and its companion instrument, the Ethovox Loud Speaker. Demonstrations are given free by all Burndept Agents.

BURNDEPT

WIRELESS LIMITED

Head Office: Aldine House, Bedford Street, Strand, London, W.C.2.
Telephone: Gerrard 9072. Telegrams: Burndept, Westrand, London.

BRANCHES at Birmingham, Cardiff, Leeds, Newcastle and Northampton.

This 15-ohm Rheostat is only used when dry batteries are used instead of an accumulator. It shows the simplicity of the controls—one rheostat for four valves. It has a self-supporting wire-wound element. The movement of the brush over the windings is smooth.

Have You An "Untidy" Mind?

Mystery and Meaning of "Complexes." By Prof. T. H. Pear.*

THE word "complex" has sprung into the limelight and attained popularity with embarrassing rapidity. Though this word is a newcomer to psychology, its life has been eventful, varied and far from humdrum. During the last two years, unfortunately, it has become a daily item in the vocabulary of many persons. It is often used in newspapers and novels; sometimes seriously, if not effectively; at other times neither seriously nor effectively, and, rarely, seriously and effectively. One suspects that for some people "complex" is only a polite name for habits in their acquaintances which seem to be displeasing. You may remember Grandmamma in Miss Rose Macaulay's Dangerous Ages. Her quite definite opinion was that complexes were things which other people had.

Fear of the Dark.

Who originated the idea of complexes?

Some doctors of medicine noticed that in their patients certain ideas, or systems of ideas, were, so to speak, seriously overweighted in comparison with others. The appearance in the patient's mind of those ideas or anything related to them caused in him behaviour which was emotional and always in a definite direction; usually quite opposed to his well-being and happiness. For example, a place like a dark cellar; a smell like that of oranges, or even the idea of them might produce in the patient a great and unreasonable fear. Of the causes of this fear he would be quite unaware. Or the mention of an apparently harmless subject, like mathematics or astronomy, would disturb him unduly, while causing no such reactions in others. So a complex was defined as a system of ideas possessing a certain emotional tone and tending to produce action in a definite direction.

Now some of you may think: "Why, we all have complexes! For who of us is quite normal in his behaviour or attitude towards life? Any special interest, like a hobby or one's life-work, is an overweighting of certain ideas, from the point of view of other people, at any rate. And this would even include falling in love!"

Is Love Normal?

But this, surely, would be straining the usefulness of the word to snapping-point. For, while falling in love may produce action opposed to the happiness and well-being of the individual, it equally obviously and more often does the exact opposite.

That is why the use of the term to include such diverse activities as golf, photography and love deserves most of the attacks which it gets.

The essence of the complex, I would suggest, is that it produces behaviour which may be termed "untidy," chaotic and unpredictable. By this I mean that it does not fit in harmoniously with the general pattern of the individual's emotions, actions and thoughts. And the order of these last three is intentional.

When Golf is an Evil.

Obviously, then, in some persons golf is a very serious complex, for it renders their life extremely untidy, and unpredictable. You never know whether at any given time they will be in their office or on the course. Neither do they. They are disturbed by their addiction, resent their slavery, and may even make good resolutions in their darker, remorseful periods. But in the man to whom golf is a cherished week-end treat; who adopted it consciously because it is utterly unlike his work; who keeps his work and his golf apart we cannot usefully call it a complex.

*In a Talk from Manchester.

Some writers reserve the word for a system of forces which produce behaviour so "untidy" that it is a serious disability; when, for example, a person has a morbid fear of some harmless object, or an unreasonable antipathy prevents him from doing important work or doing it properly. Now, one of the reasons for the strength of this type of complex is that certain experiences which originally produced this unusual or "skewed" behaviour have been forgotten, and are now producing emotional effects, but unconsciously.

This is often true. But I am inclined to think that the essential feature about a complex is the absence of harmonious organisation amongst the tendencies to action and the emotions aroused in connection with it. In short, the complex is an untidy and disorderly example of what in its highly organised and tidy form is called a sentiment. When we possess sentiments known to others our action is predictable. Indeed, there is probably no sounder basis of social prediction.

Now, since a sentiment for anything, whether it be a flag, a religion, or a child, is always an overweighting of something in consciousness and always tends to produce action in a definite direction, can we mark off a sentiment from a complex?

When Prediction is Safe.

I believe we can, in this way.

Let us examine a tidy sturdy sentiment like love, or even hatred when its reasons are consciously acknowledged and accepted. What we are struck by is that the behaviour of the person who loves or hates something or somebody is generally broadly predictable. If we know that a man hates unkindness to children or animals, we can safely predict what will be his attitude towards a particularly gross and unprovoked case of cruelty.

When, on the other hand, we say that a man has a complex about something or somebody, we mean that his behaviour concerning that situation is unpredictable and "untidy." Let us imagine a person who, very fond of another, is suddenly and inexplicably snubbed in public by him. This might instantaneously change his love into hatred. But events are not usually so simple. It is much more likely that the sentiment of love may become disrupted and rendered untidy by the appearance of the new emotion which formerly had not been included in it.

Education the Cure.

Similarly, during the growth of any sentiment there is probably a stage of "untidiness." The early stages of falling in love may form a complex; the completed stages a sentiment.

