Health and Headphones.

By Sir BRUCE BRUCE-PORTER, K.B.E., C.M.G., M.D.

[The opinion is steadily gaining ground that listening has a most beneficial effect upon the health, and Sir Bruce Bruce-Porter is a supporter of this view. In the following article he describes the great amount of good that wireless can do to those who are ill, either in mind or in body.]

THE medical profession, engaged in a fight against disease, calls to its aid various scientific discoveries. But as doctors are really the descendants of the priests, they have inherited the conservative minds and outlook of the priests. Scientific discoveries are tested and tried for a long time before acceptance. The wireless telephone, however, which is probably the greatest discovery of the age, has been taken up as an aid to health after a shorter period of probation than any former discovery. This is because its use is obvious, and it has no potentiality for harm.

The teaching of Hippocrates is more generally recognised to-day than in the past, and we realize that the cure of disease lies in the body itself, and not in physic. Even drugs which were looked upon as certain cures have been found to act by their general activity upon the body, rather than upon the specific germs of disease. The mind plays a great part in the production and cure of disease, and if a patient can be made happy, his general resistance will improve.

Use of music in the treatment of the sick is a very old practice, and we have, in the Book of Samuel, the instance of David who played the harp to cure Saul. "And it came to pass, when the evil spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took an harp and played with his hand. So Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him."

It is recorded, of course, that on some other occasions he threw a javelin at David, which was the only way in those days by which he could cut off the entertainer! We have also the case of the Caliph ad Mansur, who arranged in his wonderful hospital at Cairo to have musicians to play day and night for the benefit of those who could not sleep.

During the Great War, friends gave me gramophones for the hospitals under my command. They proved one of the greatest aids to recovery. Men back from the front, with their brains filled with the screech of shells, and who could not sleep, found the help of music beyond description. Some of my medical officers, who were inclined to object, soon changed their point of view, and asked for more records.

Incidentally, the concert room was always crowded for entertainments of a musical character but empty for lectures, even when the subject and lecturer were such as to offer an intellectual treat.

When people are sick, they do not want to be taught! The broadcast programmes must, of course, cater for all classes, and for every type of mind. The majority of invalids who listen do not desire lectures, particularly after dinner.

A Song Inspired by a Mother.

The Story of "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

Mr. IVOR NOVELLO.

WARS have usually found their laureates, and the songs that have sharpened words have in many cases become a part of history. Of these, perhaps the Marseillaise is the most famous, though we must not forget that Charles Dibdin found his inspiration in the feats of our Navy during the Napoleonic wars, and Campbell's odes on the same theme are so fine that they belong to the realm of pure literature.

America's comparatively short history is rich in war songs, from "The Star-Spangled Banner," of 1812, to the "Dixie-Land" and "John Brown's Body" of 1864 and the Civil War. Kipling's "Pay, Pay, Pay!" was the outstanding song of the South African War, and Tennyson himself did not disdain to pen the martial strains of "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Riflemen Form!"

A Poignant Memory.

The Great War, which is so recent and poignant a memory, opened on its very first day—as far as the participation of this country in it is concerned—to a song, and that song one which was never written as a war-song, or ever intended to be sung on the march. But the rhythm of "Tipperary" and its "Good-bye, Piccadilly! Good-bye, Leicester Square!" the lilt of its easy tune, seemed to suit the mood of the "Old Contemptibles," as well as of the tens of thousands of lads, who had never known a soldier's life, who flocked to the colours in response to the magical name of Kitchener.

But the recent war differed from any war which had ever occurred before, in at least one essential aspect. It affected everybody. The nation was at war as it had never been before. In South Africa, in India, in the Crimea, even at Waterloo, the average citizen, though deeply interested, read of the Army engaged as of something apart from his personal feelings.

The men who were fighting were professional soldiers, men who had elected to enlist whether there was a war or no war. How differently a war touched the deep heart of the nation, when almost every family was called to the Colours, when the Army was not reckoned in a few thousands, but in millions, when the lads who fought our battles went from the loom, the forge, the field, the shop, the desk, and the club.

To Hearten and Encourage.

A new kind of war song was called for, something not so much to march to, as something to hearten and encourage.

When I called on Mr. Ivor Novello he told me the story of how he came to write "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

"My mother, Madame Clara Novello Davies, had several times urged me to write a patriotic song. It was 1914, and I was only eighteen at the time, and very keen on song-writing. Several people I knew had written patriotic songs already, and I wondered why I should not write one too. So I turned my thoughts to flags flying, drums beating, soldiers marching—and nothing came. It had all been done before. There were no new ideas, no new and fresh inspirations in these things. Besides, the unconscious instinct of the first men to go to the front had chosen a song which mentioned none of these things, the immortal 'Tipperary.'

"Then my mother, who was always my best inspirer, said: 'The men have a song which they have chosen for themselves, but the people who are left at home have none. Why not write a song of heartening and patient courage? Fighting is hard, God knows, but anxious watching and waiting at home, with the dread of bad news ever present, is hard too.'

"Well, that set my thoughts working in a new direction. I strove to invent a phrase of comfort, something not too sentimental, suiting the spirit of the time, when people everywhere were learning 'to suffer and be strong.' No phrase would come, but I did invent a tune, at last, and I rang up my friend, Lena Guilbert Ford, with whom I had collaborated before, and told her that I had a tune which I wanted her to hear, and would she come along and try to cook up some words!

In a Flash!

"She came immediately, and I sat down at the piano and played my tune. Nothing happened. She did not say 'The very thing!' and instantly begin to wed my tune to words. Suddenly I turned round and said: 'Lena, it's not the right tune!' and, even as I said those words, the phrase 'Keep the Home Fires Burning' flashed into my mind. 'I've got it!' I said. I turned to the piano again, and fitted those words to the very strain which everybody knows now. Then I indicated to her how it might proceed. She caught fire instantly. She was delighted. She went into the next room to be quiet for a few minutes, and returned with the well-known refrain:—

Keep the home fires burning,
While your hearts are yearning,
Though the lads are far away
They dream of home;
There's a silver lining
Through the dark clouds shining;
Turn the dark clouds inside out
Till the boys come home!

"The tune was never changed. Both words and music had just 'happened,' and, in something under an hour, the whole song was finished. My next task was to show it to a publisher. The first I approached refused it! Then I took it to Messrs. Ascherberg, and they accepted it at sight.

A Thrilling Experience.

"It was an autumn Sunday night in 1914 at the Alhambra when it was first sung. I played the accompaniment, and a little lady named Sybil Vane sang the song. She is a Welsh girl and has since made a great success in vaudeville in America. I was astonished to find that, when she had sung the refrain once, immediately, without any urging, the audience took it up and sang it as if they had known it all their lives. We had to repeat that refrain nine times. There was never any doubt after that that the song would be a success from every point of view.

"In the spring of the following year I was connected with the Y.M.C.A. in their work in France, and was motoring through Havre. It was then I had one of the greatest thrills of my life. We pulled up by the side of the road whilst two thousand men of the British Army marched past us, and they were all singing 'Keep the Home Fires Burning!' It was an experience never to be forgotten, and I felt that in my small way I had done one thing at least, with my friend, Lena Ford, to keep the nation's courage at 'the sticking place.'

Health and Headphones.

The movement to provide hospitals and convalescent homes with wireless sets is a splendid one, and most of the hospitals up and down the country are being equipped. The well-to-do are already in possession of sets, but there are many thousands of poor folk, including the new poor, to whom a receiving set would be a godsend. Think of those who are confined to bed and who, when the breadwinner has gone to his, or her, work, are dependent upon the chance call of a well-meaning neighbour, or the visit of the district nurse to break the monotony. How the hours drag on! They may not be educated sufficiently to find cheer in reading, or their sight may be too defective to allow it.

There are but few who make suitable visitors to a sick room. Some are too depressing and others may be offensively healthy and too cheerful. When patients are confined to bed, it is impossible to prevent their minds acting, and the only way to get rid of unpleasant thoughts is to crowd them out by pleasant ones. The old-fashioned rest cure, in which the patient with a sick mind was put to bed, isolated from friends and deprived of letters and books, produced far more failures than cures. I have known many people who were so troubled fall asleep under the soothing rhythm of music.

To the helpless cripple, wireless has opened up a new world. In fact, people who are permanently bed-ridden, and, so far as contact with the outside world is concerned, were dead, now live again, thanks to wireless. They hear music actually being played, not merely its reproduction, and they hear public men speaking. Thanks to the enterprise of the British Broadcasting Company and the kindness of well-known public men, they become acquainted with the personality of those whose names have made history. Personality is conveyed much more by the spoken than by the written word. The short Sunday evening service brings many of our best parsons into homes they could not otherwise visit, and comfort to many who are sick in mind as well as body.

There are many poor folk to-day eking out an existence on a pittance, who are too proud to make their poverty generally known. Every medical man is acquainted with such. To them a little receiving set would be a godsend. If local radio clubs would raise a fund to pay the licence and provide sets on loan, there would be no difficulty in finding suitable people to be recipients of their kind thought.

WEATHER WARNINGS AT SEA.

THE new weather warning service, inaugurated this month as the result of co-operation between the Air Ministry, the Board of Trade, and the B.B.C., in addition to its utility for the countryside, meets a pressing need of the Mercantile Marine.

Numbers of vessels engaged in the coastal traffic do not carry wireless telegraphy equipment, but many do provide themselves with broadcast receiving sets, and henceforward these will receive the weather information so vital to them.

The warnings are broadcast in the morning (10.30 British Summer Time) from Chelmsford, and in the evening from Newcastle, Bournemouth, and Liverpool between 10.20 and 10.35 p.m., for the Eastern, Southern, and Western areas respectively.

The region comprised in the Eastern area is defined by Cape Wrath, Dungeness, and the continental coast from Calais to Bergen. The Western area comprises the Irish Sea, the Hebrides, Ireland, and the Bristol Channel, and the Southern area, the Channel from Dungeness to 11 degrees W. Longitude.

"Strads" from Soho.

A Tobacconist Who Makes Violins.

WHEN I listened the other day to the broadcast of Mr. William Primrose, who is one of our coming violinists, I did not know that the instrument upon which he plays was made at the back of a tiny shop in Soho.

