An Actress Looks at the Microphone.

Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies on the Dramatic Technique of Broadcasting.

THOUGH I am by temperament averse to things mechanical (I have the artist's terror of the inhumanity of machinery), I am glad that I am living in the Age of Wireless. Little more than a year ago broadcasting meant nothing to me save for an unintelligible column of 'radio news' in my morning newspaper; then I took part in Tess of the D'Urbervilles, which was broadcast one evening, and on several subsequent occasions I have made the acquaintance of the microphone.

As an actress, I naturally like to speculate upon the potentialities of wireless as a medium for the drama. Let me say at once that, excellent as are some of the plays that we hear through the air, the broadcast studio, with its insurmountable limitations, can never, I believe, hope to rival the stage. The drama of flesh and blood requires that indefinable something, that link between actors and audience that one can always feel when watching any well-acted production. It follows, therefore, that for radio drama to attain its highest efficiency it is vital that those taking part in it should possess a specialized knowledge of how best to compensate for the lack of that personal factor.

It has, I think, been proved that though one may be successful on the stage, it does not follow that one will meet with equal success in the broadcasting studio. A recent development has shown that this problem is appreciated by all who are concerned with the production of radio drama. I refer to the arrangement recently brought about between the B.B.C. and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London—that admirable training school that has produced so much that is fine on the modern English stage. This arrangement will make it possible for those students who are desirous of specializing in broadcasting to receive expert instruction under the conditions that obtain in a broadcasting studio.

The advantages of this arrangement are apparent, both to the student and to the broadcasting authorities. For the student a chance is at last given to the would-be actor whose looks, figure, and gestures are all against his or her stage success, but whose voice and brain may be brought to serve the purpose of broadcasting.

On many occasions I have attended stage auditions and have seen many an aspirant, whose voice was sheer beauty, ruin his or her performance by false movements, bad gestures, and general clumsiness. For all such people a new day has dawned; their special talents need no longer languish in an atmosphere of defeated hopes, but can flourish

GWEN FFRANGCON DAVIES AS JULIET.

The writer of the accompanying article, whose first notable part was that of Etain, the fairy princess, in Rutland Boughton's Immortal Hour, scored an outstanding success as Juliet in a recent revival of Shakespeare's tragedy. Her performance was marked by the beauty with which she spoke what are, perhaps, the loveliest lines in all drama—and it is the beauty of her voice which goes towards making her the successful broadcaster that she is. In her article Miss Ffrangcon-Davies has something to say about the vexed question of Radio Drama.

The Listener Broadcasts—

—his grievances, but on the whole he is very contented. By Eric J. Patterson.

'YOU travel about all over the country,' said my friend, as he tried to get on to Moscow. I think it was Moscow—or was it Rome? 'You talk and write about wireless and education and study groups and all that. Now tell me, frankly between pals, what do people really think about wireless?'

'If you don't stop that instrument making that awful row,' I replied, 'I'll tell you what I think about your particular brand of wireless.'

Smith then made an attempt to get on to Tokio—or was it New York?—and succeeded in reaching the Daventry programme. 'Well, leave it at that,' I said.

'I quite like this er—er—Japanese music, and I'll give you a few impressions.'

These are some of the impressions, memories of the unsolicited interviews I have had with friends everywhere in the course of my travels.

A tired business man speaks: he has been playing golf all day. 'I tell you straight, I wouldn't listen to your educational stuff at the end of a day's work. I don't want to sit down to a lecture on protoplasm or the Einstein theory or what happened at Ur of the Chaldees. I want something light that will take my mind off myself.' Clearly they are not for him, my words of wisdom!

Another business man speaks: less tired than the other. He has just returned from the office. He is all concerned with the effect of wireless on the young. He thinks life's opportunities ought to be more stressed by wireless speakers. The programmes, he believes, are far too light in character for this strenuous age.

A railway train: a crowded third-class carriage. I lead the conversation on to the radio. I gather that the wireless ought to be used for betting tips, for giving advice on how to destroy rats, for helping our beloved

'Tell us how to destroy rats!'

Chancellor of the Exchequer by broadcasting advertisements, for teaching an international language: for bringing the more sensational cases in the law courts before the country, and for solving the unemployment problem by talks on currency reform.

It is a place where highbrows meet. The man I see before me is very angry. He knows all about the wireless drama: for he has studied the technique of the whole question. He knows (a) that a play to be broadcast must be especially written for the wireless; (b) that it mustn't have too many characters; (c) that it is useless either (1) to produce non-wireless plays, (2) worse than useless to broadcast them from a theatre.

I am afraid that the B.B.C. will have a very angry letter from him if it continues to displease him in the way it is doing. He may even cease to listen. I am sorry for the B.B.C., but they have had their warning.

It is a little village that I see. An old man sits before the fire with his headphones on. There is a look of intense pleasure on his face. I am afraid that he is listening to a play being broadcast from a London theatre. On one of his rare visits to the capital, he had seen that play and now he lives it all over again.

'What's the use of broadcasting all that stuff, which one has read already in the evening paper?' 'I do so like listening to the news every evening, it makes one feel in touch with the world.' Two speakers, the one in London; the other in a remote village on Dartmoor.

Now let me race you round the listeners.

The old lady who enjoys the music when she has her sons at home.

There is that schoolmaster who can't have enough of the classical music. There is that old lady who enjoys the music when she has her sons at home, but then it makes her sad when they are away. She finds now that the talks seem to banish loneliness. That country parson with memories of his Cambridge Union days recaptures the epigrams of youth in the debates which are broadcast now and then. And this old chap feels that his French is getting a bit rusty and looks forward eagerly to M. Stéphan's visits to the microphone, and that one values the opportunities that come now and again of hearing the noble language of Shakespeare worthily spoken.

Again the scene changes. A loud speaker is working. This loud speaker, however, happens to be a man. He will have nothing to do with this business of wireless, it is too mechanical. It is no use for music, drama, or talks; it robs life of the human element.

Then I look again and I see what I may call the beginnings of the rural University. Here is a group of men and women who have discovered for themselves that that mechanical thing, the wireless, can be put to a human use. They are out on an adventure of the soul, they sit round the fire and discuss.

And there are other listeners, too; there are those, for instance, who think that at last the wireless is being put to some use with the broadcast of sporting events.

These, of course, are mere impressions and reflections. If you ask me what do listeners want, I reply, it depends upon the listener. Different listeners want different things—and so does often the same listener! Phyllis likes dancing now; but will she always clamour for jazz?

Well, here is my last reflection. There are grouzers here, and grouzers there, and some are more articulate than others. But experience has taught me that on the whole listeners are well satisfied, and being satisfied they do not write to the papers.

to the delight of the vast invisible audience. From the B.B.C.'s point of view, the new scheme will mean in effect the founding of a school of picked 'broadcasters' who can be drawn upon at will.

When I was first invited to broadcast, I gave much thought as to which parts of my equipment as an actress could best be utilized in 'getting over' to a listening but unseen and unseeing audience. Face, form, and movement I ruled out, leaving for my purpose only voice and brain. Intellect I believe to be almost as important as vocal technique for successful broadcasting. A beautiful voice, unless it is coloured with the imaginative force of one's own mind, soon loses its attractiveness to a listener, quickly becoming in his ears flat, dull, and lifeless. In broadcasting speech, as distinct from songs, I have found that in order to convey to listeners a picture, and to make them believe that something was really happening, it was just as necessary to learn a part for the broadcasting studio as for the stage. It is well-nigh impossible, I believe, to make reading sound spontaneous, fresh, and vivid.

With so much depending on voice production, I decided to employ as much variety as possible, and by stressing the tone, heightening the colour, varying the speeds, and adopting such methods as speaking over the shoulder to suggest a movement away from the microphone, I strove to convey the fullest possible picture with the minimum of properties. And I acted every minute of the time. I even kissed my partner when the play demanded it! Stimulate the imagination of your listeners by every means in your power. This can be achieved in the ways I have mentioned, but only if the broadcaster is living the part just as he would on a stage.

It is my belief that students of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art who are enrolling for the course in broadcasting would be well advised to have their voices trained for singing as well as for elocution. Such knowledge helps as nothing else can to teach one the limitations of his voice, as well as to show him how best to produce his words with the fullest tone and colour.

Coming To The Microphone.

Some Dates for Your Radio Diary.

THE distinction of being a 'blood brother' to the North American Indians is so unusual that to mention this fact alone is to promise an absorbingly interesting talk when Mr. Escott North appears before the LONDON Station microphone on Thursday evening, August 18. Mr. Escott North is a native of Nottingham, who some years ago went out to the Far West in search of adventure and found it through the life of a cowboy. He is a member of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, and a 'blood brother' of the Peigan (Blackfeet) Indians. On August 18 he will describe life somewhat further South—along the romantic border of Mexico, in the trail of the Conquistadores.

