Had Newton Never Lived—

Mr. Bertrand Russell's Tribute to the Founder of Modern Science.

We publish this week, in response to many requests from listeners throughout the country, Mr. Bertrand Russell's striking address which was broadcast recently from London and other stations on the occasion of the tercentenary of the birth of the great philosopher and scientist Isaac Newton.

IF Newton had never lived, the world would be a very different place from what it is. To begin with the most obvious remark in this connection, there would have been no broadcasting. I do not mean that Newton's discoveries in astronomy led up to the discoveries that made broadcasting possible—the connection is not so direct as that. But a great deal of mathematics was used in finding out about the kind of waves that are used in broadcasting, and all this mathematics depended upon Newton's methods. Clerk Maxwell showed that there ought to be such waves, and Hertz actually made them. Both these men depended upon Newton. Without their work broadcasting could not have been invented.

Newton was probably the greatest scientific man that has ever lived. I can only think of three who have a claim to be put on the same level; they are Archimedes, Galileo, and Einstein. Archimedes was unfortunate in being among the last of the great men of Greece. After him, nobody in the ancient world was able enough to carry on his work, so that it remained sterile for about 1,700 years. Galileo was more fortunate, since he lived in the middle of what Dr. Whitehead rightly calls 'the century of genius.' Galileo's work was brought to completion by Newton. Newton built upon Galileo, as all subsequent physics has built upon Newton.

The kind of difference that Newton has culture, as, for example, in modern China. The ferment in that country is the inevitable outcome of the arrival of Newton upon its shores. When the Spaniards and the Portuguese arrived in China and Japan in the sixteenth century, they produced no such effect as the modern European produces. They did not alter the civilization of those countries to any considerable extent. But when the modern scientific white man arrived he brought with him a civilization so evidently superior in the control over the forces of Nature that the traditional beliefs and habits of thousands of years began to pale. Japan began the adaptation to a Newtonian world sixty years ago; the Chinese are at this moment in the middle of it. In the country districts of China, the peasant cultivates the land as he has done for thousands of years; whereas in the great mills and great mines a modern mechanical world is growing up, just as a modern mental world is growing in the minds of Western-educated Chinese.

If Newton had never lived, the civilization of China would have remained undisturbed, and I suggest that we ourselves should be little different from what we were in the middle of the eighteenth century. The whole of modern life rests upon the control of natural forces achieved by science, and all modern science in almost all its branches is to a greater or less degree dependent upon Newton. If Newton had never lived, the Industrial Revolution would not have taken place, and our daily life, our politics, our amusements would all have been completely different from what they are.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, F.R.S.

One of the most eminent of living philosophers and mathematicians. His speculations in the accompanying article on what the world would have been like had Newton never lived are distinguished, as are all his writings, by knowledge, wit and imagination.

made to the world is more easily appreciated where a Newtonian civilization is brought into sharp contrast with a pre-scientific

If you ask what would happen if a community of people in the modern world were to try to behave as if Newton had never existed, I should say they would first of all have to eliminate from their lives not only Newton's discoveries, but also all that mass of scientific knowledge which we owe to the prestige of science in the eighteenth century. Newton's success was a most sensational and astonishing thing.

In France he had to face at first the hostility of Descartes' followers, but he soon came to be as widely known and as much admired in France as in England. Fashionable ladies discoursed and listened to discourses about him. Marchionesses translated his Principia. The whole intellectual life in France down to the Revolution was dominated by him, so that our community of people who are trying to live as if Newton had never existed will have to cut out everything that is due to that vast scientific movement of the eighteenth century.

Oddly enough, the particular life that Newton lived—namely, the life of a college don—is almost the only one which has been unaffected by his career and which remains the same today as it was two hundred years ago. The port and the jokes are as mellow still as they were in Newton's day.

THE problem which Newton solved almost completely was the problem of the motion of the planets and their satellites. Kepler had discovered by the observation of the planets how they move round the sun, but had not known any reason for their moving as they do. Newton showed that their motions were consequences of his law of gravitation, and also explained why Kepler's accounts of their motions were not wholly accurate. Copernicus had started by thinking that the planets went round the sun in circles. Then Kepler came along and said, 'No, they're not actually circles. They are a little bit flattened out. They are what is called "ellipses."' Newton came along and said, 'No, they are not even ellipses. If there were only the sun and one planet, that planet would move actually in an ellipse, but the other planets also attract it and pull it just a little bit out of the course that it would follow if it were only attracted by the sun.' Newton showed that his law of gravitation explains exactly the ways in which the planets are observed to be pulled aside by each other.

He also explained the motion of the moon, and he showed how his law of gravitation explains the tides, which had remained quite mysterious until that moment. He showed why the earth is flatter at the Poles than at the Equator. In order to do all this work he had to invent new methods in pure mathematics which were at least as important as his discovery of the law of gravitation.

Unlike some great pioneers, Newton never had to fight against the hostility of his contemporaries, with the exception of two or three great men who were jealous, such as Leibniz and Huygens. But, unlike some men who have been considered great in their lifetimes, his greatness has survived.

The chief new thing that has happened of profound interest in the world of physics is the growth of the science of electricity, which has been a vital factor also in the development of Einstein's ideas. In that connection, if Newton had never lived, the difference would have been that scientific men would not possess the mathematical methods needed for dealing with their facts. The experimental work of Faraday required no mathematics, and so was not dependent upon Newton; but the theoretical interpretation of that work by Maxwell depended entirely upon the mathematical methods that Newton had invented, and it would have been impossible without them. And it was also on purely mathematical grounds that Maxwell proved that electromagnetism is the same thing as light.

The power of mind over matter is a curious thing. Newton made funny symbols on paper, and in direct consequence Alan Cobham flies to Australia. Leonardo da Vinci spent an enormous amount of time trying to invent a flying machine, but failed because he did not possess Newton's knowledge of dynamics. Leonardo had no high opinion of himself as a painter, but he considered himself a wonderful man on Fortification, and intended to go down to posterity as the first man to achieve flying, but he got no farther than charming pictures of himself flying. Newton, so far as I know, took no interest in flying. Nevertheless, his work led at last to flying in our own day.

A series of experiments in light and colour led to the first of Newton's great discoveries—that of the reflecting telescope.

Some portions of the public have a mistaken idea that Einstein has undone the work of Newton. The practical difference between Einstein's theory of gravitation and Newton's is so slight that it can only just be discovered by the most delicate observations. For almost all practical purposes, Newtonian methods will continue to be applied, because they are simpler than Einstein's and lead to results so nearly correct that it is seldom necessary to take account of the slight difference resulting from newer ideas. In theory, it is true, there is a profound difference between the system of Einstein and that of Newton. The system of Einstein is more philosophical, and solves difficulties which have long troubled the philosophical student of physics. Moreover, for the first time it makes gravitation seem no longer mysterious. It is scarcely conceivable that the human race could have arrived at Einstein's theory except by way of Newton. It is fortunate from this point of view that the bodies with which we are acquainted on the surface of the earth do not move with velocities approaching that of light. For if they did the Newtonian theory would never have seemed plausible, and men would have had to discover Einstein's theory all at once, or remain content to think the world chaotic; and I do not think that any human being who has yet existed has had sufficient genius to invent such a theory without the stages that have led up to it.

IF Newton could come to life again in our age, he could still be happy at Cambridge, and could derive the most exquisite joy from the Cavendish Laboratory; but outside the Universities I think that he would find the world resulting from his work by no means to his taste. He was a quiet, shy, retiring, academic type of man. He would not like the hustling world of modern commerce or our noisy factories of modern machinery. I doubt whether he would be altogether pleased at the spectacle of a tank or a torpedo. He would regret the quiet countryside, overgrown since his day by manufacturing towns and residential suburbs, and would probably refuse to travel in a train and insist upon taking post horses when he had to go from Cambridge to London. The men who through their thoughts produce great effects in the world do not, however wise they may be, produce the effects they intend or desire. Thought is almost as blind a force as the forces of Nature. The French eighteenth century used Newtonian science to advocate Materialism. Newton himself, as everyone knows, was a man of exemplary piety to whom the thought of such an interpretation of his ideas would have been utterly abhorrent. The man of thought, quite as much as the man of action, has to trust that the stream of events will somehow work out to some good result. He cannot foresee any more than the less educated of his contemporaries what kind of results even his own ideas are going to have; and if he could foresee he would be incapable of judging justly whether these results are good or bad.

Perhaps it is as well that our knowledge of the future is so limited. Perhaps it is fortunate that no method of Newtonian calculations enables us to foretell the perturbations of human beings.

And so, if Newton had never lived, the world at this day would be in many ways more such as Newton would have approved than it is in fact. It would be simpler, quieter, less organized; but also poorer, more ignorant, and less full of hope.

which has been set aside for the Armenian (Lord Mayor's) Fund. This Fund is associated with the United Committee of British Societies in Syria, and assists in the settlement of peasant refugees on suitable land in Tyre and Sidon and in the Alexandretta neighbourhood. At 6.30 the same evening the complete evening service is to be relayed from Carlisle Cathedral. The address will be given by the Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Carlisle (the Rev. Henry Herbert Williams), who has had a distinguished career both as a scholar and a divine. A number of hymns, in addition to an anthem, will be sung by the choir.