That bright-eyed man who handed me cigarettes over the counter is really a dual personality; for at night, when the shop is closed, he retires to a quiet little workshop at the back and, if you are privileged to enter, he will talk of fiddles and all that they mean to him. That was where I met Mr. W. Glenister, who has been making violins and 'cellos as a hobby for close on forty years.

Fascinated by Fiddles.

"Many years ago," he told me, "I was attracted by the beautiful form of a 'Strad' which belonged to my employer. From that moment, fiddles fascinated me."

And although he is entirely self-taught, Mr. Glenister is now acknowledged as one of Britain's greatest experts.

His workroom is a wonderful medley. In one corner four old 'cellos lean on each other's shoulders, and two more stand nonchalantly on the table, waiting their turn. The place seemed littered with innumerable small planes, from the size of a beetle upwards!

"It takes me about twelve months to complete a fiddle," he explained, "reckoning the time required for drying the varnish. But to make one 'in the white,' requires only about a week."

Pine From an Old House.

Up to the present, Mr. Glenister has completed over two hundred violins and fifteen 'cellos. Sycamore wood is used for the back, sides and head of his instruments, and ordinary pine for the front. Some of his best pine was obtained from an old house in Beak Street and, he says, it is as fresh as a nut, although it is at least two hundred years old. He works on the lines of Strad, Guarnerius and N. Amati, but his "divinity" is the greatest of these three, and his prototype the great "Tuscan."

Mr. Albert Sammons, Professor Stanton Rees and many more celebrities have visited this little factory of music; but Mr. Glenister surprised me when he spoke of his friend, Mr. George Robey. It appears that the famous comedian, in the few hours he can spare from his business of mirth making, has manufactured fiddles in a small room at the top of the Hippodrome!

Van Biene's 'Cello.

"He has been to consult me several times," Mr. Glenister said. "George says that everyone must have a hobby, or go mad!"

I was shown a violin that had gone through the war, and had come back wounded. It was taken to the front by an officer, who played it in the front line trenches. But one day a bomb splintered its front, and it now shows its war scar under the varnish. Then he showed me Van Biene's 'cello which he was repairing. On this instrument the famous 'cellist played the "Broken Melody" over three thousand times.

Mr. Glenister himself is Dickensian in appearance—a benevolent Mr. Pickwick, with the addition of mutton chops and whiskers, who confesses to having dozens of violins even in his bedroom. "They can be hung up there," he went on, "safe from dust and dirt."

As I stepped outside into that dingy Soho street, a group of moustachio'd-Italians were passing, and I wondered whether they knew what mysterious activity there was behind the shutters of that tobacconist's shop!

Festivals of Harp and Song.

The Welsh Eisteddfod, Its Pomp and History.

TAKEN as a race, there are few peoples who are finer singers and poets than the Welsh, and their national Eisteddfods—or, Eisteddfodau, to give the correct plural—have a reputation that is world-wide.

During the current week—on August 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th—the National Eisteddfod at Pwllheli will be broadcast and, as well as the musical and vocal items of the festival itself, listeners will hear speeches by the Prime Minister and Mr. Lloyd George.

The word "Eisteddfod" means a "sitting" or "session," and the custom of holding such a meeting is of very ancient origin. The objects of the Eisteddfodau are to encourage Bardism and music, to keep alive the Welsh language sixth century under the auspices of Maelgwn Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales. This Prince seems to have been something of a wit as well as a practical joker. He had a far higher opinion of singing than of instrumental music, and he played a neat little trick upon the players on the harp who were competing at the festival.

The Eisteddfod was held near the river Conway, and Maelgwn Gwynedd offered a prize to those competitors who should swim across the river. A large number entered for the prize, but, on reaching the other side, the musicians discovered that they could not play as their harps were spoiled by the water. The singers, on the other hand, were none the worse for their experience and carried everything before them!

"Chairing" the Bard.

The ceremony of preparing an Eisteddfod is somewhat elaborate. It must be proclaimed a year and a day before it takes place, and there is much excitement when it is known that such a festival is going to be held. As a rule, the Eisteddfod lasts for three or four days. On each day a president and a conductor are elected. The festival is started with a sound of trumpets. An address is given by the president and the competing bards follow with their poetical effusions. Prizes and medals are awarded to the successful authors of musical, poetical and prose compositions, and also for the best choral and solo vocalists and for the best penillion singers.

Penillion singing is a very popular feature of the Eisteddfod, and great skill is required from the competitors. Penillion singing is singing to the accompaniment of the harp, and the singer has to follow the harpist, who may change the time or play variations as he pleases. The vocalist must keep perfect time with him and practically extemporize his song to fit the melody.

The great feature of an Eisteddfod is the "chairing" of the bard—he who, by his efforts, has been adjudged worthy of the highest prize. To be "chaired" at an Eisteddfod is the greatest ambition of a Welsh bard's life.

Occasionally Eisteddfodau have been held in the United States by Americans of Welsh origin, and then the enthusiasm is tremendous.

SONGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW.

"Less Than the Dust."

THIS beautiful song will be broadcast from Newcastle on Saturday, August 8th. It is one of the four famous Indian Love Lyrics from "The Garden of Kama," by Laurence Hope. The music, by Amy Woodforde-Finden, is well known in almost every place where there is an orchestra. We publish the words by permission of Messrs. William Heinemann, Ltd.

Less than the dust beneath thy chariot wheel,

Less than the rust that never stained thy sword,

Less than the trust thou hast in me, my Lord,

Even less than these!

Less than the weed that grows beside thy door,

Less than the speed of hours spent far from thee,

Less than the need thou hast in life of me,

Even less am I.

Since I, my Lord, am nothing unto thee,

See here thy sword, I make it keen and bright,

Love's last reward—Death comes to me to-night,

Farewell, Zahirudin.*

*A Mohammedan name, meaning "Faith" and also to increase patriotism among the people.

The Bards of Wales have always held an important place in the national history. Formerly, they had many hereditary rights and privileges and to-day they are regarded more or less in the light of heroes.

A Prince's Trick.

In times gone by the Eisteddfodau were held under the auspices of princes and nobles who often acted as umpires in judging the various competitions. Queen Elizabeth called an Eisteddfod on one occasion, and the document promulgating the event was of a lengthy and elaborate description.

The veneration of the Bards is a sentiment peculiar to Celtic races, and in Scotland and Ireland—especially the latter country—Bards were held in high esteem. But it is the Welsh who have kept alive the old traditions, and although Eisteddfodau are no longer promulgated by royalty, the enthusiasm that they create in Wales is as remarkable as in days of yore.

The date of the first Eisteddfod is lost in the mists of antiquity; but the first of which we have any authentic account was held in the

A SEASIDE concert party on the Wellington Pier, at Great Yarmouth, will be broadcast from 9.0 to 10.0 p.m., from all stations, on August 3rd and 13th.

SOME time ago, a programme called "What Is This?" proved very popular, and the idea is to be repeated at London Station on August 8th. A number of well-known pieces of music will be rendered, and listeners will be invited to guess the composers and anticipate the announcement, which will be made after, instead of before, the various items.

MANY letters have reached Cardiff Station expressing appreciation of their new mid-day transmissions, and it has been decided to continue the feature. During next week, the concerts will be provided by the Band of H.M. Royal Marines, relayed from the Institution Gardens at Bath.

THE French talks S.B. from London during the holiday period will consist of conversations likely to be of use to holiday travellers on the Continent. The subject of the talk on August 13th will be "Le Débarquement en France."

Official News and Views. GOSSIP ABOUT BROADCASTING.

A Radio Revel For All.

THE third anniversary of the B.B.C. is to be celebrated with a great Radio Revel all over the country. This Revel will have its centre at the Royal Albert Hall on Friday, November 13th. The programme there will be reproduced for other similar Revels wherever listeners join together for the purpose. The Revel will take the form of a fancy-dress ball, at which listeners will have the opportunity of meeting popular radio artists. Many surprise features will be introduced, including cabaret items and selections by the stars of British broadcasting.

Will the Lion Roar?

In connection with the anniversary of the outbreak of the World War on August 4th, the B.B.C. hopes to be able to reproduce for all listeners the roar of a live lion from the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. Elaborate arrangements are on hand for this feature, which should make a great appeal to the public imagination. But, of course, there is no definite guarantee that the lion will not go on strike when the moment for roaring actually arrives!

International Broadcasting.

Listeners who are following the prospective development of international broadcasting are likely to have their aspirations gratified. The agreement recently announced for the exchange of programmes between Great Britain and the United States, is part of a larger scheme which the B.B.C. has been persistently advocating through the International Union of Broadcasters at Geneva.

If the preliminary experiments in September meet with the success that is anticipated, there will be a regular interchange throughout the coming winter. It is a tribute to the pre-eminence of British broadcasting that all the European programmes for America will cross the Atlantic via Daventry. The corresponding American equipment will not be ready for two months, but when it is ready, it will be inaugurated in a characteristically American manner. It is probable that the President will broadcast a special message to British and Continental listeners. The B.B.C. is considering an appropriate acknowledgment from this side of the Atlantic.

Continental Nights.

Judging from correspondence from listeners, there is apparently an enthusiastic section of listeners who desire the B.B.C. to relay as many foreign programmes as British.

But it is not proposed to build the preliminary plans on a basis so extensive. It has first to be proved whether there is really the factor of safety that will enable the exchange to be more than a novelty. There is no intention of substituting a "mush" of indistinguishable sounds and shrieks for the regular programme. Moreover, it may be that listeners will not desire to have more than a very limited admixture of imported broadcasts. If everything goes well technically, what will happen probably will be that on about two nights a week, Daventry will take a Dominion or a foreign programme, and we shall see a sequence of Canadian, American, French, Italian, German, Belgian, Austrian, and Spanish "nights" at reasonable intervals.

From the Air and the Deep.

Arrangements are being made to broadcast a special concert from an air liner of Imperial Airways, Ltd., and it is hoped to follow this by selections from a submarine cruising under water.

Tapping Oxford.

The feature of next season's educational broadcasts will be a series taken from Oxford University. A special land-line collection and distribution centre is to be erected in Oxford. By this means listeners all over the country will be able to hear outstanding lectures and interesting occasions. Professor Gordon's series on "Humour in the Great Books" will begin on, or about, September 21st. Professor Julian Huxley will alternate with Professor Gordon in a series entitled, "The Streams of Life." Performances by the O.U.D.S., Union debates, special religious services and other features of Varsity life at Oxford are to be broadcast.

