The Way of the Weather.

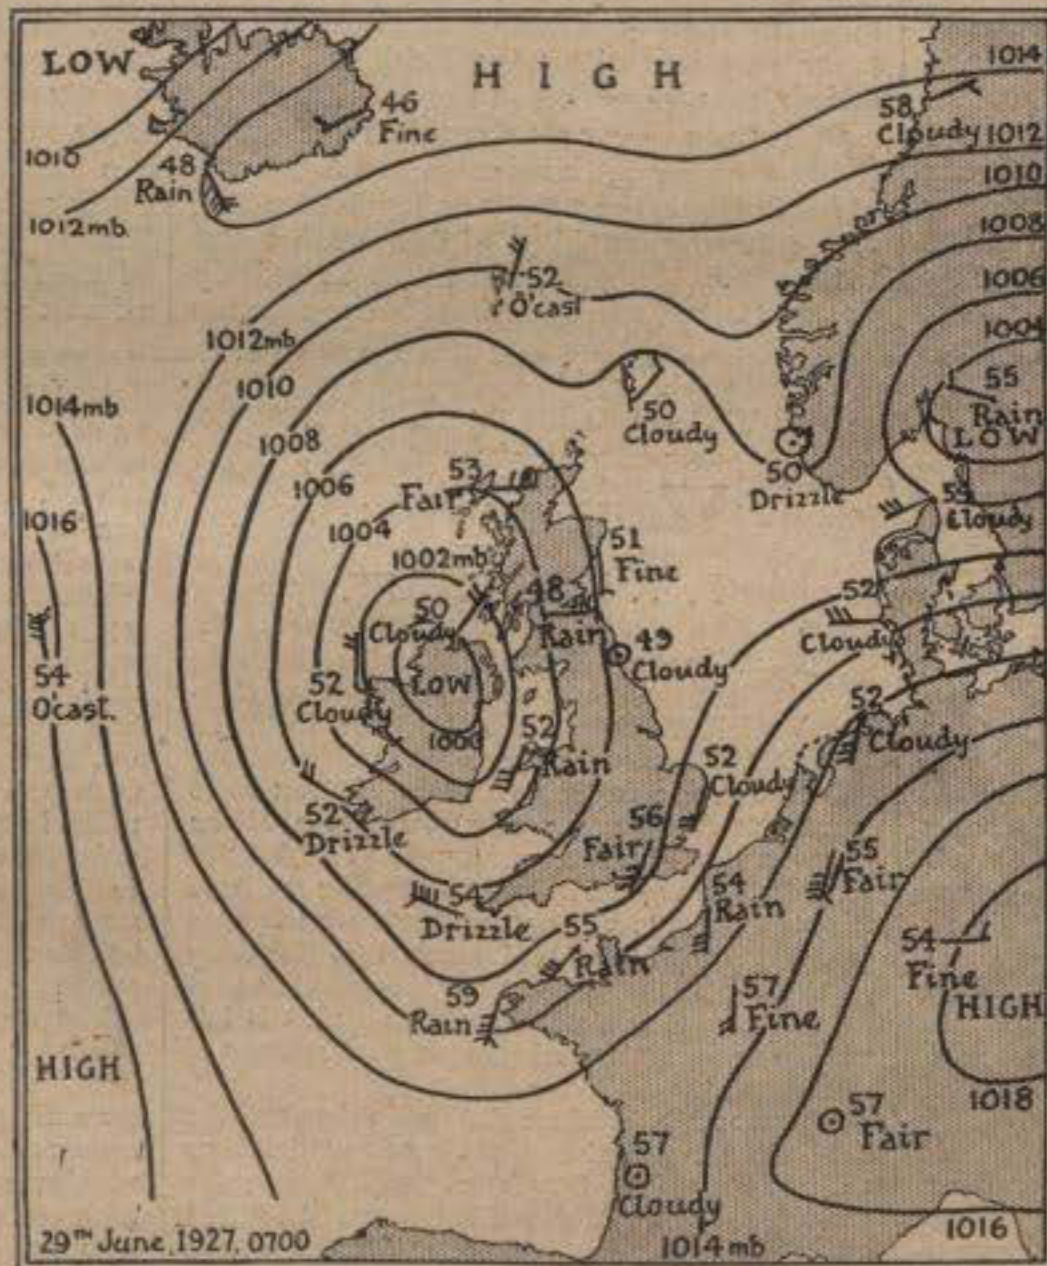

Some Hints on How to Understand the B.B.C.'s. Weather Forecasts, by E. L. Hawke.

'There is a very deep depression over Iceland, and unsettled weather is probable for the next twenty-four hours throughout the British Isles, with strong south-westerly winds or gales, and rain at times in all districts.'

ANNOUNCEMENTS such as the above come through the ether to wireless listeners scores of times in the course of a year, but although the latter part of the statement is clear to all, those of us who have made no special study of the weather may readily be excused if we possess only a rather hazy idea of the exact meaning of the former part. Meteorology is one of the youngest of the sciences—barely out of its infancy, in fact, and it is as yet but little taught in the schools.

What, then, is this 'depression,' this load of trouble that is not only afflicting Icelanders so deeply but must overflow across more than 500 miles of ocean to give the whole of the British Isles twenty-four hours of murky skies, rain, and wind?

Let us approach the problem from the historical standpoint. Very soon after the invention of the barometer by Torricelli, nearly 300 years ago, it was discovered that the rise and fall of the mercury in the tube were in some mysterious way connected with weather changes, and those legends were devised which are inscribed on aneroid dials to this day—Stormy, Rain, Change, Fair, Set Fair, and Very Dry.

A DEEP DEPRESSION OVER IRELAND.

A typical weather chart showing the depression which eclipsed the Eclipse on June 29. The continuous lines (called isobars) pass through places of equal pressure as shown by the barometer readings at the reporting stations. The arrows indicate the direction of the wind, and its force is shown by the number of feathers in the arrow.

Now we all know that these are quite unreliable; often the weather is wet when the barometer points to Fair, and sometimes it is fine when according to the legends it ought to be wet. It is of course impossible to draw up a set of legends that will suit all climates and all places. We have to remember that the barometer varies with height as well as with weather. It is, in fact, used for measuring heights, and it does that much better than it foretells the weather. In the Greek the word 'barometer' means 'weight measurer,' and all that the instrument really does is to weigh the atmosphere.

Early-Victorian scientists had simultaneous observations of the barometer made at different places, and they found that they very rarely got the same figures from these, while sometimes there were surprisingly big variations. When telegraphy came in they made maps to show the barometer readings as well as the direction and force of the wind that had been recorded and wired to them at the same hour from a number of places in England.

They soon noticed that these barometer readings and winds arranged themselves in some sort of pattern, as it were, and that there was an obvious connection between them. The winds, they found, would be blowing round the spot where the barometer was lowest in the opposite direction to the hands of a clock. They called such an arrangement a 'cyclone,' from the Greek word for a circle, because the winds blew approximately in a circular way. Later the term 'depression' or 'barometric depression'—that is, a lowering of the barometer, came into more general use, though both words really mean the same thing.

Then they found that in a region where the barometer was high the winds would be circulating round the centre where it was highest in the other way, or in the same direction as the hands of a clock. They called this arrangement an 'anticyclone,' because it was the opposite of a cyclone. It soon became clear to them that, in a general way, a cyclone or depression was a bad-weather system and an anticyclone a good-weather system.

THAT is how weather forecasting, as we know it now, began. We have since learned many of the physical laws which govern the atmosphere, and exploration of the upper air has added greatly to our knowledge and to the accuracy of the forecasts in recent years.

Like the sea, the earth's atmosphere is never at rest. It is in a perpetual state of flux over most of the world, and the trade winds, monsoons, and other permanent or regular currents all form part of the general circulation. In this country we owe our damp but equable climate to the prevailing sweep of warm, moist S.W. wind from the Atlantic. This is by no means a regular current, however, and we are near enough to the Pole for cold winds blowing down from the Arctic regions to play an important part in determining our weather.

