By CLEMENCE DANE. Illustrated by Howard K. Elcock.

[Miss Clemence Dane is one of the wittiest and most original of present-day women writers. Her plays include 'The Way Things Happen' and 'Will Shakespeare.' In the following article Miss Dane develops a fascinating theory of her own—that Shakespeare foresaw the coming of wireless!]

ALL the arts and all the crafts have their patron saints, gods or muses. Should not, then, the late-come art and craft called Wireless have its patron and president genius also? I have my theory as to who the godling is. I'm not given to theories as a rule; but I sat beside an ardent Baconian at dinner yesterday and have caught the infection from him.

A Baconian is a man who spends his life proving that Will Shakespeare was a fraud, though, to my thinking, having proved it, he gains nothing, for the plays may have been dictated by the angel Moroni for all I care, so long as I possess them. But some people, it seems, care dreadfully. Will Shakespeare to them is as false a god as was Dagon to the Jews, and they would topple over his bust in Stratford Church to-morrow if they could get in out of hours. I don't hate them for their zeal. Some people enjoy toppling Dagon down, and perhaps it does little harm, for by the time a hero has been first deified and then petrified into an image with breakable hands and feet, his use is gone; and by the time the memory of a man called Shakespeare has petrified into an ugly bust in a church, it is time to stir up theories and ask questions about the man whom the bust purports to represent, even if it involves finding out that he began his name with BA instead of SHA.

If calling Shakespeare Bacon made everybody in England go to see the plays whenever and wherever they were performed, what a good thing it would be if the theory of the Baconians proved true! For you do not alter the personality that wrote the plays and that is still alive in the plays by changing its name from Shakespeare to Bacon.

If the latest enterprising manager labels his new production 'Hamlet, by F. Bacon,' I shall go to see it with no less interest because I believe in my heart that our national playwright was called Will Shakespeare and lived in a country town and married a scold and ran away from her, and learnt his job of writing through doing a hundred jobs by way of earning his living, and made his name and his fortune, and at fifty broke his wand like Prospero, and came home to his little town and his foolish wife to die.

But then I am not a person with a theory; or, at least, I wasn't till I met my Baconian, who—so heady an elixir can a proper theory be—did not only prove to me that Bacon was Shakespeare and Shakespeare a rascal; but proved to me also (until I shook myself loose of his bewildering array of queer facts and considered the matter calmly in the chill common-sense of a third-class Southern railway carriage at midnight) that Francis Bacon, author of the essays at any rate, and a few trifling masterpieces in the drama line possibly, was also heir-apparent to the throne of England, being born in wedlock of—Queen Elizabeth! And that was the heart of Hamlet's mystery!

Well, well!

But the theory about Queen Elizabeth's married life is certainly intriguing, though it was not the first scandal about her that has come my way. I have a friend who wants to write a book proving beyond any possible shadow of doubt that Queen Elizabeth was a man! I have another friend who is convinced that the Beast of Revelations is the Kaiser; and another who orders life in the realization that the Last Judgment happened two thousand years ago, and that we, if we only knew it, are already in Purgatory working out our sentences. Now that's a fascinating theory!

Take it by and large, theorists brighten life for you; they pleasantly replace the fabulists of an earlier age. I like to have it proved to me with maps and genealogies that I, a born Englishwoman, am really a member of one of the Ten Lost Tribes. I adore books that locate Atlantis for me, and prove that the Ark of the Covenant was stolen away by the son of Sheba and Solomon and brought to Abyssinia. Some day someone will come along with a lost sailor's buried map of the Fortunate Isles and a scheme for chartering a ship and sailing there next Monday; and I shall put all my money into the venture and get taken along, and write no more articles till the coming of the Cocqigrus.

For, indeed, a man with a theory is the most difficult of all human beings to resist; he is the Pied Piper calling all grown-up children to come along and dance; and it is no use reminding us, with the tune in our ears, that he was notoriously a man who had no sense and that his fiddle cost one-and-sixpence only!

For a man with a theory isn't so much a man with a bee in his bonnet as a man with a butterfly in his brain, an exquisite winged creature—Psyche, no less. And, apart from the fact that a man with a theory is a man happy, with a treasure in his grasp, where you and I put up our empty hands to hide a yawn, it is obvious that theories keep the world on the move.

But to turn to my own theory—do listen to it! It's about the origin of Wireless—and I got it out of The Tempest. Shakespeare and the Bible are gold mines: you can prove anything out of one and everything out of the other. My copy of The Tempest is a brand new one that has been illustrated by Arthur Rackham, whose pictures are as delightful as those which he once made to accompany The Midsummer Night's Dream, especially one phantasy of fairies' heads growing on boughs like flowers, and singing away like so many larks, bodiless and tuneful. Over against it is written:—

The isle is full of noises!

One had the curiousest feeling, as Alice would say, that the phrase described something familiar; but can there be such a place in the workaday world as this island of music? There certainly wasn't in Shakespeare's time; and yet—'This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.' 'Why, of course!' said I; 'Shakespeare or Bacon or whoever he was, is asleep and dreaming of the Isle of England "When Wireless Comes"!'

It is at first a disturbed dream, for the 'blue-eyed hag' who bewitched his waking hours has left her mark upon it. Her heir, the heir of all passions of the flesh, is the unenlightened flesh itself—Caliban the natural man, Caliban the Mob—that Mob which the playwright hated as Coriolanus hated it; that Mob which, all his life nevertheless, he taught 'each hour one thing or other—

When thou didst not, savage,
Know thy own meaning, but wouldst gabble like

A thing most brutish, I endowed thy purposes
With words that made them known.'

That mob spirit is, he finds, still alive in the Fortunate Isle of his dream—an Isle which, though he gives it no name, he makes recognizable to us by a hundred touches as our own England. From the 'cowslip bell' where Ariel lies to the phantom hounds, Fury, Mountain, Silver, the 'turfy mountains where live nibbling sheep,' and the 'sun-burnt sickle men, of August weary,' all is pure English; and, so far, little in the dream is new. The first marked change is the landing of a creature rare enough in Shakespeare's day. Listen to the Elizabethan H. G. Wells, Gonzalo the socialist:—

Had I plantation of this Isle, my lord,
And were the king on't, what would I do? . . .
I' the commonwealth I would by contraries
Execute all things; for no kind of traffic
Would I admit: no name of magistrate;
Letters should not be known; riches, poverty,
And use of service, none; . . .
No occupation; all men idle, all;
And women too, but innocent and pure;
No sovereignty; . . .
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have; . . .

Is there anything that the playwright didn't know? With what truthful cruelty does he write down for us what happens even in a Fortunate Isle when Caliban tries to put into practice Gonzalo's vision. The dream's very fabric is shaken by Mob's drunken stamp:—

No more dams I'll make for fish;
Nor fetch in firing
At requiring;
Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish;
'Ban, 'Ban, Ca Caliban,
Has a new master; get a new man.
Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom, hey-day, freedom!

But every century, you say, has its reformer and its mob. Why toy with the theory that Shakespeare in The Tempest is dreaming of ours? Why, because he dates his dream for us most carefully.

The isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not;
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears, and sometimes voices—

declares Caliban, and we believe him. Cannot we hear the same sort of 'noises' at any hour we please? Do not we address our wireless sets in the very spirit of Prospero commanding Ariel?—'Do not approach till thou dost hear me call!' But when, on a Sunday evening, we signify our wishes by the movement of a hand, is it not at once a case of—'Enter Ariel, invisible, playing solemn music!?' Do we not cry sometimes with the bedevilled sailors, 'A plague upon this howling!?' Has it not occurred to us that—

We were dead of sleep . . .
. . . but even now with strange and terrible noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And more diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awaked—

to discover that some ingenious young housemate is endeavouring to listen to Prague and Bournemouth at the same moment? Surely, surely, Shakespeare's dream island is uncommonly like our England since the Wireless came!

But enough of fancies! I have always believed that the true Shakespeare wrote in The Tempest his farewell to his own genius, and I still believe it. But it is none the less pleasant to work out the theory that the composite playwright of the theorists foretold in the same pages a new England, filled with the magic that we call science. At any rate that playwright has provided the new craft with a patron saint!

Let Greek Apollo and sweet Saint Cecilia dispute with old Jubal for the patronage of music! Let Thalia share rule with Calliope in the theatre; while the Kinema invokes Hermes the swift-heeled! These are but foreign gods. The patron of Wireless shall be none other than Shakespeare's child—our English Ariel.

London and Daventry News and Notes.

AMONG the improvements in the programmes which will be introduced during the New Year is the strengthening of the Saturday afternoon transmission. It is realized that next to Sunday, the wireless audience is larger on Saturday afternoon than on any day of the week, so that the strengthening of the programmes on this day will meet with general approval. A concert of orchestral music between 3 and 5 p.m. on Saturday, January 15, has been framed on these lines.

A particularly interesting programme, entitled 'The Seven Ages of Mechanical Music,' will be given between 10 and 10.30 p.m. on Thursday, January 13. It has been arranged by Mr. L. de Giberne Sieveking, who will show by appropriate and illustrated dialogue the development of this form of music from the seventeenth century to the present time. Examples will be given on many forms of instruments, from the musical snuff-box to the latest type of mechanical pianos, and that the steam circus organ, so popular round about 1900, will not be included is only because the size of the studio doors will not permit its entry.

Sir John Martin-Harvey is to play the title-rôle in Rouget de l'Isle, the playlet that he has made so popular, and which he is himself producing at the London Studio on Monday, January 10. Lady Martin-Harvey (Nina de Silva) will be in the cast. The musical portions will be performed by the Wireless Chorus and Orchestra.

Part of the annual concert of the Featherstone Road Boys' School, Southall, is to be broadcast between 7.45 and 8.15 p.m. on Monday, January 10. The school—an elementary one—has 600 scholars, 425 of whom form the choir which sings unison two, three and four part-songs.

A feature of the programmes in the New Year will be the introduction of variety items on an even more extended scale than hitherto. There is no doubt that variety is an exceedingly popular part of the programmes, as is shown by the correspondence on those occasions when Daventry listeners are given an alternative programme when variety is broadcast from London. To obviate this it has been decided, so far as possible, that the same artists will broadcast from both stations on different nights when circumstances do not permit of one programme being given from both stations. An instance of this will be found on Tuesday, January 4, when items by Mr. Geoffrey Gwyther (syncopated numbers at the piano), Clapham and Dwyer (cross-talk comedians) and Miss Doris Palmer (character comedienne) will be broadcast from Daventry, and again from London, on Thursday, January 6.

A production of the little plays of St. Francis of Assisi by students of the British Society of Franciscan Studies of the London University will form part of the afternoon programme on Sunday, January 9. The plays are by Laurence Housman and the incidental music by Rutland Boughton.

One of the most successful features introduced in this year's wireless programmes has been the classical recital which originally took place at 7.25 p.m. every weeknight, and which was usually broadcast from most stations. In these recitals many standard works have been given complete, affording an unique opportunity to music-lovers, whether piano students or otherwise, to hear them. One could mention the complete '48' Preludes and Fugues by Bach, the Sonatas by Mozart and Haydn, the Studies by Chopin, and his Waltzes, Scherzos, Nocturnes, Sonatas, and Ballades, all of which have been given. Much music by old English and other composers, Schubert and Schumann, and Brahms, have been included, and later many of the standard songs of the world. In September, the feature was moved to 9.45 p.m., owing to its widespread popularity.

It is now felt, however, that listeners are so interested in this series that it has been reorganized for the New Year into two distinct recitals for each weeknight. The first will form a steady stream of exclusively classical keyboard music (e.g., Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, etc.), which will continue uninterrupted at 7.15 p.m. throughout the week. At 8.45 a later recital, somewhat on the lines of the present 9.45 recitals, will be introduced, but in it the entertainment aspect, rather than the educational, will be stressed. Works will not be given merely because of their continuity as opus numbers, for instance; but the question of their attractiveness to the average listener will be considered. The series will include piano music, particularly of the romantic schools; for example, a large amount of fine piano music by Russian composers, all of which is attractive, but much of which is not given at general recitals. Further programmes of Brahms', Schumann's, Wolf's, and Grieg's lovely songs will be included. Details will be published in The Radio Times from time to time.

Mr. Stuart Robertson, the well-known bass, who is sailing to Australia on January 22 to take part in Dame Nellie Melba's farewell tour of her native land, will give a twenty minutes' recital at 9.30 from the London Studio on Friday, January 21.

A performance of Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise is to be relayed from Norwich Cathedral at 8.15 p.m. on Thursday, January 13. It will be given by the Cathedral Nave Choir, augmented to 150 voices, and the Norwich Municipal Orchestra. The soloists are Miss Dorothy Horton, Miss Evelyn Aitken (soprano), and Mr. A. J. Willink (tenor). Mr. E. G. Coombs will be at the organ, and Mr. R. J. Maddern Williams will conduct. Later, on the same evening, a programme by the Royal Marines String Band will be relayed from the Town Hall, Dover.

'GOOD NIGHT, EVERYBODY, GOOD NIGHT.'

The Announcer leaving Savoy Hill after closing down for the night.

A missionary talk will be given by the Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Uganda on Sunday afternoon, January 2.

An hour's music by the Symphonic String Players, a combination partly amateur, partly professional, will be relayed from the Hotel Metropole, Brighton, at 9.30 on Tuesday, January 11. The programme will be under the direction of Mr. Herbert Menges.

News From the Provinces.

CARDIFF.

FOLLOWING the programme in honour of the Welsh Naval heroes, Cardiff Station has arranged a similar one in honour of famous Welsh soldiers. The date of its performance is not yet decided, but it will be entitled 'Stickit, the Welsh.' Wales has won fame on the field of battle from the days of Cadwalladr in Rome to the famous stand of the Welsh division at Mametz Wood. Stories will be told during the intervals, and listeners will be thrilled to hear once more of the gallant days of the South Wales Borderers at Rorke's Drift, when they won six V.C.'s and imperishable honour.

In co-operation with the Cardiff Musical Society, Beethoven's Mass in D (Missa Solennis) will be given on March 20. Further prominence is to be given to the Beethoven Centenary Year by a series of short weekly recitals, beginning on Tuesday, January 11, of the ten Violin and Piano Sonatas. These should specially appeal to musicians, but it is hoped that the series will lead to a fuller appreciation of Beethoven by all listeners.

An interesting forthcoming outside broadcast will be a Somerset Night, arranged by the Portishead Literary and Debating Society. Mr. W. Irving Gass and his brother Dan'l Grainger, the celebrated dialect reciters, will give a real Somerset evening in song and story.