The first of a new series of broadcasts on Indoor Games, most of which will not involve more preparation than the provision of a pencil and a piece of paper, will be broadcast at 7.45 on Friday, August 19. It will be a Letter Charade or Hidden Sentence, containing certain letters from which various other words can be made. Solutions will be published in 'The Radio Times' dated August 26.

KNELLER HALL, the famous school where bandmasters and solo players are trained for the British Army bands, is providing the main portion of the first period of the evening programme from LONDON and other stations on Wednesday, August 24. Lieut. H. E. Adkins, the Director of Music to the School, is conducting, and the programme will be framed on popular lines. It may not be generally known that every bandmaster in the British Army has to pass through Kneller Hall, which was instituted many years ago as the outcome of an unfortunate incident which took place in the Crimea. At the conclusion of hostilities the bands of several regiments were massed together to play the National Anthem in the presence of some foreign dignitaries; the result was pandemonium because the tune was played in as many different keys as there were bands.

A. J. Alan has written another of his inimitable stories for broadcasting. Those who wish to hear it must listen at 10.10 p.m. on Saturday, August 27. All stations will transmit it.

A MUSICAL comedy programme, which will include a selection from The Blue Train, will be broadcast from BIRMINGHAM on Tuesday, August 16. Miss Vivienne Chatterton and Mr. Arthur Cranmer, who recently appeared with success in Cosi Fan Tutte, are the artists. Another forthcoming programme of interest to Midland listeners is that on Sunday, August 14, entitled 'Gems of Oratorio,' in which the Station Orchestra, Herbert Heyner, and Gertrude Johnson will take part. The first part of this concert consists of numbers from well-known oratorios, while in the second part The Creation, Part III, will be given; this includes some beautiful love duets between Adam and Eve, one of which is the famous 'Graceful Consort.'

Miss V. CHATTERTON.

FEW people have had better opportunities than Miss Grace Ellison of observing how the change from Eastern to Western ideas is affecting Turkish life, both in the home and at outside social functions. Miss Ellison is a traveller who has spent a great deal of time in the Near East, and has just returned from an extended visit to a modern Turkish home. She will tell listeners of her experiences in a talk from LONDON and other stations at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, August 16. Earlier during the same evening Mr. C. Henry Warren will give a talk on the Canadian Rockies, in the series on 'Holidays at Home and Abroad,' which is being broadcast during the summer months.

Honegger's 'King David,' which was given its first performance in England at one of the B.B.C. National Concerts earlier this year, will be broadcast from the Central Hall, Westminster, on Wednesday, November 2. It is to be performed in a concert given by the Civil Service Choir, assisted by members of the Railway Clearing House Male Voice Choir, and the Wireless Symphony Orchestra. The concert will be conducted by Mr. Stanford Robinson, Chorus Master of the London Station of the B.B.C., and Conductor of the Civil Service Choir.

THE Promenade Concert, conducted by Sir Henry Wood, at the Queen's Hall, which LONDON and other stations are broadcasting on Monday, August 22, will be the first that listeners will hear in the series of Wagner programmes during the season. It includes a number of the most popular excerpts from the Wagner operas and music dramas, among them being the Prelude to Lohengrin, the Prelude to Act III, 'Dance of the Apprentices,' 'Procession of the Masters' and 'Homage to Sachs' from the Mastersingers, and the 'Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla' (Rheingold). The second part of the programme includes the Symphonic Poem Don Juan (Strauss) and Edward German's Three Dances from Henry VIII. Miss May Busby will sing 'Elsa's Dream' from Lohengrin and Mr. Walter Widdop will be heard in the two Forging Songs from the first act of Siegfried, which he gave recently in a studio performance, and the ever-green aria 'Sound an Alarm' from Handel's Judas Maccabæus.

Miss MAY BUSBY.

So that the weekly gardening talks from London shall be continued while Mrs. Marion Cran is on holiday, Mr. F. W. Miles, lecturer in Horticulture and Botany to the Hertfordshire County Council, is filling the gap. His first talk is on Friday, August 19, at 5 p.m.

THE WESTMINSTER ABBEY APPEAL.

The Radio Times learns with satisfaction that the Appeals on behalf of Westminster Abbey that were broadcast during the week of July 3, and to which The Radio Times devoted a special section of its issue of July 1, have, to date, realized a sum of between £2,000 and £3,000, and that, moreover, a generous donor has undertaken to provide a Sacristy in a style worthy of the Abbey building. The cost of this Sacristy will be about £10,000.

THE success of the 1870 programme, arranged by Mr. Cecil Lewis, as listeners to LONDON and other stations will remember, recalling the death of Dickens, has led to a decision to repeat the experiment. This will be done between 9.35 and 11 p.m. on Friday, August 26, when it is proposed to choose the century earlier. The 1770 programme should allow of the introduction of such well-known literary figures as Dr. Johnson and his friends Boswell, Oliver Goldsmith, David Garrick and others. On the dramatic side there are comedies by Goldsmith and Sheridan, and for music it is also a specially interesting period, inasmuch as the great Handel was displacing the last of the composers of the English Stuart tradition. Mr. Iolo Williams, who is well known as an authority on the eighteenth century, has undertaken the supervision of the script and also the presentation of the programme.

Mr. IOLO WILLIAMS.

Artists booked for forthcoming London variety programmes include: Cyril Shields (Tuesday, August 16); Helena Millais, Chick Farr (Friday, August 19); Carroll Gibbons, Marie Dainton, Wish Wynn, Ronald Gourley and Thornley Dodge (Saturday, August 20).

A CHORAL concert of an hour's duration will be heard from LONDON and other stations as the first part of the evening programme on Friday, August 26. It is to be conducted by Mr. Victor Hely Hutchinson and the programme will furnish some striking contrasts, including as it does Stanford's breezy cantata Phaëdrig Crohore and Parry's mystical Blest Pair of Sirens. Other items in the programme will be the overture to The Wasps by Vaughan Williams, the part song My love dwelt in a Northern Land (Elgar) and three movements from Lady Radnor's Suite for Strings by Parry.

John Drinkwater's well-known play, 'Mary Stuart,' is to occupy the last period of the London programme on Tuesday, August 23. Earlier the same evening 'The Eternal Waltz,' a Viennese comic operetta, with lyrics by Austen Hurgon and music by Leo Fall, will be broadcast.

NO Irish programme could be considered complete without the inclusion of some of Tom Moore's Irish Melodies, and Off in the stilly Night and The Harp that once through Tara's Halls will be sung by Mr. Gerald Kaye during an Emerald Isle concert to be broadcast from Bournemouth on Monday, August 15. Another Irish song of the sentimental order, Balle's Killarney, once popular in Victorian drawing-rooms, will also be sung by Mr. Kaye, while Miss Anna Manuel will contribute a number of old Irish Airs, as well as Hubert Eisdell's setting to the charming poem Loughareema. Stanford will be represented by the Overture to Shamus O'Brien, the song Sweet Isle, and his setting of Remember the Poor, while among the other orchestral pieces are a selection from Benedict's Lily of Killarney and Three Irish Pictures by John Ansell.

We Mediæval Moderns!

Prejudices which Radio will Dispel.

IT is often a matter of amazement to composers and producers of works of art of an unfamiliar type to find that they act upon the populace as a red rag to a bull. They may have expected appreciation only from a small circle, and indifference outside it; but they are bewildered by a tumult of execration.

A reasonable man who has the misfortune to be tone-deaf will explain that classical music 'leaves him cold' and there the matter ends; being reasonable he allows to other people tastes which differ from his own. But most of us are unreasonable in this matter of music of an unfamiliar type—modern music especially—neither leaving it alone, nor seeking to get into right relation with it. Some feel hurt by it, others are goaded and inflamed, for it is too potent to cause indifference in any but the constitutionally lymphatic.

Here we have no rare phenomenon; man is always ready to stone his prophets, and then ultimately to let the dissonances of the past become the consonances of the future. I have no doubt that in a few years' time, we shall admire some of those musical works which we now condemn as blaring forms of insanity. At any rate, we shall be able to discriminate between them.

It has been stated that 'in many cases the regular forms of music have been discarded, not because they are outworn, but because the skill to use them has been lacking.' But it would be ridiculous to impute insincerity to many modern composers, whose greatness will be revealed as their style becomes familiar.

'Where I heard nothing but noise,' says Salvador Davies, 'the Arabs found a pleasing melody in which they could often join with their voices; and where I could distinguish no measure, I was compelled to admit of one by the dance.' Eventually he appreciated and enjoyed the Arab music and he formed the conclusion that musical taste is always relative, based on the habit of hearing. 'In music the habit of hearing is the Law, and through it the exception of yesterday becomes the rule of today.'

Consideration of this point will show a real difficulty, for except in our own particular jobs or under the stress of national trial, people in general are lazy. We have, perhaps, neither the desire nor the time for a course of training to enable us to appreciate what we condemn; we prefer variations of the same theme on a level which we can contact without effort.