What is the significance of such a concept for medicine or for education? It means that we may cure a person of unreasoning fear or anger by disentangling the complex and weaving it into the high degree of organisation and stability of a sentiment. A successful education, it has been said, teaches you not to know the right things, but to like the right things.

A NEW feature has recently been added to the Children's Corner of the Leeds-Bradford Station. A special instrumental trio plays weekly each Tuesday jolly tunes, and occasionally more serious selections for the young listeners. The violinist is Mr. G. P. Webster, well known in amateur musical circles in Leeds, and the 'cello is in the capable hands of Mr. W. Frost, another young amateur. The piano is played by Mr. M. K. Dodgson (Uncle Max).

Radio Repertory.

A Venture With a Promising Future.

FOR many months the dramatic producer of the B.B.C. has been carrying out careful trials and experiments for the choice of suitable artists and the evolution of the best type of play for dramatic transmission. The result of this pioneer labour has been the formation of a Radio Repertory Company, who have been engaged on a permanent basis for the presentation throughout the country of radio-plays.

Simultaneously there have come to hand several plays which have been specially written for wireless transmission. On May 4th, this band of pilgrims set forth with its stock of new plays to give a series of thirty-two performances, distributed between the programmes of the eight main stations in England, Wales and Scotland. This tour, which is going to last for ten weeks, is an event of real significance, not only in the development of broadcasting, but in the history of British Drama. No other country has its established Radio Repertory Company, and America and Norway have already sent enquiries asking for reciprocal arrangements. Here, at any rate, Britain has given the lead.

"Pilgrim Fathers."

It may be of interest to readers to know who are the people who are chosen to be the "pilgrim fathers" of this new development, and who have been collaborating with Mr. R. E. Jeffrey in perfecting a radio-dramatic technique and studying the special requirements of the studio and the listener.

Miss Phyllis Panting, who has been spoken of as possessing "the most perfect Radio voice yet discovered," had considerable musical and dramatic experience before she turned her attention to this sphere.

Mrs. Constanduros has frequently delighted London audiences in character acting, often in sketches of her own composition.

Mr. Henry Oscar has had long experience in the management and the presentation of plays and enjoys a wide reputation as an exponent of Shakespeare. He has also played in various modern plays. Mr. George Skillan and Mr. Ashton Pearse are both well known to West-End playgoers. Mr. Skillan's performance which is best remembered perhaps was the accusing priest in Mr. Matheson Lang's production of The Wandering Jew. Mr. Pearse played the German "Excellency" with Mr. Ivor Novello in Old Heidelberg.

Mr. Tarver Penna, another member of the Company, has played many parts in the West-End, and is also well-known in the Provinces. The important character part he played with Mr. Owen Nares in If Winter Comes will recall him to many listeners.

Mystery Thrills.

The plays which have been chosen for performance on this first tour are specially suited to display the wide possibilities of radio-drama in various directions. The Dweller in the Darkness, by Captain Reginald Berkeley, is an occult mystery. It has already been presented in London where it aroused considerable interest, not only because of its subject, but also because of its special treatment of psychic matters. The Little Quaker, by Edgar Wallace, is another specially-commissioned play, and also contains a mystery thrill, although of a different type from that selected by Captain Berkeley.

Columbus is by Richard Hughes, a writer whose work for the radio-drama is well known to listeners. It has been already broadcast, and is the story of the mutiny on the Santa Maria, Columbus's ship, which nearly proved fatal to his historic expedition, but was fortunately appeased by the timely discovery of the New World. A Month Come Sunday, by Ashton Pearse, is a delightful West Country story with a double love interest.

Adventures With My 'Cello.

Experiences Grave and Gay. By BEATRICE HARRISON.

[Miss Beatrice Harrison is not only one of the foremost living 'cellists, but is well known to listeners everywhere, especially for her success, last year, in luring the nightingales, by the charm of her playing, to sing for the radio. In the following article Miss Harrison tells some interesting experiences she has had in the course of her musical career.]

I CALL my violoncello "Old Peter," though his real name is Pietro Guannarius. He is one hundred and fifty years old and has the distinction, I am told, of being the only violoncello Guannarius ever made. Anyhow, he is my greatest treasure. I was offered £5,000 for him in America, but, needless to say, I would not part with him for any money. He belonged to the Knoop collection and resided in Petrograd in a glass case for many years until, in fact, he came into the hands of a London firm, from which I bought him.

The Nightingales' Habit.

One evening when I was playing on Peter in the garden of our little Elizabethan cottage, I was thrilled to hear a nightingale singing the very notes I played. Soon others joined him, and it became a habit for them to wait for me to begin playing, when they would, seemingly, join in the chorus.

When I asked the musical director at the B.B.C. whether he thought he could broadcast these notes, the thing seemed impossible; but he said he would try, and we all know how successful he was.

By the time this appears, the nightingales will be with us again, when another chance, it is hoped, will be given to listeners to hear these lovely little songsters.

In connection with the experiment, I wish I had space to print some of the wonderful letters I received from all over the British Isles, from South Africa, India, France, and Italy. Perhaps the most touching letter of all was from an old shepherd in Devonshire, who, when a little boy, had heard the nightingale sing. He could not, he said, thank me sufficiently for bringing back his boyhood so vividly to his imagination, for giving him a joy he had never expected to experience again—that of hearing the nightingales sing. He added that he was very poor and regretted that he could only send me a small box of chocolates, which he trusted I would accept as a token of his gratitude.