The Valve Set Concert Party, which has delighted listeners in the Cardiff area for some time, has reorganized itself under the name of the Super-Six, being still under the leadership of Mr. Sidney Evans. Its next appearance before the Cardiff microphone will be on Tuesday, January 11.

A Marriage for Margel and A Shattered Dream, two Welsh plays of a homely nature, which proved so popular when broadcast some time ago, are to be repeated in the near future. Both plays were written by R. F. Thurtle, who has spent most of his life in Wales and writes understandingly of the people he admires.

Mr. Victor Watson, who for many years has been a principal double-bass player at Covent Garden Opera House, and who has played in all the famous English orchestras, will give a recital on Monday, January 10.

Forthcoming talks:—

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 12.—Mr. L. A. Knight: Christmas in Medieval Wales.

THURSDAY, JAN. 13.—Mr. Glyn Eastman: Song throughout the Centuries—with vocal illustrations.

FRIDAY, JAN. 14.—Mrs. Mary B. Crowle: Under the Southern Cross.

PLYMOUTH.

THE RT. REV. J. H. B. MASTERMAN, Bishop of Plymouth, will give the address at the evening service to be relayed from the Plymouth Guildhall on Sunday, January 2. There will be an Organ solo by Mr. F. W. Harris, of Stoke Damerel Church.

Miss Oonah Mairs (soprano) and Billy Barne^s (entertainer) will take part in the programme on Wednesday, January 5.

Forthcoming Talks:—

TUESDAY, JAN. 4.—The Rev. A. Hawthorn: Forgotten Corners of Old London.

THURSDAY, JAN. 6.—Capt. F. McDermott: A Ghostly Inn in the Grisons.

MANCHESTER.

SEVERAL new serial programmes have been arranged for the New Year. One is to take the form of short one-hour programmes devoted to the works of British composers, the object being to show by orchestral and vocal illustrations the development of British music from the time of Purcell to the present day. The first of the series, which will be given on Saturday, January 8, will consist of cameos illustrating the art of Purcell and Arne. Another new series, which is certain to be popular, has been given the title of 'Vaudeville.' These programmes will be presented by Mr. Victor Smythe and will introduce a novel type of entertainment in which the vaudeville atmosphere will be conveyed to listeners, the main idea being continuity. The first Vaudeville programme will be given on Tuesday, January 4.

Three special character studies by Mr. James Bernard, to be relayed to London, Daventry and other stations, will be given on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, January 3, 5, and 7. Hundreds of listeners must have seen Mr. Bernard perform 'Our Pardner,' the story of a black slave's love and sacrifice, for he has given it over five hundred times. It is with a broadcast performance of this amusing and pathetic tale that he will begin his series on Monday, January 3.

Duets and solos by Mr. Harry Brindle (bass) and Mr. Herbert Thorpe (tenor) will be heard in the afternoon concert on Sunday, January 2; while Haydn's Second Symphony and Mozart's Overture to Don Giovanni will be played by the augmented Station Orchestra.

A specially arranged service will be broadcast from Manchester Cathedral between 8 and 9 o'clock on Sunday, January 2. Canon S. H. Eliot, of St. Paul's, Sheffield, is the preacher.

The Todmorden Boys' Choir has a marked ability to convey just the right atmosphere when singing Negro songs, as many listeners will remember from its recent performance at a Tuesday Midday Society concert. A programme of Negro spirituals and modern choral songs will be given by this choir on Wednesday, January 5.

HULL.

THE local concert on Wednesday, January 5, will consist of vocal solos and duets by Mr. Ericat Smith (tenor) and Miss Gudrun Smith (contralto). A Norwegian by birth, Mr. Smith came to England at an early age and during the War devoted a great deal of his time to concert work for soldiers and sailors. For some time he was a member of the Grimsby and Cleethorpes Amateur Operatic Society. During the same evening, Mr. Roy Ellett will give a twenty-minute pianoforte recital.

LIVERPOOL.

HARLAND AND WOOLF'S Prize Band, one of the best-known bands in the Liverpool district, is paying another visit to the Studio on Wednesday, January 12. Its programme will be interspersed with part-songs by the Temple Male Voice Quartet. Later in the evening, Dance Music by Montague's Symphonics will be relayed from the Edinburgh Café Ball Room.

BOURNEMOUTH.

AN Organ Recital by Mr. Arthur Marston, from the Royal Arcade, Boscombe, is to form part of the evening concert on Sunday, January 2. The solo artists in this programme are Miss Gladys Palmer (contralto) and Miss Constance Izard (violinist). The former will give songs by John Ireland, Dunhill and other modern English composers, while Miss Izard's violin items include a Spanish group and a number of eighteenth century pieces.

Father Ralph Baines, S.J., of Corpus Christi, Boscombe, who is to give the address at the Studio Service on Sunday, January 2, is a preacher who has not yet been heard over the microphone. He recently came to Bournemouth from Downside.

The monthly Studio Service for the Sick, which has hitherto been held on Wednesday afternoons, will in the New Year be moved to Thursdays, so as to be on the same day of the week as the Westminster Abbey services on the intervening Thursdays, which it is hoped to relay for local listeners. The address at the Studio Service on Thursday, January 6, will be by the Rev. J. F. Andrews, Vicar of St. Andrew's, Bournemouth.

Mr. Walter Wilkinson, who first became attracted by the possibilities of the puppets in Florence, and now has his own puppet-show, will on Tuesday, January 4, broadcast a Talk on his experiences while travelling about the countryside. On the same evening, Mr. Kenneth Ellis (bass) will give, among other things, three of Easthope Martin's Songs of the Hedgerow, and later in the programme there will be a recital by the Kelston Singers, and items by the Station Octet.

The well-known female impersonator, Malcolm Scott ('The Woman Who Knows'), is to broadcast on Saturday, January 8.

A Short Story, 'The Brass Candlestick,' by Miss B. E. M. Hunt, will form part of the afternoon programme on Saturday, January 8.

BIRMINGHAM.

THE first performance of a new musical comedy entitled Dainty Diana, will be given at 9.30 on Tuesday, January 4. The piece describes an episode in the life of Sir Roger de Coverley, the first act taking place before Coverley Court at the opening meet of hounds, at an early hour, on a September morning in 1736. The book and lyrics are by A. F. Cross, and the music by Guy Jones. It has been adapted for broadcasting by Mr. Joseph Lewis, who will conduct the orchestra and chorus during its performance. The part of Sir Roger de Coverley will be taken by Mr. Percy Edgar.

John Overton, whose rustic sketches are familiar to Midland listeners, is the author of a play to be presented by Percy Edgar on Monday, January 3, at 8 o'clock. This is entitled The Garden of Lost Hearts, and as in several other plays by the same author, the scene is laid in a typical English country village of the name of Ash Holt. A more than usually ambitious cast includes no less than eighteen characters among which are to be found a noble knight and his lady, a circus girl, an American, and various village characters.

The third of the series of transmissions arranged to celebrate the hundredth anniversary, next March, of the death of Beethoven, will be given on Sunday, January 2, consisting of a programme entirely chosen from the works of the great master. Among the items will be the Pianoforte Concerto in C Minor, played by Mr. Nigel Dallaway.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE BRITISH BROADCASTING COMPANY, 1922-1926.

From left to right: Major Basil Binyon, the Rt. Hon. Sir William Bull, Bt., M.P. (Vice-Chairman), the Rt. Hon. Lord Gainford (Chairman), Mr. J. C. W. Reith (Managing Director), and Mr. W. W. Burnham.

A Message from Lord Gainford.

The B.B.C. Old and New—An Assurance of Effective Continuity.

IT has been remarked that the growth of National Institutions is commonly measured in terms of decades or even centuries. The Directors of the British Broadcasting Company have had the stewardship of a great public service for only four years, during which time broadcasting has emerged from nothing to the position it occupies to-day—an accepted and essential part of the machinery of civilization.

It is not easy, even now, to envisage the doubts, disappointments, difficulties and obstacles which have been experienced, but there are few satisfactions more abiding than the knowledge of pioneering achievement.

Our very natural regret on handing over to another body such an intensely interesting enterprise is tempered by a feeling of pride in such success as has attended our work, and in the sense of satisfaction that a sound foundation has been laid, and a tradition of public service, enterprise and idealism created upon which our successors may build. We make no claim to perfection, however. We acknowledge that we have not been able to accomplish all that we had hoped.

Four and a half years ago we set out to create a new national interest and to make available to the whole of the British public all that is best in entertainment and general culture. We have kept in mind also our responsibility to the new wireless industry.

Two acknowledgments must be made by us. First, our indebtedness to the public whom we have endeavoured to serve, for their encouragement and support; we have welcomed every criticism and comment from them. Second, the zeal, ability, attention to and pride in their work which have been shown by our executive colleague Mr. Reith and by our staff both at headquarters and in the provinces, the value of whose work it would be difficult to exaggerate.

We believe that the policies, methods and objectives hitherto adopted will be maintained and developed in the future, and we trust that our listeners will give the Service the same friendly support in the future as they have in the past.

It would be inappropriate for me to conclude this message without declaring quite definitely that there is no ground whatever for the apprehensions current in some quarters that the change in the form of control of Broadcasting will mean crippling it with red-tape methods or depriving it of any measure of its enterprise and resilience.

As Chairman of the old Authority and Vice-Chairman of the new, I may perhaps be justified in claiming a position of special advantage in making this declaration. I believe that, under the Corporation, we shall have greater power, greater freedom and greater resources wherewith to extend what has been built by the Company.

Henry's Christmas Present.

By Norman Venner.

HENRY MOLYNEUX had seven aunts, five uncles, three married sisters and a maternal grandmother. He had also a doting father and mother and a grand passion for wireless. It seemed as though a Happy Christmas for Henry was an absolute certainty.

'Of course, the joy about wireless is that you can always keep adding to it,' he told his aunts, his uncles, his sisters, his maternal grandmother and his father and mother. He told them this first about the beginning of November. He mentioned it again about the third of November, and made a passing reference to it about the sixth, with a further casual allusion on the seventh. A nod is as good as a wink to a deaf relation, and Henry felt that by the time Christmas arrived, he would have earned whatever happiness should fall to his lot.

'It would, of course, be perfectly filthy,' he confided to Albert Murgatroyd, a radio friend, 'if all these old birds gave me mittens, a Tennyson in pink suede, or fancy waistcoats.'

'I knew a chap,' said Albert, 'who wanted one of these gimble sprochets with a weeviled screw for his O.P. tension cistern. Jolly expensive they are, too. And guess what they gave him?'

'A crystal set?' said Henry, gloomily.

'No. A hymn-book. Ancient and Modern,' said Albert.

'Oo! That was a bit thick. That's enough to spoil a chap's ideals, if you like. Look here! I've got an idea. Now, would it be—?'

THE last week in November brought a big surprise to the seven aunts, five uncles, three married sisters and maternal grandmother of Henry Molyneux. Each and every one of them received a complimentary copy of a popular weekly dealing exclusively with radio. The copies looked as though they had come from the publishers. Their addresses were all carefully typed.

In fact, in order to do the thing properly, Henry had been obliged to forgo the purchase of a keenly-desired tritulating follicle sprunt, which was badly needed for the latest set he had built.

But he knew all about casting bread on the waters. He was really casting that tritulating follicle sprunt on the waters in order that it might return as, say, a couple of miles of bifurcated hackle wire, a series of cogulating cruspoid valves, a super-gnastic L.T. dindurate loud-speaker, complete with numbic crash plates and wimboid flaps, and a couple of screw-drivers. Any other little wireless gadget the family liked to throw in would be welcome. After all, Christmas comes but once a year, and it was up to him to make it last out.

The loud-speaker was, however, the corner-stone of the edifice. It was horribly expensive. The numbic crash plates were very dear, and everybody knows how much wimboid flaps cost. Henry had several loud-speakers, but the mere thought of spending Christmas with any of them was enough to shake him to the foundations. On Christmas Day he hoped to get China. But it would be little short of an insult to get China and then have no super-gnastic L.T. dindurate loud-speaker to strain the noise through. Henry had always had a high opinion of China. He wasn't going to start his season of peace on earth, goodwill to men by insulting a lot of Chinese broadcasters. Not likely! If he didn't get the wimboid flaps, he would leave China where it was. Just like that.

THE first result of his casting of bread on the wireless-waters was a large square box. It looked like a loud-speaker. It could be nothing but a loud-speaker. Had it wimboid flaps? Was it dindurate? Were the numbic crash plates inside? Could he open it before Christmas? If his Christmas present was the ability to thread China through a loud-speaker, ought he not to open the box now and try it out? Before he could decide, a second box arrived. It was of exactly the same size and shape. Two loud-speakers! Splendid for experiment. The week before Christmas week brought five more boxes, and by the morning of Christmas Eve the score stood at eleven—love.

Henry, in an agony of anticipation, tore open one of the boxes. After all, he didn't want the place littered up with numbic crash plates. Too many wimboid flaps would spoil the sensitivity, besides overcrowding the sitting-room.

All his happy Christmas dreams dissolved like mist before the wind as he saw what the boxes contained. Loud-speakers, yes. But such loud-speakers! Why, they had been superseded for more than six weeks! Any real wireless enthusiast knows that any piece of apparatus that has been superseded for six weeks is worse than useless. The thing had no frinching pin. There wasn't even a whooling tuffet. Its randigiversating splurge bracket was a disgrace to its makers. As if a fellow could have a merry Christmas without a whooling tuffet! It was tragic.

The score by Christmas Day was sixteen—love, and every box contained one of those ghastly 'Elephantine loud-speakers.' They were all the same. Not a frinching pin among them.

The clouds broke a little when his father and mother handed him a couple of pounds 'to buy tin-tacks,' but his Christmas was spoiled. He and Albert together contemplated the row of disgraceful loud-speakers and swore quietly but continuously.

Albert seized a copy of the radio journal which they had so fatally broadcast.

There on page xxi they found the explanation. 'For Quick Sale Cheap,' ran the advertisement. 'Twenty Elephantine loud-speakers. Excellent condition, last month's model. Fifteen shillings each. 16s. 9d. post free.'

The next issue of that radio journal carried another similar advertisement.

'New Year Bargain. Sixteen Elephantine loud-speakers. Superfine condition. Great sacrifice. Eight shillings each. Will take £5 for the lot.'

Sweet are the uses of advertisement. Although Henry Molyneux's Christmas had been overcast, by Twelfth Night he was in his seventh Heaven.

He got £4 10s. as a result of his advertisement, and he bought the loud-speaker of his dreams.

It was a super-gnastic L.T. dindurate loud-speaker. It had no numbic crash plates nor any wimboid flaps. All those things were out of date by then. It was the very latest pattern of porcedine hetroclusive apparatus, with the newly-discovered skiffing bingle and tangential oil feed.