Through regular attendance at cinemas and restaurants we have acquired the habit of talking through music, of looking upon music as an incidental accompaniment to our actions. The result of this flattening of taste is that many people are in hourly suspicion of being compelled to effort, whilst the word education rouses them to fury. To be diverted, not educated; to be drugged, not fed, is the definite demand of large masses of people.

It might be thought that those of the same generation would be so alive to the working of forces of which the artist in any medium is the prophet and exponent, that they would greet him as a saviour by his raising into the realms of consciousness and form that which to them remained inexpressible. But the reason why this cannot be so is not far to seek. Since the earliest days the formal mind has opposed the living spirit, whilst on our children today we impose an educational system which cripples creative work. In spite of our uniform schools and colleges, many people alive today do not belong to the twentieth century. Some, owing to their religion, live in the darkest ages; others, owing to their science, are pre-Deluge; whilst the majority know nothing of the new Renaissance, pregnant with glorious possibilities.

Here Radio can help humanity, and it will be a wonderful day when one broadcast message is received by every nation on earth. The Highest Common Factor of humanity will probably be fairly low for a time—something like 'We'll all go the same way home.' None the less, a common emotion will be shared for the first time on this planet, and its effects will be incalculable.

E. R. APPLETON.

A Look Ahead.

News and Notes from Southern Stations.

Hull.

Wallace Cunningham (entertainer) will be heard in the course of Wednesday's programme, August 17.

Liverpool.

The concert on Wednesday, August 17, will consist of a short flute recital by Mr. A. E. Hatton, followed by a programme of light music played by the Station Octet, with Kinton Shepherd (baritone) as vocalist.

Plymouth.

Stanley Oke, the Devonshire pianist, is giving a short recital at 6 p.m. on Monday, August 15.

The Promenade Concert at the Queen's Hall, London, on Thursday, August 18, is to be broadcast to Plymouth listeners.

Leeds-Bradford.

Mr. Halliwell Sutcliffe, the novelist, who lives on the fringe of the moors he loves so well, is to give the first of a series of talks on 'The Romance of Old Countrysides' at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, August 16.

Birmingham.

The Rev. R. B. Parslew, Vicar of St. John's, Ladywood, is giving the address at a service to be relayed from the Cathedral, Birmingham, at 8 p.m. on Sunday, August 14.

Miss Ruth Maschwitz will describe the underground Jenolan River and Caves during her talk on 'Some Beauty Spots in New South Wales' which she is broadcasting on Tuesday, August 16.

Bournemouth.

Two of the Promenade Concerts at the Queen's Hall are to be broadcast from Bournemouth on Tuesday, August 16, and Thursday, August 18, respectively. The first is a Mozart Night, and the second consists of a miscellaneous programme.

Miss Patty Bowyer and Mr. Reginald Attridge, the successful competitors in the Contralto and Baritone classes at the First Bournemouth Competitive Musical Festival, recently held at the Winter Gardens, are taking part in the programme on Wednesday, August 17.

Cardiff.

A musical comedy programme, with Harold Kimberley and Marjorie Farnham as the solo artists, is arranged for Friday, August 26.

Outside broadcasts from Bath are always popular on both sides of the Bristol Channel, so that a concert by the St. Hilda's Colliery Band, relayed from the Royal Victoria Park, Bath, on Monday, August 22, is assured of a large audience.

Manchester.

A fitting opening to Manchester's Lakeland Week will be found in the concert arranged for Sunday afternoon, August 14. It will consist of orchestral music of fell and dale, appropriate songs sung by Mr. Norris Parker (baritone), and suitable recitations interpreted by Mr. James Bernard.

Some 'Pranks on the Piano' will be performed by Mr. Nevill Melland, a young pianist, who, though he cannot read a note of music, is quite well known as a composer. He will appear from 9.35 to 9.50 p.m. and from 10.30 till 11.0 on Wednesday, August 17.

BROADCASTING AS THE ARTIST SEES IT. V. THE LONDON MASTS AT OXFORD STREET.

To most Londoners—and visitors to London—the outward and visible sign of British Broadcasting is the pair of slender and latticed masts which, from the roof of Selfridge's, tower over the West End. This picture, which has been specially drawn for 'The Radio Times' by Mr. Allan McNab, shows the great height at which they are situated. Early in 1925 the London transmitter was removed to this site from Marconi House, where it was found that its working interfered with the reception of the Air Ministry's station in Kingsway. Since then it has become a familiar landmark.

The series of pictures of which this is the fifth has aroused general interest among listeners. It is an attempt not merely to record pictorially the various developments of broadcasting, but to regard its achievements from a new angle. So easily do we grow accustomed to the miracles of science, so quickly do all novelties become commonplace to us, that the artist who sees these miracles with a fresher and more discriminating eye than ourselves may do much to reawaken in us an awareness of their existence and their significance.

Listeners will recall Mr. Allan McNab's drawing of the giant masts of Daventry which appeared in 'The Radio Times' for July 8. Mr. McNab is a young artist of twenty-five, whose engravings on wood and copper, as well as his line drawings, have attracted a great deal of attention and have been acquired for several famous collections. He studied art in Paris and at the Royal College of Art, South Kensington. The shapes and patterns of modern machinery and architecture have always attracted his pencil; he is particularly suited to record the mechanical and architectural aspects of broadcasting.

Future plans for the series include further drawings and paintings by artists of the younger school, two of which may be mentioned here—'A Studio Concert,' by A. R. Thompson, and 'Broadcasting from a Theatre,' by Laura Knight.

The Swan Song of Sail.

The Passing of 'The Tall Ships.' By John Scott Hughes.

THERE are, perhaps, in the whole world now no more than thirty-five deep-water sailing ships still afloat; and of this small number, the last survivors of the Golden Age of sail, sixteen or seventeen are bound for British ports with cargoes of Australian grain. A few of them have already arrived, and one by one the 'tall ships' are completing the passage which for many of them must prove their last. Five of them, it is reported, have already been offered to the scrappers.

In a recent broadcast talk about these ships I ventured to use the title 'The Swan Song of Sail.' It is, indeed, the mournful truth that such a fleet of windjammers is scarcely likely to make these shores again.

The handful of ships that still sail the oceans earn their owners little profit, and just as often they show a loss. A few, mostly German-owned, are still trading to the Chilean nitrate ports. But the majority of the survivors are owned in the Baltic, and depend on 'tramping' for their maintenance. Finland is particularly loyal to the old ships, and several of our most famous veterans have found refuge under the house-flag of G. Erikson, that faithful lover of the ship of sails.

This picture by J. Spurling shows the now almost extinct loveliness of a 'windjammer' in full, snowy sail. In the accompanying article Mr. Scott Hughes, who has given several broadcast talks on the subject, mourns the passing of the sailing ship.

It is due to a dispute between the wheat-growers and the steamship companies that this fleet of windjammers has been whipped all deference to M'Andrew, they are not romantic. For the men and women of our race the ship of sails remains the very symbol of Romance. And, alas! it cannot now be very long before the last 'tall ship' shall set out on its last voyage.

up from every corner of the seas to ship cargoes more lucrative than nowadays fall to their lot. It is not likely the circumstances will repeat themselves, and thus the homeward passage of these sailing ships takes on something of the sadness of an act of service repeated for the last time.

Here and there, it is true, attempts are being made to keep sail alive, either for sentimental reasons or as a training ground for young seamen. But as ships of commerce, flecking the lonely wastes of all the oceans with their white sails, their day is done. One by one they are sold, or wrecked, or sent to the scrappers.

The magnificent ships of our time run on their appointed routes—'trips' they are called now, never 'voyages'—with the precision of their own chronometers. But, with Conscience—A Cautionary Tale.

SO it had come at last! Mr. Brown glided furtively along the pavement, one eye upon that sinister machine, his umbrella gripped spasmodically in his right hand. There was no doubt about it; the black van so appropriately resembling a Black Maria with the square, flat contraption reared upon its roof. Even a crystal user would know what that was!

Had he left his re-action condenser at 180 or at zero? Mr. Brown could not remember. And was little Millie applauding the programme as she often did, by grasping each handle of the coil-holder and flapping the coils together? If so, God help him! As he fumbled at the lock of his street door he cast one apprehensive glance behind him, and then ducked. The van was coming steadily on, the square contraption turning slowly upon its pivot.

Mr. Brown slipped through the street door, closed and leant against it, breathing heavily. Then he listened. Not a sound from without, but from the wireless set in the parlour proceeded a low hooting and whistling sound. He staggered into the room waving his hands frantically, while his wife and little Millie stared at him aghast.

He staggered into the room, waving his hands frantically, while his wife and little Millie stared at him aghast.

'They're here!' he whispered and, dashing to the receiving set, switched off the batteries. Then, walking on tiptoe, he entered the front room, crawled on his hands and knees to the window and peeped cautiously through the lace curtains. It had stopped outside!