Where the Money Goes.

In his account of the work of the B.B.C. during the past year, Lord Gainford, the Chairman, made a timely reference to the distribution of the revenue received by the B.B.C. An analysis of the figures for the past financial year shows that 85.37 per cent. of the money was spent on programmes and operating costs. Only 6.38 per cent. was absorbed by administration, and the balance of 8.25 per cent. is accounted for by depreciation. Moreover, the administration is now stabilized, so that additional revenue will be automatically absorbed in the improvement of programmes and the provision of new services. These proportions compare favourably with those of any other broadcasting system in the world.

To the Rescue of Durham Castle.

Apparently, the Middlesex Hospital is not the only great building in danger of falling down. Durham Castle is beginning to totter. Through the Newcastle Station, listeners are to be asked to come to the rescue. Dr. Hensley Henson, the Bishop of Durham, will broadcast on this subject on Thursday, October 8th.

An Appeal for the Fresh Air Fund.

Miss Ellaline Terriss, the popular actress, who has recently returned with her husband, Mr. Seymour Hicks, from an Australian tour, is to make an appeal on behalf of the Fresh Air Fund, from London Station, at 6.40 p.m., on August 17th.

A Famous Pianist.

On the occasion of the Symphony Concert to be conducted by Mr. Eugene Goossens at London Station, on August 9th, the well-known pianist, M. Sapellnikoff, will play Tchaikovsky's No 1. Pianoforte Concerto. M. Sapellnikoff, it is interesting to recall, was also the soloist when some years ago this work was first performed in England under its composer's baton.

A Voyage Round the World.

Bournemouth listeners are to have a night with the "Navy and Army" on Saturday, August 15th, beginning with "A Voyage Round the World on a Sailing Ship in 1890 (Part 3)," by Capt. Howard Jackson. The programme will also contain sea songs and shanties, provided by Mrs. Ethel Smith (concertina) and Mr. Stuart Robertson (baritone). Mr. Gibson Young, in Community Singing, will be assisted by the "6BM" Chorus and Wireless Orchestra at 9.30.

Dancers' Memories.

"Reminiscent" and "Dancers' Memories Night" are the titles of the programmes at Manchester on Friday, August 14th, and Saturday, August 15th respectively. On Friday, the "2ZY" Orchestra will play popular tunes of a few decades ago, such as "In the Shadows" and "La Paloma." Mr. Roy Henderson (baritone) will sing old favourites like "Eleanore," "The Yeomen of England," and "Simon the Cellarer." On Saturday, the "Old Times" Dance Band, composed of members of the "2ZY" Orchestra, will revive fox-trots, waltzes, and one-steps that caught the popular fancy a few years ago.

Hull Station's First Birthday.

Hull Station's first birthday will be celebrated on Saturday, August 15th, at the Studio in Bishop Lane. As, probably, the most popular programme broadcast from the station during its first year was one of musical comedy and light opera, it has been thought appropriate to present a second programme of this nature on Birthday Night. All members of the staff will be required to contribute to the entertainment. The Station Engineering Staff Repertory Company will appear for the first, and probably the last, time, in the one-act drama entitled When Red Lamps Glow, or The Engineer's Vengeance, by Czech Reaseeva.

After the talent of the local staff is exhausted, listeners will be switched over to the Savoy Bands, and the birthday celebration will be continued in camera.

Colour in Music.

At the conclusion of the regular programme on Friday, August 14th, Plymouth Station will broadcast a musical feature entitled, "Colour in Music." Among other items will be included Mascaroni's "Among the Flowers." The idea is to provide a striking contrast to the martial music of the early part of the evening, when "The Entry of the Gladiators," the "Light Cavalry" Overture, and "The Parade of the Tin Soldiers" are among the items.

Scenes From Well-Known Plays.

Mr. William Macready and Miss Edna Godfrey-Turner have gained wide popularity by their radio-dramatic recitals. On August 13th they are broadcasting from Birmingham, between 9 and 10, a series of scenes from the well-known plays Camille, Richelieu, and East Lynne.

What Women Admire in Men.

The Horticultural Talks in the Women's Corner on Mondays, which are a weekly feature of Birmingham programmes, continue as popular as ever. Many listeners seek advice and map out their gardening work in accordance with the replies given by Mr. Sidney Rogers, F.R.H.S. The recent talk, "What Men Admire in Women," is shortly to be followed by "What Women Admire in Men."

Brighter Broadcasting at Leeds.

The Leeds-Bradford Station is specializing on seasonal programmes, and that promised for August 14th is particularly bright and cheery. There will be Folk Songs from Somerset, Yorkshire, Suffolk, and the Glens of Antrim; the "Crystal's Concert Party," under Miss Dorothy Forrest, will also broadcast, and Mr. Anderson Tryer will be heard at the piano.

An Hour With Tchaikovsky.

From time to time, requests have been received at Glasgow Station for more of Tchaikovsky's music, and it has been, therefore, arranged to devote one hour on the evening of Monday, August 10th, to his compositions. This programme will include orchestral items and cello solos, and Miss Thelma Petersen will sing the "Air des Adieux," from Jeanne d'Arc. During the Popular Hour which follows this feature, a bright little one-act comedy, entitled Phippis, will be given by the Station Repertory Company.

PEOPLE YOU WILL HEAR THIS WEEK.

Miss TONI FARRELL (Pianist) will be heard from Manchester and Birmingham on August 7th and 8th respectively.

[Swaine.]

Mr. BEN DAVIES (the famous Tenor) who will broadcast from Cardiff on August 6th and 7th.

Miss THELMA PETERSEN (Mezzo-Soprano) is singing from Birmingham on August 3rd and from Belfast on August 6th.

[Harris.]

Sir HAMILTON HARTY will conduct the Wireless Orchestra on August 4th (S.B. to all Stations except "5XX").

A Versatile Star.

MISS TONI FARRELL (whom you see above) is one of the most versatile of radio stars. Besides being a pianist, she is a composer, and has written a new light orchestral suite which will shortly be produced. She also composes ragtime! She has been church organist, violinist, and music hall artist, and in addition to her work, she finds time to travel in out-of-the way parts of the world.

Conductor at the Eisteddfod.

LISTENERS owe a very great deal to Sir Henry Walford Davies (whose picture is below), who is to conduct the choir of the Welsh National Eisteddfod, which will be relayed from Cardiff on August 7th. He has done much to popularize the broadcasting of good music, and is untiring in his efforts to do so. Besides conducting, he is a prolific composer, much of his music being of a sacred character.

Mr. JOHN GOSS (Tenor) is to broadcast from London on August 6th.

Pieces in the Programmes.

A Weekly Feature Conducted by Percy A. Scholes.

BACH'S SECOND ORCHESTRAL SUITE.

(LONDON, TUESDAY.)

THIS Suite is a first-rate example of Bach's straightforward cheeriness. It consists of seven separate little pieces, each of which goes right through, without ever lingering overlong to meditate, or ever rising to great excitement.

It is scored for one Flute and Strings.

I. OVERTURE. This starts with a Solemn section (the most serious part of the whole work), which leads without a break into a Quick "Fugue," i.e., a piece in which a certain fixed number of "parts" give out a tune in turn, and go on to discuss it. The Tune here seems to cry out to have words set to it. It is announced by FIRST VIOLINS and FLUTE (in unison); then SECOND VIOLINS answer, whilst the First Violins and Flute go on with something else. Violas and Bass enter in turn, and the rest of the Overture is a discussion of this theme, broken only to make way for the Flute to perform some graceful by-play.

II. RONDEAU (Quick). A Rondeau (or Rondo) is a piece in which one Tune constantly recurs, alternating with other passages.

III. SARABANDE—a stately dance, in two halves, each repeated.

IV. BOURREES I AND II. Each Bourrée is a lively dance, also in two repeated halves. In the second Bourrée the Flute comes quietly to the front. The First Bourrée is repeated after the Second.

V. POLONAISE—a graceful dance at a moderate pace (not the type of Polonaise known to many listeners through Chopin). A "Double" or Variation follows, in which the Flute becomes very agile. The Tune is now in the bass.

VI. MENUET. This is the earlier form of Menuet—in two repeated halves, like the other dance-pieces in this Suite.

VII. BADINERIE (i.e., "Pleasantry"). A significant fact about this Suite (significant as showing the composer's attitude in writing it) is that it ends with this irresponsible fragment.

DVORAK'S FOURTH SYMPHONY.

(LONDON, TUESDAY.)

Dvorak wrote five Symphonies. The Fifth, the well-known New World Symphony, was, when it appeared, full of novelty. Not so the fourth, a work which lasts little more than half-an-hour, and is, on the whole, light-hearted and straightforward.

Four separate movements make up the Symphony.

I. Quick and Vigorous. This is a highly organized Movement, with an abundance of tunes. Those who remember "Private Tommy Atkins" will no doubt notice his (unintentional) appearance.

II. Slow. A serious Tune is, at the beginning, given to Strings. Later we hear one of Dvorak's favourite tone-colours—a melody played by Oboe and Flute together. This melody is then carried on by a Solo Violin.

III. Fairly quick, graceful. This is a pleasant, dance-like little piece.

IV. Quick, but not too quick. The Finale starts off with a call in Trumpet alone. Then 'Cellos play the Main Tune. There is a good deal more material, but it is all fairly clear, and the Movement ends with a lively Coda.

SOME RUSSIAN PIECES.

(LONDON, TUESDAY.)

PRELUDE TO MOUSSORGSKY'S "KHO-VANTCHINA." Khovantchina was Moussorgsky's last opera—in fact, he died in 1875, leaving it incomplete, and it was finished by Rimsky-Korsakof. The internal struggles in Russia in the seventeenth century are the basis of its plot. The short Prelude represents daybreak over the Kremlin of Moscow. Presently one hears the bells ringing for matins.

THE FLIGHT OF THE BUMBLE BEE. The plot of Rimsky-Korsakof's Opera, The Fairy Tale of Tsar Saltan, is a Russian folk-story somewhat like Cinderella. The exiled Tsarevitch transforms himself into a bee and visits his father. The Flight of the Bumble Bee comes from the Second Act of the opera; the bee returns over the sea and flies round his beloved, who is just now in the form of a swan.