THE depressions, or cyclones, which bring our rain and gales, are generated by the interplay of conflicting wind currents—a warm one of Equatorial origin and a cold one of Polar origin. Upon the strength, extent, and temperature of these two opposing winds depend the size and motion of the resulting depression and the intensity of its effects. Some depressions are only a few miles in diameter, while others are so vast as to cover the whole of the North Atlantic and to influence the weather in Britain, Norway, Greenland, the Azores, and Canada simultaneously.

A depression is called 'deep' when the barometer at its central point, round which the winds circulate, falls to a low level—say, below twenty-nine inches. In the deepest of them it has occasionally dropped almost to twenty-seven inches. The strength of the wind is determined by the difference between the barometer readings at the centre of the cyclone and at its boundaries, and the rain is caused by the warmer and lighter of the constituent wind currents being pushed bodily upwards by the colder and heavier current and so made to condense its moisture.

Atlantic depressions have favourite tracks, one of which is across Iceland, another just beyond the north-west coasts of Ireland and Scotland, and a third directly over the northern half of Britain. Sometimes they move eastward along the English Channel and cause wet weather in the South without affecting the North—an event which seems peculiarly liable to happen on Derby Day.

Anticyclones are regions of high barometer, and, generally speaking, of dry weather and little wind. They do not move as quickly as depressions, and sometimes hover over the same district for days and even weeks at a stretch.

The business of the forecaster is to locate the depressions and anticyclones in his vicinity and to determine their probable movements. He is enabled to do this through the services of a vast army of weather observers, who take readings of their barometers, thermometers, and other instruments, as well as notes of the wind and weather, at regular, fixed hours, and immediately telegraph them to the central bureau. British official forecasts are based on records taken simultaneously at forty-three observatories in Great Britain and Ireland, and at a very large number abroad—even as far afield as Russia, Africa, and America, and also on wireless reports from ships at sea. These last are of great importance. Most of the information is plotted on large maps as soon as it is received, and the inferences and forecasts which are broadcast daily are the deductions made by the experts at the Air Ministry after the maps and data have been duly digested.

IT should be remembered that the forecasts are necessarily generalizations, and in using them allowance must be made for the climatic peculiarities of the place where one happens to be. The weather often varies greatly within quite narrow limits. In Devon and Wales, for example, it sometimes rains all day in the hills while the sun shines ceaselessly on the coast a few miles away. Yet the same forecast has to cover both events, and when the expert predicts 'fair to cloudy, with local rain,' he is not merely 'hedging,' but trying to do this. Even in the South-east of England parts of the Sussex Downs get more than twice as much rain in a year as the north shores of the Thames estuary, and for a proper application of the forecasts some knowledge of regional climatology is essential.

THE B.B.C. recently issued a statement that they were to give as well as the wavelength of a station in metres, its frequency in kilocycles—or, perhaps, to put it more accurately, to give the frequency of a station and in brackets its wavelength.

This decision has attracted unfavourable comment from some quarters, based mostly on misapprehension. My reply has been to say that if, indeed, it is a blunder to have stated the frequency of a station, no one need be concerned in it because the wavelength is given as well. Those who do not like using frequency can use wavelength, but those who have a scientific objection (and it is a very reasonable one) to using wavelength can use frequency. The objection reminds me of the complaint about alternative programmes from those who are satisfied with the present programmes. The reply is, you can continue to listen to the present programme, but anyone who likes a new programme can have one.

What is our object in giving the frequency at all? Primarily because it is so much easier for the engineer to do his calculations in kilocycles than in metres. The frequency and length of any wave (whether water, air or ether) are directly related because the two multiplied together produce a constant which is the velocity of the wave through its particular medium.

For wireless, the frequency multiplied by the length of the wave equals 300,000,000 metres per second, where the frequency is in vibrations per second and the wavelength is in metres. Three hundred million metres per second is the velocity of light and works out at 186,000 miles a second; quite fast in fact. Suppose then we have a wavelength of 300 metres the frequency will be 1,000,000. If we make the wavelength longer, say 600 metres, the frequency is less. A long wave is a lower frequency, a short wave is a higher frequency, a 30-metre wavelength is 10,000,000 vibrations per second. In broadcasting we have to separate stations, to prevent them heterodyning or interfering, by a fixed amount in frequency (10,000 cycles in fact), not a fixed amount in wavelength. The reason will be obvious. It is impossible to separate stations by a fixed amount of wavelength.

Say we want to fit three stations in close round a 300-metre wavelength so that they do not interfere with one another, they must be 10,000 cycles apart, so the first will have a frequency of 1,000,000 cycles and the next 1,010,000 cycles, and the third 1,020,000 cycles. Convert these into wavelengths and we find that the first is 300 metres, the second 297.02, and the third 295.1. In terms of frequency the increase is in even increments, but in terms of wavelength the decrease is not in even multiples of a metre, and, moreover, involves the use of one or two places of decimals.

Frequencies or Wavelengths.

By P. P. ECKERSLEY.

At 400 metres we have one station, the next on 394.7 metres, and the next on 389.6, and the corresponding frequencies are 750,000, 760,000 and 770,000. Even increments of frequency, decimal numbers on wavelengths, and not the same absolute difference in wavelength as on 300 metres.

Whatever the band of wavelengths one can never say, roughly even, without a lot of calculation, how many metres in wavelength must separate stations, but stated in frequency one has but to add or subtract a fixed number. This is so much easier, and if wavelengths can gradually be forgotten we may more easily be able to talk about separation, which is the only thing that really matters. Of course, the whole thing does not matter one button to the man in the street. The engineers will arrange the proper separation, and it may just as well be made an easy matter for them as a very complicated one.

The argument that 'straight line' condensers will become obsolete is not sound, because we shall still give the wavelength and they can work on that for calibration; the stations will, at any rate, come as near together or as far apart on the dial whether we call the space that separates them kilocycles or metres.

All official documents state both frequency and wavelength. All international bodies state frequency and wavelength. The statement of frequency is useful for certain purposes, wavelength is only useful because of a certain number of listeners who have become accustomed to it. Therefore we state them both, and shall continue to state them both.

What is Coming.

Some August Holiday Programmes.

THE World Conference on Faith and Order which takes place in August at Lausanne, is to be described by Canon E. S. Woods in a talk from LONDON and other Stations on Thursday, July 28. Over 500 delegates from an extraordinary number of Christian Churches, representing nearly ninety bodies, are coming from all parts of the world to attend the Conference; it is the outcome of a Commission appointed in 1910 at a general Convention of the American Episcopal Church, to bring about a conference for the consideration of questions touching Faith and Order.

Canon E. S. WOODS.

Meetings of the Commission were held in Geneva in 1920, Stockholm in 1925, and Berne in 1926. The present World Conference takes place between August 3 and 21.

A short story, entitled 'In the Dark,' read by the author, Mr. Holloway Horn, is to be broadcast on Saturday, July 30. The story will be given in the 'Writers of Today' series of transmissions.

'ENTRE-NOUS' is the name of the B.B.C.'s new concert party which will be heard in the programmes from LONDON and other stations on Saturdays, August 6, 20, and 27. Mr. Gordon McConnel, its director and producer, who until recently was attached to the staff of the Cardiff Station, where he wrote The Phantom Pantomime and Bertie's Bath Night, has created a novel entertainment in conjunction with Mr. Stanford Robinson, who has composed the music. The members include four well-known vocalists in Vivienne Chatterton, Esther Coleman, Foster Richardson, and Eric Greene; two fine pianists and entertainers, Rex Evans and Florence Oldham; a comedian who has already established himself as a favourite with listeners, Harold Clemence; and the popular soubrette, Yvette, all of whom will also act as the chorus. The entertainment includes a potted three-act play W.O.W.

The series of dialect talks arranged by Mr. E. Le Breton Martin will be continued on Monday, July 25, with one on Gloucestershire, in which a native of the county will take part.