And next year he intends to take this Christmas question seriously. A man who is adding to his set can't be too careful at Christmas-time.

The Musical Festival Competition.

The Judges' Report.

THE B.B.C. regret to announce that the judges of the works submitted in the Autumn Musical Festival Prize Competition have reported that they cannot recommend the allotment of the prizes. The judges were: Sir Hugh Allen, Sir Edward Elgar, Mr. Hubert J. Foss, Sir Hamilton Harty, Mr. J. B. McEwen, Lieut. B. Walton O'Donnell, Mr. Percy Pitt and Sir Landon Ronald.

All the judges gave generously and ungrudgingly of their time and interest to the task of scrutinizing the 240 works that were submitted. They were unanimous, however, in their conclusion that in not one of the classes was there a single work which reached the standard meriting the important prizes offered. The judges felt that the B.B.C. would be doing harm rather than good to British music if they awarded prizes to works which did not merit them. In the circumstances, therefore, the B.B.C. have, with much regret, applied Clause 6 of the rules of the competition, which confers upon the adjudicators the right to withhold the awards in the event of the MSS. falling below the required standard.

Many of the works submitted were obviously the result of much thought and labour. A small proportion of the competitors were disqualified for failure to observe the rules of the competition. Of those who complied with the rules, a certain number displayed a considerable degree of technique in composition, but were deficient in inspiration. Other works embodying good ideas failed from the inexperience of the composers in dealing with the medium chosen.

The standard set was that of such works as the judges would themselves choose for performance in any important series of concerts.

In view of the abortive result of the competition, the B.B.C. have decided to return to each competitor the entrance fee of ten shillings which he was required to remit in entering for the competition. Besides bearing the considerable cost of the competition, the B.B.C. are also contributing the sum of £250 to the Musicians' Benevolent Fund (formerly the 'Gorvase Elwes' Memorial Fund), 5, John Street, Bedford Row, W.C.1.

Beyond All Stations.

A Christmas Eve Story, by ERIC MASCHWITZ. Illustrated by Charles Pears.

IT was already past six o'clock on the eve of Christmas when I turned my newly-purchased two-seater from the main road and began to climb the short steep driveway of Marston Hall. The evening was damp and cold; ragged grey clouds made a bull's-eye lantern of the moon; the wind played wild and mournful music in the gaunt poplars which edged the drive.

I was doubly grateful to Clive Darnay for his invitation to spend Christmas at Marston—first, because, being a lonely Civil Servant home on leave after six years' absence in India, I should otherwise have been condemned to pass the season amidst the respectable gloom of my club; and, secondly, because I knew that at Marston, an Elizabethan mansion with tall chimneys and echoing panelled corridors, they still kept Christmas in that fine old fashion which Londoners seem to have forgotten.

As my car roared up the slope and the lights of the Hall came into view beyond the trees, I pictured to myself the welcome that was awaiting me, the warmth and gay companionship within doors. It was really very decent of Darnay, I thought, to have taken pity on my loneliness. Though we had been up at Oxford together, I could scarcely be called a close friend of his. I had visited Marston only once before, ten years ago, when Mrs. Darnay was still alive. It was the purest kindness which, when we met in the club during the first week of my return, had prompted him to invite me to stay with him and his daughter.

I WAS not disappointed in my reception. The warmth of my welcome, and the sight of a heaped log-fire around which half-a-dozen laughing young people were seated, dispelled instantly the memory of the unpleasant weather outside.

'This is splendid!' said Darnay, with genuine pleasure in his voice. 'You're only just in time, though! We were waiting for you before going upstairs to dress. If you'd been ten minutes later I believe this troop of bandits would have lynched me!' He led me over to the fire and introduced me to his daughter.

Beatrix Darnay was a pretty, slenderly built girl of not more than twenty. She greeted me as cordially as her father, but, as I shook hands with her, I was momentarily struck by a peculiar expression in her large grey eyes. Had she been anyone but Clive Darnay's daughter, brought up in an atmosphere of sheltered beauty and comfort, I should have said that she was afraid of something!

I must have betrayed my curiosity, for her eyes, meeting mine, faltered, and the colour flooded to her cheeks.

Further introductions followed. I cannot recall the names of the rest—they were all friends of Beatrix, invited, like myself, for the Christmas holidays. Of them all I can only remember Allan Merilee, a dark, sulkily good-looking young man who was already in evening dress, since he lived in the neighbourhood and had come over to dine with the Darnays. He sat on one of the arms of the wide club-fender and answered my introduction so carelessly that I could not help noticing that his eyes were not on me at all but upon Beatrix.

Half an hour later, when I sat in my room, desperately wrestling with a refractory collar and tie, I recalled with some uneasiness the strange expression of Beatrix Darnay's eyes—and set myself to wondering what could be the cause of it.

I began to recall stories I had heard of haunted houses.

Was she, perhaps, unhappy in love? It was plain that young Merilee thought a great deal of her. It might be that she did not feel the same affection for him—and was afraid of hurting him.

I was not satisfied with this explanation. Quite plainly it was no ordinary human anxiety which haunted the girl—'haunted' was the word that came to my mind, it so perfectly expressed the impression which Beatrix had made upon me. Unobservant though I usually am, I had my suspicions that, on this occasion, it was something more than the old inevitable problem of a girl's heart which had cast its shadow over Beatrix.

The wind moaned outside my window—and a branch tapped against the pane. The sound made me start. The candles on my dressing-table threw strange, distorted shadows on the floor. For a moment, remembering Beatrix, I felt unaccountably scared. The atmosphere of the old house weighed upon me. I began to recall stories I had read of haunted houses in the depth of the country.

Next moment, I laughed at myself for an imaginative idiot. Nice thoughts, indeed, for the eve of Christmas!

When Clive Darnay came to fetch me down to dinner I had worked myself into a mild state of funk.

'What's wrong with you?' he said.

I laughed uneasily. 'I think I must be seeing ghosts!' I answered.

'Ghosts!' exclaimed Darnay. 'Ghosts? In this room?'

The slight emphasis aroused my curiosity. 'You don't mean to tell me,' I said, 'that this house is haunted?'

HE shook his head. 'No, not haunted—at least not by any visible ghost.' He paused—and then, half-ashamedly, continued: 'Don't let's go down for a minute, old man. There's something I'd like to tell you—about this house. It is haunted—but not in the usual way. You won't meet any headless knights or white ladies when you come up to bed. But the truth is—we have a ghost among us. That's why it was so good of you all to come down here, miles from anywhere. It will amuse Beatrix to have lots of jolly people around her, it will drive some of the ridiculous notions out of her head! The story is not a long one. It won't bore you, I hope, to hear it?'

My interest was now thoroughly aroused and I begged him to continue.

'You noticed that young fellow downstairs,' he said, 'the boy with the dark hair?' I nodded. 'His name is Merilee, Allan Merilee. He's in love with my daughter. He has asked her to marry him.'

'His father is Sir Roger Merilee, the K.C. The old man is getting on in years and has to spend the winter at Cannes. The boy is alone just now at Shere Manor and asked to be allowed to dine here to-night. I am always glad to see him, not only because I like him immensely, but also because his father is a very old friend of mine. Before our generation, the two families of Darnay and Merilee were not on speaking terms, but Roger and I, being sensible sort of people, made up the quarrel.'

'During the reign of Queen Anne, there were Darnays at Marston and Merilees at Shere. This house belonged then to a certain Celia Darnay, a woman of thirty, whose parents had both died when she was a child. She was, as you will be able to judge from her portrait, which hangs in the dining-room downstairs, a very beautiful creature. She received many proposals of marriage but, being of an independent and self-reliant nature, was apparently not eager to sacrifice her freedom. Her two most persistent suitors were Sir Gerald Merilee, the third baronet, and Sir Giles Oakshott, a wealthy member of the royal Court.

Rather to her discredit, Celia Darnay played at cat-and-mouse with these two for several years. On the whole, though, she seemed to prefer Oakshott, who was the elder of the pair and had a great position at Court to offer her; whereas Merilee was a handsome young scapegrace who gambled away every penny that his estates brought him. He had been married already, but his wife had died of a fever, leaving him with a son.

Oakshott was sent on a diplomatic mission to Paris. Before he left England, he visited Marston to make his adieux to Celia; and it was generally understood among local gossips that she had made him some sort of a promise against his return.

Some months after his rival had gone abroad Merilee came one evening to call upon the lady. The servant showed him into the drawing-room where Celia Darnay was playing upon the spinet. No one knew how long he remained there. No one saw him depart. When, alarmed by the prolonged silence of their mistress, the household broke through the locked door of the room, they found her lying on the floor by the spinet, stabbed to the heart.

The alarm was raised and information laid against Sir Gerald Merilee. When he was arrested, the officers of the law found blood upon his cuff. His infatuation for the murdered woman was common knowledge, as was also his jealousy of Oakshott, whom she had seemed to prefer to him. His trial was a nine days' wonder of the times. Few could be found to say a kind word for him in his misfortune, though he had been popular enough in the county for his good looks and reckless generosity. At the trial, he swore upon oath that he had left the lady after a few minutes' friendly conversation, and that the blood upon his cuff was caused by a slight injury he had done to his hand. No one believed him. He was hanged at Oxford and died protesting his innocence.

Darnay paused and watched to see what effect his tale had had on me.

'Well — ?' I said, determined to have the rest of the story.

'It has been my fault,' he went on hurriedly, 'that Beatrix cannot get that old story out of her head. I've been selfish. I've kept her down here with me until the atmosphere of this place has begun to work on her nerves.'

'You don't mean to say,' I broke in, 'that the tragedy of Celia Darnay has come between Beatrix and young Merilee!'

He nodded sombrely. 'I'm afraid this isn't going to be a frightfully merry Christmas, old man. Beatrix can't get the story out of her head. She won't marry him because—because she's afraid! And as for Allan, he's miserable about it, of course! His voice shook and I could see that he was upset.

'But it's ridiculous!' I said. 'The sooner the child gets rid of this notion the better!'

He nodded again—and then, with assumed lightness, added: 'Absurd, isn't it? I thought I had better introduce you to the family skeleton, though. Now come downstairs, have a cocktail and forget all about it!'

More easily said than done. As I sat over dinner, making conversation with the younger guests—which incidentally they must have found extremely boring, for my mind was not upon what I was saying—the eyes of Celia Darnay stared fixedly down at me from the tarnished gold frame which held her portrait.

She was beautiful—with the same fair beauty as Beatrix. In spite of the difference in dress and in the way their hair was arranged, they were amazingly alike. I wondered whether the boy who sat so moodily beside me had inherited his dark good looks from his ancestor, Sir Gerald—and the fanciful thought came to my mind that these two young people might be in some strange way a reincarnation of the two who had played their part in that long-ago tragedy, and that Celia Darnay might in some sort be taking revenge upon the man who had killed her, by coming like a ghost between his descendant and hers.

SUCH were my thoughts when we retired to the drawing-room for our coffee. It was a lofty apartment furnished in faded wine-coloured damask and old gilt furniture. In the window-alcove stood a little old-fashioned spinet painted with a design of roses and true-love knots. While the butler handed us our coffee, Clive Darnay fussed with an elaborate wireless set which, standing on a table near the fire, struck the only untimely note in an otherwise perfect eighteenth-century room. He was an ardent wireless enthusiast, he told me, and had built the set himself. He tuned in to a station and the room was filled with the sound of an orchestra playing 'La Bohème.' I sat chatting with one of Beatrix' friends, a very modern young person—whose pronounced ideas and slangy method of expressing them were a revelation to one who had passed six years away from England.

Our host stood by his set, adjusting it in the insatiable and infuriating fashion of the expert. Beatrix and Merilee sat on either side of the fire, she staring dreamily at the flames, he watching her with moody eyes.

The conversation flagged—and abruptly the music ceased.

'Hullo, what's wrong?' I asked.

'It's only father!' said Beatrix, looking up. 'As soon as there's a really pleasant orchestra playing, he switches off to some other station—and we have to listen to a lot of Germans singing drinking-songs or a talk in French on table-manners!'

Her father laughed good-naturedly and bent again over his dials. 'Beatrix hasn't the experimental mind!' he said. 'I want to see what they're doing in other countries on Christmas Eve!'

The loud-speaker remained silent. Darnay continued to experiment while we chaffed him on the failure of the experimental mind. The wind which, since sunset, had been rising steadily, began to shriek among the chimneys. A draught, creeping in from somewhere, fluttered the flame of the candles in the chandelier of crystal. Beatrix gave a little shudder and drew nearer to the fire.

'I can't understand it!' said Darnay in a puzzled voice. 'I can't get any station at all—not even the one I've just switched from!'

Several of the candles went out. I rose to shut the door, but found it closed already. 'That's queer!' I said—and out of the silence which followed my exclamation, one of the guests said: 'Perhaps it's a ghost!'

At the words, thoughtlessly spoken by one who evidently did not know the story of the house, Beatrix shrank back and young Merilee half rose to his feet in protest. It was an awkward moment, but the strain was relaxed by a sudden satisfied exclamation from our host. 'There we are at last!' he said.

From the loud-speaker, which was perched, paradoxically enough, on top of the spinet, came the sound of a piano playing a precise, old-fashioned minuet. The instrument had a thin, tinkling sort of note.

'I can't get it any clearer!' said Darnay. 'It must be one of the foreign stations!'

'Sounds like a spinet, or a harpsichord!' someone suggested.

Darnay, with a quick, sidelong glance at his daughter, shook his head. 'No, it's a piano all right, but the reproduction's rotten!'

The music ceased. It was followed by a peal of woman's laughter and a voice, faint but clear, said: 'There! 'Tis pretty, is it not? I shall never forget the music. 'Twill remind me always of this evening!'

'Foreign station be blowed!' said Darnay. 'It's a play from one of the English stations.' He picked up the Christmas number of The Radio Times and, bending towards the fire, searched its columns. Another of the candles fluttered and went out. 'Bother that draught!' he exclaimed—and then: 'What a queer thing! There isn't a play in any of the programmes to-night!'

'Well, I must be departing!' said a man's voice from the loud-speaker. 'Tis late and your servants' tongues will wag. Heaven be thanked that the time will soon come when there will be no more parting. May I not have one kiss, sweet, before I go?'

'Yes!' she answered gently. 'Yes!'

The short silence which followed was broken by a sharp exclamation. 'Oh, Gerald, there is blood on your hand. See, how it runs down and spoils the fine lace of your cuff!'

He laughed. 'I am paying for my fervour, sweet. That Italian brooch of yours has torn my hand!'

'Shall I not bandage it with my kerchief, then?'