Forgetting the Microphone.

I am so often asked if playing through the microphone affects me at all. I can assure everyone that it does not make the slightest difference, as I always forget the microphone and am only impressed, when all is over, by the thought that unseen millions have heard me, and then I always wish I could have played better!

A REVIEW OF RADIO DRAMA.

BOURNEMOUTH is holding a Review of Radio Drama as performed from that station, on May 13th. The idea is to explain to listeners in a chatty way something about the production and blending of effects and sounds and the various stages of progress made with this side of radio drama. Judging from letters received, listeners take a great interest in the various "sounds" used in the dramatic entertainments and, consequently, a little talk about them should be of interest. Illustrations

The applause that is absent from a wireless studio is not missed, as some people would imagine, for the music is a sufficient joy in itself. When I played the Elgar Concerto in the Cathedral at Hereford, at the 'Three Choirs' Festival, I was as much impressed by the silence there as when an immense audience gives me an ovation.

I have played to audiences of many nationalities and find the British public quite as appreciative as any. Before the war, I played with Glazoumow before a Russian audience which, after the concert, rushed out of the hall and insisted on taking the horses out of our carriage and dragging it to our hotel!

My first experience with orchestras was with the R.E. Band at Chatham. My father was in command of the battalion to which the band was attached and thus, as a tiny girl, I had the chance of playing with a real orchestra during band practices. When, at the age of ten, I won the gold medal of the Associated Board of the Royal College and Royal Academy of Music in the Senior Department, those handsmen were wildly enthusiastic.

When I managed to win the Mendelssohn Prize in Berlin from fellow competitors of all nations, performing on all classes of musical instruments, including the human voice, it came as a surprise to the critics who had thought poorly of Old Peter's chances against singers and violinists. But dear Old Peter came out on top and the £100 prize was very acceptable, to say nothing of the honour, which, to me, was priceless!

When our Ambassador, Sir Edward Goschen, told the Kaiser that an English girl had carried off their great prize, he scarcely believed it. "Impossible!" he said. "Now, if it had been tennis or some other game, I could have believed it; but music—no! it is quite impossible!"

from various sketches and "Pictures" will be given and, in response to many requests, the complete production of Force, Wit—and a Woman, by Julius Hare, will be repeated. The programme and talk will be arranged and conducted by William R. Keene and George Stone, the Joint Producers to the Bournemouth Station.

The programme at the Dundee Station on May 22nd is to be arranged by Mr. Stephen Richardson, organist of Perth Cathedral.

It was in Berlin, too, that my mother and I were run away with in a horrid little cab. My 'cello (not Peter, fortunately) was broken and I was a good deal hurt by a knock on the head. Our horse was stopped by a young German officer, who disappeared afterwards without disclosing his identity.

I was due to play at a students' concert at the Hochschule that evening, and I asked, on account of my bruised head, to be excused. But the authorities were inexorable, and I had to carry out my programme.

An Unfortunate Accident.

Another time when I played under difficulties was in Dresden, where I and my sister were due to play at an important concert in the Opera House, with Herr Schuch conducting. We were having tea before starting and I was cutting a small roll of bread, when the knife slipped and cut deep into my thumb. I have the mark now.

A doctor was hurriedly sent for and he decided to stitch the cut at once.

At this moment an official from the Opera House, just across the square, arrived to say that "the young ladies must come at once." But, before going, I had to see whether I could play with a sewn thumb. On trying, I burst the stitches and the thumb had to be sewn up again, this time with much deeper stitches. This done, I hurried to the concert platform, as the audience had already been waiting a quarter of an hour.

"British Grit!"

It was not till I began that I knew whether my thumb was strong enough. My sister and I started off, but my thumb bled so freely that it had to be plastered up during the "tuttis."

I think I never had a greater ovation. The audience kept on shouting "British Grit! British Grit!" and the green-room was inundated with crowds anxious to see the injured thumb.

During the night it swelled and I had to remain in bed all next day; but this incident bore good fruit, for it gained me a name for pluck in Germany, and resulted in my securing eighty-three concerts the next season—all due, in a great measure, to that cut thumb!

The Americans I found to be all most hospitable and very keen indeed on musical development.

It was in America that I toured as a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Also, I toured for one season with Dame Nellie Melba.

During the war we had two very exciting voyages from America, during one of which I was instrumental in securing the capture of a spy, who, I was told afterwards, was shot in the Tower.

PREMIER'S EMPIRE DAY MESSAGE.

MR. BALDWIN will broadcast from London a special Empire Day message at 7.40 p.m. on Monday, May 25th. Amateurs in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa will make a special effort to pick up the message. It is proposed to make this a regular annual event. Arrangements next year will be more elaborate. The Dominion Stations will endeavour to re-broadcast the message so that the Premier will be addressing the Empire, with a potential audience of hundreds of millions.

Miss Beatrice Harrison.

SIEMENS

HIGH-TENSION RADIO BATTERIES

NEW TYPE—LARGE CAPACITY.

THE H.T. BATTERIES DE LUXE.

Type R.B.1.

Type R.B.2.

Type R.B.3.

