The Announcer (reading the News Bulletin): . . . and it is understood that the proposals which are to be put forward tomorrow will be accepted.

reflect upon 'This Awful Leap Year' and the menace which it may constitute to Broadcasting.

HOW many happy bachelors as they sit at home vainly trying to get Radio-Paris on their wireless sets ever give a thought to the terrible risks they are running just now? How many realize that at any minute the door may open and a girl called Ermintrude, or even Matilda, may walk in and woo them?

Very few, I dare say. The seriousness of the situation is not fully realized yet.

It is all very well for these bachelors to laugh in their happy-go-lucky way and say: 'But I don't know a girl called Ermintrude,' or 'How silly! Matilda is my Aunt!' That isn't the point. Suppose the girl who walked in was called Mary. After all, England abounds with girls called Mary. What is to prevent one of them from walking in today and calmly plighting her troth?

'Good evening, everybody. XXX calling! We will now have a fugue.'

I mean to say, it is Leap Year. They would be quite within their legal rights.

Even in his own office a single man cannot say that he is absolutely safe this year. There is always the telephone to be reckoned with. At any second the bell may ring and trick him into taking off the receiver.

'Yes?' he will say unsuspectingly. 'Do you want me?'

'Well, to tell you the truth, I do rather,' the girl at the Exchange will reply coyly—because, of course, it will be her all the time. 'I think the way you say "Wun too foer fife Hop" is just too fascinating for words. Let's get married, shall we?'

Of course, if the subscriber answers bluntly: 'No, we won't!' the courtship will end there. No girl is going to bother with a rude beast like that. She will just say: 'I'm sorry you've been tr-r-roubled,' and try some other number.

Still, it isn't every man who will have the courage to say 'No.' One or two here and there are certain to give way.

'Oh, this is s-so s-sudden!' they will stammer, and blush shyly into the mouth-piece.

They will be 'through' then with a vengeance.

'Shall I give you a ring?' the operator will ask coaxingly.

'Y-yes, please,' the poor things will answer.

So just to seal the bargain the girl will give them a ring, and then she will hurry away and tell the supervisor that another number is happily engaged.

STILL, I don't think women ought to be allowed to interfere with broadcasting. I don't see why, just because it is Leap Year, they should be permitted to come between us and our pleasures. Yet this will happen unless something is done about it. I can easily prove that.

For instance, take the case of a Programme Announcer named Wilkins, who is attached to a wireless station called XXX. I know there isn't a wireless station called XXX. It is the name of a beer, really. Still, it is too late to alter it now. That is the name I have christened this station, and I am going to stick to it.

Well, it stands to reason that every girl who listens to XXX is in love with this Announcer. That is only natural. For years and years he has said: 'Good-night' to them in his friendly way, and, as girls will, they have grown passionately fond of him.

And, then, alas, along comes this terrible Leap Year. At once all these girls get together and toss up between themselves to see which one shall have this Announcer, and a girl named Helen Marplethorpe wins him. She proposes and is reluctantly accepted. There is a quiet marriage with a service relayed from Westminster Abbey, and they go away for their honeymoon.

But—and this is the point—what happens when they return? Does this Announcer go back to his microphone and say in his jolly way: 'Good-evening, everybody. XXX calling! We will now have a fugue,' like he used to do when he was single? No. His wife won't let him.

'If you imagine, Henry,' she says, 'that I'm going to have you laughing and joking over the wireless with a lot of strange, impertinent girls now that we are married, you are greatly mistaken. You must find some other occupation.'

So this clever, popular Announcer is reluctantly forced to send in his resignation and is lost to the wireless world for ever.

You see how serious the situation is? If that sort of thing can happen at a little provincial station like XXX we may be sure that it will occur at 2LO and 5GB.

Indeed, for all we know to the contrary, it is occurring at this very minute. Think of it! Here are we sitting down in the calmest way possible, while in Golders Green, or, perhaps, Pimlico, dozens and dozens of determined girls are tossing up for the Chief Announcer.

My heavens, I think it terrible that such a thing can happen in enlightened England today!

And it won't end with the Chief Announcer, either. As soon as he is allotted the losers will toss up for A. J. Alan. And so it will go on until shortly there won't be a man left at Savoy Hill. They will all be on their honeymoons, and the place will be a desert.

Imagine the sort of evenings that people will spend then. Sitting about in corners with earphones over their heads, trying to tune-in a desert. They will very soon get tired of that.

Dozens and dozens of determined girls are tossing up for the Chief Announcer.

'Look here,' they will exclaim crossly, 'I've had enough of this. If the Post-master-General thinks we pay ten shillings a year to listen to a howling desert he's mistaken. I've never heard anything so scandalous in my life!'

So when next year comes along all these people will refuse to renew their licences and broadcasting will die out. It will just fade and fade and fade until it is a lost art entirely. Then London will never, never call again.

Well, if this happens the Government will have nobody to blame but itself. It ought to protect us from these terrible Leap Years. Directly it saw one coming it should rush into the House of Commons and put the calendar on. Then we should miss the things.

And I don't mean 'miss' either. I mean 'avoid.'

'Beachcomber' and Bert Thomas

make an excursion into the past, revealing some hitherto undiscovered influences of Leap Year upon the course of History. The famous humorist of the Daily Express is not, on this occasion, interrupted by Prodnose.

A CASUAL sentence spoken by a scientist set me to work. He was one of the first to say, in the early days of wireless, that no sound had ever been lost, and that therefore all words uttered since the world's beginning were still journeying about in space. 'One day,' said he, 'somebody will invent a receiver capable of picking up these wandering voices, and you will hear the shouts of the first landing-party of Caesar's legionaries, and the word of command for the last charge at Hastings, and what King John really said to the assembled baronage at Runnymede; and anything else that Chance may throw in the way of your receiving instrument.'

I worked for years, and I shall not easily forget the moment of intense excitement when my instrument picked up the first of these sounds uttered so long ago. It proved to be nothing more important than a link-boy arguing with some gentleman or other on the return from a rout. But it was a milestone, and it pointed the way for what was to follow. I have, of course, kept a record of all these voices from the past, picked up from that day to this, and in glancing back through the lists, I find a number of proposals made by women to men in Leap Years; which proves, among other things, that this Leap Year privilege is much older than was hitherto supposed.

I remember one evening, shortly after listening to Chopin humming one of his nocturnes (which he hummed, by the by, without any of the horrible little twiddles they add on today), I succeeded in picking up a conversation which I have not seen mentioned, or even referred to, in any of the history books. Nor has my search among contemporary documents been any more satisfactory. Yet the conversation is one of those pretty domestic incidents which tell us so much more than chronicles of battles or Acts of Parliament. An exquisitely-modulated voice was saying, rather nervously, I thought:—

'In short, Harry, this being Leap Year, I have decided to propose for your hand. Will you marry me?'

There was a long pause but, just as I feared that some accident had deprived me of the rest, a deep voice, full of surprise, said:—

'Marry you, Anne! But, my dear girl, the whole thing is absurd! What on earth is the bee you've got in your bonnet now?'

'Why's it so absurd, Harry?'

'There's a certain risk in becoming my wife. Have you thought of that?'

'To begin with, I'm married already, as you know—'

A shrill burst of laughter interrupted him. 'Yes,' said Anne Boleyn. 'Most people have heard of your partiality for marriage. That's why I suggest you should get a divorce and start all over again.'

'It's ridiculous,' answered Henry VIII. 'I tell you I'm married.'

'Does that deter you? There's divorce.'

'Very difficult, my dear Anne. All sorts of questions asked, and all kinds of people from Rome ferreting about over here. Besides, what would Katherine say?'

'She ought to know what to expect from you. Don't you want to marry me, Harry? Aren't you rather sick of this irregular business?'

'Of course I want to marry you. But there's another matter. There's a certain risk in becoming my wife. Have you thought of that?'

'I know what you mean,' said Anne Boleyn. 'But when once I've got hold of you, you can trust me to keep my head. I'm not afraid of being executed. Will you think it over?'

'I'll see what can be done, my dear,' said the King, in a worried voice.

It is commonly supposed that Dante never spoke to Beatrice; that he worshipped his ideal of her all his life. This is not quite true. On one occasion they met, and the record of that meeting came across the centuries to me here in my room. For two hours or more I listened to him reading his immortal verse to her, and she made no comment. Once I detected an unmistakable yawn. But when he had finished his reading she said—and the queer mediæval Italian has been translated for me:—

'I say, whatever made you write all that?'

'You, and only you,' he answered.

'Me? How marvellous! Fancy having poetry written to me.'

'I have always loved you, ever since that first day we met, when you were a young girl.'

'I think it must be rather fun to be married to a real poet. And you're a famous one, aren't you?'

'I think I may claim to be.'

'And you love me.'

'With all my soul.'

'Well, aren't you going to say anything else?'

'What else can I say?'

'Well, I'm hanged if I won't say it for you. This is Leap Year, and I'd love to be the wife of a famous poet. Why shouldn't we get married?'

I heard a gasp of horror.

'You don't understand,' said Dante.

'Understand what?' said Beatrice, now rather angry.

'Why, you are not a woman of flesh and blood to me. You are my ideal woman. One does not marry an ideal. One remains in love with her for ever. She never grows old, and one never takes her for granted. One gazes at her as though she were a star, distant and beautiful.'

'Pretty dull for the girl, isn't it?'

'That's how we poets feel,' he said.

'Then I shall certainly not marry a poet,' replied Beatrice. 'Keep your ideal, my friend, but I'm made of

W. Branch Johnson,

by way of a reminder that life is real and earnest, gives the facts about Leap Year.

THE old tradition by which during Leap Year women may propose and men accept is typical of the manner in which leap years are popularly regarded. But far from being interlopers designed to turn upside-down the order of the seasons, they are, so to speak, police constables regulating the traffic of the calendar.

Without them we should by now be celebrating Christmas during February, and Midsummer would fall in August. And all because in the year 46 B.C. Julius Caesar made a mistake of eleven minutes and a few seconds in estimating the length of the year.

Caesar at that time was himself reforming the calendar. Before then, the religious rites and ceremonies properly connected with the harvest were actually being performed at about the season for sowing, and the so-called fixed feasts had lost their moorings. For the early Romans had inherited from the agricultural civilizations of Babylon and Egypt the system of basing the year upon twelve lunar months of 29½ days each, thus making the year consist of 354 days. Later a further complication was introduced by the Roman belief in the luck of odd numbers, and the consequent establishment of a year of 355 days.

Every now and then additional days would be introduced almost haphazard into the year, and certain of the Roman officials whose duty it was to keep an eye on the time were not above rigging the calendar in the interests of their friends in power. Caesar's reform was thus a matter of practical politics as well as an advance in applied science.

Now, in giving us what is known as the Julian Calendar of 365½ days to the year, he made an error which, although it may have appeared trivial at the time, so accumulated that by the sixteenth century a further reform was obviously necessary. In 1582, therefore, Pope Gregory XIII ordained certain changes and regulations which introduced the calendar at present in vogue.

Gregory's most striking act was to declare ten days non-existent, so that in the year 1582 the 4th October was immediately followed by the 15th October. In this the Pope had a sort of precedent, since Caesar himself, in the process of introducing the Julian Calendar, had lengthened one year to 445 days. And when the Act adopting the Gregorian Calendar was passed in England—in 1751—eleven days were omitted after the 2nd September of that year—an adjustment which provoked much discontent among uneducated people, so that they assailed the statesmen responsible for the 'robbery' with cries of 'Give us back our eleven days!' Moreover, three months were omitted from the year 1752, in order that New Year's Day, 1753, should fall on the 1st January.

BEFORE the Romans, the Greeks, too, had been in the habit of introducing days sporadically to prevent the calendar from going wholly astray. As calculation of the length of the year became more exact fewer such days were found necessary, and the calendar was stabilized by the addition of one day each fourth, or leap, year. Yet even here absolute exactitude has not been attained, for in every four hundred years three leap years have to be omitted. It will be remembered that the year 1900 was not a leap year, but an ordinary year; on the other hand, the year 2000 will be a leap year, and also the year 2400, although the intervening 2100, 2200, 2300 will not.

Though England was comparatively late in adopting the 'New Style,' as it was called at the time, in distinction to the 'Old Style,' or Julian Calendar, Turkey only came into line as recently as last year. In some quarters relics of previous calendars still persist in this country. Thus the financial year, which ends on the 5th April, closely corresponds to the old practice of beginning the year on the 25th March, the Feast of the Annunciation. The Mayors of boroughs still hold office from the 9th November, an ancient New Year's Day. In the Isle of Man it is a debatable question whether the 1st January or the 1st November is the true New Year's Day, for the latter is the date for entering on farm holdings or farm service. In Scotland Martinmas (11th November) and Whitsuntide are the legal half-yearly terms for entering on tenancies or employments.

During the French Revolution an entirely new calendar was introduced into France (to be abolished later by Napoleon), consisting of twelve months of thirty days each, with five complementary days at the end of the year dedicated to Virtue, Genius, Labour, Opinion, and Reward. The names devised by the Revolutionaries for the various months are peculiarly attractive—Vintage, Foggy, Sleety, Snowy, Rainy, Windy, Budding, Flowery, Pasture, Harvest, Heat, and Fruit.

The month called Vintage, which was the first month of the year, lasted from the middle of our September to the middle of October. September had been chosen because it was in that month that the Revolution had broken out; but its choice again emphasizes the fact that, after all, the calendar is an arbitrary method of fixing time, dependent upon the habits of the people using it and also upon the climate.

In other parts of the world the year does not naturally divide itself into our seasons. The 'hot season' and the 'cold season,' the 'wet season' and the 'dry season' are its conspicuous landmarks, and on them the natives base their reckoning. In Uganda, where there is a wet and dry season within six months, the natives think of six 'moons' as completing the year, and among some of the tribes of the Congo the dry season, when nothing grows, is considered outside the year altogether. Elsewhere the New Year is calculated from the appearance of a certain constellation above the horizon, etc.

Leap years do not trouble these primitive black fellows—although among some tribes it is the woman who habitually proposes!

flesh and blood, and have to live in this world. Thanks for the poetry, though. Let's know if you write any more.

'My dear Mr. Pater,' said Mr. Humphrey Ward, 'pray allow me to avail myself of the privilege accorded by custom to my sex during those years which are popularly called leap. As an admirer of your writings, may I do myself the honour of offering you my hand in marriage?'

'Such a suggestion,' boomed the voice of Walter Pater, 'is unexpectedly fantastic, and cannot but meet with an immediate and, I trust, a final declension.'

I find among my records a number of fragmentary conversations, as well as several very short ones. I hear, for instance, a Greek woman, who has been jilted by her lover, proposing to Diogenes out of mere pique. He replies, truly enough, that his well-known contempt for money would hardly make him a desirable husband, and that, in any case, there was no woman either hardy enough or unconventional enough to live in a tub all the year round, and to be seen about with a fellow who carried his house on his head wherever he went. Moreover, he points out, his cynicism is the very devil when he is roused.

One of the shortest proposals in my notes is that of a minor goddess who took advantage of Leap Year to propose to Jupiter. 'Marriage?' roared the god. 'Don't you know me better than that?' And the rest was drowned in a gigantic cataract of laughter, among which I failed to distinguish that of Juno—naturally enough. It was shortly after the unfortunate affair with Danaë.

Brigham Young, the Mormon chief, apparently listened quite quietly to the rather nervous proposal of a tourist—a school teacher from Leeds, who felt that this was her last chance. The Mormon pointed out that he had seventeen wives already, and that, as their number increased, he found that his liking for the marriage state grew less instead of more. 'You've no idea,' he said to her, 'how you women change after marriage. And their jealousy of each other is appalling.' The same lady afterwards tried her luck with Mr. Gladstone, but he thought it was a joke—as indeed it was!

To conclude: quite recently I heard an imploring voice saying: 'But, Adam, one day marriage will be all the rage, and we shall be known as the pioneers. I've waited till Leap Year, our first Leap Year. Won't you marry me? Adam, is there, is there somebody else?' 'Apparently there isn't,' answered Adam. 'And as you're the only woman there is, I can't argue; but you've got me into enough trouble already . . .'

