The Only Future for Broadcasting, says Lion Feuchtwanger, lies in the development of Talks. In the accompanying article he makes a strong case for what, to many British listeners, will seem a startlingly unconventional point of view.

HOW many artistic hopes were not awakened by the erection of the first broadcasting stations! No, we said to ourselves, we would not repeat the mistake we made over the introduction of the movies. We would not scoff at this new artistic medium and then have to eat our words when the thing turned out to be a success. So instead, in every language, hymns were sung in praise of the boundless artistic possibilities of the New Thing.

The public, with amazing rapidity, became acquainted with broadcasting. There arose a crying need for programmes. The problem was, what to broadcast? We began to transmit, in a haphazard fashion, every kind of music. Operas were broadcast from the studio or an outside theatre. Poetry and drama were recited. Scientific talks were given. But we had to recognize the fact that this thing, of which we had such high artistic hopes, was a failure. It had not developed the way we thought it would—if indeed it had 'developed' at all.

We started out by broadcasting all and sundry. And great was our disillusion when we found that all and sundry simply would not be broadcast, that the microphone could not do it. But only in very few cases did we find the reason for this.

Next we set out timidly to test the

MASTERS OF THE MICROPHONE—HERR LION FEUCHTWANGER

During the past two years Lion Feuchtwanger, German playwright and novelist, has startled Europe with two magnificent historical novels, Jew Suss and The Ugly Duchess. On a recent first visit to England he broadcast from the London Studio.

special possibilities of broadcasting. At first we had played upon the listeners' interest in what may be called 'technical stunts.' There were broadcasts from aeroplanes and broadcasts from submarines. We transmitted sensationally—regardless of results. After that, we began a further inquiry into the special scope of our medium.

The Art of Broadcasting is still in its infancy—its infantile complaints have not as yet been cured. Therefore, any prediction as to the future development of the art must be hedged about with countless reservations.

In every country there have been attempts to broadcast 'running commentaries' on events of more or less historical importance: State ceremonies, the opening of exhibitions, meetings of Parliaments, Academies, sporting events. But even here the results are not what we hoped for. It may be that his technique is faulty—but the fact remains that the commentator cannot yet convey to his listeners a really vivid and suggestive impression of what is before him. It seems that, even granted a perfect technique, it is not possible to make the listener in any real degree a 'spectator' of events which he cannot see. Such transmissions can hardly excite more than an interest of curiosity. Broadcasting cannot compete in this field with the film or even with ordinary photography.

Broadcasting can only achieve results when it deals with entirely and essentially spoken events—election speeches and so on. This does not mean that all great men have great voices; the voice of a great speaker may sometimes prove quite ineffective when the speaker himself is invisible. But from considerable experience I have found that a peculiarly expressive voice of an unseen speaker will give to its hearers a more complete impression of its owner's personality than would any picture or caricature.

It happens sometimes, I know, too, that such a voice, though it may be broadcasting in a foreign language, awakens in the listener a strong desire to understand what it is saying. This makes one believe that international broadcasting will greatly increase the need for an international language, a world language, and that it will bring about the creation of such a language. This I conceive to be one of its most important functions. Already broadcasting has aroused not only a desire to become acquainted with other languages than our own, but also an interchange of national ideas. Towards this end are directed the exchange of programmes between the world's great cities and the building of long-range stations.

IT may fairly be said, I think, that the value of broadcasting to the growth of musical appreciation has been greatly over-rated. If Berlin today has the greatest number of listeners of any big city—double that of London or New York—that is due to the fact that she is more interested in music than any other city. Even in Berlin, where the ratio of musical to spoken programmes is about seven to three, there is a general demand for more spoken matter.

Opera is not particularly suited for broadcasting. It does not go well when relayed from the Opera House, and not much better when, suitably adapted for the microphone, it is broadcast from the studio. On the other hand, Broadcasting fulfils an important function in the 'trying-out' of new operas. A 'first night' by radio has, on many occasions, paved a composer's way to the stage which otherwise, in view of the cost of purely speculative operatic ventures, might never have been opened to him.

The broadcasting of oratorios and of 'straight' music has justified itself, but, on the whole, it would seem as though the predominance of music in the programmes is coming to an end.

OF all attempts to create a definite Art of Broadcasting, the most vigorous have been those which aimed at the creation of Radio Drama—invisible drama. It was early proved that the really big plays fail in broadcasting as on the screen. Shakespearean drama, for instance, depends as much upon visual acting as on words—and is therefore beyond the reach of both microphone and cinematograph. At first we tried to supplement words with 'noise effects.' But we are gradually dispensing with this primitive technique and coming to recognize that invisible drama can only be presented by the human voice.

Of all dramatic forms the Anglo-Saxon and German are least suited to broadcasting. The classic French drama is best adaptable to the purpose, having a rhetorical basis. Greek tragedy, which is spoken rather than 'acted,' as we understand the word, and the epic drama of the Chinese and the Hindus, in which the characters themselves describe the scene and the action, these prove to be capable of radio production. It is plain, in any way, that the Broadcast Drama of the future cannot be adapted from the present stage-play.

The film, in what it has to give us, has greater possibilities of simultaneity, it can show the 'closeness' of men and things, their interaction—two or more things, that is, can be at the same time contributory to the drama; while the radio play can only be 'successive,' i.e., a sequence of happenings. The radio play is dependent upon extreme clearness and logic, and upon certain pronounced characteristics in the voices of those taking part, which will run through it like a series of leitmotifs.

Many believe that the radio play will attain the same importance as the film has at present. But, just as all sculpture is based upon stone and all drama upon the epic, so radio drama has its roots too deeply embedded in the traditions of the stage. It seems to me that the experiments which give most promise of success are those which, employing the technique of the leitmotif, tend towards a form of 'spoken oratorio.'

THE most suitable instrument for broadcasting is the pure human voice. Here there are rich possibilities. The transmission of the voice—of thought transmuted into sound—there lies the great future of broadcasting. We have seen how different in their effect are the voices of visible speakers, actors, and elocutionists, and those who, speaking from the studio, cannot be seen. The invisible voice cannot be 'dressed up,' it cannot become theatrical. Great speakers and great actors so often fail as broadcasters because they allow themselves to talk with too many frills. In broadcasting, it is the personal quality of a voice which counts. It is not so much a question of beauty as of individuality.

The conditions of speaking are entirely altered. Lecturers whose voices were too weak to fill a lecture-theatre can now be heard with great effect. In the transference from classroom to studio, banalities become vividly interesting, dry data become real and colourful. Talks in an unfamiliar language can direct the thoughts of the listener as the speaker desires, merely by the tone of their utterance. The imagination of the audience is quickened by speculation as to what the speaker looks like.

This 'thought transmuted into sound' has more grace, more fragrance, more 'bite' in it than anything written or printed, just as orchard fruit has more flavour than jam. To distribute this 'living thought' all over the world, embodied in the voice of the speaker—that will in the future be the greatest function of broadcasting.

What Do You Listen For? No. 5.

The Big Battalions.

In this article, which concludes our present Series, Mr. W. McNaught, formerly Music Critic to the Morning Post, tells the listener the standards by which to judge Choral Singing.

IN this little tour of inquiry we have so far been keeping company with great folk, visiting our advice upon the powers and the personages of the realm of music. For in this realm the orchestra is our army; the singer is our tyrant before whom all the world bows the knee; the violinist is our prince of the blood royal, an aristocrat to the finger-tips; and the pianist is what you like to make of him, for these comparisons are a strain on one's powers of invention. At any rate, a choir is vox populi, and that brings us to the point. Today we shift our ground. We descend from the top of the ladder down to the humble clay, from the makers of money to the great unpaid, and, most significant change of all, from those who live by our applause to those who scarcely seek it.

A choir sings largely for its own pleasure and very little for ours. Choral singers get together because they want to sing together. They are fond of music—so much so that they desire to take part in it; but they are barred by lack of skill from all means of approach to it except that offered by singing in a choir.

With song in their souls but only Ba voices in their throats—declared by their friends and relations to be unfit for public service—they meet together for mutual encouragement, throw off all diffidence, give voice as joyfully as any Briton in his bathroom and even hire a man to direct and exhort them. They aspire not only to exercise but to art. Mute inglorious Santleys and Melbas bring their frustrated ideals and pool them in one artistic whole. They seek achievement by discipline and diligence and are fully rewarded when, week by week, they realize that something of which they themselves are the artisans is taking shape as a piece of art. It is one of the oddities of the musical world, this power of massed incompetence to take rank as an artistic force. There is no mystery about it; at least, very little. In all art the part that matters most is the part that nobody can explain. Here we can explain a good deal. In choral singing we get the thrill of the crowd. Everybody

The Honourable Corpse.

WHEN I think of travelling in China, I always think of the old stone roads. As a matter of fact they can hardly be called roads in the crude Western sense—they are really obstacle race-tracks, only to be trodden on foot, in sedan chairs, on buffaloes, bullocks or very sure-footed ponies. The roads are made of great squared blocks of stone laid on dykes above the rice fields; many of the laboriously laid stones have long since disappeared. Once the roads used to cross canals on handsome humpy stone bridges, but now the last straw has broken nearly every bridge's hump, and travellers must roll up their trousers and paddle. But decayed though they be, these stone roads are brave old roads, and fear neither mountain range nor swamp. Their pride still shines forth in the shape of upstanding marble or granite tablets at corners, bridges, crossways or entries to towns—tablets crowned with inter-knotted dragons and beautifully patterned with the names of the public-spirited men who built the roads. Sometimes an arch—or p'ai-lou—commemorating a victory, a hero, or a widow who was so virtuous that she never married again, jumps, in a curly twist of dragons, elephants or phoenixes, across a road. I wish I could remember the days when the old roads were in their glory—when silk-clad mandarins were borne along them in palanquins of the various colours that denoted their various ranks.

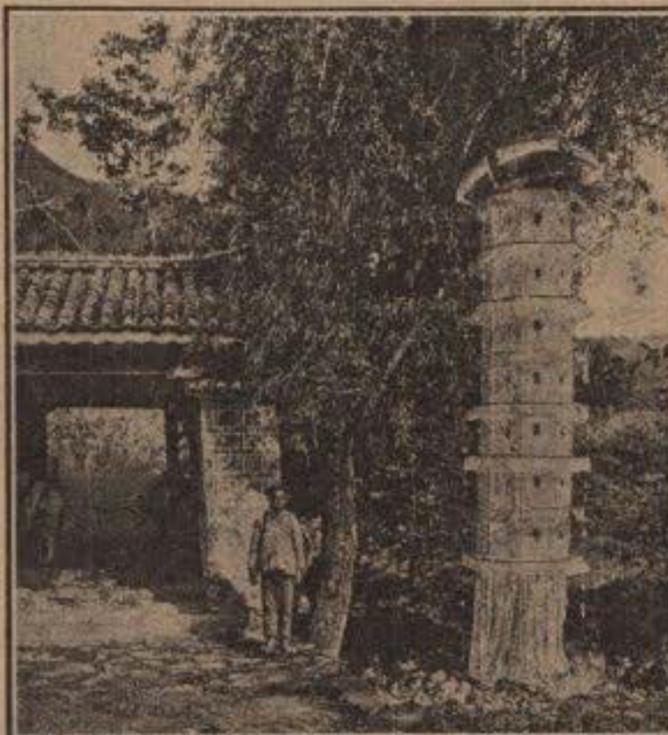

Nowadays, on the stone roads I know, one meets no one more aristocratic than stout Chinese merchants or clerks tittuping along on tiny pacing ponies, silk petticoats hitched up about high wooden saddles, their escort of soldiers—umbrella in one hand, rifle in the other—trailing along behind them.

It was without military escort, however, that I once rode along a lonely nine-mile stretch of road side by side with fourteen thousand dollars. A French acquaintance of ours—a business man—whose duty it was to bring to town from time to time the moneys in his keeping, being a nervous young man, disliked the idea of taking that lonely ride, burdened with his accumulated thousands. He said that every time he opened his safe, every bad character in the valley pricked up his ears. So a friend of mine (whom I will call Ethelbert) and I, feeling confident that nobody would connect us with the opening of the Frenchman's safe, rode across the valley one morning and unobtrusively pocketed the fourteen thousand dollars in question. I say unobtrusively, but actually nothing could have been more blatant than the vulgar bulge caused by the unprecedented presence of fourteen thousand dollars in Ethelbert's breast-pocket. Trying to look unconscious of our hidden wealth, we cantered back along the sandy track that an irreverent public has made beside the lumpy austerity of the old stone road. All went well till we passed the gate of a walled village about seven miles from home. Here a heedless pedestrian ran like a chicken across the path of Ethelbert's rather impulsive horse. There was a thud, a cry, and a cloud of dust—and there on the ground lay the poor coolie as though dead.

This talk was broadcast from London on Thursday, March 22, by Stella Benson, brilliant novelist and intrepid traveller. Listeners who read Miss Benson's 'Confessions of a Rugby Ignoramus' in our Leap Year Number will be equally charmed with this answering account of her experiences in the Yunnan Province of China.

