My Friend, the Listener.

An Interview with Dame Clara Butt.

PERHAPS the most remarkable change in the musical world during recent years has been in regard to what constitutes musical ability," said Dame Clara Butt in the course of an interesting talk I had with the great singer a few days ago on behalf of The Radio Times. "Twenty or thirty years ago, if you were asked the question, "Are you musical?" you had to reply either "No" or "Well, I play the piano or sing." Musical ability in those days was taken to be a knowledge of how to make music.

Today our ideas have changed. To be musical, it is no longer necessary to be able to play a musical instrument; it is recognized that a good listener may be as musical as a performer on the piano or violin, perhaps indeed even more musical.

"When I was at the beginning of my career, no party was considered complete without music. Tea and cakes in the drawing-room were invariably followed by songs, pianoforte solos and recitations. Everyone present would be called upon to do something, and although many of the performers were unwilling victims, it did not make their music any more beautiful. Those days have passed, however, and I, at any rate, am very glad that we know them no more.

"Many of us still have our sing-songs in the drawing-room—merry choruses round the piano at informal parties—but people look upon such occasions as a chance for "letting people will not permit themselves to be troubled with indifferent amateur performances—except as a social necessity.

"Certain famous musicians, I see, have been protesting lately that the sounds issuing from a loud-speaker are not music. I certainly do not believe this to be true. Had I done so I would never have broadcast, and in any case, if the transmission is not a success, the sounds that come through are far more pleasant than those that an unmusical person would make singing a ballad or giving a soulless performance of a Chopin waltz.

"Musical ability shows itself in three ways—creation, this is the gift of the composer; interpretation, this is the gift of the artist; and appreciation, the gift of the listener.

"The gift of creation in music is given to few. The gift of interpretation is given to many, but few bring it to perfection. The gift of appreciation is given to almost all who are not "tone deaf," and perhaps it is because this gift is so common that it is so generally undervalued. Yet good listeners are as necessary to the prosperity of music

DAME CLARA AND HER WIRELESS SET.

Dame Clara Butt is herself an enthusiastic listener to the broadcast programmes. This charming photograph shows her in the garden of her country home. Judging from the rapt expression on the great singer's face, the Daventry programme must be coming through very well. The whole country will be listening on Tuesday next, May 24, when Dame Clara Butt will lead a vast choir of voices in the great Community Singing Concert to be relayed from Hyde Park.

themselves go" rather than for musical enjoyment. The radio has completed the work begun by the gramophone, and has killed those dreary parties of thirty years ago. As long as the wireless set brings first-class music into the home, musical

Can Humour be Broadcast?

By L. du Garde Peach.

Mr. L. du Garde Peach, whose voice is now familiar to a large section of the radio audience, may be considered to be an authority on the difficult subject of humour, for contributions from his pen are frequently to be found in the elect pages of our esteemed contemporary 'Mr. Punch.'

EVERY humorist who has ever stood before a microphone knows that humour is one of the most difficult things to broadcast, and every listener who has ever switched off a loud speaker or unloosed himself from a pair of earphones knows that unless it is exactly right, humour is one of the most difficult things to listen to. When so much difficulty prevails at both the transmitting and receiving ends, and when the possibilities of ignominious failure or bored disapproval are so great, the question naturally arises as to whether the broadcasting of humour should ever be attempted at all.

On the whole I think that most listeners would vote in favour of the humorous broadcast, but I am certain that the majority would add a rider to the effect that it must be good, without probably having a very clear idea of what they meant by the term.

The fact of the matter is, humour, in order successfully to interest and amuse the vast radio audience, must be better of its kind than anything else of its kind. By this I do not mean that it must be high-brow, or subtle, or even particularly witty, but it must have a peculiar universality of appeal if it is to serve its unique purpose. It is the subconscious knowledge of this which makes humorists who think—and there are such persons—approach the microphone with a feeling of terror never experienced by the singer or the speaker.

The reason for this attitude on the part of the public towards humour is twofold. In the first place the average man is more critical of humour—not less, as is generally supposed—than he is of music. It is not that he knows more about it, but he thinks he does. The light-hearted assurance with which any human being will criticise the doings of any other, is always to me an awe-inspiring and terrible thing, but the withering scorn with which the average man dismisses the humorist who has not come up to his standard of humour, is devastating beyond words. The reason for this is that the average man has got a certain standard of humour; not definitely tabulated and graded perhaps, but he does know what he considers funny. Life is always supplying him with data, and the man who would hesitate to pass judgment upon a symphony is always quite certain of his attitude towards a joke. Woe to the humorist who does not come up to his expectations.

THE second difficulty with which the broadcasting humorist has to contend, is that everybody's sense of humour is essentially individual and different from the sense of humour of everybody else. A sense of humour is, after all, a matter of angles and comparisons, and both depend upon knowledge in some form or another. What may be the funniest story in the world to Brown, who plays golf, may draw only a tired sigh from Jones, who fishes.

The broadcasting humorist has a far more difficult task before him than has the comedian in a crowded music hall. There, the atmosphere is right, and the red nose and the patched trousers label the man from the first moment of his entrance. If everything else fails he can always fall over his own feet.

The humorist before the microphone has no such adventitious aids. In the first place he is breaking in upon a thousand different atmospheres, many of them, perhaps, radically out of tune with what he is about to attempt. It is in this, I think, that many broadcast comedians make an initial and fatal mistake. Broadcast humour must create its own atmosphere, and it must do so slowly and deliberately. The music-hall comedian, with everything in his favour, can bounce on to the stage with a joke; the audience is ready to roar at the sight of him. The humorist who begins a humorous broadcast with anything like the same heartiness sounds forced, and will inevitably jar upon thousands of listeners.

In my opinion no broadcast programme is complete without humour; humour is a part of life, and as such it must of necessity have a place—and an important place—in a broadcasting service which touches the life of the community so nearly and at so many points. But, as I said before, it must be the right kind of humour.

GO TO EPSOM WITH THE B.B.C.

The Derby, the greatest race of the year, will be run at Epsom at 3 o'clock on Wednesday, June 1. If you can't go to Epsom, follow the race, from one thrilling second to another, on your wireless set. There will be an introductory description by Mr. George F. Allison, who broadcast the Cup Final; the race itself will be described by Mr. Geoffrey H. Gilbey, the famous sporting journalist—the original 'Tattenham' of The Sunday Express—and the new 'Larry Lynx' of The People.

My Friend, the Listener.

as are good singers and good composers and the person who has developed his gift of appreciation, although himself unable to perform, is as much entitled to be described as "musical" as is any composer or performer.

In the rush of modern life, fewer and fewer people are being taught to play musical instruments. In the Golden Age, no doubt, music will take the place in the school curriculum of more prosaic subjects such as geography and arithmetic, but to-day the fact remains that there are millions of people in this country of ours who cannot read a note of music.

Wireless has come as a great boon to the great body of those who can only listen to music. Those who had already developed their sense of musical appreciation by attending good concerts and studying music from books, soon found that radio enabled them to gain a wider and deeper acquaintance with the work of the great masters. Those who are potential music lovers, but have never had any opportunity to exercise their gift, are discerning that broadcasting offers unbounded possibilities for the development of their capacity for appreciation and understanding.

Broadcasting is building up a great audience for the concert hall of the future. I do not doubt that in a few years from now the members of the average British concert audience, having gained a closer acquaintance with music through broadcasting, will be even more discriminating and appreciative than they are to-day.

LIKE many other musicians, I do not believe that any comparison can fairly be made between music heard in a concert hall and music heard from a loud-speaker. In saying this I do not mean that the loud-speaker does not reproduce well—the best modern instruments are, I think, perfect in this respect. I mean simply that an audience, unless it actually sees a singer or conductor, cannot appreciate their personality to the full. I do not, however, let this belief blind me to the fact that wireless brings music into the lives of many who live far from the big towns or who cannot afford to buy expensive concert tickets.

There is, of course, nothing to be the least ashamed of in being merely a listener. Better, after all, to be a good listener than an indifferent performer.

'Wireless,' said Dame Clara in conclusion—and she spoke with real conviction—is helping to build up a vast new body of intelligent listeners. It is educating them by giving them the finest music—although "education" seems to me hardly the right word to use in connection with such an absorbing subject as music. Just as the ideal composer is lost unless he has an ideal interpreter to sing his songs or to conduct his music, so the greatest artist is helpless if there is not a good audience to listen and appreciate. Through wireless we may be able to build up the ideal audience, and this, in turn, will produce the ideal performer and the ideal composer.'

Coming to the Microphone.

A Glance at Future Programmes.

MATHESON LANG will always be associated in the minds of the theatre-going public with The Wandering Jew; it is for his acting of the title rôle in Temple Thurston's drama that he is perhaps most famous.

MR. MATHESON LANG.

Listeners will look forward to a broadcast of this play, which is to be included in the LONDON programme on Tuesday, June 7, when Mr. Lang will play his original part. The Wandering Jew was first produced at the New Theatre in September, 1920, and revived again in 1924. Miss Hutin Britton, who took part in it on that occasion, will also appear with her husband. Mr. Matheson Lang, in the radio version which has been prepared by Dulcima Glasby. This broadcast is particularly interesting, inasmuch as Mr. Matheson Lang is appearing in a Royal Command performance of the play before the King and Queen at Drury Lane Theatre on Monday, May 23.