A military band concert from the Studio is down for Sunday afternoon, April 24. On the following Tuesday evening the Band of the Grenadier Guards are also giving a performance for broadcasting.

BIRMINGHAM, Manchester and Glasgow Stations are providing part of the five-and-a-half hours of variety items which LONDON and DAVENTRY are giving during the week beginning Sunday, April 24, as representative of the first choice of listeners in the recent programme ballot organized by the B.B.C. and the Daily Mail. The evenings for which these stations are respectively responsible are Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. London Station provides the remainder. The following artists and the dates of their appearance before the microphone can be announced: Monday, April 25: Ronald Frankau, Norman Long, Just Four Fellows, and Harry Hemsley; Wednesday, April 27: Tom Clare and the Houston Sisters, also a sketch entitled Sydney the Spectre; Friday, April 29: Ed. Lowry and Clapham and Dwyer.

Will Hay, the schoolmaster comedian, due back from his American tour on April 28, is starting another, on May 16, when for a week he will broadcast from the main stations in turn each night.

THE SULTAN OF MOCHA, Alfred Cellier's almost forgotten comic opera, is to be produced at the MANCHESTER Station for local and Daventry listeners on Tuesday, April 19. The opera, which is in three acts, is of special interest to Manchester because it was first produced at the Prince's Theatre in that city, where its composer was conductor for some years. Four well-known artists will take part, Miss Evelyn Roselle, the popular actress, taking that of

'Dolly, the lass that loves a sailor.' A booklet is being published containing the libretto of the opera, photographs of the cast and some notes specially written by Mr. John Russell, Librarian of Manchester's famous Henry Watson Music Library. It will be available by post or by personal application to the Station or from local wireless dealers, price 2d.

The origin and history of the Boian's pipe, or call, and the Admiral's whistle, will be dealt with by Mr. Albert Sieceking in a talk from London on Wednesday, April 20. The talk will be illustrated by a retired Navy boy's son.

SHAKESPEARE'S great comedy, The Merchant of Venice, is to be broadcast, in shortened form, from London and other stations on Friday, April 22, to commemorate the anniversary of the poet's birthday, though this is usually observed on St. George's Day, April 23, which happens to be a Saturday this year, and is therefore unsuitable for such a production. The part of Shylock will be taken by Raymond Trafford, that of Portia by Phyllis Neilson Terry, Antonio by Austin Trevor, and Nerissa by Hilda Bruce Potter.

A revue, items by the Railway Clearing House Choir, speeches from the Royal Academy Dinner, and a variety entertainment, are included in Saturday evening's London programme, April 30.

A SURVEY of the Women's Hockey Season and the prospects of the All-England team, which is leaving for Australia on the following day, will be given in a talk from LONDON on Thursday, April 21, by Miss Edith Thompson, President of the All-England Women's Hockey Association. Another noteworthy talk for the same day is by Mrs. Cyril Grant on 'The Aissaouas of North Africa,' one of the numerous brotherhoods into which many of the tribes of North Africa are initiated upon attaining manhood. The little town of Tebourouk, thirty miles from Medjez-el-Bab, is one of their strongholds, and Mrs. Grant has been present at an initiation ceremony. Mr. Sidney Dark, editor of The Church Times, is also giving a travel talk entitled 'Round About Jerusalem.'

You can enjoy the sport of yachting, even on a slender purse. Major Norman Loring will tell how to do it in a talk from London on Saturday, April 23.

A SHORT story entitled The Haunted Gallery, read in the London Studio by Mr. Louis Golding, is to be broadcast from ALL STATIONS on Monday evening, April 18. Mr. Golding is well known as a writer of short stories and novels and has recently given listeners some charming travel talks. Almost immediately after his next broadcast he is starting on an extended visit to the East. A description of a trip to the Victoria Falls will be given the same day by Miss Doris Matthews, a woman journalist, who went to South Africa on holiday, paying her way by writing articles. In this talk she will describe her journey up country from Durban.

Mr. LOUIS GOLDING.

All who participate in the interesting sport of pigeon racing will look forward to a talk on the opening of the season, which Mr. R. Fletcher, President of the National Homing Union, is giving from London on Saturday, April 23.

MR. BOHUN LYNCH, well known as an author and boxing expert, is giving a talk from LONDON on Tuesday, April 19. Mr. Lynch is not only a writer on many diverse subjects, having published several novels, but has also a name for his caricatures, and it is on this subject that he will speak. Listeners will recall his caricatures of literary lions published in The Radio Times for March 25. The same evening Mr. John Scott Hughes will tell listeners something about the great advance in marine inventions made during the last few years to minimize the dangers of sea travelling.

'Here's a Health unto His Majesty!' is the title of the main evening programme from Manchester on St. George's Day, April 23. The Lancaster Military Band and Joseph Farrington (bass) are taking part.

DURING the coming summer a number of military band concerts will be relayed from open-air bandstands, as was done last year. It is hoped to give the first of these from LONDON on Saturday, May 7, though final details have not yet been decided. The Wireless Military Band will be specially augmented for the occasion, and there will also be items from the Studio by the Salisbury Singers, Miss Doris Vane and, it is hoped, by M. Bracony. The last-named is an official at the Radio Belgique Station in Brussels.

'The Last Straw and the Next,' two episodes in the life of 'Reggie' and 'Delia,' by L. de Garde Peach, will be given from London on Thursday, April 28. Miss Phyllis Panting and Mr. John Charlton are the artists.

THE next of the series of operas for which libretti has been prepared, is Gounod's Romeo and Juliet, which Mr. Percy Pitt is to conduct on Friday, April 29, in the LONDON Studio. It is not possible at the moment to state the full cast, but the following parts have been allocated: Juliet, Miss Miriam Licette (soprano); Stephano, Miss Alice Moxon (soprano); Mercutio, Mr. Harold Williams (baritone); and Friar Lawrence, Mr. Norman Allin (bass). During the same week, on Monday, April 25, Mr. Percy Pitt will also conduct a symphony concert, details of which will be announced in due course.

A trip in a steam trawler will be described by Mr. R. A. Todd, District Inspector of Fisheries for the South West area, in a talk from London on Friday, April 22.

ANOTHER of the Sunday afternoon concerts so much appreciated by local listeners will be relayed from the Royal Bath Hotel, Bournemouth, through the local station on Easter Sunday, when the soloists will be Miss Dorothy Bennett and Mr. Glyn Eastman. Among the items to be played by the Hotel Orchestra are Rimsky-Korsakov's Flight of the Bumble Bee and a Serenade by Mr. Gilbert Stacey, Director of the Orchestra. The concert will be preceded by half-an-hour of Chamber Music from the studio, performed by the Premier Wind Quintet and the Wireless Quartet.

Miss D. BENNETT.

Waiting for the News.

IT was just such a cottage as you would expect to find on this lonely bend of the coast, where the wind, more often than not, plays a low obligato to the 'sweet, sad music' of the waves.

Not, perhaps, the kind of cottage to which you dream of retiring when the hurly-burly's over and you can leave the fretful days of the city behind, but a cottage typical in every way of the hardness of life and sturdy independence of those whose living is got from the sea. Set four-square to all the winds that blow, there is about it an air of rugged self-possession.

But tonight, with inky wisps of cloud scudding across the pale moon and the wind whipping the dark sea into white foam, there is something more about the lonely cottage which creates vague apprehensions, a sense of some impending event, a feeling that destiny has chosen this place as the scene for something of momentous import. Do you remember how Stevenson describes the feeling in 'Memories and Portraits'?—'Some places speak distinctly. Certain dank gardens cry aloud for murder; certain old houses demand to be haunted; certain coasts are set apart for shipwreck. Other spots again seem to abide their destiny, suggestive and impenetrable . . . some further business smoulders, waiting for its hour.'

That is just it. Something is going to happen here, perhaps in the little living room, with its square of yellow window-light that dimly illumines the path. A woman, the sole occupant of the cottage, it would seem, is in the room, and she comes frequently to the door, opens it, and gazes anxiously out towards the sea and at the blue skein of clouds crossing the moon. It is a homely room. A pile of linen, ready for the wash, litters the table, a fire of sea-coal burns in the grate with its peculiar speckled glow, and, as if to prove how the rising tide of wireless is finding out the farthest creeks and inlets, a loud-speaker in the corner is giving out the music of some far-off city studio.

It is upon this that the woman's attention seems fastened, when she is not at the door, and she regards it anxiously, in an attitude of expectancy. She is clearly worried. For her the strains of music have no interest: she is enduring them because she is waiting, waiting—for what?

The music from the loud-speaker ceases, and for a spell nothing but the distant boom of the breakers is heard. Then comes the voice of the Announcer, the woman's look changes, and she draws nearer.

'There will be considerable fair periods tomorrow,' the Announcer is saying, 'with light to moderate breezes in all parts.'