Of course, we threw ourselves to his aid. We splashed muddy water from a paddyfield on to his face, and plied him with whisky from a flask, but still he remained apparently dead. We were just trying to drag him into the shade, intending that one of us should ride the seven miles to the French hospital for the doctor and a stretcher, when the villagers discovered the affair. They hastily decided that our intention was to leave the corpse propped up against their wall and ride away to accuse them, tacitly or otherwise, of the murder. They therefore became deliriously obstructive, filled with the adamant-righteousness characteristic of the semi-respectable character accused of a crime that (for once) he hasn't committed. They would not let us touch the poor sufferer again; they would not let us hire a providentially passing empty buffalo cart to carry him to the hospital; they would not, in fact, let Ethelbert move, but held his sleeve and his pony's bridle, cursing loudly all the time.

A village scene in the Yunnan Province, showing the paper pagoda suspended from a willow tree, which indicates the burial place of a dead man, and which is burned so that his soul may rise to heaven with the smoke.

A group of Lolo tribesmen, brigand mountaineers of Yunnan, of whom Miss Benson tells in her article. The man on the right is a noted wrestler.

In vain did we explain our helpful intentions; they would not loose their hold. An all-round tip of a dollar or two might have saved the situation, but alas! we had neither one dollar nor two, but only fourteen thousand dollars in big notes gnawing like the Spartan fox at our bosom. Finally, after a long deafening argument, they led poor Ethelbert away as a hostage.

Left thus bereaved, I was allowed to hoist the ill-starred pedestrian upon a buffalo cart and ride gloomily homeward at the cart's tail. It was a nightmare of a ride. The buffalo drivers, being, for lack of funds on my part, unpaid as yet, were deliberately unhelpful. At every little inn, under every shady tree, they sat down to chat, smiling provocatively at me under their big tea-tray hats. They would not direct or rebuke their buffalo, which must have been at best a very ill-disciplined creature; and I, consumed with anxiety and riding a restless horse, had the greatest difficulty in urging it along. I knew no word of the buffalonian language, and could not prevent the unwieldy brute from straying aside into the ditches to browse, on which the cart would heel over and the unconscious passenger roll out. I must say I cannot remember a less enjoyable expedition. But at last, after four hours, we reached the hospital. During the last half hour I had been reduced—for the first and, I hope, the last time in my life—to hitting not only the buffalo, but also the drivers as hard as I could with my whip. They all went better after that. Having explained everything to the doctor and found that our victim was not fatally hurt, I rode to the office for which the fourteen thousand dollars had been destined and cried, as I burst into the inner sanctuary: 'Ethelbert and fourteen thousand dollars are lost!'

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

'The Announcer's' Night Out.

LAST week I spoke in a debate. This was my first public appearance for many years. As I sat at dinner with the secretary of the debating club, I began to wonder whether, when it came to the point, I should be able to utter two consecutive words of sense. Though a violent debater in private life, I have not the gifts of oratory. However, the luck was on my side, for I was down to oppose the motion 'that in the opinion of the house, entertainment by mechanical means is to be deplored.' Quite obviously, since I was the guest of the evening, this motion was aimed at broadcasting. Therefore, when my turn came to reply to a dangerously witty speech by the proposer, I dived straight in off the deep end in an impassioned defence of broadcasting. I was actually arguing against myself, for my first point was to prove that broadcasting is in no sense 'mechanical' entertainment.

The Future of the Art.

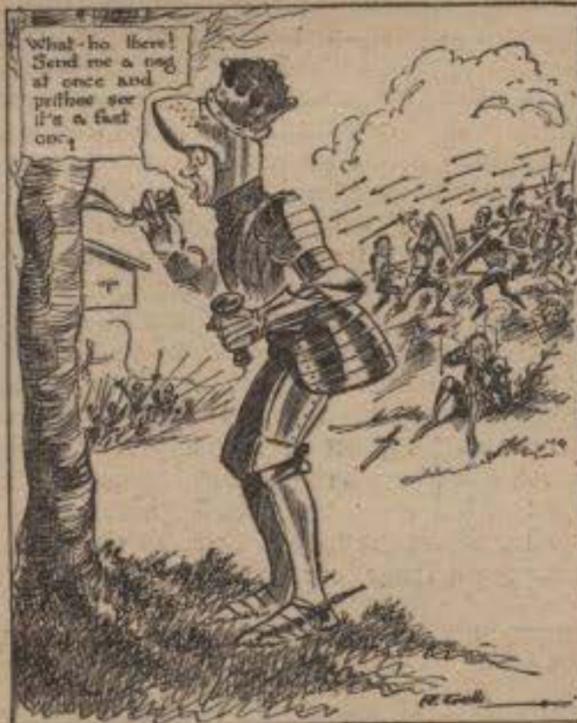

THAT point I think I made, for three or four old ladies said 'Hear, hear!' with embarrassing fervour, and a narrow young man with rimless glasses who, later, made a nervous speech, began to cover the back of an envelope with notes. Nevertheless, I went ahead, as on various occasions in the past I have gone ahead in these columns, to argue that broadcasting is a live and utterly unmechanical art, that it deserves, and is largely receiving, the live and intelligent criticism awarded to the other arts, that its future is illimitable. The house, with two exceptions, voted against the motion. Though broadcasting was not strictly in question—and we had also discussed the cinema, the barrel organ, the pianola, and the electric hare—it was for broadcasting that the assembly had voted, and the fact that, in the discussion following the main speeches, broadcasting was the main topic of debate, was to me at least, supremely interesting and encouraging.

A Robot Audience?

ONE point arising from the discussion is worth recording. It was raised by my friend with the rimless spectacles. He shot out of his chair like a rocket, and his voice, when it became heard, was about as exciting as the stick coming down. He agreed that broadcasting was not mechanical, that the means used by microphone and transmitter to convey the sound to the unseen audience are no more 'mechanical' than the specially constructed acoustics of a theatre. 'But,' he said, 'there is a danger that the listener may become mechanical. The broadcaster is not a Robot—but the listener may become one if he allows himself to sit, hour after hour, absorbing one programme after another, lending only half an ear and half an intelligence to what he hears. In that event we should deplore not the medium of entertainment, but the audience, who cannot raise an intelligent interest in the performance because they have not first been compelled to leave a warm fireside and travel several uncomfortable miles to sit in a stall at a theatre or concert hall. There is an odd tradition, Victorian in its origin, that Art and Entertainment are indissolubly connected with evening dress, "going out" and spending money. That is a quite untenable point of view, a lazy point of view held by people who have to be artificially roused before they can take a discriminating pleasure in anything.' Whereupon he sat down with a bump and for the rest of the evening nervously avoided our glances. But he had talked sense, and we applauded him with deserved heartiness.

Cyclonic Miss O'Regan.

YOU probably listened to Kathleen O'Regan, who broadcast Irish verses in a variety programme a week or so back. This was her first broadcast—and a very successful one, though she assures me that she was scared of the microphone as she never was of any 'first night.' Miss O'Regan has had an adventurous career lately. She played the schoolmaster's young wife in Young Woodley, the play which the Censor banned and which, after a run at the Arts Theatre Club, has been licensed for public performance. Unfortunately, Miss O'Regan is no longer in the play. A contract to appear in Tinker, Tailor forced her to give up the part—and Tinker, Tailor ran for only three nights. This looked to be particularly rotten luck for the young actress, until she was suddenly engaged to play lead with Joseph Coyne in The Baby Cyclone, which begins to blow at the Lyric on April 10. Miss O'Regan's playing in Young Woodley was unforgettably lovely. I hope we shall hear her in a broadcast play.

EFFICIENT MOMENTS IN HISTORY.
3.—Richard III does not have to offer his Kingdom.

Tennyson, Caravans, and Football.

NEXT week's list of talks is a particularly interesting one. At 3.45 p.m. on Thursday, April 12, Colette O'Neil, the actress (whose name in real life is Lady Constance Malleon), will tell us some of her experiences on the London stage and while 'touring' in England and abroad. At 9.15 the same evening, Mrs. Margaret Woods is giving her reminiscences of Lord Tennyson in the 'I Remember' series. I hope you have this talk in mind. As I wrote a week or two back, Mrs. Woods is a brilliant and original woman and her memories of the great Poet Laureate may give a new picture of him. At 5 p.m. on Friday, April 13, Mrs. Winifred Hall is to reveal how to make a caravan for £4—a talk which should interest prospective holiday-makers who should, on April 10, also look out for Mr. Gerald Brenan's second talk on Touring in Spain. On Wednesday, April 11, Viscount Astor is giving, at 7 p.m., the monthly League of Nations talk. And the Saturday's sporting talk is by Mr. R. Sloley—a review of the Amateur Football Season.

The Passion Play.

I AM sorry that I shall not, owing to the limitations of my set, be able to listen to Sir Thomas-Hughes' talk from Cardiff on 'The Passion Play at Oberammergau.' I attended the last Passion Play in 1922. A friend and I travelled from Munich to Oberammergau on a scorching July day. Our train was the former royal train of the Bavarian king and the grey-bearded guard had been, before the Revolution, a high court official. The village of Oberammergau is lovely—a sort of toy town scattered about a valley—houses coloured white and pink with bright red roofs and friezes of flowers or vine-leaves painted on their walls. The village is dominated by the theatre of the Passion Play, a great semicircular amphitheatre with a covered auditorium and a stage open to the sky. The actors are all villagers. It was queer to see the young men who played the Apostles, walking about the streets with their handsome faces and chin-beards, looking like figures from an Italian church painting. Though the play is all simplicity and sincerity—almost mediæval in character—the arrangements made for visitors to Oberammergau are supremely efficient. Your ticket for the play entitles you to two nights lodging in one of the neat little houses where you may sit down to dinner with Mary Magdalen or with Anton Lang, who so finely plays the part of Jesus.

A World of Simple Beauty.

THE play itself was an experience I shall not easily forget. Those who take exception to the length of Shaw's Back to Methuselah should not visit Oberammergau, for the Passion Play lasts eight hours, with an interval during which the audience take lunch. We gathered, several thousands of Germans, Americans, and English, outside the theatre at eight o'clock of a fine morning. Most of us had hired cushions—the seats are mere benches—and eyeshades, for the sunlit stage, viewed from the shadowy auditorium, is trying to watch for four hours on end. The play is a succession of scenes from the story of the Cross, interspersed with choral singing. Vast crowds appear in some of the scenes, such as would make a Drury Lane crowd seem a mere group.

Wonderful Acting.

THE keynote of the acting was devout simplicity. No make-up was used, nor any elaborate costumes. When it rains, they play their parts in mackintosh capes, and, I am told, not a smile from the audience greets what might, in other surroundings, seem absurd and laughable. Of all the moments in the play, the most affecting was to me that at which Christ overturned the tables of those that sold doves and sent a flock of doves fluttering up into the sunshine, the noise of their wings very strong and clear in the silence. My memory of Oberammergau is one of wonderful weather, great beauty, extraordinary companionship, quiet nights in a tiled bedroom beside wide-open windows, of having stepped somehow into another world, a mediæval world of truly religious simplicity, the world of the pleasant artist and craftsman.

Do Not Miss This!

ON Monday evening Daventry is broadcasting Speed, a new experiment in radio drama and a very exciting play. Be sure to switch on punctually at 9.35, in order not to miss the opening of the story.

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

Next Week's Paper.

NEXT week's issue will be a Spring Number, specially enlarged in size, though not in price. This will contain many outstanding features, chief of which is a hitherto unpublished and unrelated story by A. J. Alan. The publication of this is, in itself, something of an event, for 'A. J. A.', who tells such delightful yarns over the microphone, can seldom be persuaded by the most cunning of editors to write one down. 'Wandering Minstrels, Ltd.' is the story's title, and it is as amusingly told as 'The Cabman's Shelter,' 'The B.B.I.,' or any other of the famous adventures of this prince of storytellers. Then there is also the first chapter of the Shortest History of Music Ever Written. A 'History of Music' sounds fearsome, but this new feature, written by Percy Scholes and profusely illustrated, is as light and amusing in its own way as A. J. Alan in his. It will be complete in seven chapters, and should prove vastly interesting to the audience which is listening almost every day to music of almost every century. Another series, which might be entitled 'Savoy Hill with the Lid Off,' also begins next week, and will be continued from time to time. This is planned to take the listener for a tour round the headquarters of British broadcasting, showing 'how it is done.' Many people, I dare say, are still unconscious of the elaborate organization and delicate machinery whereby the programmes are enabled to reach the listener clearly, punctually, artistically.

What Do You Listen For?

FROM all that I hear, the series of articles on 'What do you listen for?' has proved very popular with readers—especially Mr. Klein's article on singing; his condemnation of tremolo was warmly endorsed by thirty, at least, of my correspondents. With regard to Mr. Bonavia's article on the Violin, the author was announced as 'Music Critic of the Daily Telegraph.' In case this wording may have led to some confusion, I should like to point out that Mr. Bonavia is one of that paper's staff of music critics. The Musical Editor and chief Critic is Mr. Robin H. Legge.

For the Children.