The Week's Good Cause appeal from London on Sunday, May 29, will be on behalf of that very deserving movement, Alexandra Day. It will be made by Miss May Beeman, who has devoted so much of her time to this cause.

THE seventieth birthday of Sir Edward Elgar, which falls on Thursday, June 2, will be celebrated that day by a special concert which, except for an interval for news and a talk, will occupy the whole of the LONDON evening programme between 7.45 and 10.35 p.m. From his boyhood Sir Edward had exceptional opportunities of becoming familiar with music of widely differing orders, acquiring thus a knowledge of the orchestra and its possibilities such as a more strictly orthodox musical education seldom or never imparts. His place among the great symphonic writers is for all time assured, while some of our most significant religious and secular choral works have come from his pen.

Some variety artists you will look forward to hearing:—May 30, Dolores in a sketch called 'Fashions,' Wish Wynne; June 1, Just Four Fellers, Lancelot Quinn, Mabel Constaduros, Tom Clark; June 4, Teddy Brown, The Don Vocal Quartet, Olive Fox, Marie Dainton.

AN event of particular importance to Bristol listeners will be broadcast from CARDIFF on Sunday, May 29—the Territorial Church Parade service, which takes place at Bristol Cathedral.

Gen. Sir A. J. GODLEY.

General Sir Alexander John Godley, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Southern Command, will read the second lesson, and will also inspect the units as they march past outside the Cathedral after the service. General Sir Alexander Godley has had a distinguished military career. After the war, during which he saw service in the Dardanelles, Egypt, France, and Belgium, he was Military Secretary to the Secretary of State for War, 1920-22, and Commander-in-Chief of the British Army of the Rhine, 1922-24. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. E. H. Thorold, Assistant Chaplain General at Salisbury.

ARRANGEMENTS are well under way to broadcast, for the first time, an event from the Cenotaph in Whitehall. The occasion will be the annual service of the British Legion, at 5 p.m. on Whit-Sunday, June 5, which is to be conducted by the Dean of Westminster, the Very Rev. William Foxley Norris. The broadcast is one of considerable difficulty owing to the fact that the apparatus used must be unobtrusive and not interfere with the traffic. A steel hawser will, therefore, be suspended across the roadway, from which the necessary microphones will be hung.

The broadcast service from London, Daventry, Bournemouth, and other stations on Sunday, May 29, will be relayed from the Punshon Memorial Church, Bournemouth. The address will be given by the Rev. J. D. Jones, Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales in 1900 and 1925, and Moderator of the Federal Council of the Free Churches from 1921 to 1923.

FOR a few minutes on some evening between May 23 and June 1 an attempt is to be made to broadcast the song of the Nightingale from the beautiful garden of Miss Beatrice Harrison at Oxted, in the midst of the Surrey woods. The Nightingale has now been broadcast each spring for several years, and its song is still one of the most charming little features of the whole year's programmes. It never fails to bring a large batch of congratulatory correspondence, not only from listeners in this country but also from abroad.

MISS B. HARRISON.

As on previous occasions, Miss Beatrice Harrison will endeavour to coax the birds into song by the notes of her 'cello. While the success of such a transmission can never be guaranteed, the B.B.C. makes no apology to those who may remain up later than usual to listen to it. The earliest possible intimation will be given of the actual day and time on which the broadcast is to take place.

Flotsam and Jetsam will appear again in the programmes on each evening throughout the week beginning Whit-Monday, June 6. Further details of the transmissions for that week, which are to be of a special character, will be given in our next issue.

THE historic ceremony of 'Trooping the Colour,' as it takes place on Saturday, June 4, in honour of His Majesty the King's birthday (which falls on the previous day), will be relayed, together with a running commentary, from the Horse Guards Parade, and broadcast from LONDON between approximately 11 a.m. and noon. The broadcast is possible through the kind permission of Major-General the Rt. Hon. Lord Ruthven, C.V., C.M.G., D.S.O., G.O.C. London District. Besides a description of the event, listeners will hear the words of command to the troops, music by the massed Guards Bands, and other incidental atmosphere. This will be the first occasion on which the ceremony has been broadcast, though it would probably have been done last year had it not been for the industrial crisis at that time.

Mr. Algernon Aspinall, of the West India Committee, is to give a talk from London on Thursday, June 2, on the work carried out in our Dominions and Colonies by the Imperial College of Tropical Agriculture.

MISS LILIAN BARKER, Governor of H.M. Borstal Institute, Aylesbury, is to give a talk on the human side of her work among girls, from

MISS LILIAN BARKER.

LONDON and OTHER STATIONS at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, May 31. Miss Barker, who incidentally is the only woman governor of a prison institution, will describe how modern methods of treating young delinquents can be very much more successful than the harsher methods of bygone days. Many listeners who came in contact with Miss Barker during the war, when she was Lady Superintendent of Woolwich Arsenal, will remember her sympathetic and encouraging personality, particularly during the strenuous period of air raids.

'Four-Quarters of an Hour' is the title of a new radio revue by Harold Simpson, which is to be broadcast from London, Daventry, Manchester, Cardiff, and the relay stations on Saturday, June 18. The music has been specially composed by Stanley Holt, conductor of the Daventry Quartet.

CONSIDERABLE interest is associated with the broadcast ceremony of 'Beating the Retreat' which is to be relayed from the Granville Gardens, Dover, through LONDON and other stations, on Wednesday, June 1, between 7.45 and 8.15 p.m. The performance will be carried out by the Band, Drums, Fifes and Bugles of the 2nd Battalion of the Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Regiment, the drums used being the silver set of eleven presented to the Battalion by the Counties from which it takes its name, in commemoration of its return to England after eighteen-and-a-half years' foreign service. It will be recalled that these Drums were presented by the Prince of Wales at Luton last November, together with new Colours.

A musical play called 'Derby Day,' which was originally produced at Epsom last January, will be broadcast from Manchester on Tuesday, May 31. The book is by Roger de Wesselow, who, with John Piper, was responsible for the lyrics, the music being by Cecil Hooper.

SPEECHES at the banquet to be given by the Mayor of Portsmouth to the officers and men of the French Naval Squadron visiting that city, will be relayed from the Guildhall, Portsmouth, and broadcast from BOURNEMOUTH on Tuesday, May 31. The toast of 'Our Guests,' proposed by the Mayor, will be responded to by the French Ambassador, Monsieur de Fleuryau, and by Rear-Admiral Pirot, the Officer commanding the French Squadron. In the course of Portsmouth's long history, many distinguished Naval men have been Freeman of the Borough, now the City, of Portsmouth.

M. de FLEURIAU.

Among the names inscribed on the Roll of Freeman are those of Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England at the time of the Armada, and Samuel Pepys, whose labours in the Navy Office were thus fittingly honoured. As many listeners who heard the broadcast of the ceremony last year will remember, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was the first to receive the Freedom of the new City of Portsmouth.

Which Station Do You Listen To?

How Listeners Can Help the B.B.C.

HOW many listeners are there? That is a question to which it is impossible to find an accurate answer. Although the number of licence-holders in Great Britain and Northern Ireland is two and a quarter millions, the actual listening public is of course enormously larger; it has been roughly estimated at ten millions. Probably four to five persons in each household where there is a set listen at some time or other to items in the broadcast programmes; they make up a great listening public which is constantly shifting and changing in size and character.

But there is a question to which the B.B.C. is anxious to find an answer—namely, that of the effective range of its transmitters. To which of the twenty-one stations of the B.B.C. does each one of these ten millions listen? For example, roughly twenty-five millions of the population live within a hundred-mile radius of Daventry High Power Station; how many of these listen regularly to either Daventry, their nearest local station, or any other B.B.C. station?

It being of paramount importance to the B.B.C. to discover how great a service is rendered to the listening public by each of its stations, it has been decided to invite the co-operation of listeners in the matter. The details required from listeners are designedly of the briefest character; little time need be expended in writing them down. When written they will be of the greatest value to the B.B.C.

The B.B.C. does not require the name and address of the listener, nor the number of his licence. Further, expression of the opinion on the programmes broadcast or any matter connected with the technical side of the broadcast service will be of no practical value in this referendum. All that listeners are asked to do is to state to which of the stations they listened wholly or mainly during last winter. The information required can be easily given on a postcard stamped in the ordinary way and should be addressed to the station to which the listener tuned in most frequently during the winter months. These postcards need only be addressed to 'B.B.C., London,' 'B.B.C., Daventry,' 'B.B.C., Manchester,' etc., and should be plainly marked with the letter 'R' in the top left-hand corner over the address. Since the addressing of the postcards will convey in the simplest manner possible the Station with which the writer is most intimately concerned, the postcard should be sent to that station and not to London—unless of course London is the station to which the information on the reverse side of the card refers.

THE details wanted by the B.B.C. in connection with this scheme are brief enough to be conveyed in two or three words. They are, first, the approximate distance at which the listener lives from the station, and, second, the initial letter of the word 'Valve' or 'Crystal' according to the set used: For example, a postcard addressed 'B.B.C., Birmingham,' and stating '25, V.' will mean that the listener uses a valve set and lives approximately twenty-five miles from Birmingham, to which Station he generally listens. The name and address of the listener, his licence number, his signature, are not required.