LIADOFF'S "MUSICAL BOX." This was originally a piano solo, but was later scored for a Piccolo, 2 Flutes, 3 Clarinets, Glockenspiel or Celesta and harp. It is a very realistic imitation of the humble instrument it represents.

MOZART'S COMEDY, "THE IMPRESARIO."

(LONDON, WEDNESDAY.)

The Impresario is a short work which Mozart modestly called "a Comedy with Music." It has only had occasional performances, owing chiefly to a good deal of foolish dialogue which it contains, and adaptations have been tried, with but little success. Yet it contains some music of Mozart at his very best, and some very good fun. Mr. Kingsley Lark has made a new translation and arrangement from the original German.

I give here a brief sketch of the plot, with some references to the music.

1. The OVERTURE is (considering the small size of the work as a whole) surprisingly long and complex, and it contains some of the loveliest fragments of melody Mozart ever wrote.

When the curtain rises, MR. HIGHBROW (Tenor), an impresario, is bemoaning the troubles of an aesthetically-minded theatrical manager. He sings an Air. To him comes BUFF (Bass), a Comedian, full of advice on how to run things. He sings a patter Song. These two agree, and sing a Duet. MR. GOLDBERG, a Banker, now enters, with offers of financial help, and attempts to gain favour for a prima donna in whom he is interested. That prima donna, MADAME TREBELLINI (Soprano), enters, and in a florid solo, shows off her powers.

But another prima donna, MADemoiselle SILVERBELL (Soprano) also comes in, and she, too, makes a great display. Discussion follows, and when the two prime donne are introduced to one another, active rivalry begins. A Trio is sung, in which the two women fire off astonishing vocal rockets, each insisting on having the principal part, while the manager vainly tries to conciliate them.

After the trio, Mr. Highbrow refuses to form any company at all. This causes general consternation, but eventually reconciliation. Mr. Goldberg gets a bottle of wine, and the proposing of toasts leads to a Grand Finale.

"RADIO TIMES" READING CASE.

Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd., have prepared a handsome case in red cloth with gilt lettering for "The Radio Times," complete with cord down the back to hold a copy of this publication. A pencil is indispensable to the listener during the course of the programme, and this is included conveniently in a slot at the side. Listeners should order this to-day from any News-agent. It is published at 2s. 6d., or send 4d. extra to cover postage for a case from the Publisher, "The Radio Times," 8-11, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C.2.

Radio in the Shetlands.

DEAR SIR,—I wish to let you know how we appreciate the excellent broadcast programmes which we receive nightly up here. My father and I are often asked by the different skippers of the herring fleet, which is now in Lerwick, as to the prospects of the weather, and we are able, thanks to the B.B.C., to tell them. This we appreciate very much, but still more do we appreciate the General News Bulletin, and the homely chimes of Big Ben. I always look forward to the excellent talks, and I find them most instructive.

You may be interested to know that I can get any station of the B.B.C. at any time, including most of the Relays.

Yours, etc.,

Lerwick, Shetland Islands. JOHN FAINT.

"The Vicar of Mirth."

DEAR SIR,—May I raise a strong protest against the inclusion in the programmes of the "Vicar of Mirth"?

It seems regrettable that the poor parson who has so much to contend with these days should be made a butt of by wireless—the same medium which now conveys the glad message throughout the world.

It is an insult to the clergy in general and to all true Christian people.

In appealing to the B.B.C. to remove this undesirable feature from their otherwise excellent and much appreciated programmes, I feel there are many who would express the same desire.

Yours, etc.,

Birmingham. HARRY R. DAVENPORT.

Nigerian Taste in Music.

DEAR SIR,—Apropos of the article in The Radio Times on "Nigerian Taste in Music," the following story may interest you.

A young friend of mine who had gone out to Nigeria, in the course of his business went up into the bush to interview a native chief. Business finished, the chief invited my friend to dinner, which was partaken of seated on the floor of the hut. The repast ended, the chief produced a gramophone, and the first record he placed on the disc was the song, "Ships That Pass in the Night," sung by Miss Phyllis Lett.

It was an odd coincidence, seeing that my friend knew both the song and its composer in far-away England. As this song is frequently sung in one or other of the broadcasting stations, the story may be interesting to many of your listeners, as well as bearing upon "Nigerian Taste in Music."

Yours, etc.,

T. WILKINSON STEPHENSON (Canon),

Addingham Vicarage, Carlisle.

The Spirit of Youth.

DEAR SIR,—I have a friend, a clergyman, who deplores the fact that he erred in the date of his birth. He was born, he says, when children were thought nothing of, and now that he is in the "sere and yellow leaf," children are everything. Wireless has done much to re-adjust the balance. While on its technical side it is a supreme joy to youth, the results obtained through the marvellous invention are the happiness of those who have passed life's meridian.

When I listen to talks to the children, I need not to pray, "Make me a child again just for to-night," as the spirit of youth at once takes possession of me. I shall confidently expect to find a present under the sofa when my next birthday comes round!

When I muse on the achievements of wireless, any critical faculties I may possess are mute.

Yours, etc.,

Ventnor, I.O.W. (Rev.) W. MELVILLE HARRIS.

"Shanty" or "Chanty"?

DEAR SIR,—With reference to Mr. T. H. Thompson's letter in The Radio Times, I should like to point out that the word "shanties" has nothing whatever to do with "chant," being derived from quite a different source—namely, the word "shanty," as the Negro huts on the Southern plantations of America were called.

The first sailing ships that were ever built with speed instead of carrying capacity as the chief desideratum, were the Baltimore clippers, and aboard them were found a large percentage of Negroes, and it was from them that the first shanties originated.

As time went on, and such firms as Hall, of Aberdeen, Green, of Blackwall, Pile, of Sunderland, Scott and Steele, of Greenock, and many others began to build ships that soon out-classed, in every way, the American clippers, new sea songs came into being, and the old Negro name of "shanty" was still retained.

With the advent of steam, these shanties gradually disappeared, and were it not for Sir Richard Terry, Captain Whall and others, who have collected and preserved them, they would have sunk into oblivion along with those famous sailing ships which have now, alas! departed from the seas, taking with them that high art called seamanship, the romance and charm of sea life.

Yours, etc.,

H. J. BERRY.

A Word to the "Growlers."

DEAR SIR,—I have taken The Radio Times since the first publication, and have been most amused at the weekly growls from readers. I find that the majority are from people who live next door to a B.B.C. station, and have, in addition, theatres and cinemas all round. We here—and there are thousands in the same position all over the country—have nothing else but broadcasting. We are three miles from the nearest cinema, and an additional four by water from the nearest theatre, to which only once a week are we able to go to an evening performance with a three-mile walk after at midnight.

I wonder how many of the growlers would have been content to listen to London Station on a crystal at sixty miles' range? Yet, before Bournemouth opened, we had to do so, and were pleased at the change. I have now a four-valve set, and if one programme appeals more than another, I go for it, and I suggest that the growlers should do likewise.

One thing only I would like improved—that is, let the 10.0 p.m. time signal and second weather report be S.B. on time and always. We who live so far from reliable public clocks depend on this.

Yours, etc.,

Nettlestone, I. of W.

"VECTIS."

Is North Wales Neglected?

DEAR SIR,—North Wales is probably the most neglected district in these isles, from a wireless point of view. Our nearest stations are: Liverpool (relay), Swansea (relay), and Manchester. Three valves won't get us the former two, and barely give us Manchester at "junior loud speaker" strength. Cardiff is hopeless more often than not.

These stations at intervals send out Welsh items, but they are practically out of the reach of the district most capable of enjoying them. Owing to the need for multi-valve sets here, our hobby is an expensive one; so maybe the B.B.C. will humour us by giving us an occasional Welsh item from the High-Power Station? This is the only station worth our while to listen for.

Yours, etc.,

Portmadoc.

Facing the Enemy.

A Wireless Village Comedy. By Jane Barrington.

WE move slowly in our village, preferring to see other people stumble over the first stones. That explains why we were still inordinately excited about the gramophone when news of the wireless madness first burst upon our ears. We scoffed!

"Just a craze," we said, "it can't last." And we threw ourselves anew, with almost frenzied enthusiasm, into our innocent orgies.

We bought new records and yet more records. We lived in a constant whirl of gramophone soirées, listening with ill-concealed envy to the latest trophies of our neighbours and making mental notes of inevitable additions to our own library.

No mention was made of the new invention—the wireless scourge, beneath which the rest of the country lay prostrate. And then the bomb fell in the most unexpected quarter. Miss Biccup, gentlest and most retiring of all our spinsters, went away for her summer holiday. Three days after her return, a carpenter, bearing on his cart a long, straight pole, was seen to stop outside her gate.

An hour later he was observed to be fixing up the pole at the end of the Biccup garden. When wires appeared, a shudder ran through the entire village.

Now, Miss Biccup, I should have stated, lived next door to the Hogbin family, but being possessed of greater wealth, her L-shaped garden enclosed their small back-yard.

To Mr. Hogbin, therefore, returning hot and weary from the daily Marathon to his seat of business, appeared the horrible apparition of wires crossing his cherished domain from the top of a tall pole standing at the far corner of Miss Biccup's garden. He stared again, but the wires were still there. Speechless with amazement and livid with fury, he cast one withering glance at the Biccup mansion and then retreated into his own citadel.

But the day was not over yet for the Hogbins or Miss Biccup. Late that evening there came a ring at my bell and Miss Biccup was shown in, pale and tearful, holding in her hand a letter.

"You mustn't be cross," she faltered, "but I had to come and see someone. Mr. Hogbin has written me this, and I'm sure I don't know what to do."

I made her sit down with her absurd feet propped up on a hassock to support her trembling legs while I read the document she handed me.

"Madam (it'ran).—I am amazed to see that you have put up an aerial in your garden. You can, of course, please yourself about this disgraceful invention which is solely responsible for the bad weather we are having, but you cannot make use of my garden for it. Your wires cross my garden and thereby restrict the free air to which my children are entitled. I don't like it and I'm not going to have it. You will please remove the offensive object at once, or I shall be compelled to take other steps.—Yours faithfully, JOSEPH HOGGIN."

"What steps does he mean?" whispered Miss Biccup, her little face quite grey with fright.

"I don't expect he means anything," I answered reassuringly; "but you could put the pole somewhere else, couldn't you?"

"No, I can't," she said. "You see, it has to be a certain distance away from the house, and there's no other place. Oh, dear, what am I to do?"