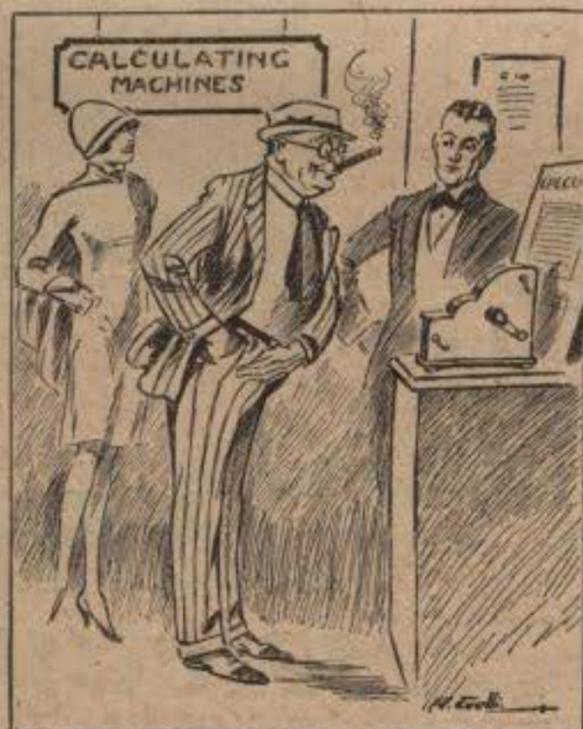

AT 7.55 on Christmas Day the Chief Announcer at Savoy Hill made the B.B.C.'s own Good Cause Appeal for the Children. The money raised by this was to be equally distributed among five charitable organizations concerned with the welfare of children. The sum realized by the Appeal was £1,142 18s. 3d., and this was distributed on February 8, to Dr. Barnardo's Homes, the National Children's Homes, the Crusade of Rescue, the Waifs and Strays Society and the British Red Cross Association. The B.B.C. thanks warmly all listeners who contributed to this very considerable total.

Bird Song at Night.

YOU probably remember the talks which Professor Garstang gave last year on Bird Songs. In April he is to continue these talks, which proved very popular. He has chosen April because in that month most of our bird songsters are in full song. His talks will be, as formerly, illustrated with gramophone records. He will begin with a description of our own native singers and pass on, at the end of his series, to the summer visitors from overseas. There will be three talks, the first at 9.15 a.m. on April 10.

Gemel in London.

THE B.B.C. is fortunate in its Dramatic Critic. Some of the wisest and wittiest of talks are those with which James Agate fortnightly entertains a large 'audience.' And now he has published a new novel, which is as vivid and amusing as his talks. Here is the title, etc., in case you want to buy it or order it from your library—'Gemel in London,' by James Agate (Chapman and Hall, 7s. 6d.). It is the story of a young Scotsman who comes to London, sees into what he thinks is the heart of London, and, in fear of being conquered by London, returns to Scotland and his true happiness. 'Gemel in London' is a pretty plain-spoken satire on modern society. If you enjoy a quarter of an hour in it's author's company, you might do very much worse than try a whole evening. Another broadcaster whose book is published today is Derek McCulloch, well known as 'Uncle Mac,' and partner of George Allison in commentaries on Football. This book, 'Nonsericks,' was reviewed here last week. It is most amusing.

The Day of Shakespeare and St. George.

ON Shakespeare's birthday, April 23, which is also St. George's Day and the anniversary of the Zeebrugge Raid, there will be a broadcast from London and Daventry of Henry V. This is to take place between 9.20 and 11 p.m., and will be played by a cast of outstanding excellence, details of which will be given later.

Two New Radio Playwrights.

THE subject of the transition to the after-life has formed in the past the theme of several plays—notably Outward Bound by Sutton Vane, which has played to crowded houses in every country in the world. Two new radio dramatists, Holt Marvel (who is well known in another sphere as the author of several successful novels) and Cyril Lister have written a broadcast play with a similar theme, a delicate fantasy entitled The Crossing, which is to be given its first performance from 5GB on April 19.

From Liverpool.

A SPECIALLY good programme is that which is to be broadcast from Liverpool on Monday, April 16. It begins at 9.35 with a pianoforte recital by Norman Henderson, the brilliant young Liverpool soloist, who has recently made a big name for himself. Then come two plays, The Family Group, farce, and Witch-Wife, Grand Guignol. The latter piece is the work of Mabel Constanduros and Michael Hogan. The evening closes with Constance Astington, soprano, and John P. Sheridan, a violinist who is the fortunate possessor of a 'Strad.'

A Ravel Programme.

A PROGRAMME of Ravel's music has been arranged by Mr. Percy Pitt for Tuesday evening, April 10. This should attract many listeners who were introduced to the music by another great French modern, Claude Debussy, by Mr. Scholes's 'New Friends in Music' recital. A celebrated French pianist, Claire Croiza, is coming specially from Paris to take part in the Ravel concert. This will not be her first broadcast in England, for she played last year at one of the concerts of Contemporary Chamber Music relayed from the Grotrian Hall.

The Music of Italy.

THE next in the series of National Programmes arranged in conjunction with the International Bureau of Broadcasting at Geneva will be broadcast on Sunday, April 15. It will be an Italian programme of music by Rossini, Wolf-Ferrara Sinigaglia, etc. The soloists are to be Heddie Nash, who will sing arias from operas by Verdi and Puccini, and Mrs. Gordon Woodhouse, who will give a short recital of seventeenth century harpsichord music.

The First Summer Concert.

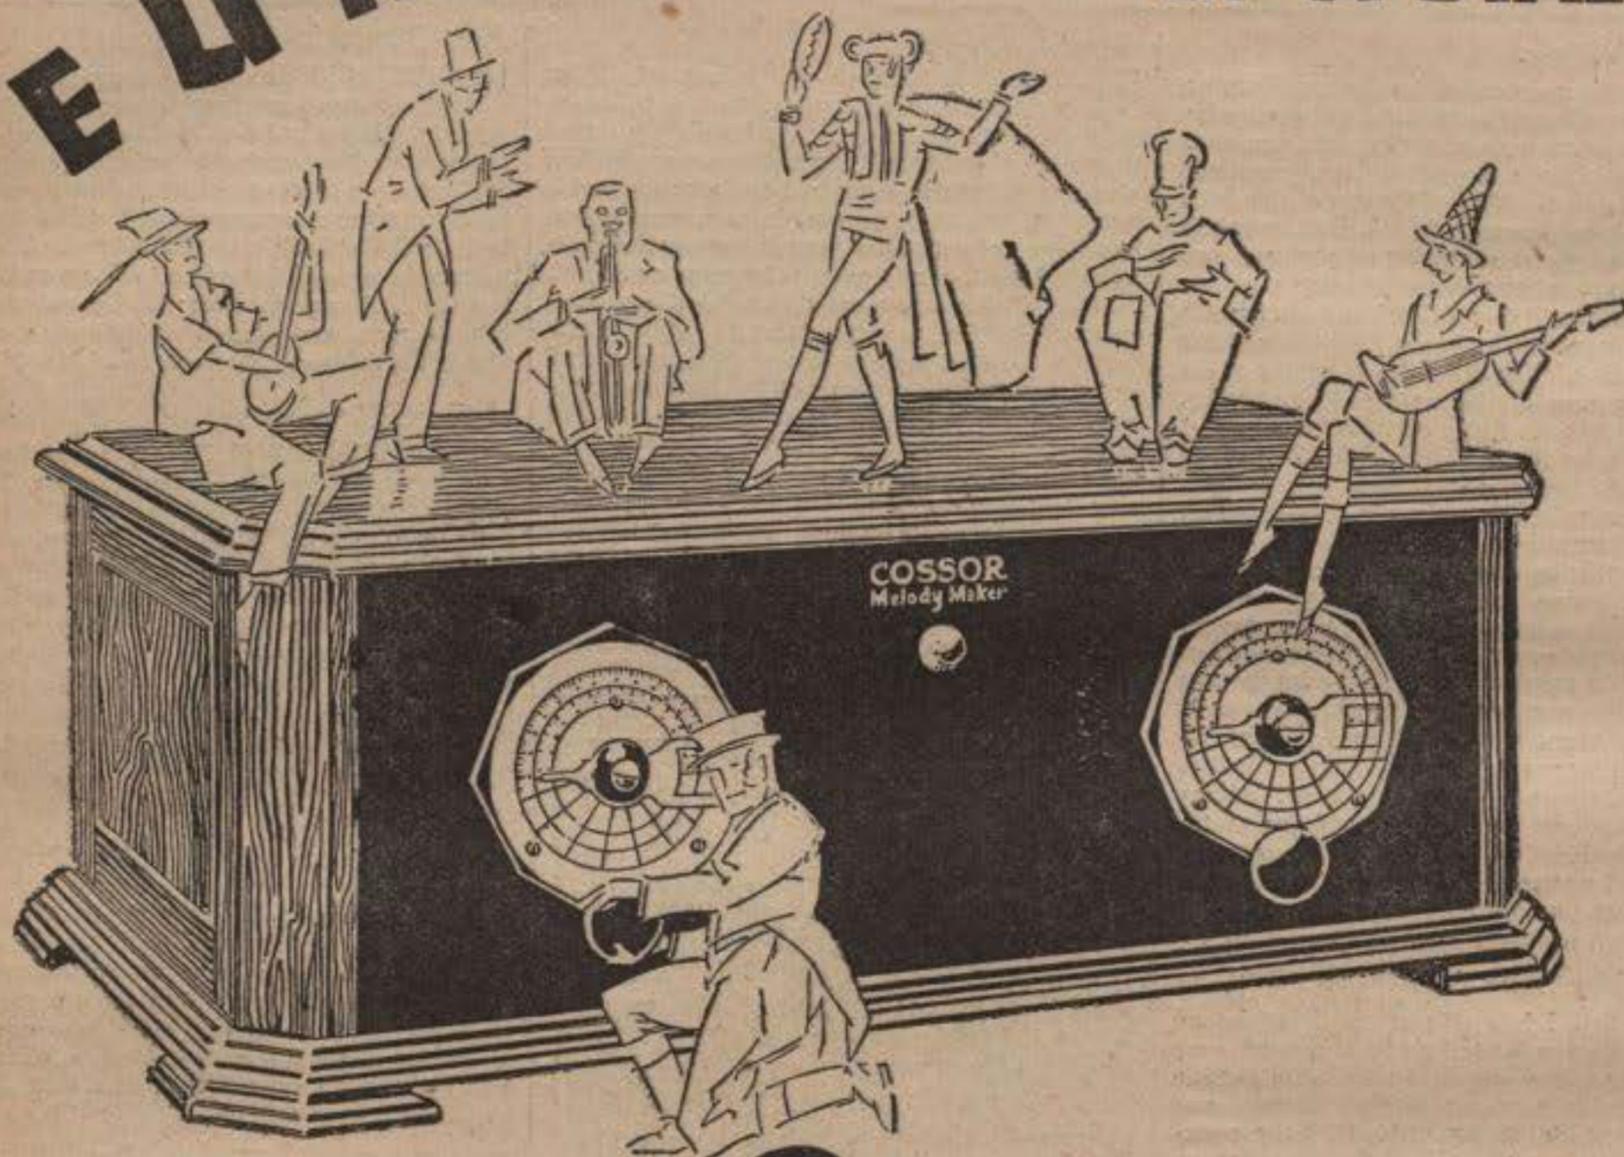

SUMMER is on the way. In a few weeks Beatrice Harrison will be able to try her luck with the cuckoo. One of the first indications of the season to be found in the programmes is the relay by 5GB on Tuesday, April 10, from Leamington Spa. The Band of H.M. Royal Artillery (mounted), conducted by T. J. Hillier, will give in the Jephson Gardens the first concert of the Spa's summer season. These Leamington concerts will be broadcast regularly throughout the summer, a permanent line having been installed between the Jephson Gardens, the Pump Room, and the Control Room at Birmingham.

'Rampa on the Film.'

DID you listen to Rampa, Max Mohr's strange philosophical melodrama, the translation of which, by Cecil Lewis, was broadcast from London and Daventry on March 7? I have put that on my list of outstanding broadcasts, below some thirty other items which I have noted during two years of listening. It seemed to me as good as any radio play I ever heard, admirably produced and beautifully acted by players whose voices were cleverly differentiated. I see now that Rampa is being filmed. It is shortly to be released by First National Pathé under the title of The Wild Man. It should be interesting to see how the producer handles his theme. General interest in the relation between the problems, technique, and future of Radio and the Cinema has been roused by recent articles in The Radio Times, which have been widely discussed and quoted.

'THE ANNOUNCER.'

EUROPE! AT THE TURN OF A DIAL

ON THE

COSSOR "Melody Maker"

A TURN of the dial and off we go! A gay fox-trot from Paris—a haunting tango from Spain—a song from Switzerland—an organ recital from Rome—German and Dutch concerts and all B.B.C. Alternative Programmes too. Distance eliminated at the turn of a wrist. That's what thousands are getting on the wonderful Cossor "Melody Maker" the Set that anyone can build. Even if you know nothing about Radio, you can build it. It's as simple as Meccano.

You can't go wrong if you follow the simple instructions in the full-size chart any Wireless Dealer will give you. There's no blue print to puzzle you. No soldering to thwart you. In a few hours you will have a set that gives better performance than many factory-built Sets costing twice the price. Don't put it off. Build this wonderful Set and tour Europe at will. Ask your Dealer for "How to build the Cossor 'Melody Maker'" or send a postcard to A. C. Cossor, Ltd., Highbury Grove, London, N.5

BUILD YOURS TO-NIGHT

The Big Battalions—Listening to a Choir.

knows what a power over the mind is exercised by a crowd that is alight with a common enthusiasm, by the multiple utterance of a common opinion. It may be a commonplace opinion, but it has potency, not so much by force of sound as by force of suggestion. It beats upon us like the sum of a thousand little currents of telepathy. The crowd expresses its views with a subtle, compelling voice.