Type	E.M.F.	No. of cells	Terminal connections at	Dimensions overall approximate including covers	Weight approx.	Price
	Volts.		Volts.	Inches.	lbs.	£. s. d.
R.B. 1	18	12	0-3-9-15-18 (+)	8½ × 3½ × 3½ high	3½	7 6
R.B. 2	36	24	0-24-27-30-36 (+)	8½ × 6 × 3½ high	7½	14 0
R.B. 3	72	48	0-24-30-54-60-72 (+)	17½ × 6½ × 4 high	15	1 7 6

Each battery is fitted with a substantial lid, and with a strong paper band as seal.

Every endeavour has been made to produce an article embodying all the improvements which experience can suggest as being essential to provide an efficient and reliable H.T. battery. In particular, the question of insulation has received special attention. Paraffin wax of the highest quality obtainable is used throughout, and every unit is embedded solidly in this substance with adequate spacing between units.

All three sizes are capable of giving excellent service on wireless receiving apparatus where the normal anode current does not exceed 10 milliamperes. They are therefore suitable for supplying plate current to multivalve receiving sets, including one or two small power valves. It is very desirable, however, where a high anode potential is impressed on amplifying valves, that a suitable negative grid bias be provided; otherwise economical results cannot be expected from the H.T. battery. Valve manufacturers publish data from which suitable values of H.T. and negative grid bias can be determined for particular types of valves. Details of batteries suitable for grid bias purposes are given in our Leaflet 645.

A direct comparison between the small unit hitherto used and the large type which is now adopted as the standard is given in the illustrations.

ALTHOUGH AMPLE SUPPLIES ARE AVAILABLE AT THE MOMENT, IT IS VERY DESIRABLE THAT ORDERS BE PLACED WITH YOUR DEALER NOW.

Old Standard.

Leaflet 645 will be sent on application.

NEUTRON

TRADE MARK REGD.

"The Crystal with Valve Power"

"THERE IS NOT A DUD POINT ANYWHERE."

"I am so delighted with the splendid results obtained with your 'Neutron' Crystal that I feel I must write you this testimonial on the strength of it. Owing to the small sized cup of my crystal detector I had to break up my piece of 'Neutron' in order to get a suitable sized piece. I found that the crystal had points all through it and not as in some crystals I have tried on the outside surface only. In fact I may say THERE IS NOT A 'DUD POINT' ANYWHERE. I have tried dozens and dozens of other crystals, but have never found one that came up to 'Neutron.' My crystal set is a revelation to my friends (mostly multi-valve enthusiasts) in its purity and strength of broadcasting reception.

"You may make what use you think fit of this letter."

Grandpa's Choice

Grandpa now neglects his evening paper—a surprising fact, because with him it was almost a fetish. Someone brought home Brandes and the clarity with which he gets the broadcast programme, the melodious tones ensured by their Matched Tone feature, claim his fervid interest. There he sits, with a finger in the bowl of a half-filled and forgotten pipe, oblivious to our entreaties.

As soon as we are able to penetrate his intense interest perhaps he will adjust the Table-Talker and the full rich tones will fill the room. Matched Tone serves us all. Ask your Dealer for Brandes.

This seal —

is a token of our responsibility for the Loudon Valve. It bears the signature of Mr. D. V. L. Fellows and is a sign that the valve has been tested in our works and found correct.

In future, therefore, when you buy a Loudon Valve make certain that this seal is intact and not defaced in any way. You will then be assured that if by any chance you should have to make a complaint regarding the valve, your complaint will receive the attention it deserves.

You can further safeguard yourself by seeing that the Loudon you are buying is supplied in the new blue and white box illustrated here, or in the original purple and yellow box in which Loudons were first placed on the market.

These precautions are for your protection; they ensure that other valves of similar appearance, but of inferior construction and performance cannot be offered to you without your being able to detect the substitution.

Remember the seal and the box then; for though these imitations may be very flattering to us they can only be a source of disappointment and expense to you.

Ask your retailer for Loudon Valves and see that you get them.

*Do this for increased
Volume and Clarity*

JUST take out your last L.F. stage valve and insert a Mullard D.F.A. MASTER VALVE. You will be delighted with the immediate increase in volume and clarity from your loud speaker. The special construction of these Master Valves gives powerful and pure amplification and yet requires LESS current than your present valves.

If you use a 4-volt accumulator,

They are chiefly responsible for the quality of reproduction. Badly exhausted valves, otherwise "soft" valves, are short-lived and give poor results. "Soft" valves cost less to make than "hard" valves, but they are expensive and unsatisfactory in use. B.T.H. Radio Valves are exhausted by a special B.T.H. process which produces an exceedingly high vacuum.

THEY incorporate all the patented—and therefore exclusive—features embodied in the design and construction of the AMPLION Standard "Dragon" model, and by experience and tests against much larger and more expensive models of other makes, they have been proved supreme in every respect.

Handy in size, highly finished in appearance, and superlative in performance, they uphold to the full the world-wide reputation of the Traffic Control at Epsom.

WHEN important wireless telephone experiments were carried out for improving traffic control at the Derby by means of an airship, BROWN A-type headphones were used throughout. As in the Navy and the Army so in every other Government service you'll find these famous headphones selected for sensitiveness and dependability. And when you consider the number of different makes of headphones produced in this country this is indeed a significant fact.