But the matter did not end there. The next day found Miss Biccup, still tearful, but resolute. She would go to see her brother. She went and came back strengthened. Apparently, she had persuaded him to take the matter into his own hands, for one half of the famous Hogbin-Biccup correspondence was obviously dictated by him.

The controversy spread. Apart from the keen partisan interest, there was the fascinating legal question of Mr. Hogbin's right over the air above his garden. Had he bought the sky as well as the soil? Could he claim damages for trespass? Was Miss Biccup going to sue him for interference with her rights?

In the meantime, the gramophone enthusiasm seemed to wane. People were seen to look furtively at the daily B.B.C. programmes, and even to ask roundabout questions regarding crystals and other mysteries. Was the wind changing? We began to wonder.

And then suddenly one evening Miss Biccup was seen to enter the enemy territory. She remained behind the lines for twenty-seven minutes—(we know the exact time from Mr. Wicks, who lives opposite).

Then she emerged in the company of Mr. Hogbin, who escorted her to her gate with every sign of deference and gallant good humour.

The next morning a second aerial was seen to be attached to Miss Biccup's pole.

And now some of us have heard Brussels and are hoping to catch South Africa.

Shakespeare and Daventry.

THIS is not the first time that Daventry—or Dane-tree—has appeared in the annals of history. Its previous appearances have been in connection with events of a warlike nature. By some it is claimed that its very name—Dane-tree—goes back to the times of the Danes—that their forces encamped on Borough Hill—that earthworks were thrown up to defend the hill, and legend has it that a lone tree on Borough Hill was planted by the Danish Forces to mark the site of the tumuli of their dead. This tree and the tumuli and earthworks form part of the site acquired by the B.B.C. for the new High-Power Station.

Nor is this the only claim Daventry has on the historian. There is antiquity about its charter; the original seal of the Borough is dated 1595.

References to the Borough are made by Shakespeare. In Henry IV., Act IV., Scene 2, we find reference to:—

"the red-nosed Inn-keeper of Daintry."

Further, in Henry VI., Part III., Act V., Scene 1, there are these words:—

"Where is the post that came from Montagu
"By this at Daintry with a puissant troop?"

It is interesting to note the spelling used by Shakespeare. That on the seal of the Borough is Danetre—the full inscription being Sigillum Comune Burgi de Danetre N.S. 1595.

The local antiquarian (Mr. William Edgar) in his book, "Borough Hill and its History," claims that Borough Hill Camp probably is the third largest of the species of Fortress on Hill tops with artificial defences following the natural line of the hill.

In more recent times, Borough Hill played its part in the Civil Wars. Charles I. after his success at Leicester, led his army to Daventry where he stayed so six days and engaged in the chase, and the finishing touches to the King's overthrow were made at Naseby, nearby, on June 14th, 1641.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER. NEWS FROM THE AUNTS AND UNCLES.

Should Girls Play Cricket?

THE debate by members of the Liverpool Radio Circle on the question whether girls should play cricket, which was held in the 'Teens' Corner the other day, aroused considerable interest and brought in a large number of votes. There was a majority of fifteen in favour of girls playing cricket.

Uncle Toby was not permitted to speak, as his sympathy with the opposition was too well known; but he was delighted at being allowed to deliver his epigram that "Girls will cease to play cricket when they put their hair up once more."

A New Competition.

The Children's competitions at Glasgow have always been popular, but the other day the tables were turned, and a niece arranged a competition for the Uncles and Aunties, and has offered a prize of a tea-cloth for the Studio teatray. The lucky winner is to be the Uncle or Auntie who collects the largest sum of money in a fixed period for the fund for installing wireless sets in children's hospitals.

This, of course, is to be done by enlisting new members for the "Radio Circle." Needless to say, with such a splendid object in view, the competitors are very enthusiastic about winning that tea-cloth.

A Jolly Picnic.

The "2ZY" Radio Circle Picnic will be held on Tuesday, August 11th, in the grounds of Springwood Hall, Compstall, near Romiley, kindly lent by Mr. and Mrs. W. Norquoy. Tickets for children from seven to sixteen years are 6d. each; for those over sixteen and under eighteen, 1s. each. The number has had to be limited to three hundred.

There will be all kinds of races, tennis, cricket, clock golf, and lots of other amusements. Children will meet at London Road Station, Manchester, at 12.45 p.m. prompt, and will arrive back at the same station at 8.0 p.m. Don't be late, as trains don't wait for late comers!

Back From the Army.

The Hull Kiddies will be pleased to know that Uncle Reggie, bronzed and lean, has returned from his soldiering in Wales. Uncle Reggie rigged up a wireless set for the soldiers, but we doubt if he was able to listen to the Hull Children's Corner. He is full of Welsh mountain stories, and everybody is on tip-toe in anticipation of Billy's renewed wanderings.

For Lovers of Poetry.

Great interest has been aroused in Auntie Jean's Verse Speaking Choir as a result of their broadcast recently from Dundee. Many more members of the "'2DE' Happy Radio Circle" are to rally round when the rehearsals are resumed for the winter in the beginning of September.

Adventures in Fairy Land.

Mrs. Jones, the charlady of Birmingham, has been lately experiencing some extraordinary adventures in Fairy Land, having accidentally found her way through the Invisible Door (always open in the studio).

At first she did not believe in fairies, so Godmother turned her into a Princess, but although looking exactly like a Fairy Book Princess, she was still only Mrs. Jones, and when she was carried off by the Troll of the Underworld, she began to find that adventures were not always like a Saturday afternoon charabanc outing.

Chats On Scottish History.

It has long been a standing complaint among Scottish parents that the history of Scotland has been neglected in schools and other institutions, more attention being paid to the history of England and even Europe.

There is a great deal of interesting material in Scottish history with a large admixture of adventure and romance, and it has now been arranged to broadcast a short chat for fifteen minutes once a week during the Children's Corner on the history of Scotland, beginning from the days of Queen Margaret.

This is being conducted in a popular manner by Auntie Molly of the Edinburgh Station.

"Circling The Sixpence."

At best, I didn't invent it; it just came (writes Uncle Felix, of Cardiff). It is a simple affair; a de luxe outfit costs only 7d., whilst a cheap set can be made of two buttons.

Perhaps you would like to know something of the origin of the Great Craze. It was in this way. One day, when I was meditating at my table on some tremendous problem—something, I think, to do with the purchase of a car with four-wheel brakes for the price of a free-wheel bicycle—I absent-mindedly took a penny from my pocket, and with it came out a sixpence. The problem was still unsolved. And whilst turning it over again in my mind, my hands began to reflect the same process by turning the penny—the sixpence having been replaced for safety.

The penny began to spin on the table. Unconsciously perhaps, I repeated the movement again and again, each time making the penny—in keeping with my thoughts—spin more furiously. Once it flung itself, still spinning, across the table, to disappear round a rosebowl and return miraculously on the other side of it, finishing with a graceful circle. The Great Game was born!

My skill increased, and scorning such a huge target as a bowl, I produced my sixpence. This time the task was not so easy. I found that I could spin round the sixpence seven times in a round of a dozen shots at a range of one foot. But I was not satisfied. Nor will you be, if ever you make a start. You will try to improve your form. You will challenge your friends. You will find that you play best on your home ground, especially if you happen to know which way the table slopes. You can even extend the game by letting all competitors shoot together and obstruct each other's pennies. Anyway, it is a game that is well worth playing.

MAGIC!

By CLARENCE WINCHESTER.

Cat's Whisker tickled Mr. Crystal.

A VERY funny thing happened the other night when most little boys and girls were safely tucked up in bed. The London Station was closed, as were all the others, and all the Aunties and Uncles had gone home after their day's work.

In most homes, everything was still and quiet. But in one home (perhaps it was yours, or it may have been mine) there were jolly goings-on, although no grown-up nor any little boy or girl knew anything of what was happening at the time. It was only next morning that I was told anything about it; but even I mustn't tell who of the party gave the secret away.

You see, the Wireless Set got very tired of being turned on and off like a water-tap and it was very glad when the programmes came to an end. Mr. Crystal was the first to make a move,

"I don't like being tickled so much by that wretched Cat's Whisker," said he, "so I'm off out for the night." And, as if by magic, he sprouted little arms and legs and unfixed himself from the Set.

"Don't be rude!" cried young Cat's Whisker. "You know I've got to do my job! If I didn't tickle you, how would Johnnie Smith, of Tooting Bee, know that there was a birthday present under his pillow?"

"Oh, all right," replied Mr. Crystal, "don't be catty! You'd better come out for the night, too. And let's ask the brothers Head Phones—you know, those fellows with the big ears."

At this, the Head Phones awakened. Said one: "We'll come. We're both tired of sitting on people's heads and having music pumped through us. But what about Mrs. Loudspeaker and the three Valves of the other Set? They'd better join us, hadn't they?"

"Oh, yes, we'll join you," said the Valves. "We'll light ourselves up so that you can all see where you're going."

"And as for me," bellowed Mrs. Loudspeaker, "I'll keep you all in order."

So the Valves lighted themselves up, and there was a pleasant glow in the room, which may have been yours, or may have been mine. It must have been very funny to see the happy family of the Wireless Set for once enjoying their freedom.

"Why can't you meow like a cat?" asked Mr. Crystal of Cat's Whisker. "I'm sure we'd like to hear you sing."

"The only people here who are allowed to sing" put in Mrs. Loudspeaker, "are myself and the brothers Head Phones—and I can sing the loudest!"

The three of them began to sing "Three Blind Mice," while Cat's Whisker tickled Mr. Crystal so much that he fell off the table and nearly rolled down a crack in the polished floor. He grew very angry indeed.

"Just keep your tickling to the proper time!" he yelled. "There's no broadcasting on now."

"Oh, isn't there?" sneered Mr. Crystal. "Just listen to Mrs. Loudspeaker! She's making a lot of noise."

"Well," spoke up the three Valves, "we'll give her less light. She can't do so well when we're dull."

True to their word, the Valves lowered their lights, and Mrs. Loudspeaker was forced to sing more quietly.

"That's a nasty trick," she said. "Never mind, we're a happy party, now that the Grown-ups are not playing with us. Let's dance, and I'll sing a waltz."