Crowd and choir—their cases are dissimilar, though parallel. In the crowd the unanimous thing is an idea born alike in many minds. In the choir the unanimous thing is a tune or words running to a tune, or a harmony or a rhythm or all of these, at any rate something that is made out of words and music; and to complete the parallel it must be born alike in many throats. In this word 'alike' lie the chief problems of choral singing and the key to all its virtues. There must be unity in the whole substance of the singing, unity in the pronouncing of words, in the utterance and stress of words, in the emotional colouring of words, in every detail of vocal expression, in the way of giving shape to a melody, in the way of giving life to a rhythm, in emphasis, in shading, in loud and soft, in beginnings, in endings, in middles.

THINK of the number of ways in which a group of words can be spoken, the various habits of good speech or bad speech, of local dialect or personal dialect, that distinguish one person's utterance from another. Think of the number of ways in which a group of notes can be sung. Twenty well-known singers will show you twenty ways. The capacity of the human voice to be different from its fellows is without limit. And so, when we first bring a hundred human voices together we have collected a hundred disparities. To reduce them to a unity we have to sift out their very elements and crystallize them afresh, a process which, if carried out thoroughly, would take more time and patience than belong to earthly choirs. But within the range of human persistence enough can be done to transform the whole face of a choir's singing.

In certain ways help is ready at hand. Choral singers are not quite so bad as the twenty well-known artists who figured in the last paragraph. Solo singers have positive qualities and unyielding habits; average choral singers are luckily of a more neutral cast and submit readily to direction. Again, there may be local habits of speech which make for unity in the delivery of words, especially in the all-important matter of vowels. The colour of good vowels in choral singing is like the colour of warm sunlight on a landscape, the light which picks out and intensifies the greens and browns and purples in a scene which on a dull day would be drab and lifeless. Indefinite vowels are the November mists—one might, with point, call them the London fogs—of choral singing.

It is to the smaller towns that we look for homogeneity in the build of speech, and therefore, of song. Many a colliery glee-club or choir of mill girls has this gift of nature, the solvent of half the labour that lies on the road to choral art. But without these aids a choral trainer of genius may bring his choir into unity. Patient exercising, always with a definite point of application, carried on for a quarter of an hour at every rehearsal, month after month, will bring any body of singers into a smooth-working whole as inevitably as the daily Muller will harmonize a body of muscles. Such patient husbandry is performed usually in quiet corners that are not sought out by the limelight of publicity. The real expert in choral training is often a local singing teacher without a letter to his name.

AND when this unity has been attained, by so much hard labour, what is the result? A mere mechanical perfection? Yes, but without mechanical perfection we can produce no artistic result from any musical instrument, whether it be a piano, a saxophone, or a choir. If the great instrument that is fashioned out of human organs and souls is not in good mechanical order it will have little power of expressiveness. When a solo singer delivers a phrase of song in such a way as to give you a thrill of artistic pleasure, what is it that conveys the thrill? You may talk airily of mind and heart and personality flowing from singer to listener, but what really happens is that a sequence of minute effects of tone and emphasis and shading is carried by air waves from a mouth to an ear-drum. There may be many other sequences of effects that would do just as well; every soloist will use a different sequence. How is the same thrill to be produced by a choir? Only by all the singers using the same sequence of little effects, for if they adopt different ones these will neutralize each other and the aggregate result will be impersonal, matter-of-fact; whereas, if that phrase of song comes from many mouths with the same minutiae of utterance, the aggregate will be an intensification of all that it means as an appeal to mind and sense. And it is all done by mere mechanical perfection, the 'unity' that is the key-word of this article.

It is for this unity and its symptoms and effects that we should prime our ears when we listen to a choir. How shall we know that it is present? Here are a few specimen tests. Listen to the vowels, which are the colours on the choral palette. Is each vowel a real thing, different from the others, or are they diluted with a nondescript 'er' sound? If you have ever heard a really good 'oo' or 'ee' from fifty voices you will know what is good or bad in choral vowels. Listen to the consonants, especially at the ends of words. Is it 'Hail, smiling morn,' that you hear, or 'Hay, smily mor'? Does a phrase of song reach you, note by note, clear in its beginnings, clear in its middle, clear in its ending? Does a chord of voices sound like one instrument or like several? When that chord is sung to a word of poetic significance, is it subtly coloured by the feeling of the word; is the verbal colour of a passage reflected in vocal colour; is the singing a tale of moods? Has it rhythm, or merely progress? Such hints are a haphazard guide. If the list were extended it would lead up to a few such generalities as these: Do you feel that the singers are singing to you or to each other? Has the singing a glossy or a matt surface? Are you listening to a concentration of the human voice or merely an accumulation?

And, furthermore, is there any real occasion for this questioning? In the presence of the best orchestral playing, violin playing, piano playing and solo singing I can imagine the mind being engaged with certain tests of quality, but when the sublimated human singing machine is sparking on all six—forgive the vulgarity—I do not think that many hows and whys will be asked.

SOME of the first necessities of good choral singing have not been touched upon in this article because they scarcely need pointing out. A choir should be a fair balance of sopranos, contraltos, tenors and basses. The voices should be of pleasant quality, not harsh, or breathy, or wobbly. The singing should be in tune. The style of the singing should be in accordance with the style of the music. Such requirements are obvious. They can all be satisfied, while the essential quality that I have dimly described is lacking.

One question I would like to ask on my own part. Can this essential quality be conveyed by the microphone? Some day, I hope, the test will be made.

THE series of readings from the Old Testament, in which so many of the finest passages from the greatest prose book in the English language have been recited week by week, has now closed. It will be resumed in the autumn, and in the meantime its place will be taken on Sunday afternoons by a series of readings from those great works that can most truly be called the foundations of English poetry. The series will start today with the early period, including William Langland, the author of 'Piers Plowman,' and Geoffrey Chaucer, of the immortal 'Canterbury Tales.'

5.30-5.45 A MISSIONARY TALK

Dr. DUGALD CHRISTIE: 'Medical Work in Mukden'

S.B. from Edinburgh

TO hold the Imperial Order of the Double Dragon and the Order of the Precious Star is in itself an indication that the foreigner so honoured has done great service to the Chinese; but when one hears that Dr. Dugald Christie is the only British subject to whom, during his lifetime, a public memorial has ever been erected by the Chinese, one realizes that his work must have been of a truly exceptional character. In this afternoon's talk Dr. Christie, who was formerly Superintendent of the Mukden Medical Mission and Principal of Mukden Medical College, will recount some of the achievements of modern medical science in the historic land of Manchuria.

Appeal on behalf of the Clinic for Rheumatic Diseases, by Sir THOMAS HORDER

RHEUMATISM is well known to be a widespread complaint, but probably few people realize that it costs the country two millions a year in sick benefit, and over three million weeks of work. At a recent meeting held under the auspices of the British Red Cross Society it was decided to start a campaign to establish special clinics for the treatment of rheumatism, the first in London, followed by others in the centres of other thickly-populated areas. The cost of the first will be £40,000; when founded, it will be self-supporting, and £18,000 has already been received. It is for help towards raising the remaining £22,000 that Sir Thomas Horder is to appeal tonight.

Contributions should be addressed to Sir Arthur Stanley, Rheumatic Clinic Fund, British Red Cross Society, 19, Berkeley Street, W.1.

Make Good Fortune a Certainty

Your Future is too important to leave in the hands of fate. You cannot afford to take chances when your own later years and the welfare of your family are at stake. The day will come when you may want to retire. Make sure you will have enough money to retire on. The day may come when your family is bereft of the breadwinner. Make sure they, too, will have enough to live on in that unhappy event.

£300 A YEAR FOR LIFE FROM AGE 55

By investing a small sum annually with the Sun Life of Canada, at age 55 you will become entitled to £300 a year for the rest of your life—however long you live. The same investment assures your family £2,400, plus accumulated profits, in the event of your earlier death. If that occurs through an accident an extra £2,400 will be given them.

There are advantages, too. For instance, you save a substantial sum in Income Tax each year. This is additional profit, money which otherwise you must pay to the Income Tax Collector. Then if, through illness or accident, you should become incapacitated and permanently unable to earn your living, no further deposits need be made, and you will be paid £24 a month until your £300 a year is due.

All these benefits and safeguards accrue from depositing a sum you can spare each year out of your income with the Sun of Canada. The assets of this great Annuity Company now exceed £82,000,000, and are under strict Government supervision. The Company's progress has been phenomenal, and for the 8th year in succession it has increased its bonus. Why not share in its success and make your financial future safe, whatever happens? Fill in and post the Inquiry Form to-day.

FILL IN AND POST THIS FORM TO-DAY AND LEARN HOW EASILY YOU CAN SECURE INDEPENDENCE FOR YOURSELF AND SECURITY FOR YOUR FAMILY.

3.30 AN INSTRUMENTAL CONCERT

THE AUGMENTED STATION ORCHESTRA, conducted by WARWICK BRAITHWAITE

Overture, 'A Roman Carnival' Berlioz

THIS is surely one of the most exhilarating pieces of music ever written. Its themes are taken from Berlioz' Opera, Benvenuto Cellini, which was produced in 1838, but was not a great success as a whole.

At the opening we find ourselves in the midst of Carnival jollity.

In a moment, however, there comes a lovely slow tune, given to Cor Anglais, with but a slight accompaniment, mainly with plucked Strings.

Then the Violin takes up the slow tune, Flutes weaving another one in with it. Further treatment of this tune follows.

All this is introductory—an Overture to an Overture, so to speak. At last comes a quick passage, with a change to six-in-a-bar time (beginning with Muted Strings) and with this we dash into the Overture proper—a lively and brilliant thing, full of fine orchestral effects.

Symphony, 'From the New World'.... Dvorak

THIS Symphony consists of four separate Movements. They are quite distinct, though from the Second Movement onwards one constantly hears bits of tunes from the other Movements.

The First Movement begins with a portentous and rather gloomy Introduction. Soon, however, this gives way to a vigorous, lively piece of music.

The Second Movement was intended, it is said, to express the composer's reflections on Hiawatha's courtship of Minnehaha. Certainly the greater part of it is like a very expressive love-song.

The Scherzo reminds us that Dvorak, the son of a butcher-keeper, never lost his love of peasant ways. There is something here of the countryman's boisterous good humour—almost, we might say, of the horse-play variety.

The Last Movement is forceful and dramatic.

Concerto Grieg

FIRST MOVEMENT (Moderately quick).—

After a preliminary flourish on the Piano, the First Main Tune is given out. It consists chiefly of a little curt phrase in Woodwind, and a more suave phrase, which is at first given to Clarinet and Bassoon, and then repeated at great length. This whole (fairly long) Tune is repeated on the Piano. Then follows a longish passage of rapid work for the Piano and Strings and Woodwind. At the end of this there is something of a climax, and then comes the beautiful Second Main Tune.

NIEDZIELSKI

plays a Chopin Pianoforte Concerto from Cardiff this afternoon.

SECOND MOVEMENT (Slow).—This is a brief, highly expressive Movement. It opens with a long tune given to Muted Strings. At the end of this the Piano enters with a long, rhapsodical passage (lightly accompanied). Eventually, Flute and Clarinet quietly suggest the Tune with which the Movement opened, and this the Piano then declaims at full length.

THIRD MOVEMENT (Quick and emphatic).—A few soft, detached chords in the Orchestra, a very loud Piano flourish, and one loud chord (Full Orchestra), and we are plunged into a lively Dance. The Dance is interrupted for a time, whilst we hear, as it were in the distance, a song. The Dance soon returns and, at the end, the song-tune is declaimed loudly by Piano and Orchestra.

5.0 Mrs. L. K. HEAL; 'More Home-made Sweets'

AMONGST all the standardization and uniformity and mass production that distinguish modern life, people often crave for the more homely, more individual products of a generation or two ago. One instance of this reaction was the success of Mrs. Heal's last talk on how to make the old-fashioned sweets, and many hundreds of recipes were sent out to listeners who wanted to make them for themselves. There will, therefore, be a large and enthusiastic audience for her second talk this afternoon.

5.15 THE CHILDREN'S HOUR
'The Organ-Man' and other Songs at the Piano by HELEN ALSTON
Piano Solos by CECIL DIXON
'The Button—and How the King of Nosehadonia Lost and Found It,' by JAMES WATT
More about 'Training for the School Sports,' by GEORGE NICOL

ALTHOUGH he had a very large and varied output, Saint-Saëns is known to us largely by two classes of work—Opera and Orchestral music. In his Pianoforte music we find some of his most graceful writing—racy, resourceful, amiable and unceasingly fluent, with now and then a clear trace of his classical leanings.

UPON Gabriel Fauré, who died in 1924, in his eightieth year, a great many official distinctions were conferred, including the rare one of a 'National Homage' at the Sorbonne in 1922, when he was elected to the highest class in the Legion of Honour. Considering that he produced a great quantity (over 120 works) of charming music, eclectic and urbane, typical of the best qualities in French music of his day, it is somewhat surprising that comparatively little of it is commonly played here.

