The Dawning Era of World Radio.

By the Right Hon. William Graham, M.P.

RADIO broadcasting in Great Britain today is controlled by a board of five Governors who constitute the British Broadcasting Corporation and are, in effect, the stewards and trustees of the people. In other countries other systems of control have been adopted, but the technicalities of the problem will, I believe, compel international development along lines similar to those that we have adopted in Great Britain. For Broadcasting is already international in character : almost every day we hear of a development in radio which makes the world smaller, more compact, and more intelligible to all its peoples. International agreement in regard to the control of Broadcasting will do much to facilitate international progress. Public interest must prevail and no section of listeners should be content with access only to the message of their own land. Already a healthy demand for international programmes is springing up in every country.

Assuming the ease with which the barriers of language can be surmounted, I believe that the most urgent task of international Broadcasting at this time is the distribution of plain and accurate information bearing on the economic recovery of Europe.

THUS, Great Britain is vitally concerned in the probable effect of the coming increases in the annuities under the Dawes scheme, and in the extent to which these contributions must proceed from Germany and compete in the world markets in the form of manufactured articles. Again, what will happen when, as is inevitable in the near future, the saturation point is reached in the now prosperous American domestic market, and American manufacturers are forced to seek additional outlets

Mr. William Graham, who is keenly interested in all aspects of radio, was a member of Lord Crawford's Committee which was appointed by the Government to inquire into broadcasting in Great Britain. He represents the Central Division of Edinburgh in Parliament and was Financial Secretary to the Treasury in 1924. Our contemporary, 'World Radio,' with its weekly survey of the programmes of many European and American Stations, is evidence of the B.B.C.'s desire to advance the cause of international broadcasting advocated by Mr. Graham in his striking article.

for their goods? Such problems as these are certainly those which the masses of the people of this country should understand.

From the beginning of Broadcasting in Great Britain efforts have been made to include in the programmes a reasonable proportion of definite educational matter. I am convinced that Broadcasting is on the eve of a similar opportunity in the field of international progress. For it is a truism to say that many men and women will listen to facts on the wireless which will never hold their attention on the printed page; instruction can thus be conveyed to those who cannot or will not read; the Broadcasting service is, in fact, complementary to other forms of education.

Rightly directed, broadcasting can make the British Empire a clear and intelligible proposition to the dullest intelligence. Space disappears. Take, for example, the work of the Empire Marketing Board. Its appeal to the home producer, to Imperial effort, and to foreign supply is a threefold programme whose success, I suggest, might be very considerably helped by the use of radio broadcasting. In existing conditions the work of the Board is carried on mainly in the fields of publicity—especially in regard to the economic and other resources of the Empire—and research. Blue-books and official memoranda frighten the average citizen ; where these documents fail to win attention wireless Talks might in great measure succeed.

IT is agreed on all hands that Europe today is suffering because of post-war burdens and anxieties caused by fiscal barriers, artificial restriction of trade, and failure to judge aright the economic and industrial problems of the different countries. Observe, for example, the growth of tariff walls in Central Europe. Note the financial struggle of Poland. Do the British people as a whole understand the drastic financial measures which some of the best minds in France seek to apply in their country in the interests of French restoration?

The service that international Broadcasting may render in this sphere will be incalculable in value if it conveys to millions of thoughtful citizens in all countries, just an impression—but of course an accurate one—of the tasks with which Europe and, indeed, the whole world, are confronted today. To the extent to which such enterprise succeeds the general disposition of the

By 'Torps.'

HERE has recently been a remarkable increase in the number of wireless sets to be found at sea in His Majesty's ships, and certainly it would be difficult to imagine a greater blessing than a good broadcast programme from Daventry if one has the misfortune to have to spend a few days on board in some outlandish port.

The Grand National at sea.

I was converted to a grateful appreciation of the benefits of wireless when a few months ago my ship was stationed in a certain bay in Northern Spain, where it blew a southwest gale for five days in succession and life was gloomy until one afternoon the signal officer poked his head into my cabin and observed, 'How would you like to go to the Grand National?'

Whilst I was searching for a suitable missile with which to reply to what seemed to me to be a singularly ill-timed jest, he continued, 'The race starts in ten minutes and if you would like to wander up to the third office we'll hear all about it.'

I went up, and within a quarter of an hour I had forgotten the dreary expanse of rain-swept waters and cloud-covered hills as I listened to the roar of the Aintree crowd and followed the misfortunes of the animal I had drawn in the ward-room sweep.

As soon as possible I procured a loud speaker set of my own, and when a month or two later it was my fate to do a turn of duty of five days on board, I connected up my set with seventy-five yards of flexible to the nearest of our many wireless offices and kept London on tap from 11 a.m. till midnight. From time to time I ring up the office and ask them to switch me on to Paris or to a German station. Very commodious.

A few days ago I made contact with broadcasting from a somewhat different angle. I found myself attending Commander's defaulters in order to watch over the interests of one of the sailors whom it is my honour to command. The 'criminal' was charged with what I should imagine is a novel crime in naval annals, in that he did 'by oscillating violently on a valve set, seriously interfere with the receipt of a service wireless message.'

The 'exhibit' on the defaulter's table consisted of a small packing case, described by the offender as an eight-valve set. A formidable array of technical witnesses, headed by the wireless warrant officer, recounted a story to the effect that mystified by persistent interference the staff had sleuthed round the ship and suddenly noticed a slender wire disappearing down a ventilating pipe. Tracked to its terminus in the bowels of the ship it had led them to the eight-valve set, which, to quote a petty officer telegraphist, 'fairly blew your 'ead off, sir!'

The offender, undaunted by the opposition, plunged into a mass of detail illustrated by a sheaf of diagrams in order to prove that his set was utterly incapable of interfering with anybody or anything.

The bewildered Commander adjourned the case and then sent for me. 'You've got a loud speaker in your cabin, haven't you?'

'Yes, sir.'

'I suppose you know something about this wireless, don't you?'

'Practically nothing, sir! When I did wireless we had Leyden jars and spark gaps.'

'I thought so! Your conversation shows me you are an expert and just the fellow for the job.'

'What job, sir?'

'Well, we shall have dozens of these sets soon and we can't have masses of aerials hanging like creepers over the ship and interference with service signals. D'you see?'

'Yes, sir,' I answered. I wondered what he was getting at. I was not left in doubt for long, for he resumed, 'So I've decided to start a kind of semi-official wireless society on board. Encourage it and at the same time control it. Got the idea?'

'Yes, sir! An excellent scheme but I don't quite see how I come into it?'

The Commander gave me an unkind smile.

'You! Why you are the President of the Society, of course. Must have an officer to run the show; someone I can turn to and bite if we have any more trouble with these wireless fans.'

average citizen and the whole international outlook will be improved. After all, world recovery is very largely a problem of attitude, disposition, goodwill.

World education, with the special aim of advancing material security, is therefore an important and urgent task. But the nations must know more of one another than they do today in all that has to do with their arts and literature, their political and social institutions; their popular recreations. Each of them should strive to be readily intelligible to the others. The nearer we approach to this form of world democracy the more secure will be the foundations of international peace. Thus Broadcasting can indirectly save the lives of millions, for knowledge will make it increasingly difficult for any narrow nationalistic campaign—often one of ill-concealed self-interest—to succeed.