A sigh of relief escapes from the woman. Turning, she scoops the dirty linen from the table into her arms, and flings it into the corner with the triumphant words:

'That's good! Now I'll be able to wash to-morrow!'

A Breath of Fresh Air.

[This week A. Bonnet Laird, well known for his Nature talks, comments upon some of the many letters which he has received from listeners.]

Bees' Scarlet Plunder.

SO many questions in my postbag! And many of them quite beyond me. Who will please explain this?

An invalid, watching from a Dorset window last summer, noticed one or two bees, smaller than honey bees, come every day to the geraniums, cut out a crescent-shaped piece of scarlet petal, roll it up neatly, and fly off with it.

Curiously, the same postbag contained a similar query from a Leicester reader, who says he saw a wasp fly across the county cricket ground carrying a whole petal.

Rus in Urbe.

Every week's post brings me some fresh instance showing how close the country is to town. (No wonder, then, that so many of our keenest Nature-watchers are Londoners.)

Who would expect to see a wild drake, bewildered by fog, walking along the tram lines at Willesden Green, as D. C. saw on a Sunday morning? Or weasles at Kingsbury; or, close to the Sandy Gallop, at Hampstead Heath, a young cuckoo (this was last year) being fed by a hedge sparrow, and closely followed from branch to branch by a chaffinch?

Tom-Tit Learns.

Everybody ought to have a bird table. Here is the sort of delight it brings:—

I have a half coconut hanging from the end of a stick just outside my window (writes G. H. W. R., Essex). A few inches above it hangs, by a separate string, a lump of suet. A tit, perched on the stick, could not reach the suet without changing his position, and so caught hold of the string in his bill and pulled the suet up till within reach. So far so good, but he had not wit enough to hold the suet up in his claw, and, naturally, when he let go with his bill to get a bite of suet, it resumed its original position out of reach, whereupon he did what he ought to have done at first, and what all the others do—dropped down on to the coconut and got his meal.

The Mesmerist.

Listeners are never tired of describing to me that arresting, rather harrowing sight, a stoat's attack on a rabbit. A Londoner, E. H. L., sends me not only a diagram of the bold hunter's wary approach, but also a remarkable long-range snapshot (why does not every Nature-lover carry a camera?) of the stoat's final triumph.

Please Look for Yourselves.

A host of listeners, lately, have written to ask me the old, old question: 'Where is your part of the country?'

May I, please, not say? It is a real place; but I would far rather listeners didn't all come tramping there, pleasant company though I am sure they would be—those, I mean, who keep watch with me over Nature's changes.

But wouldn't it be better for everybody who wants to see the pleasant scenes I try to describe to go straight ahead into the nearest country at hand, and find them?

(A. Bonnet Laird dispatches one of his broadcast books this week to the sender of the most interesting item of Nature news—Mr. E. L. Long, 72, Victoria Street, London, E.C.4.)

PART I

BACH has put into his musical setting of the Passion of Jesus a wealth of poignant meaning, and yet he treats the story so simply that there is nothing any listener cannot understand—nothing of which he cannot at once feel the power and the truth.

The Composer aims at making every hearer a participant in the events his music depicts.

The narrative is unfolded in solos and choruses. Every now and again are interpolated 'Chorales'—verses of Lutheran hymns, commenting on the story, and these are intended to represent the emotions and reflections of us listeners as we picture ourselves among the crowds looking on at the events described.

The protagonists of the drama are: the EVANGELIST (Tenor), who gives the connecting narrative; and JESUS (whose words are sung by a Bass).

The voice of PETER is also heard, in a few sentences.

There are solo portions, commenting on the story sung by a Soprano, an Alto, a Tenor, and a Bass.

The FIRST PART of the work tells how the chief priests and the scribes conspired to seize Jesus, while He went about doing good. We follow the treachery of Judas at the Passover, Peter's sturdy insistence on his unshakable loyalty, and our Lord's agony in Gethsemane.

This Part of the work (all we are to hear from London on the present occasion) closes with the taking of Jesus by His enemies.

The Second Part is being broadcast from Daventry at 4.20.

Symphonic Poem, 'Sadko'
Rimsky-Korsakov

COMPOSERS often make orchestral pieces out of the material of their operas. Rimsky-Korsakov, in this case, reversed the process, and made the Opera, Sadko, out of an orchestral work.

The story, as prefixed to the score of the symphonic poem, is as follows:—

The ship of Sadko, a well-known citizen of Novgorod, stops in the sea. Lots are drawn, and Sadko himself is thrown overboard as a tribute to the Sea-King. . . . The ship then goes on its course.

Left alone in the midst of the waves, Sadko, with his lyre, is entertained by the Sea-King in his submarine kingdom. Great festivities are taking place, the Sea-King having just married his daughter to Ocean. The King, having requested Sadko to play on his lyre, begins, with all his court, to dance. Ocean dances too, rises and swallows up the ships; . . . then Sadko slackens the strings of his lyre, the dance ends and the sea becomes calm.

schemes to provide for 42,000 people. These new districts are being adequately equipped with schools, shops, public-houses and cinemas, but no churches. To meet the needs of those parishes that are not able to provide for themselves, an attempt is being made by a representative council to raise £100,000.

Second Hungarian Rhapsody (By Request) Liszt

LISZT'S idea in composing the Hungarian Rhapsodies was, as listeners know, that of glorifying the music of his native land. No folk music has ever been more gorgeously framed than were the gipsies' tunes—which Liszt used in his sonorous fantasias. He adopted the gipsy plan of placing together a slow Movement (called a Lassan) and a quick one (the Friszka).

The Second Rhapsody begins with a short 'call to attention.' Then the leading Tune of the Lassan is pompously announced. The 'cadenza' that follows represents one of the elements in the free improvisatory style of the native musicians.

The next Tune is quiet, but capricious.

One other melodic idea is given out, and with some varied repetition of the foregoing matter the Lassan portion of the piece comes to an end.

Soon we change to the major key, and a new theme enters in phrases of four notes, with a special stress on the usually weak middle part of the bar. A syncopated accompaniment adds to the sprightliness of this. The next tune is in wide 'arpeggio' steps.

One or two other themes, full of zest and point, are brought in, and every kind of sauce is added to make the Rhapsody a piquant dish indeed.

PART II

FOR a general note on the 'Passion,' see London Programme today (3 p.m.), when Part I is being broadcast. That part concludes with the taking of Jesus by His enemies.

Part II begins with a section containing an Air and a Chorus, in which the Daughter of Zion seeks the Saviour.

Follows the scene before Caiaphas, described in Recitatives and Choruses. Jesus is condemned and derided. This section ends with the reflective Chorale, 'O Lord, who dares to smite Thee?'

Then comes Peter's denial of his Master, the scene being ended by the Chorale, 'Lamb of God, I fall before Thee.'

The end of Judas is described, and the questioning of Jesus by Pilate. The people clamour for Jesus to be crucified, and after the scene of the scourging and mocking, Christ is led to Golgotha. The last sad scene is described, and lastly the burial of Jesus. The work ends with a beautiful Chorus, breathing peace.

8.55 Appeal on behalf of Hospital Wireless Funds

THE campaign to provide the hospitals with wireless is too well known now, and too obviously deserving, to need any urging. It is enough to say that there still remain hospitals as far apart as Barrow-in-Furness in Lancashire and Hayle and Helston in Cornwall, Newtown, Montgomery, and Beccles, in Suffolk, still without this godsend to the sick, and that they are now awaiting the result of this appeal. Listeners who feel their generous impulses stirred are advised to listen carefully and make a note of the addresses as they are given over the microphone.

Notte e giorno ('Night and Day'), from 'Don Giovanni' ..... Mozart

NIGHT AND DAY is the opening air in Don Giovanni. It is sung by poor, weary Leporello, the Don's servant, who laments his onerous and uncomfortable task of having to keep watch while his master makes love.

Eri Tu ('It was Thou'), from 'A Masked Ball' (See note below.) Verdi

repeats it. Then follows a good deal of bustling work for the Piano, with touches of other instruments, then a fairly loud climax in the Orchestra. Soon after this the opening of the First Tune is presented in a new light, chiefly by a Solo Clarinet. At last the Second Main Tune creeps in, a tiny, faint phrase in Oboe and Piano in dialogue. Still the Piano continues busily, until the Second Tune is declaimed by the Full Orchestra.

The rest of the Movement consists of the foregoing material seen from many points of view. Towards the end there comes a significant 'Cadenza,' or solo passage for the Piano.

The 'Scottish' Symphony ..... Mendelssohn

IN 1829, when he was twenty, Mendelssohn paid his first visit to this country, and spent six weeks of the summer in touring the Scottish Highlands.

Two of his works, the Hebrides Overture and this Scottish Symphony, contain impressions of his tour.

A visit to Holyrood Palace, with its sad memories of Mary Queen of Scots and the murder of Rizzio, gave him the inspiration for the opening of the Symphony.

The work is in four Movements. Though they are separate and distinct, Mendelssohn directed that there should not be pauses between them.