9.35 'SPEED'
A Tragi-Comic Fantasy of Gods and Mortals
by Charles Croker
Written specially for radio transmission

THIS, it is claimed, is definitely a radio play; a play written for broadcasting, in a technique founded on the needs of the microphone and not on the traditions of the stage. There is, therefore, no occasion to give details of scenes for the play is self-contained and demands no introduction, nor any 'stage directions.' If the author has been successful, this fantasy of the gods on high Olympus and the speed-mad, self-destructive mortals below will tell its own story in its own way.

All that is asked of listeners is that they are in their 'listening chairs' by 9.35 p.m. prompt, and that they give as much attention to the transmission of the radio play as they would to a performance of a similar nature in a theatre.

Have you a mouth?

PLAIN WATER WONT CLEAN IT-MILTON WILL

YOU wash your hands, with soap and water. You polish your teeth, with tooth-paste and water. But what about your mouth? Your mouth, that you use day and night—for eating, drinking and breathing—surely your mouth is doubly important—it must be kept clean.

And even more serious—any doctor or any dentist will tell you that your mouth is where bacteria develop—and lessen your general efficiency enormously.

But wash your mouth with a spoonful of Milton in a glass of water, and you keep it not only fresh and clean, but absolutely and entirely free from bacteria. It is so simple—so easy—so quick. In fact, Milton washes your mouth as thoroughly as it cleans false teeth. Milton (with an astonishing folder enclosed) costs 6d, 1/-, 1/6 or 2/6 a bottle.

THE STATION ORCHESTRA

Second Suite from 'The Maid of Arles' ('L'Arlesienne') Bizet
 Gipsy Suite German

THE Second Suite made from Bizet's music to Daudet's play of Provençal life contains:—

(1) PASTORALE. The chief melody in this piece is taken from a peasant's chorus in the play (Bizet also uses it for a song, Le Matin).

(2) INTERMEZZO. The melody of this is familiar because Bizet used it as the basis of a setting of the Agnus Dei.

(3) MINUET.

(4) FARANDOLE. This, in the play, was a chorus sung in praise of St. Floi. After a March-like introduction, an old Provençal song-and-dance tune comes in. This is the Farandole, and with it the March theme is later combined.

SOME of the most charming light dances of our time are the work of Edward German. This Suite, first performed at a Crystal Palace the character comedienne, will travel round the frequencies this week. On Monday she will broadcast from Belfast and Newcastle; on Tuesday from Glasgow; Wednesday from Cardiff and Aberdeen; and Thursday from Manchester.

Saturday Concert in 1892, contains four Movements illustrating different sides of gipsy life, as seen through the eyes of the Composer.

The First is entitled Melancholy Waltz; the Second is a quick, flamboyant Dance, beginning with a stamping rhythm; the Third, a Love Duet, light and graceful, is again in Waltz style; the Fourth, The Reel, is a Tarantella, a descendant of that wild dance which in a simpler age was esteemed a cure for the bite of the tarantula spider.

4.15 Mr. J. C. SQUIRE: 'Modern Poets—II, Robert Bridges'

THE impervious silence of the Poet Laureate has become such an accepted fact that the younger generation has grown up, on the whole, quite unacquainted with his work, and to them he is probably known less by any of his own poetry than by his great anthology, 'The Spirit of Man.' In reality, however, Dr. Bridges is one of the few poets of our time who has recaptured the pure classical idea, and anybody who is induced to read him after hearing this talk will be grateful to Mr. Squire for a new conception of the beautiful that he will find he has acquired.

5.0 Holidays Abroad: Mr. GERALD BRENNAN—'Spain—I'

NOW that so many of us aspire to holidays abroad, there is a widespread demand for helpful information about the holiday resorts of Europe; not merely where are the cathedrals and casinos, the beaches and boleries and brasseries that one wants to visit when one gets to one's destination, but, first of all, all about the business of getting there—passports, customs, coinage, expenses, what to take and what to wear. All these matters, as well as the attractions of Spain itself, will be dealt with in Mr. Brennan's talk tonight. This talk is the first of a series of weekly Foreign Travel Talks—to be continued throughout the summer. Next Tuesday Mr. Brennan will conclude his advice on touring in Spain. After that will come further talks on Italy, France, Holland, etc.

MODERN FRENCH PIANOFORTE MUSIC (1900-1925)

Played by Mrs. NORMAN O'NEILL

Sarabande (from 'Almanach aux Images') Grovlez
Two Preludes (from Six Preludes) Roger Ducasse
Un Soir (One evening) Florent Schmitt
Une vieille boîte à musique (An Old Musical Box) from Suite 'Cerdana' D. de Séverac
The Return of the Mule Drivers

THOUGH Gabriel Grovlez (born 1879) began his career as a concert pianist, he has become best known as a Conductor of the Paris Opera and a Composer of songs, Pianoforte pieces, Symphonic Poems and Ballets. He has also collaborated in editing the great edition of Rameau's works, and has brought out two other excellent collections of old French Operatic airs and instrumental pieces.

The graceful Sarabande is one of a series of pieces collectively known as L'Almanach aux Images (The Picture Calendar), based on poems of 'Tristan Klingsor.' In verse and music the piece conjures up an impression of old-time grace and fine manners.

ROGER DUCASSE (born 1873), a pupil of Fauré, won one of the Rome Prizes in 1902. He was one of the composers who, with Fauré at their head, founded in 1910 the French Independent Music Society, a body interested in making known modern music.

FLORENT SCHMITT, another pupil of Fauré (of Massenet also), and a Rome Prize winner, was born in 1870. He is known to us chiefly by a few chamber pieces, in some of which there is a curious tartness. His output includes a Tone Poem on Poe's The Haunted Palace, incidental music for Anthony and Cleopatra, church music, Ballets, etc.

DEODAT DE SÉVERAC (1873-1921) seemed to find happy inspiration in open-air scenes. Amongst his interests was folk-song collecting. His delicate fancy is charmingly illustrated in the Pianoforte Suites, of which the best known is In Languedoc. Cerdania, sub-titled Picturesque Studies, contains some of his liveliest sketches. The Return of the Mule Drivers is accompanied by cheerily tinkling bells. We hear the clattering of the hoots, above which rises now and again a fragment of a folk song sung by the drivers.

7.25 Prof. A. Y. CAMPBELL: 'Greek Plays for Modern Listeners—VI, Survivals and Influences.' S.B. from Liverpool

IN this series of talks Professor Campbell has explained the underlying ideas of classical Greek drama and illustrated their working out in the plays of the three great tragic dramatists—Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides—and of Aristophanes the satirist, the Gilbert of ancient Greece. This evening he will conclude the series by surveying the later course of the Greek theatre; the fusion of tragedy and comedy, the influence of Aristotle's theorizing, and the value to modern readers of these plays written for audiences who lived more than two thousand years ago.

HAVING surveyed the study of heredity, what it is and what it does, Mrs. Mary Adams closes her series of talks by examining the implications that emerge from its results. Can man direct his own evolution until the superman of fantasy becomes a scientific fact? That is the great and startling question that she will pose tonight.

Welsh Rhapsody .. German

THE Welsh Rhapsody (written for the Cardiff Musical Festival of 1904) is woven without seam, but has four pretty definite sections, a little like those of a Symphony, and each of them grows out of some famous old Welsh melody or melodies.

The FIRST (a stately one) is based on 'Loudly Proclaim.'

The SECOND (a skittish one) is made out of 'Hunting the Hare' and 'The Bells of Aberdovey.'

The THIRD (a tender one) brings in 'David of the White Rock.'

The FOURTH (a march-like Finale) uses the famous 'Men of Harlech.'

Scherzo, 'The Sorcerer's Apprentice' ... Dukas
DUKAS' piece is a humorous musical illustration of a ballad by Goethe about a magician's 'prentice-boy, who, while his master is away, copies his signs and spells, and raises spooks, but can't lay them. He makes them work for him—fetch buckets of water, and swish them around, and sweep away vigorously.

Then he forgets the spell; the spirits can't be stopped, and the house is getting flooded. In the nick of time the sorcerer himself returns and removes the spell with a solemn incantation.

Sea Symphony — Second
Movement (without Choir)
Vaughan Williams

IN the Sea Symphony Vaughan Williams took parts of poems by Walt Whitman and wrought them into a work for Chorus and Orchestra.

The Second Movement is entitled On the Beach at Night Alone. The words are from one of the Sea Drift poems, the title of which the composer adopted for the Movement. It is a meditative Nocturne having in its first bars a motif associated at the beginning of the work with the words 'Behold the sea itself'—a motif that, in one shape or another, often recurs in the work.

Four Movements from Eleventh Divertimento
Mozart

'DIVERTIMENTO' (Diversion) well describes many of Mozart's sociable, easy-going works, that are lighter in mood and build than most of his symphonic works. The Eleventh Divertimento (K. 251) belongs to his Salzburg days, when he was about twenty. The complete work contains five Movements—a brilliant opening one, a Minuet, a slow Movement, a second Minuet with three Variations, and a happy-go-lucky Rondo.

Endurance in Sport—VI, The Extreme Effort and the Greatest Possible Speed'

As times get faster and faster, and record after record is lowered, one begins to wonder how far progress will ultimately go. But, however much the technique of athletics is improved, the athlete will always be up against the fundamental limitations imposed by nature on human effort. The exertion expended by a man running 100yds. in ten seconds may amount to as much as eight horse-power, and he may do enough work against the internal friction of his own muscles to lift him vertically as high as the cross of St.
Paul's. In the final talk of his series, Professor Hill will discuss how science can investigate the onset of fatigue—an enquiry of the utmost importance in industry as well as in sport.

8.10 'THE DREAM
OF GERONTIUS'

By CARDINAL NEWMAN

Set to Music by EDWARD ELGAR
(See also centre column.)

IN 1865, Cardinal Newman wrote the poem,
The Dream of Gerontius, inspired by his thoughts as he sat by the deathbed of a friend.
It pictures the dream of a dying man, as he anticipates what lies beyond.

Elgar, himself of the same faith as Newman, long afterwards set the poem to music, and his setting had its first performance, in 1900, at the Birmingham Festival.

The best preparation for a first hearing of Gerontius is a reading of the poem itself. This can be obtained in various editions, the cheapest costing one shilling.

In the FIRST PART of the work we hear GERONTIUS (Tenor), the PRIEST (Bass), and ASSISTANTS (Chorus).

The music opens with a very beautiful Prelude, and then follow these solo and chorus passages:—
GERONTIUS: 'Jesu, Maria—I am near to death.'
ASSISTANTS: 'Kyrie Eleison.'

GERONTIUS: 'Rouse thee, my fainting soul.'
ASSISTANTS: 'Be merciful, be gracious; spare him, Lord.'

GERONTIUS: 'Sanctus fortis, Sanctus Deus.'

GERONTIUS: 'I can no more.'

ASSISTANTS: 'Rescue him, O Lord, in this his evil hour.'

GERONTIUS: 'Novissima hora est.'

THE PRIEST: 'Proficiscere, anima Christiana.'

ASSISTANTS: 'Go, in the name of Angels and Archangels.'

In the SECOND PART we hear THE SOUL OF GERONTIUS (Tenor), GUARDIAN ANGEL (Mezzo-Soprano), THE ANGEL OF AGONY (Bass), and DEMONS, ANGELICALS and SOULS (Chorus). It opens with a brief Introduction, and then follows:—

SOUL OF GERONTIUS: 'I went to sleep; and now I am refreshed.'

ANGEL: 'My work is done, my task is o'er.'

Dialogue.—ANGEL and SOUL: 'All hail, my child and brother, hail!'

DEMONS: 'Lowborn clods of brute earth.'

ANGEL: 'It is the restless pausing of their being.'

DEMONS: 'The mind, bold and independent.'

Dialogue.—SOUL and ANGEL: 'I see not those false spirits.'

ANGELICALS: 'Glory to Him.'

ANGEL: 'They sing of thy approaching agony.'

SOUL: 'But hark! a grand mysterious harmony!'

ANGEL: 'And not the threshold, as we traverse it.'

ANGELICALS: 'Praise to the Holiest in the height.'

Dialogue.—ANGEL and SOUL: 'Thy judgment
now is near.'

ANGEL OF THE AGONY: 'Jesu! by that shuddering dread which fell on Thee.'

VOICES ON EARTH: 'Be merciful, be gracious;
spare him, Lord.'

ANGEL: 'Praise to His Name.'

SOUL: 'Take me away.'

SOULS IN PURGATORY: 'Lord, Thou has been our refuge.'

ANGEL: 'Softly and gently, dearly ransomed soul.'

(The titles are given by kind permission of Messrs.
Novello and Co.)

It must not be understood that these Solos and Choruses are cut off from one another in the way usual in the older Oratorios. Each of the two parts in the work is continuous, and is bound into a whole by the use of leading motifs, which are first heard in the Orchestral Prelude.

 Conducted by JOSEPH LEWIS

JOHN TURNER (Tenor)
 CHORUS and ORCHESTRA
 Hymn, 'Onward, Christian Soldiers' (Tune: 'St. Gertrude')

ORCHESTRA
 Overture to the Ball (di Ballo)

THIS work was written for the Birmingham Festival of 1870.