AMERICA, Russia and Germany, among others, are mentioned every day in every British newspaper. But how far do the masses of this country understand even the leading characteristics of American, or Russian, or German life? Every day America in some department of its education or recreation should be available at British firesides. In the everlasting talk regarding Moscow we hear little of Russian culture, yet wireless might give us more news of what the great new Russian musicians, authors, and scientists are doing. And cannot Broadcasting bring to the British multitude some conception of the human struggle that is going on in Germany today in the readjustment to peace-time conditions?

Already some of our finest minds are busy laying firmly and securely the foundations of the dawning era of world-wide radio. They must be encouraged by the thought that among the masses everywhere there is a latent, but so far only partly expressed, demand for knowledge and understanding; and that when the facilities for international broadcasting are fully available this desire for light and leading will express itself in a great advance in every country in all phases of human culture.

A Glance at Future Programmes.

Some Dates for Your Radio Diary.

IMMEDIATELY following the broadcast of the opening ceremony of the Menin Gate Memorial by Lord Plumer on Sunday morning, July 24 (full details of which have already appeared in The Radio Times), LONDON and DAVENTRY Stations will broadcast a sermon by the Archbishop of Upsala (the Right Rev. Nathan Söderblom), which is to be relayed from Winchester Cathedral. The full service is to be broadcast from BOURNEMOUTH only from 11 a.m. The Archbishop of Upsala, who is a Prelate of the Church of Sweden, is well known all over the world for his wide international sympathies. He was the main inspiration in the famous Conference held in Stockholm two years ago—The Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work—at the conclusion of which a Continuation Committee was appointed which is to meet this year in Winchester from July 20 to 25, under the Presidency of the Bishop of Winchester.

One of the jolliest programmes from the London Station recently was that devoted to new works. A similar programme of previously unheard orchestral, instrumental and vocal music will be given from London and other stations on Wednesday evening, July 27.

NEW interest is being lent to the week's concerts of gramophone records by the co-operation of Mr. Christopher Stone. As London editor of The Gramophone, the monthly review which deals comprehensively and authoritatively with the subject, and as largely responsible for the conduct of the National Gramophonic Society, Mr. Stone is in close touch with all that goes on in the gramophone world, and is thus in an ideal position to help listeners to a better appreciation of what is being done, month by month, by the several recording companies. Mr. Stone will not only advise the B.B.C. in its choice of the best records, but will furnish notes on these as well as occasional notes on the use and care of gramophones and records generally.

It is a long time since London listeners were given dips into the programmes of other stations. This popular feature will be revived between 7.30 and 8.15 p.m. on Tuesday, July 26.

BOURNEMOUTH Cricket Week is the subject of a talk to be given from the BOURNEMOUTH Station on Tuesday, July 19, by

Sir Russell Benecraft, Chairman of the Hampshire County Cricket Club. Sir Russell, who is Treasurer of University College, Southampton, has been associated with Hampshire Cricket for upwards of twenty-five years, having been in turn President, Captain and Honorary Secretary of the Club, while he has also served on the Committee of the M.C.C. Hampshire Football, no less than Hampshire Cricket, owes much to him, as Sir Russell is a past President of the Southern Football League and of the Hampshire Football Association.

SIR RUSSELL BENECRAFT.

EUROPE'S wavelength and kilocycle problems do not, and were never intended to, represent the full activities of the Union Internationale de Radiophonie. A step in the right direction has been made in an arrangement by which all European stations will at or about the same time transmit a programme devoted to the music and general culture of some particular member country of the Union. The first programme of this nature will be devoted to France, the various items having been chosen by French broadcasting authorities. British stations have arranged to transmit this French programme on Sunday afternoon, July 24, when the orchestral part, which is to be given under the direction of Mr. Edward Clark in the LONDON Studio, will consist of interesting and representative French music.

A concert of selections from musical comedies will be heard from London, Daventry, and other stations on Thursday evening, July 28. Three favourites have been chosen—'The Country Girl' (Lionel Monckton), 'The Merry Widow' (Franz Lehár), and 'Stop Flirting' (Gershwin, Daly and Lanun).

SOME idea of how the Australian sultana is raised will be described by Miss Rhoda Power during one of the 'How it is Done' series of talks which is to be broadcast from LONDON and other stations on Friday, July 22. Miss Power, who will be remembered for her talks on 'Village Life in Olden Times,' recently visited Australia and has therefore been able to study the manner in which the sundry variety of sultana is grown on the spacious plains of the Commonwealth. The monthly talk of the Ministry of Agriculture for July is being moved from its usual place to Thursday the 21st. It will be given by Dr. F. W. Bewley, the subject being 'The Tomato.'

Two short plays, 'High Tea,' a comedy by H. E. Holme, and 'Fire,' by A. J. Alan, are to be broadcast in the last period of the London and Daventry programmes on Friday evening, July 29. 'Fire' has already been given from several provincial stations, but this will be its first broadcast from London.

BECAUSE of summer holidays, the 7.25 p.m. adult education talks will be discontinued on and from Monday, July 25, until next September. 'The Foundations of Music' transmissions will therefore be extended until 7.30 p.m. each week-day, when the first period of the main evening programme will begin (instead of at 7.45 as at present) except on Friday evenings, when a sports talk will take place at 7.25, the evening programme then beginning at 7.45. Another important alteration will also be introduced on July 25 in the timing and arrangements of the Monday to Friday morning concerts. Instead of beginning at 11 a.m. the Daventry concert will in future open at midday, the London Station also radiating the same programmes. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays all other stations will also re-broadcast the Daventry concert or give a transmission of gramophone records from 12 to 1, except Manchester and Nottingham. They will give morning concerts on Thursdays and Saturdays respectively, and not on Fridays.

THE appearance in the LONDON programme of Mr. Nelson Keys for a quarter of an hour at 7.45 p.m. on Monday, July 18, will doubtless induce many people to suspend their outdoor sports and listen. Other good things in the same week are three periods of twelve minutes which Ivy St. Helier, the Ramblers, and Clapham and Dwyer will occupy in the programme from 10.20 p.m. on Wednesday, July 20. On the following evening the Roosters are giving an hour's entertainment from 7.45 p.m., while on Saturday, July 23, between 9.35 and 10.30 p.m., a performance of vaudeville items will be given by Ed. Smalle (the Radio Imp), the Don Vocal Quartet and Marie Dainton.

The longest moment of his life, when he was hunted by an elephant and escaped 'by inches,' will be described to listeners from the London Studio by Mr. George Cresswell on Thursday afternoon, July 21. Mr. Cresswell has had considerable experience as an elephant hunter, and this story is a real thriller.

DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY, who is the soloist in a symphony concert which Mr. T. H. Morrison is to conduct in the LONDON Studio between 9.35 and 11 p.m. on Wednesday, July 27, is one of the most famous violinists of his generation. Although he is now seventy years of age his playing retains a great deal of the youthful exuberance and brilliance of his former days, while he naturally shows the balance of thoughtful interpretation which comes from years of experience. For many years Dr. Brodsky has been the Principal of the Royal Manchester College of Music, and his work in connection with chamber music (with his Quartet) and solo playing have long been recognized. He was a great personal friend of Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and many others who are nowadays but famous names, and he tells many a charming story of his musical evenings in Russia and elsewhere.

A light concert with string orchestra, on the lines of others which have proved so popular, is to be conducted by Mr. Victor Hely-Hutchinson in the London Studio on Sunday evening, July 24.