It is owing to the greatly increased demand for A-type headphones that our manufacturing costs have been lowered. Consequently we have been able to effect a considerable reduction in price. To-day, more than ever, these superb Headphones with the famous tuned reed principle represent wonderful value for money.

Every Crystal user striving after long distance records needs a pair—whilst the owner of a Valve Receiver will find that BROWN A-type Headphones add hundreds of miles to his receiving range.

SPECIAL REPAIR

DEPT. for

A 2-valve Wireless Receiver should give excellent loud-speaker results up to 50 miles or more on a main station. A 3-valve set should cover nearly all Britain and the Continent. A 4-valve set should make your loud-speaker respond to almost any transmission from Europe and parts of America.

If you do not get these results, then you are not getting your full value and pleasure out of your expensive instrument.

Send it to us for EXPERT OVERHAUL at trifling cost. We will send you full expert report on it, with estimate for repair, and you incur no expense whatever unless you accept the estimate. (In any case, your instrument comes back to you carriage paid and carefully packed.)

"I am simply amazed at the improvement you have made at so small a cost."

The Weighty Lather that helps the Shaver

Don't judge a lather by its volume. Air bubbles have volume but little weight. It is the heavy, thick, creamy lather that helps the shaver. Gibbs Shaving Cream—something quite new—increases its weight 22½ times. Its super-lather gains its weight from the water it holds. It softens and holds the hair and makes swift easy work for the razor.

That's why many thousands of men have found in Gibbs Shaving Cream the solution of their shaving difficulties. The Cold Cream contained in Gibbs Shaving Cream leaves the skin smooth and comforted as if newly massaged. Gibbs Shaving Cream brings you nearer Shaving perfections than any yet devised.

“Broadcasting” Comfort

BERKELEY Comfort is broadcast throughout the entire country and has indeed added to the greater enjoyment of wireless by providing ideal conditions for “listening-in.” What can be more delightful than to rest in the luxurious deep-seated comfort of a Berkeley and “listen-in” to the broadcasting concerts and the wireless news?

The universal popularity of the Berkeley increases day by day. Every chair purchased is an eloquent advocate of Berkeley Comfort and Quality. It makes a circle of new friends wherever it goes. Built for ease and comfort, handsome, roomy, and of the greatest durability, Berkeleys are the finest chair value ever offered.

The Berkeley Easy Chair

HAS THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY EASY CHAIR IN THE WORLD.

The frame of the Berkeley is exceptionally strong. It is fitted with long steel-coppered springs in the back, seat, and front edge. The Berkeley has bold, broad, heavily upholstered arms, with an extra deep seat and double-bordered front. The seat also has an independent front edge which adds greatly to the comfort and life of the chair.

CASH PRICE 85/- or 15/- with order and 5 FREE DELIVERY payments of 15/- monthly. in England & Wales (Scotland 5/- extra).

SOLD ON THE MONEY-BACK PRINCIPLE. Soon after receipt of first payment with your order we send the Berkeley Easy Chair, carriage paid, in England and Wales (Scotland 5/- extra). If upon examination it is not completely satisfactory, you may return it within 7 days at our expense and we will refund your money in full.

WRITE NOW FOR PATTERNS and choose your own covering. On receipt of a postcard we will send you, post free, a complete range of serviceable and artistic designs to harmonise with any scheme of decoration or colouring in your home.

Put your Hand On the Trouble

Every little bit of energy saved makes a world of difference to your reception. The Climax Radio Earth, Insulators and Shock Absorbers save big bits of energy and cut out the chief weaknesses in present-day wireless installations. THE CLIMAX RADIO EARTH—the low-loss DIRECT TUBULAR EARTH. Far better than the old-fashioned water-pipe or gas-pipe earth. Ready for use. Easily fitted. Maximum efficiency. Length, approx. 30ins. Price 5/-.
Climax Insulated Low-loss Earth Lead, 20ft., 1/8.

THE NEW CLIMAX AERIAL INSULATOR.

(Registered Design No. 708718.) This will stand four times the flash over voltage of the ordinary cheap shell or egg insulator, while it has far less capacity to earth. It is made of the same High Tension vitreous porcelain as the 100,000-volt insulators on High Power Transmission lines. It will stand a direct pull of hundreds of pounds. It is entirely non-hygroscopic. It cannot absorb moisture even if fractured. IT INSULATES PERFECTLY DURING RAINFALL. It is self cleaning on all surfaces.
Price per pair 1/-. Set of four insulators with two shock absorbers, 3/-.
708718

THE CLIMAX LIGHTNING ARRESTER.

Made on the multi-gap, quenched spark principle. Provides atmospheric space charges and lightning discharges with a straight path to earth of a resistance. Protects the set whether in use or not. NO SWITCHES NECESSARY. The mica insulating discs and series multiple gaps ensure complete absence of shunting effect, leaving your signals at maximum strength. Equipped with a Climax Lightning Arrester, an aerial is a positive protection against lightning, instead of being a source of danger. Price 7/6, complete, ready to fix.

THE CLIMAX JUNIOR CRYSTAL SET DE LUKE.