Walter T. Rault and Alfred Leete

disobey the Editor, and, paying no attention to Leap Year, describe 'The Great Milton Championship,' a likely sporting event of the future.

Hazlitt is said to have been the only man who ever read right through 'The Faerie Queene.'

ALL my life long I have been a keen follower of sport. No narrow fanatic whose interests were centred on one branch of athletics, but a large-hearted enthusiast for sport in every form. I have thrilled over Test Matches and Rugby Internationals, but with as keen emotions have I followed the fortunes of our Bowls team in Jugo-Slavia and the All-England Pogo XVIII in Trinidad. When our representatives were finally put out of the Table-Tennis tournament in Vienna, my grief was barely mitigated by the glad news that an Englishman had won back the sausage-eating championship at Oshkosh, Wis. I can tell you offhand the records for pushing a pram to Brighton, for walking, running, swimming, roller-skating, cycling, hopping, and rolling a mile; the non-stop dancing and cornet-playing records, the winner of the international typewriting competition, the names of the couple who got married, divorced, and remarried in the shortest time. Consequently, when I read the passage above quoted in The Radio Times last week I was seized with a great idea.

Why should literature alone be debarred from the sphere of records? It is as honourable an achievement to have read right through the 'Faerie Queene' as it is to have rung 10,000 variations on a peal of bells or to have crossed the Atlantic steerage a hundred and seventy times. Let Hazlitt's name be the first on the roll of honour of the literary Wisden; and let the literary Wisden at once appear.

After all, the arguments in favour of sporting records apply equally well here. They attract interest amongst the general public; they increase the profits of the cracks; they tend to raise the general standard of play. Reading will become competitive; men will boast on suburban trains that their handicap has been reduced from 2,000 to 1,800 lines. The papers of the future will be full of headlines like this:—

WORLD'S SPENSER CHAMPIONSHIP.
HAZLITT'S RECORD AGAIN ATTACKED.

A VISIT TO THE TRAINING-CAMPS.

Or, in the case of American newspapers, one page of the Sports Section would start thus:

DOC MILLIGAN SPLITS EVENS
IN FINAL TRY-OUT; HAZLITT HAS-
BEEN, TRAINER AVERS; FANS CAMP
OUT IN YALE BOWL FOR TOMOR-ROW'S VERSE TILT.

And stories by Our Special Correspondent:—

An atmosphere of cheerful confidence pervaded Sir Edmund Gosse's headquarters when I visited them yesterday to see the title aspirant in the final stages of his training. I found him looking fit and hard, and full of enthusiasm about tomorrow's attempt on Hazlitt's long-standing record. "I shall win," he said, modestly, as he knocked off work for the day. The London man has now completed his serious training, which was of a comprehensive character—great quantities of Gibbon were read to cultivate stamina, Browning was used to develop mental alertness, and to guard against the danger of lethargy

I visited them yesterday to see the title aspirant in the final stages of his training.

overcoming him during the attempt on the record he has read the whole of Hansard for the last two years. For the remainder of his training he will merely read "The Forsyte Saga" and "Jew Süss," resorting to the small advertisements in The Times if there is any risk of staleness setting in.

Imagine the national pride at fever heat, and the impetus to reading everywhere. As the old records were broken new feats would be attempted; teams of two might attempt twenty-four hours records, and the reading 'Six Jours'—relays of competitors reading night and day through the British Museum catalogue or the complete works of H. G. Wells—would fill the Albert Hall.

The Polytechnic team seems to be in danger of losing its lead through an unfortunate accident to its second string, who sprained his right eye in completing the eleventh lap. Chatham Y.M.C.A. are now only seven pages behind, with the rest of the field bunched together nearly half a volume in the rear.

There might be single-handed matches in the shorter events, too:—

Tex Rickard has matched Otto Mullinger and Jim McClusky for the Milton title on May 1st. The contest, which will be decided over twelve books of "Paradise Lost," will be for a purse of $1,000,000 (£200,000). Experts here favour McClusky, in view of his recent victories over Nussbaum and Laccchiotti, and his unchallenged record of 57½ secs. for Kipling's "If." Mullinger's backing rests on his excellent showing in the "Areopagitica" tournament at Chicago last year, but his record is almost entirely a prose one, and it is felt that in taking on a reader of McClusky's speed and experience he is venturing out of his own class.

And, of course, there would be the human side:—

Big Bill Beckett, the veteran long-distance Dickens champion, broke down and cried at the conclusion of his bout yesterday with Eddie Perkins, the Tooting High-School Boy. The veteran was leading by over five chapters in "The Old Curiosity Shop" when he accidentally turned over two pages at once and was immediately disqualified. A return contest has been arranged for the spring.

There would, too, be tragedies. Someone would attempt the 'Encyclopedia Britannica' and collapse in the middle of WAA-WOO. Sport has its martyrs and always will. But what matter if reading becomes known as a virile and even dangerous sport? I look forward to the time when the greatest distinction an athletic undergraduate can gain will be not a rowing or a football Blue, but a place on the 'Varsity reading team.

And when that time comes, England must be in the van. The new sport must not find us unprepared. I myself in my small way am doing all I can. I have opened a school, fully equipped as a training headquarters, within a stone's-throw of the British Museum, and likely lads are hereby invited to communicate with me at once. Within a few months I hope to have a flourishing stable in existence, and offers of matches from promoters, managers, and backers will be gladly received.

Collinson Owen,

the popular author of Zero and, over the initials 'C.O.', of many delightful articles, reveals in a captured telephone conversation the secret of how it is actually done.

HELLO, hello, Exchange! Oh, confound!— Oh, is that you, Reggie? This is Sylvia calling.'
'Calling what? The British Isles?'
'No, stupid. Just you.'
'Oh— Well, how are you?'
'All right, except for a slight depression.'
'Sorry. From Iceland?'
'No; not that kind. It's one of my own.'
'Too bad. Have you seen the doctor?'

'Oh, no. He'd be no good. It's one of those depressions that defy medical science.'

'Bad luck. I thought there was nothing science couldn't do nowadays. What with wireless, you know, and vitamins and atoms, and all that.'

'No, my dear, it isn't a case for a doctor at all. It's much too personal for that. It's— Oh, it's awfully difficult to explain, Reggie.'

'Things are.'

'Awfully. You see, Reggie, it's like this. I've got a great opportunity in my fingers.'

'Such nice little fingers.'

'I'm so glad you think so. Well, I've got this great opportunity all waiting, and I don't know whether I ought to grasp it or not.'

'Well, even if you did you wouldn't hurt it. Not in those fingers.'

'Do be serious. Here am I with this great opportunity all ready for me and I don't know whether to take it or not. And I wanted your advice.'

'Is it business?'

'Well, not exactly. And yet I suppose it is, in a way. No, it's not business. Most decidedly not.'

'You don't seem frightfully sure about it. Can it be pleasure, then?'

'Well, I suppose you might call it that. Although lots of people don't—not after a time, anyhow.'

'H'm. It seems very mysterious. Neither one thing nor the other. What is it, then—not a hat?'

'Good heavens, no! Do you think I should be ringing you up about a hat?'

'Is it clothes of any kind?'

'No. Not yet, anyhow.'

'I don't seem to be getting any warmer. Animal, vegetable or mineral?'

'I don't think it's any of those.'

'Dear, dear, where am I? Oh, I know what it is. It's our dear friend Ernest.'

'NO! You know it isn't!'

'Why should I know? He's very keen on you.'

'I can't help that.'

'And handsome.'

'I don't think so.'

'And quite wealthy.'

'What is wealth, Reggie, if—?'

'If what?'

'Oh, if—nothing.'

'Quite. What is wealth, if nothing? Nothing whatever. Especially if one's hasn't got any. But, you know, I thought you adored Ernest. I thought you worshipped him. I thought—'

'Good gracious, how could you think such horrid things!'

the ball to be kicked. He does not quail. He comes from the Great Open Spaces Where Men Are Men. The goal is kicked. We yell with self-consciously sportsmanlike approbation; chivalry demands these honourable howls of us.

And so the game swings up and down, dwindling to victory at the other end, and swelling to defeat under our toes. At half time this process is reversed. Our honour and imagination must take their stand in the defence of the near goal posts, shoulder to shoulder with Mr. Sellar. (He has become Mr. Sellar to us now, since he stands so brawnily close beneath our insteps; before he was but a white speck—a microscopic soulless speck of a David repelling a sprawling composite blue Goliath.)

Well, well, England has won—but not easily. Nobody is disgraced. Everybody can go to bed glorious. The whistle blows for the last time. The pyramids of audience burst into thousands of running fragments. A tidal wave of humanity overwhelms the heroes. Probably they are torn to pieces and their glorious fragments carried triumphantly to fifty thousand homes. . . . ("I have the ear of Cove-Smith." . . . "Oh, that's nothing. I've got an authentic Aarvold rib, and Johnnie managed to bring home three Australian thumbs. . . .")

So we crawl away on our one hundred and twenty thousand weary yet triumphant legs. The scene swells slowly in our memories from the tussle of ants that it seemed at the time to a War Among Gods. By the time we have walked—at the rate of a hundred yards an hour—to the Olympic Town of Twickenham, the spirit of heroic warfare has had time to work in us. Like supermen, we trample down weak widows and orphans, reaching, with a Berserk burst of Rugby-inspired strength, the Great Open Spaces Where Men Are Men—or, in other words, the two front seats in a No. 27 'bus bound for Barker's.

The Talk of the Week, No. 6.

Stella Benson and Charles Grave present Miss Benson's talk, 'Confessions of a Rugby Ignoramus,' broadcast from London and Daventry on Friday, February 17.

LARGE audiences ought not to be allowed to look at Mighty Spectacles—they dwarf them to a degree inconsistent with spectacular dignity. Even an imperial coronation that rocks a hemisphere can have its procession diminished to a mere centipede by the sheer immensity of its wall of onlookers. Whereas if only one person went to see it (say myself) the spectacle itself would have a chance.

The same remarks apply to a football match. Under the gaze of roaring pyramids of humanity, a Rugby match—in reality, a battle of heroes—becomes no more than a mere hand's-breadth of ant-like activity.

To the Rugby match of which I write came sixty thousand experts and one ignoramus—(me). Even the few women were experts, and from the innocent lips of the flappers near me burst hearty oaths of approval or reproach at appropriate moments. But I, the one ignoramus, am entirely amoral, in the Rugby sense; I have no perception of the difference between right and wrong. The only conviction I have is that the referee is a born spoil-sport; he always blows his whistle at the moment when something unusually admirable is being done. Obviously he is jealous of the heroes.

THE heroes emerge like bees in single file from their hole in the great human pyramid, or hive. They look tiny and tidy in little blue suits, in little white suits, like good little boys on their way to a party seen through the wrong end of a telescope. Only when a tinier parasite—in the shape of a Press photographer—shyly approaches a hero does one realize that the heroes, judged by their own insect standards, are giants. That one in blue stockings, for instance, must be nearly an inch high. The noble insects swarm neatly in an oblong swarm for a moment; they are being photographed. Then they scatter nimbly, and are formed into two definite, if sprawling patterns—into two large composite insects, in fact, a blue spider and a white one. Our sympathies, it appears, are with the white spider; it upholds our national honour.

The game begins. One exciting thing happens after another. The composite spiders disintegrate and reform again. One nimble limb, consisting of four blue units, sweeps up the field towards us, held together, as it were, by the sinewy, weaving flight of the ball from one to another. Knots of white fling themselves against the blue limb, but still it wriggles relentlessly along, the ball still shuttling up and down its length. Something has happened; the crabbed referee has blown his whistle. He must have got left behind, and lost his temper. A new kind of swarm is formed. Eight blue insects and eight white ones begin to bend themselves double in a small heaving heap, like Alice in Wonderland's flamingo croquet hoops. 'London Bridge is falling down . . .' and, indeed, the wriggling erection does fall down;

someone pushed too hard and several heroes have fallen on their noses. The whistle blows again. London bridge is rebuilt, it heaves about on its scaffolding of straining legs. The ball is thrown beneath its piers. The bridge bursts asunder. A great mess of insects is splashed about the field. The ball is going the other way now, a white tentacle is sweeping it along. Someone has kicked it into the audience—almost as high as the Royal box. 'Oh, good,' I roar, but I roar alone. It appears that, on the contrary, it was bad. To knock the Duke of York's hat off is no object of the game. Sixty thousand persons groan. I groan, too—but, alas, too late again! By this time something excellent has been done. We are all on our feet, screaming with delight. The white and blue insects are chasing one another round the enemy's goal-posts. 'Ring-a-ring-of-roses-all-fall-down. . . .' They all fall down on their stomachs in a heap beyond the farther boundary. It seems that this is a glorious achievement, and entitles our white heroes to place the ball in a very advantageous position just in front of the enemy's fortress, and kick unopposed. A human tee, in the form of a prostrate friend, is even provided, to make the thing easier. The courageous tee does not flinch as the kicker rushes upon him. The ball is through. How easy! I could have kicked that myself! My cheers are all for the courage of the brave tee. At any rate, we have a goal. Ha, ha! That will teach these Colonials a thing or two about the effete Mother-country.

The public takes quite a long time to get calm again after that, but the heroes, as heroes will, pass modestly on to new efforts. Something else has happened. Someone's trousers have been torn off. A little round swarm forms modestly round the sufferer, while a new pair of trousers is hurried from the hive. It is like the Maids of Honour holding up their petticoats in a ring round the embrace of the Princess and the Swineherd. A pair of shredded trousers shoots from the centre of the swarm, the ring dissolves and—lo!—there is the hero, newly trousered. We all cheer again at his gallant insouciance. How glorious to be a hero, and hold trousers so cheap!

THE game hurries once more up and down the field. The referee runs after it, and every time he manages to catch it up he blows his whistle. If I were a hero I should be careful to keep the field between me and that cavilling flautist. The audience seems to have the ball almost as often as the players do. Every time the ball soars into their midst, the thousands of faces turn to follow its course, and their turning gives an effect of thrill, like the waving of a bank of seaweed under the impulse of a tide. Where the ball is about to descend, a crouching dint in the crowd forms for its reception, just as a sea-anemone opens to close over a pebble. And just as the sea-anemone rejects the stranger, so the crowd spews out the ball and the game begins again.

The enemy has the ball now. His blue string of runners blows up the field once more towards us. Our white defenders break the string. Each blue unit in turn is tripped up, sat upon and unobtrusively strangled—yet still the ball springs on from blue hand to blue hand, like a symbol of the victory of the soul over death. Half the players fall flat once more in a heap—this time behind our goal posts. Squealing with excitement, we all rise and bow over one another's hats to see what is happening under our toes, so to speak. The players are so close to us now that they are men, not insects. One has some mud on his ear. Another has torn his shirt so that the blushing eye of the audience can see his naked shoulder-blade. In a moment he will realize this and draw his modest veil of fellow-players round him while he changes his shirt.

An opponent must now show his courage by lying down like a doormat and holding

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

An Early Musical Comedy.

THE little two-act opera La Serva Padrona ('The Maid turned Mistress') by Pergolesi, which, as I mentioned last week, is to be broadcast from the London Studio on March 6, was written, as were most of its composer's lighter works, to provide two intermezzi between the acts of a more serious opera. The opera, in conjunction with which 'The Maid turned Mistress' was written, was entitled 'The Prisoner'; it is now forgotten, though the 'comic relief' remains to us today, a gem of eighteenth-century musical comedy. Pergolesi died of consumption at the age of twenty-six. All his possessions had to be sold to raise the eleven ducats which were the cost of his funeral. 'The Maid turned Mistress' was revived some time ago at Hammersmith, by Arthur Bliss, who will conduct the broadcast on the 6th. The two principals in the London presentation will be Gaby Valle and Foster Richardson.

Town or Country?

ON Monday, March 5, Manchester is broadcasting a 'Town and Country' programme which will be relayed to London, Daventry, and other stations. This programme will attempt to portray in music the respective charms of town and countryside. Poets, while writing lyrically of the open country, have seldom praised the city in their songs. As one who has lived for some time in three of the world's greatest cities—and one not without acquaintance with the gentler delights of country life—I should like to put in a word for the beauty of city life. Fifth Avenue, New York, on a fine spring morning, with a lofty, cloudless sky overhead and the towering lines of concrete buildings shimmering in the smokeless atmosphere, may be as lovely as a Surrey lane. Cowper wrote that 'God made the country and man made the town'—but God, surely, guided man's hand. The musical 'pictures' on the 5th will have Vivienne Chatterton and Ashmoor Burch as vocalists.