Mr. Brown's epidermis crept upon his neck, and the cold sweat broke out upon his forehead as the back of the van opened and from it emerged two stern-faced men. There came a heavy knock—the knock of doom. But it was a knock at the house next door!

'What is it?' whispered Mrs. Brown who, with the terrified Millie, stood at the door of the room. 'Have you done something, John?'

The huddled shape by the window rose to its feet, upon its face the radiant look of the reprieved. 'Of course not,' replied Mr. Brown, with dignity. 'I was just watching the wireless van tracking down an oscillator. They've got him; that blighter next door. Serve him right; he ought to be ashamed of himself! And, Millie, how often have I told you not to flap those coils together? You must not do it!'

THE ORCHESTRA

Third Leonora Overture Beethoven
Hymn to St. Cecilia Gounod
Suite, 'Peer Gynt' Grieg

BEETHOVEN wrote at various times four different Overtures to his one Opera, Fidelio (at first called Leonora), and of one of these two versions exist. The present one, generally reckoned the greatest, is a very long Overture, fully developed on symphonic lines—too extended for use as a theatre Overture, perhaps, but a magnificent concert piece. There is a short slow Introduction, and then the vigorous main body of the Overture begins. There are two chief tunes—the very soft and mysteriously-opening one, and a succeeding smoothly-flowing one.

Note the dramatically interrupting Trumpet-call in the middle of the Overture (generally performed, in the concert room, by a player out of sight, behind the Orchestra); this represents the crucial moment in the play, when the Minister of State appears just in time to save the hero from execution.

THE Hymn to St. Cecilia, in the form in which it is most frequently heard, has solo portions for Violin, Harp and (if it is available) Organ. Its chief theme, given out after a brief introduction, is developed to a strong climax, to which succeeds a more tranquil section.

Three Bavarian Dances Elgar
Two Movements from Concerto in E Minor
Mendelssohn
(Solo Violin: WOLF WOLFINSOHN)

ABOUT thirty years ago Sir Edward Elgar spent a holiday in Bavaria, and gave expression to his memories of that pleasant time in a Suite for Chorus and Orchestra, which he called From the Bavarian Highlands. Later he made an orchestral arrangement of three Dances from the Suite.

The First is just a gay Dance. The Second is a Lullaby. The Third is called The Marksmen, and shows us a lively scene of a village shooting-match.

Beethoven

THE Eighth is the shortest of all Beethoven's Symphonies (excepting the First), and one of the most consistently gay.

The FOURTH MOVEMENT is much longer than any of the other three.

There are two Main Tunes. The First is the sparkling one with which the Movement opens, the Second the more sustained, song-like one, introduced by the First Violins, and then taken up by Flute and Oboe.

Out of these two Tunes the whole Movement grows.
The orchestration is vivid and interesting, and sometimes humorous.

Reading Poems by WILLIAM BARNES, FRANCIS THOMPSON and ALFRED NOYES

MR. SAVAGE is already known to the London radio public for his broadcast from the works of William Barnes, the Dorset poet. He has himself published a volume of poetry in the Dorset dialect, and he is also the author of 'Casements,' a volume of translations from French verse that was very highly praised by the reviewers on its appearance not very long ago. Today, in addition to Barnes, he will read from the works of Francis Thompson, the ecstatic, who wrote 'The Hound of Heaven,' and of Alfred Noyes, one of the best-known poets of the present day.

8.55 THE WEEK'S GOOD CAUSE: Appeal on behalf of the Ross Institute and Hospital for Tropical Diseases (Incorporated) by the Duchess of Portland

THE Ross Institute was founded to carry on the great work, begun by Sir Ronald Ross, of research into the causes and treatment of malaria and the other diseases that are the curse of life in the tropics. The importance of this work may seem remote to those to whom the tropics are no more than a name, but it is very real to the men who go out to unhealthy climates to work for the great industries, such as oil, rubber, and tea, whose products are so important in our national life.

Contributions should be addressed to the Hon. Treasurer, the Ross Institute for Tropical Diseases, Putney Heath, London, S.W.15.

THE air comes very near the end of the Oratorio. Samson has pulled down the temple of the Philistines, and perished with them in the ruins. His father, Manoah, with grand courage, declares that there is 'no cause for grief; Samson like Samson fell, both life and death heroic.' The 'Surprise' Symphony Haydn

THE impresario, Salomon, in 1791-4, brought Haydn over to England for three visits, which were enormously successful. Part of the bargain was that Haydn should compose some special Symphonies, and twelve were thus brought into existence.

These twelve are the best Haydn ever wrote, and the following conversation is recorded:—
Salomon: 'Sir, I think you will never surpass these Symphonies.'

Haydn: 'Sir, I never mean to try!'
And he never did, for though he lived a good many years longer (until 1809) he never wrote another.

Why is this one of the twelve called 'The Surprise'? The name comes from one chord in the Second Movement. This Movement begins very softly, on Strings alone. Then suddenly comes a crash from the whole band—Strings, Wind and Drums.

A friend called on Haydn, just as he had finished composing this Movement. Haydn played it to him on the piano and remarked: 'Dat sure to make de ladies jump!'

 Symphony, 'In the Wood' Raff
RAFF, that very prolific Composer of last century, had no fewer than eleven published Symphonies to his credit, besides another of which the MS. is lost, and a host of other works—well over two hundred in all. Yet of all his output very little is now heard—only a few Piano pieces, notably the one known as La Filleuse (The Spinning Maid), and some String pieces that Chamber Music players enjoy.

His third Symphony bears the title In the Wood, and each of its three Movements has a descriptive heading. The First is entitled In the Day-time, and has the sub-title Impressions and Feelings. The Second Movement, Twilight, consists of a slow Movement and a Scherzo. The slow portion is headed Dreaming, and the Scherzo is a Dance of the Dryads that recalls the fairy dance from Mendelssohn's music to A Midsummer Night's Dream.

The Last Movement, entitled At Night, portrays The busy stillness of night in the forest. Arrival and departure of the Wild Hunt, with Frau Holle (Hulda) and Wotan. Daybreak.

Hulda the Gracious was once the goddess of marriage, and Wotan is well known to us through Wagner's Ring.

BOTH from the point of view of architecture and historical connections, Westminster Abbey is probably the most interesting building in the Kingdom. It had its beginning in a monastery founded by the Saxon King Egbert over thirteen hundred years ago. The saintly Edward the Confessor rebuilt this monastery on a magnificent scale and called the new shrine West Minster. In the thirteenth century Henry III began the erection of a more splendid building, which was completed by Edward I. As it stands today, the Abbey represents something like five hundred years of wonderful construction and forms a precious national heritage. The legend included in today's programme is the story—carefully preserved in the old records—of how Westminster Abbey came to be dedicated to St. Peter.

Overture to 'Russian and Ludmilla' .. Glinka

RUSSIAN AND LUDMILLA is a fairy-tale Opera about a Princess who was wooed by three lovers, and on the eve of her wedding with one of them, the Knight Russian, was carried off by a wicked magician. The adventures of the three rivals in search of the Princess provide all sorts of exciting adventures, which introduce wizards, a sorceress, dwarfs, fairies, and a gigantic head which, when it blows, creates storms.

The Overture, a stirring piece of quick music, is built on themes from the Opera. One of them, that represents the wicked magician, is a descending whole-tone scale (on the piano, that in which there intervenes a key, black or white, between each pair of successive keys in the scale).

The First Main Tune is given out, after a few bars of Introduction, by the Full Orchestra, with great energy. This is worked up a little, one part 'imitating' another, and then the broad, swinging, Second Main Tune comes on the Bassoons and lower Strings.

It is just before the Coda, or winding-up section, that we hear the 'whole tone scale,' blared out by the heaviest bass instruments. After it the Overture quickly rattles on to a rollicking conclusion.

Fantasia on Moussorgsky's 'Boris Godounov'

WHEN Boris Godounov was first performed in England (during a season of Opera given by Sir Joseph Beecham in 1914), the occasion was looked upon as one of the events of the century. Musicians, Press and public were stirred and delighted by this strange, wonderful, picturesque and intense music, and few imagined that in a few years it would cease to be performed in England. Nowadays, instead of enjoying the music, people have been arguing as to how much of what we heard under Beecham was written by the irregular genius Moussorgsky and how much had been touched up by the more polished talent of Rimsky-Korsakov, and whether the latter should be praised or denounced for what he did. Some day we may witness a performance of the true, unadulterated Moussorgsky—but when?

The plot deals with the usurping Czar, Boris, who has made his throne safer by murdering the rightful heir, and who dies in a madness of terror and remorse as a rebellion threatens his house and throne.

TCHAIKOVSKY, during a stay in Italy, gathered together some native folk-songs that he found in collections or heard in the streets, and made out of them an Italian Caprice, full of the spirit of peasants in rude health.

The opening Trumpet call is a reminiscence of the military music the Composer heard when he stayed near a barracks in Rome. Then various folk-songs are brought in.