LISTENERS to LONDON and other stations will be given an opportunity of hearing a popular concert which the Band of the 1st and 2nd Life Guards is giving in the MANCHESTER studio on Monday evening, July 25. Lieut. W. J. Gibson, the bandmaster, has selected a programme both interesting and varied. In addition to the band music, two well-known artists will also take part—Laffitte, the pianist, who, amongst other items, will play Bach's Organ Prelude in D, arranged by Busoni, and Scarlatti's Sonata in A, and Miss Carmen Hill (mezzo-soprano), who will sing three of Roger Quilter's songs. Another interesting programme from the Manchester Station—though this is only for local listeners—is that arranged for Wednesday, July 27, when the St. Stephen's (Blackpool) Gleemen are paying another visit to the studio.

AUGUST Bank Holiday and the whole of the week in which it falls, will be marked by a series of appropriately arranged programmes designed to make a special appeal to holiday-makers. These programmes, which will emanate from LONDON and are to be radiated from most stations, include a Military Band Concert on Sunday afternoon, July 31, and a Grieg concert at 9.15 the same evening. The afternoon programme on Bank Holiday will consist of dance music, with items by Keſ Keech (ukulele), with Ord Hamilton at the piano, Mabel Constanduros, and Just Four Saxes and a Voice. Then between 7.30 and 9.0 listeners will hear a performance of the musical comedy Miss Hook of Holland, which is to be followed by the Southern Command Tattoo, relayed from Tidworth, details of which have already been given in The Radio Times. Other outstanding transmissions for the week include a performance of Bizet's opera Carmen (Tuesday, August 2); seaside music—concert party, band, etc.—and a performance of the play A Butterfly on the Wheel (Wednesday, August 3); a relay of the Eisteddfod Symphony Concert from Holyhead (Thursday, August 4); and a performance by a new B.B.C. concert party (Saturday, August 6).

The opening night of the B.B.C.'s Promenade Concerts, conducted by Sir Henry Wood, will be relayed from the Queen's Hall on Saturday, August 13. The soloists include de Greef, the Belgian pianist. Further details of the concert will be given in our next issue.

ENGLAND'S youngest Lord Mayor, Mr. C. R. Bignold, who in his official capacity as Lord Mayor of Norwich recently inaugurated the Norfolk and Norwich Aero Club, is visiting the LONDON Studio on Wednesday, July 27, to give a talk on 'Norwich as an Air Port.' Mr. Bignold will describe in detail what is being done by the Club to encourage the use of aeroplanes among civilian populations, and his remarks will doubtless be of special interest to the authorities in many other cities where the formation of light aeroplane clubs is contemplated.

Mr. C. R. BIGNOLD.

Earlier the same day, E. Gee Nash, who frequently broadcasts from Bournemouth, will talk on Scandinavia, her second in the series on 'Holidays at Home and Abroad.'

A. W. Baskcomb, the popular comedian, is touring the main stations during the week beginning Monday, August 1; he will be heard from London and other stations on the Friday.

AN hour of chamber music by the Wessex String Quartet is to be given in the BOURNEMOUTH studio on Tuesday, July 26. It will be remembered that this Quartet, which comes from Wiltshire, was heard by Bournemouth-listeners a few months ago during the relay of a portion of the Romsey Abbey Musical Festival. The organizer, and 'cellist, of the Quartet is Mr. Francis J. Hill. Their programme will include the Austrian Hymn variations from the Emperor Quartet by Haydn, Dvorak's Nigger Quartet, and a Slow Movement from a Quartet by Schubert (Opus 29).

TWO particularly interesting talks have been put into the LONDON programme for Tuesday, July 26. The first at 5 p.m. is by Lady Neave, who will describe some recollections of Constantinople. Lady Neave, who was formerly Miss Dorina Clifton, was born at Candilli on the Bosphorus, and lived there for twenty-six years during the reign of the famous Abdul Hamid. She speaks Greek and Turkish fluently, and has taken part in many Greek and Armenian ceremonies; she has also had many thrilling experiences in the Orient during times of earthquake and massacre.

Lady NEAVE.

The other talk at 7 p.m. is by Mr. B. Tompkins and is on 'Water Divining.' Mr. Tompkins has been extremely successful as a water diviner, and has recently received several offers from foreign Governments who are anxious for his services.

'Calling and Re-calling,' a radio revue specially written by John Henry and R. Guy-Reeve, will be given from London and other stations on Saturday, July 30. The cast includes John Henry, Marova, Franklyn Gilmore, Alma Vane, Jack Hagan, Blossom, Phillip Wade, and Henry Scatchard.

SOME LONDON Variety Programmes to which you can look forward. Monday, July 25: (10.15 p.m.) Sydney Nesbitt, and Ed. Smalle, assisted by the London Radio Dance Band in a twenty minutes' entertainment. Wednesday, July 27: (7.30 to 8.0) Dolly's Little Bills, a play by Henry Arthur Jones, performed by Ethel Irving, Farreu Soutar and Gilbert Porteous; Negro Spirituals by the Utica Jubilee Singers, a combination of six coloured gentlemen whose fame for this type of entertainment is recognized throughout America, from where they will arrive in this country on July 23. It is interesting to mention that their services for broadcasting have already been requested by four Continental countries. Friday, July 29: (7.45 to 8.30) Josephine Trix, Ed. Lowry, Harry Hemsley and Jan Wien.

Mr. Ralph de Rohan, better known to juvenile listeners as the 'Wicked Uncle,' has arranged a concert in the 'My Programme' series which is to be broadcast from London and other stations between 9.35 and 11 p.m. on Friday, August 5.

MR. H. MORETON, a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, who is giving three talks on organs in the PLYMOUTH studio on Thursdays, July 28, August 4 and 11, has been Borough Organist of Plymouth for twenty-six years and Organist and Choirmaster of Plymouth Parish Church (St. Andrew's) for forty-two. Altogether he has given over three thousand recitals on most of the principal organs in the country, including those at the Royal Albert Hall, Queen's Hall, Central Hall, Westminster, St. George's Hall, Liverpool, Colstan Hall, and St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol. Under his instructions the magnificent instrument in the Plymouth Guildhall has recently been rebuilt, enlarged, and brought up to date both tonally and mechanically.

Mr. R. H. MORETON.

The Gala Performance.

A Story of Post-War Vienna.*

THE white-haired old couple had long since bowed to the inevitable and were living as best they might on a civil servant's tiny pension in post-war Vienna. They were able by now even to be philosophical about the change in their fortunes.

'Other people are even worse off,' the old lady would sometimes say gently, as they wended their way to the communal kitchen, where their frugal fare helped to achieve that slender outline that is so much desired by fashionable folk. And when her husband in his fits of depression would praise extravagantly the times before the War and could find nothing to please him nowadays, she would smile reflectively, as much as to say that all was not gold that glittered in the memory. They had no children, and it is sad when that is a matter for thankfulness.

They had, of course, long ago learnt to do without any servants. Their piano had disappeared, theatre and concert going and other pleasures had long been impossible. The luxury tax left them untouched! With one exception. In a wild burst of extravagance at Christmas-time the old gentleman had invested in a wireless set, and ever since the two had spent their evenings with the headphones on. This gave the old man another opportunity of declaring how much better opera was done in the old days before the War than in these degenerate times, whereupon the old lady would slyly remind him that in the good old days there was no wireless! Even he could not deny that, so he would seize his hat and stick and go off for his afternoon walk.

The spring sun was warm, the Viennese girls smiled as gaily as ever, placards were all about the place announcing the forthcoming Beethoven celebrations and the gala performance of Fidelio at the Opera House. The old man's mind went back to former galas, the happy scenes, the officers' brilliant uniforms, the ladies' gay toilets and flashing jewels.

HE had been reading to his wife that morning out of the newspaper about the coming performance, and had interrupted the account to ask her: 'Do you remember the last time? We sat in the stalls, and the Minister kissed your hand—ah! those were great days!' A glow came into his eyes. 'You did look so charming, too!'

And the slender old lady had smilingly answered him: 'I had to do you credit, of course—you in your smart evening suit, and all your orders.'

'Ah! let us try to forget it,' he had said, bitterly, as he left the house.