For Parents and Play Lovers.

THE business of being a parent is taken very seriously these days. I am sure, therefore, that Dr. Olive Wheeler, of University College, Cardiff, will attract a large audience when, on March 6, she speaks from Cardiff on 'Psychology for Parents—Early Developments.' Welsh listeners with a partiality for broadcast drama might note that on the same day the station is giving two plays—Alfred Sutro's A Game of Chess and The Late Rebellion, by Shirland Quin.

Our Recent Note on Farming.

SOME words in a programme note on one of Mr. Robertson Scott's talks may have suggested to listeners that we did not take the position of the British farmer sufficiently seriously. We would not, of course, seek to ridicule a body of men who have, in the pursuit of an age-old and particularly British calling, undergone a time of great stress and difficulty. In Britain, as in many other countries, to be the subject of caricature is to be the subject of popular affection and esteem. We therefore hope that our agricultural listeners have not read into our paragraph a slight which was most certainly not intended, nor attributed to Mr. Robertson Scott himself what was purely an editorial comment with which he had nothing to do. Listeners who have followed his course will have been impressed with the serious spirit in which, as a careful student of agricultural conditions at home and abroad, he has approached the problems of British farming.

What is God Like?

THE evening of Sunday, March 4, sees the beginning of the new experiment of a series of three connected addresses from St. Martin-in-the-Fields, which I mentioned in a paragraph some weeks ago. The Rev. Eric Southam has chosen for his subject 'What is God Like?' which is also the title of the book the Bishop of Winchester has written, at the request of the B.B.C. Religious Advisory Committee, in connection with the addresses. On Sunday, March 4, Mr. Southam will deal with the question of God and Jesus Christ, on March 11 with God and the World's Pain, and on March 18 with God and Every-day Life. I cannot but feel that Mr. Southam is a brave spirit to deal with these subjects, but after all they do go right to the centre of things, and they are the problems on which the average man looks for light from the religious teachers of his day. From talks he has given in the past I can promise listeners the series will be in no sense 'theological' or 'ecclesiastical.' Of course, he can only skate over the surface in the time at his disposal, but he hopes to set men thinking. They will find the problems he raises dealt with far more fully and in quite simple language by the Bishop in his book 'What is God Like?—An Attempt at an Answer,' the six chapters of which are headed:—

1. The most powerful thing in the world.
2. Signposts.
3. How men began to know God.
4. Is God like Jesus?
5. Why doesn't God kill the devil?
6. Going into action.

The book will be on sale at all bookshops and book-stalls on Monday, March 5, price 1s. (paper), 2s. 6d. (cloth). 'What is God Like?' as the subject of a simple book, points to being an experiment of exceptional interest—one has only to read one's daily paper to realize how great is the interest in such problems today.

The Forbidden Land.

ONE of my favourite books, in younger days, was Boothby's 'Doctor Nikola.' Its setting was Tibet, the land of mystery which has provided the background for a score of romantic novels. Tibet is one of the few parts of the inhabited world which have contrived to keep their secret—or part of it—in face of scientific exploration. On Sunday, March 4, at 5.30 p.m., there is to be a talk by Miss Mildred Cable, of the China Inland Mission, on 'The Dancing Rituals of the Tibetan Lamas.' Miss Cable, in company with friends, has made that long and difficult trek across Central Asia which, as a boy, formed part of my plan for the shadowy future (which has ended in the great adventure of catching the 9.20 from Earl's Court every morning). She is one of the very few white women who have ever entered 'the Forbidden Land,' and the story she has to tell is, in a way, unique.

Strange Music.

RARE musical instruments seem to figure largely in Manchester's programme for Tuesday, March 6. There is to be first a recital of handbell ringing by the last surviving member of the Howard family of Glossop, which during the past hundred years has been famous for its ringing. Later comes Zachary Tan, who plays on the hand-saw, the penny balloon, and the zither. And, to complete the scheme, I see that a dulcimer recital by Harry E. Gospel has been arranged for the afternoon.

A Word of Reminder.

FOLLOWING my diatribe against those who listen indiscriminately to any and every item in the programmes and then complain when they hit upon some transmission which does not take their fancy, a listener has sent me the following quotation:—

Our Bill of Fare we here present:
Let each choose what he wishes.
Enough's a feast! You are not meant
To eat through all the dishes!

I should like to have this framed and hung on the wall above the sets belonging to various friends of mine! The author of the rhyme suggests that it should be printed on every programme page of The Radio Times. I think it would be better, perhaps, if listeners were to memorize it and quote it on appropriate occasions.

A Moszkowski Concert.

A GAY, tuneful composer is Moszkowski, a programme of whose music Percy Pitt conducted one Sunday a few months back. This last concert was so generally appreciated that Mr. Pitt is going to repeat the dose on Sunday evening, March 18, from the London Studio. The name of Moszkowski should not be confused with that of Moussorgsky. The former was a German composer of light music who died as recently as 1925. Moussorgsky (1835-1881), Russian by nationality, was the composer of Boris Godounov, which stands for Russian opera in the minds of most English music-lovers. The programme on March 18 will include Moszkowski's Third Orchestral Suite and Ballet Music from his opera, Baubdil.

Dame Ellen Listens.

ON Monday evening, in her cottage at Watlington, near Maidstone, Dame Ellen Terry will be listening to the programme broadcast in honour of her eightieth birthday. With her at the moment of this nation-wide celebration will be her daughter, Edith Craig, well known as an actress and producer. The programme will be a tribute not only from the nation as represented by the B.B.C. and its twelve million listeners, but also from the stage. Members of six great theatrical families are taking part in the broadcast—the Irvings, the Terrys, the Forbes-Robertsons, the Trees, the Comptons, and the Thorndikes.

About Books.

IN these days when so many books are published, it is often a difficult business for the reader whose taste is not haphazard to make up a library list. We listeners are fortunate in having Desmond McCarthy and Mrs. Hamilton to keep us in touch with contemporary books. At the request of many listeners who are, on occasions, unable to hear their fortnightly talks or to take down a list of the books they review, I propose in future, when space permits, to reprint the titles in these pages. On Thursday, February 9, Mrs. Hamilton mentioned:—'The Strange Vanguard' by Arnold Bennett (Cassell), 'Adam and Eve' by John Erskine (Nash and Grayson), 'Avarice House' by Julian Green (Been), 'Islanders' by Peadar O'Donnell (Cape), 'Cullum' by E. Arnot Robinson (Cape), 'Black Gallantry' by Val Gielgud (Constable) and 'Good Evening, Everyone' by A. J. Alan (Hutchinson). I was glad to see that Mrs. Hamilton noticed Mr. Gielgud's novel. He is a popular broadcaster and 'Black Gallantry' one of the best adventure yarns I have read for some time.

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

In Next Week's Issue.

SOME few weeks ago, The Radio Times published a letter from a reader asking whether it would not be possible to include in the paper a series of articles on Singing, Piano Playing, the Orchestra, etc., giving the listener some general lines upon which to judge musical performance. As it happened (and was explained in an editorial footnote), this had been the Editor's intention for some time past and such a series was already commissioned, under the general title of 'What do you listen for?' The first article will appear in next week's issue. It will be by Richard Capell, Music Critic of The Daily Mail, and will deal with the orchestra. There are millions of people listening to broadcast orchestral concerts—and how many have any idea of the mechanism of a great orchestra, the difficulties of performance and conducting? Each man should, I admit, be his own music critic, but there is obviously room for a brief and simple account of general principles upon which each can base his personal criticism. Well-known music critics have been invited to write on the various subjects comprised in the series—Herman Klein on Singing, Percy A. Scholes on Composition, F. Bonavia on the Violin, and so on.

Bantock and Brahms.

FROM 5GB on Saturday, March 10, will come a Symphony Concert by the Birmingham Studio Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Joseph Lewis. The soloist will be Astra Desmond. The programme is an interesting one. It opens with an Heroic Overture, by Geoffrey O'Connor Morris, who was formerly attached to the Birmingham Station. Then come the Sappho Songs by Granville Bantock, who this year celebrates his Diamond Jubilee. The Symphony will be Brahms' E Minor. Apropos of Brahms, the delightful reminiscence of him which Dame Ethel Smyth broadcast a fortnight ago is to be published in next week's Radio Times as 'The Talk of the Week, No. 7.'

The Six Distinguished Olofs.

THE popular Victor Olof Soloist Sextet is to broadcast again from London and Daventry on Sunday, March 18. 'Why soloist?' Because each of the members of the sextet is a distinguished soloist on his own instrument. Victor Olof need not be introduced; he is too well known as a violinist. John Fry (second violin) is Professor of the Violin at the Trinity College of Music, London, and a member of the Philharmonic Orchestra. Frank Howard (viola) is a member of the London Symphony and other orchestras. Edward J. Robinson (cello) is a member of the Snow String Quartet, and late principal cello of the Wireless Orchestra. Victor Watson (double bass), has played with many famous orchestras and as principal double bass at the Covent Garden opera seasons. Sidney Crook (pianist) is well known as a recitalist. He was a pupil of Isidore Epstein.

A College for Working Women.

EIGHT years ago, at the time when the parliamentary franchise was extended to include women, there was founded at Beckenham the Hillcraft Residential College for Working Women. The object of its foundation was to provide women wage-earners with the opportunity for further general education. The college is now permanently settled as an incorporated society at South Bank, Surbiton, where it accommodates forty students at a time. On Sunday, March 4, Miss Eileen Power, well known to listeners for her talks on History, is to broadcast an appeal on its behalf.

The Vanished Island.

MANY of my readers will recall the Krakatoa disaster of August, 1883. Krakatoa was a volcanic island in the Straits of Sunda, between Java and Sumatra. At one time it had been of considerable size, but during the seventeenth century it had erupted and the top had been blown clean off it. In 1883 it was the base of the original volcano, topped with various minor volcanoes, which had piled up during the past two hundred years. During August, in a series of terrific eruptions, the entire island disappeared. Vast quantities of dust and ashes, hurled into the air, buried whole forests on neighbouring islands, darkened the sky at Batavia, a hundred miles away, so that lamps had to be burned at midday, and so filled up the sea that a number of new islands appeared above its surface. The actual sound of the final explosion was heard three thousand miles away. The resulting tidal wave overwhelmed the seaboard, smashing shipping to tinders and drowning 36,000 people. On Tuesday, March 6, Mr. J. Williamson Jones, who was living at Batavia during this cataclysm, will describe from Bournemouth his experiences.

Ibsen's Greatest Play.

I HEAR that the Ibsen Centenary, which falls on March 20, is to be celebrated from London and Daventry by a performance of The Master Builder, which the majority of critics hold to be his finest play. The Master Builder will play for about an hour and a half and will be given a performance from 5GB on March 19.

The Next Halle Programme.

THE famous Ninth Symphony of Beethoven—the Choral—is to be included in a Halle Concert which Manchester is sending to London on March 15. Sir Hamilton Harty will, as usual, conduct the Halle Orchestra. The principals in the Choral Symphony will be Bella Baillie, Nora Dahl, Frank Titterton, Percy Bilsbury, and Arthur Cranmer. Other items in the programme include Wotan's Farewell, the Fire Music, both from The Valkyrie, and the Quintet and closing scene from The Mastersingers.

Clarinet Music from 5GB.

A PROGRAMME of Chamber Music—including Mozart's Clarinet Quintet and Harold Howell's Rhapsodie Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, a Carnegie Award work—will be heard by 5GB listeners on Sunday afternoon. This will be given by the Charles Woodhouse String Quintet, Haydn Draper (clarinet), Isobel Gray (pianist), and Leonie Zifado (soprano).

A Cardiff Sunday.

AS last year, Cardiff is to relay the Rugby Footballers' Service from Bristol Cathedral on Sunday, March 4. Many famous West Country sportsmen take part in this interesting annual service. On the same evening the Third Concert of the Cardiff Musical Society will be broadcast, with Pouishnoff as solo pianist.

More Charlot's Hours.

THE recent series of Thursday Charlot's Hours, for which the well-known revue producer was responsible, has proved, as most of us expected, very successful. Another series of twelve, introducing to the radio public further new artists and material, will begin on Thursday, March 8.

The Bike which Astonished the Legion.

IF you listened to Captain Busk's talk of February 9 on 'The French Zone in Morocco'—which was one of the best travel talks broadcast lately—you will remember the story he told of the Englishman who last summer bicycled as far as he could into the heart of the Atlas Mountains along roads eleven thousand feet above sea-level and amidst country so dangerous for the European that journeys made by French officials had to be under strong military protection. Captain Busk told how the cyclist, protected by the gods, turned up at a French post on the edge of the desert to the amazement of the Foreign Legionaries, who had not for months seen a civilian, much less a bicycle, in that part of the world. He had no idea of the Englishman's identity, the story having been told him as a great joke by a sergeant of the Legion. It happened, however, that the subject of the story—by one of those queer coincidences of broadcasting—was listening to the talk. He has now written to Captain Busk, filling in some of the details. He was, it appears, on a definite tour of Morocco and determined to penetrate as far as his map and his bike would take him. No wonder the French were amazed at the apparition of an Englishman who, for his summer holiday, chose to bicycle eighty miles a day along desert tracks in a temperature of close on 120 degrees in the shade!

The Russian Brahms.

LAST week I made brief mention of Nicolai Medtner, the Russian pianist-composer who is taking part in a recital of his own music from 5GB on Monday of this week. Here is a further note on him. Born in 1879, he first became known as a pianist who toured Europe in 1901-02, and then became a Professor at the Moscow Conservatoire, at which he had been a student. He did not long continue in active practice as a teacher, for in 1903 he decided to devote himself to composition. He has not been extremely prolific—his opus numbers have not yet reached fifty. Almost all his output is Chamber Music, and the greater part is for Piano-forte. A good many of the Pianoforte pieces bear the title 'Fairy Tale,' but Medtner does not undertake in these to illustrate stories—only to suggest a romantic mood. Amongst his works are one or two with points of novelty, notably the Sonata Vocalise, a Sonata 'First Movement' (not a whole Sonata) for voice and Pianoforte, in which the vocal line, without words, has something of the freedom of a Violin part. Then his 'Sonata Triad' (Op. 11) is rather unusual, in that its three parts are really 'First Movements' (the third of which we are to hear on Monday evening). In his outlook on form Medtner follows in the tradition of Beethoven and Brahms, rather than in that of the Russian school that arose in the nineteenth century. His music has virility, clarity, and 'body in it.'

Your Gilbert and Sullivan.

IN a recent issue of the paper there appeared a listener's letter—one of very many—asking why music from the Gilbert and Sullivan Operas was never broadcast. The Editor has been compelled to reply that copyright considerations forbade this. However, recent negotiations have broken down former barriers and everyone will be glad to hear that overtures and orchestral selections from these most popular British operas will now be included in the programmes.

'THE ANNOUNCER'

Stephen King-Hall

tells a story in the true Leap Year tradition, of an occasion on which the B.B.C., quite unknowingly, played the Fairy Godmother to an Officer of the King's Navy.

MATCHMAKING, is not, so far as I am aware, one of the regular features of the B.B.C. programmes, nor, I suppose, will the B.B.C. broadcast proposals of matrimony. We shall never hear the S.O.S.: 'Young man, aged 35, presentable appearance, fed up with hardships of a seafaring life, seeks congenial companionship with a view to matrimony. Prefers blondes. All applicants should be capable of paying their own mess-bills and will be interviewed any lunch time at the Berkeley Restaurant. Chief Fanny was like a cat on hot bricks. Phyllis hardly spoke a word.

Commissioner of Police is requested to make the necessary arrangements to deal with the traffic in Piccadilly. All cinematograph rights strictly reserved.'