'Tis only a trifle. I will have it dressed at Shere. Meanwhile, let me out by the terrace-window. I left my nag among the trees.'

The voices died away. The last audible word came from the woman. 'You will come to-morrow, will you not? I shall be all impatience till I see you again!'

'Good acting!' one of us exclaimed. 'But it sounds creepy, doesn't it!'

'Hush!' I said. The room was now in

The Children's Corner

Next Week's London Programmes.

THE children's programme from London and Daventry on Monday, December 27, will consist of a new operetta by Mr. Robert Barclay. It is called The Emperor's New Clothes and is based on the old familiar story of the same name. The performance will be given by the Wireless Chorus and the Daventry Quartet, and will be under the direction of Mr. Stanford Robinson.

On Tuesday, December 28, there will be violoncello solos by Miss Margaret Izard, a new visitor to the Children's Hour. Mr. Ralph de Rohan (better known as 'The Wicked Uncle') will give a 'dissertation'—whatever that may mean: it's his own word, not ours—on 'Indoor Games and How to Play Them.' There will also be on this day another of the 'Sandy' school stories by Peter Martin, the title being 'How Sandy Braved the Bull.'

On Wednesday, December 29, Miss Fedora Turnbull will give a second short selection of songs and stories. Another item will be a shipping dialogue called 'The Old Clipper.' It has been provided by Mr. G. G. Jackson and deals with the famous days of the fast sailing-ships whose story is one of the great romances of ocean travel. The music will consist either of piano improvisations by Mr. L. J. Stanton Jefferies or of selections by Mr. W. James.

On Thursday, December 30, Mr. Frederick Chester will sing some more West-Country songs. His first selection, given a few weeks ago, proved very popular, and we hope the 'repeat performance' will be no less so. Mr. C. E. Hodges will tell a Christmassy 'William' story called 'A Busy Day' (by Richmal Crompton).

Mr. L. G. Mainland will take as the subject of his weekly Zoo Talk 'Why Not New Pets?' which sounds as if he is weary of tortoises.

On Friday, December 31, there will be a programme by certain members of the staff who usually help with the Children's Hour. Since they are all very busy people and are always liable to be prevented from coming into the studio—by the sudden call of their own duties—it is difficult to know in advance exactly who will be there, but at least six have promised to take part, unless something unexpected turns up.

On Saturday, January 1, there will be selections by the Daventry Quartet, as usual. A new and interesting feature will be items played by Spurgeon's Orphan Bell-Ringers, under the direction of Mr. Walter Partridge. Also, Miss E. M. L. Elliot will tell a New Year story, which has been specially written by Mrs. Mabel Marlowe, entitled 'Old Hobbley's Carillon.'

Mr. Thimblethorpe Explains.

Exclusive to The Radio Times from Bournemouth: 'Dear Mr. Editor—Pardon an old man's joke. This is the explanation. There are 2,200 members of the Fairy League. They are all "Honorary Advisers To The Aunts And Uncles Of The Bournemouth Station On All Things Connected With The Children's Hour." Therefore, they are all entitled to put the letters—"H.A.T.T.A.A.U. O.T.B.S.O.A.T.C.W.T.C.H." after their names.

I'm sorry about the printers. Please convey my apologies to them.

Yours faithfully,

JOHN THIMBLETHORPE.

Listeners' Letters.

Learning Languages by Wireless.

MUCH of the increased interest that is being taken in foreign languages is due directly to the talks arranged by the B.B.C. The French and Spanish talks have been delightful and instructive, and I recommend to listeners the learning of languages as a fascinating hobby, particularly as the means to do so are now being brought to one's home by the B.B.C. I look forward to the future German talks, and hope for the inclusion of Italian at some future date.—HORACE BROWN (Hon. Sec., Manchester Branch Institute of Linguists), Ashfield Road, Davenport, Stockport, nr. Manchester.

The Art of Broadcasting.

I CAN endorse all that 'Philemon' says in his recent article in your columns as to the trials of a listener to broadcast speech. Speakers and preachers often forget that in broadcasting, the stress and emphasis that may be necessary to reach the ears of an audience in a hall or church are carried on much finer wings direct to the auditory nerve of a listener. The ear is stunned for the moment by excess of power, and in the effort to accommodate itself to new conditions, the words stressed are frequently lost; then in renewed efforts to tune in with the fall in the voice which follows a burst, the words may be lost again. The remedy, as 'Philemon' points out, is to speak quietly and clearly, with just such emphasis as is given by natural speech, and to sustain the voice and restrain emotion.

I can also corroborate 'Philemon's' experience with stage-play dialogue. Recently the opera Figaro came through splendidly as to the music, but the dialogue was hardly intelligible. If the B.B.C. are not yet in a position to open classes of instruction in broadcast speaking and singing, I would suggest that they put in every studio over the microphone this inscription (with apologies to the Scottish bard):—

Oh wad some power the giftie gie us
To hear ourselves as ithers hear us!

—T. WATSON DUNCAN, Giffnock, Glasgow

Caricaturing the Irish Accent.

IN the interest of the Irish nation the world over, I should like to protest against the manner adopted by certain broadcast artists to portray the Irish accent. It is often exaggerated beyond all belief, and is completely at variance with the English language as it is spoken in Ireland.

I am afraid that the day of the 'stage Irishman' is not yet over, and certainly if broadcasting artists will persist in caricaturing Irish men and women we shall have a long time to wait. Broadcasting is, we all know, a great power for evil as well as for good, and the feelings of many an Irish listener are often severely hurt as they listen to their race being held up to the ridicule of half the world.—J. L. McADAMS, High Street, Kilkenny, Irish Free State.

Listening to the Religious Service.

I WAS much interested in C. L.'s recent question concerning the right way to listen to the Sunday evening broadcast religious service. Surely, when a service is being broadcast, it is more reverent to switch off immediately if any of those who are listening are not in full sympathy? I should no more hesitate in such circumstances to cut off than I should hesitate to take a little child out of church who had become a fidget from boredom.

The religious service is so well arranged, and is always led up to by suitable preliminaries like appropriate Talks and organ recitals, that those who are not interested need never switch on till 8.55 p.m., when the service is all over.—JANE PEEL YATES, Eccleston Cottage, nr. Chester.

THE WEEK'S WORK IN THE GARDEN.

If snow comes, this will be the kind of work that will be done in most of our gardens this week, despite the good advice of the Royal Horticultural Society's broadcast bulletin.

Radio in the Changing Village.

TOURING about the country this summer by motor, I was going from Banbury to Chipping Norton, and spent a couple of hours in a little village on the way, taking some refreshment at the village inn. And while I was there I heard the following remark in a conversation carried on by a couple of farm labourers. Said one: 'Why, only last night me and my wife was in bed a-listening to our wireless and we heard Mark Hambourg playing the piano. Now, you know, if you want to hear Mark Hambourg in town, why it ud cost ver five shillings maybe, and yet we can hear him for 2d. a week.' What with the educational value of wireless and with the coming of the motor-coach, the countryman will be a vastly different person before long.

I may add that while I was in Chipping Norton I heard Big Ben louder than in Parliament Square, thanks to a loud speaker at a shop door.—H. S. BROWN, Southfields, S.W.18.

We regret that through an oversight no mention was made in the London programme for Monday, December 6, of the fact that the Chinese and Japanese impressions which were broadcast on that evening were written and partly produced by Major Cooper-Hunt, who has spent many years in China and has made a special study of Chinese customs.

3.30 BACH'S CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

ELSIE SUDDABY
ENID CRUICKSHANK
LEONARD GOWINGS
HAROLD WILLIAMS
THE WIRELESS CHORUS (Chorus Master, STANFORD ROBINSON)
THE WIRELESS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, conducted by STANFORD ROBINSON

CHRISTMAS must have been a real time of joy to Bach, the devout Lutheran, and in his Christmas Oratorio (the only big choral work written specifically for Christmas) he expresses all the various emotions which we experience at this season. Never absent long is the spirit of exultation and deeply-felt rejoicing with which the work begins and ends. But there are also less confident thoughts, almost forebodings, of the coming of the Saviour and His life and death; and the abundance of wistful, tender feelings towards the Child Christ make, perhaps, the greatest appeal of all.

Norman A. Moss Maurice Book

Mr. Harold Williams and Miss Elsie Suddaby sing in Bach's Christmas Oratorio to-day.

Bach wrote his Christmas Oratorio in six separate parts, to be performed on various days of the old German Festival, but nowadays it is often given (as at this performance) as a whole.

Apart from the Orchestra (whose use is full of delightful touches) there are two main groups of performers. The SOLOISTS (Soprano, Alto, Tenor and Bass) sing the story as found in the Second Chapters of St. Matthew's and St. Luke's Gospels. The Tenor, as 'The Evangelist,' has the greatest share of this task, binding the parts into a whole.

Both CHORUS and SOLOISTS sing commentaries and meditations on the story. The Chorus also sings the old Lutheran 'Chorales,' sometimes in their plain hymn-tune form (but in Bach's settings), sometimes with elaboration, with, for instance, orchestral interludes between each of the lines of the Tune.

PART I.

After the inspiring opening Chorus, 'Christians be joyful,' the First Part meditates on the scenes of the Birth. At the end, one of the most splendid of all Bass Solos, 'Mighty Lord, and King all glorious' has the thought 'In a lowly manger lieth,' and leads to the beautiful Chorale, 'Ah! dearest Jesus, Holy Child.'

PART II.

The Second Part treats of the vision of the shepherds. It starts with the idyllic PASTORAL SYMPHONY, with its quartet of Oboes, leads through the angel's message of the Babe lying in a manger, to perhaps the tenderest CRADLE SONG ever written, and ends with the resounding praises of the host of angels.

PART III.

This Part tells of the visit to Bethlehem of the shepherds, and of their worshipping.

PART IV.

The Fourth Part was written for New Year's Day, and is, accordingly, a meditation for the Festival of the Circumcision.

PART V.

There is first a prolonged outburst of praise in the opening Chorus, 'Glory be to God.' Then follow the enquiries of the wise men from the East. Their urgent questionings, 'Where is the new-born King of the Jews?' are set very realistically for Chorus. Herod's investigations follow.

PART VI.

After the opening Chorus, 'Lord, when our haughty foes assail us,' the story continues with Herod's summoning of the wise men, with their following the star, bringing their treasures and worshipping Jesus, and ends with their frustration of Herod.

[The words of Bach's 'Christmas Oratorio' will be found on pages 752 and 772.]

5.30-5.50 (app.) ROBERT LORAINÉ

Reading an arrangement of 'A CHRISTMAS CAROL,' by Charles Dickens

IT is appropriate that one of our finest romantic actors should read the best-known Christmas story of Dickens, the great romantic. Mr. Lorainé—who, by the way, acquired a great reputation as an airman during the war—has played a wide variety of parts, ranging from John Tanner in Shaw's 'Man and Superman,' to Rudolf Rassendyll and King Rudolf in 'The Prisoner of Zenda.' Other plays in which he has acted with notable success are 'The Rivals' (Bob Acres), 'Mary Rose,' 'The Way of the World' (Mr. Nigel Playfair's production at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith) and 'Cyrano de Bergerac.'

THE WEEK'S GOOD CAUSE: Viscountess ERLIGH. Appeal on behalf of the National Society of Day Nurseries

THE National Society of day nurseries exists in order to help all the day nurseries in England. It helps by advice, by running a magazine, and by keeping in touch with all developments in day nursery work. It also trains probationers, a special feature of this work being the training of probationers as children's nurses for service in private families. In addition, it makes money grants to nurseries in very poor districts, and runs a Holiday Home for children in the London nurseries who are requiring a holiday.

Lady Erleigh, who makes the appeal, and is keenly interested in the work of the Society, is a daughter of Sir Alfred Mond.

The address to which subscriptions should be sent is The National Society of Day Nurseries, 117, Piccadilly, London.

Overture to 'Oberon'... Weber

'OBERON,' Weber's last Opera, was written for performance at Covent Garden (1826). Its brilliant and romantic Overture was actually composed in London, where the Composer died two months later.

In the slow Introduction (quite short) we hear—(1) The Magic horn of Oberon, the King of the Fairies. (2) A light-footed passage (Flutes and Clarinets), suggesting the movements of his subjects. (3) A march passage and then a loud chord which ends the Introduction and ushers in the main body of the Overture.

THE CHOIR OF NORWICH CATHEDRAL.

A special service of Carols and Christmas Hymns is to be relayed from the Cathedral to-night, and broadcast from London, Daventry and other stations at 8.0.

The pace now changes, and at a very rapid speed we hear (4) the First Main Tune of the Overture (quick and fiery). It is given to the First Violins, with chords by all the other instruments punctuating it. It is taken from a quartet in the opera 'Over the Dark Blue Waters.'

(5) Soon comes another call upon Oberon's Horn, followed by the light Fairy Music, and then the Second Main Tune (on the Clarinet)—the graceful Mermaid's Song of the Opera.

(6) Immediately after this comes a beautiful Violin tune, taken from the well-known song in the Opera, 'Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster.'

RUSSIAN folk-lore is enviably rich in highly-coloured, wildly-fantastic fairy-tales. That of the Snow-Maiden is an especially attractive one.

The Snow-Maiden is the sixteen-year-old daughter of the Fairy Spring and Old Winter. Proud of her daughter's beauty, her mother wants to get her safely married. Just when the Snow-Maiden has chosen her lover, the Sun God focuses his attention on her, and she melts and floats to heaven in a vapour.

Rimsky-Korsakov's Opera, mad from this tale, introduces many charming airs, some of them folk-tunes and some original melodies.

This charming little song of the Snow-Maiden is typical of the Opera's dainty contents.

BACH'S CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

Below are given the records of those parts of Bach's Christmas Oratorio which are being broadcast from the London Station this (Sunday) afternoon, beginning at half-past three o'clock. They are printed by kind permission of the publishers, Messrs. Novello, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.C.

PART I.

ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL OF CHRISTMAS.

1. CHORUS.

Christians, be joyful, and praise your salvation,
Sing, for to-day your Redeemer is born.
Cease to be fearful, forget lamentation,
Haste with thanksgiving to greet this glad morn!
Come, let us worship, and fall down before Him,
Let us with voices united adore Him.

2. RECIT.—Tenor.

Now it came to pass in those days that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be enrolled. And all went to enrol themselves, every one to his own city. And there also went up Joseph from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judæa, to the city of David which is called Bethlehem, for he was of the house and family of David, to enrol himself, with Mary his betrothed wife, being great with child. And when they were there, the days were fulfilled that she should be delivered.

3. RECIT.—Alto.

See now the bridegroom, full of grace,
The hero of King David's race,
To save and heal the earth
Doth stoop to mortal birth.