After a short Introduction, there begins a very rhythmically leaping dance-tune (started by the First Violin—chief accompaniment, Horns). Later, there follow several waltz-tunes. Towards the end the dancers break into a Galop.

9.50 ORCHESTRA

Finale from 'Irish' Symphony
 WHEN Sullivan came home from Leipzig after completing his period of study as Mendelssohn Scholar, he had to cast about for work, like most young musicians. Later in life, speaking of this time, he said: 'I was ready to undertake anything that came in my way—symphonies, overtures, ballets, anthems, hymn-tunes, songs, part-songs, a concerto for the 'cello, and eventually comic and light operas.'
 His Irish Symphony (the only work he wrote in that form) belongs to this period. It was sketched during a visit to Ireland when he was twenty-one.

There are in the work four Movements, of which we are to hear the last—a vigorous, well-sustained affair.

10.0 WEATHER FORECAST, SECOND GENERAL NEWS BULLETIN

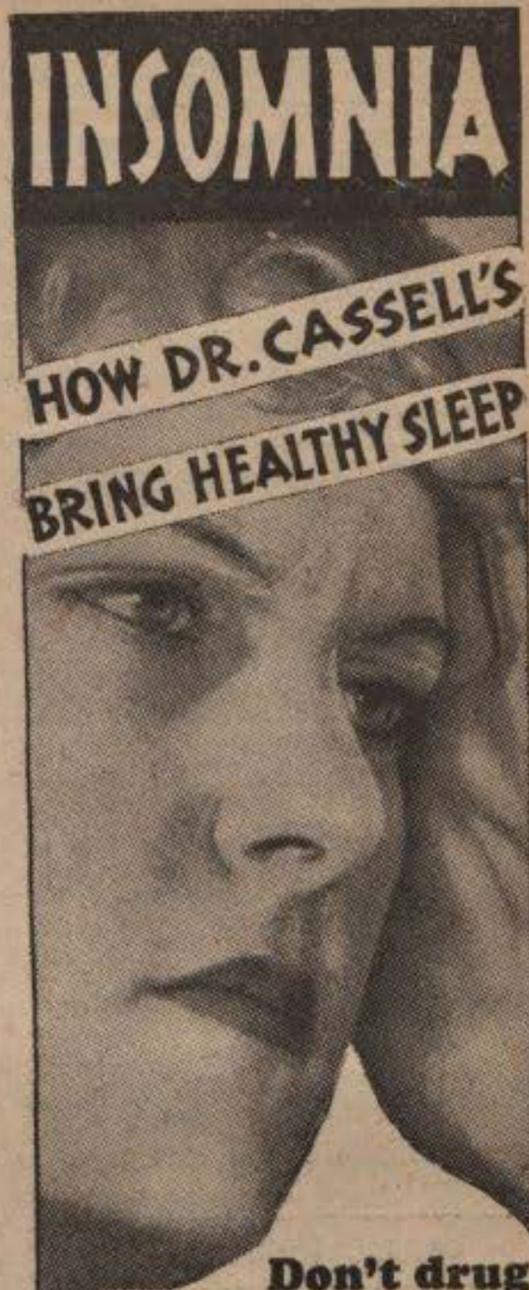

10.15-11.15 DANCE MUSIC: THE RIVIERA CLUB DANCE BAND, under the direction of GENE MORELLE, from The Riviera Club

(Wednesday's Programmes continued on page 662.)

Sir ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

This great British composer is perhaps better known to us for his comic opera scores than for his more serious works, which will be heard in 5GB's 'Sullivan Programme' at 9.0 tonight.

INSOMNIA
 HOW DR. CASSELL'S
 BRING HEALTHY SLEEP

Don't drug yourself to sleep

The fear of sleeplessness and its consequences may so dominate the mind as to become the actual cause of insomnia. Remember three hours' sleep is sufficient to maintain strength—even if it is fitful sleep. Avoid obtaining sleep at the expense of the nerves. The nerves should be nourished, not drugged. There is no nerve nourishment to equal Dr. Cassell's Tablets; they contain:—Blood nutrients, Hypophosphites for the Nerves, valuable Stomachics, and Digestive Enzymes. All vital elements for building up the system. Start a course to-day and soon enjoy healthy sleep once more.

News and Notes from Southern Stations.

Sheffield.

The Yorkshire String Quartet, which is one of the finest in this part of the country, will broadcast from Sheffield on Wednesday evening, April 11. The programme will also include songs by Winifred Osborne (contralto).

Leeds-Bradford.

The recent appeal by Mr. Harold J. Wright on behalf of the Bingley Hospital resulted in £106 10s. 8d. being sent in by listeners. Of this, £100 has been placed to the credit of the Endowment Funds, while the remainder is to be used as current income.

Bournemouth.

'China from a Woman's Point of View' is the title of Mrs. Y. Curtis's talk on Friday, April 13. The time is 5 o'clock.

Mr. Risdon Bennett, who has given many popular talks from the local studio on the charm of Dorset, will be heard on Tuesday, April 10, in an interesting chat entitled 'The Call of Wessex.'

Plymouth.

Citizen Morot, a play in one act by Alice Clayton Greene, will be presented by the Micrognomes on Tuesday, April 10.

An appeal on behalf of the St. John Ambulance Brigade will be broadcast on Sunday, April 8, by Mr. Hedley V. Miller, District Commissioner.

The Waldorf Dance Band, directed by Ted Coleman, will give its first performance during a variety programme on Thursday, April 12, when the artists include Gaby Valle (soprano), Jack Train (entertainer), and Anne Lampard (Negro spirituals).

Manchester.

Items on the Northumbrian pipes, which differ very considerably from their Highland relatives, will be given by Tom Clough during an orchestral programme on Monday, April 9.

The Band of the Loyal Regiment, which, until its name was changed in 1919, was the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, is to give a concert in the studio on Easter Sunday, April 8.

Some excerpts from Part III of Handel's popular Oratorio, The Messiah, sung by the Manchester Cathedral Choirs, under the direction of Dr. A. W. Wilson, will be relayed from the Cathedral on Easter Sunday afternoon, April 8.

A survey of the music of the revue from its earlier stages to that of recent years will be broadcast on Wednesday, April 11, when the Station Orchestra is to be supported by Harold Kimberley, Olive Groves, and the Six Harmony Girls.

Cardiff.

'Wild Oats' sown by Blonde and Brunette and John Rorke, assisted by the Station Orchestra, is a feature of Friday, April 13.

An afternoon programme of Spring Song will be given on Wednesday, April 11, when Miss Mai Ramsay is the vocalist. Miss Ramsay, who played the lead in Polly on tour, is at present living in South Wales.

A light programme on Tuesday, April 10, will include items by Stainless Stephen and songs by Grace Daniels and the Orchestra. There will also be a play centring round that ever-popular character, the retired sea captain and his attempts to remain in single blessedness.

The opening concert of the National Orchestra of Wales, conducted by Sir Henry Wood, will be given in the City Hall, Cardiff, on Thursday, April 12, and broadcast from Cardiff and Daventry Experimental Station. The solo artists include Marie Wilson (violinist) and Parry Jones (tenor).

24 CHILDREN'S HOURS every day!

A programme of happiness has been broadcast to little children for over 40 years—not by the B.B.C. but the N.S.P.C.C.

This great Society has "Stations" throughout the country. It has over who search out unhappy children and shield them from IGNORANT, NEGLECTFUL and BRUTAL parents and guardians. Over 3½ million little ones have been befriended in this way. But ten more "uncles" are now needed to bring the staff up to pre-war level. Will you, as a lover of little children help to extend its work for the less fortunate of our girls and boys?

240 "Uncles"

Lord Ullswater will tell you more about the N.S.P.C.C. on Sunday, April 15th. Please listen—and HELP!

Communications and gifts will be welcomed by WILLIAM J. ELLIOTT, Director, The National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Victory House, Leicester Square, London, W.C.2.

EASTER is, to us, primarily one of the two greatest feasts of the Christian year. But besides being a Christian, it is a Nature festival, and as such it is observed with due ceremony in many non-Christian and only partially Christian parts of the world. In this afternoon's talk Miss Helen Greig Souter, who will be remembered as the author of some particularly interesting broadcasts on Northern Africa, will describe some of the customs with which Easter is honoured there.

MODERN FRENCH PIANOFORTE MUSIC
Played by Mrs. NORMAN O'NEILL

Jardins sous la pluie (Gardens in the

Minstrels Debussy

L'Isle Joyeuse (The Island of Joy)

MRS. O'NEILL'S performance of Debussy's pieces in the recent 'New Friends in Music' Series will be pleasantly remembered. Here are three of his more familiar impressions. The first is that of incessant, gently-falling rain. At times we may imagine we see flashes of summer lightning and hear the faint rumble of distant thunder.

Minstrels wittily suggests the antics of a Negro band, with its stark, syncopated rhythms, the oily vulgar tune that comes swaying in, and the clank of the banjo.

IN The Island of Joy we may imagine a pleasure party, depicted in gay colours. It will be noted how many different varieties of tone colour are used, and how the composer thus uses the pianoforte, in a sense, orchestrally.

In all these pieces Debussy has something very personal to say, and though more startling innovations in the last twenty years have made some of his work appear old-fashioned, most of it remains as fresh and interesting as when its striking combinations first fell, sometimes strangely, on the ears of a former generation.

7.25 Mr. R. S. LAMBERT: 'Pioneers of Social Progress—VI, William Lovett and the Discontent of the Under-dog'

THE Industrial Revolution that began in the latter part of the eighteenth century, generated, amongst its by-products, an intense and bitter discontent in the minds of the masses who suffered by it. This discontent, worked upon by different influences, manifested itself in different ways—the exploits of the Luddites and the machine-breakers, the campaigns for Parliamentary Reform, the Bristol Riots, and Chartism. In this talk Mr. Lambert will survey the evolution of the industrial masses, through friendly societies, trade unions, co-operative movements, and political leagues, from ill-directed violence to constitutional reform. He will deal particularly with the Chartist Movement, which at one point seemed almost capable of plunging England into a revolution such as those in which half the countries of Europe were involved at that time.

Overture, 'Tam o' Shanter' Drysdale

LEARMONT DRYSDALE was a prolific Scottish composer, who was born in Edinburgh in 1866, and died in 1909. His Tam o' Shanter (an orchestral 'Concert Overture'), written in a week in 1890, won the thirty-guinea prize of the Glasgow Society of Musicians. It deals with the weird and supernatural happenings in Burns's famous poem. It is headed with the line, 'The hour approaches, Tam maun ride,' and at the opening we hear the motif representing the frantic dash for safety of poor Tam, pursued by witches.

A further quotation from the poem, given in the score, describes the wild night, in which—

. . . a child might understand

The de'il had business on his hand.

Six Waltzes from Op. 39

Brahms, arr. Gerrard Williams

SINCE the time when the German country dance became the Waltz of the ballroom, has any composer of importance existed who has not written Waltzes? The Waltzes of some of the greatest composers have been amongst the most lovable compositions. Probably, many people would feel that Brahms never wrote more beautiful music than in some of his Waltzes. Yet, strangely enough, not more than one or two are really widely known.

He wrote Waltzes for various small combinations of performers. There are, for instance, his Ljebestlied, or Love Song Waltzes for Vocal Quartet and Piano Duet. Today we are to hear some of his Waltzes, originally written for the Piano, and newly arranged for Military Band.

MELSA (Violin)

THE BOURNEMOUTH MUNICIPAL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA (50 Performers)

Conducted by Sir DAN GODFREY

Overture to 'Le Baruffe Chiozzette' (The Squabbles at Chiozzia).....Sinigaglia
Ninth Symphony, in D Minor.....Beethoven (Without Choral ending)

WE are proud to remember that this wonderful work was written to the order of our own Philharmonic Society.

There are four Movements in the Symphony, the last of which is very broken in character, and very dramatic. This, the choral finale, will not be given today.

Of the first three Movements each is in a different way powerful and moving. From the mysterious opening sounds the FIRST MOVEMENT seems to show the Composer face to face with the immensities and problems of life, and in music expressing what could be expressed in no other way.

There follow the SCHERZO of boisterous vitality (with an interlude of charming rustic simplicity), and the song-like, gravely beautiful SLOW MOVEMENT, which, when the work is performed in full, passes without any pause into the LAST MOVEMENT.

MELSA and Orchestra
Violin Concerto, in D.....Paganini
Allegro maestoso in D Major, 4-4

SO uncanny was Paganini, both in his Violin-playing and in his weird personal appearance, that people often accused him of being in league with the Devil. Whatever grounds there are or are not for that theory, he seems to have definitely benefited his fellows by revealing new technical possibilities in Violin-playing.

Apparently, he wrote two complete Concertos, and left half-a-dozen others unfinished. Of the Concerto in D only one Movement is usually played, in the edition of Wilhelmj. It exhibits in full measure the brilliant devices with which Paganini loved to astonish his audiences.

ARE YOU LOSING WEIGHT ?

It may betoken Danger.

The first thing a doctor does, when an otherwise healthy man or woman starts losing weight, is to suspect that something is organically wrong, to fear that serious disease is imminent.

Now is the time to stop it. Correct the cause of the loss of weight and Nature itself will have a chance to defeat disease. If you're losing weight for no apparent reason, be advised. Start taking Cod Liver Oil to-day. Cod Liver Oil is the richest known source of the essential life-giving, flesh-producing elements. It's the best thing you could possibly take if you need to put on weight.