Frankly, I think the B.B.C. is a trifle tame, but then they serve the public, poor chaps,* so they have to do their best to please everyone. What a task! However, the time has now arrived when I can with propriety reveal the fact that the B.B.C. once played the fairy Godmother in a manner which would make even Mr. Drage envious. Mr. Drage and Mr. Oetzmann (pronounced Oats-man), so I gather from the Daily Press, spend their lives enabling young couples to start 'down the primrose path' at the expense of next year's income. A very worthy occupation, but hardly as meritorious as the coup brought off by the B.B.C. They enabled one young couple to become a couple; the B.B.C. enabled a young man and a young woman to tune in to the same wavelength as it were. They synchronized them.

It happened three years ago, in those days when the Uncles and Aunts were very important people at Savoy Hill and a considerable period of the Children's Hour was spent in broadcasting happy returns of the day to the young of the British Isles.

There were serving at that time in H.M.S. Primrose, Lieutenant-Commander Gordon and Lieutenant Roberts. Gordon, 'Fanny' Gordon as he was known to all his friends, was First Lieutenant and executive officer of the Primrose; Roberts was a recently promoted Sub-Lieutenant, a good lad, but inexperienced. He had a sister, Phyllis. She was a good girl and experienced. Miss Roberts was also one of the best looking girls in Dorset, which, as any sailor will tell you, is high praise indeed, and when Miss Roberts came to tea with her brother in the Primrose, Lieutenant-Commander Gordon used to undergo various strange emotions. In short, he was head over ears in love with the pretty Phyllis, and the girl very much liked having him in love with her, but for all her experience, which was very considerable, she was quite unable to make him propose. She tried encouragement and 'Fanny' Gordon blushed and stammered; she tried to be haughty and stand-offish and Fanny Gordon merely became very sad and the unjustly-beaten-dog-look came into his eyes, which so upset Phyllis that she nearly kissed him on the spot. The fact of the matter was that 'Fanny' was afraid of Phyllis; he was terrified that she might say No! and even the agony of uncertainty was preferable to the prospect of losing her for ever. Phyllis tactfully sounded her brother, but discovered, to her astonishment, that he seemed as frightened of 'Fanny' as Fanny was of Phyllis.

'Frightened of him!' exclaimed Phyllis. The Sub then laboriously and unsuccessfully attempted to explain to his sister that all young and inexperienced Subs are slightly frightened of the First Lieutenants of their ships, and if they are not, they ought to be.

OUR COVER DESIGN COMPETITION.

The task of judging the entries for this Competition was a heavy one, well over 4,000 artists having entered for the Prize. The final choice was a matter of difficulty but, after careful consideration, it was decided to award the Prize to

Mr. Percy E. Golding, Wembleton,
York.

to whom a cheque for £50 has accordingly been sent. In awarding the prize the Editor and his advisers were of the opinion that none of the designs were wholly suitable for adoption as the permanent cover of The Radio Times. It will not therefore be possible to bring the winning design into use, as careful consideration has to be immediately given to the possibility of finding a modification of it, or an entirely new design which will satisfy the requirements in every way. Meanwhile, the Editor takes this opportunity of congratulating Mr. Golding on his success and thanking all the competitors for their interest and enthusiasm. A short descriptive article on the competition, with reproductions of some of the best designs, will appear in an early issue.

THIS very unsatisfactory triangle of mutual love and fear might have endured for ages had not Fanny Gordon been moved to have a birthday party and had not the Sub been so fond of his sister that he decided to take a chance.

Miss Roberts was, of course, asked to the birthday tea party, and so were several other rather impossible young women, all friends of the Sub. I was asked over from the Hollyhock by old Fanny 'to make up numbers.' That was exactly how he put it in the signal. We sat down to a very splendid tea—Fanny whispered to me that he'd given the mess-man carte-blanche—but somehow things were not going with much pep. Fanny was like a cat on hot bricks, young Roberts seemed to have a load on his mind, and Phyllis hardly spoke a word.

If he will go into Cabin Number Three, he will find something.

At about five o'clock, Phyllis mumbled something about having a headache and her brother took her out of the cabin to get a breath of air. He came back a few minutes later and said his sister would soon be all right again and we were to go on with our tea. By this time the gloom was inky and even my proposal of kiss-in-the-ring fell flat. Then young Roberts suggested we should switch on the loud speaker. Of course we'd struck the Children's Hour and they were coughing up birthday greetings to the kids. Suddenly we heard the thing say:

'If little Fanny Gordon, who is having a lovely party in a Navy ship at Portland, will go into Cabin Number Three he will find something he had been wanting very badly. Many Happies to you, Fanny!'

Of course we all howled with laughter and made Fanny go to Cabin Number Three. I honestly believe he'd still be there if I hadn't gone in at seven o'clock and asked him whether he proposed to keep the girl on board all night.

I was best man and I gave her a diamond and sapphire pendant with the B.B.C. crest, or monogram or whatever they call it, rather artfully worked into the design by a chap who keeps a very decent shop up Bond Street.

Twenty Thousand Pounds in Ten Minutes.

When, in 1923, Lord Knutsford broadcast an appeal on behalf of the London Hospital, of which he has been Chairman since 1896, the £6,246 given by listeners constituted a record sum in B.B.C. charitable appeals. In the following article 'The Prince of Beggars'—as someone has christened him—tells of the even more wonderful response to the second appeal, made on February 5.

YOU ask me to tell your readers something about this Appeal.

Well, I bolted from that unfeeling-looking microphone at the B.B.C. Studio as quickly as I could, as I had exceeded by several minutes the time allowed, and I feared a very proper scolding.

As I walked home I thought—'What will this bring forth?' 'Was I too much in earnest?' 'Shall I be believed?' 'Can't be helped—did my best and must leave it at that.'

Soon after midnight on Sunday, February 5, a man called at the London Hospital and handed half a crown to the night porter. He gave no name, but the manner of his dress was like hundreds of other men who begin work in our great city during the early hours at the markets of Billingsgate, Smithfield, and Covent Garden and other places, where, except for a few short weeks of the year, the daily task begins while it is still dark. The coin he gave was the first received at the Hospital in response to the broadcast appeal that evening.

A few hours later another man brought a ten-shilling note. This man had walked from Brixton. He was out of employment and had come to give his 'dole' money to the 'London.' He gave no address, just turned round and walked home. Rather hard to express one's thanks to people like these.

The wonderful response to the broadcast appeal has made hospital history. It has, for the first time since the 'London' came into existence, not only completely, though temporarily, overwhelmed the machinery we have devised to raise and acknowledge the vast amount of money wanted every year to keep this great hospital running, but has upset the whole of the administration. All hands are needed to open letters.

I will tell you the story, because it is one which may interest those who have helped. Our post-bag, naturally, is always a large one, because, with 900 beds, mostly fully occupied, and a large staff of resident doctors and surgeons, and 500 resident nurses, not to mention the ordinary routine work, there is quite a lot of correspondence coming in every day. The first post on Monday, February 6, brought an additional 400 letters, but this was only the danger signal of the flood that was to continue for several days to come. Every succeeding post got larger and larger, until by Monday night, the 6th, 9,000 letters had come in. On Tuesday, the 7th, it grew still bigger, until it exceeded 12,000 letters. They came in by the sack, and overflowed from the offices into the boardroom. It was amazing. We cheered aloud and took our coats off.

We have always prided ourselves that every donation to the London Hospital is acknowledged on the day it arrives. Now, for the first time, we were unable to do so. It looked like three or four days before we could hope to do so. It has actually taken twenty workers eight days (including Sunday) till late at night. The normal staff was quite inadequate to deal with this vast total, and we cannot afford additional assistance. Other departments of the Hospital came to their assistance by lending such of their own members as could be spared, in some cases for a few hours. For days we have worked incessantly from 8 a.m. until midnight. What happened to the Hospital itself we did not know and did not care. It ran itself and proved how useless we all were. I wish those who complain that they have not received a reply could have seen us at work.

As each letter was opened the amount it contained was carefully recorded and marked on the letter. We found that with all our available resources we were not able to deal with more than 1,200 letters a day—that is to give a receipt and reply to each donor with a letter of thanks. Even at this great pressure we were, on the Tuesday evening, more than a fortnight behind in the work that remained to be done. And the tide of letters was still flowing.

The amounts sent varied from 5d. to £1,500, this last sum being forwarded anonymously, as were many hundreds of other gifts. The 5d. I have mentioned consisted of a threepenny piece and four halfpenny stamps from three donors. It is perfectly true that this came from Aberdeen. So the city is saved; there are three righteous citizens left.

I picked up a dozen letters at random, just as they had come in. There was one from a lighthouse keeper, others from Stornoway, Inverness, Bournemouth, Exeter, Poplar, Mayfair, Liverpool, Swansea, Clacton, the Isle of Man, and Antwerp, this last from two Englishmen who wrote saying that they were amusing themselves trying to tune in to the London Station when they heard the appeal. They sent me seventy-three half-crowns, one for every year of my age. Had

I known they were going to do this I might have said I was ninety-three.

Ex-service men gave nobly. The 'London' was the first hospital to take in wounded soldiers in the very early days of the War, before the Government was able to open other hospitals up and down the country. We know now that what we were able to do for those men was not forgotten. Among donations from ex-service men was a 5s. crown piece, which the sender said he carried as a mascot throughout the War. It had always brought him luck, and he sent it to me, hoping it would bring luck to the 'London.' One of my fellow-workers has bought it, and the good fellow shall keep his mascot.

Some of the donations I know represent a real sacrifice to the givers. There was one letter from a woman enclosing 5s., about which the writer said: 'I had saved this to buy my husband two climbing rose trees and a pint of sweet peas for our garden, but we have decided to give up these until next year.' One man said: 'Here is your half a crown, confound you, and bang goes my lunch to-morrow in the City.' Six old ladies in a Poor Law institution sent six penny stamps between them.

Every letter expressed a good wish. They came from all classes of the community, and while thousands of people said they regretted their inability to give more, some of the letters were truly touching. One man said the appeal was touching, and that it had 'touched' him to the extent of 'two quid,' which he did not forget to enclose. Another woman sent a diamond ring, which she asked should be sold on behalf of the fund, at the same time placing a reserve of 10s. on it which she herself would pay if the ring failed to fetch more. I can promise her it will be the means of eventually bringing much more than that sum to the Hospital.

One of the most gratifying incidents of the appeal was the response from old patients, people who have had experience of the Hospital. I cannot forget, also, one letter I received from an old schoolfellow of sixty-three years ago. It is, of course, physically impossible for me to reply personally to all the 20,000 people who sent money, though I am writing to as many as I possibly can. Like the staff, I have been working at the Hospital on most days from early morning until nearly midnight.

The adding machine which I mentioned in my appeal has been kept very busy, checking every amount as it was received and paid into the bank. I really do not know what we should have done without it.

My friend, Sir John Reith, the Director-General of the B.B.C., paid us a visit to see how the work was getting on. I explained the organization, and then I asked the two men (high officials in the Hospital) to tell Sir John how they could cheat if they PATRONAL festivals, far from dying out in these practical days, take a stronger hold on the popular imagination from year to year. Historians may dispute the birth-date, the birth-place and the authenticity of the life in question, but when they have done their worst they do not affect the festival one whit, for in such matters the people trust their hearts and in effect say with David: 'Thou hast made me wiser than my teachers.'

It is surprising, too, how distinctive the characters of the Saints are, as delineated by the stories and legends which cluster round their names. St. Patrick, with his power over snakes, is distinct from St. Andrew the fisherman, whose most charming characteristic is enshrined in his special Collect which tells that he followed 'without delay.' St. George is imperishably associated with the slaying of the Dragon.

St. David. It is somewhat felicitous that the Saint of Wales should bear the same name as the warrior-king who was also the sweet singer of Israel and whose skill on the harp first brought him to the Court, for Wales is a land of song and the harp is her most characteristic instrument. Many a Welsh lad, dreaming of the heroes of old, has heard of the exploits of David the King, and the mould in his mind has been used to receive the impress of the later national hero. St. David himself must have been trained as a Bard in his youth, and it is recorded of him that, when a student in Ty-Gwyn under Paul Hên, he committed to memory all the Psalms and Lessons for the year.

Like all great religious leaders, St. David was gifted with foresight in regard to events, with insight into character. He had the two necessary ingredients for greatness—Wisdom and Power. He knew and he acted. Thus the warring tribes came to respect him as one who could stretch the octave 'twixt the dream and the deed. One memorial to his powers of arbitration still survives in Gwent. The little church near Caerleon, called Llandewi Fach, was granted to him and dedicated to him on his settling a long-standing dispute between the neighbouring chiefs.

It was on March 1 that he left this earth in true Christian manner. He was in the church, now St. David's Cathedral, listening to the brethren singing the Psalms, when he gently passed away on the wings of the words 'Tolle me post Te' (Raise me after Thee) which he was repeating.

It is fitting that the March 1 celebration should be broadcast from the Cardiff Station over an area in Wales and the West Country in which St. David did so much of his work. For a time his portable shrine was removed to Glastonbury for veneration, and his influence can be seen so far South as Brittany, where many churches bear his name.

Much of his early life was spent, again like his prototype, in pastoral country. Drayton describes him in his 'Polyolbion IV' as living in the valley Ewias, amid the Hatterill Hills in Monmouthshire. It was here 'that reverend British saint to contemplation lived.'

And fed upon the leeks he gathered in the fields;
In memory of whom, in the revolving year,
The Welshmen, on his day, the sacred herb do wear.

To-day Welshmen are divided in their allegiance—not to St. David but to his emblems, the daffodil and the leek. How did the daffodil, known in Wales as 'Ceninien Pedr' (the Leek of Peter) come to be associated with St. David? Some say that it is because the daffodil is of the same family as the leek; others refer to the coincidence of St. Peter's and St. David's days in the old Welsh Calendars. Whatever the cause, the daffodil now finds much favour as St. David's flower and as the emblem of Wales. The Welsh League of Nations Union, which has taken so prominent a part in the establishing of World Peace, has chosen as its emblem the daffodil. Is it fanciful to believe that St. David, a peacemaker in a violent age, inspired this choice?

Written by Father PIERRE LHANDÉ, read by Father MARTINDALE

THE French priest whose address Father Martindale—himself one of the most successful of broadcast preachers—will read this afternoon is one of the most interesting characters in modern Paris. A Basque by birth, he has since the War devoted himself to work in a Paris that had hardly been touched before. Not the Paris-Soleil of magasins and restaurants, cafés and music-halls, that visitors and the average Parisian know; but the Paris-Noir outside the fortifications, known to the police as the abode of misery and crime and the haunt of the survivors of the Apaches, and the outer ring of Paris-Rouge, the post-war hovels where paganism and revolution reign.

THE parish of Stoke has a curious history, for in 1800 it comprised the whole of what is now the 'Five Towns,' as well as the borough of Newcastle-under-Lyme. Then came the tremendous expansion in local industry, and if the parish had not been reduced, the Rector would now have nearly a quarter of a million parishioners under his care.

DELIBES wrote the music for Victor Hugo's play Le roi s'amuse (which also supplied another composer with an opportunity, since Verdi's Biglietto is an Operatic treatment of it). The play was a gory and passionate production, but gave Delibes opportunity for some charming incidental music, as this Suite will show. Several of the pieces in it are in old dance forms—the brisk Galliard, the slow and stately Pavane, and the lively Passepied.

Concerto in B Minor Dvorak

DVORAK'S 'Cello Concerto is one of his best works, and one of the best existing works for the instrument. It is written in three separate Movements, and scored for a fairly large Orchestra.

FIRST MOVEMENT (Quick).—The First Main Tune is given, without preliminary, by Clarinets in their low, reedy register, joined at the third bar by Bassoons an octave lower.

This Tune is really a 'motto' Theme, dominating this Movement and recurring in the last one. In the present Movement it is gradually taken up and brought to a climax in the Full Orchestra.

Very soon after this has died down a Horn plays a splendid song-like Second Main Tune.

After a sudden climax, the Solo 'Cello enters with the First Main Tune. The rest of the Movement need not be described.

SECOND MOVEMENT (Not too slow).—The chief substance of this Movement consists in expressive, lyrical and decorative work for the soloist. The chief Tune opens in the Clarinet. The Solo 'Cello enters after the first phrase.