The sending of this information demands a certain amount of trouble and a slight expense from listeners, but it is sincerely hoped that as many as possible will fall in with the scheme which is backed by the B.B.C.'s official assurance that the results obtained from it, if sufficient in number to be fairly representative of the whole country, will be of the greatest service in regulating the future of broadcasting.

A Breath of Fresh Air.

A. Bonnet Laird, whose Nature-talks are a leading feature of the broadcast programmes, comments below upon some letters he has recently received from Nature-lovers.

In Flood Time.

Sad sights met D. G. M. C., looking from her lattice window in a Herefordshire valley a short while ago—one of the worst floods she can remember.

Six sheep, caught unawares, huddled against a hedge, all dead save one, rescued by a party of men, who came up just in time with a horse, waded their mount through the water and towed the sheep to safety with a noose round its neck.

Many a gunshot rang out through the day—and never a ferret needed: for the rabbits were flooded out.

But despite the snows which, in their melting, had swollen her western river; despite, too, the warning cry of the great green woodpecker, omen of more storms to come, D. G. M. C. had many signs to tell us that Spring had already come: primroses fully open; large, sweet-scented violets—but they had been in flower all the winter through—and a burst of skylark song from the flooded fields.

There were more floods to come, you may be sure, before Summer. I hope you folk, who watch with me the wild life of the countryside, will be about when the streams are rising; not only to lend the helping hand farmer so often needs just then, but on the look-out for the queer sights one sees when all the wild things, forgetting their enmities, fly from the peril of the swollen waters.

A Storm—Tea-cup Size.

Have you ever seen a waterspout? They are not confined to southern seas. My postbag brings a description of one seen no farther away than the Hertfordshire Colne.

I was fishing (says G. D. H.) during thundery weather. The air was disturbed—generally calm, with gusts of wind of the sort that send the leaves swirling. Suddenly there was a disturbance in the stream a few yards from us; the water began to boil and hiss in a surprising way, and gradually formed into a wave stretching across the current. This wave slowly moved up-stream, still hissing in a strange manner and rising up to a crest at one point, which crest rose into the air, swirling violently, and trailed off in the form of a column of spray.

It was a perfect waterspout on a small scale. We watched the proceeding with great surprise, and my friend remarked that he first thought it was some fish having a fight!

Mock Strawberry.

I hope you all keep a nature diary. My composite one, full of your notes, grows week by week.

I did not enter, however, the discovery of wild strawberry flowers on February 1 by M. M. (Cheshire). Will she make quite sure? As I said in one of my talks recently, that little white star that gems the hedgerows in very early spring is, as often as not, potentilla—the 'barten strawberry'—and quite belies, in summer time, its promise of sweet smoky-flavoured fruits. The test is, whether the flower stalks and leaf stalks are erect or creeping. If they do not stand up boldly out of the earth, I am afraid M. M.—who also, by the way, keeps a nature diary—will be disappointed.

[This week's prize, one of A. Bonnet Laird's broadcast books, goes to Mr. F. V. Cole, Riverside Cottage, Barford, Norwich.]

The Invisible Audience Applauds.

By Percy Merriman.

ONE of the first questions that the average listener puts to any broadcasting artist he may chance to meet is: 'Don't you miss the inspiration of applause?'

We do. And yet every loss brings its gain, for our friends the listeners applaud their favourite artists even more charmingly than can be expressed vocally or by the vigorous application of one palm to another. They applaud on paper.

One never knows from day to day what pleasant little postcards and letters may fall upon the mat via the B.B.C. The radio artist does not, of course, ask for these welcome expressions of pleasure and gratitude—he or she realizes that the new medium entails a certain measure of sacrifice, and if every listener were to express his or her delight (or boredom), the task of coping with such a vast mass of correspondence would be overwhelming.

But artists are human, and, as Oliver Wendell Holmes said so happily in another connection, 'We are very like cats; when we are stroked we purr a little.' Sometimes, of course, we are stroked the wrong way. There is that jolly fellow, the anonymous postcard writer, who asks 'Need you?' or 'Is this what I pay ros. for?' or 'I only heard three minutes of your entertainment last night, but it was ample.'

Then there is the opportunist: 'Where can I get a copy of that jolly song you gave last night?' (Only artists can realize the difficulty of obtaining first-rate exclusive material.) An innocent gentleman I remember once asked the 'Roosters' if he could borrow the manuscript of 'Army Reminiscences' for a local concert he was arranging! Another genial soul asked us to lend him our 'Plantation Memories.' At some little trouble, a copy was sent. It wasn't even acknowledged! And then there is the bright young thing who begs a photograph, an autograph or a lock of hair. Bless her, why not? Then there are those gay and fearless souls who say: 'Do bring my name in on Wednesday. Say, "Hallo, Bill, what about Festubert, eh?" I shall be listening all right.'

But artists like to feel that these are but burrs thrown on them for holiday foolery. It is the other charming missives that preponderate. 'Do please sing "Sentimental Moon" on Thursday; it is lovely.' And I remember the little lady of twelve who wrote: 'Dear Roosters. I am now studying elocution ever so hard. Do you want a little Rooster? I will do my very best to please you.'

Then there was the gracious lady in Devon who said: 'If ever you appear in our part of the country and have no local habitation, come and roost with us with pleasure.' And the ex-service man who wrote: 'I can't get about as I used. I forgot all my pain and trouble last night for half an hour. I saw you last in Jerusalem.'

THIS and much more is our applause, and very sweet music it is in our ears—though we only read it. Old friendships are renewed, folks one knew of old who have travelled far afield recall once more the well-remembered accents. Those who had lost trace may find one through this gracious medium of the ether. The singer is alone, yet not alone. The listener is alone, yet not alone. He is linked not only with the radio artist but also with those myriads of other listeners who, at the same moment, are enjoying what he enjoys.

Truly a heavy responsibility rests upon the artist, but his letter-bag brings him strength and cheer for his honoured task.

STRANGELY incongruous—a slender aerial slung from a pole by the hayrick to the low-thatched cave. A curious blending of the old and new. Yet there it is, with a wide sky above it, empty moors and fields all round, and not another of its kind for miles and miles in any direction.

Time was when the old farm was as quiet as the moor that surrounds it on all sides. No sound was to be heard but the clucking of the fowls in the farmyard, the softly-lowing cows, and the rattle of milk churns on the dairy floor.

Chopin on the Farm.

By MARGARET LONSDALE.

For months together no stranger's footsteps came near the place, and there was only a doubtful chance of the postman's visit three times in the week. For news of the outside world there were the few fragments of gossip from the nearest town brought back with the empty butter baskets on market-day.

Then Farmer Hodges, having at last 'heard tell of this 'ere wireless,' had a set installed. And the farmhouse woke to life.

To begin with, the collie had something to bark at other than the moon. He greeted the unfamiliar sounds each evening with a series of howls that sent the sleepy hens a-scattering. The farmer listened dubiously to other forecasts of the weather than his own; heard news of people and places hitherto undreamt of; learnt that the world was a little wider than the moor.

When the grandfather's clock in the kitchen corner 'slipped' so that there was 'no knowin' the time o' day,' Big Ben, booming two hundred miles away, came handsomely to the rescue.

And here was a rival to the weekly concert provided by the farmer's wife, who Sunday by Sunday sat down to the cottage piano, with a row of departed relatives rattling in their frames above her; and with at least four notes in every octave sadly flattened by the snapping of their wires, plodded through half-a-dozen hymn tunes and 'Alice, where art thou?'—the only strains that had ever broken the Sabbath calm.

True, the absent Alice still holds a hallowed place within her heart. But now, along with kings in their castles and rich men relaxed comfortably in easy chairs, each Sunday afternoon will find her listening under her thatch—a significant fact of our democratic age.

'Ye be just too late,' she says with a touch of pride when her husband comes in late from the fields; 'a gentleman's bin playin' that there Impromptood in A. Just luvly, it were.'

Perhaps in time the farmer will install a loud speaker in his shippen. Then, when the gay folks are dancing in their houses, he will sit down to his beasts with a three-legged stool and a pail. In that day we may hope to see a reduction in the price of milk, for music is said to be very soothing to cows at milking time.

Overture to 'Oberon' Weber

OBERON was Weber's last opera. It was written for performance at Covent Garden (1826). Its brilliant and romantic overture was actually written in London, where the composer died a couple of months later. It conveys no suggestion of its being, as it was, the work of a man who sadly realized that life was ending.

In the slow Introduction (quite short) we hear—(1) The magic horn of Oberon, the King of the Fairies. (2) A light-footed passage suggesting the movements of his subjects. (3) A March passage and then a loud chord which ends the Introduction and ushers in the main body of the Overture.

The pace now changes and, at a very rapid speed, we hear (4) the First Main Tune of the Overture (quick and fiery). It is taken from a quartet in the Opera (Over the Dark Blue Waters).

(5) Soon comes another call upon Oberon's Horn, followed by the light Fairy Music, and then the Second Main Tune. This is one of the melodies sung by Oberon.

(6) Immediately after this comes a beautiful tune, taken from the well-known song in the Opera, Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster.

All this constitutes the chief material of the Overture, and, these tunes identified, the rest of its course will be clear to the listener.

The whole piece is full of fairy romance and of the open-air spirit.