LISTENERS in many parts of the country will hear the evening service from the George Street Baptist Church, Plymouth, on Sunday, July 17, when it is broadcast from several stations, including, of course, PLYMOUTH. George Street Baptist Church is one of the most notable Free Churches of England, having been founded in 1620, the year in which the Pilgrim Fathers sailed. Of its many distinguished preachers, four have occupied the position of President of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland. The present Minister, the Rev. T. Wilkinson Riddle, has been there for the last nine years, and has evening congregations regularly numbering a thousand. The choir is nearly a hundred strong, fifty of its members being boys. During the War the Rev. Wilkinson Riddle was Director for the Religious Work for the Y.M.C.A. in France.

Self-Portraits.

[The last of the series of Verse and Prose Competitions that Miss Royle-Smith has been broadcasting from London and Daventry was for a 'Portrait of Myself,' in not more than 350 words. We print below the prize-winning essays.]

The Yorkshire Lass

I'M sitting on the grass in Hyde Park, very surprised to find myself there, or in London at all.

I'm wearing a voile frock with spots: green, black, blue, and pink spots of varying sizes, which give me a strange satisfaction. A little breeze blows and gently flops my hat brim. I like hats with big brims.

There's a red book on the grass beside me. It's the first novel I've read for weeks, for I'm here in London to 'swot,' but I'm longing to plunge into an orgy of P. G. Wodehouse and Galsworthy and Chesterton, with a dash of Relativity thrown in; and to go to plays and organ recitals, flower shows and picture galleries. So there are quite a lot of unfulfilled wishes under my hat, and likes and dislikes must peep out of any portrait.

I'm very interested in People, with a capital P, and especially in faces. Mine, by the way, is of the moon variety, but, at the moment, clean.

I like policemen and tram-drivers and railwaymen; they've contributed quite a lot to my education, and enlightened me many times when I didn't know where I was going.

I like worrying busmen as to which is the cheapest penny ride, especially when they take it seriously; or seeing how many travel bills I can get at Victoria Enquiry Bureau without repeating myself once.

Roadmenders interest me, too. I like looking down holes in the road, finding what's round the next corner. I hate standing on a piece of stone surrounded by traffic, and I love getting a 'rounder' at Hyde Park Corner.

I like salads and cheese and toast, a sensible play, and efficiency in others. I like talking about myself and riding on front seats, and I want very much to rake up enough cash to go for a walking tour in the Black Forest.

So if you draw some grass, a pile of books, and a pencil, a few spots topped by a shady grey felt hat, and a cheery grin, with buses, taxis, policemen, and moving people in the distance—why, you'll have a portrait of a very unimportant but very much alive young Yorkshire lass in London.

IRENE SPENCER.

An Unfinished Study.

YOU couldn't possibly do your own portrait,' said Margaret; 'nobody could, without distorting themselves into saints or sinners, or both. But the dabs, so to speak, of a few faithful friends would produce quite a lifelike impression of you.'

'I'm not sure,' I replied, doubtfully, 'but suppose some of you try. Jimmy can begin.'

'B'm, well,' Jimmy began, 'for one thing, you seem to have a perfect passion for manure.'

'Roses won't grow in this sandy waste without it,' I returned, warmly. 'Anyway, I pay for it.'

Anne tried next. 'You have a silly way, when telling a story, of beginning at the end and working backwards.'

'That's because, as a child much younger than the others, nobody ever gave me time to get anything but the point in. And the rest of the story doesn't always matter, does it?'

'But you've had lots of time to grow out of that,' said Anne, severely, 'only you never have grown out of anything except clothes. Then you shirk all responsibilities, and you don't really like lending your books.'

'I do,' I protested, 'to people who are kind to them.'

Esmond, cutting in here, reminded me that I

THE BLIND SET FREE.

THAT evening it was our desire
To sit and talk around the fire;
Loving the flame that lit each face
At instants, into time and place.
And you could hear us jest and laugh
Over some ancient photograph;
You had to sit and hear us say
How sweet the sunshine was today,
And how it painted all the old
Grey walls with tender rose and gold;
And that the spring would surely make
Those lingering green buds awake
Beside the river; then, how bright
Was that imperial gleam of white
And purple crocus in the grass.
How deep the dark old window-glass
Still dyed the church floor! And we said
We liked that last new book we read;
This watercolour we had bought
Would just hang over there, we thought.
And—should we go and have one peep
At Baby, now she was asleep?
I wonder what was in your mind
Who listened to us, being blind. . . .

And then (our thoughts had not quite gone)
Somebody switched the wireless on,
And made us, one and all, embark
Upon your ocean of the Dark.

At 'London calling,' you were free
Of the wide realms of minstrelsy;
The whole world's music-makers gave
Themselves to light your living grave;
And friendly voices from the night
To you, without the need of sight,
Brought news and greeting, laughter, song. . . .

And these to all of us belong—
We, blind in this republic too,
Made equal citizens with you.

MORWENNA R. LYNE.

had never had my photograph taken by a professional person. 'You like to think that it's because of your lack of conceit, but isn't it merely because you're reluctant to face a plain fact? I hardly think, on the whole,' said Esmond, musingly, 'that I'd choose you as my only companion on an uninhabited island. You wouldn't be useful, either.'

But at this point, as the portrait didn't seem to be developing an attractive appearance, I decided to leave it unfinished—like myself.

Coming Events at Southern Stations.

Liverpool.

'Airs and Graces' is the title of a concert of light music arranged for Wednesday, July 20, in which Doris Vane (soprano), Sydney Coltham (tenor), and the Station Octet will take part.

Sheffield.

Mr. Henry Hamzar Saldin, a native of Ceylon, who during the War fought with the British Army after almost losing his life in the torpedoed Villa de la Cintot, will describe and play some wonderful records of Singhalee and Hindustan music in the course of the evening programme on Tuesday, July 19. The programme will be completed with Maori songs by Mr. Ernest McKinley and songs and tales from the Hebrides by Miss Cedar Paul.

Bournemouth.

The 'Wagner Nights' which take place periodically at the Winter Gardens are always popular with music lovers. Listeners will, therefore, make a note of the next Wagner night—Friday, July 22.

The remarks of children on seeing the sea for the first time should be well worth listening to. Miss L. F. Ramsey has made a collection of these sayings, which she will describe in a talk entitled 'Children and the Sea,' to be broadcast on Monday afternoon, July 18.

Birmingham.

'Swimming as a Recreation' is the subject of a talk by Mr. P. H. Hardinge, President of the Birmingham Association of Swimming Clubs, on Wednesday, July 20.

Two programmes are to be relayed from Leamington Spa on Monday, July 18, one in the afternoon from the Pump Room by the Edna Willoughby Trio and the other in the evening from Jephson Gardens by 'the Ne'er do Wells' Concert Party.

Cardiff.

Several concerts in connection with the National Eisteddfod, which takes place at Holyhead during the first week of August, will be broadcast from the local station.

Further concerts of two popular series—George Parker in 'My Favourite Songs,' and Norman Wright and Gladys Newth in 'Memories of Theatreland'—are arranged for Thursday, July 28. In the latter concert will be selections from The Belle of New York, The Arcadians and Lady Frayle, etc., while between the concerts music by Burgess' Orchestra will be relayed from the Madeira Cove, Weston-Super-Mare.

Manchester.

An International vaudeville programme comprising songs and humour of England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, America, and Russia will be given on Wednesday evening, July 20.

The artists are Harold Burley, Hector Gordon, Alec Chentrens, Cahal Fogarty, Ben Davis, Molteno Wallis, and Maria Marova. National airs will be played by the Vaudeville Four.