THIRD MOVEMENT (Moderately quick).—Dvorak's instinct for musical colour led him to open the Main Tune, at the start of the Finale, with Horns; indeed, the very nature of the Tune is obviously that of a Horn-call.

The Horns are answered by Oboe and Clarinet, and this is followed by a steady growth in the volume of sound.

A moderate climax develops, after which, the Solo 'Cello enters, with the Main Tune of the Movement.

There are many other tunes introduced in this Movement, but that just described is the one that should stick in one's mind, together with the 'motto' theme from the First Movement, softly referred to in the Finale.

Symphonic Poem, 'The Accursed Huntsman'

('Le Chasseur Maudit') Franck

THIS is a musical illustration of a kind of 'cautionary tale' by the German poet Bürger. (Scott, in his Wild Huntsman, gives an English version of the legend. Compare also the final section of Schönberg's Songs of Gurre). Franck has told the story in a preface to his score:—

"The Sabbath morn: from afar comes the sound of a joyous peal of Bells and the chants of a devout congregation. . . . Sacrilego! The savage

Count of the Rhine has sounded his horn. "Tally ho, tally ho!" the hunt sweeps over on field and plain and heath. "Stay, Count, I pray, and listen to the pious chant." "No. . . Tally ho, tally ho." "Tarry, Count, I implore thee, beware!" "No!" The chase passes on like a whirlwind.

"Suddenly the Count is alone. His horse refuses to advance another step. He blows his horn, but not a sound is heard. A grim voice curses him: "Blasphemer, thou shalt be hunted for ever by the hordes of Hell."

Sunday's Programmes continued (February 26)

Spanish Rhapsody Ravel

IN this Rhapsody in four sections, Ravel, who has long been in the forefront of living French composers, gives us a glimpse of Spanish life and scenes. He was born in the Lower Pyrenees, and must have absorbed, in his early days, something of the atmosphere of the Spanish countryside.

I. Prelude, To Night.—A little four-note rhythmic figure is begun by muted Violins and Violas. It persists all through the Movement—typifying, one may imagine, the dreamy stillness of night. The only clear Theme is that heard on Clarinets in octaves, soon after the opening (beginning with repeated descending notes on adjacent degrees of the scale).

String tremolos and harmonics, and glides from the Harp, help to enrich the picture.

II. Malaguena.—This is a graceful dance from Southern Malaga. Double Basses start a rhythmical phrase of three bars, which gives the key to the general character of the Dance. A Muted Trumpet has the chief tune (beginning with six repetitions of one note, in the three-time rhythm of taa tafatefe taa.)

Castanets, extra drums, cymbals and tambourines give point to the dance, which has many sudden changes of spirit.

One of these striking contrasts is provided by the little solo for Cor Anglais, which sounds quite sad. The repeated four-note figure of the Prelude is heard again immediately after this solo bit.

III. Habanera.—This is an earlier piece written when Ravel was twenty, and later on brought into the Rhapsody. The Dance has a rather lazy, gliding, swaying movement.

The First Main Tune is played by Oboe and Cor Anglais. It is marked Very slow, and with weary rhythm. Its alternation of two-note and three-note beats (both being of equal length) will be noticed.

Solo Violins and Violas have a Second Tune, that skips gracefully up and down.

IV. The Fair.—This is made of a multitude of little themes, as varied and diversely coloured as are the costumes of the crowd at a fair.

One of the most important of the themes is a brilliant fanfare-like one, using the taa tafatefe taa rhythm that was prominent in the Malaguena.

The working up of all the fragments is exciting. We get a remarkably vivid impression of the scene.

Ravel has succeeded in doing what every real artist must be able to do—'see the picture' and make us see it, too.

THERE is something romantic as well as pathetic about the work done by Manchester Station's Wireless for the Blind Fund which, since its inauguration at a concert in the Free Trade Hall in October, 1926, has given to blind people within an area of thirty miles of the Station the wireless sets which have put them in touch with a new life and a new world. Over three hundred sets have been installed by the Fund, the proceeds of which are handed over to a representative committee (President, the Lord Mayor of Manchester; Vice-President, the Mayor of Salford; Chairman, Alderman Kendall, J.P.). If this good work is to be continued at the present rate of progress, further funds are urgently needed.

Contributions should be sent either to the Town Clerk, Manchester, or to the Station Director, B.B.C., Orme Buildings, The Parsonage, Manchester.

OF the many varied activities of Virginia House Settlement, none has proved more successful than the work undertaken amongst the juvenile population of the district. The building has now a delightful nursery for the younger children, a gymnasium and a well-stocked library, besides a large hall where concerts and dances are regularly held.

But probably the event of the year to which the children most look forward is the Annual Holiday Camp at Maker, on behalf of which Viscount Astor will appeal this evening.

Twenty Thousand Pounds in Ten Minutes.

wanted to. They could not discover a way, and explained that the only person who could steal any of the money would be myself, as there was no check on me when opening the letters.

No sooner had Sir John left than we missed 10s. This upset the two officials sadly. The machine had registered 10s. over and above the amount of money that had been got ready for despatch to the bank, and although we searched the office, even to moving the desks and cupboards, we were unable to find it. A further check of the receipts showed that, despite our great care, 10s. had in some way or other been lost.

I tried to put matters right by offering to pay the 10s. myself, but they would not hear of it. Even now I am convinced that the 10s. will turn up from somewhere.

Please understand that I make no reflection on Sir John. I remember Mark Twain complaining that he saw on a newspaper contents bill:—

'Arrival of Mark Twain.

'Disappearance of the Gold Cup at Ascot.'

And so the arrival of Sir John and the disappearance of the 10s. have no connection, but he would have had the laugh of us if he had stayed. I put it down to the intervention of Providence to prevent our being cocksure.

As I close this letter which I write at your request, the amount is £10,106 (less that 10s.), and the number of donors approaches 20,000.

Thank you, everybody; thank you.
 KNUTSFORD,
 Chairman.

POWER!

THE Mammoth, of Pleistocene times, was one of the most powerful creatures ever known to man, being possessed of colossal reserves of strength and endurance.

Our "Siemens" Super-Radio Battery can equally be classed as a Mammoth among present-day H.T. Batteries. No other H.T. Dry Battery can give such wonderful service and show such reserves of power and endurance; and withal it is made up in such a manner that it is of convenient size and shape, and has a very pleasing appearance. It looks what it is—a product of sound design and super-excellent construction.

Does the Power Station keep your set going?

Does it supply you with music as well as light and other home comforts?

With the Met-Vick 5 Mains Set this is now possible. It is just plugged into a lamp socket or wall plug and switched on, like any other Electric Appliance, and all the little annoyances of accumulators that will run down, and H.T. batteries that cost so much and last such a short time, trouble you no more.

Inherently better than a battery operated set, the reproduction is so near perfection that to ask for more is hypercritical. Selectivity and range are outstanding features, and the controls, while quite simple to use, do respond to that little extra skill of the sympathetic operator which is so delightful.

With the Met-Vick 5, it is at last possible to obtain a wireless receiving set which will always give the satisfaction that only comes from really brilliant performance, and which will remain a constant source of pleasure and interest to all who hear it.

Ask your dealer for a copy of Brochure 7117/9, or write to the makers.

An Ellen Terry Programme

8 p.m., Monday, February 27.

On April 28, 1856, Ellen Terry first stepped into the glare of the footlights, which was to clothe her gloriously for threescore years. It was in Shakespeare that she first played, and under the management of Charles Kean, and the audience at the old Princess's Theatre, on that April night, a lifetime ago, were privileged to see the debut of the greatest Shakespearian actress of their century or of ours. Her Ophelia (to Irving's Hamlet), her Portia, her Beatrice, gave her a rank of her own amongst British actresses; and since her final retirement in 1920 she has become an almost legendary embodiment of all that is greatest and noblest in the world of the stage.

A Portrait specially drawn by Ginsbury.

Ellen Terry.

By James Agate.

Famous not only as the dramatic critic of both The Sunday Times and the B.B.C., but also as an essayist of the theatre, James Agate is the very man to write of Ellen Terry in connection with the anniversary programme to be broadcast tonight (February 27). Mr. Agate is also to introduce the Ellen Terry Programme from the Studio.

IS it too much to say that, to those of us who have been from our youth up playgoers first and civil servants, merchants, judges, doctors, policemen, bus conductors afterwards, the last three decades of the Nineteenth Century were coloured chiefly by Ellen Terry? There was Irving, of course, who alternately impressed and frightened, as cathedral front or grinning gargoyle will impress and frighten. But the grace and the sunniness and the happiness of those years, if they centre in any one figure at all, centre in the great lady who was born eighty years ago. Let it be said at once that 'eighty' is to reckon not by the spirit but only after the gross manner in which we must compute the years. There has never been a time, even within the most recent recollection, when Ellen Terry was not the youngest, as in her heyday she was the loveliest, of human creatures. Some little time ago, on the staircase of a theatre, I overheard in an astonishing colloquy a remark which, addressed by any other daughter to any other mother, might have sounded unfilial. The remark was: 'Mother, if you persist in being naughty I shall smack you!' It was a bitterly cold day, an east wind was blowing, and it appeared that the great actress was insisting upon going round to the stage door to congratulate a beginner upon a beginning of promise. I had no hope that Miss Edy Craig would prove victor in the unequal contest.

THE words 'great actress' stare at me from the paper upon which I have just written them. Well may they stare, for if one wanted to find two words which should exactly express what Ellen Terry was not, those are the two. Of tragedy she had no inkling, as those who remember her winsome Lady Macbeth have always admitted. Of mannered, artificial comedy she was never the mistress, for the reason that artifice died in her presence as fire is put out by the sun. What, then, was Ellen Terry? I think one may put it that she was all the heroines of Shakespeare's comedies, who, it is convenient to remember, are all so many natural actresses. Consider how Viola, Imogen, Rosalind take to pretending to be something other than their natural selves without making the least bit of a success of it, and you have here the key to the art of Ellen Terry. That she never played Rosalind does not prevent the Rosalind she would have made from being incontestably the best impersonation of that divine creature. And she was, of course, the only Juliet.

Thou trumpet set for Shakespeare's lips to blow!

was foolishly written of Henry Irving, who had nothing of the trumpet in his whole range of voice. But I always think of Ellen Terry as some reed through which came murmuring the heavenliest of Shakespeare's verse. Edmond Rostand, the author of Cyrano de Bergerac, wrote of another actress:—

Mais aussi tu sais bien, Sarah, que quelquefois
Tu sens furtivement se poser, quand tu joues,
Les lèvres de Shakespeare aux bagues de tes doigts.

But we know better. We know that it was Ellen Terry upon whose fingers the lips of the poet, could he have seen her, would have been reverently laid.

ELLEN TERRY AS 'LADY MACBETH.'
John Sargent's magnificent portrait, which hangs in the Tate Gallery, Millbank.

A favourite and foolish pastime in those far-away days was to debate which of Ellen Terry's parts was her best. Some were for Portia, whose sententiousness the actress cut out in pure gold and whose rather dreary wit she transmuted into the purest sparkle. Others were for Ophelia; so passionate were these that they would declare the part never to have been played before and impossible ever to be played again. Yet others were for Queen Katherine in Henry VIII, which was all that the world has ever held of queenly dignity drenched with woe. Others again preferred Henrietta Maria in Wills's Charles I, an unbearably pathetic performance; while some few were for Olivia, whose leave-taking of her little brother and sister caused too many tears to flow too early in the action. For myself her best part was Beatrice, which I saw her play when well over fifty, with dazzling brilliance and incomparable verve. What breeding, what wit, what womanly tenderness! With what infinite skill she avoided the pitfall into which every other actress in this part has tumbled headlong—that of being arch. I shall never forget her motion across the stage at the words:—

'For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs Close by the ground, to hear our conference.'

Or the royal rage with which she took the aisle of the church at the retort:—

'Yea, and I will weep a while longer.'

And, of course, it is this play which enshrines the whole of this actress's genius in the line:—

'No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.'

TWENTY years ago a great dramatic critic said that Ellen Terry's 'power of endearing herself across footlights is, in itself, such as to earn for her an indisputable title to greatness.' But we must not believe that the qualities which I have tried to suggest, the dancing gaiety, the sunny charm, and all that is meant by 'rose in an English hedge,' were not subject to infinite supervision and elaboration. Ellen Terry could act only in one way, perhaps, but upon that way she expended an infinity of care. Take two extracts from her diary. On Jan. 5, 1891, she wrote:—

'Revival of Much Ado About Nothing. I did some parts better, I think—made Beatrice a nobler woman. Yet I failed to please myself in the Cathedral Scene.'

Two days later comes the following entry:

'Played the Church Scene all right at last. More of a blaze.'

Another two days, and then:

'I must make Beatrice more flashing at first, and softer afterwards. This will be an improvement upon my old reading of the part. She must be always merry and by turns scornful, tormenting, vexed, self-communing, absent, melting, teasing, brilliant, indignant, sad-merry, thoughtful, withering, gentle, humorous, and gay, Gay, Gay! Protecting (to Hero), motherly, very intellectual—a gallant creature and complete in mind and feature.'

I have given the above in full because it shows the fine workings of a fine mind. Whether Ellen Terry was a great actress or not there can be no doubt that she was a very great artist, exacting in self-discipline and tireless in her search after Beauty.

Even the shortest account of this 'Great

Portrait of a Lady.

The author of this 'portrait' has known Ellen Terry since he was a boy. In a few words he has succeeded in 'painting' a vivid impression of a very great and lovable personality.

THAT she is immortal is already a commonplace. But if you would know the secret of that immortality, I think you will be hard put to it to find any solution that will be altogether satisfactory. A great actress? Of course. But there have been others. A beautiful woman? Yes. But many women of her generation were greater beauties. A charming person? Her charm has become proverbial, but it can hardly be termed a patent of immortality.

One falls back inevitably upon that over-worked word 'personality,' wishing that no one had ever thought of using it before. For here is surely a case, an overwhelming instance, of the triumph of that elusive, indefinable, almost terrifyingly personal, quality, which we are compelled to call 'personality,' while we know that no expression is adequate to convey our real meaning; the quality in an individual, which, unsupported by any conscious effort, by any studied pose or eccentricity, compels that individual—willy-nilly—to stand out among ordinary men and women; the quality which immediately compels a general recognition that it contains within it something rare, magnetic, vital—immortal. I think it is to the owners of such personality that we must credit the assumption that in all of us there is some spark of the divine fire. Only in most of us that spark is well damped down. With them 'the sparks fly upwards.'

The first time I saw Ellen Terry I was a small boy. She had always been something of a legend—like 'The Snow Queen' or Helen of Troy. There was an almost literary quality about the legend; a mixture of romance, beauty, and triumph that could not be quite human. And for the first time to see the protagonist of this legend in the flesh was terrific. It was a Christmas Day. There was a large party of nice, ordinary people, in a large, rather overheated drawing-room. And into the middle of this extremely conventional setting there came, without any of the incidentals of a stage entrance, an old lady, in long black clothes, and with a large black handbag, stooping over a stick. When she had sat down you saw a face that might have been an incarnation of a Rembrandt portrait. It was Ellen Terry.

The fairy-queen-wreathed-in-laurel legend was in that instant blown sky high. And yet there was no possibility, not for an instant, of disillusion. One was—there is no other word for it—fascinated. The other people remained as before. They were just as nice, just as amusing. But for the moment one did not care about them any more. The old lady in the chair dominated the room. She talked a good deal, and laughed a great deal, and was less like an actress than you can imagine. But you felt 'Of course, Ellen Terry would be exactly like that.' She fulfilled the expectation of genius simply by coming into a room and sitting down in it.

A MESSAGE FROM ELLEN TERRY

Ellen Terry.

By James Agate.

Dear,' as Max Beerbohm called her, must contain some allusion to her extraordinary sense of fun. Her extremely interesting 'Story of My Life' bubbles over with wit and fun. She tells us in one breath how she played Ophelia in Bolton sheeting and rabbit, how she would slide down the banisters from her dressing-room to go on for the Mad Scene, what Irving's face looked like when he caught her doing it, how once and once only she played the part really well—in Chicago!—and how when she played the Mad Scene for the last time, and for Nellie Farren's benefit at Drury Lane in 1896, she was 'just damnable.' She complains that the poems written in her honour contain heart, feeling, and everything else except poetry! She would argue from the characters of Goneril, Regan, and Cordelia that Lear married twice! Nobody, she tells us, could ever stop Irving reciting the Dream of Eugene Aram, especially after supper. And she preferred the Lyceum Faust to Gounod's for the reason that the music was better. . . .