See now the Star of Jacob shining,
Its beams delight our eyes,
Up, Zion, and forget thy sad repining,
For high thy bliss doth rise.

4. AIR.—Alto.

Prepare thyself, Zion, with tender affection
The purest, the fairest this day to receive,
Thou must meet Him with a heart with love
o'erflowing,

Haste then, with ardour the Bridegroom to welcome.

5. CHORAL.

How shall I fitly meet Thee,
And give Thee welcome due?
The nations long to greet Thee,
And I would greet Thee too,
O Fount of Light, shine brightly
Upon my darken'd heart;
That I may serve Thee rightly,
And know Thee as Thou art.

6. RECIT.—Tenor.

And she brought forth her first-born Son, and she wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.

7. CHORAL AND RECIT.—Bass.

For us to earth He cometh poor,
Our redemption to secure,
And rich in heaven to make us stand,
All number'd with His Angel-band,
O Lord, have mercy!

Who rightly can the love declare
That fills our tender Saviour's breast?
Yea, who can understand, or share
His grief for man by sin oppress'd?
Himself the Son of God will give,
That we may be redeem'd and live;
So now for this as Man behold Him born.

8. AIR.—Bass.

Mighty Lord and King all glorious,
Saviour true, for man victorious,
Earthly state Thou dost disdain,
He who all things doth sustain,
Who all state and pomp supplieth,
In a lowly manger lieth.

9. CHORAL.

Ah! dearest Jesus, Holy Child,
Make Thee a bed, soft, undefil'd,
Within my heart, and there recline,
And keep that chamber ever Thine.

PART II.

ON THE SECOND DAY OF THE FESTIVAL OF CHRISTMAS.

10. SYMPHONY.

11. RECIT.—Tenor.

And there were shepherds in the same country, abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night. And lo! an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were sore afraid.

(12 Omitted.)

13. RECIT.—Soprano and Tenor.

And the angel said to them, Be not afraid; behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people. For to-day is born to you in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

(14 and 15 Omitted.)

16. RECIT.—Tenor.

And this is the sign to you: Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger.

(17 Omitted.)

18. RECIT.—Bass.

O haste ye then! ye shepherds, go,
Since you this wonder know,
And seek for God's Almighty Son
Within a manger lying lowly;
And there, beside that cradle holy,
In sweet harmonious tone,
Sing all with one accord
To soothe your infant Lord.

19. AIR.—Alto.

Slumber, beloved, and take Thy repose,
Soon wilt Thou waken, our joy and salvation.
O! may Thy breast find gladness and rest
In our heartfelt exultation.

20. RECIT.—Tenor.

And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying—

21. CHORUS.

Glory to God in the Highest, and peace on the earth unto men in whom He is well pleased.

22. RECIT.—Bass.

'Tis right that angels thus should sing,
To us this day such joy doth bring;
Come then, our voices let us raise,
And join with them in songs of praise.

23. CHORAL.

With all Thy hosts, O Lord, we sing,
And thanks and praise to Thee we bring;
For Thou, O long-expected Guest!
Hast come at length to make us blest.

PART III.

ON THE THIRD DAY OF THE FESTIVAL OF CHRISTMAS.

24. CHORUS.

Hear, King of Angels! though falter our voices,
O! when Thy Zion before Thee rejoices,
Let her endeavour be pleasing to Thee.
Hear us, O Lord, when we offer our praises;
Hear when Thy Zion glad thanksgiving raises,
Joying Thy mighty salvation to see.

25. RECIT.—Tenor.

And when the angels were gone from them into heav'n, the shepherds said one to another—

26. CHORUS.

Let us even now go to Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us.

27. RECIT.—Bass.

He bids us comfort take,
And free His Israel doth make;
Relief to Zion hither sendeth,
And all our sorrow endeth,
Ye shepherds, see what He hath done,
Haste, make His glory known.

(28 and 29 Omitted.)

30. RECIT.—Tenor.

And they came with haste, and found both Mary and Joseph, and the Babe lying in the manger. And having seen it, they made known abroad concerning the saying which had been spoken unto them about this Child. And all that heard it wonder'd at the things which had been spoken

(The words of the Oratorio are continued on page 772.)

SOLOMON (Solo Pianoforte)
Ballad I. in G Minor (Op. 23) Chopin

CHOPIN wrote four 'Ballads,' of which the first, second and fourth are to be played by Mr. Solomon this week.

A Ballad was originally a piece of music to be sung and danced (cf. Ballet). Later it became the title widely used for a narrative song, of many verses, in which some romantic story was told; and this is now the most widely-accepted meaning. The term has been frequently borrowed by Composers as a title for purely instrumental works that in their nature suggest the telling of a story, and among the most famous of these are those of Chopin. They have no definite stories attached to them, but it is known that they were inspired by certain poems of Mickiewicz, the great national poet of Poland.

The First Ballad is a rhapsodical piece in which two moods are pictured—the one plaintive, the other passionate and glowing. Each is symbolized by a tune that takes the ear at once. The piece has no 'form' but that of its own spontaneous growing.

Three Songs by Wolf:
Coptisches Lied (Coptic Song)
Wenn du zu den Blumen gehst (When amidst the flowers you walk)
Fussreise ('Wandering')

WOLF, in a short life of only forty-three years, wrote over two hundred and fifty songs. These, indeed, constituted almost the whole of his output.

There are two 'Coptic Songs,' to words by Goethe. The first of these has a firm, measured tread, like that of a processional hymn. Wolf's mind-picture of the scene in the second Coptic Song was that of a banquet of the wise men of all the earth singing a gay, proud song and emptying their glasses at each verse's end. Its philosophy is thus wound up—in this world 'You must either be hammer or anvil.'

The second of our three songs praises the beauty of one who is the sweetest flower of all, in whose presence all blossoms fade.

Wandering tells us of the sweet emotions awakened by the sight of Nature's beauties; that still appeal to all that is good and tender in man. How happy could one be if the whole of life might partake of the spirit aroused on such a lovely morning!—thus runs the song's sentiment.

Theme and Variations from Trio in A Minor Tchaikovsky

ONE Spring day in 1873 the Professors of the Moscow Conservatoire, Tchaikovsky and Nicholas Rubinstein among them, shut up their books and had a jolly trip into the country, hearing, during the day, some folk songs, sung by village lads and lasses.

When Rubinstein died, Tchaikovsky commemorated his friend in a Trio, inscribed 'To the memory of a great artist,' and, with the recollection of their happy picnic in mind, used one of the folk-songs they had heard that day as the theme of the extensive Last Movement of the Trio. All the resources of the three instruments are used, with remarkable effect. One almost feels, at times, that a whole Orchestra is at work. The Theme is varied in many styles, appearing now as the basis of a Waltz (Variation VI), now as the 'Subject' of a Fugue (Variation X), and sometimes in more sombrely expression forms. Variation XII, the last (Quick, resolute and fiery), is extended almost to the proportions of a separate Movement, and at the final page we have the sad rhythm of a Funeral March.

half shadow. Beatrix leaned forward with parted lips and fixed incredulous eyes. The strangeness of those ghostly voices held her motionless. No one spoke, though only Beatrix, Clive and I, I think, had the least idea what was happening.

The music of the spinet began again, the same haunting little scrap of tune played softly, over and over again, until it was interrupted by the sound of knocking.

'Who is that?' said the player sharply. 'Who is at the window?' Her eager footfall terminated in an exclamation of surprise. 'You? You, Sir Giles? I thought you were in Paris, at the French Court!'

'So I was!' a man's voice roughly answered. 'Until a week since! But I could not rest in Paris, Celia, until I had your answer. No one knows that I have come; indeed, I am half ashamed of my folly. If you could but guess how tortured I am with my love, you would not keep me waiting!'

'My answer!' she scoffed. 'I promised you no answer, Sir Giles. 'Tis less than no answer now, when I hear that you have told your fine friends at St. James's that I have promised to be your wife!'

His voice, as he answered, had a note of anger in it. 'Pah! You do not know your own mind!'

She laughed time and again. 'Hark to him!' she said. 'He comes creeping to my house under cover of the dark, knocks at the window like a robber, and thinks to shout me into running away to Gretna Green with him! Sir Giles Oakshott, you may have a way with diplomats—but not with ladies!'

'Has that puppy turned you against me, eh? When the cat is away the mice play a game of their own!'

Again she laughed. 'You make yourself ridiculous! If Sir Gerald be a puppy—or a mouse, you mix your metaphors so prettily—why should you fear his rivalry? As it happens, he is neither, but a gallant gentleman whom I have used very ill!'

'Oh, he is plausible enough, Mistress Darnay, when desire leads him to it. There's a dozen ladies of the town will bear you witness to that!'

'I do not care for your sneers, Sir Giles! Nothing that you can tell me against Sir Gerald will serve your purpose in the least. I have this evening promised to marry him, and nothing shall stay my purpose!'

'I—believe—you speak the truth!'

'And why not, Sir Giles? Am I such a liar?'

'You have fooled me, mistress!'

'You have fooled yourself, sir.'

'You shall pay this reckoning!'

'I do not acknowledge the debt!'

'You shall never belong to Merilee!'

'That surely is his affair, Sir Giles,' she said—and then, 'Enough, sir. Such games, indeed, to frighten a woman with!'

'Do you persist in your intention, mistress?'

'I do. I love him and shall marry him when the spring comes!'

There came a sound of a sudden movement and the man's voice tremulous with anger: 'When the spring comes—if it ever comes, sweet Mistress Celia Darnay!'

'Stop, I beg you, sir!'

A man's laughter. The sound of a struggle. A blow. A woman's scream—and a discordant note from the spinet as some heavy body fell upon the keys. Silence.

The loud-speaker was dumb. Darnay stood staring incredulously at the set. He turned the dial slowly. 'I've lost them!' he said.

'Perhaps that was the end!' said a voice from beside the fire.

I glanced in the direction from which it came. Allan Merilee had risen from his seat and crossed to Beatrix's side. Her hand was between his. A smile of incredible relief and happiness had chased the shadow from her eyes.

'What station did you get?' asked another voice.

'I don't know!' Darnay answered, slowly. 'I don't—understand!'

'But I do!' said his daughter, softly. 'It was a new station—beyond all stations—broadcasting for the first and the last time! And, on the heels of her words, came the light-bearded matter-of-fact music of a modern dance orchestra, dragging us back again to sane reality!'

THE Book of the Thousand and One Nights—commonly known to us as 'the Arabian Nights'—is the most famous collection of romances in the literature of the world. Growing

The Andante Spianato ('Tranquilly flowing') Movement and the Polonaise (Polish Dance) which follow it were originally written as a work for Piano and Orchestra. The one has been likened to the picture of a calm lake in noontide haze. The other is a bright, showy piece, frankly designed to show off the prowess of a skilful Pianist. Chopin was only twenty when he wrote this.

THREE OF THE ARTISTS WHO WILL BE HEARD IN THE LONDON VARIETY PROGRAMME TO-NIGHT.

These popular artists will appear in this evening's programme from London at 8.0. From left to right: Miss Edna Thomas, who will sing some of her delightful Negro Spirituals; Mr. Tom Clare, the 'piano humorist,' and the originator of 'Cohen on the Telephone'; and Miss Norah Blaney, who is so well known to patrons of the music-halls and revues.

Prof. D. WEBSTER, 'The Present and Past of British Woodlands'

THE woodlands of England have been dwindling steadily since the first records, which show us a densely-wooded Britain in which forests formed as effective a barrier to invasion as mountains did, but there still remain the characteristic English woods, with a great variety of native trees. Professor Webster, as the author of 'Webster's Practical Forestry,' 'London Trees,' and several similar works, is well qualified to discuss this subject, so interesting to both town and country listeners.

up, between the ninth and the thirteenth centuries, from the tales that reached the Arabic through Indian and Persian, it became the story-book of the East, and, though it took long to penetrate to the Western world, its triumph was complete when it arrived. Such stories as 'Aladdin' and 'Sinbad the Sailor,' which are now part of the common stock from which English children's stories and pantomimes are drawn, are derived originally from the Arabian Nights. On this occasion Mr. Lewis is reading from the translation made for the Casanova Society by Mr. E. Powys Mathers. This rare and exquisite edition is now not often met with, but more readers may have come across the little volume called 'Sung to Shahryar,' in which Mr. Mathers collected some of the loveliest of the songs.

Second Ballad. Followed by Andante Spianato and Polonaise, Op. 22

CHOPIN'S second Ballad, like the first, is made of two elements. Here, however, they form a more distinct contrast. It is as if the story were laid in two scenes, one quiet and pastoral, the other grand and tempestuous, like a storm at sea.

5.15 THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

6.0 CHAMBER MUSIC AND SONGS

THE WIRELESS TRIO:
REGINALD S. MOUAT (Violin); THOMAS E. ILLINGWORTH (Violoncello); ARTHUR MARSTON (Piano)
First Trio (First and Second Movements) Beethoven

BEETHOVEN, unlike some of the great Composers, was quite grown up (a young man of twenty-five) before his 'Opus 1' (which includes this Trio) was published.

To his pupil Ries he later related how the three Trios in this 'Opus' were first introduced. Ries tells us that it was at a soirée at the house of Prince Liehnowsky (who had been a pupil and friend of Mozart, and who was greatly impressed by Beethoven's talent). 'Most of the artists and music-lovers were invited,' he says, 'especially Haydn, for whose opinion all were eager. The Trios were played, and at once commanded extraordinary attention. Haydn also said many pretty things about them....'

There are four Movements in the First Trio.

The FIRST MOVEMENT is a firm, confident piece of work. Right at the start we hear a characteristic device of the Composer—that loud chord, followed by a soft phrase. The chord, as it were, calls us to attention as it opens the First Main Tune. The cheery music swings along for a few bars, until the Piano begins to run up and down the keyboard, warning us that the Second Main Tune is coming. Very softly its first detached chords are sounded, and then it runs its course—a longer one than that of the First Tune. It ends in an even more decided manner than that did, and the Composer begins to work out the Movement at fair length, using the materials he has just laid forth for our inspection.

SECOND MOVEMENT. Beethoven almost idolized Mozart (who only died a few years before this work was written), and there is evidence, not of imitation of his great predecessor, but of the influence of his idol. Listen to the Piano's opening tune of this Slow Movement. It reminds one very much of Mozart. The whole out. After the opening Tune, the Violin has the second one (Piano rippling along below three-to-a-beat).

THE DOMES AND MINARETS OF BAGHDAD,

the city of the Arabian Nights, of the Caliph Haroun-al-Raschid, Sinbad the Sailor, and the rest. An Arabian Nights Programme is to be given from the London Station to-night at 9 o'clock.