The last section of the work consists of a lively Tarantella. One of the folk-tunes looks in for a moment, and then the Tarantella is resumed, and the piece sweeps on to its conclusion.

2.45 LANCASHIRE v. KENT.
 A Running Commentary on the play and incidents in the County Championship Match, by Mr. F. STACEY LINTOTT
 Relayed from Old Trafford Ground

KENT cricket has a great tradition, and even in these days of points and averages and championship tables, the sort of cricket Kent play is always popular on the grounds they visit.

Mr. F. STACEY LINTOTT.

Their invasion of Old Trafford is being handsomely celebrated by Manchester Station to-day and to-morrow. Mr. F. Stacey Lintott—whose picture appears herewith—is to broadcast from the ground a running commentary on today's play, and tomorrow, if the course of the match allows it, he will give an account of the last day's play. And tonight at 7.30 the visitors are to be welcomed with a concert called 'Kentish Ways,' including a Kentish play.

FROM THE WELSH STATIONS TODAY.

On the left is Mr. Archie Simpson, the entertainer, who takes part in Swansea's 'Close of a Summer Day' concert this evening. Miss Helen Alston contributes some songs at the piano to Cardiff's 'Medley of Music' at 9.35, and Mr. Frederick Steger (right) gives a song recital from the same station later in the evening.

A Handel Programme from Liverpool (August 8)

George Frederick Handel 1685-1759

HANDEL wins our admiration both as man and as musician. From the days when, a little fellow of six, he used to creep up to a garret in the dead of night to practise, because his practically minded doctor-father didn't approve of his working at music, to the latter years of his life when, though blind, he worked bravely on, there was never a time when his bold spirit did not uphold him. We in this country had plenty of opportunity of getting to know his qualities, for he lived with us nearly fifty years, making his way by sheer merit. True, he enjoyed the favour of some highly-placed folk, but against that advantage we have to set the enmity he incurred from others. Handel had the King on his side, but the Prince of Wales joined the opposition, who favoured the Opera composer Buononcini. Each party set up an Opera House, both failed, and Handel, at fifty-two, was bankrupt. The failure of his operatic schemes had the happy effect of turning his mind to Oratorio—with what wonderful results we all know (though by no means completely, for a great deal of his work in this form is too rarely heard). His activity was amazing. He wrote over forty Operas and other dramatic works, with some thirty-four Oratorios, Cantatas, Odes, and so forth, besides a fair amount of Chamber Music. Amid the multitude of his works there are, of course, movements in which he falls below his best; but through all the changes and chances of the years, the tenderness and nobility of his finest work has held a firm place in the affections of everyone who has a heart to feel, and a spirit to be uplifted.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAMME

9.35 Overture to 'Solomon'
Minuet from 'Berenice'

9.50 PARRY JONES (Tenor) with Orchestra

Where'er you walk ('Semele')
Recit., 'Deeper and deeper still,' and Air,
'Waft her, angels' ('Jephtha')

JEPHTHA, Captain of the Israelites, has vowed that if God gives him victory over the Ammonites, he will sacrifice whoever, on his return, comes first from his house to greet him. He conquers, and comes home, and to his horror, his daughter greets him before all the rest. She gladly bids him fulfil his vow, deeming the price small enough for Israel's freedom.

In this recitative and air Jephtha utters his sorrow, and prepares to offer up his daughter.

9.57 ORCHESTRA

Air from Twenty-third Great Concerto (Concerto Grosso)
Suite of Dances from 'Alcina'
arr. W. G. Whittaker

WHEN Alcina was first produced (at Covent Garden in 1735) the many dances it contained were not a success. Nowadays these are almost all that we know of the music, and we have to thank Dr. Whittaker for such pleasant tastes of the work. The Suite includes a Musette and Minuet taken from the Overture to the Opera, a 'Tambourino' from the last Act, and a Ballet Scene, in which we have first the entry of the Pleasant Thoughts (a slow, quiet section), and then of the Unpleasant Thoughts (a few slow bars, leading into agitated music); next the Frightened Pleasant Thoughts express their feelings, and finally there is a furious combat between the Unpleasant and Pleasant Thoughts.

Handel's Monument in Westminster Abbey—after an old engraving.

10.15 KEITH FALKNER (Baritone) with Orchestra

Recit., 'I rage, I melt, I burn' ('Acis and Galatea')
Aria, 'O ruddier than the cherry' ('Galatea')
Verdi prati (Green Meadows, from 'Alcina')

GALATEA was a sea nymph, whom the shepherd Acis wooed and won.

The giant Polyphemus comes on the scene. He covets Galatea, and melodramatically declares that the God of Love has 'stabbed him to the heart.' He declaims in this Recitative about his feelings, and in the Air that follows sings the praises of Galatea's beauty. The words are these:—

Recit.

I rage—I melt—I burn;
The feeble god has stabb'd me to the heart,
Thou trusty pine!
Prop of my godlike steps, I lay thee by!
Bring me a hundred reeds of decent growth,
To make a pipe for my capacious mouth;
In soft enchanting accents let me breathe
Sweet Galatea's beauty, and my love.

Air

O ruddier than the cherry!
O sweeter than the berry!
O nymph, more bright
Than moonshine night
Like kiddings, blithe and merry;

Ripe as the melting cluster,
No lily has such lustre;
Yet hard to tame
As raging flame,
And fierce as storms that bluster!

10.22 GLADYS SCOLLICK (Pianoforte)

Air with Variations ('The Harmonious Blacksmith') from Fifth Suite
Courante and Gigue from Sixth Suite
Allegro, Sarabande and Passacaille from Seventh Suite

10.37 PARRY JONES

Love in her eyes sits playing ('Acis and Galatea')

ACIS, hastening to his fair one, thus pours out his love to her:—

Love in her eyes sits playing,
And sheds delicious death!
Love in her lips is straying,
And warbling in her breath!

When Polyphemus, a Giant, appears and would claim the maiden himself, Acis resolves to fight for her, and in a declamatory Recitative declares:—

His hideous love provokes my rage;
Weak as I am, I must engage;
Inspired by thy victorious charms
The God of Love will lend his arms.

10.45-11.0 ORCHESTRA

Sailors' Dance and Trio from 'Rodrigo'
Polonaise, Arietta and Passacaglia

arr. Hamilton Harty

SIR HAMILTON HARTY has arranged three pieces from Operas of Handel, scoring them anew (for the Orchestra of Handel's day was differently constituted from that of ours), while maintaining as far as possible their original savour.

The Polonaise was a Polish ceremonial dance. The new scoring of the example from Handel (which is in somewhat different style from the Polonaises with which we are most familiar) is for Strings, Woodwind (without Bassoons), Horns, and Drums. The Arietta, originally a Tenor solo, has been re-scored for Strings and one Flute. The Passacaglia (scored for Strings, Oboes, Bassoons, and Horns) forms part of the Overture to Handel's first Italian Opera, Rodrigo, which was written at Florence in 1707, and from which the Sailors' Dance is also to be heard in this final Orchestral group.

4.0 WILLIAM HODGSON'S MARBLE ARCH PAVILION ORCHESTRA from the Marble Arch Pavilion

5.0 Major L. R. TOSSWILL: 'Among the Balearic Isles'

MAJOR TOSSWILL is known to listeners chiefly as an authority on Rugby football, but this afternoon he is to describe the attractions, as a holiday resort, of the Balearic Isles—those lovely islands set in the blue waters of the Mediterranean, off the east coast of Spain, and within a hundred miles of Africa. It is primarily of Majorca, the largest of the islands, that Major Tosswill will talk.

5.15 THE CHILDREN'S HOUR: The Children's Hour will cross the Channel (in spirit), since there will be selections from the works of Saint-Saëns and Debussy, played by the Daventry Quartet. The Story of 'The Goat of Monsieur Seguin,' from 'Lettres de mon Moulin,' by Alphonse Daudet. A Glimpse of 'La Belle France'

IN choosing music for a 'French Day' programme, the names of Charles Camille Saint-Saëns and Claude Achille Debussy figure prominently in one's mind, for they are perhaps the two most famous French composers of the last century.

Saint-Saëns, who died in 1922, was born as long ago as 1835. As a student he showed enthusiasm and energy. As a composer he wrote easily and well, in a style that is typically French. His works include many operas and concertos, and much chamber music.

Debussy lived from 1862 to 1918. Curiously enough he came of unmusical parents, but when quite young he showed talent which was to make him the chief musical influence of his time—not only in France, but in all Europe. He revolutionized musical art by his symphonies, operas, chamber music, pianoforte works and songs.

7.0 COMMANDER G. VILLIERS: 'The Longest Moment of My Life'

READERS of W. W. Jacobs will remember the memorable occasion on which the engineer of a steam tug was impelled, under the influence of liquor, to take a dip in the river, leaving the tug to steam madly round and round in circles, to the extreme and articulate embarrassment of the rest of the shipping on the river. For the Thames substitute a filthy night on the Baltic; for the shipping, two columns of battleships, and for the tug a hapless destroyer with its signal-lights gone and its steering gear jammed, and you will realize that the longest moment in Commander Villiers' life might easily have been also the last.