Carnival in Paris Svendsen

PARIS, 'the gay city,' could hardly have gayed music than the favourite picture of carnival-time, by the Norwegian composer, Svendsen. We imagine some such jollification as the Shrove Tuesday procession, with its decorated cars, grotesque figures, masquers, and happy crowds of holiday-making spectators.

Spanish Caprice Rimsky, arr. Korsikov

SPANISH Dance rhythms have attracted several Russian composers. This Caprice consists of a string of short Movements in various Spanish styles, which follow one another without pause.

The first is an Alborado, or morning serenade—a vigorous 'waking-up' piece.

Next we have a tiny set of Variations on a theme. Then the Alborado is repeated, with varied orchestration.

A Scene and Gipsy Song follows, and the last dance is a Fandango (originally a dance to the accompaniment of guitar and castanets).

On the Steppes of Central Asia Borodin

Two Excerpts from 'The Jewels of the Madonna'

Wolf Ferrari

Dance of the Camorrista; Valse Intermezzo

BORODIN (1834-1887), Doctor of Medicine and Professor of Chemistry, became one of the leading 'Nationalist' Composers in nineteenth century Russia. He wrote this 'Sketch' in 1880.

A 'programme' is printed on the title-page of his score. It may be freely translated as follows:—

'In the silence of the sandy steppes of Central Asia ring the first notes of a peaceful Russian song. One hears, too, the melancholy strains of songs of the Orient; one hears the tramp of horses and camels as they come. A caravan, escorted by Russian soldiers, crosses the vast desert, fearlessly pursuing its long journey, trusting wholly in its Russian warrior-guard.

Ceaselessly the caravan advances. The Russian songs and the native songs mingle in one harmony; their strains are long heard over the desert, and at last are lost in the distance.

Borodin aims at suggesting the great spaces of his plains by high, held notes which continue almost unbroken throughout.

The Russian song is heard at the opening. A few moments later comes the Oriental song.

8.55 THE WEEK'S GOOD CAUSE: Appeal on behalf of Pearson's Fresh Air Fund, by the Rt. Hon. LORD RIDDELL

PEARSON'S Fresh Air Fund has been in existence for thirty-five years, and in that time it has given a day in the country to more than five million poor children from London and the big provincial towns. In addition, it started in 1908 to give holidays lasting the whole of two glorious health-giving weeks, and over 80,000 children have benefited by these. It may interest the charitably disposed to know that fifteenpence pays for a day's, and a pound for a fortnight's outing; and that, as the promoters pay all the expenses of management, the money subscribed goes entirely to the children.

Lord Riddell, the newspaper proprietor, who makes the appeal, is a particularly appropriate person to do so, as he now controls the publishing business built up by the late Sir Arthur Pearson, the founder of the Fund. He is also a practised and entertaining speaker.

Contributions should be sent to Mr. Ernest Kessell, Hon. Secretary of the Fresh Air Fund, 18, Henrietta Street, London, W.C.2.

9.15 THE BRAHMS QUINTET for CLARINET and STRINGS

Played by

CHARLES DRAPER and THE VIRTUOSO QUARTET
Relayed from the Rudolf Steiner Hall

THIS is written for Clarinet and String Quartet (two Violins, Viola and Cello).

It is not a mere show piece for Clarinet, though it does indeed use all the best resources of the instrument. But the Clarinet is here little more prominent than the Strings and, in fact, this Quartet owes much to the Clarinet's capacity for taking an unobtrusive part in the general conversation of the Strings.

There are five Movements, the Third being joined to, and almost an introduction to, the Fourth.

The First Movement (Quick) is fairly complicated, but none the less beautiful. There are at least four short tunes, given in turn to most of the instruments impartially.

In the Second Movement (Slow) the Strings are muted. It is more lyrical, but the middle part of the Movement consists chiefly of elaborations in Clarinet and First Violin.

The Third Movement (Moving steadily) is exceedingly simple and hymn-tune-like. As already said, it is joined to the—Fourth Movement (Rapid, but not too rapid, and with feeling). This is playful, whimsical, and has some interesting colour effects.

The Fifth Movement (With speed) is an Air with five Variations. Towards the end a suggestion of the First Movement becomes increasingly marked, until we come to the Coda, which is founded on the First and Last Movements.

OF the music of Spohr, once one of the most popular composers in Europe, little is now heard in public, though fiddlers rightly cherish his notable works for their instrument.

He wrote this 'Dramatic Concerto in the style of a Vocal Scena' for a performance in Italy in 1816, at which he himself played the solo part. The Italians loved vocal music more than that for instruments, and Spohr sought to please them by casting his work into a form somewhat similar to that of an extended 'Aria' or 'Scena.'

The work is in three linked sections. In the first, an orchestral prelude is followed by a long passage in recitative (declamatory) style for the Violinist. The second section corresponds to the 'cavatina' of the Italian or extended Aria, and to the Slow Movement of the normal Concerto (which is ultimately derived from the 'Aria' form). After another (short) portion of recitative comes the last and most fully developed part of the work, which may be compared to the 'cabaletta' that concluded the operatic 'Scena.'

ORCHESTRA

The 'Parisian' Symphony Mozart

AT twenty-two Mozart was travelling about with his mother, hoping to find a permanent post worth the accepting. The Court

Organistship at Versailles was a possibility, but the post was not of importance and the salary too small to supply even the modest needs of the Mozarts.

He did not receive much attention in Paris, which was then too much excited over the rival Opera Composers, Gluck and Puccini, to pay much attention to him. This Symphony was almost his only success there.

For the first time he included Clarinets in the orchestration, for he had only a short time before found these instruments in regular use, at Mannheim. The Orchestra of the Paris 'Concerts Spirituels,' for which he wrote this Symphony, also had them.

There are three clear Movements in the work. The FIRST is a blend of strength and joyous grace, its two Main Themes representing these qualities in charming contrast.

The SECOND MOVEMENT, the usual slow one, is scored more lightly, for Strings, Woodwind without Clarinets, and Horns only, the Trumpets and Drums which enlivened the First Movement being omitted. It is a sweet, delicate piece of song-like expressiveness.

The LAST MOVEMENT, as fully orchestrated as the First, has all the clear-eyed vivacity and resource of Mozart in his best and lightest vein. The Composer uses his skill in the interweaving of parts and the development of material in so easy a style that science is never obtruded, but reinforces the music's appeal as only it can when a Composer knows his business from A to Z, and when his technique is completely at the service of his inspiration.

PARRY JONES and Orchestra
 Ingemisco ('Requiem') Verdi

WHEN in 1873 Manzoni, the great Italian writer, died, Verdi wrote a Requiem Mass in his memory. From this we are to hear the seventh movement, a Tenor Solo, in which a penitent sinner seeks God's mercy, remembering the hope vouchsafed even to those who feel their prayers are not worthy of acceptance.

Every man who has to make provision for the future should read this.

£250 A YEAR FOR LIFE—FROM AGE 55

4 GREAT BENEFITS

1. £250 A YEAR FOR LIFE or £3,000 CASH

2. £20 A MONTH IF UNABLE TO WORK

3. INCOME TAX SAVED EACH YEAR

4. £2,000 FOR YOUR FAMILY

Thousands of men are making their own and their family's future secure by means of the latest Plan of Combined Investment and Insurance devised by the Sun Life of Canada. It is a splendid plan, adaptable at any age and for any amount. You simply make yearly or half-yearly deposits of an agreed amount for an agreed period and at the end of the time you receive a pension for life, or (if you prefer) a large cash sum.

For example, supposing you are now 35 and plan to receive £250 a year for life from age 55. When you get to that age you can have a cheque for about £3,000, instead of the pension, if you prefer to do so.

If, meantime, through illness or accident you are totally and permanently incapacitated for work you will receive a monthly payment of £20 until you are 55, when your regular pension will become due. In addition you will not be called upon to make any further deposits—the Company will make them for you. Further, the cash sum or pension will be paid to you at age 55 as arranged.

Every year you will save a considerable amount of money through rebate of Income Tax. This will greatly add to the profits of the transaction. With the tax as high as it is every man will welcome an opportunity for relief.

Last but not least your family. Every year adds to the amount of this insurance, so that from the moment you make your first deposit they are sure of £2,000, and, in addition, half of every deposit you have paid, in the event of your death before reaching the age of 55.

Why not investigate this Plan? It means happiness for your own later years should you live, it will mean everything to your family should they lose their breadwinner. The Sun Life of Canada is the great Annuity Company, with assets of over £70,000,000 which are under strict Government supervision. The Plan is so good because the Sun Life of Canada is so prosperous and so safe. It places you under no obligation to read the Enquiry Form for full particulars.

4.15 Prof. H. H. TURNER, 'The Shadows of the Stars—Our Moon and its Shadow'

THIS talk is the first of a series in which Professor Turner will tell of the monstrous shadows cast by the planets on our earth. The chief instance, of course, of a shadow's becoming visible is a total eclipse of the sun, such as occurs on June 29 this year, when the shadow of the moon travels across the ground before our eyes. Professor Turner winds up this series on the eve of the total eclipse.

The Austrian Tyrol is a lovely country of sun and snow, lofty peaks and rich valleys, mountain streams and mountain flowers.