A little later, he returned home eager to tell her how he had stood at the entrance to the Opera House and had watched all the new-rich drive up and go in, and among them all he had not seen one old friend. But a startling surprise awaited him. There in their little sitting-room was his wife dressed in the once-handsome evening frock that had been carefully put away and now, though worn and faded, did not—he confessed to himself—look so bad by the softly shaded lamplight.

With scarcely repressed excitement she drew him to the bedroom, where his own old evening suit was carefully laid out on the bed. Eagerly she begged him to put it on, just to please her, to see once more how they both looked in their best clothes, if only, she teased him, he had not got too fat.

'But what is all this nonsensical dressing-up?' he grumbled, though in the end he good-humouredly did as she wished.

Presently, just as seven o'clock struck, they sat themselves down, each in a comfortable armchair, and put their ear-phones on just as the opening notes of the Leonora Overture struck their ears.

The opening notes of the Leonora Overture struck their ears.

Thus it was that, after all, the old civil servant and his wife took part in the gala performance.

Birmingham.

No fewer than nine counties, including Warwickshire, Worcestershire and Staffordshire, are represented in a recital of songs of the Midland Counties which is to be broadcast on Friday, July 29.

The monthly talk under the auspices of the Ministry of Agriculture on Tuesday, August 2, will be given by Mr. W. Irons, Agricultural Organizer for Worcestershire, his subject being 'Catch Cropping.'

The studio service on Sunday, July 31, is to be conducted by the Rev. A. H. Angus, Principal of the Tettenhall College, Wolverhampton. Subsequently a programme of light classics will be given by the Station Orchestra, Mary Bonin (soprano), and Winifred Browne (pianoforte).

Forthcoming talks: Tuesday, July 26, Mr. W. J. Loxley (Chairman of the Birmingham Board of Guardians): 'Duties and Responsibilities of a Board of Guardians.' Thursday, July 28, Brig.-Gen. H. O. D. Hickman, C.B., D.L., J.P., 'Leamington Spa,' in which he will describe its history from 1085, and the erection of the first baths in 1786.

A Glance Ahead.

Coming Events at Southern Stations.

Laurance Turner, a young violinist from Huddersfield, will make his wireless debut in the studio concert on Sunday afternoon, July 24. Other items in the same programme will be given by Mr. Percy Bilsbury (tenor) and the Dick Kerr Works' (English Electric Company) Band.

Bassoon and flute solos, played by Maurice Whittaker and Joseph Lingard respectively, are a feature of Tuesday evening's programme, July 26. Pianoforte solos by Lilian Grindrod, songs at the piano by Clare Alexander, syncopated pianoforte solos by Nevill Melland, and humour by Rex Costello, will be heard in the same concert.

THE HEADQUARTERS OF BRITISH BROADCASTING.

On Savoy Hill, a quiet backwater just a stone's throw, on the North, from the busy Strand and on the South from the Thames at Waterloo Bridge—though out of sight of both—stands the home of the B.B.C. Here is the central clearing house of all the B.B.C.'s work. Here, too, are the studios and control rooms of the London and Daventry Stations which originate and relay the programmes that are broadcast from the aerials in Oxford Street and at Daventry. This picture by Mr. Henry Rushbury, A.R.A., R.W.S., R.E. (specially drawn for 'The Radio Times,' and the third in our Series of 'Broadcasting—as the Artist Sees it'), shows part of the building from the north-east. The tall plane tree on the right of the picture stands in the ancient churchyard of the Chapel Royal of the Savoy.

LISTENERS' LETTERS.

The Great Fellowship of Listeners.

DEAR SIR,—The following is an extract from a letter I have received recently from my son living in Vancouver, B.C.

'We thought of you the other day because we got a relayed programme from the Royal Albert Hall, London, and it came in fine and we wondered if you were listening to the same programme. It does seem wonderful that we can get the same music as you, at the same time. The concert was relayed from London to Montreal, then to Winnipeg and on to Vancouver CFCD Station, and it reached us as clear as a bell. We heard it at 11 o'clock in the morning, which is round about 7 p.m. London time.'

This is specially interesting to us at home, as we have not seen each other for fourteen years.—Tnos. W. HILLS, Albemarle Road, Willesboro, Nr. Ashford, Kent.

What's in a Name?

DEAR SIR,—I quite agree with your correspondent that the time has arrived when the 'listener-in' should have a distinctive name. I suggest 'Radian,' and if a separate word is desired for the ladies, why not 'Radienne'? To denote experts and dealers in wireless, I think 'Radician' would be suitable. In any case, I think 'Radian' is a much simpler word than either 'Etherite' or 'Radiomer.'—Tnos. WHITTAKER, George and Dragon Hotel, Tarvin, Chester.

DEAR SIR,—The term 'listen in' is certainly awkward, and 'listener-in' is even worse. But there is no need to coin dubious forms to take the place of these—there are words already in the dictionary which may serve our purpose. I refer to 'auscultation' and its cognates. There is nothing in their meaning which should limit their use to the medical profession, and they might well be launched on a wider career. For the agent we have 'auscultator,' which need not seem any stranger to us than 'spectator'; and the adjectival form 'auscultatory' should prove useful. As for the verb, seeing that we are already only too familiar with 'oscillate,' there can be no possible objection to 'auscultate'; and this will give a verbal noun 'auscultating' as an alternative to 'auscultation.' I beg to suggest, therefore, that this group of words should be adopted for general use.—H. LANG JONES, Willaston School, Nantwich.

DEAR SIR,—In place of the rather ugly colloquialism 'listen in' I wonder whether the claims of 'enlisten' have ever been considered. It is a simple inversion and accords with precedent. One 'cashes in' a cheque—it is encashable; to trust in—to entrust, and so on. 'Did you enlisten last night?' sounds quite well and comes readily from the tongue. As a noun 'enlistener' admits of a plural by the addition of an s, which is much better than 'listeners-in.' I commend it to the philological experts.—E. H. STEVENS, Thicket Road, Sutton, Surrey.

Where Oscillators Cease from Troubling.

DEAR SIR,—We have heard a great deal lately about oscillation—here's a different story. For a week past we have not heard a single disturbance of our portion of the ether. In view of the fact that we have no fewer than ten aerials in a small square of about 250 square yards—all of which I believe represent valve sets—and several on the opposite side of the road, surely this is a record.

faces at you? Yet mine seemed to do so. Tremblingly, as one would approach a nailed-up coffin with noises within, the loud speaker was opened up—and there on its diaphragm sat a large bee, which had entered the horn and could find no means of escape. Wireless doctors, please note.—BREWILDERED, Surrey.

As a Listener Hears It.

DEAR SIR,—Whilst recognizing the all-round excellence of the programmes offered by the B.B.C., it seems such a pity that their effect should be—in a measure—nullified by the methods adopted by certain artists and speakers. For example, quite recently from a provincial station we had a reading by Mr. X, who would be well advised to clear his throat before he steps to the microphone in the future. HA—RRR—UMPH is scarcely a fitting introduction to a reading of any description.

Again, some transmitters have not the faintest notion of clear diction and correct breathing; it is quite a common fault for the voice to be dropped at the end of a sentence or passage, and frequently the tonal quality is extremely uneven. All transmitters have the best of examples set them in the methods used by the B.B.C.'s Announcers, who, as a rule, are a treat to listen to.

Another very common and inartistic trick on the part of many singers is to mutilate the last note of a song or duet. Instead of finishing off the piece as the composer wrote it, a dreadful effort is made by some singers to get a high note for the climax—as a rule an octave and a third above the correct finishing note. The result achieved in many cases would be supremely ludicrous were it not so tragical, for, as a rule when a song is finished in this fashion the last note is frequently a semi-tone out.—'DOC SAN,' Glasgow.

Congratulations and Thanks.

DEAR SIR,—I should like to congratulate the B.B.C. on their excellent broadcast of the Cambridge May Week Races. The description of the scene and of the racing was first class, and the microphone picked up all those sounds which are so familiar to every Cambridge man. One clearly heard the minute and starting guns and the growing volume of sound as the leading crews approached, and it required very little imagination to transport oneself mentally from a West Midland Rectory to the Rectory Paddock. When silence at last brought the broadcast to an end, at least one old Cambridge man felt for the moment, not homesick, but Alma Mater sick.—CAMBRIDGE, 1908-1912.'