9.20 Mr. C. J. PATTEN: 'The Unity of Life.' S.B. from Sheffield

IT is some time now since Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose began to startle the scientific world with the results of his investigations into the sensitiveness and excitability of plants. Now it is generally known that plants can feel, and if you stick a needle into a cabbage it reacts in much the same way as an animal organism would. This is the fascinating subject of Professor Patten's talk tonight, and as he is not only Professor of Anatomy at Sheffield University and a recognized authority on biology, but a broadcaster of experience and of proved popularity, it will lose none of its fascination in his talk.

ARTHUR WOOD, born at Heckmondwike in 1875, has spent many years in conducting orchestras—at first, as deputy, that of the Harrogate Corporation, and then, as chief, at various London theatres, particularly the Shaftesbury and the Gaiety. He became Musical Director at Daly's in 1922. He has written the music for several Musical Comedies and Revues, and also a number of orchestral pieces, of which the Three Dals Dances are amongst the best known.

 TOBACCO was originally introduced to the Chinese in the fifteenth century by the Portuguese. The Chinese, who proverbially do everything contrariwise, ground the stems of the tobacco leaves into snuff. Chinese snuff and snuff bottles were introduced into Europe a hundred years later by the Dutch, who followed the Portuguese in the Far Eastern markets. Major Peer Groves has made a study of the history of snuff, and has some original views.

5.15 THE CHILDREN'S HOUR: Part Songs by the Victorian Trio. The Story of 'A Risky Errand' (Harold Avery). 'The Jungfrau Staircase'—a Railway Talk by Cecil J. Allen and certain others

THE Jungfrau (i.e., 'The Maiden') is the third highest peak in the Bernese Oberland Alps which are so famous a feature of Switzerland. For a long time 'The Maiden' was considered to be unconquerable—even as far back as 1577 there was a legend to that effect—and it was not until 1811 that anyone reached the summit. In the next forty years only four attempts out of many were successful. Since then, however, the mountain has been climbed often. But though the ascent on foot is fascinating to skilled mountaineers it is impossible for most people, and to overcome this difficulty a narrow-gauge railway has been constructed. It was begun in 1897 and was not completed until 1912. The Jungfrau Railway is an engineering feat of a very wonderful kind, and Mr. Cecil J. Allen (who comes fresh from it) will have an interesting story to tell.

7.0 Mr. R. C. WASHINGTON: 'The Use of Refrigerating'

THE legislation which recently came into force, limiting the use of preservatives in food, has had the effect of vastly multiplying the number of refrigerators in use throughout the country. The presence of a large number of electric refrigerating plants seemed, at one time, likely to constitute a serious interference with broadcasting; and it is the means that have been devised to counteract this danger that will form the subject of Mr. Washington's talk.

9.20 Mr. HORACE SHEPHERD: Cinema Music (with Illustrations)

VAST as is the gulf that separates the tinkling piano of the early bioscope theatres, with its repertoire of a dozen stock tunes, from the organs and symphony orchestras of the great movie cathedrals of London and New York, much has still to be done to achieve a true unity between the film shown and the music that accompanies it. This problem is very much present in the minds of those who are trying to enhance the aesthetic appeal of the movies, and some of the means proposed to solve it will be discussed by Mr. Shepherd, who was formerly director of the New Gallery Kinema, one of London's most progressive picture houses.

9.50 THE WIRELESS ORCHESTRA
Conducted by JOHN ANSELL
Overture to 'Prince Igor' Borodin

PRINCE IGOR glitters with oriental colour and military splendour. It tells a story drawn from Russian history, of the struggles of a Russian Prince with a wandering tribe of eastern raiders, and of the loves of the Prince and his son. The Overture is a brilliant prelude to this gorgeously-set-out story.

10.0 'A FOOL AND HIS MONEY'
— A Wayside Comedy by LAURENCE HOUSMAN

Characters:
Tim FRANK DENTON
Tony ERIC LUGO
The Fool MATTHEW BOULTON

NOT the sort of road where one wants to be alone after dark. Above its high bank tangled with brushwood the forest trees stand thick, and their gnarled and twisted roots have made queer burrows in the soil, where something bigger than a fox could find hiding. The light is already fading, and one does not notice at first the elderly ragamuffin who sits hunched in the bank with his legs slung over a fallen tree-trunk, smoking meditatively and rather miserably, for indeed he has an unprosperous look. A whistle of queer cadence brings him in furtive haste to his feet. He, Tim, stands listening, and to him enters in shuffling haste, limp-footed, his pal Tony, younger and less of a weakling, but almost as much of a ragamuffin as himself. In spite of their difference, they make an obvious pair, shady in character, and you would do well to avoid them.

10.20 ORCHESTRA
Rhapsodic Dance, 'The Bamboula' Coleridge-Taylor

AN American patron commissioned this work. It is a rhapsody in dance style on matter contained in the Composer's Bamboula, a West Indian melody, one of the Twenty-four Negro Melodies he collected and transcribed for the Piano.

R.A.F. Official March Walford Davies

THE names of almost all these B.B.C. Composers are very well known to listeners. Some of them are prominent in executive capacities. Mr. Pitt, of course, is the general Musical Director of the B.B.C., and Mr. Ansell, long familiar to Londoners as the Conductor of various theatre Orchestras, has during the past year become still more widely known as Musical Director of the London Station. Sir Walford Davies, whose voice is heard every week in thousands of schools and homes, was during the war Organizing Director of Music to the Royal Air Force, and wrote its official March.

Mr. Stanton Jefferies is largely concerned with the intricate matters of control and balance in the choral and orchestral forces engaged in broadcast concerts all over the country, work that demands both musical and engineering knowledge. Mr. Gerrard Williams, whose charming songs and other music we know already, has only recently joined the B.B.C. Mr. Dallaway at the Birmingham Station has played a number of very interesting Pianoforte Concertos, some of them not very frequently heard. Mr. Robert Chignell was a notable pupil at the R.C.M. for both singing and composition. His hand is to be found in many of the re-arrangements and re-scoring of music from time to time necessitated by the very diverse demands of the B.B.C.

Miss Dorothea Barcroft, who is a member of the Birmingham Station staff, put into her African Suite some recollections of scenes and songs gathered during a stay in East Africa.

How Sweet the Moonlight Sleeps..... Leslie
As Torrents in Summer..... Elgar

MANY listeners will recall hearing Henry Leslie's Choir, which, formed in the 'fifties of last century, was famous until 1880, when it broke up. It was later re-organized, again under his direction. Leslie wrote a good deal of music, both vocal and instrumental—cantatas, anthems, operettas, chamber music, etc. How sweet the moonlight sleeps is a setting of some of the familiar lines of Lorenzo, in the last Act of The Merchant of Venice.

WITH Scenes from the Saga of King Olaf (based on Longfellow's poems, in his Tales of a Wayside Inn) Elgar made a dramatic cantata, just over thirty years ago. At the end of the work there is an Epilogue telling of the power of the Cross over the sword. The unaccompanied chorus, As torrents in summer, compares the work of God on fainting hearts to the rain from the skies swelling the thirsty streams in summer.

Everybody has a use for Germolene. It is the ideal first-aid for skin accidents in the home and garden, at work and at sport. And it has a wonderful reputation for Eczema and other serious skin complaints.

It is a wise plan to make a habit of applying Germolene to all cuts, scratches, burns, scalds, etc. Keep it handy, too, for sunburn and insect bites.

To keep the skin healthy and attractive, use Germolene Aseptic Soap.

Owing to a regrettable error, the photograph of the Rt. Rev. F. W. Keating, Archbishop of Liverpool, was published on page 127 of The Radio Times for July 22 over the name of the Rt. Rev. W. Keatinge, Roman Catholic Bishop to the British Army and R.A.F., whose picture should have appeared on that page in connection with the Menin Gate broadcast.

MAKING A DIFFICULT FEAT LOOK EASY.

Surf-riding is a tricky business, though it is one of the most exhilarating sports in the world. These Hawaiian natives—the one on the left who is standing upright on his surf-board, and the one on the right who is just rising to his feet—are real experts at the job. Mr. Clifford Collinson will broadcast a talk on surf-bathing from London tonight.

TOO HIGH FOR WORDS?

Does the airman, even at an altitude of a mile and a half, lose his fine flow of 'slang'? Captain Brewer's talk from Cardiff tonight on 'Crashing into the Atmosphere' will deal with the argot of the Air Force.

7.0 Capt. C. H. BREWER: 'Crashing into the Atmosphere'

THIS is another of the Cardiff Station's series of talks on the humour of the professions.
Although perhaps difficult to believe, aviation is full of humour, and it finds one outlet in its many amusing slang expressions, of which our title is an example. Translated into English, it means 'Flying.'