But don't try to take it in its old fishy tasting, smelly form. Take it in its new form. McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets. McCoy's Tablets are simply the valuable body-building elements extracted from the Cod Liver Oil, and concentrated in little sugar-coated tablets, with no taste, smell nor unpleasant after-effects. They're easy to carry and easy to take, but they're amazing in their results. Slip a box in your pocket to-day, and if after 30 days' treatment as prescribed you haven't put on at least 3 lbs. and are feeling fitter, stronger, better in every way, the makers will refund your money.

Any chemist will recommend McCoy's. 1/3 and 3/- the box. But insist on McCoy's Tablets, the original and only genuine. Refuse imitations. In case of difficulty, send direct to McCoy's laboratories, Norwich.

THE first song is sung by Lionel, who has lost his love 'Martha' (really Lady Harriet Durham in disguise). He tells of his sorrow at parting from her, and conjures her not to leave him in despair.

DON CAESAR DE BAZAN, to escape hanging, has married a veiled lady whom he does not know. After the ceremony she has gone away. He is searching for her, but she eludes him. 'Such,' he muses, 'is the promised but fading happiness of the profligate when nothing remains to him but the sad memory of the past.' Then he puts these sentiments into the song, 'There is a flow'r that bloometh.'

THE COMING OF THE GRAIL.

Wagner's Parsifal music forms the programme for tonight's National Concert from the Queen's Hall. This picture of the coming of the Holy Grail is reproduced from one of Willy Pogany's illustrations to the great legend on which Wagner's opera is based.

treats of that legendary relic of the Eucharist, the Holy Grail. The life of the Knights of the Grail is brought before us. Amfortas, the guardian of the holy vessel, has sinned, and has brought distress upon himself and his companions. Blessing comes to them again through Parsifal, the innocent youth who resists temptation.

The Prelude, from its first bars, invokes the emotional atmosphere of the whole drama. In particular, we hear in it much of the music that is associated with the Grail itself, and with the sufferings and heroism of the knights.

An evil magician, Klingsor, angry at his exclusion from the sacred Knighthood, has created an enchanted castle and garden. Here, with the help of Kundry, a beautiful woman, and her attendant Flower Maidens, he tempts the Knights. Parsifal is led there, and in this scene we hear their seductive music.

MURIEL BRUNSKILL and Orchestra

Kundry's Song, 'Herzeleid' (Heart of Sorrow, from Act II)

AFTER the temptations of the Flower Maidens have failed to move Parsifal, Kundry appears, bewitchingly beautiful. She sends away the maidens, and tells the youth many things that she has long waited to impart—that he was named Parsifal, 'the foolish pure one,' by his father King Gamuret, who died when his son was a babe. She goes on to describe the loving care of his mother Herzeleid, who, bereft of her husband, jealously shielded her son, and kept him in innocence. When he went away, and did not return, sorrow killed her.

ORCHESTRA

Prelude to Act III

PARSIFAL has wandered far, seeking the home of the Grail. Sadness and hopelessness have come upon the Knights meanwhile, and the Prelude depicts their dispirited mood.

As the concert version of the Prelude continues into the opening of the stage scene, we have a hint of the coming of Spring.

Good Friday Music

PARSIFAL has returned, victorious over temptations. With him is a veteran knight, Gurnemanz. These two gaze upon the loveliness of Nature aglow in the spring sunshine, and muse on the redemption of all creation.

HERBERT HEYNER and Orchestra

Amfortas' Prayer (from Act III)

AMFORTAS, wounded by Klingsor with the Sacred Spear, will not unveil the Grail, for he deems himself the most unworthy of men. He cries out in anguish, for no relief comes to him, either for body or soul. He calls upon his dead father, 'most pure one,' to beg Heaven for some relief for his pain.

ORCHESTRA

Interlude and Closing Scene

IN the last scene of the drama Parsifal returns to the home of the Grail, and touches Amfortas' wound with the Sacred Spear. It is at once healed and Amfortas is whole again. Parsifal uncovers the Grail, which glows with holy light.

The Knights and choirs of the Temple join in praise. The White Dove of the Grail, emblem of the Holy Spirit, descends and hovers over it, and the great Sacred Festival Drama is over.

BACH has put into his musical setting of the Passion of Jesus a wealth of poignant meaning, and yet he treats the story so simply that there is nothing any listener cannot understand. The Composer aims at making every hearer a participant in the events his music depicts.

The narrative is unfolded in solos and choruses. Every now and again are interpolated 'Chorales'—verses of Lutheran hymns, commenting on the story, and these are intended to represent the emotions and reflections of us listeners as we picture ourselves among the crowds looking on at the events described.

WHEN, in 1873, Manzoni, the great Italian writer, died, Verdi (then aged sixty) wrote this Requiem Mass in his memory. The work was first heard in England two years later, when the composer conducted the Royal Choral Society in it.

The Southern warmth of emotion and dramatic fire of the music distinguish the Mass from the majority of older settings. There is little benefit in making easy comparisons between the spirit of this music and that of the sacred works of Bach, Handel and Beethoven. It is best to listen to it without too rigid a conception of what sacred music should be. Whatever its divergences from the common outlook, its picturesque and often flamboyant ideas will be felt to be sincere and powerful.

Shave don't harrow

The ploughing of the human countenance with raspy razors, aided and abetted by arid lathers, is not to be encouraged.

Good lather will overcome a multitude of rasps. Of such is the water-bubble lather of Gibbs Shaving Cream. A soaking, saturating lather that reduces every last bristle to abject surrender, and then packs closely round the fainting form to hold it upright for the skin-level swish that leaves the face as smooth as ivory.

Concurrently over the occupied area the Cold Cream in Gibbs lather is doing its cooling and comforting work. Healing the minute, invisible abrasions that cause tenderness—refreshing, making supple and revivifying the skin.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK!

A fried fish shop's an excellent place,
And the Kids, it is no good denying,
Set off at a terrible pace
When they smell there is anything frying.
And as long as they wish
For a smell of fried fish
They stand and enjoy it—an excellent dish,
For the shop uses Bisto with hake, cod or plaice
For delicious crisp browning when frying.

The Honourable Corpse.

I am sorry to have to record that the latter half of my sentence seemed to make the greater impression.

The telephone wires began to hum, and a little band of Chinese soldiers despatched by the worried local commandant was just setting forth when—in rode the missing Ethelbert! There upon his bosom was the familiar crackling bulge of money still! It appeared he had been led into the presence of the village headman, who was enjoying his siesta in a temple near by. The headman, half asleep, was too apathetic to decide what should be done with stray British homicides. Though unwilling to disturb himself, he at last decided to go and consult a friend, and so they all set forth, Ethelbert's pony—on which he was again mounted—being led by half-a-dozen village volunteers. The day was hot, the pony restless, and finally one of the volunteers whispered: 'For a dollar we'll let you go.' But Ethelbert, as I mentioned before, had no dollar—only fourteen thousand. So he unkindly turned to the sleepy headman and told him of the man's offer. In the confusion and recrimination that followed, Ethelbert found himself loosed, and he cantered away. It is to be hoped that that village will never hear of the fourteen thousand dollars their lack of observation caused them to miss.

For the most part, however, I remember Chinese and Lo-lo villagers in milder moods than on that occasion. In the southwest, Lo-los are the chief users of the old stone roads. These tribespeople belong to a race that probably peopled China long before the Chinese did; they are small and sturdy, sometimes fair-haired and grey-eyed, and they wear interesting tribal clothes. Some wear huge turbans; some little Mary Tudor coifs, hung with hundreds of little silver bangles; some wear leather bands round their heads, thickly studded with silver; nearly all are kilted, but there is one group that wears long narrow skirts bunched behind into a perfect imitation of the bustle of our English 1870's.

I remember one day being rowed out by a couple of glittering turbaned Lo-lo boatmen from one of the tribal villages of Yunnan to a water temple—a square shrine with curly roofs—bristling up in the middle of the lake. We had my dog Cowslip with us on that occasion—a dog who had such a horror of water that even a drop of rain would cow him utterly. I think he would have been an interesting subject for psycho-analysis. At any rate, that day the boat began to sink on the way home from the shrine. Lo-los are care-free sailors, and this boat had not been watertight, I suppose, since the day it was built. The kind boatmen, evidently prepared for the emergency, threw themselves into the water (it was only up to their armpits) and began pushing the sinking boat along. Our escort of two Chinese soldiers next sacrificed themselves with two loud splashes. Husbands, servants, hampers of sandwiches, and a heroic French banker followed, but all in vain—the water in the boat rose steadily. And then the eyes of all those in the water fell upon Cowslip, a large and heavy Chinese mastiff. In every language—French, Lo-lo, Chinese, English, and spontaneous Esperanto—Cowslip was condemned to the deep. But Cowslip would not go, and I—the only survivor in the boat—had not the heart to unwind his paralysed paws from about my neck. As the water rose up my figure, Cowslip, with cries of agony, climbed up me, as Noah climbed up Ararat, till at last he was wreathed about my neck, one heavy paw on my hat, and I was standing shakily under his weight, like a strong athlete upholding his wife and seven daughters at the circus. And in this submarine condition, with Cowslip clinging to the top of a human periscope, we reached the shore, the whole population of the Lo-lo village being there to see the incredible deference paid by foreigners to their dogs. But Cowslip took some time to forgive me, for he had got the tip of his tail wet.

This reminds me of travelling in north-eastern Korea once with Daisy, a strapping English pointer. We had spent the night in a Japanese inn; Japanese inns are too fragile in texture for dogs of Daisy's size and lack of discipline. She had not, of course, been allowed to set paw on the exquisite clean mats of the inn, but had been inadequately housed in a small bamboo kennel outside our window. But paper—the material of which our window was made—is no obstacle to a dog of Daisy's impulsive nature, and it was our constant care during that night to repel the tumultuous destructive batterings of Daisy upon the frail partition. After a sleepless night she was dragged into a train in the morning—a thing she had never patronized before. Daisy's horror of mechanically-propelled vehicles was almost as strong as Cowslip's aquaphobia. She and I sat in our rattling compartment, holding each other's paws tightly for moral support. The Japanese conductor knew no English, and I knew no Japanese, but there was no mistaking his command: 'That dog must go in the luggage van.' I, however, can mistake anything if I want to. I bowed as brightly as I could over the clinging form of Daisy, and said in English: 'Extremely comfortable, thank you very much, and the blue plush seats are such a pretty colour, too.' 'That dog,' said the conductor, patiently, in very slow, elementary Japanese, 'is not allowed here. It must go in the van.' 'Well,' I replied, winningly, 'coldish certainly, but not so cold as it was last week. I really think the spring will soon be here.' After half-a-dozen more attempts, the conductor was obliged to give it up, and I am sure he is left with the impression that the English are the most densely stupid race on the face of the earth. 'I couldn't possibly have made my meaning clearer,' he must have told his friends. 'Even her dog understood me.' And other railwaymen came and stood wondering round me, looking at the world's prize fool, sitting, coated with mud from dirty paws, the admitted inferior of her dog. . . . These foreigners. . . !

La Vallée des Cloches (The Valley of Bells) } Ravel
Jeux d'Eau (Fountains)

AS regards the laying out of musical ideas for the Pianoforte, Ravel is with justice reckoned one of the most imaginative and resourceful composers since Chopin.

The first of these two pieces is from the set entitled Mirrors (1905). Those who are familiar with one or other of Debussy's pieces in which bells figure (notably Cloches à travers les feuilles) will find it interesting to compare Ravel's treatment here of the sonorities of the little tinkling bells and the big booming ones.

Fountains, written in 1901, when Ravel was twenty-six, was the first piece in which he showed his brilliant powers in Pianoforte writing

Retrospect: The Cup Final and the Earlier Stages'

THE long battle for the Football Association Cup has now reached its final stage: the mighty have fallen round by round, until out of all the clubs whose hopes ran high three months ago only two survive, and the stage is set for the final act at Wembley a fortnight from today. In this evening's talk Mr. Allison (who is again to describe the Cup Final for some millions of listeners) will review the history of the previous rounds and forecast the chances of the two final contenders.

HIMSELF a brilliant essayist and literary critic, Mr. J. B. Priestley is equally well known as the editor of the English essayists, of Tom Moore's diary, and of the Bodley Head Book of Verse. His own books include a notable volume on that eccentric genius, Peacock, in the English Men of Letters series, and two of the most remarkable books published last year—'Adam in Moonshine' and

DEAFNESS

NO LONGER A HANDICAP
Even the 90% Deaf can now Hear!

No need now to wear clumsy, uncomfortable devices for the relief of deafness. Practically invisible and weighing but a few ounces, the Sonoma's Fortiphone is yet the most powerful and effective Hearing Aid the world has ever seen! It is the latest discovery of three eminent scientists who have devoted their lives to the relief of deafness. It is so powerful, so pure in tone, so entirely free from extraneous noises that it enables even the 90% Deaf to enjoy conversation immediately and to hear every word and note in Church, Theatre, and Concert Hall at 5, 50 or 150 feet, comfortably and without embarrassment. Undoubtedly one of the greatest marvels of modern times. Leading Aurists and Doctors recommend it.

All that is seen of the Fortiphone.