The FIRST MOVEMENT begins in a romantic and melancholy spirit and goes on to treat two well-contrasted tunes, working them up into a stormy climax in the concluding pages of this part of the work, and finishing with the sad melody heard at the commencement.

In the SECOND MOVEMENT (connected with the First by two plucked String chords), the Highlander's foot is clearly on his native heath, and his step is light and free.

The THIRD (SLOW) MOVEMENT has a First Main Tune full of feeling, and a Second that is solemn and march-like.

In the LAST MOVEMENT we have a vivid picture of Scottish heroism and strife in 'old, unhappy, far-off days.' Into this Movement, we may take it, the Composer wove his memories of the Gathering of the Clans, a brave spectacle that he was fortunate enough to witness at Blair Athol.

BIRMINGHAM CATHEDRAL.

whose bells will be broadcast from the local station tonight at 8.0. After that the religious service will be relayed. It is to be conducted by the Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennedy (inset), who has been better known as 'Woodbine Willie' since he became famous as a Chaplain to the Forces during the War.

THE Governor of Boston has fallen in love with the wife of his friend and secretary, Renato, who swears to be revenged.

In this air he expresses, first, his anger, and then his grief—as he thinks of the happiness that his false friend has destroyed.

EDWARD ISAACS and Orchestra
Concerto—First Movement ..... Schumann

BROADLY speaking, Schumann shows himself to us in one of two moods: either he is tender, even plaintive, or he is noble and forceful. We find him in both moods in his Piano Concerto, one of his most brilliant, spirited works that ranks among the most popular of all Concertos.

The work did not at first appear in its full form. The First Movement was written in 1841, and was entitled Fantasia. Four years later the Composer added two more Movements and called the whole a Concerto.

The FIRST MOVEMENT, quick and emotional, opens with a fiery phrase on the Piano. This is no inconsequent opening; later it plays an important part in the emotional working-up of the Movement. Now Woodwind and Horns at once play the First Main Tune and the Piano

ROBERT MAITLAND

Wohin? (Whither?) ..... Schubert
Am Feierabend (On a Holiday) ..... Schubert
Ungehduld (Impatience) ..... Schubert
Der Doppelgänger (The Self-Haunted)

THE first three songs of this group are from Schubert's cycle, The Fair Maid of the Mill, settings of poems by Wilhelm Müller. A miller's apprentice goes off to see the world. Whither? is the question he puts to a brooklet beside which he takes his way. 'You will find your mill to turn, some day,' is his reflection, 'and I'll find my work waiting for me, too.'

Soon he comes to a mill, and sees and falls in love with the miller's lovely daughter. He gets work there, and on a holiday evening muses on his labours, wishing he had a giant's strength, partly in order to impress the maid of the mill with his prowess.

Impatience is the expression of his longing that all Nature shall bear the message to the beloved—'Thine is my heart, and shall be thine for ever.' But impatient love need wait for no messages: her eyes will know the unspoken thought, her heart will feel a heart's devotion.

Sunday's Programmes continued (April 10)

The Self-Haunted ('Ghostly-double' or 'Shadow-double'—'Doppelgänger' does not translate easily) has been voted the greatest of songs—if there can be a greatest among the half-dozen supreme songs of the world. A man stands brooding, at night, outside the house where once dwelt his love. He sees another there who wrings his hands. The face of the man is—his own! Why, he asks bitterly, does his old self so haunt him—and taunt him.

A few chorals on the Piano and a wandering voice above them—nothing could be simpler; but how great is the emotional effect.

THIS fine romantic play, founded on the adventures of Rostand's large-nosed, but high-souled, hero, was produced at the Garrick Theatre, London, in March, 1919, when Mr. Robert Loraine created the part that he will play tonight. One of the very finest of our romantic actors, he is also very versatile, and amongst his most notable successes have been such diverse parts as John Tanner in Man and Superman, Rudolf in The Prisoner of Zenda, and, quite recently, Mirabell in Mr. Playfair's production of The Way of the World. Amongst his most notable broadcast performances was his impressive reading of the Biblical passages that linked up the parts of Honegger's 'King David,' when it was given in the tenth of the B.B.C.'s National Concerts.

WERE the Victorians really greater than ourselves? Is there any justification for the assumption so readily made by superior people that we are frivolous and shallow and ignorant, and they were great and wise and good? A Victorian father once sent to his son at Cambridge a telegram beginning, 'Congratulations, my boy'—but we must not anticipate. Mr. Michael Sadleir, the brilliant author of 'Trollope,' the book that has revived interest in one of the great Victorians, will discuss the whole question to-night.

to despair,' he says, 'when the unkind did prove.
But he tells himself:

'If she at last reward thy love
And all thy harms repair,
Thy happiness will sweeter prove,
Raised up from deep despair.
And if that now thou welcome be
When thou with her dost meet,
She all this while but played with thee
To make thy joys more sweet.'

LOEWY, a contemporary of Schubert, wrote largely in the operatic and oratorio forms, as well as in that of the song. He is best remembered for his dramatic and descriptive ballads, of which he wrote about a hundred and fifty. His Erl King is a well-known piece, second only to Schubert's setting of the story.

FRANZ, notable in the musical editing of the classics as well as in composition, wrote little besides songs, but of these he left some three hundred and fifty, many of genuine inspiration, and all of finished workmanship.

ALL the three Brahms pieces are love songs, but they differ widely in theme and presentation. The Sapphic Ode, for instance, is a memory of the beauty of roses wet with dew, and of the beloved one's kiss when two souls were moved by deep emotion. Sunday describes the feelings of a lover who thinks longingly of Sunday, the only day on which he can see his maiden. All the week, he declares, he will cherish her smile, but he fervently exclaims 'Would to heaven I were with her today!'

Trio
Trio in D Minor, Second and Last Movements
Mendelssohn

THROUGH Mendelssohn's two Trios do not contain any of his deepest thoughts, they are full of suave melody, and the graceful, adroit writing for the instruments is noteworthy.

Of the four Movements in the D Minor Trio (his Op. 49) we are to hear the tranquil Second Movement, and then the Finale, which opens with an oft-recurring rhythm. Tapped in chords or sung in melodies, now soft, now loud, it charmingly pervades the Movement.

Alderman H. S. CARTER

POOLE HARBOUR, with its curious double tides, is well known to yachtsmen, and its maze of creeks and islands extends seven miles inland, forming an inland sea surrounded by the barren wilderness of the Great Heath. The ancient seaport of Poole has a long and adventurous history, dating back to its first Charter, granted in 1248, and thickly studded with deeds of daring not wholly within the law, for piracy and smuggling of the most desperate character seem always to have come naturally to the men of Poole. In the time of Queen Elizabeth, Poole attained the dignity of being a separate county, and Alderman Carter's predecessors in office were at one time Admirals, by virtue of their office.

POLLY at the Microphone: Tuesday, April 12.

Stage Photo Co.

'AND THEY LIVED HAPPILY EVER AFTER:' POLLY REUNITED TO HER MACHEATH.

The final scene of 'Polly' brings together again the two lovers of 'The Beggar's Opera,' who have hitherto failed to recognize each other in their disguises. This is the scene as it appeared in the production at the Kingsway Theatre in 1922.

THANKS to Mr. Nigel Playfair, the name of John Gay no longer ranks with those of the rest of the less important men of letters of the eighteenth century. To the theatregoer of the present day he is as well known as any other author of a piece that ran at a London theatre for eighteen months, was revived again after that, and founded a widespread and enthusiastic cult. The Beggar's Opera made as much of a sensation at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith, in 1920, as it did at the Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre in 1728—and much more of a success.

POLLY.

*Utterly alone and forsaken,
Thus I bid adieu to joy.
Now that all I cherished is taken,
Nothing more can fate destroy.
Never look'd the wintry ocean,
When 'twas wracked with wild commotion,
Or a night without a star
Black as my misfortunes are.*

The Beggar's Opera succeeded in 1728 because it satirized the Government, particularly the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Walpole; because it collected a great number of charming English airs; and because the original Polly Peachum was the incomparably beautiful Lavinia Fenton, who afterwards married the Duke of Bolton; and it was, anyway, as everyone will agree, a very jolly, humorous sort of piece. The year was not out when Gay, inspired by its success, produced a sequel—Polly, of which a broadcast version is being done tonight. But it was nearly fifty years before it got on to the stage. The Lord Chamberlain hanned it; not, presumably, because of its coarseness, but through the natural reluctance of the Government to be publicly lampooned again. Gay did not lose by this clash with the Censor; his friend the Duchess of Queensberry took up his cause and was dismissed from Court, a political intrigue sprang up round Polly, it was published by subscription in 1729, sold 10,000 copies and made £1,000 for its author—a small fortune for a man of simple tastes.

Polly certainly owed a good deal of its success to its advertisement and its political significance. As a play pure and simple it suffers from all the defects of a sequel. The characters native to St. Giles's and Drury Lane seem to wilt in the atmosphere of the West Indies, where they reappear; Macheath is less convincing in his new rôle as 'Morano, a pirate,' and Polly loses some of her charm disguised as a man. What ensured the success of the stage production of 1922 at the Kingsway Theatre was the brilliant adaptation by Mr. Clifford Bax, the arrangement of the music by Mr. Frederic Austin, and the remarkable settings and costumes by Mr. William Nicholson. These latter, of course, the broadcast version has

MACHEATH.