7.15 S.B. from London

7.30 'BEHIND THE CURTAIN'

A Comedy in One Act by PHYLIS EADON
Played by the STATION RADIO PLAYERS

Cast:

The Leading Lady EILEEN BLUNDEN
The Second Lady JONES M. JONES
The Stage Manager IVOR MADDOX
The Call-Boy SIDNEY EVANS
The Detective L. E. WILLIAMS
The Dresser BRONWEN DAVIES

Scene: The stage of a theatre. The time is half an hour before the evening's performance.

As unfortunately sometimes happens, the Leading Lady finds the strain of competing with the charms of the younger women rather trying, and her jealousy is sufficiently apparent to call forth ungenerous comments at her expense.

When the atmosphere becomes overcharged with feeling of this sort, an ugly row sometimes ensues; and on the other side of the curtain one evening, only half an hour before the play is timed to commence, such a scene is taking place.

When, a few minutes later, the Leading Lady's pearls are supposed to be stolen, the owner does not hesitate to fasten suspicion on her rival.

A detective who is called in to search, after all the exits have been barred, is unable to trace its whereabouts.

5.0 Mr. R. GOODWIN-SMITH: The Charm of Old Furniture
OLD furniture, worked by craftsmen with inherited traditions and a real love for their craft, is a joy to behold and a constant comfort to live with, quite apart from the attraction of investing—or speculating—in it. Mr. Goodwin Smith, who has had great experience of dealing in old furniture, will give some useful advice on how to acquire it on a small purse.

7.25 W. R. HAMMOND, of the Gloucestershire XI: Cricket
THE most remarkable feature of the present cricket season has been the rise to the very first rank of Walter Hammond, the young Gloucester cricketer. Two years ago he first made his mark in county cricket, and in the winter of 1925-6 he did great things with the M.C.C. team in the West Indies; but last year illness kept him out of the game. This summer he went right off with a bang and beat Dr. W.G. Grace's record by the speed with which he scored his first thousand runs. Since then he has continued his fine form, and received due recognition by being chosen to play for England against the Rest. All followers of cricket will welcome the chance to hear him talk.

10.15-11.0 WILLIAM BLAKE
(d. August 12, 1827)
A Programme of Verse and Song arranged by Mr. A. G. B. RUSSELL
THIS programme commemorates William Blake, the mystic, poet and painter whose fame has grown steadily in the hundred years since he died. Mr. A. G. B. Russell, the Lancaster Herald at the College of Arms, who has arranged the programme, is an expert on the writings and paintings of Blake, on which he has published several books. He arranged two recent exhibitions of Blake's works, those at the Tate Gallery and at the Burlington Fine Arts Club.

Stories and Old Songs by FRED E. WEATHERLY, K.C.

MR. WEATHERLY says that he was seven-teen years old before he appeared in print, but when he was asked, fifty years after, what was his last song, he replied that his last song had not yet been written. Mr. Weatherly has written many songs about old and young. His old folks are not tired or weary people, but full of wisdom and kindness. Tonight his programme is a reproduction of a very old one, and he says it is only an incident that all the words are by himself.

SKITTLES IN THE TAVERN GARDEN.

The Centenary of William Blake.

A programme of Blake's Poems will be broadcast from London tonight (Friday) at 10.15.

A HUNDRED years ago today William Blake died in the two-roomed lodging in Fountain Court, off the Strand, where he had lived in poverty for the past six years. His death caused no stir beyond the small circle of intimate friends who had come to understand something of his Titanic genius; he was buried at Bunhill Fields, and for long the very site of his grave was lost.

But in the seventy years of his life—years of ceaseless creation, persisted in amongst material sufferings and spiritual struggles that made him a madman in the eyes of the world—Blake had made for himself an imperishable monument. As a painter, a graver, a poet and a mystic he dominates his age. In retrospect he dwarfs the men who were the idols of his contemporaries, and the present generation has seen the Blake bibliography swelled by the works of the most acute intellects of our time. The lines quoted on this page, written by Blake for a picture of the Last Judgment, apply with peculiar force to his own work at this centenary, when his memory is being celebrated with a universal homage that his lifetime never evoked.

Not that one can fairly blame Blake's contemporaries for their neglect of his work. They were, after all, men of an age that thought Scott a romantic poet and Wordsworth almost a revolutionary; and Blake was a real romantic—a man to whom the material world was an illusion and reality lay not in things as they seemed—and a sporadic revolutionary who wore the red cap of liberty in the London streets. Worse than all, he was as unpractical as only a mystic genius can be.

But we, who live in this later age, are the true inheritors of Blake's treasure. We have no excuse for being shocked or scandalized at the originality of his conceptions or the

from a cast taken four years before his death.

I STILL go on,
Till the heavens and earth are gone;
Still admired by noble minds,
Followed by Envy on the winds,
Re-engraved time after time,
Ever in their youthful prime,
My designs unchanged remain;
Time may rage, but rage in vain;
For above Time's troubled fountains,
On the great Atlantic mountains,
In my golden house on high,
There they hide eternally.

eccentricity of his life; his work stands like the rock after the foam that almost covered it has ebbed away.

Blake's greatness lies in the overwhelming force of his ideas, which burst into expression equally in his pictures and in his writings. His work must be taken as a whole—the lyric simplicity of the 'Songs of Innocence' with the obscure but tremendous imagery of 'The Four Zoas,' such almost classical designs as some of the illustrations to 'Paradise Lost' with the grim visions of 'Nebuchadnezzar' and 'The Ghost of a Flea.' The drawings with which he covered the pages of the Prophetic Books that he engraved and printed himself are as interesting to the student of Blake as the disconcerting wisdom of the Proverbs of Heaven and Hell.

But the student of Blake has got an immense field to cover. The symbolism of his mystical writings and drawings is a problem that has not yet been solved. It is not necessary to solve it in order to enjoy and, in a very large measure, to appreciate Blake. The beauty of his poems speaks for itself—'The Tiger,' for instance, and the 'Songs of Innocence' and 'Songs of Experience,' some of which will be heard tonight; and there is no need to seek for the underlying symbolism to realize the power of the paintings reproduced on this page. In any case, Blake himself has given us the essential key to his own spirit in his most famous verse—

*To see the world in a grain of sand,
And a heaven in a wild flower;
Hold infinity in the palm of your hand,
And eternity in an hour.*

It was this quality of unearthliness that made Blake an enigma to his contemporaries; it is the same quality that makes the world pay homage to him today. M. A. C. G.

THREE OF THE MASTERPIECES OF BLAKE.

On the left, 'Newton,' a picture exemplifying Blake's hatred of the material sciences; on the right, 'Nebuchadnezzar'; and in the centre 'The Ancient of Days Striking the First Circle of the Earth,' an illustration of a passage in 'Paradise Lost.' It was upon a print of this design that Blake was working at the time of his death.

The pictures on this page are from photographs by Emery Walker of the originals on loan at the Centenary Exhibition at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, and are reproduced by kind permission of the owners—Admiral Sir Herbert Richmond, K.C.B., W. Graham Robertson, Esq., and the Whitworth Institute, Manchester.

5.15 THE CHILDREN'S HOUR: 'The Queen's Companions': A Robin Hood Play specially written for the Children's Hour with incidental music by the Daventry Quartet

ROBIN HOOD and his 'merry men' are among the most popular characters in that mass of curious old tales which form the background of all the facts of our early history. Like King Arthur, he may or may not have actually existed, but it is quite certain that all the ballads and tales told about him cannot be true. It does not really matter a bit, however, whether Robin Hood was or was not Robert FitzOdo or an Earl of Huntingdon, or whether he lived in the twelfth or the fourteenth century—or any other. As a national 'hero' and a central figure for really fascinating stories he is almost unique. The incident which forms the subject of today's play is one of many which are described in old ballads and brings with it a picturesque suggestion of medieval times and a breath of 'high adventure' which we love to associate with them.

7.0 WRITERS OF TODAY: MR. BEVERLEY NICHOLS

THE day will come when it will no longer be possible to refer to Mr. Beverley Nichols as one of the most brilliant of our younger writers; but when it does, we shall know that this post-war generation has definitely passed. Mr. Beverley Nichols is emphatically and characteristically 'post-war.' He was the brightest spirit of post-war Oxford—President of the Union, editor of countless undergraduate magazines, and author of a novel a year. 'Going down' did not quench his light; Fleet Street became conscious of him, he set a new age-limit for autobiographers in 'Twenty-Five,' and 'Crazy Pavements' shows that he can write novels that are not mere undergraduate novels. He is right on the spot, of the moment, and in the swim, and nobody could more fitly occur in a series entitled 'Writers of Today.'

The First of the

New 'Proms' (August 13)

Sir HENRY WOOD.