And now my space is up and I find that I have not begun to set down one-tenth of all I think about Ellen Terry. But if my space were ten times greater, I feel that I should still have to begin!

Two Sonnets to Ellen Terry.

By Oscar Wilde.

Poets, as well as painters, have celebrated the beauty and genius of Ellen Terry.

To Ellen Terry as 'Portia.'

'I marvel not Bassanio was so bold
To peril all he had upon the lead,
Or that proud Aragon bent low his head,
Or that Morocco's fiery heart grew cold:
For in that gorgeous dress of beaten gold,
Which is more golden than the golden sun,
No woman Veronese looked upon
Was half so fair as thou whom I behold.
Yet fairer when with wisdom as your shield
The sober-suited lawyer's gown you donned,
And would not let the laws of Venice yield
Antonio's heart to that accursed Jew—
O Portia! take my heart; it is thy due:
I think I will not quarrel with the bond.'

As Henrietta Maria in 'Cromwell.'

In the lone tent, waiting for victory,
She stands with eyes marred by the mists
of pain,
Like some wan lily overdrenched with rain;
The clamorous clang of arms, the ensanguined sky,
War's ruin, and the wreck of chivalry,
To her proud soul no common fear can bring;
Bravely she tarried for her Lord, the King,
Her soul aflame with passionate ecstasy.
O hair of gold! O crimson lips! O face
Made for the luring and the love of man!
With thee I do forget the toll and stress,
The loveless road that knows no resting-place,
Time's straitened pulse, the soul's dread
weariness,
My freedom, and my life republican!

2.30 Miss RHODA POWER: 'Boys and Girls of Other Days—VII, Stolen for the Stage'

THE Elizabethan theatre was a very different affair from the theatre that we know today, and the stage as a profession was an even stranger affair. In this talk Miss Rhoda Power will describe the experiences of a boy who, quite involuntarily, becomes a player in Shakespeare's time.

3.5 'Great Stories from History and Mythology—Sir Galahad'

THE ideal of chivalry comprised most of the Christian virtues, but practically its standards were not so high. In the Round Table of legend, however, each quality has some particular exemplar—Lancelot the warrior par excellence, Tristram the lover, and so forth. In the same way, Galahad is the personification of purity, and his name remains a household word to this day.

AS every year comes round, the face of England is swept by a natural phenomenon unknown to the calendar, inexplicable by the astronomers or the meteorologists, unprovided against by the Police Regulations—Spring Cleaning. Every year the cartoonists and the humorists and the comedians celebrate the woes of the breadwinner when the tornado strikes his home; yet undeterred, the housewives persist. Since Spring Cleaning cannot be suppressed, even husbands will admit that it had better be well done, and they will encourage their wives to listen to Mrs. Cottington-Taylor's talk this afternoon.

Reminiscences of
Herbert Spencer

THE name of Herbert Spencer seems to recall all the memories of the massive intellectualism of the Victorian age, so remote from the temper of the post-war world; and it is true that Spencer was born over a century ago. Yet he died so recently as in 1903 (his career over-running the reign of Victoria at both extremes) and, though his 'Social Statics' appeared in 1850, his great 'Synthetic Philosophy' was only finished in 1896, and Spencer was still in the full vigour of his powers within the lifetime of most of us. Mrs. Sidney Webb, who gives this talk, is well known as an economist and an authority on social history.

First Performance

(Conducted by the COMPOSER)

CONSTANT LAMBERT is a young composer, not much over twenty-one. His Ballet, Romeo and Juliet, was recently produced by the Diaghilev Russian Ballet.

Rio Grande is a setting of a poem by Edith Sitwell, beginning—

On the Rio Grande
They don't dance no sara-bande...

What they dance instead is suggested in the music, which, we are told, brings in fox-trot and Charleston rhythms.

A PLAYHOUSE OF SHAKESPEARE'S TIME.

In her talk from London this afternoon, Miss Rhoda Power will describe the Elizabethan theatre. Here is the old Fortune Theatre in Golden Lane, a typical sixteenth-century theatre of the square type, built round an open courtyard-like coaching inn. Note the balcony at the back of the stage.

THE MOST INTERESTING WAY OF LEARNING A LANGUAGE.

What Readers Say of the New Pelman Method of Learning French, Italian, Spanish and German.

EVERYONE who has adopted the new Pelman method of learning French, Italian, Spanish and German agrees that it is not only the "best" but is also the easiest and most interesting way of mastering a Foreign Language that has ever been invented.

This is very important, because there is no doubt that one of the reasons why so many people fail to learn a Foreign Language is that, after a few lessons, they begin to lose interest and are bored by the pages and pages of grammatical rules and exceptions that they are usually required to learn before being brought into contact with the language itself.

No Grammatical Difficulties.

This is not the case with the Pelman method, which enables you to learn French, Italian, Spanish, or German without a preliminary struggle with a mass of dull and difficult grammatical rules and exceptions. It introduces you to the actual living language straight away, and you pick up the grammar almost unconsciously as you go along.

This makes this method extremely interesting, as the following letters, from readers who have adopted it, indicate:—

"My progress in the French Course has been most satisfactory. I cannot speak too highly of your excellent and fascinating method of teaching." (B. 195)

"I have found the Italian Course as interesting and absorbing as the French Course. I am more than satisfied with the progress made, and consider your course is excellent." (I.B. 202)

"Having reached this stage in my course I feel I must say how interesting the study of the Spanish language is made. How many students of the language (learning in the 'old' way) can say with truth that it fascinates them, and that they cannot leave it, but want to know what is coming in the next few pages? Very few, I am sure. The ease with which the new words are acquired is no small characteristic of the Pelman method. They seem to 'stick' without any conscious effort. In short, the course is 'great'!" (S.W. 190)

"I can say with confidence that the claims made by the Institute as to the value of the course in German are not exaggerated. The interest of the study is maintained throughout." (G.S. 270)

"I think your method is the pleasantest method of learning a language imaginable. I always found languages a very difficult subject at school, but have had no difficulty whatever with the (French) Course." (P. 684)

"I find the (Italian) lessons fascinating. The more I read them the more I see how exceedingly clever the teaching is." (I.G. 145)

"I wish to tell you how very much I have enjoyed the Spanish Course through the Pelman Institute. I think the Course is most interesting and fascinating, and I thoroughly enjoyed the lessons." (S.H. 152)

"I find your (German) system most ingeniously arranged. It is wonderful how rarely one has any difficulty in grasping the meaning of the new words. The 'no translation' system saves endless time and gives one a better grasp of the language in a much shorter time than the older methods." (G.C. 256)

"I am delighted with the progress I have made. I have learned more French this last four months than I did in four years. I enjoyed the Course thoroughly." (W. 149)

"In three months I have already learnt more Italian than I should have learnt in many years of study in the usual way." (I.M. 124)

"Your method of teaching German is excellent, and I am delighted with my progress. I find that I never forget a word I have learnt, as it has been acquired so naturally." (G.C. 104)

Matriculation Passed.

"I was able to pass London Matriculation (taking Spanish) last June, with minimum labour and no drudgery, although I was always reckoned a 'dud' at languages." (S.B. 373)

Hundreds of similar letters could be quoted, and many others will be found in the book describing this method which any reader can obtain to-day, free of cost, by writing to the address printed below.

The Direct Method.

The Pelman method of learning languages is what is known as the "direct" method. That is to say, it enables you to learn French in French, German in German, Italian in Italian, and Spanish in Spanish, thus avoiding all translation from one language into another. As the writer of one of the letters quoted above points out, this "saves endless time." Moreover it leads to increased fluency in speaking, for it does away with that particular "hesitation" which arises from the habit of mentally translating English phrases into their foreign equivalents.

No Vocabularies.

This method enables you to think in the particular language you are learning and using.

There are no vocabularies to be learnt by heart—parrot-fashion. You learn the words you need by using them, and in such a way that they stay in your mind without effort.

This method enables you in a very short while to talk and write in a foreign tongue, to keep in touch with contemporary thought in France, Germany, Italy and Spain, to pass examinations in Foreign Languages and to read foreign books (many of which have never been translated and all of which, especially in the case of poetry, lose much of their charm in an English version), magazines, scientific and technical journals and newspapers. It also enables you to listen with enhanced enjoyment to "talks" in foreign languages broadcasted over the "wireless."

There are no classes to attend. This new method enables you to learn a Foreign Language in your spare time, in your own home, and in from one-third to one-half the usual time.

Write for Free Book To-day.

This remarkable new method of learning languages is described in four little books, entitled, respectively, "How to Learn French," "How to Learn Italian," "How to Learn German," and "How to Learn Spanish."

You can have a free copy of any one of these books by writing for it to-day (mentioning the particular book you want) to the Pelman Institute (Languages Department), 95, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1.

State which book you want and a copy will be sent you by return, gratis and post free. Write or call to-day.

SHORT SYNOPSIS OF THE SONGS.
'The Muse': The Muse loved me in my youth. She placed the seven reeds in my eager fingers, and sometimes, as a reward, she would play them herself. Then what wondrous melodies enraptured my soul.
'The Valse': How can I forget that hour when we danced together? I prayed that it might last for ever.
'O'er thee I bend': How I am thrilled when the tempest howls, and the waves roar. Then all my soul is flame and fire, born to Heaven on the wings of rapture.
'Verzweiflung' (Despair): The Church bell tolls the knell of my happiness. What shall I do? I have no peace, no rest, my heart is sore.
'Die Quelle' (The Well): A maiden went to the well. A youth met her there. It was late when she returned. 'Do not scold me, Mother; the birds were singing so beautifully.'
'Frisch gesungen' (Gaily sing): Waste no time in fretting if worry and pain are thy lot, but gaily go singing, and all shall be well.

- DEATH OF VALENTINE
Marguerite KITTY RICHARDS
Martha GLADYS PERRING
Valentine FREDERICK SLADE
Chorus

THE Kermesse Scene forms the Second Act of the Opera. Outside the city gates a fair ('Kermesse') is being held. Soldiers, students and townspeople are making merry.

THE next item, the Duet, forms the end of Act I. Mephistopheles asks the aged Faust what he yearns for, and Faust replies 'Be mine the delight of beauty's caresses.' Mephistopheles promises to restore his youth—at the price of his soul. As Faust hesitates, the devil conjures up a vision of Marguerite. Faust, his ardour aroused, signs the contract, and is transformed by Mephistopheles into a youth.

IN Act Four Marguerite, spurned in her downfall by her friends, goes to church, Mephistopheles gibes at her. Valentine, Marguerite's soldier brother, returns with his comrades from the war. He finds Mephistopheles singing a mock serenade to his sister, and fights a duel with him. Valentine falls mortally wounded, cursing his sister.

- SOCIETY'S CHORUS
Anvil Chorus
Miserere Scene
Leonora KITTY RICHARDS
Manrico TOM O'LEARY
Duet, 'Home to our mountains'
Azucena NANCY GRAINGER
Manrico TOM O'LEARY

THE famous Anvil Chorus is raised at the opening of the Second Act, in which the gypsies are at work in their camp.

THE Miserere is sung in the last Act. The scene is a wing of a Palace, with at one side a tower. Manrico, the Troubadour, has been seized by his enemy and confined in a dungeon. A chorus within sings the Miserere, and the death bell tolls. Manrico, from his cell, sings of his longing for death, whilst his dear one, Leonora, utters her fears. If she cannot rescue him, she is determined to poison herself.

THE duet comes at one of the most pathetic moments in the Opera. In the last scene of all, the hapless Manrico, imprisoned, is awaiting death. His mother Azucena is with him. Her mind begins to wander, and she imagines that they are free again, and that 'Home to our mountains we yet shall go.'

SEND no money, but post the coupon below to-day for the Free Illustrated Booklet describing the ten delightful volumes of "The Children's Encyclopedia," edited by Arthur Mee.

When your Children ask you

Why have the eggs of birds so many colours?

Why is the fire hot?

Why do they photograph a man's finger prints?

"What makes a rainbow?"—"How do fire-works get their colours?"—"Why can we see through glass?"—"Where are the stars in the day-time?"—"Why does the kettle sing?"

Give them the true answer. You will find it in the ten volumes of "The Children's Encyclopedia." Children's minds are hungry for knowledge just as their bodies are hungry for food.

Your boys and girls look to you as the source of knowledge. They would not ask those searching questions unless they believed you could answer. Do not let them be disappointed. You are their ideal of what a father or mother ought to be. Do not let that ideal be shattered. The surest way to keep your children's love and trust as they grow up is to share in their intellectual life and to make them feel that if they go to you in any difficulty you can and will help them.

"Let's find the answer in the CHILDREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA"
 Edited by ARTHUR MEE

That is the way to deal with the problems the children bring you when you cannot answer "out of your head." The 10 splendid volumes of "The Children's Encyclopedia" will enable you to satisfy the eager, healthy curiosity of those young minds. No book has ever been written that meets the needs of children so perfectly. It is so clearly and simply written that it can be understood by the youngest school-child. It is so scientifically accurate that even the grown-ups can learn much from its fascinating pages. Thousands of beautiful illustrations add immensely to its educational value, since children understand best what they can see.

4.15 Mr. J. H. DRIBERG: 'The Proper Study of Mankind: An Introduction to Anthropology'

THIS is the second of Mr. Driberg's three talks on the fascinating science of anthropology—the study of man's culture at different stages of development, so many of which coexist side by side in the world of today. This afternoon he will discuss what constitutes, from the anthropological point of view, the organic unity of any society; how far the common element is to be sought in bodily structure, language, custom, belief, social organization, and so on.

We are requested to state that the two illustrations to Mr. Driberg's talks reproduced in the pamphlet on Special Talks to Secondary Schools (pp. 13 and 14) are the work of Miss Pearl Binder, and are taken from her illustrations to Mr. Driberg's forthcoming book, 'The People of the Small Arrow.'

4.30 WILLIAM HODGSON'S MARBLE ARCH
PAVILION ORCHESTRA (Continued)

5.0 Miss ANN SPICE: 'A Bookshelf of Old Favourites: "The Tower of London," by Harrison Ainsworth'

SCOTT founded the vogue of the historical novel, and Harrison Ainsworth took advantage of it. Without the immense assiduity of research that Scott brought to the business, and equally without overloading his novels with introductions, prefaces, and historical notes, as Scott was apt to do, he turned out a number of excellent stories that were best-sellers in their day, and have still a certain popularity, particularly 'The Tower of London,' of which Miss Ann Spice will talk this afternoon.

7.0 Sir PERCIVAL WILKINSON: 'The Road
Scheme of the Joint Committee'

HELEN HENSCHEL

sings Schumann's songs in the Foundations of Music series this week.

THE boom in motor traffic has resulted in a very heavy increase in road accidents, and it is felt that some concerted effort should be made to provide a thorough scheme for the provision of First Aid. The Joint Council of the Order of St. John and the British Red Cross Society has accordingly prepared such a scheme, which Sir Percival Wilkinson, who is Secretary-General of the Order, will explain to listeners in this talk.

7.15 THE FOUNDATIONS OF MUSIC

SCHUMANN'S SONGS

Sung by HELEN HENSCHEL (Soprano)

7.25 Professor A. Y. CAMPBELL: 'Greek Plays for Modern Listeners—I, The General Character of a Greek Tragedy'

(S.B. from Liverpool)

THE EXECUTION OF JANE.

This spirited picture is from one of George Cruikshank's illustrations to the original edition of 'The Tower of London,' Harrison Ainsworth's romance, of which Miss Ann Spice will talk this afternoon.

THE appeal of classical Greek drama is, at first sight, somewhat incomprehensible to the average man, yet Greek tragedy is the constant reading of a great number of people, and more Greek plays are performed every year. In these talks Professor Campbell, who holds the Chair of Greek at Liverpool University, will explain how classical drama differs from that of our own time, and how it should be approached to enjoy it fully.