*How greatly is a rascal curs'd!
How profitless reform for him!
No man will ever see him thurst!
No woman let him flout her whim
What pleasure is a glass to me?
What care I for the wanton's art?
Thus, Polly, do I drink to thee,
Dear one, who still enchains my hear!*

got to lack, but the rest of the combination—two-thirds of the trio—is there.

And the cast is one that will awaken the most pleasant memories of all playgoers. Both the Macheath and the Polly who accounted for so much of the success of The Beggar's Opera are taking part in the sequel tonight, and amongst others who are playing their original parts are Mr. Percy Parsons—fresh from his success in the two years' run of Rose Marie at Drury Lane—and Mr. Murri Moncrieff, the Vanderbluff and Laguerre of the Kingsway Theatre cast. Altogether, Mr. Gay will have as good a team to help him in front of the microphone tonight as he ever had in front of the floats.

London and Other Stations.

5.0 Miss E. M. HEWITT, 'Lost Houses'

FAMOUS houses live longer than the people who made them famous, but the march of time takes them too in its course. Miss Pinson's cottage on Montmartre; Warwick Priory; the Nun House at Chelsea; the 'Folly' on the Thames; Mrs. Siam's India House; the home of Dr. Johnson's friends, the Thrales—these are some of the vanished houses of which Miss Hewitt will talk today.

7.0 Talk on International Affairs by Dame RACHEL CROWDY (under the auspices of the League of Nations Union): The League protects Women and Children.

THE most amazing document yet published by the League of Nations was the first part of the report on the traffic in women and girls, and the second part, which is not to be published until it has been communicated to the Governments concerned, will be more amazing still. The two reports together form a terrible indictment of modern civilization, and show the enormous scale of the evil that the League is attempting to stamp out. To succeed, it must be supported by public opinion, and Dame Crowdy, who is now Chief of the Social Questions section of the League Secretariat, will attempt to inform public opinion in this evening's talk.

The Sonatas of Mozart

7.25 Prof. V. H. MOTTRAM, 'My Correspondence'

LAST January and February, as most listeners will remember, Professor Mottram gave a series of talks on 'Present-Day Problems of Food,' in which he discussed diet from the point of view of health. These talks aroused extraordinary interest, and ever since the series closed, Professor Mottram has been deluged with letters asking questions and raising new points. Many of these are worth answering in detail, and this is what Professor Mottram will do in this evening's talk.

Improvisations on the Organ by

DR. KENDRICK PYNE

With explanatory descriptions by

MR. FILSON YOUNG

Relayed from the Town Hall, Manchester

DR. KENDRICK PYNE, from the time that he was appointed organist in 1863, at the age of eleven, to All Saint's Church, Bath, has had a career crowded with experience of cathedral and organ music, and to-day at the age of seventy-five his name is an international one in musical circles and his powers remain unimpaired. He may truly be called the 'grand old man' of the organ world. Though he made a name for himself in the South of England, in the United States, and in Brussels during appointments which he held there, he will always be chiefly identified with the North of England, having held the positions of organist at Manchester Cathedral from 1876 to 1898 and at the Manchester Town Hall since 1877.

Additional interest will be lent to Dr. Pyne's programme tonight by the special accompanying descriptions of the music and the setting to be given by Mr. Filson Young, who was himself once a pupil of the organist.

An article by Mr. Filson Young which will help listeners to understand and to enjoy the broadcast will be found on page 70 and a picture of the Manchester Town Hall Organ will be found on page 69.

A Modern Master of Improvisation.

By Filson Young.

LISTENERS on April 13 should have an interesting experience. They will hear music that has never been heard before since time began, and which will never be heard again so long as time lasts. That, of course, is true of all music improvised—i.e., invented and performed on the spur of the moment—by a creative artist. But in the case of Dr. Kendrick Pyne it is peculiarly true, for this reason: that he is almost the last representative of a school or style of organ-playing which flourished in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, and which he inherited from the famous S. S. Wesley, who was the greatest exponent of this school or style, and whose favourite and most gifted pupil was Dr. Kendrick Pyne. The use of the organ in Cathedral Services of the period involved much incidental extemporization.

But the difference between the supreme masters and the rank and file is almost infinite. Bad improvisation may be called the chief vice of organ-playing; it is so easy and, to the trained ear, so deadly. That, undoubtedly, is one reason why Dr. Kendrick Pyne has always been so unwilling to do anything of this nature at a public performance; its place, in his view, was in the Cathedral Service. All his pupils were expected to do it there, and to do it well; but woe betide them if they were heard doing it at any other time or place! In this our master set us an austere example; and I think that this occasion is the first on which, during his fifty years' recital playing in Manchester that Dr. Pyne has been persuaded to give some examples of extempore playing, to order, so to speak.

The listener may reasonably ask what he should look for that is different in Dr. Pyne's improvisation from that of any other accomplished organist. It is hard to say in a few words; but I venture to say that when you hear it, you will not be in doubt as to its being unlike anything else you have heard. It differs chiefly from more modern styles, such as the French, exemplified in Marcel Dupré, and the later English style, in which some of our younger cathedral organists excel, in that it is founded on the diatonic, as opposed to the chromatic or the open scale; that it is tonal, rather than modal; and that, above all, it exhibits a curious kind of key relationship, as to the origin of which I have long puzzled. I believe that it comes from the fact that in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, many cathedral organs in England were still tuned in 'unequal temperament.' This means that certain keys were absolutely dead in tune, and others so far out of tune as to be practically unusable. Samuel Wesley, the father of S. S. Wesley, always played on an organ tuned in unequal temperament; and one could see how this would influence style in improvisation, especially as regards modulation and harmony.

I can only say that, having sat in my pupilage with Dr. Pyne day after day in the Cathedral Organ loft, and often heard him improvise four times a day, I have never heard him repeat himself, and have practically never failed to be thrilled and moved by passages of harmony which I could not account for, which I could not have written down, and which Dr. Pyne himself could certainly not have written or composed. His own written compositions have their peculiar character, dignity and charm; but compared with the music which comes from his fingers spontaneously, they are like the compositions of another man.

But very much depends on mood and on circumstances. Dr. Pyne and I will be alone in the Town Hall at Manchester on Wednesday evening, before the lovely Cavallé-Coll organ, in the melodious shadows where we have so often sat together in the past. Let us hope that he will be in a happy and peaceful mood, and that he will feel in some mysterious way how eagerly his unseen audience will be listening to his message from the past.

THE Sequence Lauda Sion is sung to a plainsong melody at Mass on the Feast of Corpus Christi. The words were written about 1264 by St. Thomas Aquinas. Mendelssohn composed his setting of the words (in a modern adaptation) for the Feast at Liège in 1846, the year before he died. His music is, of course, independent of the old plainsong, though a fragment of this is used in the Chorus which is given in the English version as 'They that in much tribulation wait and long for His salvation have with Him their dwelling-place.'

8.35 EXCERPTS FROM 'PARSIFAL'

THE ORCHESTRA

Prelude, 'Parsifal' ..... Wagner

PARSIFAL is Wagner's last work. He called it a 'Sacred Festival Drama'; its subject is the life of the Knights of the Grail (the sacred relic of the Holy Eucharist).

The Prelude, from its first bars, invokes the emotional atmosphere of the whole Drama. In particular, we hear much of the music that is associated with the Holy Grail, and with the sufferings and heroism of the Knights.

OLIVE KAVANN AND ORCHESTRA

Kundry's Song, 'Herzeleid' (Act II, 'Parsifal')

THE ORCHESTRA

Flower Maidens' Scene (Act II, 'Parsifal')

AN evil magician, Klingsor, angry at his exclusion from the sacred Knighthood, has created an enchanted castle and garden. Here, with the help of Kundry, a beautiful woman, and her attendant Flower Maidens, he tempts the Knights. Parsifal is led there, and in this second extract we hear their seductive music.

THE FIRST GOOD FRIDAY.

Mr. John Masefield's moving play, 'Good Friday,' is to be broadcast from Leeds-Bradford at 6.0 today. This representation of the most famous scene in history—Christ before Pilate—is from the painting by de Munkacsy.

IT is the story of the Crucifixion, reverently and beautifully told in rhymed verse. The scene is a paved court outside the Roman Citadel in Jerusalem. There is little action, for the drama is unfolded in the manner of Greek tragedy, descriptively.

SHELL offers you motor lubricating oil scientifically blended to do properly the three things which oil ought to do.

1. At cold air temperature it is free flowing to give quick starting.
2. At crankcase temperature, relatively thick to ensure economical consumption.
3. At cylinder temperature it has good fluidity to reduce friction but retains sufficient body to ensure efficient lubrication.

Shell Oils as sold to the public are exactly the same as were used to set up the world's speed records of 1926 for both cars and motor cycles.