Mr. Crystal, having climbed on to the table again, actually took Cat's Whisker for his partner. Unfortunately, they quarrelled again—and fell into the flower-bowl!

But the dancing went on right through the night, and they didn't give up until they heard someone moving upstairs. Then they scuttled back to their right places, and once again the room was still and quiet. Five minutes later, a clock chimed seven, and a human voice said something about it's being time to get up!

As I said, that may have been in your house—or it may have been in mine. Who knows?

The Tragedy of Offenbach.

A Favourite Opera that He Never Lived to Hear.

FOR many years no composer was more prolific than Offenbach, the inventor of opéra bouffe. A rapid and indefatigable worker, he wrote in a quarter of a century more than ninety pieces, including Madame Favart, Orphée aux Enfers, and others more or less familiar in the broadcasting programmes.

"I have one terrible, invincible vice, that of always working," he wrote to a friend in 1864. "I am sorry for this on account of those who do not like my music, for I shall certainly die with a melody at the end of my pen."

Ill, But Frivolous.

His prediction was not far wrong. Subsequently, like Scott, he continued to write when under an attack of gout that would have entirely incapacitated an ordinary man, and nearly up to the moment of his death he was engaged on the Tales of Hoffmann, which he intended to be his monument.

This opera, so different from his other compositions, was his cherished work for years. It was characteristic of him, as well as of his general output, that on visiting his native city of Cologne, and on being asked at the hotel where he put up to comply with the police regulations, he wrote in the visitors' book, "O. de Cologne." He was by temperament, little as anybody would have suspected it from his appearance, gay and frivolous, and all, or nearly all, the other pieces he had written had like qualities. But in the Tales of Hoffmann he aspired to reach the heights of grand opera, and to furnish the lyric stage with a contribution that would survive long after his pot-boiling melodies were forgotten.

The Real Hoffmann.

The ambition thus to perpetuate his name seized him shortly after Hoffmann had been introduced to Parisian playgoers. He was a real, living person, a lawyer by profession, who composed many operas and corresponded with Beethoven and Weber. Partly through attempting to drown dull care in traditional fashion, he died in 1822 at Berlin, where he was interred in the Jerusalem Cemetery. His Tales were produced as a comedy at the Odéon Theatre, Paris, in 1851; and it was on this work that Offenbach resolved to compose an opera that should be his masterpiece.

By chance, another composer simultaneously came to the same determination and, consequently, there was a hitch at the outset; but eventually he agreed to leave the subject to Offenbach, who thus had a clear field. So much was he occupied with other work, however, that his magnum opus grew slowly, and it was not till the early part of 1880, when his health was failing rapidly, that arrangements could be made for its production.

When Hope Flattered.

His great fear then, as he was tortured more and more by gout, was that he would not live to see it represented.

"Make haste, make haste to stage my piece!" he cried to the manager of the house where it was to be produced. "I am in a hurry, and have only one wish in the world—to witness the première of this work."

At last, however, it seemed likely that that wish would be gratified, for one afternoon he was borne with great care to the theatre, and there he had the gratification of hearing Mlle. Isaac sing the "Song of the Turtle Dove." His face illumined with joy at the first strains of his beloved work, long the companion of his solitude, and now about to be performed before him in its entirety. Suddenly he became twenty years younger. There was a light in his eyes that many of his friends had never seen before, and they drew the happiest auguries from his brightness and juvenility.

But hope told a flattering tale. He was very ill on returning home, and when he re-visited the theatre on the afternoon of October 3rd, 1880, to see again the last act of his only grand opera, everybody was shocked at his appearance. Of a sudden, he raised his hand to his heart and fainted, and on the following morning he was dead—dead without having seen, after all, the first representation of his most ambitious and most cherished work.

This was taken into account in arranging his funeral, which was as he would probably have wished. At the Madeline, the organist played the "Song of Fortunio," and Jean Talazac sang an aria from the Tales of Hoffmann, and in the address at the graveside reference was made to Offenbach's toil on that and other compositions. "Adieu, Jacques Offenbach!" cried the orator.

"Tales of Hoffmann": The Barcarolle.

"Adieu, indefatigable worker! You taste to-day your first and last repose."

As the opera was left unfinished, it underwent various modifications before production. The famous Barcarolle, for instance, was originally in the fourth act, the scene of which was laid in Munich. This act was cut out, and, to retain the barcarolle, a few words were put into the mouth of Antonia.

A Chapter of Accidents.

The opera, which was orchestrated after Offenbach's death, was produced at the Opéra-Comique on February 10th, 1881, and was a great success. It was then staged at Vienna, on December 8th, 1881, and again it was associated with tragedy. Shortly after the curtain had been raised, a fire broke out in the theatre, resulting in the loss of no fewer than four hundred lives.

Next came, at Berlin, a production which was in every way successful; but disaster once more attended the opera when it was represented in London. Played in German at the Adelphi Theatre, it nearly ruined the impresario, who lost £8,000 on it in six weeks. This was, however, an extremely hazardous enterprise.

Much more successful was the opera at His Majesty's, in 1910.

Since its unfortunate first representation, indeed, the Tales of Hoffmann has been given a good reception in this country, and, though it will probably never rival in popularity some of the old favourites, it will very likely gain more and more admirers as years roll on.

T. W. WILKINSON.

[Act. II. of "The Tales of Hoffmann" will be broadcast from Newcastle on August 8th.]

Atmospheric Facts.

Wonders of the Air We Breathe.

AFTER having enjoyed an evening's listening, perhaps you have never given a thought to the invisible medium—the atmosphere—through which the wireless waves have come. It is, however, a medium full of interest, apart altogether from the obvious fact that our very existence depends upon its presence.

The atmosphere belongs to the earth just as much as the oceans and mountains do, for it accompanies the earth quite as faithfully, not only in its journey round the sun, but also on that great journey towards an unknown goal in space, our sun itself being no more at rest than are all those other suns—the far distant stars.

The Earth's Blanket.

The atmosphere is a mixture of gases, chiefly nitrogen, oxygen, carbonic acid gas, and water vapour. Nitrogen forms more than three-quarters of the whole atmosphere, and oxygen about one-fifth. Carbonic acid gas is present in comparatively small quantities, but it is a very important constituent indeed, because it can prevent the loss of some of the heat which the earth gives off.

In fact, it is not too much to say that if this gas were increased in quantity, there would be a corresponding increase of temperature on the earth and, in the same way, if the quantity were reduced, there would be a corresponding reduction of temperature.

Water vapour, which is responsible for the rain and snow and other forms of precipitation, also acts as a blanket to the earth, and it also varies in quantity.

Glass From The Moon.

Wireless waves are not only propagated through these gases, but through various kinds of atmospheric impurities as well, such as tar, soot, dust swept by the wind from roads and fields; pollen, plant spores, and the microscopic remains of shooting-stars. Among these impurities, too, are spheres of clear glass so minute that quite two thousand could find room on a pin-head.

More of them are found in the air after a violent volcanic eruption; but it has been suggested that they may be of cosmic origin, that, in fact, they have come from the sun or the moon, or even comets, for it must be remembered that ages ago the moon, at least, was shaken to its very foundations by eruptions which have left their mark in the immense craters and cones and fissures which now cover its rugged surface.

"The Merry Dancers."

What is the depth of this vast ocean of air which daily and nightly is made vocal and harmonious through the instrumentality of wireless? Perhaps five hundred miles. It is certainly dense enough at an altitude of one hundred miles to cause meteors to glow with the resistance they encounter from it, and the aurora, or "Merry Dancers," can be seen at a height far above where the shooting-stars first become visible.

Many shooting-stars, it is interesting to note, are first seen in the neighbourhood of the ionised layer from which, there is reason to believe, wireless waves are reflected in long-distance signalling.

I have heard fears expressed that some day the earth may lose its atmosphere. Listeners, however, need not worry about the earth becoming as airless as the moon. If such an event should happen, it will be millions of years after they have enjoyed their last "broadcast."

JOSEPH H. ELGIE.

A City of Wonder and Fear.

Discoveries in an Unknown Land. By F. A. MITCHELL HEDGES.*

[Mr. Mitchell Hedges has recently returned from the interior of British Honduras, where he unearthed a wonderful buried city. His discoveries rival those that were made at the tomb of Tut-ank-hamen, and in the following talk he describes some of the marvels that he found.]

IN the interior of British Honduras we discovered ruins like a huge oven and enveloped in a thin smoke haze, after we had felled and fired the jungle in which they were completely buried. The night after the great burn, rain fell, and the next day we began the work of examining and excavating.

I will describe, as briefly as I can, these immense ruins. For approximately half a mile leading from the river, the ground is studded with innumerable burial mounds, which terminate at a large flat terrace, on the east and west of which, in the dim and distant past, stood temples. From here you descend the stone-faced side to a valley which appears to have been a communal burial ground, as it is covered with a large number of mounds, and it was from here we made a spectacular discovery.

A Wonderful Feat of Architecture.

We found, facing us, what perhaps is the greatest aboriginal stone structure on the American continent. The feat of building this gigantic edifice would seem to be unparalleled in the world's history, for millions of cut limestone blocks were employed, hewn from some unknown quarry, carried with immense labour and erected in perfect alignment, without any mortar, the architectural skill exhibited by this ancient civilization rivalling our best of to-day.

From the burial ground valley rose a wall or terrace and, climbing this, we came to the great building. It starts with a terrace 110 feet square and 25 feet high, the sides completely faced with stone; the northern end of the terrace terminates in a stone stairway, 20 feet high. On the top, and directly in the centre, is a roadway, originally paved with hard white cement and flanked with stone-faced pyramids. We have given the name to this roadway of the Via Sacra.

The World's Most Ghastly Jungle.

On the top of the stairway, and on either side of the road, stands a quadrangular substructure like a watch-tower, also faced with stone. Some distance beyond this, running directly across the Via Sacra, is a stone stairway five feet high, leading to a higher level platform, upon which are situated, on the east side, the two largest pyramids of the whole citadel, both approximately 100 feet in height, their other measurement being 87 feet long by 87 broad, and 99 feet by 66 feet respectively. These two pyramids are built of magnificent tooled blocks; they are not hollow or filled with rubble, but are really monolithic, being built of solid stone blocks right through. The whole of the terraces, pyramids, platforms, courtyards and plazas comprise one solid stone building. This single colossal structure covered eight acres.