7.0 Mr. E. C. ASH, 'Strange Dogs and their Stranger Ways'

IN the days when belief in the supernatural was more prevalent than it is now, dogs were the centre of innumerable superstitions. Strange dogs were met with on lonely moors, or weird bayings were heard on the hills at night, and men thought that these mysterious, uncanny beasts must embody the souls of men and women working out their salvation, or of infants who died unbaptized. Mr. Edward C. Ash is very learned in these matters—his recently-published book, called 'Dogs, Their History and Development,' was a magnificent and monumental work that seems likely to become the standard authority—and he will tell tonight of some of the strangest of these beliefs, of other times and of our own.

7.25 Prof. H. H. TURNER—I, 'Eclipses of the Sun'

THE subject of eclipses is very much to the fore just now, as that rare event in England, a total eclipse of the sun, occurs this June, the day after Professor Turner gives the last of this series of talks. In it he will discuss eclipses of the sun and moon, and of Jupiter's satellites, as well as transits of Venus and some of the eclipsing stars. He himself has been Savilian Professor of Astronomy in the University of Oxford since 1893, and is a past President of the Royal Astronomical Society.

KENNETH ELLIS (Baritone)
Deare, if you change Dowland
When lo! by breake of morning Morley
Shall I come, sweete love, to thee? Champion

THESE songs come from Tudor and Elizabethan days. Dowland, a famous lute-player as well as a Composer, was appointed Lutenist to King Christian IV of Denmark. His song is a lover's appeal to his maid to remain constant, and his protestation that his faith 'shall never break.'

MORLEY'S piece was originally a 'Canzonet to two voices' (1593). It runs thus:—

When lo! by breake of morning
My love herself adorning,
Doth walk the woods so dainty
Gath'ring sweet violets and cowslips plenty,
The birds, enamour'd, sing and praise my Flora;
Lo! here a new Aurora!

CAMPION, Doctor of Medicine, poet and musician, one of the sweetest singers of his time, is here represented by a lover's plea to his lady to admit him to her favour. There is a note of pathos and anxiety in his tone.

- Deare, though your minde so stand

- Sweet Kate Jones

IN the first song by William Corkine (concerning whose life nothing is known), a lover begs his 'deare' to hear him. But he decides that she has made up her mind to show no pity, and so, after entreating her, he ends:—

Sith here no help nor hope remaines,
To ease my grieffe, or end my paines,
I'll seeke in lowest shades to finde
Reste for my heart, peace for my minde.
Go thou, more cruell far than faire,
And now, leave me to my despaire.

The second song expresses love's ardour:—

Sweet Cupid, ripen her desire,
Thy joyful harvest may begin;
If age approach a little nigher
'Twill be too late to get it in. . . .
Then sweete, let us embrace and kiss. . . .

ROBERT JONES'S song shows us a tormented lover, whose Kate has run away. She is a heartless jade, for "He! he! he!" quoth she, "gladly would I see any man to die with loving." Then she gives him a hint: "What a fool is he, stands in awe of ones denying." He plucks up courage, and ends the story thus:—

Cause I had enough
To become more rough.
So I did; O happy trying!

SIR WALFORD DAVIES

Agony's View

INDIA

AS the founder of the Empire Day movement, the Earl of Meath is a particularly suitable speaker for today. In his long career of public service—for he is eighty-six years old, and entered the Foreign Office in 1863—he has acquired numerous distinctions, one of the latest being his election to the Senate of the Irish Free State. He has founded many movements of a social and philanthropic order, and is the author of several books on social and imperial questions, and two of memoirs.

SIR WALFORD DAVIES is by now as well known as a broadcaster as he has long been as a musician. He is Professor of Music at University College, Aberystwyth, and Director of Music and Chairman of the National Council of Music in the University of Wales.

7.0 Mr. H. Burnows: 'The Grandeur that was Rome'

THE long arm of Rome reached all over Britain, but the only village in Lancashire that bears really tangible evidence of Roman occupation is that on the banks of the Ribble that appears in Domesday Book as Ribelcastre. Its modern name is Ribchester, and recent excavations have proved even more conclusively than before the fact that it was once the site of a Roman camp.

Britannia Overture Mackenzie
Fantasia, 'Our Empire'

arr. Charles Godfrey

IN 1894 the Royal Academy of Music attained three-score years and ten, and its Principal, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, composed the Britannia Overture as a celebration of the event; and as the Academy's President at that time was the 'Sailor Prince,' the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, there could be no happier idea than to found the Overture, in part, on British sea tunes. Two of these, the College Hornpipe and Rule, Britannia! are used, as well as three other tunes of Mackenzie's own invention. In some cases the tunes are combined—as when, near the end, the Composer neatly weaves together the dignified Rule, Britannia! tune and the perky Hornpipe.

MR. SQUEERS.

"Isn't it brimstone morning?" "I forget, my dear," replied Squeers. "Yes, it certainly is. We purify the boys' blood now and then, Nickleby."

The nauseous drugs of Dickens' days no longer obtain in 1927. Iron Jelloids are palatable and easy to take.

If you would have radiant health, an elastic step and well-braced nerves, you must have healthy blood. To improve and strengthen the blood take Iron Jelloids. In cases of Anæmia and Weakness, Nerve Strain, Overwork, Convalescence, etc., in men, Women, and Children, Iron Jelloids will be found a most valuable treatment. A ten days treatment (costing 1/3) will convince you. Everyone should take Iron Jelloids now and again—They are the great Blood Enrichers.

Mr. BERNARD C. JUKES, Member of the Pharmaceutical Society: "I always feel I can recommend Iron Jelloids with every confidence."

Mr. J. R. PENNINGTON, Chemist: "I always handle Iron Jelloids with pleasure, as my customers are invariably satisfied with the results."

- 3.45 Prof. WINIFRED CULLIS: 'Health and Commonsense—IV, Housework and Exercise'
- A PARTICULARLY sad feature of household work is that, however fatiguing it may be, it does not in the least follow that it constitutes exercise, from the point of view of health. For instance, standing all day over the wash-tub, enveloped in clouds of steam, may be thoroughly tiring, and yet leave the body without any health-giving exercise at all. In the fourth of her talks Dr. Cullis, who is Professor of Physiology in the University of London, will explain the distinction between work and exercise, and how they can be combined.

IN this talk Professor Weiss, the Professor of Botany at Manchester University, continues his account of plant life in its community aspect, the relations of plants with each other, and the way in which plant neighbours influence one another's development and habits. In the particular case of marsh and pond plants, about which he will talk today, their whole existence is conditioned by the struggle for air.

Symphonic Poem, 'The Preludes' Liszt

LISZT had great ideas as to the power of music to interpret a poem or plot, and he invented the free form of the 'Symphonic Poem' in which to express his ideas more flexibly, adapting the construction of the piece to the dramatic demands of his subject.

The poet Lamartine, in his Les Preludes, puts the question 'Is life anything but a series of Preludes to the song that Death begins?' He pictures the bliss of Love, and the tempests of Life that wreck human happiness. The unhappy one takes refuge in quiet retirement, away from his fellow-men, but when the trumpet calls him to action he flings himself into the fight, finding in battle the full realization of his powers. Lamartine's poetic ideas appealed to Liszt, and in the Symphonic Poem which we are now going to hear he very graphically depicts its scenes.

9.20 Mr. HERMAN KLEIN: 'The Story of The Huguenots' (with musical illustrations)

MUSICAL criticism has its rivalries, as have all the professions, but the title of doyen has been freely accorded by all its members to Mr. Herman Klein for several years now. He began his career as a musical journalist in 1875, and in the half-century since has been musical critic to some of the most important papers in England and America. He is a Past President of the Critics' Circle, and has described his long life in several books—notably 'Thirty Years of Musical Life in London,' published in 1903, in which he gave his memories of the many great personalities in the world of music whom he met in the earlier part of his career.

Spanish Symphony for Violin and Orchestra

Lalo

THE French Composer, Lalo, wrote this piece for the famous Spanish Violinist, Sarasate, whom some listeners will recollect hearing, for he used to be a great favourite here twenty years ago.

The Spanish Symphony (which is really a Suite of pieces, not a Symphony in the usual meaning of the term) is Spanish music through a Frenchman's eyes—gay, debonair, polished and piquant.

There are in the complete work five separate Movements, well contrasted in spirit and style. First Symphony SIBELIUS, Finland's greatest Composer, has had remarkable recognition from his countrymen, but in this country we have heard all too little of his major works. The favourite Valse Triste is only a slight example of his skill. In such music as his Tone Poem Finlandia, the Kalevala Suite, and, best of all, in his seven symphonies, we find the real Sibelius, using national idioms and often deriving his rhythms from those of traditional Finnish folk-poems.

His First Symphony, written when he was thirty-four, is spacious and fairly lengthy. It has a large measure of the virility that is inherent in all this Composer's music.

4.0 AN AFTERNOON CONCERT

THE STATION OCTET

Overture to 'Don Giovanni' Mozart

Selection from 'The Beggar's Opera' arr. Austin

THE Overture reminds us of the sombre side of the story of Don Juan. Its slow Introduction utilizes themes associated in the Opera with the man whom Don Juan has murdered and the statue which comes to life and drags the murderer down to eternal punishment.

Solemn chords on Woodwind and Brass are heard above eerie String passages. Sudden commanding interjections, followed by soft tip-toeings, create an atmosphere of strangeness and fear.