Sealed Shell Cabinets everywhere (as shown here) thus afford you the security of the sealed container without the necessity of paying for a use-less can.

PART I

GERONTIUS.

JESU, Maria—I am near to death,
And Thou art calling me; I know it now.
Not by the token of this faltering breath,—
This chill at heart, this dampness on my brow,— (Jesu, have mercy! Mary, pray for me!)
'Tis this new feeling, never felt before
(Be with me, Lord, in my extremity!)
That I am going, that I am no more.
'Tis this strange innermost abandonment
(Lover of souls! great God! I look to Thee.)
This emptying out of each constituent
And natural force, by which I come to be.
Pray for me, O my friends; a visitant
Is knocking his dire summons at my door,
The like of whom, to scare me and to daunt,
Has never, never come to me before;

So pray for me, my friends, who have not strength to pray.

ASSISTANTS.

Kyrie eleison, Christe eleison, Kyrie eleison.
Holy Mary, pray for him.
All holy Angels, pray for him.
Choirs of the righteous, pray for him.

All Apostles, all Evangelists, pray for him;
All holy Disciples of the Lord, pray for him.
All holy Innocents, pray for him.
All holy Martyrs, all holy Confessors,
All holy Hermits, all holy Virgins,
All ye Saints of God, pray for him.

GERONTIUS.

Rouse thee, my fainting soul, and play the man;
And through such waning span
Of life and thought as still has to be trod,
Prepare to meet thy God.
And while the storm of that bewilderment
Is for a season spent,
And, ere afresh the ruin on me fall,
Use well the interval.

ASSISTANTS.

Be merciful, be gracious; spare him, Lord.
Be merciful, be gracious; Lord, deliver him.
From the sins that are past;
From Thy frown and Thine ire;
From the perils of dying;
From any complying
With sin, or denying
His God, or relying
On self, at the last;
From the nethermost fire;
From all that is evil;
From the power of the devil;
Thy servant deliver
For once and for ever.

By Thy birth, and by Thy Cross,
Rescue him from endless loss;
By Thy death and burial,
Save him from a final fall;
By Thy rising from the tomb,
By Thy mounting up above,
By the Spirit's gracious love
Save him in the day of doom.

GERONTIUS.

Sanctus fortis, Sanctus Deus,
De profundis oro te,
Miserere, Judex meus,
Parce mihi, Domine.
Firmly I believe and truly
God is Three and God is One;
And I next acknowledge duly
Manhood taken by the Son.
And I trust and hope most fully
In that Manhood crucified;
And each thought and deed unruly
Do to death, as He has died.

AND CHORUS
Conducted by
THE COMPOSER

8.15-9.0 Part One

9.0 Interlude from the Suite

9.15-10.30 Part Two

Simply to His grace and wholly
Light and life and strength belong.
And I love, supremely, solely,
Him, the holy, Him the strong.
Sanctus, fortis, Sanctus Deus,
De profundis oro te,
Miserere, Judex meus,
Parce mihi, Domine.
And I hold in veneration,
For the love of Him alone,
Holy Church, as His creation,
And her teachings, as His own.
And I take with joy whatever
Now besets me, pain or fear,
And with a strong will I sever
All the ties which bind me here.
Adoration aye be given,
With and through the angelic host,
To the God of earth and heaven,
Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.
Sanctus fortis, Sanctus Deus,
De profundis oro te,
Miserere, Judex meus,
Mortis in discrimine.

I can no more; for now it comes again,
That sense of ruin, which is worse than pain,
That masterful negation and collapse
Of all that makes me man.

And, crueler still,
A fierce and restless fright begins to fill
The mansion of my soul. And, worse and worse,
Some bodily form of ill
Floats on the wind, with many a loathsome curse
Tainting the hallowed air, and laughs, and flaps
Its hideous wings,
And makes me wild with horror and dismay.
O Jesu, help! pray for me, Mary, pray!
Some Angel, Jesu! such as came to Thee
In Thine own agony
Mary, pray for me. Joseph, pray for me,
Mary, pray for me.

ASSISTANTS.

Rescue him, O Lord, in this his evil hour,
As of old so many by Thy gracious power;

Noe from the waters in a saving home;
(Amen.)

Job from all his multiform and fell distress;
(Amen.)

Moses from the land of bondage and despair;
(Amen.)

David from Golia and the wrath of Saul;
(Amen.)

—So, to show Thy power,
Rescue this Thy servant in his evil hour.

GERONTIUS.

Novissima hora est; and I fain would sleep,
The pain has wearied me. . . . Into Thy hands,
O Lord, into Thy hands. . . .

THE PRIEST AND ASSISTANTS.

Proficiscere, anima Christiana, de hoc mundo!
Go forth upon thy journey, Christian soul!
Go from this world! Go, in the Name of God
The Omnipotent Father, Who created thee!
Go, in the Name of Jesus Christ, our Lord,
Son of the living God, Who bled for thee!
Go, in the Name of the Holy Spirit, Who Hath been poured out on thee! Go, in the name
Of Angels and Archangels; in the name
Of Thrones and Dominations; in the name
Of Princedoms and of Powers; and in the name
Of Cherubim and Seraphim, go forth!
Go, in the name of Patriarchs and Prophets;
And of Apostles and Evangelists,
Of Martyrs and Confessors, in the name
Of holy Monks and Hermits; in the name
Of holy Virgins; and all Saints of God,
Both men and women, go! Go on thy course;
And may thy place to-day be found in peace,
And may thy dwelling be the Holy Mount
Of Sion;—through the Same, through Christ our Lord.

PART II

SOUL OF GERONTIUS.

I WENT to sleep; and now I am refreshed.
A strange refreshment: for I feel in me
An inexpressive lightness, and a sense
Of freedom, as I were at length myself,
And ne'er had been before. How still it is!
I hear no more the busy beat of time,
No, nor my fluttering breath, nor struggling pulse;
Nor does one moment differ from the next.

This silence pours a solitariness
Into the very essence of my soul;
And the deep rest, so soothing and so sweet,
Hath something too of sternness and of pain.

Another marvel: someone has me fast
Within his ample palm; . . .
. . . . . A uniform
And gentle pressure tells me I am not
Self-moving, but borne forward on my way.
And hark! I hear a singing: yet in sooth
I cannot of that music rightly say
Whether I hear, or touch, or taste the tones.
Oh, what a heart-subduing melody!

ANGEL.

My work is done,
My task is o'er,
And so I come,
Taking it home,
For the crown is won,
Alleluia,
For evermore.

My Father gave
In charge to me
This child of earth
E'en from its birth,
To serve and save,
Alleluia,
And saved is he.

This child of clay
To me was given,
To rear and train
By sorrow and pain
In the narrow way,
Alleluia,
From earth to heaven.

SOUL.

It is a member of that family
Of wondrous beings, who, ere the world were made,
Millions of ages back, have stood around
The throne of God.
I will address him. Mighty one, my Lord,
My Guardian Spirit, all hail!

ANGEL. All hail! my child,
My child and brother, hail! what wouldest thou?

SOUL.
I would have nothing but to speak with thee
For speaking's sake. I wish to hold with thee
Conscious communion; though I fain would know
A maze of things, were it but meet to ask,
And not a curiousness.

ANGEL. You cannot now
Cherish a wish which ought not to be wished.

SOUL.
Then I will speak. I ever had believed
That on the moment when the struggling soul
Quitted its mortal case, forthwith it fell
Under the awful Presence of its God,
There to be judged and sent to its own place
What lets me now from going to my Lord?

ANGEL. Thou art not let; but with extremest speed
Art hurrying to the Just and Holy Judge.

SOUL.
Dear Angel, say,
Why have I now no fear of meeting Him?
Along my earthly life, the thought of death
And judgment was to me most terrible.

ANGEL. It is because
Then thou didst fear, that now thou dost not fear.
Thou hast forestalled the agony, and so
For thee bitterness of death is passed.
Also, because already in thy soul
The judgment is begun.

ANGEL. A presage falls upon thee, as a ray
Straight from the Judge, expressive of thy lot,
That calm and joy uprising in thy soul
Is first-fruit to thee of thy recompense,
And heaven begun.

SOUL.
Now that the hour is come, my fear is fled;
And at this balance of my destiny,
Now close upon me, I can forward look
With a serenest joy.

But hark! upon my sense
Comes a fierce hubbub, which would make me fear
Could I be frightened.

ANGEL. We are now arrived
Close on the judgment-court; that sullen howl
Is from the demions who assemble there.

Hungry and wild, to claim their property,
And gather souls for hell. Hark to their cry.

SOUL.
How sour and how uncouth a dissonance!

DEMONS.
Low-born clods
Of brute earth,
They aspire
To become gods,
By a new birth,
And an extra grace,
And a score of merits,
As if aught
Could stand in place
Of the high thought,
And the glance of fire
Of the great spirits,
The powers blest,
The lords by right,
The primal owners,
Of the proud dwelling
And realm of light,—

Dispossessed,
Aside thrust,
Chucked down,
By the sheer might
Of a despot's will,
Of a tyrant's frown,
Who after expelling
Their hosts, gave,
Triumphant still,
And still unjust,
Each forfeit crown
To psalm-droners,
And canting groaners,
To every slave,
And pious cheat,
And crawling knave,
Who licked the dust
Under his feet.