A very attractive crystal set in a small, beautifully finished mahogany case, carrying a brilliantly polished panel with silver finished fittings. The detector is the well-known Climax Sure-Set Plug-in detector, fitted with micrometer adjustment. This detector can be set quickly and easily, and is very stable when set. It has all the advantages of a permanent detector, with the advantage that you can adjust it. The miniature switch enables the wave length to be changed over to Chelmsford without using any loading coils. Tuning is by variometer, and is very sharp and efficient. When not in use, the aerial can be switched direct to earth. Price 21/-.
The highest possible grade of crystal set at the lowest possible price.

INSIST ON THE NAME "CLIMAX." REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

Every Climax product is clearly marked with the name "Climax." In case of difficulty, or if substitutes are offered you, send your order direct to us, together with P.O., and we will send the goods by return.

THE THERMIONIC VALVE AND ITS USES IN WIRELESS CIRCUITS,

by Capt. W. H. Date, B.Sc., A.M.I.E.E., on Tuesdays, commencing May 19th, 1925, from 6.30 to 8.30 p.m.
Further particulars and syllabus of course on application to the Director of Education.

LEAVE IT TO FLUXITE.

An un-soldered wireless set is a breeding ground for those little devils of distortion and bad reception. They thrive on the delicate currents that pass through the circuit. Each un-soldered joint is a trap. One spot alone is sufficient to lower the receptive qualities of your set, so just think what is missed if all the joints are left unsoldered.

Fluxite chases away all soldering worries, and makes possible the perfect soldered joint, making your circuit one whole, solid piece of wiring instead of twenty or thirty odd patchy lengths.

Make up your mind and solder your wiring now. It is so simple. Leave it to Fluxite.

ASK YOUR IRONMONGER OR HARDWARE DEALER TO SHOW YOU THE NEAT LITTLE

PRICE 7/6

It is perfectly simple to use, and will last for years in constant use. It contains a special "small-space" Soldering Iron, with non-heating metal handle, a Pocket Blowlamp, FLUXITE, Solder, etc., and full instructions. Price 7/6. Write to us should you be unable to obtain it.

21/- TRUE MUSIC : MINOR :

The TrueMusic Minor Loud Speaker, like every other T.M.C. product, is definitely guaranteed by us for twelve months. Its finish is a tasteful and distinctive nigger-brown, and its reproduction is better than that of many models selling at double the price. T.M.C. No. 3 Lightweight Headphones weigh only 6½ ounces.

The earpiece attachments do not catch in the hair, and the connections are 6 ft. long, thus ensuring all-round comfort.

T.M.C. No. 2A Headphones are 3/- cheaper than the No. 3 Headphones. They are just as good but slightly heavier, and both give signal reception that is "Clear as Crystal."

GUARANTEED—FOR TWELVE MONTHS.

You should be able to buy T.M.C. products from every wireless retailer. We can, however, supply direct. When writing we shall appreciate it if you will send us the name and address of the retailer who is unable to supply.

A Cheque for £4,500 in your morning post!

Just imagine it! A cheque for £4,500 in your morning post. Seems too good to be true, yet it is certain as certain can be if you adopt the Sun of Canada plan for making sure provision for your later years. It is a wonderfully simple and profitable plan, framed to fit in with any circumstances, and thousands of men have adopted it already and so are well on the way to independence.

It's a splendid thing to be independent—not to have to rely on a business or a profession for your income. It leaves you free to live your life more fully and with greater enjoyment. There's no more worrying about money and the need for saving. There's no more anxiety about your position; no more fears about the well-being of your family should anything happen to you.

And that's what this plan can do for you. Indeed it will do more. Besides the cheque for £4,500 if you live to be 55, there is for your family £3,000 plus half of every deposit you make, should you not live to that age. And there is £30 a month for you should you be permanently incapacitated through illness or accident, from earning a living. There is also a substantial rebate of Income Tax every year, amounting in all to a considerable sum.

You can have the fullest information about this ideal plan for securing your own independence, protecting the interests of your family and safeguarding against total disablement, without placing yourself under any obligation. Simply fill in and post the form and the Sun of Canada, the great Annuity Company, with Government supervised assets of over £50,000,000, will send you exact figures for your consideration.

The plan applies at any age and for any amount. If above is too ambitious for the moment, start with a smaller amount.

Send Enquiry Form for detailed Particulars.

To J. F. Junkin (Manager), Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, 12, Sun of Canada House, Victoria Embankment, London, W.C.2 (Near Temple Station).

Assuming I can save and deposit per please send me, without obligation on my part, full particulars of your investment plan showing:

1. What income or cash sum I shall receive in years (15, 20, 25, 30, as you desire).

2. What sum will be automatically provided for my family in the event of my death.

3. How much income Tax I shall save each year.

4. In the event of total disability, how much I shall draw monthly.

UNIT.

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW IN WIRELESS.

The D.P.U. is the latest advance made in Radio Manufacture, and the fact that behind it is the 30 years' reputation of Edison Bell will assure listeners in that they can expect something just as perfect as perfection can be.

The Edison Bell Double Purpose Unit, as its name indicates, has the twin aim of serving as (1) a Valve Detector and (2) Dual Amplifier—and the interested experimenter will find even other ways of utilising this new instrument.

The D.P.U., which is the result of long and patient research, must not be confounded with the many straight Single Valve Sets now on the market. It is far superior to any of these where volume, range and clarity of tone are concerned.