THE MANCHESTER STATION'S MUSICAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

Manchester is a city long famous for its musical achievements and traditions, and, as might be expected, the Committee which has been formed to advise the B.B.C.'s Manchester Station in musical matters includes a number of persons of eminence in musical circles. The names, reading from left to right, are:—

Front Row: E. G. D. Liveing (Station Director); T. H. Morrison (the Station's Musical Director); Dr. Adolph Brodsky (Director of Royal Manchester College of Music); Sir Hamilton Harty (Conductor of the Halle Orchestra), (Chairman); Councillor Melland (Representative of the Manchester Advisory Committee of the British National Opera Company); Dr. Thomas Keighley (Lecturer on Music to Manchester University).

Back Row: Dr. Walter Carroll (Musical Adviser to the Manchester Education Committee); Dr. A. W. Wilson (Organist at Manchester Cathedral); John Russell (Librarian of the Henry Watson Library); Harold Dawber (Choirmaster of the Halle Chorus).

It would be interesting to know whether any reader of The Radio Times can beat this record, and to know which is the most 'law-abiding district.'—A. H. ANNELY, Clarkson Ave., Wisbech, Cambs.

The Bee in Broadcasting.

DEAR SIR,—There is little, if I may say so, that can baffle me regarding wireless faults; and my habit of thinking has been more in electrical terms than aught else, from my cradle upwards. Recently, however, I experienced a trouble very difficult to locate, until ultimately I made a discovery, which I think your readers will find hard to beat. For hours, in vain, I searched for the cause of a strange noise in my loud speaker. The usual methods of diagnosis failed and failed again, until being almost distracted, I snatched every wire from my set—batteries, aerial, earth—yet still the noise persisted. Could my loud speaker be haunted? I detached the speaker, but the noise went on—or was my brain giving way? How could a loud speaker roar at you all on its own, and almost make

PART I

Hymn of Praise Mendelssohn

THIS 'Symphonic Cantata' was written in 1839-40 for the celebration of the fourth centenary of Gutenberg's invention of printing.

It consists of three Movements of a Symphony, followed by ten vocal numbers—Solos and Duets for Soprano and Tenor, and Choruses.

The melody with which the work opens is used as a kind of 'leading theme,' recurring both in the first two Movements of the Symphony and in the opening and closing Choruses.

THE FIRST MOVEMENT, brilliant and vigorous, has fine energy and breadth.

THE SECOND MOVEMENT is based upon two Main Tunes, one in a minor key and the other a major-key 'chorale' or hymn-tune, the lines of which are connected by the 'leading theme' and by bits of the Movement's First Main Tune.

THE THIRD MOVEMENT begins quietly, becomes more restless, and finally leads into the Opening Chorus of the vocal part of the work—'All men, all things, all that have life and breath, sing to the Lord.'

The succeeding numbers are as follow:—

TENOR RECITATIVE, 'Sing ye praise, all ye redeemed . . . from a deep affliction,' followed by AIR, 'He counteth all your sorrows.'

CHORUS, 'All ye that cried unto the Lord.'

Miss ETHEL BARTLETT.

who, with Mr. Rae Robertson, will play pianoforte duets in London's Military Band Concert, beginning at 3.30 this afternoon.

DUET FOR TWO SOPRANOS, with CHORUS; 'I waited for the Lord . . . O blessed are they that hope and trust in the Lord.'

TENOR AIR, 'The sorrows of death had closed all around me . . . ; but said the Lord, "Come, arise from the dead. . . I bring thee salvation."'

CHORUS, 'The night is departing. . . Therefore let us cast off the works of darkness, and let us gird on the armour of light.'

CHORALE, 'Let all men praise the Lord.'

SOPRANO AND TENOR DUET, 'My song shall be always Thy mercy.'

FINAL CHORUS, 'Ye nations, offer to the Lord glory and might. . . All that hath life and breath sing to the Lord.'

10.0 app. PART II

THE CHORUS

Happy and blest ('St. Paul') Mendelssohn

THIS Chorus serves as a commentary and meditation on the death of Stephen, at whose martyrdom Saul was present.

The words are: 'Happy and blest are they who have endured. For though the body dies, the soul shall live for ever.'

FLORENCE HOLDING

On Mighty Pens ('Creation') Haydn

IN the Second Part of the Oratorio, Gabriel, the guardian of Paradise, tells of the creation of the birds, and in this Air he describes the proud eagle, the merry lark, the cooing dove, and the nightingale pouring forth his sweetest melody. Haydn's music suggests the various notes of the birds.

THE CHORUS

How lovely is Thy dwelling place ('Requiem') Brahms

THIS Chorus is a lovely tranquil setting of the words: 'How lovely is Thy dwelling place, O Lord of Hosts, for my soul it longeth, yea fainteth for the courts of the Lord. My soul and body crieth out, yea for the living God. O blest are they that dwell within Thy house; they praise Thy name evermore.'

SPENCER THOMAS

Sound an alarm ('Judas') Handel

THE extract from Handel comes from the second part of Judas Maccabaeus. The Israelites have triumphed over their foes, but a messenger brings news that fresh hosts are advancing. Judas sings the Air:—

Sound an alarm! Your silver trumpets sound,
And call the brave, and only brave around.
Who listeth, follow; to the field again.
Justice, with courage, is a thousand men.

THE MEETING OF TWO MASTERS.

This afternoon Manchester will broadcast a programme of music played at an informal gathering of some of the leading musicians of the city. Here is a picture of just such a gathering held in years long gone by. It shows the first meeting of Mendelssohn and Schumann at Leipzig. On this occasion the music that these great masters played was confined to the charmed circle in the room. Today the melody that will be poured forth from the little meeting at Manchester will be heard by thousands of listeners.

THE WIRELESS CHORUS (Chorus Master: STANFORD ROBINSON). THE WIRELESS ORCHESTRA, conducted by HERBERT OLIVER

LISTENERS tonight will be carried back in their imagination to eighteenth century London as they listen to this first performance of a new musical comedy by Mr. Herbert Oliver, the composer of a number of popular song cycles, including 'Songs of Old London,' 'The Cries of London,' and 'The Passing Show.' The incidents upon which tonight's opera are based are to be found in Harrison Ainsworth's story, 'The Miser's Daughter,' and we are indebted to Messrs. Routledge for permission to publish on this page two of Cruikshank's illustrations appearing in the edition of the novel which they publish.

Act I takes place about 1744, in a street in Westminster. A barber's shop is seen, next to it a silk mercer's shop. On the opposite side is a grim, dingy-looking house with a porch. It is the afternoon of a brilliant June day. People of rank and fashion are taking the air, and among them move small groups of humbler folk.

Act II takes place in a corner of Vauxhall Gardens at the end of an avenue. There is a stone balustrade entered by a flight of steps. On one side can be seen a small trellis-work summer-house with a table set for two. It is about an hour before midnight, and a fête is in progress. Some of the revellers are in fancy costume, others in elaborate dresses, with powdered hair; all either wear or carry masks.

5.0 Mr. RUPERT CROFT COOKE, 'Holidays at Home and Abroad'—VII, Portugal

VERY few people realize the advantages that Portugal has to offer to the holiday-maker in search of picturesque surroundings unspoilt by thousands of other people just like himself. Mr. Croft-Cooke (who is well known as a broadcaster) will tell enough of the attractions of a holiday in Portugal to help a few belated people, who have no chance of getting into the more crowded resorts, to make up their minds.

7.0 Commander R. T. GOULD, 'Why Big Ben?'

BIG BEN (which, by the way, is, strictly speaking, not the name of the clock, but only of the great bell that is so familiar to listeners to the broadcast time signals) is one of the most remarkable clocks in the country. Its size is stupendous, and makes its almost perfect time-keeping all the greater a triumph of the clock-maker's art. Commander Gould is an expert on the subject, and his talk will be full of interesting information and unexpected facts.