ANGEL.
It is the restless panting of their being;
Like beasts of prey, who, caged within their bars,
In a deep hideous purring have their life,
And an incessant pacing to and fro.

DEMONS.
The mind bold
And independent,
The purpose free,
So we are told,
Must not think
To have the ascen-
dant.

What's a saint?
One whose breath
Doth the air taint
Before his death;
A bundle of bones,
Which fools adore,
Ha! ha!
When life is o'er.
Virtue and vice,
A knave's pretence,
'Tis all the same;
Ha! ha!
Dread of hell-fire,
Of the venomous
flame,
A coward's plea.
Give him his price,
Saint though he be,
Ha! ha!
From shrewd good sense
He'll slave for hire;
Ha! ha!
And does but aspire
To the heaven above
With sordid aim,
And not from love.
Ha! ha!

SOUL.
I see not these false spirits; shall I see
My dearest Master, when I reach His throne?

ANGEL.
Yes,—for one moment thou shalt see thy Lord.

One moment; but thou knowest not, my child,
What thou dost ask: that sight of the Most Fair
Will gladden thee, but it will pierce thee too.

SOUL.
Thou speakest darkly, Angel! and an awe
Falls on me, and a fear lest I be rash,

ANGEL.
There was a mortal, who is now above
In the mid glory: he, when near to die,
Was given communion with the Crucified,—
Such, that the Master's very wounds were stamped
Upon his flesh; and, from the agony
Which thrilled through body and soul in that embrace,
Learn that the flame of the Everlasting Love
Doth burn ere it transform. . . .

CHOIR OF ANGELICANS.
Praise to the Holiest in the height,
And in the depth be praise:

ANGEL.
Hark to those sounds!
They come of tender beings angelical,
Least and most childlike of the sons of God.

CHOIR OF ANGELICANS.
Praise to the Holiest in the height,
And in the depth be praise:
In all His words most wonderful;
Most sure in all His ways!

To us His elder race He gave
To battle and to win,
Without the chastisement of pain,
Without the soil of sin.

The younger son He willed to be
A marvel in His birth:
Spirit and flesh His parents were;
His home was heaven and earth.

The Eternal blessed His child, and armed,
And sent Him hence afar,
To serve as champion in the field
Of elemental war.

To be His Viceroy in the world
Of matter, and of sense;
Upon the frontier, towards the foe,
A resolute defence.

ANGEL.
We have now passed the gate, and are within
The House of Judgment. . . .

SOUL.
The sound is like the rushing of the wind—
The summer wind—among the lofty pines.

CHOIR OF ANGELICANS.
Glory to Him, Who evermore
By truth and justice reigns;
Who tears the soul from out its case,
And burns away its stains!

ANGEL.
They sing of thy approaching agony,
Which thou so eagerly didst question of.

SOUL.
My soul is in my hand: I have no fear,—

But hark! a grand mysterious harmony:
It floods me, like the deep and solemn sound
Of many waters.

ANGEL.
And now the threshold, as we traverse it,
Utters aloud its glad responsive chant.

CHOIR OF ANGELICANS.
Praise to the Holiest in the height,
And in the depth be praise:
In all His words most wonderful;
Most sure in all His ways!

O loving wisdom of our God!
When all was sin and shame,
A second Adam to the fight
And to the rescue came.

O wisest love! that flesh and blood
Which did in Adam fail,
Should strive afores against the foe,
Should strive and should prevail;

And that a higher gift than grace
Should flesh and blood refine,
God's Presence and His very Self,
And Essence all divine.

O generous love! that He Who smote
In man for man the foe,
The double agony in man
For man should undergo;

And in the garden secretly,
And on the cross on high,
Should teach His brethren and inspire
To suffer and to die.

Praise to the Holiest in the height,
And in the depth be praise:
In all His words most wonderful;
Most sure in all His ways!

ANGEL.
Thy judgment now is near, for we are come
Into the veiled presence of our God.

SOUL.
I hear the voice that I left on earth.

ANGEL.
It is the voice of friends around thy bed,

5.5 'THE INTERLUDE OF YOUTH' A Morality Play

Presented by EDWARD P. GENN, and Performed by the LIVERPOOL RADIO PLAYERS

Cast:

Charity ..... SEBASTIAN SHAW
Youth ..... WILLIAM ARMSTRONG
Riot ..... ROBERT SPEAIGHT
Pride ..... PHILIP H. HARPER
Lechery ..... MARVEL HULME
Humility ..... WALTER SROBE

The play is divided into eight scenes

Incidental Music by THE STATION CHILDREN'S ORCHESTRA,

conducted by HARVEY J. DUNKERLEY

(William Armstrong, Sebastian Shaw and Robert Speaight are taking part in this production by kind permission of the Liverpool Playhouse Directors.)

ENGLISH drama has its roots in the mystery and morality plays of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. In the mystery plays, which were frequently performed in the churches, the characters were as a rule actual Biblical personages, and God and Satan were personified, as well as the Saints and figures in the Bible narratives. The morality plays which followed the mysteries come nearer a true art form, for instead of characters borrowed from the Bible we find the various vices and virtues taking on personality, as in The Interlude of Youth. The most beautiful of the morality plays—Everyman—which was broadcast from the Liverpool Station on Good Friday last year, has now become widely known, and is regularly performed. Few of the other excellent examples which have survived, however, are ever performed or even read. But they still appeal to a modern audience as Mr. John Drinkwater discovered when he revived The Interlude of Youth. 'I have acted in it,' he says, 'a great many times, and to all sorts of audiences, fashionable ones, slum ones, and all sorts of village gatherings, from the yokel to the county, and I have never known it to lose its grip for a single moment or with a single watcher.'

A Private Income —not a salary £400 A YEAR FOR LIFE FOR YOU!

Think of it! Not a salary demanding daily work at the office, but a private income to be paid to you every year as long as you live.

And while you are qualifying for it—it begins at age 55—there's full protection for your family: £3,200 plus half of every deposit you have made to date will be paid to them in the event of your death. Should that be the result of an accident £6,400 plus half the deposits will be paid.

Should illness or accident permanently prevent you earning any kind of living, £32 a month will be paid to you until you are 55, when the £400 a year becomes due.

Every year you will save a very substantial amount of Income Tax—a big consideration in itself.

This can all be accomplished by means of a plan devised by the Sun Life of Canada—the great Annuity Company with Government-supervised assets exceeding £70,000,000.

It's a wonderful plan, adaptable to any age and for any amount. It brings independence within the reach of tens of thousands of men who, otherwise, would be compelled to go on working to the end of their days.

How it Feels to Broadcast the Grand National.

THE MAN WITH THE BINOCULARS—

Mr. Meyrick Good Reading the Race.

—AND WHAT HE SAW THROUGH THEM.

Sprig, the winner, with T. Leader up.

A veteran racing journalist felt nervous to think that 10,000,000 people were listening to his story of the race; now he feels proud—and glad it is over. Mr. Meyrick Good, of the 'Sporting Life,' tells his own story of how he broadcast the Grand National.

I HAVE been asked what my impressions were of this, my first, broadcasting experience. To be frank, as the day of the great race approached the fact that some ten millions of the world's inhabitants were going to hear me describe the race got on my nerves and frightened me thoroughly. I did not see how it was possible to please them all! I felt quite certain that when the time came I should be tongue-tied and helpless—that I should be overcome by the magnitude of my audience. I was a very nervous man. But I have been a racing journalist for many years. I have seen more Grand Nationals than I care to number, and I have seen more horse races than I could possibly count.

So when the great moment came, when those magic words 'They're off' rushed up to me in one great shout from the crowd, all my fears disappeared. I forgot my ten million audience. I remembered only that I had to tell to a rather insipid-looking instrument that goes by the name of a microphone the things that I saw and, incidentally, the things that I really understand.

The excitement of the great event which never fails to stir even so hardened a racegoer as myself, came up to me from the thousands below—coloured figures on the horses in the distance—the chances of the jumps—all this carried me away as it always does, and the only thing that surprises me on looking back is that I succeeded in getting into the microphone any intelligent remarks at all! It seems that I did, and I am glad. But my impressions are mixed—a sense of great relief that is over—but a sense also of a great honour that I have been the first man in the history of the world to do this thing.

Having but the most elementary knowledge of the mysteries of wireless, the race. My doubts were greater when I was informed that the microphone was to be in the open and within twenty feet of the Members' and Tattersall's enclosures. A sound-proof cabinet may be workable at football matches, but cannot be used for race-reading, for the all-sufficient reason that it is impossible to look through a glass window with powerful binoculars. I am told that the noise did interfere with my remarks considerably.