The main body of the Overture (a quick movement) takes us back to the Don's days of unalloyed delight in amorous adventure.

A MUSICIAN FROM FINLAND.

Professor Georg Schneevoigt, the Finnish conductor, will conduct the Wireless Symphony Orchestra in its Light Symphony Concert from London tonight.

Even if you are VERY DEAF this marvellous new invention will enable you to enjoy conversation and to hear in Church, Theatre and Concert Hall comfortably and without embarrassment

The Sonorax FORTIPHONE is the latest discovery of science for relief of deafness. It embodies an entirely new principle of sound amplification and abolishes the defects of old-fashioned hearing aids. Records equally to every note in the scale and gives pure, round, boldly articulated reproduction of every tone of the voice, every note of music. Is equally effective at 5, 50, 100 or even 150 feet. To speak directly into it is not necessary, and the wearer is not required to find a point of vantage. Yet it weighs but a few ounces and is worn concealed beneath the clothing. The earpiece is the lightest and smallest ever invented. No head-land is necessary.

The Sonorax "ear-ear" "ear-ear" "ear-ear" Amplifier surpasses in power heavy box devices weighing many lbs. The greatest discovery of the age for the relief of deafness.

The greatest discovery ever made for the benefit of the deaf, the FORTIPHONE is enabling thousands, once cut off from the world by deafness, again to lead normal, happy lives. It has been said that the inventor "ought to be given a knighthood."

GRANADOS (1867-1916) found inspiration for his most important compositions in the work of Francisco Goya, the celebrated painter of scenes from Spanish life. He composed a set of Pianoforte pieces called Goyescas, giving in another medium impressions of the scenes depicted by the artist. He also made an Opera out of the episodes he treated in these Pianoforte suites, and it is from this latter work that we are to hear an extract.

THE dance-song, the Habanera, came to Spain from Africa by way of Cuba. Chabrier, a Frenchman of flamboyant spirit, was considerably attracted by the gay rhythms of Spanish popular music.

The Referee

ARTHUR ROBBINS, returning home after witnessing a performance of the Opera Tannhäuser, settled himself comfortably before the fire and fell asleep. Awakened at 4 a.m. by loud knocking on the wall and the shouts of his next-door neighbour, he discovered to his surprise that he was sitting before the piano.

Travelling up to town the next morning on the 8.40, he encountered his neighbour, who angrily demanded an explanation why he had chosen to play and sing excerpts from Tannhäuser from 1 a.m. until 4.0.

Arthur, never having sung or played a note of music in his life, was not a little surprised at the accusations which were hurled at him. All this happened some weeks before the events portrayed in tonight's play.

The Scene is the dressing-room of a third-rate boxing saloon, where Arthur Robbins and Bob are discussing a forthcoming fight, in which Arthur is one of the contestants.

'ON TOUR' THIS WEEK.

HARRY HEMSLEY.

If you have ever heard Harry Hemsley's imitations of children, you won't hesitate to tune in for him when he comes on your wavelength this week. Mr. Hemsley, who comes of a family of artists, early gave up drawing, and made his first appearance on the stage in the late H. G. Pelissier's 'Follies' (who were the Co-Optimists of pre-war days). His innate genius for mimicry has made him a favourite in the Vaudeville world. A great feature of his art is its truthfulness, for he finds all the material for his imitations in the life around him.

These are the days and wavelengths on which Harry Hemsley is appearing this week:—

Monday, Aberdeen; Tuesday, Belfast; Wednesday, Cardiff; Thursday, Manchester; Friday, Birmingham; Saturday, Glasgow.

7.25 Mr. D. A. Ross, 'A Hundred Years of Working Class Progress. In Darkest England, 1878-1900'

LAST week Mr. Ross described the Golden Age of Victorian Capitalism, when the skilled worker was entitled to claim possession of 'a stake in the country.' This week he turns to the darker side of the picture—the plight of the unskilled worker between 1878 and 1900, when the engine-driver worked a twenty-hour shift and the docker earned fivepence an hour. Skilled labour, too, began to lose its position, and so we come to the modern development of Trades Unionism and the entry of Labour into the sphere of politics.

This picture of a skilled Manchester operative and a London coal-heaver illustrates the contrast about which Mr. Ross will talk today. [London 7.25.]

THE WIRELESS CHORUS (Chorus Master: STANFORD ROBINSON)

THE WIRELESS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA (Leader: S. KNEALE KELLEY)
Conducted by PERCY PITT

A SPECIAL charm of Mozart's last opera, The Magic Flute, is its wealth of simple, straightforward, 'catchy' tune. Its choruses for men's voices are another feature, and so are its vocal fireworks for the leading soprano, the 'Queen of the Night,' whose part was played by Mozart's sister-in-law.

In the following sketch of the plot the first appearance of each character is shown by the use of capitals.

ACT I.

SCENE 1. TAMINO, a Prince (Tenor), weaponless, pursued by a serpent, falls to the ground unconscious. In the nick of time the THREE LADIES enter and with their spears kill the serpent. It is decided that two of them shall return to their mistress, the Queen of Night, and report the presence of this handsome young prince, and that one shall remain on guard over him. As each wishes to remain with the handsome youth, it has to be decided that none shall do so. Tamino awakes and finds before him PAPAGENO (Baritone), a bird-catcher, dressed in birds' feathers, who boasts that he has killed the serpent. The Three Ladies return and punish Papageno for lying by putting a padlock on his lips. They show Tamino the portrait of a lovely princess, Pamina, daughter of the Queen of Night. Tamino immediately falls in love with her portrait. THE QUEEN OF NIGHT (Soprano) appears and commissions Tamino to rescue her daughter. He readily agrees, for Pamina, he is told, has come into the keeping of the High Priest of Isis, Sarastro, described as an evil magician. Papageno's padlock is removed, and he is given to Tamino as servant. The Ladies give Tamino a magic flute and Papageno a chime of magic bells, and tell them they shall be directed by three young Genii.

SCENE 2. We are in the High Priest's Palace and see the Princess PAMINA (Soprano) insulted by the Negro slave MONOSTATOS (Tenor). Papageno comes in, and he and the Negro take fright at each other, and both run away. Papageno comes back, tells Pamina about the Prince, who is seeking her, and persuades her to go to join him.

SCENE 3. Tamino is led by the GENII, who give him wise and solemn counsel. In his search for Pamina he tries to enter, in turn, three Temples. Voices drive him back from the Temples of Nature and Reason, but on approaching that of Wisdom he is greeted by a priest—the SPEAKER (Bass), who tells him that Sarastro is not a tyrant, but the benignant Chief Priest of the Temple, and the noble protector of Pamina from her mother's magic. Papageno and Pamina enter to look for Tamino. The Negro and slaves attempt to molest them, but Papageno's magic bells ludicrously compel them all to dance. Monostatos has captured Tamino, and instead of rewarding him, SARASTRO (Bass) has him whipped. The Prince and the bird-catcher are taken into the Temple to be tested.

9.20 The Capitals of Europe—II, MR. STEPHEN GWYNN: 'Dublin'

THIS series of talks on capitals of Europe was begun by Mr. E. V. Lucas, who described Paris in a delightful talk. This second item in the series is a worthy successor. Dublin is, of course, a far smaller city than Paris, and has far fewer resources and means of amusements; but whilst it lacks a Montmartre, it has very much the Parisian quality of intimacy and charm. It has a great tradition, and the distinction of the eighteenth century still lingers in its streets and squares. As for culture, Dublin can point to its world-famous Abbey Theatre, and a constant, though varying, population of writers of the first rank.

Mr. Stephen Gwynn, the author and former M.P., has always been an enthusiastic and gifted interpreter of Ireland to the English, and he knows Dublin as well as anyone alive.

THE CLOISTERED CALM OF T.C.D.

This is a corner of Trinity College, the famous old University that is one of the most characteristic features of Dublin. Inset is Mr. Stephen Gwynn, who will talk of Dublin in the 'Capitals of Europe' series tonight. [London 9.20.]

ACT II.

THIS Act consists of a number of quite short scenes. The first is the solemn Temple ceremony. Sarastro and other Priests (Tenor and Bass Soloists, and Men's Chorus) accept Tamino and Papageno for initiation. The pair are tempted by the Three Ladies, who fruitlessly try by threats to win them from their intentions.

Monostatos is interrupted in another attempt to insult Pamina. The Queen of Night commands her daughter to kill Sarastro.

The Priests impose a test of silence on Tamino and Papageno, which the loquacious bird-catcher finds tiresome and the Prince a torture, for Pamina is hurt because he will not speak to her.

All the chief characters have now been introduced except PAMAGENA (Soprano), a charming little Bird-Woman who, first appearing to Papageno as an old hag, is won by the bird-catcher after some trouble, including an attempt of his to hang himself.

Tamino leads Pamina safely through the ordeals of fire and water by the enchantment of the Magic Flute, and they are thus initiated into the mysteries and beauties of the Temple of Wisdom.

The Queen of Night and her Ladies make a last, and unsuccessful, attempt upon the Temple. Daylight streams in, and the two pairs of lovers are acclaimed in a final Chorus.

The greatest power-producing motor spirit with six additional advantages.