The anniversary of the Armada, on Wednesday, July 20, will be celebrated by a special programme arranged for the previous evening in which the Station Orchestra will play appropriate music. Stanley R. Mahar and his Crew will sing rollicking sea songs, and the Station Repertory Players will perform a play, '1588,' by Walter Pearce.

THE GIANT MASTS OF DAVENTRY.

This striking picture, specially drawn for 'The Radio Times' by Allan McNab, and the second in our series of 'Broadcasting as the Artist sees it,' shows the B.B.C.'s High-Power Station at Daventry, where the great aerial masts, 500 feet high, stand on the summit of a little hill near the historic old town of Daventry. From this central spot in the heart of England, on ground trodden by early Briton, Roman, and Danz, and by many famous folk in the long pageant of English history, Daventry today calls to the world.

Overture, 'The Hebrides'..... Mendelssohn
The Bamboola..... Coleridge-Taylor
Romance and Finale from Fourth Symphony Schumann

THE first of the above works is also known as Fingal's Cave. One of the most beautiful and haunting works ever written by Mendelssohn, it was inspired by his visit to the wild, rocky isles of Scotland.

The opening phrase (a short figure at first heard in the Bass) dominates the whole work. It was a direct inspiration, for Mendelssohn said that it occurred to him as he entered Fingal's Cave.

THE BAMBOOLA is a West Indian Negro Dance worked up into an orchestral piece by insistent repetition and development.

SCHUMANN'S Romance, the Second Movement of the Symphony, is an engaging little piece. The character of the melody makes it easy to believe (as we are told) that Schumann at first intended to bring in a guitar for the accompaniment.

The Finale is the Fourth Movement of the Symphony. It works up to a brilliant and exhilarating finish.

'MADRIGAL' is a general term applied to the typical part-song of the Elizabethan age, a 'Ballet' being, as a rule, a particularly light-hearted Madrigal. Very simple harmonies, great freedom of movement in the voice parts, no accompaniment, and a peculiar fascination about it all—these are some of the chief elements of the old Madrigal style.

The 'English Singers' are a Sextet of artists who are drawn into partnership by their love of this type of vocal music. Several of them are prominent as concert soloists.

THIS Fund, which is raised each year by the Vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, is administered by him privately for sending away those who cannot afford, or can ill afford, a summer holiday. St. Martin's is placed at the heart of things, and those who work there are brought in touch with an almost incredible number of people in every walk of life up and down the country. This Fund is used to help those who would be the last to ask for help, and who least look for it. There are no administrative expenses whatsoever. Contributions should be sent to the Vicar, St. Martin's Vicarage, Trafalgar Square.

IN the obscure story of Mozart's Opera The Magic Flute a personage called the Queen of the Night appears now and then from the interior of the earth and declaims her purposes. In the present case she is angry, and expresses herself in one of the most famous soprano songs in existence. It is a masterpiece of music, besides being so difficult and lying so high for the voice that only a soprano of great vocal agility can manage it.

SINCLAIR BURTON—Appeal on behalf of the Seamen's Friendly Society of St. Paul

THE Society was founded in 1884 by the late Father Hopkins. At its headquarters, The Abbey, Alton, Hants, old or infirm and destitute Merchant Seamen are given a permanent home. The London house—The Priory, Hyde Vale, Greenwich, is a free home for destitute Merchant Seamen of all ratings seeking ships, or sick ones attending hospital as out-patients.

Some five hundred and twenty seafarers were helped by the Society last year. Its special aim is to give each man the opportunity of making a fresh start, not merely to assist him and then return him to the same conditions.

Funds are urgently needed for the general work, and subscriptions towards the permanent Abbey Buildings for the old sailors. Address: The General Secretary, The Abbey, Alton, Hants. Envelopes should be marked 'Wireless Appeal.'

(From the Cycle
'Dichterliebe'
'Poet's Love')
Schumann

SCHUMANN'S happy marriage at the age of thirty seems to have been a wonderful incentive to composition. In one form especially, in song, he poured out his emotions. Over a hundred songs were composed in that first year of married life. Among them was a cycle of sixteen songs, entitled The Poet's Love (Dichterliebe, in German). The words are by Heine, the poet who, forbidden to live in his native land, spent some time in London and ended his days in France, in bodily suffering.

The songs to be sung are the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Seventh in the cycle.

The first five (all very short) tell of the growth of love in the poet's heart for 'the peerless, the rarest, the fairest, the dearest,' and (in the Fourth song) of his poignant memory of her declaration 'I love but thee,' that moves him to tears. The Fifth also recalls 'that wonderful sweet hour.'

In the Seventh song his love is lost to him. The music tells of his pain, and the strength with which he meets it.

Life ASSURANCE is love ASSURANCE

The surest way of assuring the love of your wife and family, now and in the future, is by making adequate provision for their comfort should 'the unforeseen' — yet inevitable — happen.

Insurance is the only safe and sensible way; a policy with the 'W. & G.', for instance, not only safeguards such eventualities, but is actually a money-earning investment, as the bonus declared by this progressive Society on all Whole Life, with-profit policies for 1926 was no less than £2 8s. per cent!

It will certainly be worth while your enquiring for further details of the policies and schemes available. Write at once to:

WITH this talk Mr. and Mrs. Quennell conclude their series on the everyday life of our ancestors. Next week will come the summing-up of the long story that they have told, tracing the development of man's customs and habits of life in England, from the arduous existence of the Stone Age, when early mankind was still struggling for its place on the earth, to the expanding civilization of the Later Renaissance, the age of Wren and Milton, Pepys and Vandycck, of which they will talk today.

7.15 BRAHMS' SONGS

Sung by DALE SMITH

Wie bist du, meine Königin (How gracious thou art, my Queen)
 Von waldbekränzter Höhe (From forest-crowned heights)
 Wenn du nur zuweilen lächelst (If but now and then thou smilest)

BRAHMS (1833-1897), in his song-writing, was essentially a romantic. His range was narrower than that of his fellows in greatness. He was not dramatic, as Schubert was; he was not an inspired dreamer like Schumann; he had nothing like the quick wit of Wolf. His favourite style was that of the sleek, honey-sweet love-song, beautiful in melody and of a fastidious musicianship. He liked also to colour with music the despairs of self-tormenting poets. His songs seldom express the love of life.

Is he less 'great' than Schubert and Schumann? Perhaps. But it must be remembered that songs were all-important with the other composers, whereas with Brahms they were a by-path among his great Symphonies, Concertos, Chamber works and Choral works.

HOW GRACIOUS THOU ART is one of Brahms' most tenderly passionate love-songs. The singer declares that his beloved is fairer than any flowers that bloom. Each verse ends with a deeply expressive 'Wonderful! wonderful!'

FROM FOREST-CROWNED HEIGHTS—and from dewy flowers, from flowing streams and coursing clouds come yearning thoughts of the lost beloved.

IF BUT NOW AND THEN THOU SMILEST—then all the burden of love disappears.

(Pictures on page 59)

THE words of A Tale of Old Japan are a poem by Alfred Noyes. This is the story: Yoichi Tenko, a great painter of peacock islands and dragons, loved his little foster-child, O Kimi San. He had many disciples, among them a poor youth, Sawara, who quickly learnt all that Tenko could teach him of painting.

Kimi watched and loved him. Before Tenko sent the youth forth to make his fortune, the two were betrothed. They parted, he to win riches, she to wait.

Three years she waited, while Sawara's growing fame lit the clouds. Then came a young merchant, bringing gold and asking for the hand of Kimi. Tenko lied to her, saying that Sawara was wedded. Poor Kimi, without a word or cry, left them, and none could find her.