Movement is full of grace, and in the middle, where the minor-key Tune comes in, there is, we feel, rather deeper sentiment and higher emotion.

- 6.30 GLADYS DENNEY (Soprano)
- The Heart's Desire Ireland
- Sing, Blackbird Phillips
- Pleading (with 'Cello Obligato) Elgar

6.35 TRIO
First Trio (Third Movement: Scherzo) Beethoven
IT was Beethoven who turned the often rather conventional Third Movement piece, the Minuet, into the Scherzo, a thing of greater variety and resource.

This Scherzo goes at a fast pace, beginning in a quiet, 'pussyfoot' manner, and rising to a good climax very soon. Then the three instruments start throwing the First Main Tune from one to another, but soon come back to their first way of stating it, and so the opening section of the Scherzo is completed, with a very decided feeling of 'so much for that idea' about its soft but emphatic close.

Follows the middle part, or 'Trio' (an old name for this part of the Movement; in pieces for more than three players the section used to be given to three of them, for contrast's sake). The Trio is very short and light—an excellent foil to the first section, which duly returns. A dainty little Coda (a mere whisk of the tail) is added.

- 6.45 GLADYS DENNEY
- I Have Twelve Oxen Ireland
- O Dear, What Can the Matter Be? Bax
- The Wood Pigeon Lehmann

6.50 TRIO
First Trio (Finale) Beethoven

THIS is a rollicking, full-speed Movement that makes a good deal of use of that opening Piano motif of two notes, and 'keeps the pot a-boiling,' though its Main Tunes are in quite different moods. These are easily to be picked

Part I.

Overture, 'The Marriage of Figaro' .. Mozart
Prelude, 'L'Après Midi d'un Faune' .. Debussy
Eighth Symphony .. Beethoven
Suite, 'L'Arlesienne' .. Bizet-Ronald Shepherd's Hey .. Grainger

THE faun is a sort of minor god Pan, a rural half-deity, the upper part that of a man, with horns, and the lower part that of a goat, with hoofs and tail. He is resting slumberously in the heat of the day, and half dreaming. There drift through his mind thoughts of the Nymphs he has pursued with his affections; he reflects on the woods, the pools and the meadows where he has sought them, and, at last, vaingloriously and sacrilegiously, he wonders whether the time may not come when upon the slopes of Etna he may perhaps meet the great goddess Venus herself. With a start he realizes his sacrilege, and dreads punishment.

This piece of Debussy exhibits at its highest development his 'impressionistic' manner. It is all very vague and indefinite and hazy, as the picture of a summer afternoon should be. It glows with sunlight and palpitates with heat. The orchestral colouring is wonderfully delicate; the thought extremely poetical.

THE Eighth Symphony, the shortest of all Beethoven's works in that form (if we except the early First one), is full of lively good spirits. It shows how the great artist rises above unfavourable conditions. At the time he wrote it Beethoven had a lot of worry about the domestic affairs of his younger brother. His general health was not good, and, worst of all, deafness was creeping upon him. Yet he never wrote a gayer work than this.

The Symphony is in four Movements. The First and Last are quite vigorous, and have delightful touches of humour. There is the usual Minuet as Third Movement, and instead of a slow Second Movement, we have one of the most delicious, care-free little pieces imaginable.

COUNTRY folk in Elizabethan days danced the hey (or 'hay'), a lively measure having something of the style and jollity of the reel. Constable Dull, in Love's Labour Lost, says: 'I will make one in a dance, or so; or I will play the Tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the Hey.'

Shepherd's Hey is still a popular folk-dance. Percy Grainger, in this effective Orchestral arrangement, has peppered and salted it 'to taste.'

10.15-11.0 SYMPHONY CONCERT (Continued)

LAFFITTE with THE WIRELESS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, conducted by Sir LANDON RONALD Second Piano Concerto Rachmaninov

MANY of the modern Russian Composers have shown themselves to possess the spirit of pioneers. Rachmaninov is not one of these. His music is not very progressive; he does little to extend the bounds of musical expression. But what he composes is well written and attractive, and hence it gives pleasure to large numbers of people.

The Second Pianoforte Concerto first appeared twenty-three years ago. There are three Movements, as follows:—

1. At a moderate speed. Some opening chords for the pianist alone, beginning very softly, and gradually becoming louder, lead straight into the First Main Tune of the Movement, a broad, impassioned one given to Strings and Clarinet (the Piano meanwhile accompanies, with rapid, harp-like passages).

This continues for some time, and then works up to a climax, and stops dead, the Viola and Clarinet just keeping things going for a bar or two by a softly-played phrase that leads into the Second Main Tune of the Movement, a song-like, rhapsodical passage, given out as a Piano Solo, with occasional orchestral trimmings.

The chief material of the Movement has now been heard, and all that follows grows out of it.

2. Slow and sustained. Here the Stringed instruments wear their mutes throughout, so producing a silvery tone.

After a few bars of very quiet Introduction, the Piano is heard alone, and then, whilst it continues, there creep in little solo passages for Flute and for Clarinet. A few moments later the Piano takes over these bits of tune, and the Clarinet with the First Violins (plucked, instead of bowed) takes over the accompaniment formerly played by the Piano.

Much in this style the Movement continues. In one place, towards the end, a brilliant Cadenza (or showy flourish) offers the Pianist an opportunity.

3. Quick and playful. This opens with quiet, detached chords in the Orchestra, which gradually get louder and lead into another Cadenza by the Pianist.

A few more bars of Orchestra, and then the Pianist takes over again, this time giving out, near the top of the keyboard (the Orchestra taking a rest meanwhile) the First Main Tune of the Movement, a florid, light-handed one. This is then repeated (in a shortened form) with a light orchestral accompaniment.

The passage works up to an impressive climax, answered by the Piano alone, and there enters the Second Main Tune, played by the Oboe, in its lower range, with the Viola doubling it (soft Horn chords and plucked Cellos and Double-basses as accompaniment).

This is the musical material of the Movement, and having noted it and so attained a sub-conscious intimacy with it, the listener will readily follow the rest of the music.

A short talk on insurance
by Mr. Prudence

"Good evening everybody! At the age of 30 I wished to become a capitalist for my family's sake and my own. I could save about 12/6 per week, which would have meant only £33 had I died at the end of the year.

So I took a 30 year Endowment Assurance With-Profits with the Prudential, and this is how I shall stand, assuming bonus is at the present rate of £2.2.0 per cent. At age 60 I shall receive £1630 when I can retire or buy a business. The amount I shall then have paid in premiums will be £991.5.0, but assuming I get income tax rebate on the present scale, the actual cost each year will be £29.14.9, or £892.2.6 in all. Therefore, I shall receive £737.17.6 on my savings by way of dividend or interest, on which I shall not have to pay income tax. And I shall also have protected my family properly during thirty years. Make a note of the address at once.

It is:— 142 Holborn Bars, E.C.1, and don't forget to mention the Radio Times. Good night everybody—goo-od night!"

 Tenth Violin and Pianoforte Sonata .. Beethoven
 Sonata in A (3rd and 4th Movements) .. Franck

THE last of Beethoven's ten Sonatas for Violin and Pianoforte is a lovely blend of seriousness and elevated feeling with charming 'light relief.' It is in four Movements.

THE winsome sweetness and purity of Franck's nature shines out in almost everything he wrote.

His Violin Sonata is in four Movements which have a certain amount of material in common. The last two of these are to be heard this evening.

The THIRD MOVEMENT, varying in speed from Moderate to Very slow, is in very free style, though by no means formless. It is in the nature of a Fantasia, containing a good deal of declamation, in which the Violin is very prominent.

The LAST MOVEMENT (Fairly swift) opens with a fine, sweeping Tune of great length, the whole of which is given out strictly 'in Canon'—the Piano starting and the Violin following, copying the theme a bar behind, right through the Tune. This is really the only Tune out of which the Movement is made. There are passages connecting it in thought with the other Movements.

The Sonata ends with a magnificent declamation (again 'in Canon') of the chief Tune.

CIMAROSA (1749-1801) was one of the most famous of Italian Operatic Composers. His work was very well known abroad in his day. In 1787 he was appointed Chamber Composer to the Empress of Russia, and later became Court Musician to Leopold III. of Austria.

The Secret Marriage is his best remembered work. So highly delighted was the Emperor with the first performance of the gay work that he encoered the entire Opera—and, of course, had to be obeyed!

Fourth Ballad

IN this, the last of the 'Ballads,' the feeling of listening to a romantic tale is overborne by the piece's melancholy. One might conceive it as a brooding upon the past, with a note of tenderness creeping in after the first wistful thought has been expressed. Its passionate close is extremely characteristic of Chopin.

THE STATION ORCHESTRA, conducted by JOSEPH LEWIS
Overture to 'The Merry Wives of Windsor'

NICOLAI'S early home life was not happy, so he ran away. He was befriended by a lawyer, who helped him to obtain a period of musical study in Berlin. Then he became Organist at the Prussian Embassy in Rome, and some years later Conductor of the Vienna Opera. Finally he received the appointment of Court Music Master at Berlin, in which city The Merry Wives of Windsor was produced in 1849, only a couple of months before the Composer's death.

It is a little curious that almost all Composers of Opera have ignored this, the gayest of Shakespeare's comedies. Nicolai and Verdi, however, both treated Falstaff's comical adventures with conspicuous success. The Overture to Nicolai's Opera is as nimble as Falstaff's wits. It has charming vivacity, and a lightness of touch that the composer probably acquired through living in Italy.

THE WESSEX PROGRAMME (December 30)

PROGRAMME NOTES.

WESSEX, the name given to the old kingdom of the West Saxons, the kingdom of Ine and of Alfred, the backbone of the English resistance to the Danish invaders, had to a very considerable extent lost its significance in everyday speech as a generic name for the South-West of England, when it was revived by Mr. Thomas Hardy in the novels which are known throughout the English-speaking world as the Wessex novels.

The Saxon Kingdom of Wessex varied considerably in extent at different periods of its history, but the Wessex of modern times, the Wessex of the Hardy novels, while it includes the adjacent counties of Hampshire, Wiltshire, and Somerset and the outlying shires of Berkshire and Devon, may be said to have its centre in the lovely county of Dorset, which in the past hundred years has been immortalized by two men of outstanding genius, Thomas Hardy and William Barnes.

The Wessex programme which is being given this evening has the supreme advantage not only of having received the imprimatur of Mr. Hardy, but of being designed in collaboration with him. The programme is an attempt to re-create the country life of the Wessex of a hundred years ago, a life which has almost entirely passed away under the disintegrating influences of modern civilization.

The opening episode, 'A Breath of Country Air,' contains one of the most tender lyrics of Barnes, the poet of Dorset—'The Woodlands'; it will be given in the Dorset dialect by Mr. W. R. Bawler, one of the Hardy Players. Later comes 'A Bygone Christmas with the Mellstock Quire,' a scene which will delight all lovers of 'Under the Greenwood Tree.' The sound of voices and the tuning of fiddles will be heard as the choir prepares to sing some of the old-fashioned carols which may have been sung by William Dewy, Tranter Reuben, and the rest of that gladsome company in their conscientious perambulation of the parish of Mellstock on that famous Christmas Eve when young Dick Dewy was destined to lose his heart to the new school-mistress.

After this comes perhaps the most important episode in the Wessex programme, the performance of Mr. Hardy's play, The Three Wayfarers, by the Dorchester Debating and Dramatic Society, known to the world in general as the Hardy Players. The first broadcast of the famous Hardy Players is in itself a unique occasion, and many of those taking part in the play this evening were members of the original cast when it was first produced in Dorchester and in London in 1911.

The Three Wayfarers, which has never been published, was dramatized by Mr. Hardy from his story, 'The Three Strangers,' in 1893. The present production has been supervised by Mr. T. H. Tilley, the honorary producer to the Hardy Players. This comedy, which is not without characteristic touches of grimness, tells how on a tempestuous March evening, at the beginning of the last century, a merry christening party in a shepherd's cottage on the upland is interrupted by the arrival of three strangers who are driven indoors by the storm.

The final episode consists of a number of old Dorset songs grouped under the county motto, 'Who's A-Feard?' a challenge which meets with the ready response which it has found at all times in 'The March Song of the Royal Volunteers of Burton Bradstock, during the Great Terror of 1796-1805.' The great camp above Weymouth during what was then known as the Great War, and the legends that still linger of Napoleon's brief landing on a night reconnaissance on the coast near Lulworth Cove, indicate that Bony was a very real menace to Wessex.

And so with these lingering memories of the junketings and the vigils, the cares and the joys of a life which has now passed completely away, the programme of bygone Wessex closes.

THOMAS HARDY, O.M.

IT is characteristic of Mr. Hardy's unceasing interest in the progress of modern life—he has not disdained the motor-car as a subject for poetry—that he should have entered with enthusiasm into the proposal of broadcasting a Wessex programme, and should have given those who have had the serious responsibility of producing something which should be worthy of so great a theme, the inestimable benefit of his advice and collaboration. And yet this same Mr. Hardy, who at the present time is taking so keen an interest in the possibilities of the new art of broadcasting, must, as a boy, have known and talked with several persons who were living during the Napoleonic wars.

Mr. Hardy, in very truth, has been privileged, as few mortal men are, to live in two worlds, and it is no small tribute to his genius that he has known how to make the best of both of them.

At first on reading the Wessex novels Mr. Hardy seems definitely to be a laudator temporis acti, a lover of the past, a deplorer of change and innovation, and indeed the fact that he has preserved in his novels, for the benefit of succeeding generations, a phase of English rural life which is even now almost entirely non-existent, is perhaps the most valuable of all his achievements.

At first sight, then, on reading the Wessex novels, Mr. Hardy would appear to be in agreement with the customs and conventions of the preceding generation, yet it is not long before one comes upon a passage which shows him in open rebellion against the forces of tradition. Tess, the victim of a social code which, while it liberates the injurer, exacts the uttermost farthing from the injured; Jude, with his passion for learning dogged by his rank in life and the inevitable degrading influences which it entails, show Mr. Hardy in arms against a Society which he has hitherto been championing. For the golden age of rural life, the passing of which is so frequently deplored, is not far removed from an age which would have sent such as Tess to Bridewell and would have smiled contemptuously on the aspirations of a Jude.

Behind all the characters of the novels there is the background of Nature, and the Wessex land revealed in an infinite variety of moods. So delicate is the observation that almost every field seems to have its distinctive outlook, and while the 'calcareous downs and cornlands' seem in comparison with the vales a foreign soil though actually in the same county, the Vale of Blackmoor is given all its subtle characteristics which differentiate it from the Valley of the Frome. No writer has ever attempted to describe the scenery of a whole district on the scale on which Mr. Hardy has delineated the Wessex landscape, and the debt which all lovers of Wessex owe to him for this alone is almost incalculable.