7.15 THE FOUNDATIONS OF MUSIC

The Sonatas of Beethoven

7.25 Prof. D'ARCY THOMPSON, 'Nature and her Limitations.' S.B. from Edinburgh

THIS evening Professor D'Arcy Thompson reverts to the topic of the first three of this series of talks—the limitations that Nature appears to have imposed upon the form of different substances. The soap-bubble is the standard example of this, and he will tell how its mystery was unravelled by Plateau, the blind physicist of Ghent.

7.45 A LIGHT SYMPHONY CONCERT

ARTHUR CATTERALL (Violin); WALTER WIDDOP (Tenor); THE WIRELESS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA (Leader: S. KNEALE KELLEY); Conducted by EDWARD CLARK

ORCHESTRA
Overture to 'Oberon' Weber

LONDON heard Oberon under the Composer's direction a few weeks before his death at the age of thirty-nine. It is a fairy-story Opera in which Weber's gift for composing imaginative music, full of romantic and pictorial suggestion, rose to the heights of genius. In this fine Overture we hear all sorts of graphic ideas—the magic horn of Oberon, fairy music, and the more positive strains of human loves and triumphs.

WALTER WIDDOP (with Orchestra)
Siegfried's Forging Songs Wagner

FOR Siegfried, who was to have been the world's redeeming hero, his father's shattered sword, which is called 'Nothung' ('Needful') has been preserved. The youth has been brought up in the forest by a cunning dwarf, who has tried in vain to weld the pieces of the sword together, but the lad has snapped the blade as quickly as it was forged.

At last, Siegfried himself melts Nothung and forges it, singing exultantly as he tempers and hammers it. When the work is done, the sword is complete and strong again, and Siegfried, shouting in his joy, with one blow from it splits the anvil in twain.

ARTHUR CATTERALL (with Orchestra)
Concerto Dvorak

THIS is Dvorak's only Violin Concerto. It is thoroughly typical of him in its charming tunefulness and breezy spirit. There are three Movements to the work, but there is no break between the First and Second.

To-night's Soloist, Arthur Catterall, is a Lancashire man, having been born in Preston. When he was a boy, Hallé discovered him. Richter, Hallé's successor in the conductorship of the Manchester Orchestra, took him to Bayreuth to play to the Wagner coterie there—a signal honour for an Englishman. Until very recently Mr. Catterall was leader of the Hallé Orchestra, and he is still leader of the well-known Catterall Quartet.

Overture, 'Portsmouth Point' W. T. Walton

W. T. WALTON is a Lancashire Composer, born in 1902, whose String Quartet was chosen for performance at the Salzburg International Musical Festival a few years ago, and later received an award from the Carnegie Trust, which each year pays for the publication of a number of striking new works.

Portsmouth Point is described as 'After a print by Rowlandson, the caricaturist (1756-1827), whose drawings, humorous and broadly satirical, are well known.'

WALTER WIDDOP with Orchestra
The Flower Song ('Carmen') Bizet

ORCHESTRA
Second Symphony Borodin

BORODIN (1834-1887), Doctor of Medicine and Professor of Chemistry, became one of the leading 'Nationalist' composers in nineteenth-century Russia. This powerful Symphony was completed in 1877. It is in four Movements. The FIRST is heroic and somewhat barbaric in style. The SECOND (Very fast) has persistent rhythms and plenty of gay orchestral colour. The THIRD is quiet and sombrely reflective, and the FOURTH (which follows without break) is a continuous flow of high spirits.

RAILWAY GLEEMEN AT BIRMINGHAM.

The Swindon (Great Western Railway) Accounts Staff Gleemen, seen in the above group, are to entertain Birmingham listeners this evening with two groups of songs—the first at 7.45 and the second at 8.45.

Today's Royal Visit to Liverpool. (July 19.)

LIVERPOOL'S MAMMOTH NEW DOCKS.

The opening of the new Gladstone Docks at Liverpool by H.M. the King this afternoon will start a new era of progress for Lancashire's great progressive port. Already Liverpool has seven miles of docks and thirty-seven miles of quay space, but the Gladstone Dock scheme will give it the largest docks in the world, with accommodation for bigger vessels than have yet been designed. The King's speech when he opens the new docks will be broadcast this afternoon, and listeners will also hear community singing and a commentary on the proceedings by Colonel T. H. Hawkins.

The New Docks.

Col. HAWKINS.

THE new Gladstone Docks, which have been constructed at the north end of the Liverpool Estate, are being opened today by Their Majesties the King and Queen. They are the greatest and best equipped docks in the world, and consist of a Vestibule Dock, two Branch Docks and the Gladstone Graving Dock, which was opened in 1913.

The river entrance to the new Dock system is one of the features of the scheme. This entrance has been constructed with a Lock 1,070ft. long by 130ft. wide, and a depth on the sill of 48ft. 4in. at high water of ordinary spring tides.

The advantages to be derived from this great Lock will be appreciated when it is explained that the largest vessels afloat or even contemplated at the present time will be able to pass through at high tide, and, except at approximately 'dead low' water of exceptional spring tides, it is possible to lock in vessels drawing 28ft. of water at any time of the day or night, which is remarkable in a river like the Mersey where the tidal range amounts to 30ft.

The Lock is provided with three pairs of steel gates, placed at each end and middle of the Lock, the centre pair being provided so that the full length of the Lock can be divided into two sections in order to economize the loss of water when locking in small vessels; also to afford an additional safeguard should either of the other two pairs be temporarily out of commission.

These Docks add another three miles of quays to the Port of Liverpool, and at the lowest neap tides there will be a depth of 42ft. of water in them. The actual lengths of the two Branch Docks are:—

No. 1 Branch ... 1,420ft.

No. 2 Branch ... 1,285ft.

while each is 400ft. wide, with the quays 67ft. above the bottom of the Docks. The shed on the South side of No. 1 Branch Dock is 150ft. wide, while those on the North side of that Dock and both sides of No. 2 Branch Dock are each 100ft. wide. The total area covered by the four sheds is 13½ acres, but as they are all treble-storey sheds with flat roofs which will be available for cargo, the total floor area provided for dealing with cargo is 55 acres.

All these sheds are equipped with electrically driven cranes capable of dealing with lifts of 1½ to 3 tons in weight and having an outreach sufficient to plumb the hatchways of the widest vessels, and can deliver goods to or from any floor or the flat roofs of the sheds.

A sum of £7,500,000 has been spent on the work in order to provide Liverpool with docking accommodation for the largest vessels that have yet been constructed and to provide it in such a way that it can be reached by vessels entering the Mersey in all weathers on every tide. The Gladstone Dock with all the advantages it offers will add further to the greatness of the Port of Liverpool.

The BISHOP OF LIVERPOOL.

'ON TOUR' THIS WEEK.
THIS week's 'tourist' is Miss Wish Wynne, one of the cleverest character actresses on our stage. Miss Wynne has been acting ever since she was twelve, when she appeared in Dick Whittington at Drury Lane. Since then, she has played many 'legitimate' parts; but she first really became famous when she adopted the variety profession in 1910. Then her success as a singer of character songs was instantaneous. As a broadcaster, Miss Wynne has added to her laurels, and listeners this week should make a note of when she visits their station. She will be at Manchester on Monday; Bournemouth on Tuesday; Birmingham on Wednesday; Belfast on Thursday; Swansea on Friday; and Glasgow on Saturday.

Mr. BASIL MAINE

THE UNCHANGING EAST. F.N.A.

In the outskirts of Jerusalem you may still see women grinding corn in the primitive fashion and with the primitive machinery which has come down to them through the centuries. This afternoon Mrs. Dugdale speaks on rural life in Palestine in the interesting 'Village Life in Other Lands' series of talks. [London, 3.45.]

Sir LANDON RONALD
in the Chair

Relayed from the Fyvie Hall, The Polytechnic, Regent Street

TO the unmusical, opera is merely a gigantic joke, a senseless mystery that can never be explained. Even amongst musicians one occasionally hears voices raised in doubt—doubt as to whether opera is really a true medium for art, whether these operas that cannot be overlooked are any more than successful tours de force.