At length Sawara came in rich array,

Silver bells on a milk white mule
 Rose-red sails on an emerald sea,
 'Kimi?' he said.

Who is 'she'?
 Kimi? Ah, the child that played

Round the willow-tree. She prayed
 Often; and, whate'er I said,
 She believed it, Tenko.

When Sawara went out to paint among the peacock islands, Kimi came to him 'white as a drifting snow-flake,' and died in his arms.

7.15 BRAHMS' SONGS

Sung by DALE SMITH

Regenlied (A Song of Rain),
Unbewegte laue Luft (The air is still and mild)
Dein blaues Auge (Thine eye of blue)

RAINDROPS, in the first of these songs, bring back memories of the days 'when we went forth barefoot and braved the weather, our faces joyfully turned to the wet breezes, our hearts in tune and the pulse of life throbbing within us—days of childhood, lost for ever.'

In the second song are two pictures—the calm of slumbering nature and the turmoil of passionate desire within the man. The contrast is borne out in the music, which is at first gently melodious and afterwards urged forward on an impetuous accompaniment.

The third song is a short and familiar form of apostrophe. Musically, it is a piece of calm, effortless melody that wanders into another key and back again, accompanied by gently glowing harmonies.

CYRIL JENKINS is one of the most prominent of Welsh musicians, both as composer and as propagandist. He is one of those whose aim it has been to bring into Wales the modern current of musical ideas that has tended on the whole to stop short at the border.

His own compositions are not of the kind that rank as 'modern' or 'modernistic' in the musical world generally. He expresses himself in the musical language of the age from Wagner to Elgar. Some of his works are on a large scale.

Stravinsky's 'L'Histoire Du Soldat.' (Tuesday, July 12)

Igor Stravinsky.

By Sacheverell Sitwell.

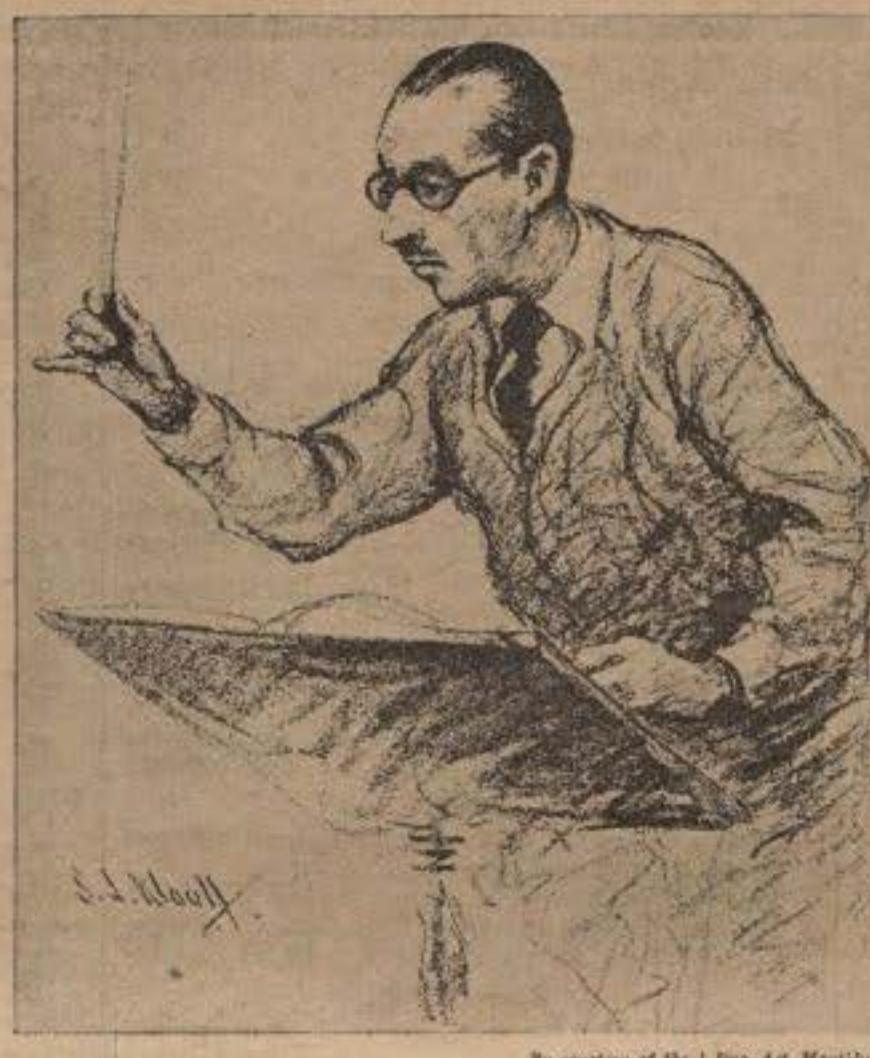

'Il faut trouver des choses vivantes.' This is a favourite phrase of M. Diaghilev, and may be taken as a text round which this short article on Stravinsky is centred. I suppose that the two most powerful outside influences of the last half-century upon European art have been the discovery of Japanese and Chinese paintings, and the sudden revelation of the great Russian composers. Their names are familiar now to anyone who has ever opened a concert programme, turned on a loud-speaker, or bought a gramophone record; but a quarter of a century ago Moussorgsky, Borodin, and Rimsky-Korsakov were absurd nonentities. Their sudden advance into familiar fame is due to M. Diaghilev, an apostle of many diverse creeds, but to this, his native one, he has been tenacious and indefatigable. He invaded Paris and London in 1909 and gave a season of Russian opera and ballet, and that remark of his, that living things must always be found, made him determine to provide the Western public with at least one living as well as several dead composers.

He is reported to have gone one evening to a concert where a piece called 'Fireworks' by an unknown young man, Igor Stravinsky, was given its first performance. It may be assumed that he realized not only what talent this young man already possessed, but into what fresh perfections it would be possible to direct his gifts. For certainly a series of world-famous ballets were the outcome of this meeting. L'Oiseau de Feu was the first fruit of this association, and it was followed within the next three years by Petrouchka and La Sacre du Printemps.

In these three ballets Stravinsky already shows his extraordinary Protean nature and his refusal ever to go back on his old successes for fresh laurels. No sooner has he evolved and made perfect one kind of thing than he shakes off all the qualities he may have acquired during its creation in order to arrive fresh and empty-handed in front of some new object of his curiosity. I take it that these three works just mentioned are familiar to the public and that they stand in no need of comment for this reason. During the time of their composition the opera of Le Rossignol, since turned into a ballet, was also written and performed, so that we have within four short years four entirely different atmospheres in which Stravinsky's imagination worked.

This period of extraordinary activity was brought to a close by the outbreak of the Great War when every international theatre enterprise died a natural death. Stravinsky was lucky enough not to be found in Russia when that occurred, and so he was able to take up his residence in Switzerland, where he lived for a greater part of those four dreadful years. It is from this period that L'Histoire du Soldat dates, and it marks an adventure into a new kind of world for the composer. Unfortunately, whilst benefiting by the pure mountain air he fell under the influence of a Swiss poet, Ramuz, who wrote the libretto as an unintelligible and pointless story on to which this most direct musical treatment is hung.

It is indeed a lively and curious work. We are here given a soldier's life in a series of truths which hold their force for every country and every age. We have here the Trooping of the Colour, a summer evening by the perambulator's side, as well as the Battle of Hastings and every other battle or retreat that can be dug out of history. It is an epitome of military life, its triumphs and defeats, and also those victories, not unknown in military annals, which leave the hero falling on his head. I must admit that I find the chorale to be of unexampled tedium, while the Marche Royale and some of the dances have a sparkling brilliance that throw the glamour and fatigues of a soldier's life into their right proportion of gloom and dangerous gaiety.