The experiment at Aintree this year has done one of many things; it has given the public an insight into how races are reported, though in the case of the Grand National the story of the race has always, and will always, have to be pieced together by what is gleaned from the riders as they return. No one set of eyes can possibly follow one half of the falls from the stands as they occur. I am happy to say that though I was of some little service to my radio audience, I was not deprived of the great honour of reading the race for the third time to the King. His Majesty this year decided to witness the race from a vantage point in line with the winning post, instead of in Lord Sefton's private box at Valentine's, as he did when I read the race to him in the year that Master Robert won. Thus I was fortunate enough to be able to fulfil two missions simultaneously and to be, I hope, of some small service to our monarch.

While I narrated the incidents that I could pick out as they occurred in all too rapid succession, it was possible for the King through his own glasses to follow my reading, Lord Derby and other occupants of his stand being within earshot of my broadcast. Several members of the Knowsley party also heard my brief history of the horses, their riders, owners and trainers. It is three years since I related to His Majesty the romantic story of Sprig, the winner, and the horse's previous owner who fell in the Great War.

To show the King's remarkably retentive memory, he remembered this when congratulating and shaking hands with Mrs. Partridge, and added: 'I have heard all about your late son and there could not have been a more deserving victory.' Seemingly many of His Majesty's subjects present knew of these facts, for in all my long experience of the Liverpool race I cannot recall a more popular victory. Evidence of this was again made manifest at the Annual National Dinner at the Adelphi the night of the race, when hundreds rose to their feet and cheered Mrs. Partridge to the echo as she took her place at the head of the long table. I was, I am happy to say, a guest at that ever-to-be-remembered function.

It was beyond doubt the finest race for the Grand National I have ever witnessed. I hope those who listened will overlook and pardon any excitement they may have detected in my remarks on the closing stages of the race, when I tell them that Sprig's trainer—P. Leader—has for twenty years been my close friend and in partnership in many horses, including Fortune's Smile, the winner of the Victory Hurdle Race at Manchester two months ago. They will understand that I had every reason for giving vent to my pent-up feelings as Sprig caught the Judge's eye and mine as well.

In conclusion let me say that it is my belief that broadcasting increases public interest in sporting events inasmuch as those who have listened have been worked up to a high pitch of curiosity and want to see in cold print the evidence of their own ears corroborated and amplified. I am of the opinion, therefore, that the broadcasting of these great racing events is more of an asset to the newspapers than otherwise.

I must admit I was at first a little sceptical as to the result of the experiment as applied to such a race as the Grand National. My fears were that the noise of the crowd would blot out the salient features of the final stages of

SIR EDWARD ELGAR.

Who say the 'Subvenite' with the priest,
Hither the echoes come; before the Throne
Stands the great Angel of the Agony,
The same who strengthened Him, what time He knelt
Lone in the garden shade, bedewed with blood,
That Angel best can plead with Him for all
Tormented souls, the dying and the dead.

ANGELS OF THE AGONY.

Jesu! by that shuddering dread which fell on Thee;
Jesu! by that cold dismay which sickened Thee;
Jesu! by that pang of heart which thrilled in Thee;
Jesu! by that mount of sins which crippled Thee;
Jesu! by that sense of guilt which stifled Thee;
Jesu! by that innocence which girdled Thee;
Jesu! by that sanctity which reigned in Thee;
Jesu! by that Godhead which was one with Thee;
Jesu! spare these souls which are so dear to Thee;
Souls, who in prison, calm and patient, wait for Thee;
Hasten, Lord, their hour, and bid them come to Thee,
To that glorious Home, where they shall ever gaze
on Thee.

SOUL.

I go before my Judge . . .

VOICES ON EARTH.
Be merciful, be gracious: spare him, Lord.
Be merciful, be gracious: Lord, deliver him.

ANGEL.

Praise to His Name!

O happy, suffering soul! for it is safe,
Consumed, yet quickened, by the glance of God.

SOUL.

Take me away, and in the lowest deep
There let me be,
And there in hope the lone night-watches keep,
Told out for me.
There, motionless and happy in my pain,
Lone, not forlorn—
There will I sing my sad perpetual strain
Until the morn;
There will I sing, and soothe my stricken breast,
Which ne'er can cease
To throb, and pine, and languish, till possess
Of its Sole Peace.
There will I sing my absent Lord and Love:—
Take me away,
That sooner I may rise, and go above,
And see Him in the truth of everlasting day.

SOUL IN PURGATORY.

Lord, Thou hast been our refuge: in every generation;
Before the hills were born, and the world was, from age to age Thou art God.
Bring us not, Lord, very low: for Thou hast said,
come back again, ye sons of Adam.

Come back, O Lord! how long: and be entreated for Thy servants.

CARDINAL NEWMAN.

ANGEL.

Softly and gently, dearly-ransomed soul,
In my most loving arms I now enfold thee,
And o'er the penal waters, as they roll,
I poise thee, and I lower thee, and hold thee.

And carefully I dip thee in the lake,
And thou, without a sob or a resistance,
Dost through the flood thy rapid passage take,
Sinking deep, deeper, into the dim distance.

Angels, to whom the willing task is given,
Shall tend, and nurse, and lull thee, as thou
liest;
And Masses on the earth, and prayers in heaven,
Shall aid thee at the Throne of the Most Highest.

Farewell, but not for ever! brother dear,
Be brave and patient on thy bed of sorrow;
Swiftly shall pass thy night of trial here,
And I will come and wake thee on the morrow.

SOULS.

Lord, Thou hast been our refuge, &c. Amen.

CHOIR OF ANGELICANS.

Praise to the Holiest, etc. Amen.

The Master of the Bow

Cossor R.C. Valves bring out his superb artistry.

A GREAT change has come over Radio. Old standards of quality of reproduction are fast disappearing. A new Cossor R.C. Valve has been evolved which—with an amplification factor of between 40 and 50, yet with a relatively low impedance—now makes Resistance or Choke coupling thoroughly economical and practicable.

This wonderful new Cossor R.C. Valve—with its kalenised filament—at last enables everyone to hear the music of the studio and of the concert hall as real and as life-like as if the artistes themselves were in the room. All the subtle low notes are there and every varying shade of tone throughout the whole harmonic scale is reproduced with amazing fidelity. From the cello to the flute every instrument in the orchestra pours forth its mellow notes unspoiled by any mechanical limitations.

But remember that the secret of such true tonal purity and absolute lack of microphonic noises lies largely in the Kalenised filament—an exclusive Cossor feature. In your own interests, therefore, accept no substitute.

The
B8 VALVE
means better reception
— and cheaper sets

THE wonderful purity of tone that it is possible to obtain with resistance-capacity coupling has made this method of amplification extremely popular. In the past the adoption of this system involved a very considerable sacrifice of volume. You couldn't have purity and volume at the same time.

The introduction of the B.T.H. B8 Valve—with its extraordinary high amplification factor of 50 (unsurpassed by any other valve)—has made resistance-capacity coupling an economic success. Indeed, the B8 valve gives as great a sound magnification per stage as the best L.F. transformer. The high impedance of the B8 (180,000 ohms) reduces its H.T. current consumption to only  $\frac{1}{60}$  as much as that of an ordinary valve. Actually the consumption is no greater than that dissipated by the battery when not in use. Add to these advantages the simplicity and lower constructional cost of a "Resistor" receiver, and you will appreciate what the new B8 valve means to you.

The Free "RESISTOR" Book.

The "Resistor" Book contains all necessary details for the construction of 2, 3, 4 and 5 valve resistance-coupled sets. Theoretical and working diagrams are given, together with photographs of the complete receivers, lists of components and point-to-point wiring schedules. The book also gives the circuit for a 2-valve amplifier for crystal users. Send to-day for your copy.

for 6-volt
Accumulators

Introduced only two weeks ago, the EDISWAN ES5 has already been accorded an enthusiastic welcome by 6-volt users. The ES5 is a 6-volt dull emitter made in H.F. and L.F. types with a current consumption of only 0.1 amp. It has TWO Grids, each with a 2½ volt Thoriated Tungsten filament. A great idea and an instant success!

Although the current consumed is almost negligible, the flow of electrons from the two Thoriated Tungsten filaments is intense. A remarkable valve!

This ES5 L.F. is a valve of low impedance with ability to handle great power, without the slightest trace of fuzziness or blare in reproduction. The trill of a soprano voice . . . the deep, rolling bass of the organ . . . the majestic volume of a full orchestra . . . all are reproduced with almost incredible fidelity to the original performance.

SPAN DISTANCE

FROM the void comes a tiny weak voice . . . Hamburg perhaps—or Rome. Tantalising, isn't it, that signals are not strong enough to be understood?

It is when you are trying for distant stations that you will appreciate the service LISSEN transformers give you. Space-weakened signals are coaxed from minuteness to magnitude. Yet if you judged them from their purity and clarity you might imagine your foreign station in the next town.

-build up the space-weakened signals with Lissen Transformers

LISSEN transformers fully amplify every note, every tone, every overtone and every harmonic against a background of dead silence.

Test one for seven days against the most expensive transformer you can buy. If you do not definitely prefer the LISSEN transformer in every respect, return it and your money will be refunded.