TO the sadness in certain parts of the Symphony may be added this note of pathos—that its composer did not live to know how extremely popular his work was to become; for within three months of completing it, death came to him. In the last Movement (Slow and lamenting, then somewhat quicker), the moods pass through pathos and pity to final despair.

From Birmingham

A happening of long ago, by J. E. HAROLD TERRY With songs by ARTHUR SCOTT CRAVEN, and music by HOWARD CARR
Presented by STUART VINDEN

The Maid IDA GILBERT
The Man HENRY BUTLIN
The Villain EDWIN TURNER
The Wayfarer CUTHBERT FORD

The scene is the parlour of 'The Pigeon Pie' over 150 years ago. A cosy room, oak panelled, with heavy beams running athwart the ceiling,
it has a large, open fireplace and ingle-nook.

Upon a rack behind the bar are bottles, quaintly shaped, and shining pewter mugs. The room is in complete darkness save for the light cast by the fire, and for the moonbeams which come intermittently through the small latticed window.

The Maid enters, bearing a lighted taper and singing snatches of an old love song. Lighting the candles above the mantel, she busies herself with bottles and mugs. The latch of the door is lifted and with a glad cry she runs to meet the incomer.

A THEATRE OF ANCIENT GREECE.

This evening at 7.25 Professor A. Y. Campbell will broadcast the first of a series of talks on 'Greek Plays for Modern Listeners.' This picture of the Greek Theatre at Epidauros (one of the best preserved of them all) gives a good idea of the surroundings in which the masterpieces of classical drama were first produced.

2.50 Musical Interlude

3.0 Mr. J. C. STOBART and Miss MARY SOMER-VILLE, 'Stories in Poetry—VII. New Ballads'
THE ballad, one of the oldest and most truly popular forms of English poetry, has never died. Printing only revived it, and after the broadsheet came the literary ballad—Keats's
'Belle Dame Sans Merci,' 'The Ancient Mariner,'
'John Gilpin,' Kipling's 'Barrack-Room
Ballads,' and the rest, of which Mr. Stobart and Miss Somerville will speak this afternoon.

3.30 Musical Interlude

3.45 Captain L. F. ELLIS, 'Our Interest in Good Government—I. What would happen if all government suddenly stopped?'

NOW that the State has grown to such enormous dimensions, the ordinary private citizen, who only comes in direct contact with the central Government at two or three points, is apt to resent paying taxes to support a Government that seems remote and meaningless to him.
In this series of talks Captain Ellis, who is Secretary to the National Council of Social Service, will remind us how much we really owe to government (quite apart from the political complexion and activities of the Government actually in power).

7.0 Sir RICHARD LUCE, 'Malmesbury Abbey'

MALMESBURY ABBEY is so celebrated and so historic that it seems unthinkable that it should be allowed to disappear, but, nevertheless, the ancient fabric is now in danger of destruction. In this talk Sir Richard Luce, who is himself a native of Malmesbury, will describe the danger and the steps that are being taken to counter it.

7.15 THE FOUNDATIONS OF MUSIC
SCHUMANN'S SONGS
Sung by HELEN HENSCHER (Soprano)

7.25 Professor A. V. HILL, 'Speed, Strength and Endurance in Sport—I. Muscles and Nerves'

ORGANIZED athletics are at least as old as Homer, but it is only recently that they have been seriously investigated from the scientific point of view.

It is an absorbing
study: how much power
is exerted by an athlete
running 'the hundred' in even time, the 'economy curve' of a runner, the absolute limit that Nature imposes on human exertion, and so on. Professor Hill is both a distinguished scientist, who won the Nobel Prize for Medicine in 1922, and himself an athlete, and in the series of talks of which this is the first he will explain the physiological conditions that determine athletic success.

Tally Ho! Spring Meet of the Fair Sex.
Bachelors—to your burrows!

From the Hunting point of view, this Meet is bound to be a great success.
Bachelor foxes abound,
but are, however, wlier than ever. As soon as they scent the hounds, they go to earth, good and proper, and when it comes to 'digging
them out,' well—dynamite
is almost necessary.

Hark away! Mistress
Peggy O'Neil leads, and there are not likely to be any stragglers at the 'KILL'
—if there is one!

Brer Fox confers with his brethren, and they are unanimously determined to guard (their brushes and themselves) against all corners!

Yoicks! Then likewise
—Tallyho!

WE in this country are proud to remember that the foundations of keyboard music were laid by sixteenth-century British musicians—Byrd, Farnaby, and the other Tudor and Elizabethan composers. Then this supremacy passed to the Continent. Scarlatti the younger was a great pioneer in writing for the keyboard. He brought a new technique to harpsichord music, doing away with the exaggerated ornamentation then in vogue, and making the hands move about the keys with greater freedom.

ARE YOU LOSING WEIGHT ?

It may betoken Danger.

The first thing a doctor does, when an otherwise healthy man or woman starts losing weight, is to suspect that something is organically wrong, to fear that serious disease is imminent.

Now is the time to stop it. Correct the cause of the loss of weight and Nature itself will have a chance to defeat disease. If you're losing weight for no apparent reason, be advised. Start taking Cod Liver Oil to-day. Cod Liver Oil is the richest known source of the essential life-giving, flesh-producing elements. It's the best thing you could possibly take if you need to put on weight.

But don't try to take it in its old fishy tasting, smelly form. Take it in its new form. McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets. McCoy's Tablets are simply the valuable body-building elements extracted from the Cod Liver Oil, and concentrated in little sugar-coated tablets, with no taste, smell nor unpleasant after-effects. They're easy to carry and easy to take, but they're amazing in their results. Slip a box in your pocket to-day, and if after 30 days' treatment as prescribed you haven't put on at least 3 lbs. and are feeling fitter, stronger, better in every way, the makers will refund your money.

Any chemist will recommend McCoy's 1/3 and 3/- the box. But insist on McCoy's Tablets, the original and only genuine. Refuse imitations. In case of difficulty, send direct to McCoy's laboratories, Norwich.

3.0 A LIGHT SYMPHONY CONCERT
THE STATION ORCHESTRA, conducted by WARWICK BRAITHWAITE

Overture to 'Coriolanus' Beethoven
The 'Midi' ('Midday') Symphony Haydn
Suite, 'Carmen' Bizet

'THE MIDI' is one of Haydn's fairly early works (it was written when he was twenty-nine). The meaning of the title is obscure. He uses a scheme of orchestration which

who this evening broadcasts from London the first of a most interesting series of talks on the scientific investigation of speed, strength and endurance in sport.

was adopted in Concertos about that time—the scheme of writing for a little group of three Strings (two Violins and a 'Cello' as well as for the full Orchestra, and occasionally letting one or more members of the little body (the 'concertante' group, as it is called) play in a more or less 'soloist' capacity—working in with the rest of the Orchestra, but contributing their individual, slighter quality of tone as a contrasting element.

Fourth Concerto Grosso, in F Handel
HANDEL'S Great Concertos ('Concerti Grossi') are not Concertos in the modern meaning of works for (usually) one Soloist and an Orchestra.

Handel generally used an Orchestra of Stringed instruments and one or two Harpsichords, and divided it into two groups of players. One group consisted of two Violins and a 'Cello,' and the other comprised the remainder of the Orchestra. One Harpsichord supported each group.

7.45 ST. DAVID'S EVE

A Programme of Welsh Music arranged by E. T. DAVIES

(Picture on page 409.)

THE AUGMENTED STATION ORCHESTRA, conducted by E. T. DAVIES and T. H. MORRISON
Welsh Rhapsody German

THIS work, first produced at the Cardiff Festival of 1904, is built in four sections, roughly corresponding to the four Movements, of a Symphony, though it has not quite the close development of themes that generally characterizes such a work.

The Main Tunes of the four sections (which do not require very detailed analysis) are those of Welsh songs.

I. 'Loudly proclaim o'er land and sea
This is the home of liberty.'

This strikes a martial, patriotic note. An urgent rhythm pulses through the Movement (three-quarters note followed by quarter-note expresses its swing). This rhythm is the basis of one of the Tunes (the Second). An incidental Tune (on Clarinet and Horn) is in quiet contrast. It is in the style of a hymn-tune. This section runs straight into—

II. Here is the part of the work which corresponds to the lively Scherzo of a Symphony. Two tunes are treated—Hunting the Hare and The Bells of Aberdovey. The ingenious composer, always at his best in light, sparkling music, makes them play all kinds of games, combining, appearing in longer or shorter notes than at first, and so on.

A touch of the Aberdovey tune in the Minor key changes the mood for—

Wednesday's Programmes continued (February 29)

III. A bit of Clarinet solo brings the plaintive tune, David of the White Rock, on Oboes and Cellos, muted Strings accompanying. This section ends extremely softly, and almost before we are aware of it we are at the last part.

IV. Fragments of The Men of Harlech are heard from here, there and everywhere in the Orchestra, and then the whole is given out, still softly. The excitement is cleverly worked up, a subsidence for a few moments leading to a still bigger climax, when the whole orchestra is soon glorying in the March. Then the pace quickens, and the end is reached in a magnificent outburst of triumphant joy.

MABEL PARRY (Soprano), with Orchestra
Welsh Modal Air, 'Y Gwydd' (The Weaver)
arr. E. T. Davies

Welsh Folk Songs:
Ble 'rwyd ti yn myned (A Welsh version of 'Where are you going, my pretty maid?')
arr. E. T. Davies

Robin Goch (Red Robin).... arr. Hubert Davies

Welsh Folk Dance Tunes:
Y Gelynen (The Holly) arr. E. T. Davies
Croen y ddafed ielen (The Yellow Sheep Skin).....

String Quartet:
Yr Eos Lais (The Nightingale)... E. T. Davies
Quintet for Piano and String Quartet, founded on the Welsh tune, 'Hobed yr Hilon'
Kenneth Harding

KATHLEEN WASHBOURNE (Violin)
The Lark Ascending Vaughan Williams

THIS 'Romance' for Solo Violin and Orchestra was inspired by George Meredith's poem beginning:—

He rises and begins to round,
He drops the silver chain of sound
Of many links without a break,
In chirrup, whistle, slur and shake.

The whole piece is extremely delicate. It is allied to the poem in spirit more than in structure. The only formal point worth noting is that the music begins with a Cadenza (a free rhapsodical passage), whereas, these informal flights usually occur towards the end of a work. The orchestration is very light, the strings having the mutes on throughout.

TOM PICKERING (Tenor)
Songs with Harp and String Accompaniment:

Seven Songs on Welsh Poems in the Cywydd metre by Dafydd ap Gwilym and others
Vaughan Thomas

Y Nos (Night); Y Gwlith (The Dew); Miwsig (Music); Elen (Ellen); Dau Filgi (Two Greyhounds); Claddu'r Bardd o Gariad (The Poet's Burial); Hiraeth am yr Haf (The Longing for Summer)

Hull.

A Farewell Recital, before he leaves for a tour in the Dominions, will be given by Roy Ellett, the pianist, at 8.30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 6. Earlier the same evening a talk on 'The Fishing Industry,' an important topic to Hull, will be given by Arthur Cargill.

Liverpool.

A 'Maritime Recital,' by Gordon Bryan (pianoforte) and Cuthbert Smith (baritone), will be heard on Wednesday evening, March 7. Later the same evening the Station Radio Players will present A Traveller's Return, a play by Clemence Dane.

Plymouth.

Listeners will be interested to learn that the recent appeal by the Rev. T. Wilkinson Riddle on behalf of the South Devon and East Cornwall Hospital Extension Scheme resulted in £64 5s. 6d. being received, which constitutes one of the most successful charitable efforts from the Plymouth Station.

Cardiff.

A Romance of Spain, by Vincent Thomas, in which the artists will be Margaret Wilkinson, Vivien Lambelot, Walter Glynn, and Glyn Eastman, has been arranged for Wednesday, March 7.

A light programme called 'March Hares' is down for Thursday, March 8. It will comprise songs at the piano by Cordelia Cooper and items by James Whigham (entertainer), as well as music by the Station Orchestra.

Manchester.

A Beethoven symphony, a Beethoven pianoforte concerto, interpreted by Edward Isaacs and the Station Augmented Orchestra, and a Gounod aria sung by Gladys Palmer (soprano) are among the interesting items in the Sunday afternoon programme on March 4.

Albert Voorsanger, a young Manchester violinist, is no novice at broadcasting, for he has already played before the microphone in America and South Africa. He will take part in the ballad concert on Thursday, March 8, when he will play two short groups of solos. Another well-known Manchester artist, Reginald Whitehead, will also be heard in this concert in a number of bass songs, while flute solos will be played by Edith Penville.

Daventry Experimental.

Their Point of View, a play in one act by Wilfred T. Coleby, is in the evening programme for Monday, March 5. It will be produced by Stuart Vinden.

A twenty minutes' recital by Daisy Kennedy, the violinist, will be included in a variety programme to be given from the Birmingham Studio on Tuesday, March 6. Gladys Ward (recitals) and Cuthbert Smith (baritone) are among the artists in this programme.

An afternoon concert of chamber music on Wednesday, March 7, will include Brahms's Clarinet Quintet Opus 115, and a song recital by Phyllis Sjostrom (soprano).

A programme featuring the works of that delightful French composer, Massenet, will be heard on Wednesday evening, March 7. It will be given by the Birmingham Studio Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Joseph Lewis. Arias will be sung by Kingsley Lark.

'The Roosters' Concert Party are giving one of their bright and cheery entertainments in the Birmingham Studio on Friday, March 9.

"I bought a 60 v. ADICO on December 27th, 1927, and used it regularly until the floods, when the battery was immersed in seven to eight inches of water. In fact the cardboard and paper covering fell off when I picked it up after the floods subsided. I stood it away to dry. It has since been working again for six days on a 3-valve set, and it shows 50 v. under load."

7.25 Mr. R. S. LAMBERT: 'Pioneers of Social Progress—I, John Howard and the Cleansing of the Prisons'

THE civilization of today may not seem a very beautiful or graceful spectacle, but we have only to look at the satirists of a century ago to realize the magnitude of the horrors from which we have already escaped. In this series of talks Mr. Lambert will survey some of the great achievements in social progress—John Howard's crusade to cleanse the prisons; Wilberforce's campaign against the slave trade; Owen's attempts to reform industry; Shaftesbury's attack on child labour; and the lesser-known activities of Chadwick and Lovett. This evening's talk will deal with the greatest feat of all, and many listeners will no doubt be startled to learn of the revolting conditions that obtained in our prisons before Howard's time.

TO HELP OUR READERS.

Every copy of 'The Radio Times' is subjected to hard wear. In many households our programme pages are being referred to through every hour of the day.

Before Saturday comes the current week's issue often, through much use, has become a dog-eared teleran.

Therefore, to save your copies of 'The Radio Times' from damage, the publishers have prepared a reading case in red cloth with cord down the back to hold each week's number, and a pencil in a convenient slot at the side.

This reading case can be ordered from any newsagent. The price is 2s. 6d. Or it can be obtained by sending 2s. 6d. and 4d. extra to cover postage, direct to the Publisher, 'The Radio Times,' 8-11, Southampton Street, Strand, London, W.C. 2.

Second Suite from 'Peer Gynt' Grieg

THE Second Peer Gynt Suite, rather less familiar than the first, contains four pieces:—

1. The Abduction of Ingrid, and her Lament. At a Norwegian wedding, Peer seizes the bride and carries her off to the mountains.
2. Arab Dance. Peer is now in Morocco.
3. Peer Gynt's Return. Tired of wandering, Peer at last returns. He has a stormy voyage! This movement merges into—
4. Solveig's Song. Peer's first love has remained faithful to him; he finds her sitting at the door of the mountain hut and singing her sorrow and her longing.

FRANK NEWMAN
Simple Aveu (Simple Avowal) Thomé
Slow Movement from Violin Sonata in C Minor
Grieg
Entr'acte, 'On the Road to Zag-a-Zig' .. Finck

Overture to 'Oberon' Weber
Romantic Waltz Morelle

LONDON heard Oberon under the Composer's direction a few weeks before his death at the age of thirty-nine. In that fairy-story Opera Weber's gift for composing imaginative music, full of romantic and pictorial suggestion, rose to the heights of genius. In this fine Overture we hear all sorts of graphic ideas—the magic horn of Oberon, fairy music, and the more positive strains of human loves and triumphs.