Cutting the High Cost of Broadcast Reception.

THERE are still many valve users who are not yet convinced as to the economy of Dull Emitter Valves. Maybe some are deterred by the fact that a good dull emitter costs more in the first place than the standard bright emitter. To consider the initial cost in preference to the total cost of using a Valve Set during, for example, the period of a whole year is rather a short-sighted policy. The new gas-filled electric lamps which are now in universal use cost more than the old carbon filament lamps to buy, but no one would think of using them because their running costs are so much greater.

Take your own case, for instance. You possess, perhaps, a 3-valve Set. Now the average bright emitter Valve consumes about .7 amps. Three of them, therefore, will take 2.1 amps. Suppose your accumulator is rated at 6 volts 30 amps actual (this is a good average size), you will get about 15 hours' use from it on a charge. The cost of a charge may amount to 2s., according to your neighbourhood. Eight shillings for a month's broadcasting—practically £5 per year. Not much when compared with the pleasure to be derived, but still quite an appreciable item in the family exchequer.

The New Wuncell Valve (with Resistance in base).

Now let us see what you would be paying if you were using one of the new Cossor Wuncell Dull Emitters that every keen wireless man is talking about. First of all, you would reconnect your accumulator to give 2 volts only instead of 6 by connecting all the cells in parallel. This is but the work of a few minutes. Your accumulator is now arranged to give you 2 volts 90 amps actual, but the charging cost won't be any higher.

Wuncell valves function best at a little under 2 volts and they require only .3 amps—your 3-valve Set, therefore, will now take .9 amps and your accumulator will last six weeks on one charge. Six times as long.

In other words, you get five weeks' broadcasting for nothing every time you have your accumulator charged when you use these wonderful new Wuncell Valves. Obviously they will save their slightly increased cost within a very few weeks and continue to save money throughout the whole of their life.

The Long Life Wuncell.

But economy of upkeep is only one of the attributes of this remarkable Valve. It also excels in length of life, owing to its very low filament temperature. Let us go back to your bright emitter valves again. You will see that when in operation they glow at a white heat—should your accumulator run down and be unable to produce the necessary voltage to create this intense heat your Set refuses to work. But if you could only see the new Wuncell in action you would be amazed to find that its glow is almost invisible. Little more than the embers of a dying match. In daylight you will have to look pretty hard to tell whether the filament is glowing at all. As an actual scientific fact, it may be of interest to state that its working temperature is barely 800 degrees as against the 2,000 degrees required by the standard bright emitter.

Isn't it obvious that such an extremely low temperature must mean an exceptionally long life? There are none of the strains of expansion and contraction which every bright emitter valve must necessarily undergo. There is nothing to cause its filament to become brittle and eventually fracture. No wonder Amateur Wireless reported that its filament "is practically unbreakable" in a noteworthy article on its many exclusive features.

For Long Distance Work, Too.

Another complaint against Dull Emitters as a class is that up to the present they can hardly be said to match up to their corresponding bright prototypes. Most Dull Emitters possess characteristics of their own which are quite different to any Bright emitter Valves. It is interesting to note, therefore, that these new Wuncell Valves are an exact counterpart of the well-known P. series.

D.X. enthusiasts will be glad to know, for instance, that after a Station has been tuned in, the P.2 Valve can be removed from its socket and a W.R.2 inserted and little—if any—correction in tuning will be necessary. This, by the way, is one of the hardest tests to give any Valve, and when successful is definite evidence that the two Valves possess identical characteristics.

The Wuncell Valve is at present available in two types—the W.1 and the W.2 (the latter with its customary red top). Both of these Valves correspond to the P.1 and the P.2 mentioned below.

For the convenience of the man with a multi-valve Receiver who does not want to invest in a complete set of Dull Emitters at once a model (W.R.1 and W.R.2) is available with a resistance inbuilt with the base. This will enable anyone to use a Wuncell (normally operating on 2 volts) with a 6-volt accumulator. When all the Valves in the Set have been substituted by Wuncell Valves, these resistances can be short-circuited and the accumulator converted to 2 volts—thereby trebling its amperage.

Owing to the tremendous demand for these new Wuncell Valves supplies have previously been somewhat difficult to obtain, but every Dealer is now in a position to supply either of these two types of Valves from stock. The price of the W.1 and W.2 Wuncells has been fixed at 18s. each, and the W.R.1 and W.R.2 Wuncells with resistances in base are 20s. each.

The Improvement in Continental Broadcasting.

No longer can we complain of the lack of variety of the Broadcasting programmes available for us. If those being transmitted from near-by Stations are not to our liking we can readily take a trip to some of the nearer Continental Stations such as Brussels or Paris. Transmissions from these Stations are so good and usually so free from interference that they can be relied upon for a programme that is a welcome change.

Numbers of people would take an interest in Continental transmissions but for the fact that they are handicapped by unsuitable apparatus. Although in the hands of an expert a single valve receiver can be made to give astounding results, yet it is generally recognised that a stage of high-frequency amplification is necessary to make reception a certainty.

If yours is a single valve set why not convert it at once for long distance work by adding a stage of high frequency—diagrams and instructions are constantly appearing in all the Wireless Magazines. Until you are in a position to enjoy long distance reception you have not experienced one of the great thrills of Wireless.