There is no doubt that this great edifice was erected for the definite purpose of religious and other ceremonies and was never used residentially, except, perhaps, by the king and high priests.

From the tops of the pyramids there stretched out a wonderful view of the country. For over a thousand and more miles north-west lay the dreaded Peten bush, in vast areas, of which no white foot has ever yet penetrated. Adjoining, and actually part of, this unknown territory is the country wherein dwell the Lacadone Indians; while still north again of this tribe is the land of the Santa Cruz Indians, the most bloodthirsty race in the world, and into which country no man has ever yet been able to penetrate. To this day, its interior is a land of mystery, though awful and fearful are the legends and tales one hears of the bloodthirsty sacrifices and horrible atrocities committed by these morose, untamed and sullen people.

It is agreed that this is the most terrible and ghastly jungle in the world, both from the climatic point of view and the living horrors it contains.

A Fascinating Spectacle.

But, to return to the ruins. The Via Sacra terminated in a mighty stone stairway which, we were amazed to discover, led down to a gigantic amphitheatre.

At the bottom of the stairway on which we stood was a sunken arena originally covered with hard cement. It was bounded on the east and west by a series of flat-topped pyramidal structures and terraces, constructed of beautifully tooled stone blocks; while across the arena on the northern side and directly facing us rose a massive structure. First a stone stairway led to a broad terrace; behind this reared a wall of cut stone; then a second terrace. Again, there was a third wall to a third terrace; while higher up there was a similar fourth terrace, and, finally, the structure was flat topped.

It was a fascinating spectacle. What was this immense amphitheatre used for? Gladiatorial contests, religious ceremonies, or the terrible sacrifices of the Maya, when the victim was stretched on a convex stone, his chest struck open with a flint knife by the High Priest, and the heart, still pulsating, torn from the body by the High Priest and placed within the lips of their God of Death, while the body was then rolled down the side of the pyramid, whereupon, the whole of the spectators made one wild rush for the body, struggling and fighting to tear away and eat a fragment of the flesh, and thus earn the blessings of the awful Deity to whom the sacrifice was made.

Work was energetically proceeded with. We drove picadoes on trails north, south, east and west through the virgin jungle which we had not felled. This produced the evidence that ruins and burial mounds existed over 16 square miles. Beyond this, we still know nothing; all is wrapped in impenetrable mystery.

Discovered By Accident.

A mile from the main citadel, to the east, we uncovered a huge isolated pyramid and about the same distance to the west we discovered its counterpart. And then came, perhaps, what is the most stupendous discovery of all. It was during this work that we found that the great city of Lubaantun has actually been built on the top of a subterranean city beneath, and that this subterranean city undoubtedly is far more ancient than Lubaantun, holding a riddle even more inscrutable than the great citadel and amphitheatre we had cleared the jungle from.

The discovery of Lubaantun was largely by accident. Every step we have taken has added to the mystery of this great buried city and the finishing of our season's work had an equally dramatic and mysterious ending. It was no great time after we had started excavation work that our Indians came to us stating they had heard the processional music of the ancient Maya in the ruins. We laughed at their superstitious fears, but every man and woman solemnly averred that they had heard it. Then they came to us in fear, declaring that evil spirits were being released from the burial mounds we were excavating.

Was It Coincidence?

A few days later, for no apparent reason, some unknown and insidious disease broke out. Then came the first death. It is impossible to describe the unearthly, sinister atmosphere that settled on our camp. The mysterious disease spread, and the Indians were convinced that the malignant spirits were the cause. Five more Indians died during the week.

Shortly, we were left without a single worker. I myself was stricken down with malarial fever. Our work had to be abandoned, and we reached the coast.

It is safe to predict that when the dry season starts next year, work will again take place at the great buried city, when it may be confidently anticipated that fresh knowledge will be added to the present scientific knowledge of the Maya, probably the highest aboriginal civilization ever known.

"Teddy, your father wants you to come in at once to see what's wrong with the wireless set!"

"Big, Bad Bill" Ager

SCENE 3.

As things are getting dull we open the scene brightly with "Gloom, or the Old Grey Barn," and for the survivors our Juvenile Lead will burst into song for "One Golden Hour," after which our Soubrette makes a request—"Papa, Please Make John Behave"—this request being strongly supported by the Chorus.

THE QUARTET.

Interlude, "Moon of Waikiki" Bernard and Robinson

SCENE 4.

Our Comedienne, having returned from her holidays and compared notes with the Juvenile Lead, we learn a thing or two "When No One's Looking," which affects the Production Director to such an extent that he sings "I'm Going to See My Girl." Immediately after his departure we take a peep into the future—"Yes! I Don't Think!"—this being followed by a peep into the past—our Juvenile Lead telling us of "The Lost World."

THE QUARTET.

"Temple Bells" arr. M. Williams

SCENE 5.

To open our last scene we have our Soprano beseeching our Juvenile Lead to "Give Me a Thought Now and Then," and our Comedian, assisted by the Chorus, gets worked up with "Say, Say, Sadie," and in "Buying a House," one of our ladies becomes really boisterous; but our Soprano smoothes matters with "The Song of the Mill." Our Juvenile Lead in a moment of soliloquy makes a startling confession in the "Sea Hawk," and in case other members of the Company feel inclined to soliloquise, we induce the Quartet to conclude with "Poor Little Rich Girl."

Those tiny "pin-point" signals: pip-pip-pip-pip-pip-pip, which come over every night at 10 o'clock, must needs be transmitted in notes sharp and clear. The easiest way to charge your accumulator at home

—by means of the Balkite Battery Charger

First of all, you put the connecting plug of the Balkite Charger into the ordinary electric light socket.

Then connect the clips of the Charger to the terminals of the accumulator. Even if the clips are wrongly connected, no harm can be done.

Press the electric light switch and that's all! Isn't it simple?

The Balkite Battery Charger is one of the many items of the extensive Burndeft range, which includes everything for radio reception.

BURNDEFT
WIRELESS LIMITED

IF you have alternating current electric light supply, you can charge your accumulator at home easily and cheaply by using the Balkite Battery Charger. This simple Burndeft accessory is absolutely silent in operation. It has no valves or moving parts, there is nothing to adjust or get out of order, and it cannot deteriorate through use or disuse. The Charger needs no attention except the periodical addition of a little distilled water. It rectifies both half cycles of the alternating current. The charging rate being $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 amperes per hour, a 6-volt 50-amp. (actual) accumulator will be completely charged in about 20 hours at a cost of less than $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per hour, based on a cost of 6d. per unit. A large accumulator in regular use can be charged overnight once weekly.

Write for further particulars of the Balkite Battery Charger. It will save you money and ensure that your accumulator is always fully charged.

Balkite Battery Charger, without accumulator acid, for alternating current only:

No. 491.—200-240 volts, 50-60 cycles.

No. 492.—100-115 volts, 50-60 cycles.

Progress

A FEW months ago the House of Graham announced that there would be NO REDUCTION IN THE PRICES OF CURRENT AMPLION MODELS DURING 1925.

This intimation was not restrictive as regards improvements or the introduction of new models, and three modified midsummer types are now being placed upon the market, at the same prices.

They are the New Junior de Luxe A.R.114, Standard Dragon A.R.19, and Concert Model A.R.23.

A brief survey of the novel and exclusive details of construction will show the following points:

- (a) Larger capacity of sound conduit in the two latter types.
- (b) Increased substance of insulating bushes between ducts and trumpets, improving the non-resonating qualities.
- (c) Greater convenience and stronger assembly by the provision of a threaded metal termination to the Horn which now screws directly into the rubber bush without other attachments. The Horn itself follows the popular AMPLION design, but the leaves are united by metal ribs of crystalline finish, thereby affording exceptional rigidity and mechanical strength with an enhanced appearance.

The March of Progress

THE new B.T.H. R Valve, now reduced to 8/-, represents yet another stride in the march of progress. It is undoubtedly the finest valve in the bright emitter class.

Amongst the special features which contribute to the remarkable efficiency of the new B.T.H. R Valve are the following:—

HIGH VACUUM, ensuring silent working and long life.
LOW ANODE CURRENT, with consequent increase in life of H.T. Battery.

EXCEPTIONALLY LOW GRID CURRENT, ensuring excellent quality and volume, without distortion, even when the means of giving suitable grid bias are not available.

TIPLESS BULB, giving better appearance and reducing risk of accidental breakage.

If
To-morrow's Post brought YOU a
Cheque for £1,500

One day, just when you most need it, you will receive such a cheque (or a much larger one) if you adopt this most profitable and easily carried out scheme of the Sun of Canada. This great Company, with its £36,000,000 of Government-supervised assets, invites you to share its prosperity and so provide for your own later years and also immediately safeguard the financial interests of your family.

You want to be in a position to retire some day; you want to have capital at your command; you want to be sure that your later years will not be clouded by financial anxiety; you want to be sure that if anything happens to you, your family will not be in want. All this, and more, will be accomplished if you adopt this plan.

At an agreed date every deposit will be returned in full with great accumulated profits—a sum greatly in excess of anything you could hope to save in the ordinary way. Should you not live, your family will be saved from want, for a handsome cheque will at once be sent to them. Should you yourself be permanently incapacitated, and unable to earn a living, the Company will pay your deposits and also make you a generous monthly allowance until the capital amount is due.

In addition, you'll save a good amount in Income Tax each year.

That, briefly, is the plan. Thousands of men are adopting it—why not be one of them? It applies at any age and for any amount.

Illustration showing the horn of a Brown Loud Speaker being sprayed with enamel.

From first to last a wonderful Loud Speaker—

MANY people hearing the small Brown H.2 Loud Speaker are amazed at its volume. They think—quite naturally—because it is small in size that its volume is likely to be insufficient for a room of average size. On the contrary, by actual comparative test it is easy to prove that a small Brown Loud Speaker gives greater volume—and certainly incomparably better tone—than many other Loud Speakers twice its size.

The secret of its success lies in the tuned reed principle of reproduction used in conjunction with a cone shaped aluminium diaphragm.

When it is possible to buy a genuine Brown high-resistance Loud Speaker for as little as 50/- is it worth while to prejudice your enjoyment by purchasing one which cannot approach it either for volume or tonal purity?

Remember that from first to last the H.2 is manufactured under strict Brown supervision—the actual tests that it must pass before being released for issue are stringent and exacting. You may be sure that the one that you buy must have actually conformed to the Brown standard of richness of tone and adequate volume.