I believe that in some ways this work will appeal more to the public than the piano concerto played by the composer a few weeks ago. It has a more direct emotional appeal and its archaism is of

The Story.

MANY listeners became acquainted with Stravinsky's music on the afternoon of Sunday, June 18, when a concert of his works was broadcast from London. The Soldier's Tale may be considered an addendum to that concert. It represents Stravinsky's later musical style.

PART ONE

I. Marching Tunes. The Reader (who tells part of the tale) relates how a Soldier, on leave, is journeying on foot to his native village. He rests by a stream, grumbles at his hard life, and consoles himself by playing on his fiddle.

II. Little Tunes beside the Brook. The Devil enters, disguised as a harmless old gentleman. He persuades the Soldier to give up his fiddle in exchange for a book containing 'an answer to every problem,' and the secret of wealth. He gets the Soldier to come along with him and teach him to play the fiddle.

Hero the visit to the home of the Devil is described by the Reader.

When the Soldier goes home all is changed, and people have forgotten him, or don't want him. He becomes rich, but wealth brings him no joy. The Devil, disguised as a pedlar, comes to him again, and lets him try his old fiddle; but he cannot make it sound, and in disgust throws it from him, and tears up his book of useless secrets.

PART TWO

The Soldier hears a proclamation to the effect that any man who can cure the King's daughter of an illness shall marry her.

III. Royal March. The Reader tells how the Soldier meets the King, and offers to try to cure the Princess.

IV. The Little Concert. The Soldier plays to the Princess, cures her, and marries her.

V. Dances : Tango, Valse, Rag-Time.

VI. The Devil Dances. He warns the Soldier that if he tries to pass the frontier of the land, he will fall into his ('Satan's') hands.

VII. Chorale. The Princess, having heard about the Soldier's past life, persuades him to return again to his native village. As he steps over the frontier, the Devil claims him.

VIII. Devil's March of Triumph. The poor Soldier is led away to his doom.

a more fundamental nature. It is based upon certain imperishable human emotions, seen here perhaps in their most stark and direct moments, while the concerto goes back, not thousands of years, but a century and a half into the echoes of Bach and Handel. In all these later works of his, Stravinsky has been making a desperate effort to cast off his early fame and to renew it by fresh methods. His most ambitious work since the War has been Les Noces, a ballet with choir, timpani and four grand pianos, given in London last summer; Pulcinella, a ballet founded on old music of Perugia, dates from this same time; and this later series of his creations has ended with Oedipus Rex, an oratorio given in Paris a month ago.

There are now, therefore, enough works of his reformed and mature style by which to appreciate this fresh series of contrasts to his early successes. It is useless to imagine that any of these later works of his will ever reach to the same degree of popularity as his three early ballets. He has for too long been divorced from the theatre pure and simple and from the ordinary intricacies of ballet out of which he built his fame and along the lines of which he ought to have continued. But a talent of such dimensions as that of Stravinsky throws out sparks from time to time even at its weaker moments, and among these L'Histoire du Soldat is far from being the least brilliant.

7.0 Dr. CYRIL NORWOOD (under the auspices of the League of Nations Union), 'Can the Nations Safely Disarm?'

EVERYBODY would like to disarm, and save untold millions a year on the fighting Services, if it were possible. It is only as to the possibility of disarming with safety that, at this date, the militarists and the pacifists disagree. This is the question that the Headmaster of Harrow will discuss in this evening's talk.

Sung by DALE SMITH

Nachklang (Echo)

Ich sah als Knabe Blumen blühn (When a boy I saw the flowers blooming)

Sandmännchen (The little Sandman) . . . (Folk Standchen (Serenade) . . .) Songs)

THE ECHO in the first song is a sorrowful afterthought of the golden hours that are past.

In the next song the same poet, Klaus Groth, makes the same moan again—'Where now is the glory of my youth?' This kind of mental helplessness sadly afflicts German poetry.

Brahms, like our Stanford, Vaughan Williams, and Holst, was fond of arranging the folk-songs of his country. One of the most exquisite and most popular of these 'arrangements' is the little song about the Sandman who comes round about dusk and drops sand into children's eyes and sends them to sleep.

The Serenade, also a folk-song, has an unassuming tune with a very pretty phrase coming in at the end of each verse like an afterthought.

Even in these days of steamships and up-to-date harpoons, whaling is still a stern and thrilling business, and a trip in a whaler would be adventure enough to satisfy most of us. Mr. Frank Morley (who is an American who came here as a Rhodes Scholar and has stayed as a writer and editor) took such a trip in a Shetland whaler not long ago, and described his experiences in his contribution to that interesting book, 'Whaling North and South.' The Scottish National War Memorial. (Thursday, July 14)

The Memorial.

THE Scottish National War Memorial which is to be opened today has been built on the most appropriate spot in all Scotland. It stands high on the Castle Rock, in the very heart of the ancient stronghold which has towered over Edinburgh, and bulked largely in the history of Scotland, for close on a thousand years, and in its shrine the memory of the heroes of 1914-1918 will be linked with that of the older heroes of Scotland, of Wallace and Bruce, of Douglas and Bonnie Dundee.

The Memorial, which stands on the site of an old chapel of the thirteenth century, takes the form of a Gallery of Honour and Shrine. The Gallery of Honour holds individual memorials of all the Scottish Regiments and Scottish units, besides memorials of the Navy, the Air Force, and the Women's Services. In the beautifully carved bays which form these memorials many of the old battle-colours of Scottish regiments will find their final resting-place. The Shrine, which will contain the Rolls of Honour of the Services, is connected with the Gallery of Honour by a magnificently carved arch nearly forty feet in height. Its seven windows illustrate 'War as a Mysterious Element in the Destiny of Man,' picturing its birth in the tragedy of Cain and Abel, its overthrow as recorded in Revelations, and its conqueror—the Spirit—in the great Peace and Thanksgiving group which looks out on the cold, clear North.

The ceremony at the opening of this Memorial must be of deep interest to thousands more than will be able to find places in the extremely limited space available for spectators in the Castle. All over Scotland, all over Britain, indeed all over the world, there are Scots who have a personal interest in their Memorial. Accordingly, a Running Commentary on the proceedings and portions of the Service of Dedication will be relayed through the Edinburgh station and broadcast by all stations of the B.B.C.

No more suitable commentator could have been found than Major John Hay Beith, C.B.E., M.C., known to countless readers as Ian Hay, whose intimate knowledge of Scotland's part in the War is revealed in his books 'The First Hundred Thousand' and 'Carrying On.' Major Beith will give his commentary from the turret of the old Palace buildings, the highest point in the Castle and perhaps the highest in Edinburgh, from which he looks straight down on Crown Square where the Memorial is situated. The building on whose turret Major Beith will stand is itself a monument of Scottish history. Its lower vaults, as they still exist, date from the fifteenth century, and in one of its gloomy chambers the ill-fated Mary, Queen of Scots, gave birth to the first King of the United Kingdom, James VI of Scotland and I of Great Britain. In this building, too, the Scottish Regalia have been housed ever since the efforts of Sir Walter Scott succeeded in recovering them from their age-long hiding-place.

The Gallery of Honour and the Shrine which will be opened by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales today and visited by Their Majesties the King and Queen.

who will act as commentator during the broadcast from Edinburgh Castle.