WILLIAM BARNES, THE DORSET POET.

William Barnes, the Dorset poet, some of whose delightful dialect poems are included in the Wessex programme, has been aptly described as the Theocritus of the English life of his day. He was born near Pentridge, in Dorset, in 1800. He was a great philologist and held strongly that the Dorset dialect was another and a purer form of English, and it is in accordance with this belief that the greater portion of his poetry is written in dialect.

It has been said of Barnes that 'no other writer has given quite so sincere and simple a picture of the homely life and labour of rural England.' He is appreciated in his own county of Dorset, but he deserves a wider circle, some of his lyrics being of extreme beauty. The fact that he wrote in dialect has no doubt militated against his greater popularity, yet Scotsmen are not dissuaded from reading their Burns because he wrote in the Doric.

By THE ABBEYDALE AMATEUR MUSICAL SOCIETY ORCHESTRA and CHORUS, conducted by W. WRIGLEY

Arranged by JOHN COOPER.
 GLADYS SOMERFIELD (Contralto) and Chorus
 Welcome, Yule (Words 15th Century, Melody 1625)
 Carol, 'God Bless You, Merry Gentlemen'

THE Churchmen of old knew how to turn to their advantage the songs, of pagan origin, with which their folk loved to greet the various seasons of the year. New words were grafted on the old tunes, and fresh tunes came into existence. Thus were shaped the Carols we know, and the one-time heathen songs and celebrations became a powerful means of enforcing religious truths.

Welcome, Yule, with its charming fifteenth-century words, is a capital specimen of the robust, hearty carol.

7.30 A DREAM-FANTASY OF 1926

LISTENERS will remember that on last New Year's Eve there was broadcast from the London Station a programme entitled 'Reminiscences of 1925,' during which brief excerpts from some of the most popular items of the year were introduced. This programme met with such general appreciation that again this year we shall look backward upon the year's achievements and present in a few brief flashes some of the favourite items of 1926. The programme this evening, like that of last New Year's Eve, has been conceived and written by Mr. R. E. Jeffrey. It is a dream-fantasy; and listeners are asked to bring to their aid an unfettered imagination and an undivided attention. The listener is advised to choose a comfortable chair, lower the lights of the room and as far as possible ensure freedom from interruption. As the fantasy progresses there will be mingled impressions of the following outstanding transmissions of the year: DAME MELBA; 'THE MIKADO'; SHAKESPEARE'S HEROINES; THE CROYLAND BELLS; THE NATIONAL CONCERTS; SIR HARRY LAUDER; THE SAVOY BANDS; SANDLER AND HIS ORCHESTRA; THE NEW GALLERY ORGAN; 'WINNERS'; WILL HAY; 'LA TRAVIATA'; 'ELIJAH' and the NIGHTINGALE.

9.30 MR. LANGFORD REED: 'Nonsense Verse'

NONSENSE Verse is a form of writing that is very highly esteemed nowadays, when it has such distinguished exponents as Hilaire Belloc, G. K. Chesterton, Lord Alfred Douglas, E. C. Bentley, and A. P. Herbert—to name only a few. Mr. Langford Reed has done a good service to the cause by editing an anthology of nonsense verse (as well as one of Limericks, which can be a very similar form of verse) in which his own creations were in no way the least amusing.

9.45 CHOPIN

Interpreted by SOLOMON

Fantasia in F Minor

CHOPIN'S Fantasia is one of the most powerful expressions of the virile, elemental side of his nature.

In it some people find a programme—a quarrel and reconciliation between Chopin and the novelist, George Sand, by whom he was passionately attracted.

It is, of course, very doubtful if there is anything actually pictorial in the music—anything more than a mere recollection, perhaps, of strongly emotional experiences; but the strange ardour and restlessness of the music are sufficiently fascinating, without any background of story at all.

CHOPIN

Interpreted by SOLOMON

Berceuse; Barcarolle.

THE Cradle Song is a little marvel of delicacy and sweetness. On two bass chords only (with one other chord used for an instant, near the end) Chopin balances a dainty rocking tune, the airiest, sweetest little lullaby imaginable.

Chopin's Barcarolle (the only piece he wrote in this style) has a good deal of the spirit of his Nocturnes, but is longer than most of these night-pieces.

General Singing conducted by Dr. R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS

King Herod and the Cock

The Keeper

The Sailor from the Sea

Spanish Ladies

THIS is the first performance of our English National Dances to be given by the English Folk Dance Society in the Royal Albert Hall. It takes its name from the Festival which is being held on the previous day and which was inaugurated last year, to give folk dancers from all parts of England an opportunity of meeting and showing their dancing to each other.

The performance has been organized to enable members of the public to measure and appreciate the deep-rooted interest that is now taken in our English songs and dances.

The dancers taking part at the Albert Hall number nearly 500 and they represent thirty-two of the forty-five existing branches of this Society that cover England. They are all amateurs, culled from every section and class of Society, who have taken up the dancing for pure pleasure and who will dance at this performance to share their pleasure with others.

General singing of folk songs (by both performers and public), which has formed an integral part of the Society's activities for the last fifteen years, will take place during the performance.

CHOPIN LISTENING TO FOLK SONGS.

It is well known that Chopin, two more of whose compositions are being interpreted by Solomon to-night [London 9.0] used to gather inspiration from the folk songs of the people. This woodcut by Barbara Grey shows the composer listening to the songs sung by the reapers in the harvest field.

unto them by the shepherds. But Mary kept all these things, and ponder'd them in her heart.
(31, 32, 33, 34 and 35 Omitted.)

PART IV.

ON NEW YEAR'S DAY, THE FESTIVAL OF THE CIRCUMCISION.
(36 Omitted.)

37. RECIT.—Tenor.

And when eight days were fulfill'd for the circumcising of the Child, His name was called Jesus, which was so called of the angel before He was conceived in the womb.

38. DUET.

RECIT.—Bass.

Immanuel, beloved Name,
To save mankind He came,
For me doth Jesus live,
Himself for me doth Jesus give,
And evermore within my sight
I will near Jesus dwell.
My Jesus all my joy doth make,
And bids my spirit comfort take.

Arioso.—Soprano.

Jesus, Thou that for me livest,
Bridegroom of my waiting heart;
Thou Thyself that for me givest,
Bearing e'en death's bitter smart.

Bass.

Come! I will with delight embrace Thee,
And never shall my heart release Thee;
Ah! then take me to Thee!

RECIT.—Bass.

When death o'ertakes me, Thou alone
My strength and stay shalt be;
In need, distress, perplexity,
I look and long for Thee.
And in the hour of death
What shall my comfort be?
Lord Jesus, when I die,
I shall not die eternally.

Thy Name upon me Thou dost write,
Which puts the fear of death to flight.

39. AIR.—Soprano.

Ah! my Saviour, I entreat Thee,
Tell me, should I fear to greet Thee?
Should Thy Name inspire dismay?
Nay, Thou Saviour sayest nay.

Should I now from death be flying?
Nay, Thou dost in mercy say:
Or before Thy face be joying?

Yea, Thou Saviour sayest yea.

40. DUET.—Soprano and Bass.

Jesu, Thou my joy and pleasure,
My redemption that hast won,
King and Shepherd, Light and Sun,
Thou my portion, hope, and treasure.
Ah! how shall I worthily,
O Lord Jesus, honour Thee?

'Tis well! Thy Name, O Lord, alone within my heart shall dwell,

And I in bliss to Thee will still be turning,
When all my heart with love to Thee is burning,
Lord Jesus, teach Thou me to honour Thee.

41. AIR.—Tenor.

'Tis Thee I would be praising ever,
My Saviour, give me power and skill,
And all my heart with ardour fill.
Strengthen me, that Thy mercy worthily to praise
I may endeavour.

42. CHORAL.

Jesus, who didst ever guide me,
Jesus, my strong helper be;
Jesus, gave, whate'er betide me,
Jesus, make me trust in Thee;
Jesus, let Thy grace attend me,
Jesus, still from sin defend me.

PART V.

ON THE SUNDAY AFTER NEW YEAR'S DAY.

43. CHORUS.

Glory be to God Almighty,
Glory, thanks and praise be giv'n,
All the earth doth worship Thee,
Thou that wilt our Father be,
Thou that wilt henceforth grant our utmost longings,
And bring Thy children with joy unto heaven.

44. RECIT.—Tenor.

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, in the days of Herod the King, behold there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying—

45. CHORUS AND RECIT.—Alto.

Where is the new-born King of the Jews?
For we have seen His star in the East,
And are come to worship Him.
Seek Him within my breast,
For with me He vouchsafes to rest.
Rejoice that you this light behold,
That doth its kindly beam unfold:
My Saviour, Thou—Thou art the light
That shall upon the Gentiles shine:
Thy beams shall make their darkness bright,
And they shall surely hail it Thine,
How pure, how clear that light must be,
That shines, O Lord, from Thee.

46. CHORAL.

All darkness fies before Thy face,
The shades of night to day give place
In Thy ways lead us ever,
That from Thy sight and glorious light
Our hearts may wander never.

(47 Omitted.)

48. RECIT.—Tenor.

And when Herod the King heard it, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him:

49. RECIT.—Alto.

With fear why are ye taken?
Why should the presence of the Lord in you such dread awaken?
O! greet with thankfulness the love He is revealing,
He comes that He may bless our sinful race with perfect healing.

50. RECIT.—Tenor.

And gathering together all the chief priests and scribes of the people, he enquired of them where the Christ should be born; and they said to him, in Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, for thus it is written by the Prophet: And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art in no wise the least among the princes of Judah, for out of thee shall come forth a leader that shall be Shepherd of my people Israel.

51. TERZETTO.—Soprano, Alto, and Tenor.

Ah! when shall we see salvation?
Ah! when comes our consolation?
Peace, for surely this is He!
Jesus, ah! then come to me.

(52 and 53 Omitted.)

PART VI.

ON THE FESTIVAL OF THE EPIPHANY.

54. CHORUS.

Lord, when our haughty foes assail us,
O! may it for our peace avail us
To rest upon Thy mighty pow'r.
Our only trust, do Thou befriend us,
All needful strength and succour send us,
To keep us safe in danger's hour.

55. RECIT.—Tenor and Bass.

Then Herod called the wise men privily, and learned of them exactly what time the star appear'd. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go your way, and inquire exactly for the young child, and when ye have found Him, bring me word, that I may come and worship Him also.

56. RECIT.—Soprano.

Thou traitor, thou but seek'st the Lord to kill,
And triest ev'ry craft to work on Him thy will.
But He whose pow'r no tongue can tell
Is kept in all His ways.

(57 Omitted.)

58. RECIT.—Tenor.

And they, when they had heard the King, went their way. And lo! the star which they had seen in the east went before them, until it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star they rejoiced exceedingly, and coming into the house, they saw the young child with Mary His mother; and falling down, they worshipped Him, and having opened their treasures, they offer'd Him gold, frankincense, and myrrh.

(59 Omitted.)

60. RECIT.—Tenor.

And being warned of God in a dream that they

(Concluded at foot of next col.)

Setting the B.B.C. to Music.

THE accident that musical notes are called by alphabetical names has given composers a chance of which they have often availed themselves of basing a composition upon a name—usually as a compliment to the bearer of the name. Many composers (notably Bach and Schumann) have thus used the name B-A-C-H (H, it may be explained, is, in German, the same as the English B, the German B being our B Flat).

Some day we must give in these pages a list of examples of what may be called 'Initial Music.'

Meantime, of topical interest is a new composition by Kenneth A. Wright, a young composer various of whose light melodious pieces have been broadcast from time to time. He has seized a 'wireless' opportunity and has written a B.B.C. Waltz, upon this theme:—

Trumpet Call

Here is one example of the way the theme is applied:—

Violins (then Oboes)

And here is another:—

The waltz is to have its first performance in the broadcasting programme late on New Year's Eve, and will probably be heard again very shortly as a part of another interesting programme.

No amount of alphabetical ingenuity will save a piece if it is not musically interesting, but the theme chosen in this instance obviously admits of varied and tuneful treatment, and the report of those who have been privileged with a private hearing of this composition is that it is a very pleasant music indeed, with a modern tinge—but not too modern either to be danced to or to be listened to with enjoyment by all of us.

should not return to Herod, they departed by another way to their own land.

(61 Omitted.)

62. AIR.—Tenor.

Ye foes of man, your might is shaken,
Dismay no more in me ye waken,
My strength, my shield is ever near;
What though with fear ye strive to fill me,
And threaten in your rage to kill me,
Behold! my Saviour dwelleth here.

63. RECITATIVE SOLI.

O'er us no more shall fears of hell,
No more shall sin or death prevail,
Our Saviour, Jesus, will not fail.

64. CHORAL.

Now vengeance hath been taken
On all the foes of Man,
And Christ doth end in triumph
The conflict He began.
Sin, Death, and Hell, and Satan,
Their mighty Victor own;
And Man doth stand forgiven
Before His Father's throne.

*Little brown box, I do love thee;
You make Wireless loud for me!*

A NEW joy has come into Joan's life. Wireless that she can hear without sitting still with Headphones tight over her ears. Time was when she couldn't run about when Daddy was struggling with the Crystal Set. 'Ssh! Ssh!' it was, everlastingly!

Now all that is gone. Since the little brown box was brought home Joan has sat day by day, hour after hour, listening to the Loud Speaker working from the little Crystal Set. For the 'little brown box,' is the Brown Crystal Amplifier. The instrument which makes Loud Speaker reproduction possible for almost everyone. Not a valve is needed. Nor any other method of amplification. No accumulators.

Just the Crystal Amplifier connected to the Crystal Set, an ordinary 4½ volt dry battery and a Loud Speaker. Thus, if you are not more than fifteen miles from a Broadcasting Station (Daventry, 80 miles) your Crystal Receiver will give you the results enjoyed by your friend the valve user, without any of the expense and trouble which is his! Here's an idea for Christmas! Treat the family to a Brown Crystal Amplifier. It's a boon that's worth every penny of its price of £4 4s. The famous Brown Loud Speakers can be bought at prices ranging from 30s. to £15 15s. There are nine of them. Ask your Dealer to demonstrate and note the excellent reproduction when a Brown Loud Speaker is used.

EQUAL TO A £20 LOUD SPEAKER.