Some facts about Valve life

"I may say I have had a Cossor Detector Valve in use now for ten months, and to the best of my belief has given one thousand one hundred and forty-three hours reception, and I think everyone will have to admit that this valve is one of the best ever made."—H. G. PAULSON, Hope Road, Edale, via Sheffield.

"I wish to tell you how very pleased I am with your valves which give such satisfactory results. A valve I bought from you over a year ago is still going strong, though on occasions it has been used to test the units of my H.T. battery.

Last night, using a single reflex circuit, using the above-mentioned valve, I clearly received between 12.30 and 3 a.m. this morning part of the programmes from W.B.Z. and W.G.Y. This is the first time I have sat up to try and get America. I am delighted with my success, as I am only fifteen, and I attribute it to the Cossor Valve."—B. C. T. ALLEN, Ashford, King's Road, Sherbourne, Dorset.

"I bought two of your valves at the beginning of August, 1923, and after daily use I passed them over to a friend of mine a month ago, and he is getting absolutely perfect results from them. These valves have been constantly carried about in a case or pocket and on the carrier of a motor cycle, and have never since let me down. I should think that record is hard to beat."—HENRY M. COXBOY, 11 Hale End, Liverpool.

"Exactly a twelvemonth ago, I purchased two of your Cossor Valves, a P.1. and P.2., for use in a reflex circuit, the S.T.100.

They have been in use exactly 12 months at an average of six hours per night, Sundays included, until last night when the P.1. went out and will not light again. The 'Red Cap' is still on duty and functioning as well as ever.

I may add that I have the following Stations to their credit: all B.B.C. Stations, including Belfast, of course, Hull, Dundee, Swansea slag at good 'phone strength. Cardiff, Bournemouth, Newcastle, Chelmsford, at good loud speaker strength, and occasionally a few of the others, according to conditions prevailing at the time of reception. The total burning hours of your valves is as follows:—

6 hours per night (average).
42 " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " "
2,184 hours for the 12 months

Thanking you as the indirect cause of my having spent so many pleasant hours at such little cost."—W. M. JENKINS, 21 Brookland Terrace, Nantymoll, near Bridgend, Glam.

"It may interest you to know that I am still using a Cossor P.1., No. R264, which I bought in February, 1923.

It was used practically every evening for 13 months and has been used on an average about one evening a week since that time (by the evening I mean all the time the London Station has been broadcasting).

I used it as a detector last night and received W.G.Y. just audible off detector only, but quite good off detector and two L.F. The first stage of amplification is also a Cossor P.1., which I have had for over a year."—J. W. HARRIS, 12 Rapier Road, Wembley.

"I feel I should like you to know the result I am getting with Cossor Valves. I bought a P.1. just twelve months ago, and used it as a H.F. amplifier with crystal rectifier for about three months. I then converted it to a single valve and crystal dual and ran it like this until before last Christmas, when I bought another P.1. and converted the Set into the S.T.100 circuit.

As I use the Set at least 100 hours per month the first valve has given 1,200 hours' service already, and is still going strong, but I suppose I cannot expect it to last a great deal longer."—L. FELLOWS, Gunton, Watford.

"In the beginning of October, 1923, I built the S.T.100 circuit and purchased two of your valves. Since that time they have been in use practically every evening for about 2½ to 4 hours, say, on an average of at least 25 hours per week, and sometimes they have been used at other than broadcasting times for experimental purposes. This makes over 1,000 hours' work, with a 6-volt accumulator and over 100 volts on the plate. I have mentioned this fact to several of my radio friends and they have been very much surprised at the long life."—WALTER HARRIS, 3 L. Lane Street, Barnet.

"I have had in (practically) continuous use for nearly fifteen months (i.e. the customary 2 or 3 hours on most nights) two Cossor P.1. Valves which I am still using. Rightly or wrongly I am inclined to think their performance is exceptionally good at any rate, if not somewhat remarkable.

I shall be glad to know if the life mentioned has been equalled or beaten in ordinary use (not laboratory tests) to your knowledge."—W. CLEAR, "The Laurels," Clytha Park, Newport, Mon.

"I have noticed that in the issue of the 'Radio Times' several letters appear testifying to the excellence of Cossor Valves.

I should like to say that I have used a Set with two of your valves (P.1. and P.2.) since the beginning of last year. These valves have given me excellent results, and I am now having out of them (practically) 12 months' service."—HELEN, "134 Helens," 134 Helens, 134 Helens.

"In September, 1923, I purchased a P.1. Cossor Valve, and I am very glad to say that it has been in use ever since until the present time. The valve has been used for the purpose of receiving the B.B.C. programmes, and I am very glad to say that it is still in use, and is giving me a life of 16 months' service."—J. HARRIS, Stepney, London.

"In April, 1923, I purchased a Two-valve Set and Two-valve amplifier, each fitted with Cossor Valves. These have been in regular use ever since, averaging 12 hours weekly.

They perform as well now as at the start of their life, and as this is over 1,000 hours, it is really a wonderful career."—J. COCHRAN, 25 Sandford Avenue, Wood Green, N.

"Here in the New York programme included the songs 'Fair moon to thee, I sing,' from Sullivan's 'H.M.S. Pinafore, and 'If I built a world for you.' A lecture given by a University gentleman was also very distinct. The lecture was announced to begin at 8.15 (New York time) and was still proceeding when I retired to bed at 2 a.m.

I regard the foregoing as a rather remarkable achievement, being obtained with a one-valve home-made Set, and the valve a Cossor P.1. This valve I bought on May 19th last, and it has been in continual use daily since, and is still going strong."—H. S. JOHNSON, 18 Emery Street, Cambridge.

"I should just like to drop you a line to inform you that in June of 1923 I purchased two of your Bright Emitting Receiving Valves, and that both since had over 4 hours per day and about 12 hours on week-end—on one use and are still giving satisfaction.

For some time they were used as a transmitter with 6 v filaments, and 600 v plate passing about the aerial. (No valves). Such should I think, necessitate for only add my note of satisfied customer."—DON, 5, 5, 5, 5.

"Thinking it might be of interest to you, I should like to congratulate you on the quality and durability of your Bright Emitting Valves. I have had in use (on an average of 14 hours per week) for twelve months three of your valves (my Set being a three-valve one), and can say without doubt they are as good to-day as when I first purchased them on March 7th, 1924. I can without difficulty tune in all the British Stations and most of the Continental, and have picked up America direct with great clearness.

When I tell my friends the length of time I have had your valves in use, they can scarcely credit it, knowing the short length of life some other makes possess."—FRED. R. TORRELL, Richmond House, Old Tiverton Road, Exeter.

"I know that with the two valves using, seeing I missed a concert of them in August, January 17th, 1925.

"I am going strong and have tried a number of kinds of circuits, the but work well on all."—G. E. DAVENILL, 100, Streatham, S.W.

"In reference to the letters printed in the Radio Mail in 'Radio Times' on April 3rd, headed 'How long should Cossors last?' I think the valves I have in use now are the longest running Cossors I have ever known.

I purchased two from Mr. F. Mole, 107 Boundary Road, Leyton, in October, 1923. Same have been in use for 25 hours (at least) on a Three-valve Set per week, thus making the total working hours approximately 1,900 and same are still going strong. I have been experimenting with wireless for over four years, and this, I think, is beating all records."—H. J. MERRISON, 'The Linnet,' 4 Royston Avenue, South Chingford, E.4.

"In August, 1923, I bought one Cossor F.2. and two Cossor P.1. In April, 1924, I purchased another P.2. having made up a Four-valve Family Set.

I should estimate the three valves I first bought have done 1,800 hours, two of them still working excellently, not to say anything of the one I purchased last year. I should imagine for the life of a valve this is putting up a record."—W. D. URBAN, 9 Achilles Road, West Hampstead, N.W.6.

"With reference to your advert. in 'Popular Wireless' about the length of life a valve should give, I should like to point out the results I have received with two of your Cossor P.1. Valves which I use as a detector and L.F.

The Detector Valve, No. F 5471, which I bought twelve months ago has burnt over 2,000 hours, practically the whole of the broadcast hours during that period. The L.F. Valve, No. B 2698, has burnt just over 1,000 hours in six months.

I think the above particulars speak very highly indeed of the efficiency of the Cossor Valves."—P. SMITH, 35A Portland Street, Walsall, Staffs.

"I have noticed that in the current issue of the 'Radio Times' several letters appear testifying to the excellence of Cossor Valves.

I should like to state that on February 3rd, 1923, I purchased a Wireless Set with two P.1. Cossor Valves. These valves have been functioning excellently ever since, and I have now had well over 2,000 hours of use out of them. Is this a record (26 months)!"—LEONARD R. LEWIN, 'St. Helens,' 134 Ongar Road, Brentwood.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to you on a matter which I think will interest you. On March 7th, 1924, I purchased two ordinary P.1. Bright Emitters from a local dealer and they have been in constant use (7 days per week) the whole twelve months, and now they are as good as new."—E. T. BLACKHALL, 3 Langate Square, Rye, Sussex.

"About this time a year ago, I purchased a Cossor High Frequency Valve without any advice, for I had sought none, but merely owing to the outstanding reputation of your firm. I feel that it is my duty to inform you of some of the excellent results which I have obtained from the above-mentioned valve. Employing the usual one-valve detector circuit, I have received concerts from every Station of the B.B.C. in Great Britain at almost loud speaker strength, and absolutely free from any trace of distortion."—C. A. FILLINGO, 163 Ramaden Road, Balham, S.W.12.

For some time they were used on a transmitter with 6 volts full on the filaments, and 600 A.C. volts on the plate passing about 3 to 5 amps in the aerial. (No effect whatever on valves). Such a severe test as this should I think be sufficient recommendation for anybody, and I can only add my name to your large list of satisfied customers."—L. H. FROSTON, 38 Treviso Road, Wimbledon, S.W.20.

"In July, 1923, I bought one of your P.1. Valves which has been used ever since in a one-valve Dual Set.

According to my log, same had up to last November completed 1,500 hours use, and since that time has been used as a stage of L.F. your P.2. taking its place, and is still giving full amplification.

On this one valve I had logged just over 100 telephony stations, including seven American."—C. R. POWERS, 11 Woolcott Street, Redland, Bristol.