The Programme in Detail.

THIS morning's broadcast of the opening ceremony begins at twenty minutes past ten o'clock. The full programme is as follows—

FROM CROWN SQUARE.

10.20 a.m. Major Beith begins a preliminary description of the Memorial and the Castle.

10.30 The colours of the various Scottish regiments which have been deposited in the church of St. Giles and are now to rest in the respective bays of the Memorial will arrive under escort and be played into Crown Square by the Pipe Band of the 2nd Battalion of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders. Major Beith will give brief comments on the various colours as they arrive and the music of the Band will be heard.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

10.45 Another microphone installed on the Castle Esplanade will pick up the music of the Band as H.R.H. the Prince of Wales arrives, and when he has passed, the same microphone will pick up the opening of a Drumhead Service which is to be held on the Esplanade for the benefit of those who cannot get into Crown Square.

THE DEDICATION.

10.50 approx. Major Beith will describe the arrival of the Prince of Wales in Crown Square. Here follows the Dedication Service from the steps of the Memorial.

In this service the Moderators of the three Presbyterian Churches and the Primus of the Scottish Episcopal Church will take part. There will be a massed choir and band.

AFTER THE DEDICATION.

At the conclusion of the Service the Prince of Wales will lay a wreath in the East alcove, and opening the door, will declare the Memorial open.

The colours will then march in, followed by the Colonels in-Chief of the various regiments bearing the Rolls of Honour of their units. All these proceedings will be described by Major Beith.

THE KING AND QUEEN.

11.42 approx. The microphone on the Esplanade will pick up the noises on the arrival of Their Majesties the King and Queen at that point.

11.45 approx. Major Beith describes the arrival of Their Majesties in Crown Square and the scene as they are conducted into the Memorial by the Prince of Wales.

The broadcast then ends with a few concluding remarks by Major Beith.

Act I, Scene 1: The Seashore near Corneville

Scene 2: The Road to the Fair

Scene 3: The Market Place in Corneville

Act II. An Antique Chamber in the Chateau de Corneville

Act III. An Orchard in Corneville Park

A N old miser, named Gaspard, who had been steward to the exiled Comte de Lucency, was left in charge of his master's revenues and of his infant daughter, Lucienne. Taking it for granted that the Comte would never return, Gaspard brought up the daughter as his own niece, calling her Germaine. The proofs of her birth he hid, together with the Comte's fortune, in a secret room in the deserted Chateau de Corneville, whose bells, an old legend said, would ring of themselves to welcome the return of its master, Marquis, who was also in exile. To avoid discovery the miser arranged an elaborate scheme of ghostly figures and lights in the chateau, which terrified the villagers.

Gaspard had arranged a marriage between Germaine and the old Bailie of the parish, but she was plighted to an idler, Grenicheux, whom she believed had rescued her from drowning. In reality, it was the young Marquis, Henri de Corneville, who came back unexpectedly to claim the estates he had inherited from his exiled grandfather. Searching the Chateau, he and his friends discover Gaspard's secret, but think at first that Lucienne is a waif named Serpolette, who is in the miser's care. But when disguised in the armour of the dead lords of Corneville they terrify Gaspard into revealing the whole of the secret, and everything ends happily with the legendary bells ringing the wedding chimes for the Marquis and Germaine.

7.15 BRAHMS' SONGS

Sung by DALE SMITH

Wir wanderten (We wandered)

Auf dem Kirchhof (In the Churchyard)

Immer leiser wird mein Schlummer (Ever gentler grows my slumber)

THE poem of We wandered, by Dammer, is a loving recollection of perfect happiness in listening to the voice of a dear companion. The music typifies Brahms' gift of writing melodiously in phrases that flow and glow with fine character.

If any composer had an aptitude for writing pictorial music, the poem of In the Churchyard (by Liliencron) would surely bring it into action: 'The day went out in rain and storm. I lingered by many a forgotten grave, amid weather-beaten stones on which I could scarcely read the names.'

The third is one of the favourites among Brahms' songs. Its mood of drowsiness and restrained passion gives beauty to the lament of one who is dying heartbroken.

2.15 SURREY v. LANCASHIRE
A Running Commentary on the County Championship Match

Relayed from Kennington Oval
THE ANDREW BROWN QUINTET

THIS afternoon's cricket broadcast will describe a match that always packs the Oval, a match that both its opponents consider one of the most important of the season. In the previous meeting of the counties this year, at Old Trafford, Lancashire piled up an enormous score and easily secured the points for a first-innings lead, so Surrey are all out to have their revenge.

This first broadcast will describe the morning's play and the prospects for the afternoon. At four o'clock and six there will be further accounts, and when stumps are drawn at 6.45, the final score will be given and the whole of the day's play summed up.

3.30 COMMEMORATION of the 800th Anniversary of the FOUNDATION OF FURNESS ABBEY
Relayed from Abbey Park, Barrow-in-Furness Service conducted by
The Rt. Rev. THE BISHOP OF CARLISLE
(Dr. H. H. WILLIAMS)
Address by
The Rt. Rev. THE BISHOP OF DURHAM
(Dr. H. HENSLEY HESSEY)
S.B. from Leeds

(For full Programme see Leeds-Bradford).
JUST outside the industrial town of Barrow-in-Furness, with its great shipyards and docks, stand the picturesque, rose-pink ruins of one of the finest abbeys ever built by the old monks. Eight hundred years ago the Abbey was founded, and it grew to be one of the richest in England, and the largest Cistercian foundation in the kingdom. Its Abbot was the lord of Furness with almost absolute power, and its revenues were immense. But the Dissolution left the Abbey abandoned, its estates and revenues confiscated and its monks dispersed, and for nearly three centuries time and weather have worked their will on a triumph of architecture that we would give a great deal to have today.

7.0 Mr. J. W. ROBERTSON SCOTT: The Month's Reviews

7.15 BRAHMS' SONGS
Sung by DALE SMITH
Wie Melodien zieht es mir
(Like melodies it draws me on)
Sapphoche Ode (Sappho Ode)

Bei dir sind meine Gedanken (With you are my thoughts)
In Waldesinsamkeit (In forest loneliness)

Der Schmied (The Blacksmith)

WIE MELODIEN sings of 'something' which comes like melodies and spring-blossoms, but is elusive as grey mists and breaths of air. 'But yet,' says the song, 'in Rhymes there lies well hidden a fragrance which brings tears to the eyes.'

The Sappho Ode is a memory of the beauty of roses, wet with dew, and of the beloved one's kiss, when two souls were moved by deep emotion. Musically it is a song of intense beauty. Notice the elegance and perfect shape of the long phrases that compose the melody.

With you are my thoughts is a simple serenade from a distance, in three similar verses, with a noticeable figure of accompaniment that is kept up with insistence and artistic finish.

In the next song the verse states, without comment, that 'I used to sit at your feet, in the loneliness of the forest, with my head in your lap . . . the sun went down glowing and far away a nightingale sang.' The music helps, with ca'm elaboration, to colour the picture.

The Blacksmith is one of Brahms' most vigorous songs. A maid sings of her lover, the smith, whose cheery hammer rings on the anvil like a peal of bells. As she passes, she sees with admiration his prowess at the forge, where the flames roar and blaze forth around him. The accompaniment, in its bold strokes, suggests the energy of the smith and the clang of his hammer.