The success of any loud speaker depends primarily upon the sound reproducing base. In the LISSENOLA Loud Speaking Unit you have a base which will repeat everything it hears—no hidden tones—no indistinct whispers—no wooden notes. The introduction of the LISSENOLA Loud Speaking Unit marked an epoch in loud-speaking devices. You can do everything with it—attach it to any gramophone tone arm in place of the sound box, and you have a cabinet loud speaker, which can be turned back to a gramophone just as easily. Fit any horn to it, build it into a cabinet, attach it to a cone diaphragm by means of the unique LISSENOLA Reed. So sensitive is it you can use it on small-powered sets, so powerful is it you can put it on to a big power amplifier without the slightest chance of distortion. It will do everything you want it to.

SEVEN DAYS' TEST.

Buy a LISSENOLA and put it to the most exacting tests you can think of. Compare it against any expensive loud speaker a friend may have. If at the end of seven days you do not definitely prefer the LISSENOLA for tone purity and power to any loud speaker you have tested it against, take it back to the shop and your money will be refunded in full.

Make sure you get a LISSENOLA. You can avoid all the risks of an imitation, by asking for and insisting upon being given the LISSENOLA Loud Speaking Unit.

Sold by all good radio dealers.

L.107.

There has come a new battery to improve Radio this Christmas—

Resulting in a new power, a new smoothness in loud speaker reproduction, a new freshness of tone, a new naturalness, a new clearness, all at this moment uniting to give a new enjoyment of radio to the many thousands who have bought and are using it this Christmas.

A LISSEN New Process Battery—made as no other battery, with a secret in each which many battery makers would give much to know—jealously guarded and exclusive to LISSEN. All who use it are finding a new delight in their loud speakers because of a new and better utterance.

And it is not dear. LISSEN has put into operation a new direct to dealer policy of distribution which cuts out all wholesale profits and ensures, too, that every LISSEN battery is brimful of new energy when you put it into your set.

Your dealer sells this LISSEN battery. Ask him for "LISSEN New Process," and take no other.

LISSEN NEW PROCESS Battery is rated at 60 volts, but goes considerably over.

battery to know what a good loud speaker and a good battery can do together.

A Transformer Without a Precedent—

a GREAT CHOKE as well as a GREAT TRANSFORMER!

Transformer and Choke coupled amplifiers give greater and better volume per stage than resistance capacity coupled amplifiers (popularly referred to as r.c. sets). Less skill is also required in balancing an r.c. circuit to suit the valves used, an important point which requires careful watching in r.c. sets. No special high tension voltage is necessary for transformer and choke couplings, either. Transformers and Chokes are widely used, therefore, for excellent reasons. The advantage of being able to use a Transformer also as a Choke is obvious. And NOT ONLY IS THE NEW LISSEN A GREAT TRANSFORMER, but by the simple act of connecting two of its four terminals together, we have found it to be A GREAT CHOKE, ALSO.

LISSEN has therefore given you a radio part that saves you buying two parts—for a single LISSEN Transformer now enables you to make use of the two most used methods of low frequency amplification.

FOR USE AS A CHOKE :

All you have to do is to connect together the terminal marked O.P. to the terminal marked I.S. Then take a connection from the remaining two terminals, and you have a HIGHLY EFFICIENT CHOKE. Your dealer will show you how easily you can do this if you do not already know. Ask him.

Test this new LISSEN as a transformer against the most expensive transformer you know of—test it as a Choke against the most expensive Choke you know of. If within seven days you find a better Transformer or a better Choke, no matter how high its price, then take the new LISSEN back to your dealer. It is significant that LISSEN has unhesitatingly withdrawn in favour of this new LISSEN all the previous expensive LISSEN transformers which have been on the market for several years.

USE IT AS A TRANSFORMER—USE IT AS A CHOKE, either way it AMPLIFIES FULLY EVERY NOTE, EVERY TONE, EVERY HARMONIC, EVERY OVERTONE. Never again pay a high price for a transformer—this new LISSEN will replace any transformer mentioned or used in any circuit. Choose your own transformer, and your own parts. Remember there are many advertising manufacturers, and that they expect a share of the use and mention of their products in any circuit published in periodicals. You can gain in performance and in economy if you choose your own transformer and other parts, for LISSEN now gives you keen prices as well as LISSEN quality.

GUARANTEED FOR 12 MONTHS

*Turns ratio 3 to 1. Resistance ratio 4 to 1.
Use it for 1, 2, or 3 stages L.F.*

It is suitable for all circuits and all valves you will want to use.

LISSEN LIMITED, 300-320, FRIARS LANE, RICHMOND, SURREY.

(Managing Director : Thos. N. Cole.)

THE NEW ENLIGHTENMENT—

THE old idea in set building was to follow blindly the parts named as being used in the circuits published in a favourite periodical. Now this is changed, and A NEW ENLIGHTENMENT HAS COME AT LAST—users now know that they can replace every part named in any published circuit with the corresponding part in the LISSEN range with an improvement in the performance of the finished receiver, and a big saving in the cost of building it. For LISSEN, aided by huge production, unrivalled manufacturing facilities, with advanced plant ideas, has made LISSEN quality parts available to all at new low prices which arrest the attention of everybody wanting anything in radio.

Any time you want a radio part or a group of parts, no matter what may be specified in the circuit you are building, be sure not to buy before you see the corresponding parts in the LISSEN range. Compare LISSEN and the others side by side. Pick out the better made parts, and you will choose LISSEN every time, for LISSEN is pre-eminent in the making of fine parts for radio.

Every good dealer has them, and will give you any advice you require about building. You will find him friendly and anxious to please you.

FOR AN AMPLIFIER—

1 LISSEN Transformer 8/6, 1 LISSEN Wire Rheostat 2/6, 1 LISSEN Fixed Condenser 1/-, 1 LISSEN Valve Holder 1/-; you can see it is not dear. Perhaps you only need a one-valve amplifier to make your crystal set into a loud-speaker set?—Then you can enjoy real radio with the LISSEOLA Loud Speaker.

ON FIXED CONDENSERS.

You gain in this way if you use a LISSEN—you get a condenser accurate to 5% of its marked capacity, and a condenser which will never leak, never vary. You get, too, a condenser which LESS THAN A YEAR AGO WAS BEING SOLD AT TWICE ITS PRESENT PRICE—AND NOW YOU ACTUALLY GET A BETTER CONDENSER, TOO, THE FINEST FIXED CONDENSER THAT IS MADE TO-DAY.

LISSEN Fixed Mica Condensers:—.0001 to .001, 1/- each (much reduced). .002 to .005, 1/6 each (much reduced). (Every grid condenser has a pair of clips included free.) Note the new improved case which enables the LISSEN condenser to be fitted upright or used flat. Note the convenient grid leak fixing.

Add 10% to the life of your H.T. Battery—

Put a LISSEN 2 mfd. condenser across it (1 mfd. will do, but the larger size is better). Your H.T. battery will then GROW OLD WITHOUT YOUR KNOWING IT. Your dealer will tell you how easily to fit.

LISSEN (Mansbridge type) Condensers:—
2 mfd. 4/8 1 mfd. 3/10.

Other capacities are:—

.01	2/4
.05	2/4
.25	3/-
.025	2/4
.1	2/6
.5	3/4

YOU PAY NO MORE FOR A LISSEN, YET GET A BETTER CONDENSER.

To a fine quality condenser has been added a specially moulded case which, itself a solid insulator, gives you much needed protection when you use big capacity condensers for eliminator circuits. The LISSEN condenser cannot short circuit on to its case—that is an important advantage which is exclusive to this LISSEN condenser.

SILENT GRID LEAKS.

Never a sound do they make in use, for they never alter. This has been proved by the drastic step of testing them by exposure to rain and sun on our factory roof—once made, THEY ARE FIXED IN THEIR RESISTANCE VALUE.

All resistances one price—Previously 1/8 NOW 1/-

BUILD WITH ALL LISSEN PARTS—and your receiver will yield clearer and louder signals than ever you can get with parts of assorted make, because every LISSEN part will pull strongly with the other.

LISSEN PARTS—WELL THOUGHT OUT, THEN WELL MADE.

De Groot — Wonderful Testimony to the GECOPHONE

4 VALVE RECEIVING SET AND

CONE

LOUD SPEAKER

This striking testimony from De Groot, the eminent violinist and musical director, emphasises the extraordinary purity of reproduction given by the "GECOPHONE" Receiver and "CONE" Loud Speaker.

Discriminating listeners appreciate the tremendous advance which this new "CONE" Loud Speaker represents.

For speech and for music it marks a new era of better reception.

Dear Sirs,

At last I can enjoy listening to "wireless", thanks to the wonderful "GECOPHONE" receiving set which you have just installed in my flat.

Not only am I astonished at the purity and quality of the reception, but it is difficult to realise that this marvellous transmission should come through what appears to be just a mahogany cabinet.

The only indication to the contents of the cabinet is the "Cone" loud-speaker; and while on this subject, I should like to add that the realistic reproduction obtained on this loud-speaker is amazing. When an orchestra is playing, one can detect every individual instrument.

I would also like to add that the "Hart" Accumulators I am using for both my High and Low Tension supply continue to be in every way most satisfactory.

I can now truthfully say that "listening-in" is a great pleasure.

Yours sincerely,

De Groot

The installation supplied to De Groot was a "GECOPHONE" 4-valve Cabinet Model, complete with four D.E.5. OSRAM VALVES and "GECOPHONE" "CONE" Loud Speaker.

—the Cossor Kalenised Filament sets new record for long life

AFTER an ordinary life test of 2,500 hours at 1.8 volts the Cossor Point One valve shown above was broken open and suspended by its filament. Even after this amazing test the Kalenised filament was still pliable and supple. There were no signs of brittleness. Indeed, the valve could have given satisfactory service for an even greater period. Based upon an average of 20 hours per week this is equivalent to 2½ years' regular use.

Never before in the history of valve making have such remarkable results been possible. Only the new Kalenised filament could have successfully withstood such a drastic test.

The reason is obvious. The Cossor Kalenised filament gives off a torrent of electrons practically without heat. Certainly no glow is visible when the valve is working. Heat is the destructive influence which sets up crystallisation in the ordinary filament. The molecules become displaced—a weak spot occurs—and, suddenly without warning, the filament fractures.

All this is now ended. The Cossor is the only valve to be fitted with the Kalenised filament. It is, indeed, the real long life valve. You, as a shrewd wireless enthusiast, will choose the valve which will last longest with the least consumption of current. That is why you will want the Cossor Point One—the 2-volt Dull Emitter taking only one-tenth of an ampere. 210D Detector and 210H H.F. Amplifier 14/- each. Stentor Two Power Valve 18/6. Louden Valves

TOWN HALL, PORTSMOUTH.

"No sign of deterioration after 2½ years' rough usage."

If any further proof were needed of the sterling, lasting qualities of Louden Valves, it is supplied in Mr. Leach's letter.

You are missing a good thing if you are not using Louden Valves.

"Dear Sirs,

"Two and a half years ago I purchased 3 Louden Valves, and I have kept them in constant use since. I have great pleasure in informing you that the valves show no sign of deterioration, although they have had very rough usage.

"Yours sincerely,

"(signed) A. LEACH (Portsmouth)."

Louden Valves are made by British labour in a British factory with British capital and can be depended upon for the finest volume, range and silver clearness. They can only be offered at such low prices because of our well-known policy of selling direct to the public and cutting out the middleman's profit.

Type B. Unit for Alternating Current
£4 : 10 : 0.

HIGH TENSION FROM YOUR ELECTRIC LIGHT

If you have Electric Light, send for a Fellophone H.T. Mains Unit and do away with the expense of renewing exhausted Batteries.

All you have to do is to plug the adaptor of the Mains Unit into a lamp holder, switch on, and an inexhaustible supply of H.T. current is at your disposal.

Fellophone Mains Units possess, among others, the following advantages.

- 1. ABSOLUTE SAFETY. An ample margin of safety is provided in these Units which completely safeguards them against breakdown. They are as safe to fit as an electric light globe and as safe to handle when working as an H.T. Battery.
- 2. LOW COST. The current consumed by these Units is no more than that taken by a "night light" electric lamp. They are thus extremely economical and they rapidly save the cost of renewing Batteries.
- 3. PERFECT RECEPTION. When ordering state the voltage of your lighting mains and (if current is alternating) the frequency. Your Mains Unit will then give you perfect reception free from all "ripple" or "hum."
- 4. A.C. or D.C. Fellows Mains Units are made either for Alternating Current or Direct Current and for all voltages commonly in use for lighting.
- 5. SINGLE OR MULTI VOLTAGE. These Units, whether for A.C. or D.C., are made in two TYPES. Type A. delivers a single value only of H.T. Voltage. Type B. delivers three separate values, two of which are variable over twelve tapplings, thus enabling the exact required voltages to be applied to several valves at once. (For further description see pages 28 and 29 of our Catalogue No. 10.)
- 6. SEVEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL. You can have a Fellows Mains Unit on seven days' trial by remitting full value. If you are not more than pleased with it, return it to us in good condition and we will promptly refund your full remittance.

ACCUMULATORS

To prove our absolute confidence in these accumulators, we guarantee, if you are not satisfied, to accept return within 21 days from purchase date, and refund money in full, provided battery is returned intact to the Agent from whom it was purchased.

C.A.V. H.T. Accumulators represent an epoch-making advance as compared with dry batteries. When dry batteries are down, they are done, and frequent renewals make them more expensive. C.A.V. H.T. accumulators will last for years, and only need re-charging approximately every four months. They give bigger volume and are silent in operation.

Study these figures

The higher the filament figure of merit the more you get for your money. Note the high values (between 45 and 74) given by the wonderful Mullard P.M. Filament in the Mullard P.M. Series of Valves.

Even the best ordinary dull filaments have a figure of merit from 14 up to 45 that barely approaches the minimum figure of the P.M. Series.

The extravagant and low figures between 2 and 5 of bright filaments are strikingly obvious.

The filament figure of merit is an accurate indication of what any filament gives in exchange for the correct applied input.

A comparison of figures of merit taken from a wide range of filaments shows the marked superiority of Mullard design. A study of the accompanying scale will indicate the vastly increased "output for input" possessed by Mullard P.M. Valves. This is due without question to the excellence of the Mullard P.M. Filament. Its generous emission of up to 5½ times that of an ordinary filament with its low current consumption of only one tenth ampere give it a remarkable performance of high efficiency.

To feel the rich reserve of power that is placed behind your rheostats when you fit Mullard P.M. Valves and to know that your accumulator charges can last up to 7 times as long as before is a pleasure and certainty for satisfaction that every radio amateur should lose no time in securing. Thousands have proved for themselves the manifold advantages of these valves with the wonderful Mullard P.M. Filament.

Make your radio a real success this season with Mullard P.M. Valves.