DEAFNESS

NO LONGER A HANDICAP

Even the 90% Deaf can now Hear!

No need now to wear clumsy, uncomfortable devices for the relief of deafness. Practically invisible and weighing but a few ounces, the Sonosax Fortiphone is yet the most powerful and effective Hearing Aid the world has ever seen! It is the latest discovery of three eminent scientists who have devoted their lives to the relief of deafness. It is so powerful, so pure in tone, so entirely free from extraneous noises, that it enables even the 90% Deaf to enjoy conversation immediately and to hear every word and note in Church, Theatre, and Concert Hall at 5, 50 or even 150 feet, comfortably and without embarrassment. Undoubtedly one of the greatest marvels of modern times. Leading Aurists and Doctors recommend it.

THOUSANDS NOW USE IT!

During the last two years thousands of Fortiphones have been sold and every day more and more deaf people are discerning less efficient aids for this new discovery, which has amazed the scientific world and brought new hope to all deaf people.

Test It At Home

Our unique 30-days' Home Trial Plan enables you to test the FORTIPHONE in your own home, in street, Church, theatre and concert hall before you buy and without obligation to purchase. Call at our offices for free personal and private Demonstration or send this coupon or a postcard for full particulars at once.

BROADCASTING IN THE VERY EARLY DAYS.

Captain Eckersley will trace the history of broadcasting in his talk from 5GB tonight. Here is a picture of broadcasting in the primitive age, when one room in Marconi House served as a studio, and the microphones were (as can be seen in the photograph) adapted from the mouthpiece of an ordinary telephone.

'THE KINGDOM'

An Oratorio by Sir EDWARD ELGAR

DOROTHY SILK (Soprano)

MURIEL BRUNSKILL (Contralto)

JOHN COATES (Tenor)

HAROLD WILLIAMS (Baritone)

THE HALLÉ CHORUS: Chorus Master, HAROLD DAWBER

THE HALLÉ ORCHESTRA, conducted by
SIR HAMILTON HARTY

THE KINGDOM (1906) may be called a sequel to The Apostles, in which Elgar took up the story of the calling, teaching and mission of the apostles. Certain motifs used in the earlier work are heard again in the later. As in The Apostles, the orchestral part is as significant as the vocal parts, and the whole texture is woven out of leading motifs, short phrases that stand for people or ideas in the scheme of the work. The first vigorous bars of the Prelude, for instance, stand for the Gospel (the strong theme in the treble) and the mission of the Apostles as preachers.

The sections of the work are these. The names of the characters are given in the order of their singing:—

Prelude.

I. IN THE UPPER ROOM.

The Disciples and the Holy Women (Chorus), Peter (Bass), Mary (Soprano), Mary Magdalene (Contralto) and John (Tenor).

The remembrance of the Saviour's dwelling with His disciples, and of His Holy Communion. The choosing of Matthias in place of Judas the traitor.

II. AT THE BEAUTIFUL GATE.

The Morn of Pentecost. Mary and Mary Magdalene give alms to the blind man, and speak of Jesus' compassion, before going into the House of the Lord.

III. PENTECOST.

In the Upper Room. Tenor Recitative, the Disciples, and Mystic Chorus (Soprano and Contralto).

The promise that the spirit of the Lord shall descend, and its fulfilment in the 'rushing of a mighty wind' from heaven.

In Solomon's Porch. The People, John, and Peter. The marvel of the gift of tongues, which Peter interprets as the sign from heaven that Christ, whom the multitude crucified, is lifted up on high. The People, penitent, cry out, 'What shall we do?' and Peter bids them repent and be baptized. At his word they seek the spirit of grace.

IV. THE SIGN OF HEALING.

At the Beautiful Gate. Contralto Recitative, Peter, the People, and John.

The lame man is healed by Peter, who, with John, tells the wondering people that faith, through Christ, has wrought the miracle.

The Arrest. Contralto Recitative, and Mary. The Priests and Sadducees arrest the disciples. Mary sings of the blessing of them that are persecuted for righteousness' sake, and meditates on the wonders of Christ, and the preaching of His gospel in the whole world.

V. THE UPPER ROOM.

In Fellowship. The Disciples and the Holy Women, with John and Peter.

These rejoice in the power of the name of Jesus Christ. Peter tells how the priests ordered him and John not to speak or teach, but in vain; and how, nothing being chargeable against them, they were released.

The Breaking of Bread. The Disciples and Holy Women, Peter, John, Mary, and Mary Magdalene.

The celebration of the Holy Communion.

The Prayers. The Lord's Prayer. The final thought—'Thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer, and we are Thine.'

7.25 Professor C. H. DESCH, 'Metals in the use of Man—I, The Dawn of Metals'

THE whole history of man's development in the use of his hands and of his tools can be traced in the story of the metals that he has, one by one, brought under his sway. In this new series of talks, Professor Desch, of Sheffield University, who is one of the greatest authorities on Metallurgy, will trace man's progress in the mastery of the metals, from the time when only gold was known to him, and that used only for ornament, through the discovery and conquest of bronze, iron and steel, to the strange new alloys and rare metals that the modern laboratory produces for the modern engineer.

The Cathedral under the Waves (La cathédrale

Study in F Sharp Minor Stravinsky
Hark, hark, the Lark Schubert, arr. Liszt
Scherzo in C Sharp Minor Chopin

THERE is a Breton legend that the Cathedral of Ys was buried beneath the sea. On a calm day, the peasants used to declare, the tolling of the bells and the chanting of a phantom congregation could be heard, faint and sweet,
from the depths.

Debussy, in his short piece, has given us a mystically imaginative suggestion of this ghostly music.

THERE is a story that one day Schubert met a friend, in the garden of a country inn, who was reading Shakespeare. Schubert picked up the book, which opened at Cymbeline, at the poem 'Hark, hark, the lark at Heaven's gate-sings,' which Cloten's musicians perform to Imogen, to wake her sweetly in the morning.
'Oh!' said Schubert, 'I have thought of such a lovely tune for that! What a pity I haven't some music paper here!' The friend took up the bill of fare and drew some staves on it, and Schubert at once wrote the tune that so beautifully fits the poem, and that Liszt decorated to make a piano solo.

9.15 WRITERS OF TODAY

Mr. JAMES STEPHENS reading from his own Works

AS the author of 'The Crock of Gold,' if for no other reason, Mr. James Stephens would be entitled to a place in the front rank of living writers. In addition, however, to this famous fantasy, and to the other that many judges consider a better book—'The Demi Gods'—he has written some lovely poetry, which was recently published in a collected form, and when he forsakes the 'Celtic twilight' for the street-lamps of Paris, Dublin, and London his work has those keen qualities of perception, sympathy and irony that distinguish 'Hero and Ladies' and 'The Charwoman's Daughter.' His new book, 'Etched in Moonlight,' is being eagerly awaited in literary circles both here and in the United States.

RADIO revues are one of the brightest features of the broadcast programmes, and a new revue on the air is as eagerly awaited by its own audience as a new revue on the stage. Tonight's production has many points in its favour. Mr. du Garde Peach, who has written the 'book,' is one of the most versatile of humorists, and he has ample experience of microphone technique. The cast includes many broadcast favourites, headed by Morris Harvey, probably the cleverest revue comedian in the country, who has very recently given provincial listeners a taste of the quality that gave him such a reputation with London theatregoers in the days of The Nine O'clock Recus.

Overture to 'Euryanthe' Weber

THE plot of the Opera Euryanthe was made out of a thirteenth-century tale of knightly doings, full also of ghosts, fairies and such-like legendary folk. The work did not hold the stage;
its libretto was too silly, even for those days.
But the Overture found and retained a place on the concert platform. In it, Weber strikes the notes of chivalry and mystery. According to his characteristic plan, it contains fragments of the Opera's leading airs.

10.28 NORMAN VENNER

The Golden Vanity (Folk Song) arr. L. Broadwood
To the Moon Monk Gould

LISZT had a great love for the folk-music of his native Hungary. He expressed this affection partly in twenty Rhapsodies, some of which he arranged for the Orchestra. In these he takes melodies played by the Hungarian gipsies, and treats them very much as the gipsies themselves do, with elaborate ornamentations and strong, vivid rhythmic effects.

The First Rhapsody begins with a dignified section (corresponding to the Lassan of the gipsies) containing two Main Tunes. The First is in a minor key, and the Second resembles the well-known 'Rakoczy' March (with Berlioz's treatment of which most listeners are familiar).

Next comes a lively section in the style of the gipsies' Friska dances. The music works up in speed and brilliance, the First Main Tune occurring again, and a fourth Tune appearing before the exciting finish of the work.

How to use your wireless set to amplify your gramophone

AN ordinary gramophone with an ordinary horn and an ordinary sound box will not reproduce notes below middle C of the musical scale. Now with the new LISSEN Electrical Pick-up your gramophone will not only reproduce the low notes on your record as you never heard them on your gramophone before, but will amplify your gramophone music to any degree of loudness to fill a large room or a large hall for dancing—you can make one gramophone supply every room in the house with music—you can use your old records, long discarded, because needle-scratch is now largely eliminated. Your new records, too, will play better because needle noise is largely subdued.

TO ELECTRIFY YOUR GRAMOPHONE

the Lissen Pick-up not only largely eliminates needle scratch but brings out the low notes on a record which no ordinary sound box is capable of reproducing.

INSTRUCTIONS.

Slip on the new Lissen Electrical Pick-up in place of the sound box on the tone-arm of your gramophone—take one connection from the Pick-up to the grid terminal of the Lissen Pick-up Adaptor (sold separately and having plugs and sockets corresponding to those of an ordinary valve holder) and take another connection from the Pick-up to the negative filament terminal on the Adaptor (a trial on each of the filament terminals in turn will clearly show which is negative). When the Adaptor is used in the way just explained, care should be taken that NO connection is made to the plate terminal on the Adaptor, otherwise the H.T. battery will be short-circuited.

Alternatively, a connection from the Lissen Pick-up, instead of going direct to the negative filament terminal on the Adaptor, can be made to the negative terminal of a grid-bias battery. A connection should then be made from the positive terminal of the grid-bias battery to the negative filament terminal on the Adaptor.

The connected Adaptor, with a valve fitted into it, should be plugged into the detector valve socket of a two or three valve set. Volume can be controlled by the round milled nut on the Lissen Pick-up.

THIS MAN BOUGHT HIS H.T. "BLINDFOLDED"

HE took a chance when he bought his H.T. dry battery. He couldn't see inside—he couldn't tell how long it was going to last. Blindfold buying! If his luck is out—if one cell breaks down prematurely—he will get crackling noises—distortion—weak, lifeless reception. In any case, when his dry battery is exhausted it must be consigned to the dustbin. He thinks an H.T. Dry Battery is cheap—in reality it is far more expensive than an Oldham H.T. Accumulator which will last for years and can be recharged equal to new again at small cost.

—BUT THIS MAN BOUGHT AN OLDHAM H.T. ACCUMULATOR

HE knew the fallacy of pouring money down the drain in an endless purchase of dry batteries. He knew that an adequate H.T. supply is the very life blood of any Receiver. Without it there can be no life-like reproduction—the Loud Speaker cannot give forth the full rich tones of the brass band nor the delicate high notes of the soprano. But even more important, an Oldham H.T. Accumulator gives a flood of unfluctuating power which adds hundreds of miles to the range of a Receiver. Stations never before received are easily picked up when an Oldham H.T. Accumulator is used. Mr. P. J. Darrett of 8 Ivy Cottages, Hillingdon, writes: "The first night I used your H.T. Accumulator I picked up 9 different Foreign Stations which I had never heard before." Put 'pep' into your Receiver by using an Oldham H.T. Accumulator—improve its tone—extend its range—increase its volume. And you'll still save money in the long run. An Oldham H.T. Accumulator will last for years and requires no other attention except an occasional re-charging.

LASTS FOR YEARS

—yet costs only 5/6 per 10-volt block as shown

AN Oldham 60-volt H.T. Accumulator costs 33/- (with case 37/6). Its 10-volt units are exceptionally sturdy and very compact. The stout Oldham plates are made under the famous Special Activation Process which ensures long life. Can be tapped at each 2-volt stage so that it can also be used for grid bias. No matter which type of Receiver you are using an Oldham H.T. Accumulator will improve it. You'll get more volume—better tone—increased range.

TIME was when to claim "seven countries on the loud speaker" from a home-built Set was a remarkable statement. The Cossor "Melody Maker" has proved it to be a modest claim. Hundreds are spontaneously writing to us every week to tell us of results far exceeding anything we have ever said of the Cossor "Melody Maker." Now comes a letter from a user who has actually heard American broadcasting on three successive nights. Read his letter . . . "For selectivity, ease in handling, simplicity of assembly and low cost," he considers the Cossor "Melody Maker" to be "THE Set of the Season." How simple it really is you can only know when you have built it yourself. Ask your Dealer (or send a post-card to A. C. Cossor, Ltd.) for the free Chart, "How to build the Cossor 'Melody Maker,'" and begin to-day.

No! we don't claim U.S.A. Broadcasting

But Mr. Barford gets it all the same

LET YOUR BOY
BUILD HIS

SPEAKER

WITH a BROWN Constructor's Unit any boy can build his own Loud Speaker—in the same way that he builds fine models with his Meccano or Klipiko. And just as easily, too. And when he had built it you might say it was a "chip off the old Block"—meaning, of course, that it came second only to the famous Brown Loud Speaker itself.

The possession of a BROWN Constructor's Unit means hours of pleasure for your boy—and, in the end, a wonderful Loud Speaker behind which is the honoured name of BROWN. Get a BROWN Constructor's Unit from your Dealer to-day—and let your boy's natural love for "building things" develop as he constructs a fine Loud Speaker of his very own.

The BROWN Constructor's Unit (which makes a horn-type Loud Speaker) costs only 13/6. With the addition of the C.T.S. Accessory Set, 2/6, a fine hornless-type instrument can be made.

Results which astonish and delight

Are you entirely pleased with your present valves, or with the performance of your receiver? Perfect valves will not, of course, ensure perfect reproduction. There are other links. When all is said and done, however, good reception depends to a greater extent upon the valves than upon any other factor. If your set is operating on 2 volts, we say deliberately and advisedly that, unless you are using the B.T.H. Nickel Filament Valves you are not getting the best results of which your set is capable. Try them to-day, you will be astonished and delighted at the improved reception. There are three types, as follows:—

60 VOLTS WITH TAPPINGS 3,000 MILLIAMP HRS.

Dimensions: 3 1/2" x 2 1/2" x 5 1/2" high, including top handle fitting. Supplied dry charged and ready for use two hours after filling with acid.

In the H.M.6, the latest pattern C.A.V. H.T., we have achieved a decided advance in H.T. accumulator design to the benefit of every radio user. The "All Moulded" acid proof container which is used with great success for car batteries, is also employed for the one piece case in which this accumulator is contained. This permits extremely small dimensions, an advantage which will be appreciated with most receiving equipments. Mass plates, tapping sockets at every ten volts, screwed porcelain vents of ample size, and a strong, detachable carrying strap handle, completes this most convenient H.T. accumulator and puts it ahead of anything yet offered. At 42/6 it represents supreme value.

Please send me particulars of your latest Battery, the H.M.6.

For the music of a master

USE LISSEN BATTERY CURRENT

At the touch of a master there comes inspired music from mute strings. Hear this over the radio with a Lissen battery in your set and you will sit and listen with delight. For the pure D.C. current of this battery will bring every note of the music to you pure as it is played. Never again will you use any other form of current having once heard the music of a master violinist played as it should be played.

For the Lissen battery, due to its secret process and new chemical combination used only by Lissen, gives you purity as well as great power. The current it yields has no ripple in it, it has no trace of hum—it is smooth, noiseless, sustained all the time you use it. No matter how long the programme, and through months and months of use your reproduction will remain delightfully enjoyable always if you use the Lissen new process Battery.

You can buy it at 10,000 dealers throughout the country. Ask for it in a way that shows you will take nothing else.