EXPERIMENTING with various makes of valves may be alright for those with fat pocket books. But I believe in the policy of sticking to a good Valve once you have found it. Cossor valves have always served me well—and the new Cossor series * with Kalemised filaments are better than ever. Whilst Cossor continues to produce valves which last so long and which give such wonderful tone I shall never think of buying any others—no, not even if they were offered to me at half the price.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER from a user of "Cosmos" Valves gives his reasons for preferring them, particularly the S.P.18/RR (Double Red Spot).

Dalton Hall,
A Hall of Residence for the University of Manchester,
Victoria Park, Manchester. 6/5/27

Dear Sirs,

You will doubtless receive many appreciative letters in respect of your new Double Red Spot Valve, and therefore one more may make little difference. At the same time I feel that the gratitude of wireless users is due to you for the great advance in reproduction that this valve gives. I was using a set with two Blue Spot valves and one Red Spot, with a home made paper cone loud speaker. The reproduction then was considered remarkable by all who heard it, but in order to get extra intensity without overloading, I had just decided to change over to 6-volt valves when a friend directed my attention to your new Double Red Spot Valve. This has given me all the intensity I want and a friend who is pretty well qualified to judge says that the reproduction I am getting is second only to that at the Science Museum in South Kensington. I should now gain nothing by changing over to 6-volt, and I am advising everyone I meet to use your new valve.

Yours truly,

(Signed) G. A. Sutherland (Principal, Dalton Hall)

METRO-VICK SUPPLIES LTD. LONDON

"Now you will be free from trouble, sir!"

This Oldham O.V.D. Accumulator will not sulphate, even if not recharged for long periods."

YOU are wasting money every minute you are using an ordinary accumulator with, say, a 2-valve Set equipped with dull emitter valves. It was essential for bright emitters, but, with the low-consumption valves of today, its plates are almost certain to sulphate.

Only the Oldham O.V.D. can hold its charge over the long periods you want, without its plates sulphating. Slow discharge is not its only advantage, however. For the O.V.D. can also be charged rapidly without harming its Laminode plates.

Neither does the Oldham O.V.D. require a long and tedious first charge. When you buy it from your Wireless Dealer's you merely add acid, and within an hour, it is ready for use—thus you need never miss a programme if your accumulator has run down. Although the O.V.D. is so economical in use and has so many advantages, it is extremely low in price. Why pay more, when, for only 5/-, you can get an accumulator made under the famous Oldham Activation Process—in itself a guarantee of long, dependable service. See it at your Dealer's.

Wireless without worry!

Now have loud speaker reproduction without valves or accumulator

IN many a home, nowadays, you can hear the strains of a loud speaker, yet, when you ask to see the valve set, you are told there isn't one! All they show you is a little wooden box. "What!" you exclaim, "no valves or accumulator? How do you work the loud speaker, then?" By means of the Brown Ideal Wireless Set, you learn—the set that works a loud speaker without valves or accumulator.

Think what this means: small upkeep expense (only a 4½ volt dry battery which lasts for months); no trouble and worry with constant recharging; no annoyance and disappointment when the accumulator "runs out" just when you don't want it to.

If you live within fifteen miles of a broadcasting station this boon can be yours. Pure lifelike loud speaker reproduction without worry, expense or complicated working. Anyone can 'work' this wonder set—even your kiddies. Ask your Dealer to demonstrate the Brown Ideal Wireless Set for you. There are two models; for range of 15 miles from B.B.C. station or 80 miles from Daventry, complete with Brown Loud Speaker, £12 10s. Frame Aerial Model (with Brown Loud Speaker) for 7 miles range, £15 15s.

AND NOW THE 100 VOLT LISSEN BATTERY

Since we introduced the LISSEN New Process H.T. Battery, 60 volt size, we have been kept so busy making it, to meet the enormous demand, that we have been unable, before, to consider extending the range of sizes.

Now, however, we have put down fresh plant and have equipped other factories, and you can get a battery in the 100 volt size (actually reading 108 volts), embodying all the fine qualities of the 60 volt type, which are known and appreciated all over the country.

This new 100 volt battery is made by the same special process as the 60 volt—the same combination of chemicals discovered by, and known only to, LISSEN, is being used in it.

And as usual with all LISSEN products, the price is low. Amazingly low, in the case of this battery. Think of it—a 100 volt battery full of energy; a new kind of energy, clean and clear and smooth in its flow, energy that puts real power into your loud speaker, and a clear tone, which is sustained throughout the longest programme—for 12/11.

This remarkably low price has not been arrived at through mass production "skimping" methods, but by sensible economies effected during manufacture and distribution—and the LISSEN policy of direct-to-dealer distribution, cutting out big wholesale profits. Every dealer who has sold the 60 volt size—and there are 10,000 such dealers in the country—will soon have the 100 volt size in stock. Call for one on your way home.

Also look at the LISSEN 9 volt grid bias battery, costing only 1/6.

Should you meet with any difficulty in obtaining LISSEN Batteries, order direct from factory. No postage charged, or can be sent C.O.D. by return upon receipt of postcard.

Practical Points About LISSEN New Process Batteries:

- (1) They bring a new power smoothness to your loud speaker.
- (2) They offer a stubborn resistance to volt drop.
- (3) All batteries absolutely fresh when you get them.
- (4) The price low enough to bring them within the reach of all.
- (5) You can get them on your way home at one of the 10,000 dealers who handle LISSEN products.

SOMETHING POSITIVELY
UNIQUE IN HEARING AIDS.

Entirely different and totally distinct from mass production instruments. Each aid is a triumph of individual craftsmanship and a masterpiece of scientific construction.

THE "SHELLACON"—A MARVEL AID IN MINIATURE.

How can such a volume of pure, absolutely undistorted sound reach the ear from such a tiny aid?

This is the question on everyone's lips, for the manner in which the "Shellacon" transmits conversation from any angle and noise from any distance within the reach of normal ears is almost beyond comprehension.

WHAT THE "SHELLACON" MEANS TO YOU PERSONALLY.

1. It will so improve your hearing that your friends will hardly credit that it is you to whom they are speaking.

2. In place of concealed amusement which you can almost read in the faces of some people who know you are deaf, open amusement will be shown at the way you hear everything.

3. The impatience, irritation and strain you feel at being unable to follow

No matter what price you have paid, you will find the "Shellacon" immeasurably superior.

4. Self-consciousness will lose its meaning because you will have nothing to attract the attention of others to your handicap, and because of the extreme lightness of shell will yourself be able to forget that you are wearing a hearing aid at all.

No matter what price you have paid, you will find the "Shellacon" immeasurably superior.

Brown The truest of all Reproducers

OUT of England's first Wireless Loud Speaker—the Brown—has sprung a unique line of instruments. There is now a Brown Loud Speaker to suit every want and taste. You can pay as little as thirty shillings or as much as fifteen guineas—yet they all have one thing in common; they give a true reproduction of the broadcast. Throughout the world, in lowly cottage and luxurious mansion, in hot land and in cold, the loud speaker which fills the room with the ether's secrets will generally be found to bear the name Brown.

ADVT. of S. G. BROWN, LTD., WESTERN AVENUE, NORTH ACTON, W.3.

There's a reason for such success; it lies in the unique design embodied in each instrument. Whether you buy the little H4 (the smallest loud speaker in the world) at 30/-, or the magnificent Q at £15 15s. you get a loud speaker which, because of the fidelity of its reproduction, and the purity of its tone, leads in its respective field.

Don't take our word for it. Let your ears decide. Ask your Wireless Dealer to demonstrate any of the ten Brown Loud Speakers he stocks.