The 'Proms,' which since 1895 have been the most popular series of concerts in London, were, for various reasons, to have come to an end last year. However, by arrangement with the B.B.C., it has been found possible to continue the series. The Thirty-Second Season opens tonight at the Queen's Hall under the baton of Sir Henry Wood, whose name has been associated with the concerts since their initiation. During the season, which ends on September 24, the 'Proms' will frequently be broadcast from all stations.

The 'Cockaigne' Overture.

WHAT could be more suitable to open the 'Proms,' that unique element of London life, than Cockaigne, a picture of the bustling, cheery, noisy existence of the town of the Cockneys, with Romance bravely threading its way through the clutter?

The meaning of Elgar's tunes will be apparent to all who hear them. As the pageant passes we see a number of people in a hurry, a sober citizen or two, a pair of lovers, a cheeky miniature version of the sober citizen, a military band, first in the distance and then close by, the lovers seeking seclusion in a church, and the street again with its familiar associations.

'Elizabeth's Greeting.'

IN the first Act of the Opera we see how the Knight of Song, Tannhäuser, whom Elizabeth loved, falls for a time under the spell of Venus. Presently, growing weary of her enchantments, he returns to his fellow men, and learns that Elizabeth continues to mourn his absence. At the beginning of the Second Act Elizabeth enters the Hall of Song at the Castle of Wartburg, and greets it as the scene of Tannhäuser's former triumphs of minstrelsy. Now, she sings, hope is alight once more, for her loved one has returned.

Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto.

TWENTY-FIVE is a glorious age at which to write romantic music. Grieg, at that time of his life (in 1868), was much interested in his native Norwegian music, and his already strong and vivid personality had fine scope in a work such as this, of considerable dimensions. He wrote it during his summer holiday in Denmark.

Its first and last Movements are full of romantic vigour (the last especially has the true Norwegian dance spirit), and the brief middle Movement, with its highly expressive, subdued, almost sad theme, is in beautiful contrast.

Valse Triste.

THE Valse Triste is part of the incidental music to a drama, Kuolema (Death). The story illustrated by the piece is this: A youth has fallen asleep at night by the sick-bed of his mother. Slowly the dark room lights up with a red glow, and a valse-tune is heard in the distance. The dying woman leaves her bed, and, swaying to the lift of the music, summons dancers, who now enter the room. The mother dances with them until she falls on the bed exhausted. But she makes a supreme effort, and the dance is renewed, wilder than ever. At its height, there comes a rap at the door. The sick woman cries out, the dancers and the music are gone. Death has come.

Handel's Largo.

THE deservedly beloved Largo is properly a song in a Comic Opera, Xerxes, which Handel wrote in great haste in 1738 when, after some disastrous experiences in the business of operatic production, he thought he saw a chance of greater success (which unfortunately did not immediately come to him). For Xerxes and one other Opera, together with a third made up from earlier works, he got £1,000.

Overture to 'William Tell.'

THIS popular Overture almost epitomizes the Opera, in which Rossini and his librettists present the story of the Swiss liberation—the rousing of the forest cantons by William Tell and the overthrow of the tyrant Gessler.

The Overture is a fine piece of descriptive music, both dramatic and pictorial. Calm meditation is the mood in which it opens, suggesting the serenity of nature. Very unusual is the tone colour, five Solo Cellos and two Double Basses being used. Presently a storm gathers and gradually swells to tremendous force.

The storm goes as gradually as it came, until peace is restored. Then is heard a pastoral tune (on the Cor Anglais, representing the Swiss shepherd's pipe) with much decoration added above by a Flute. The Overture ends with the lively March, battle music, the final triumph of the Swiss people, as it has been described.

Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody.

IN his Hungarian Rhapsodies (originally written as Pianoforte Solos) Liszt paid proud homage to the national melodies of his native Hungary. Most of these works were composed after his return, in 1839, from tours abroad.

The music of the ancient inhabitants of the country, the Magyars, was taken as raw material by the gipsies who came to Hungary from the East early in the fifteenth century. Melodic decoration and strong rhythmic stresses characterize the gipsies' songs and dance-tunes.

Prelude and Mazurka from 'Coppelia.'

DELIBES began to write for the stage at the age of twenty-one, and showed that he had a capital sense of the theatre. He brought out some short Comic Operas at the Lyric Theatre of Paris, and wrote a number of Operettas for other theatres. After periods as accompanist and second Chorus Master at the Opera, he was commissioned to collaborate in a Ballet with the Polish composer, Minkus, and did it so well that he was asked to compose one himself. This was Coppelia, which came out in May, 1870.

The Sphinx of Old

The Sphinx of
To-day

Built by Craftsmen with a single Aim—

HARD by the First Wonder of the World stands Egypt's ancient monument, the Sphinx. It was to that relic of the land of the Pharos that Brown scientists turned for the newest example of the World's latest Wonder. It was a happy thought. For, the craftsmen of this Science of To-day are dominated by the same spirit which urged those of Yesterday.

All down the ages is this spirit manifest. The Egyptians with their temples; the Romans with their camps and their roads; the medieval potter at his wheel; the cobbler of the last century; and now, to-day, those who sponsor the Brown, England's first Wireless Loud Speaker—craftsmen all. To make that which is the best of its kind—that is "To make that which is the best of its kind"

the end for which strive the craftsmen of yesterday and to-day alike. The Brown Sphinx Loud Speaker is the achievement of that end. It is the embodiment of all that science knows. Its beautiful, mellowed design does not belie the standard of its reproduction. Its tone is as captivating as its appearance. Most important of all, it reproduces the broadcast with vivid truth. The tenor's thrilling notes; the tremulous beauty of the violin; the grandeur of the organ... so realistic as to be almost uncanny.

See and hear the Brown Sphinx Loud Speaker at your Dealer's—it will be an experience in itself. £12 10s. is the price of such loud speaker perfection

IS STILL A SECRET!

7/11
(previously 10/6)

Practical Points
about the LISSEN
Secret Process Battery

- (1) It brings a new power smoothness to your loud speaker.
- (2) It offers a stubborn resistance to volt drop.
- (3) Every battery absolutely fresh when you get it.
- (4) The price low enough to bring it within reach of all.
- (5) You can get it on your way home at one of the 10,000 dealers who handle LISSEN products. Get one for your week-end radio.

Every battery manufacturer knows the first part of the above formula, but only LISSEN knows what the X+Y+Z part is.

Although the LISSEN Secret Process Battery has been on the market for six months or more, the formula of the chemical contents is still a secret. Rival manufacturers, realising the astounding success of these batteries, have tried their hardest to analyse the contents, but in vain. This secret formula, and the special process of manufacture known only to LISSEN, constitute the reason for the remarkable power and sustained freshness of the LISSEN Secret Process Battery.

So great is the energy put into the LISSEN Secret Process Battery, that it would, if necessary, keep intact over a long period of time, and it is this energy which enables it to withstand the longest programme, giving a reproduction as strong, pure and fresh-voiced at the end as at the beginning.

And by reason of the LISSEN policy of distribution, 10,000 dealers throughout the country sell this exceptional battery, at a price which is well within the reach of all—one of these dealers is near you.

Ask for LISSEN Secret Process Battery next time you want a good battery, and insist on getting it. You will be rewarded with a new power smoothness and a new tone clarity which will agreeably surprise you.

If you meet with any difficulty in obtaining, order direct from factory. No postage will be charged to you, or can be sent C.O.D. by return, upon receipt of postcard.

CLARKE'S "ATLAS" LOW LOSS COILS

Easily pass the Severest Test for Ultra-Selectivity.

The famous patent twin wire winding ensures lowest H.F. losses, maximum distance, and increased signal strength. Extract from Test Report by "Rad-dea" of The Manchester Evening Chronicle.

"There is no doubt that Clarke's Atlas Centre-Tapped Coils make even the straight set more selective. Stations of five metres above or below the local station wavelength could be tuned in with ease and without interference. Daventry is easily separated from Radio Paris on almost any set. It is interesting to note that the tapplings are taken at the true electrical centre, and not merely at the centre of the windings."

AS ESSENTIAL AS THE VALVE

WHEN listening for distant stations something more than a wavemeter is desirable, a source of information is required which will give the programmes of all the principal European Stations together with their wavelengths, power, etc. The British Broadcasting Corporation supply this necessity in "World Radio"—below is a list of the regular features of this important journal.

"Technical Considerations" by Capt. P. P. Eckersley Stations Worth Trying For by "Searcher."
"Wireless Step by Step" by "Dictron."
"Dominion and Foreign Broadcasting Intelligence."

Here's the cure for tongue-tied Sets!

ALMOST anyone can get a tune out of a piano. But it takes a Paderewski to persuade it to give the rich music which will live for ever. And so it is with Wireless. Almost any valve will give some sort of a result—but if you are critical and want to enjoy the thrills of perfect Radio, your set must be fitted throughout with Cossor Valves. Accept no substitute—let no one deceive you. There are no valves 'just as good.' The secret of their superb tone lies in the powerful Cossor Kalenised Filament and this is an exclusive Cossor development.