This modern fuel contains all the advantages of the better grades of motor spirit and in addition has six distinct and peculiar benefits. To obtain these advantages you must be sure it is National Benzole Mixture which ensures:

1. More power
2. Greater mileage
3. Better hill-climbing
4. Sweeter running
5. Anti-pinking and Anti-knocking
6. It reduces carbonisation

Essentially a clean motor spirit.

National Benzole Mixture is free from gum-forming foreign bodies as this illustration proves:—

A 100 c.c.'s sample of "X" motor spirit, chosen at random, was slowly evaporated in our laboratory, and left a gum deposit, shown above. Imagine what takes place in your engine over 100 miles on this spirit.

Below is the same quantity of standard National Benzole Mixture evaporated by the same process. This affords a striking contrast, and shows that National Benzole Mixture is clean & carbon deposit only slight.

Make a point of trying this clean and powerful motor spirit next time you fill up.

National Benzole Mixture

Write for this booklet now!

Space will not allow the interesting story of motor spirit to be told to advantage here, but write for our illustrated booklet, written in the lighter vein, which is not only interesting but instructive.

3.0 Sir ERNEST GRAY, 'How English Laws are Made—IV, The Houses of Parliament'

THE Houses of Parliament, in their present form, are less than a century old, nearly the whole of the Palace of Westminster having been destroyed in the fire of 1834. But such buildings age quickly, and even the new Houses teem with history, custom and tradition, whilst Westminster Hall is, of course, the original seat of the Courts of Justice of the realm. Sir Ernest Gray has had very great experience of conducting parties through the House of Commons—of which he was a Member for four years—and this will certainly not be the least interesting of his series of talks.

THE PEOPLE'S CONCERT ORCHESTRA,
Conducted by CHARLES WOODHOUSE
Principal Violin—GEORGE STRATTON

Suite for Strings, 'From Holberg's Day'... Grieg

HOLBERG is looked upon as the founder of modern Danish literature. The bicentenary of his birth occurred in 1884, and Grieg, as his contribution to the celebration, composed a Pianoforte Suite From Holberg's Day. This he afterwards arranged for String Orchestra. Holberg was a contemporary of Bach and Handel, and Grieg's music reminds us of the fact very pleasantly. There are five Movements: a Prelude very much in Bach's manner; a graceful Sarabande (one of the dances that made up the Suite in former days); then a charming Gavotte, followed by a melodiously reflective Air, and finally a jovial Rigaudon.

Three Pieces for String Orchestra Grieg
Anitra's Dance ('Peer Gynt'); Solvieg's Song ('Peer Gynt'); Cowherd's Song and Country Dance

'A Little Serenade' ('Eine Kleine Nachtmusik')
—First Two Movements Mozart

THE Mozart work is simply a collection of four delightful separate pieces, a kind of little Symphony, but light as air, gay as the summer evenings for which it was written.

It is scored for a String Orchestra.

FIRST MOVEMENT (Quick). The lively First Main Tune starts at once in all instruments in octaves. It continues at some length, mostly in First Violins.

After a general flourish and a full stop, the Second Main Tune arrives. This is really in several little parts, which all follow one another with perfect naturalness. It starts with a mincing fragment of Tune in Violins in octaves, which the Second Violins repeat, while the First Violins hop about above; then the Bass asserts itself, and so on. Soon we reach the end of the paragraph (so to speak). This first part is marked to be repeated, but that is sometimes thought superfluous nowadays.

The second part begins with a very brief discussion of bits of the two main tunes, then proceeds to repeat the first part almost unchanged. With another general flourish, the piece ends. (The second part may also be repeated.)

The SECOND MOVEMENT is called a Romance. It is a rather stately, thoughtful piece, mostly plainly tuneful.

MUSIC is an art that can be made extraordinarily unattractive if it is wrongly talked about. Mr. Percy Scholes has long been, like Mark Tapley, inveterately cheerful in the face of all the masterpieces that tend to overwhelm the serious-minded man; and a critic who is cheerful though sound is a boon to the musical population. He has been interested in many branches of music criticism and propaganda—founded music journals, acted as critic to various important papers, and been prominent in the recent advances in player-piano and gramophone reproduction.

7.25 Prof. GEORGE GORDON: 'More Companionable Books—IV, Lamb's Letters'

ALTHOUGH the works that Lamb wrote for publication seem so entirely personal, so intimate and revealing, there lies behind them more than might be suspected. Lamb had a genius for friendship and a rare gift of conversation; and in his life there was a dark tragedy that would have embittered most men.

His 'Letters,' therefore, have an interest for the light they throw on his personality as well as their literary value, which is nearly equal to that of the 'Essays of Elia' themselves.

'R.U.R.'—a Drama of the Machine Age (Friday, May 27)

KAREL CAPEK,
The Author of the Play.

The Author of 'R.U.R.'

By PAUL SELVER.

IN view of the forthcoming broadcast of R.U.R., I have been asked, as the English translator of that play, to give some account of its author, Karel Capek. First of all, Capek is a native of what is now known as Czechoslovakia. He was born in a small town in Bohemia about thirty-seven years ago. He was educated in Prague, and later in Berlin and Paris, and after graduating as a doctor of philosophy, he devoted himself to literature. His early work, consisting of sketches and short stories, was written in collaboration with his brother. Before long he joined the staff of Národní Listy (National Gazette), a prominent Prague newspaper with an old literary tradition, and later on he transferred his services to another paper, the Lidové Noviny (People's News), of which both he and his brother are still regular contributors. Incidentally, it was in this paper that his 'Letters from England' and his novel, 'Krakatite,' originally appeared in serial form. In addition to his work as an author, he also produces plays for the Vinohrady Theatre at Prague.

Although Capek's international fame is based upon his work as a dramatist, he has distinguished himself in several branches of authorship. Thus, he has written a book on pragmatic philosophy, and he has also compiled an excellent anthology of modern French poets in Czech translations which he himself has made. Then he has published a witty little book called 'Criticism of Words,' in which he satirizes the tendency to cover poverty of thought by means of hackneyed phrases.

Capek's first appearance as a dramatist was in

A Note on the Play.

By CECIL LEWIS.

IN Karel Capek's remarkable play, R.U.R., he shows us the scientific priesthood of the future, not content with destroying individuality and faith under the guise of substituting ease and rationalism, but actually attempting to replace Nature, thought, initiative, imagination and soul by automata which exist simply to work, to make more automatic the machine-ridden world. They are destroyed if they are inefficient, scrapped when worked out.

The play shows with power and logic the terrible outcome of this heresy: the scientist hoist with his own petard, the agony and death of the automatic hydra he has created, and the vision—far-off and star-like—of new ways in the hearts of new men.

R.U.R. is a great play. Great in idea and great as a piece of dramatic craftsmanship.

The Radio version will not be presented, like the broadcast production Lord Jim, in a series of short scenes linked by a story-teller. That was a study in psychology. The interest lay in the things which happened to the central character.

R.U.R. is a play to start with—a play of ideas—and the development of these ideas demands a sustained scene. The Radio version, however, will show a complete picture without the need of any intermediate announcements.

The play will open with a picture in sound and rhythm (composed by V. Hely Hutchinson) of the great Robot factory where human automata are turned out at the rate of ten thousand a day.

Brember Wills—'ALQUIST.' Robert Harris—'PRIMUS.' Gwen Frangcon-Davies—'THE HUMAN HELENA.' Grizelda Hervey—'THE ROBOT HELENA.' Ernest Milton—'RADIUS.' Robert Loraine—'DOMAIN.'

The Author of R.U.R.

March, 1920, when his play, The Brigand, was performed at the Czech National Theatre in Prague. This play was originally written as far back as 1911, and it is a lyrical drama, the leading character of which, 'The Brigand,' symbolizes the impetuous and egotistic spirit of youth. Then, in January, 1921, followed R.U.R., the play which established Capek's reputation, not only in his native country, but all over the world. The title stands for Rossum's Universal Robots, the name of a concern which produces artificial workers or Robots. The word Robot, which has now been adopted in the current English vocabulary, was coined by Capek himself. He derived it from an old Slavonic root meaning 'drudgery, serfdom.' The Robots were invented by Professor Rossum—this name, by the way, might be rendered as Wiseman—who discovered a method for producing artificial beings capable of all the mechanical human activities, but without any soul. How the Robots affect the structure of society, how they revolt against their human masters and destroy them, and how in the end this leads to the prospect of a better destiny for mankind—all this is worked out with great ingenuity and provides a number of strong dramatic situations, as listeners will discover when the play is broadcast.

The central idea of this play, is, of course, not entirely new. The most obvious parallel is Mrs. Shelley's Frankenstein. But I do not think that Capek owes anything to previous writers who have dealt with the theme of manufactured beings, although in all probability he was familiar with the old Prague legend of the Golem. In any case, however, he was the first to see the dramatic possibilities of the subject, with particular reference to its sociological implications and its bearing on modern conditions.

The satirical elements in R.U.R. recur in The Insect Play, which was written by the two brothers Capek, in collaboration, and produced at the beginning of 1922. It was suggested by the study of the French entomologist Fabre, and each of its three acts deals with an aspect of human society, the less edifying features of which are caricatured by being presented as phases of existence in the insect world.

In February, 1923, Karel Capek produced The Macrobulos Affair, which deals with the problem of longevity. I believe that this is to be seen in London this autumn.