Mr. Osbert Sitwell is a prominent member of a family (at times one feels almost inclined to call them a faction) noted for their pronounced and original views, and readers of his books will know how competent he is to keep up an end in any discussion on aesthetics. Mr. Basil Maine is the music critic of The Spectator, and a frequent broadcaster, and Sir Landon Ronald, the chairman, is amongst the most distinguished musicians in the country, but though he is conductor of the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra, he has had no direct connection with opera for some considerable time, and his presidency will therefore be untainted by any personal feeling on that account.

'Waldstein' Sonata—First Movement Beethoven
Capriccio Scarlatti
Fantasia in C Minor Bach
Sonata (Op. 7)—First Movement Grieg

COUNT WALDSTEIN, to whom Beethoven dedicated this Sonata, was an early and warm friend of the Composer.

The Sonata, written when the Composer was thirty-four, is a work of grandeur, but, in spite of the big scale on which it is laid out, it is actually in only two separate Movements.

The FIRST MOVEMENT is tumultuous music. Chiefly it consists of rapid repeated chords, abrupt, curt little phrases, and surging waves of sound. With these is contrasted simple, tranquil melody.

It closely resembles the apple in its dietetic value, and it is most appetising and does most good when stewed and served with Bird's Custard. In fact, the best dish now in season is gooseberries with HUNTING elephants, even in these days of explosive bullets and rifles capable of roffing mastodons over without much trouble, is a dangerous game. When it involves being hunted by elephants it is no joke at all, and that was the experience that Mr. Cresswell George underwent on his last hunting expedition. Unpleasant as it is to have such an adventure oneself, it is great fun to hear about it from somebody else, and Mr. Cresswell George should hold the microphone spellbound this afternoon.

WITH this talk the Professor of English Literature in the University of Leeds concludes his series on Victorian poetry. It is well to be reminded that 'Victorianism' was by no means solely characterized by the complacency and self-assurance for which it has become a synonym, and that, especially at the end of the period, many of its representative thinkers were struggling towards a new conception of the truth. Now that the first wave of the reaction against Victorianism has spent itself, we can admit that in that endless struggle they acquitted themselves well.

DAISY SHORROCKS
LEONARD HIRSCH

Third Concerto, in D Minor Bach
Suite for Two Violins .. Godard

THE original String accompaniment of the Concerto will tonight be played on the Piano. The Movements are as follows:—

FIRST MOVEMENT. The interest of this lies in a happily bustling tune, taken up in alternation by the two Violin parts. Sometimes one Solo Violin starts a Tune which is then taken up (almost in Fugue style) by the other.

Note especially the opening Tune; this is important. It often recurs, and may be looked upon as the Main Tune of the Movement.

SECOND MOVEMENT. This is a very expressive Movement, and has become famous. We have, in fact, a Violin Duet with a quiet accompaniment.

THIRD MOVEMENT. In spirit, style, and construction this is so like the First Movement as to call for little description.

The Solo Violins begin in imitation at a mere beat's distance, and keep up a vigorous and cheerful motion all through.

- 2.0 ENGLAND & THE REST
A Running Commentary by Mr. P. F. WARNER
Relayed from Bristol
Musical Interludes from the Studio
by THE ANDREW BROWN QUINTET
- REPRESENTATIVE matches have always a particular appeal, for in first-class cricket they are few and far between. This season there is a particular interest in seeing how far the younger cricketers—men like Hammond of Gloucestershire and Shepherd of Surrey—will succeed in displacing the veterans who, despite all the criticisms of their age, have up to now remained the backbone of England's side.
- 5.15 THE CHILDREN'S HOUR: Selections by the Daventry Quartet. 'Their Happy Day' (Wilfred B. Price) will be told by 'Eileen.' There will also be a Guessing Competition—the nature of which we haven't yet guessed ourselves.

ORCHESTRA

Overture and Dream Pantomime ('Hänsel and Gretel') Humperdinck

THE children's Opera, Hänsel and Gretel, is Humperdinck's most typical and charming work. Its plot, from Grimm's fairy tales, tells of the witch who enticed boys and girls to her gingerbread house, and then cooked and ate them.

The Dream Music (also called Dream Pantomime) comes in the Second Act. Two children have lost their way in the forest. They fall asleep and dream that angels descend a golden staircase and move in procession around them.

In Humperdinck's music to this scene we hear two leading themes, one a cradle-song and the other a hymn-like tune—a prayer.

HEDDLE NASH (with Orchestra)
Celeste Aida ('Aida') Verdi

THE hero of Aida is Radames, an Egyptian Captain, who is made leader of the Egyptian Army; and, when he returns victorious, is offered the hand of the King's Daughter, who loves him. The tragedy which follows is due to the love which Radames and Aida, daughter of the captive Ethiopian King, bear for one another.

Radames sings Heavenly Aida near the beginning of the Opera. He dreams of his return, as victorious leader, to his beloved Aida.

ORCHESTRA
Prelude to Act I ('La Traviata') Verdi
Overture to 'The Marriage of Figaro' Mozart
ALICE MOXON and Orchestra
Porgi, amor, qualche ristoro (Give me, love, some consolation, from 'The Marriage of Figaro') Mozart

THE Countess Almaviva has found her husband fickle, and in this rather pathetic air she expresses her longing for the restoration of the love she once knew; if that cannot be, she does not wish to live.

ORCHESTRA
Prelude to Act IV ('Manon Lescaut') Puccini
ALICE MOXON, HEDDLE NASH, and Orchestra
Duet from Act IV, 'Romeo and Juliet' .. Gounod
ORCHESTRA

9.20 Writers of Today—Mr. ROBERT LYND, reading a short essay: 'Bedknobs'

Mr. ROBERT LYND.

BY this time, Mr. Robert Lynd must be getting tired of hearing himself likened, as an essayist, to Charles Lamb; but his leisurely humour, his sympathetic observation of human frailties, and his defence of them in his own person, make the comparison hard to avoid. Many of his essays have been published in book form, and, in addition to being 'Y.Y.' of the New Statesman, he is literary editor of the Daily News.

- Sea Fever Ireland
- Ethiopia Saluting the Colours Wood
- The Sands o' Dee Clay
- Y Marchog Parry
- Off to Philadelphia Haynes
- King Charles M. V. White
- Onaway, Awake, Beloved Cowen

MASEFIELD'S breezy ballad of the man who 'must go down to the sea again' has attracted several Composers. Of all the settings John Ireland's seems best to achieve (in the last line of each verse) the sense of longing that the poem expresses—the longing to answer 'the wild call . . . that may not be denied.'

THE late Charles Wood's Ethiopia saluting the Colours is a vivid little picture (the words are Walt Whitman's) of an old Negro woman, 'so ancient, hardly human,' rising from the roadside to curtsy to the troops as they march through Carolina, and telling her story to the onlooker, who sees in her a personification of ancient wrongs.

I Listen to a Cricket Match.

By Herbert Farjeon.

IT is the lot of those who listen to broadcasting not only to hear all sorts of performances, but to overhear all sorts of applause. There is applause at the opera. There is applause at the concert. There is applause at the play. There is applause at the cricket match. And so highly sensitive are our ears becoming that it would not surprise me if we were able before long to recognize almost as much difference between the various sorts of applause as between the various sorts of performance, and if, taking up our earphones during a demonstration of enthusiasm, we were immediately able to tell by the peculiar quality of the sound whether it represented enthusiasm for Wagner or Clara Butt or Robert Hale or Hobbs.

Imagination is a tricky thing. But when the London Studio switched us over to Lord's the other afternoon for the match between Middlesex and Notts, and when an even, steady round of clapping mingled with the first words spoken by Mr. P. F. Warner, I could have sworn that such a sound was never heard anywhere but on a cricket field, and that even on a cricket field this particular variety, this full-bodied, level-headed and essentially circular reverberation only occurred when the fielding team was filing out of the pavilion.