If your Receiver is supposed to be capable of receiving over several hundred miles and does not do so in your hands it is very probably because you are using the wrong kind of Valves. No one is foolish enough to put a racehorse between the shafts of a farm cart or to enter a cart horse in a race. Each animal—through generations of breeding—has been reared for its own particular job. And it is the same with wireless valves.

The Right Type of Valve Essential.

The valve for long-distance reception must be so sensitive as to pick up signals constantly impinging on the aerial that are much too weak to be rectified by the Detector Valve. And if these oscillating currents are not rectified any number of low-frequency valves will not make the slightest difference.

That is exactly why the Cossor P.1 and the Cossor P.2 are two entirely different valves. The first can only commence to function on signals that are sufficiently strong as to be capable of rectification. It is the purpose of the P.2 (the valve with the red top) to build up the signals so that the P.1 Valve can easily rectify them.

A Typical Cossor Valve.

Valves Should Work in Harmony for Best Results.

Working in perfect harmony it is only natural that the Cossor P.1 and the P.2 should be capable of producing exceptional results. Indeed, in the two short years that they have been on the market they have enjoyed a measure of appreciation which has been accorded to no other Valves.

Experimenters first, then the general Wireless public afterwards, were quick to realize that the hood-shaped Grid and Anode in conjunction with the arched filament were responsible for a more efficient use being made of the electron stream.

It is obvious that the ordinary valve with its long straight filament and tubular Anode is most wasteful and permits a serious escape of electrons from each end of the Anode. It has not been difficult to convince a man that if reducing the filament current decreases the electron stream—and consequently the signal strength—then any proportion of the electron stream not being used will have much the same effect.

The Importance of a Rigid Grid.

In the same way those enthusiasts who have been keen to obtain pure loud-speaker reception readily appreciate that the ordinary spiral grid is far from rigid. Its weakness permits microphonic noises and distortion which can only be entirely eliminated by a design similar to the Cossor. Here we see a grid that is a magnificent piece of engineering work. Built up on a stout metal grid band, each wire is anchored no less than three times—thus making a network which is wonderfully rigid.

Undoubtedly—as satisfied users seem to be never tired of telling their friends—the P.1 and the P.2 are remarkable valves. If you are in any way dissatisfied with your present Set—if you cannot get far beyond your local stations—you should fit Cossor Valves, recognised as the country's most popular Valves.

"Father used to say that headphones hurt his ears"

"Now, it is quite a different story. He has fitted 'KUMFI' De Luxe Ear Pads to the 'phones, and all that Father can find time to say is..... SH'.....SH'.....SH' !!!"

The New 'KUMFI' De Luxe anti-septic Ear Pad is a soft, velvety pad that just covers the ear-piece of the headphone, and entirely prevents that uncomfortable pressure on the ears and enables you to listen-in for hours without discomfort. In addition, it shuts out exterior noises, and prevents moisture collecting on the diaphragms. Each pad is antiseptic and self-adhesive, and can be fixed or removed without the slightest difficulty —no heating or damping is needed.

Q 5

NEURITIS

Something New for this Distressing Malady.

Read this and act on what you are here told: it may be the best day's work in your life. Are you a sufferer from Neuritis, Arthritis, Rheumatism, Sciatica, etc.? You may have suffered so for some years and also spent money and tried many remedies with little or no success. Will you try at no cost a home remedy which is neither a drug nor a medicine, but a simple tropical herb which you prepare just like ordinary "tea" and drink once or twice a day? The remedy is agreeable and effective and you

"FEEL THE BENEFIT ALMOST AT ONCE"

GRANGETOWN, CARDIFF.

Having been a sufferer with Neuritis in the legs for three years, and after trying all kinds of "so-called" cures I decided to try your Hervea. On Sunday the 28th I started taking the remedy and before the end of the week I had nearly lost all pain. I was going to write to you the first week but I thought I had better wait, so now, after three weeks I can let you know that I am practically free from pain. At first I felt as if there was something missing, having got so used to Hervea. I am a Commissionaire at a Cinema, where I am on my feet from morning till night and time some distance away. What used to take me three quarters of an hour to walk, I can do now quite comfortably in 20 minutes. I have recommended Hervea to everyone I know, and I thank the day that my wife sent for the sample packet. I don't know how to express my gratitude for your wonderful cure Hervea. —H.P.H., 27/1/24.

—not what I say, but what people tell me daily in their letters. For example, a well-known Scottish Peeress, Lady E., recently wrote me:—"People have been so struck with the marked change in me (this lady had been crippled for several years through Rheumatism) and that I have had to give away three of the packets, and I am now sending for six more." I have received similar letters from Public Officials, Naval and Military Officers, Clergymen, Professional Men and persons in all ranks of life. You need Risk No Money to prove for yourself the Genuineness of this remedy, and I particularly ask you to write to me if you have failed so far to get relief. Simply write and send me a stamp quantity of Hervea free of charge. If you feel you are getting benefit you can have a further quantity at a small charge. The Secret of the virtue of this plant is that it Expels Uric Acid from the System, and also Prevents Further Acid Deposits Accumulating. Other chemical and drug remedies relieve for the time being, but they fail in this all-important result. Write to-day—the cost is nothing, and you may never regret doing so; in fact, it may prove a long good-bye to Neuritis."