His most recent play, Adam, the Creator, in which he again collaborated with his brother Josef, was produced last month at the National Theatre in Prague. The destruction of the world, which in R.U.R. is arrested at the last moment, is, in this latest play, allowed to occur. Adam, a nihilistic philosopher, who is responsible for it, then makes experiments to see if he can justify his act of destruction by improving on the old world. His attempts to produce something better, resulting in a variety of human types, male and female, prove very unsatisfactory, and the play ends on a note which seems to imply a modified approval of things as they are.

In this necessarily brief sketch I have done no more than indicate the leading features of Capek's work. I ought also to point out that Capek occupies a prominent position in contemporary Czech literature, in which he may be regarded as having inaugurated a new epoch, analogous to and parallel with the era of Czecho-slovak political independence, inaugurated when the Czecho-slovak Republic was established in October, 1918.

THE 'Phantasy,' The Three Bears, is a musical presentation of the well-known tale about the little girl who nearly got into the clutches of these creatures. We have no difficulty in interpreting the motif heard at the start—'Who's been sitting in my chair?' Goldilocks gets up (at five o'clock, as we hear), and runs off to the bears' house. Finding it empty, she peeps about and amuses herself awhile, then falls asleep. The bears arrive (Oboe, the little bear, Clarinet, the second one, and Bassoon the big bear), and chase her away. Goldilocks runs home to granny and tells her of the exciting adventure.

Taking the Guess out of Car maintenance!

The Customer thinks—

“Cars are cheap enough, but I'm a little afraid of the cost of upkeep—how much will it be?”

He is hardly reassured when car dealers and makers avoid this question with—

“Oh, very little for upkeep — a most economical proposition.”

But the makers of the TROJAN say—

“With the sole object of proving our claim that the Trojan is the Simplest Car in the World, costing the least to maintain, we give a signed undertaking that beyond the usual running costs for petrol, oil, tyres, etc., the Maintenance Expenses shall be Nothing for the first 5000 miles”

BUXTON AND NORTH DERBYSHIRE MUSICAL FESTIVAL.
RELAYED FROM THE PAVILION, BUXTON GARDENS
(Picture on page 362.)

INAUGURATED in 1906, the Buxton and North Derbyshire Musical Festival has been held annually, with the exception of the years of the war. It was at first a one-day event, with one adjudicator, and was held in one hall. This year five halls were used, and there were no fewer than eight adjudicators—Sir Ivor Atkins, Miss D. C. Vinicombe, Mr. Acton-Bond, Mr. Frederick Dawson, Mr. Plunket Greene, Mr. Geoffrey Shaw, Mr. Charles Stevenson, and Dr. C. H. Moody. Listeners to whom these names are familiar will

(The items given below constitute the final tests)
Soprano Solo: 'My Heart is like a Singing Bird'Parry

Mezzo-Soprano Solo: 'O Sleep, why dost thou leave me?' ('Semele')Handel

THE lovely air from the secular Oratorio, 'Semele', is sung by Semele herself, who, on awaking, wishes that her lover, Jupiter, of whom she has been dreaming, were with her. Her words are:—

'O sleep, why dost thou leave me?
Why thy visionary joys remove?
O sleep, again deceive me,
To my arms restore my wand'ring love.'

Contralto Solo: 'John Kelly'Stanford
Mixed Voice Choir: Double Chorus, 'Now shall the grace'Bach

THIS Chorus by Bach, which constitutes his fiftieth Cantata, is an eight-part setting of the words in Revelation xii, 10: 'Now shall the grace, and the strength, and the rule, and the might of our God and His Christ be declared, for he to nought is come which hath reviled us day and night to God.'

THE DIFFERENCE!

In this photograph the matched electrode construction of the P.M.6 is disclosed with the anode displaced. Note the great length of the wonderful P.M. Filament.

The grids illustrated give a striking example of the matched electrode system in the case of only two of the series of Mullard P.M. Valves.

THE GRID OF THE PM.256.

MATCHED ELECTRODES combined with the wonderful P.M. FILAMENT

MORE than a supreme filament in Mullard P.M. Valves . . . more than a master filament that has set a new standard for long life, toughness, economy and power . . . the wonderful P.M. Filament . . .

A system of matched electrodes, designed by Mullard Engineers to produce unequalled performance in every type of valve operation by completely utilising the vast energy of this master P.M. Filament to the best advantage in each case.

The result of this special P.M. construction and design is that a series of P.M. Valves has been produced from which, no matter what type of circuit you employ, positively pure and powerful amplification is assured from the first to the last stage, culminating in a final reproduction that is a delight and a revelation.

Consult your radio dealer to-day about the correct Mullard P.M. Valves for your receiver.

— and cheaper sets

THE wonderful purity of tone that it is possible to obtain with resistance-capacity coupling has made this method of amplification extremely popular. In the past the adoption of this system involved a very considerable sacrifice of volume. You couldn't have purity and volume at the same time.

The introduction of the B.T.H. B.8 Valve—with its extraordinary high amplification factor of 50 (unsurpassed by any other valve) has made resistance-capacity coupling an economic success. Indeed the B.8 valve gives as great a sound magnification per stage as the best L.F. transformer. The high impedance of the B.8 (180,000 ohms.) reduces its H.T. current consumption to only 1/60 as much as that of an ordinary valve. Actually the consumption is no greater than that dissipated by the battery when not in use. Add to these advantages the simplicity and lower constructional cost of a "Resistor" receiver, and you will appreciate what the new B.8 valve means to you.

The Free "RESISTOR" Book.

The "Resistor" Book contains all necessary details for the construction of 2, 3, 4 and 5 valve resistance-coupled sets.

Theoretical and working diagrams are given, together with photographs of the complete receivers, lists of components and point-to-point wiring schedules. The book also gives the circuit for a 2-valve amplifier for crystal users. Send to-day for your copy.

With the long light evenings the wireless set will not be worked so continuously as in the winter months.

Batteries may be left to stand for a time unused, possibly in a state of partial discharge.

This is where Exide "Mass" Type batteries score. The special construction of the plates enables them to stand for long periods without loss of charge or deterioration when not in use.

"Hullo! Got a Valve Set?"

ANOTHER surprise! We visit friend Jones, who has always been violent in his antagonism to Wireless. This time, though, to our astonishment, the first thing we hear is a loud speaker. "Hullo!" we say, "Got a Valve Set—you who have always said no wireless for me, until they do away with valves and accumulators and things?" Jones grinned from ear to ear. "Come and have a look," he said . . . but it was not a valve set we saw. It was the BROWN Ideal Wireless Set.

Without the use of a single valve or accumulator, this wonderful instrument gives clear, pure reproduction on the loud speaker. Think of it! No accumulator-charging trouble or expense. No valves to break and nothing to go wrong—no tempers lost and no replacement costs.

A child can use this Set. It is simpler, even, than a gramophone . . . and just as reliable. Faultless reproduction on the loud speaker whenever you want it.

Ask your Wireless Dealer to demonstrate the Brown Ideal Wireless Set to you. In two models: Complete with BROWN Loud Speaker for use within 15 miles of B.B.C. Station (Davenport 30 miles) £12 10s.; Frame Aerial model (range: 3 miles B.B.C. Station) complete with BROWN Loud Speaker, £15

Cossor—the Melody Maker

EVERY valve buyer wants purity of reproduction and long service. One is useless without the other. When you buy a Cossor you get both. Its Kalenised filament is incredibly strong and has been proved capable of withstanding the crashing impact of 600ft. drop from an aeroplane. That is why every Cossor Valve gives long service.

Tonal quality with adequate volume is dependant upon emission. The Kalenised filament gives off such an intense and long-lasting emission—that Cossor users are now priding themselves that at last they can hear every chord re-created in all its natural beauty—truthfully and without distortion upon a background of dead silence.

Cossor Valves are now available for use with 2-volt, 4-volt and 6-volt Accumulators. Every Dealer stocks them. Twelve types from 14/- each.

Cossor Red Band Valves for H.F. or Detector use. Cossor Blue Band Valves for Resistance Capacity Coupling. Cossor Black Band Valves for Detector or 1st L.F. Stage. Cossor Stentor Valves (Green Band for power amplification.

The "Peke" of Perfection

Pedigree counts. The dog-fancier looks to the pedigree to judge the value of the dog. The motorist examines the record of the particular make he considers buying before he makes a decision. The same care should be taken when you buy a Loud Speaker. With so many different makes to choose from, that is the only way you can judge fairly.

In the array of Loud speakers on the market, there is one which stands out above all others. It bears the name of the first Wireless loud Speaker England ever knew; it has an appearance superior to others; it gives finer reproduction. It tells the truth. It is the Brown.

Brown superiority is particularly noticeable in the latest model—the Sphinx. The pure, mellow tone of its truthful reproduction compels admiration. The stateliness of its Sphinx-like design intrigues you. The Brown Sphinx, indeed, because it is such a Masterpiece of perfection, inspires a sense of lasting pride in every owner. The price you pay for its possession is £12 10s.

Louden Valves

It is fair to suppose that thousands of people first bought Loudens because they were much cheaper than other British Valves. But why do they continue to buy them? Why do their friends buy them? Why do they write letters of enthusiastic praise to us by dozens every week? There is only one answer. Because valve for valve, Loudens can hold their own with the best—for purity, for power and for long life.