AS the afternoon wore on I found that I could often, without assistance from Mr. Warner, tell in a rough-and-ready fashion what had happened. Those little spurts of applause were for the ones and the twos; those louder, longer ones were for the fours; those uproarious thunderbursts, straight from the lungs, were for the fall of a wicket. Clearly it is far more thrilling to see a bowler find the wicket than to see a batsman find the boundary—at least, it is more thrilling in first-class matches, although in village matches where the average total is less than forty-four, it may, with mathematical justice, be the boundary that gets the bigger cheer.

But there is one event in a first-class match that provokes a louder demonstration even than the fall of a wicket, and this, I discovered during my aural afternoon at Lord's, was the overthrow. 'No doubt,' said Mr. Warner, 'you are wondering what all that noise was about.' We were. But now that we have learned the meaning of this hysterical, ascendant yell of derision, we shall not be caught wondering again.

TO broadcast a cricket match requires special gifts, for there is seldom much to be said of a maiden over, and when the batsmen are sitting on the splice, the commentator must fill in the time with anecdote and reminiscence not strictly relevant to the play. But it has this advantage, among others, over the newspaper report: that it does not 'give away the show' before you have had a chance to experience the excitement of uncertainty.

what is well called the historic present. And it was because Mr. Warner spoke in the present that even the least sensational passages in the fight between Middlesex and Notts acquired a vividness of which they would inevitably have been deprived by the journalist, who learns, almost as his first lesson, not to write of yesterday as today, but to write of today as yesterday.

PERHAPS the ideal man to broadcast a cricket match would have been Craig, the Surrey poet, whose bright, straw-hatted face and ready wit tided the spectators on so many grounds over so many weary wastes. I can see him now licking a thumb, even as he cracked a joke, the more easily to dole out his penny sheets of doggerel. But Mr. Warner spoke to us, of course, with more authority and more dignity than hail-fellow-Craig could ever have commanded, and he conveyed by a subtle art of which he was no doubt unconscious the varying atmospheres of the afternoon's play: the slow, post-prandial pace of the run-getting that might have roused impatience but for the interval that had preceded it; the sudden and exhilarating fall of wicket after wicket, completely altering what is called the 'complexion' of the game; the unexpected stand, with Nos. 8 and 9—in other words, Flint and Larwood—flogging the bowling all over the field, just when everybody thought the end had come; and last, the opening of the Middlesex Sports Bulletin (results of the day's play). London and all Stations, 9.15.

When a big match is being played, such as a Test Match or a match on which the fate of the Championship depends, I curse the sub-editorial writers of headlines and the undramatic reporters who begin by blabbing out the state of the score when stumps were drawn, and, if I can, I blur my eyes as I open the paper and fold it quickly over so that I may start reading the account at the toss of the coin and so follow the events of the day's play without a foreknowledge of their conclusion. It is the business of the graphic writer to convey the illusion that what he describes is taking place, not in the past, but in the present, and it was in a shrewd attempt to achieve this illusion that the epic poets, when they reached the most sensational passages in their narratives of the old gods and heroes, would suddenly and without warning abandon the preterite and drop into innings, late in the afternoon, well after the tea interval, when the shadows on the field begin to lengthen and the impact of the ball upon the bat seems to produce a softer, sweeter and more mellow sound.

Is there a lovelier sound in sport than the sound of a cricket match at six o'clock on a fine summer's evening?

WELL, as I said before, imagination is a very tricky thing. We don't quite know whether we are listening to Mr. Warner, or to the sun in the sky, or to the last click of the turnstile, or to the music of Francis Thompson, or to a very old barrel-organ playing 'The Man who Broke the Bank of Monte Carlo.'

And perhaps, at such a moment as this, the present can never be anything but 'historic.'

3 new B.T.H. valves

Supreme in the 2 volt range

The limitations and disadvantages hitherto associated with 2-volt valves have been entirely overcome in the new B.T.H. range of 2-volt valves. The new filament endows them with just those qualities lacking in previous 2-volt valves. B.T.H. 2-Volt Valves are 2-volt valves with all the 2-volt economy and convenience plus the efficiency and reproducing qualities of higher voltage valves.

- 1—The filament is longer and thicker and therefore more durable than the ordinary 2 volt filament. It is stronger than steel and gives a greater emission than the average 2 volt filament.
- 2—Filament current is only 1/10 amp. (except in the case of the power valve).
- 3—They are "long life" valves owing to the strength of the filament, the very low temperature at which it operates, and the ingenious method of support.
- 4—Every valve is tested to ensure satisfactory operation under working conditions.
- 5—The B.23 Power Valve has a stronger filament and gives a greater output than other makes of 2 volt power valves. It gives results comparable with those of the world-famous B.4.

Take no risks!

—demand the Valve with the

Kalenised filament

1. Because it has better tone

COSSOR has repeatedly led the way to better reproduction. When Cossor Valves are used the music is as real as if the artistes themselves were in the room. All the subtle low notes are recorded with marvellous fidelity. Every instrument pours forth its mellow tones unspoiled by any microphonic or other noises. There is a complete absence of distortion, and the increased volume due to the terrific emission from the Kalenised filament, has surprised even the most critical experimenter.

2. Because it lasts longer

NO valve equals the Cossor for length of service. The Kalenised filament—an exclusive Cossor invention—operates at such a low temperature that it never becomes brittle. You cannot see it working. Heat—the destructive influence responsible for the untimely end of most valves—has been practically eliminated.

3. Because it is 100% British

BRITISH Valves are the best in the world—and Cossor is British throughout; Labour, Capital and Materials. We are proud of their performance and nothing is left undone to maintain their high standard of quality. Every one has to pass the most stringent laboratory tests that can be devised. You take no chance when you buy a Cossor Valve.

In any valve it's the FILAMENT you pay for!

Remember when you buy radio valves that the life of any valve is not one minute longer than the life of its filament and that upon the performance of the filament depends the results you obtain.

Therefore demand:

A LONG FILAMENT . . . a filament with huge proportions, to secure a gigantic emission and the best operating characteristics.

A STRONG FILAMENT . . . a filament that cannot be broken except by the very roughest handling.

A PROVED FILAMENT . . . a filament that has a published National Physical Laboratory Test Report that proves its life and power to be constant and lasting.

Be safe and satisfied. Demand

 2,500 milli-ampere hours. Price 15/- per 20-volt unit.

FOR real quality reproduction there is nothing to equal accumulator High Tension. The evidence of the test is, too, confirmed by laboratory tests.

Exide High Tension batteries, in particular, provide pure, direct, and absolutely steady current.

Furthermore, unlike some other sources of High Tension where the current available is restricted by the presence of resistance, Exide Batteries place no restraint upon the supply of ample current for the most exacting Super Power Valves. Thus only can be secured the full round tone that is so desirable.

Types WH and WJ are exactly similar in every way, except that the former is twice the capacity of the latter, and should always be used where the total Anode current exceeds 20 milli-amperes.

DEEP CAPACITY
REGULATED CURRENT
NO VOLT DROP
ALWAYS FRESH

All a voltmeter can do for you is to show you whether the battery is up to specified rating. This is important enough—and actually all LISSEN batteries register well above the nominal rating—but a voltmeter doesn't tell you all you'd like to know about the battery.

If you could connect a LISSEN New Process Battery to a meter which showed 'quality' you would never buy any other battery but a LISSEN. You would see registered—extraordinary power smoothness—absolute freshness—stubborn resistance to volt drop—remarkable oxygen liberation—loudspeaker reproduction very pure and as clear at the end of the programme as at the beginning.

Radio users everywhere find these things out for themselves when they try out LISSEN batteries, and the secret of their outstanding success lies in the fact that LISSEN have discovered a unique combination of chemicals which, applied to a special process of manufacture, results in a battery of unsurpassed performance.

And 10,000 dealers throughout the country sell these exceptional batteries at a price which is well within the reach of all—one of these dealers is near you.

Ask for LISSEN New Process Battery next time you want a good battery, and insist on getting it. You will be rewarded with a new power smoothness and a new tone clarity which will agreeably surprise you.

Should you meet with any difficulty in obtaining, order direct from factory. No postage charged, or can be sent C.O.D. by return upon receipt of postcard.