THOUSANDS NOW USE IT!

During the last two years thousands of Fortiphones have been sold and every day more and more deaf people are discarding less efficient aids for this new discovery, which has amazed the scientific world and brought new hope to all deaf people.

Test It At Home
Our 30-days' Home Trial Plan enables you to test the FORTIPHONE in your own home, in street, Church, theatre and concert hall before you buy and without obligation to purchase.

Brains!

Radio valves are the brains of your Wireless Receiver.

When you buy a new set look to the valves. In nine cases out of ten you will find that they are Six-Sixty Valves—first-class valves that are fitted as standard by Britain's leading set manufacturers.

Fit a new set of Six-Sixty's in your existing set. We need not tell you to notice the difference—it will be obvious at once.

Six-Sixty Valves are non-microphonic, are matched valve with valve, and give perfect electrical balance.

There is no Radio valve like Six-Sixty, and no other Radio valve is as good.

We publish a booklet that will plainly tell you why. Ask for a copy at the nearest radio shop, or write direct to us.

EXPLORERS.....

Scientists—people who know, come and talk at your fireside. Learning or laughter, music or talks—Marconiphone throws new light and meaning on wireless reception, only made possible by the immensity of the Marconi organization.

Model 32 Marconiphone 3-valve receiver, here illustrated, is unequalled for range, power and tone. Complete equipment from £18 18s. 6d. Marconiphone Cone Speaker Model 75, £3 15s. od.

Marconiphones Receivers may also be operated from the electric light socket by means of a Marconiphone Power Unit, entirely dispensing with batteries and accumulators. Full particulars in our pamphlet "The New Radio Simplicity."

When distant stations sound like local stations.....

WITH its amazing volume and purity of reproduction, the Burndept "Screened Four" makes distant stations sound as loud and as clear as local transmissions. The enormous range and selectivity of the set enable some forty stations to be received at full loud speaker strength—giving a wide choice of programmes and really enjoyable reception under all conditions.

The control of this powerful set is very simple—two dials—no coils—and a printed wave-length scale for 220-2,000 metres.

The Burndept "Screened Four" gives unparalleled reception, and in price, as in performance, it is unequalled. Ask your dealer to demonstrate.

This Burndept Receiver—and others in the range—can be supplied on Hire-Purchase terms. Write for particulars.

really good a good loud speaker can be

CELESTION
MODEL C12.

BEFORE buying a loud-speaker, make sure that it will survive the following stringent tests:—

Even Response. Not only on the low but on the middle and the high frequencies, assuring natural reproduction from both speech and music.

Extreme Sensitivity. Sensitive to the output from the weakest set.

Adjustment. Ability to reproduce weak as well as heavy signals without re-adjustment.

Unaffected by Climate. Impervious to humidity, and changes of temperature.

Improves with age. Improves and not deteriorates with the passing of the years.

Distinctive appearance. An excellent loud-speaker breathes craftsmanship in appearance, so careful and capable is the workmanship wrought upon it. And, it must be British.

"Celestion" most excellent of loud-speakers, passes all these tests readily.

Now write to Dept. A. for the "Celestion" illustrated folder and also for the new Gramophone Pick-up leaflet, sent post free!

Why are Marconiphone Accumulators so extraordinarily long-lived—what is the secret behind their marked superiority? It lies in the plates—the heart of every accumulator. For only in Marconiphone can you obtain plates built from the new formulae especially to resist acid attack. Remember, too, there are a host of other features that ensure unfailing service under all conditions. Write now for full particulars. Marconiphone Accumulators are sold by most wireless dealers.

Cardiff.

'A Spring Idyll' is the title of the programme on Friday, April 13. It has been composed by Vaughan Thomas, and will include vocal items by Kate Winter and reading from poems and prose extracts from the writings of W. H. Davies, Walter de la Mare, and George Gissing by Ivan Sampson.

Daventry Experimental.

Out of the Shadows, a psychic mystery play by David Hawkes, will be broadcast on Monday, April 9, at 9.30 p.m.

The latter part of the programme on Thursday, April 12, under the title of 'Life and Love,' will be given by the Birmingham Studio Orchestra and Joseph Yates (baritone).

Those popular radio artists, Dorothy Bennett and Dale Smith, together with Tom Bromley (pianoforte), will take part in a ballad concert on Saturday evening, April 14.

A musical comedy programme on Friday, April 13, will include selections from The Chinese Honeymoon, Miss Hook of Holland, and Chu-Chin-Chow, in addition to selected songs by Vivienne Chatterton (soprano) and Aubrey Millward (baritone).

The Birmingham String Orchestra, conducted by Joseph Lewis, will be heard in a concert of chamber music, together with Herbert Heyner (baritone), whose items will include Four Songs from the Greek Anthology (Miller Craig) and a group of selected songs.

The evening concert on Sunday, April 8, will be given in the studio by the City of Birmingham Police Band. It will include a suite of Folk Songs by Vaughan Williams and a selection from The Prodigal Son. The soloists are Florence Holding (soprano) and Beatrice Eveline (cello).

Publications Subscription Scheme.

The B.B.C. has instituted a subscription scheme for the convenience of listeners who wish to avoid the trouble of applying for individual pamphlets from time to time. The scheme only applies to the pamphlets mentioned below, and listeners may subscribe for any of the series or inclusively for all of them. The names of forthcoming pamphlets and other relevant details will be published in 'The Radio Times' and elsewhere from time to time.

MAINTENANCE OF RECEIVING SETS.

The B.B.C. has prepared a free pamphlet to help listeners to get the best possible results from their sets. It can be obtained on application to the B.B.C. Bookshop, Savoy Hill, London, W.C.2, or to any provincial Station. This pamphlet is published in conjunction with the Radio Manufacturers' and the British Radio Valve Manufacturers' Associations.

The Adult pamphlets for next session will be issued in April, and the titles will be announced shortly.

Decide for yourself on a LISSEN L.F. TRANSFORMER

-no matter what is specified!

It is easy to make a transformer high in price. It is easy to make a high-priced transformer good. It becomes much more difficult to make a transformer good when the price is low, but Lissen has succeeded in doing this, and whenever your circuit calls for an L.F. transformer there you can put a Lissen and actually improve results at a less cost, for the Lissen L.F. transformer is as good as any you can buy, however much you may be asked to pay. Lissen are prepared to guarantee that the Lissen transformer will take the place of any other transformer specified (no matter how high the price that transformer may be) and with equally satisfactory results.

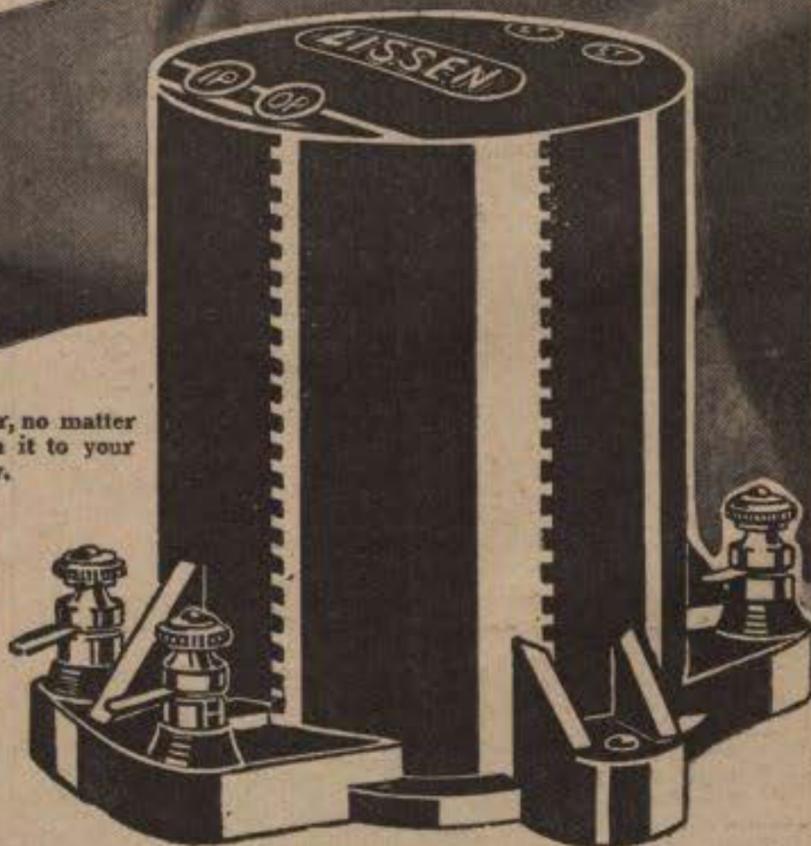

Lissen offer you a 7 days' trial to prove it.

Buy a Lissen transformer, test it for a week against any other transformer, no matter what its price, and if then you are willing to part with the Lissen return it to your dealer within 7 days of purchase and he will willingly refund your money.

LISSEN TRANSFORMER 8/6.

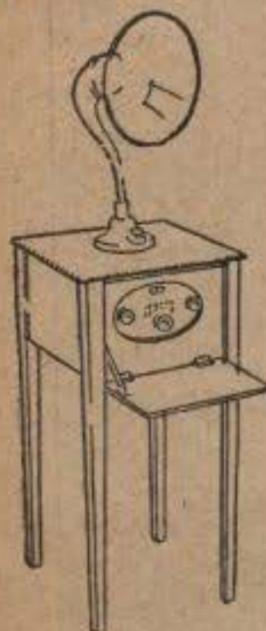

Resistance ratio 4-1. Turns ratio 3-1. Suitable for any circuit.
Obtainable at all good radio dealers.

Let this male voice choir sing to you

There is rousing thunder in the sound of strong men's voices and wonderful harmony. Hear these men singing to you with a Lissen Battery in your set and you will understand what real melody and what real harmony means. Every word, every note will come to you clearly and distinctly because the current flow supplied by the Lissen Battery is pure, noiseless, and sustained. It is generated by a new process and new chemical combination embodied in the battery which is used only by Lissen. This gives you power in abundance, power which lasts throughout the longest programme and through months and months of use and this power will keep your loudspeaker utterance natural and true always.

Ask for a Lissen Battery at one of 10,000 dealers and show clearly by the way you ask for it that you mean to take no other.

THE LONG LIFE BATTERY
LOWER PRICES HIGHER QUALITY

The history of Exide H.T. Batteries, epitomised below, is a striking example of progress on sound lines, and demonstrates how public support of a reputable product reacts to the public benefit.

No other manufacturer can show such a record of improvement in design and reduction in prices.

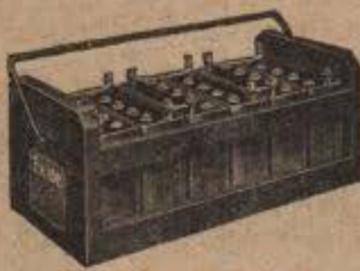

Eighteen months ago the 2,500 milli-ampere hour WJ Battery cost 9d. per volt. To-day the improved 5,000 milli-ampere hour WH costs only the same price.

The table below strikingly demonstrates the advantages of supporting manufacturers of established reputation, whose policy is to give to the public the benefits of economies made possible by public support.

Remember/this!

B.T.H. 2-volt Nickel Filament Valves have a higher emission than any other valves of corresponding types. "Higher emission" is simply another way of saying that B.T.H. Nickel Filament Valves give better performance for a longer period. When next you buy a valve, ask your dealer for a B.T.H. Nickel Filament Valve, which is sure to give, and to maintain, the best results of which your set is capable. The nickel filament represents a revolution in valve manufacture, and is not merely an improvement on earlier methods.

NORFOLK BROADS HOLIDAYS

BETTER THAN THE SEASIDE.

Their natural beauties and quite old-world villages will enchant you. They are 120 miles from London, and consist of 200 miles of safe inland rivers and lakes, situated between Cromer, Lowestoft and Norwich. You hire from us for a week or longer a fully furnished wherry, yacht, or motor-boat which becomes your floating home, moving when and where you wish, inland, not on the sea. We can supply an attendant to manage the boat and do all cooking. You only have to enjoy yourself. The cost, including boat, food, etc., averages £4 per head per week.

FREE: 224-page booklet, "How to Enjoy a Broad Holiday," containing details of 400 yachts, wherries, motor-boats, camping skiffs, house-boats, bungalows we have for hire. Apply at once.

What ails your Set?

When you feel run down you call in a Doctor. With his stethoscope he quickly diagnoses the trouble. When your wireless Set is "out of sorts" the trouble is frequently due to failure of the H.T. supply. Present-day valves quickly drain an ordinary H.T. dry battery of its life-giving energy. Such batteries in the long run, therefore, are expensive. It is true economy to spend a few shillings more on an Oldham H.T. Accumulator which will last for years and will always provide your set with an abundance of power. H.T. current is the very life blood of your Set—without it your Set is dumb. Buy an Oldham H.T. Accumulator and give your Set a real chance to show what it can do.

Check over all these symptoms

Has it lost its range?

When a Set loses its power—when distant Stations become more elusive—suspect your H.T. supply. No Receiver can work properly without adequate H.T. You'll add enormously to the range of your Set when you fit an Oldham H.T. Accumulator.

Is it husky voiced?

When the tone of a Set becomes throaty or 'woolly' the trouble is frequently caused by a worn-out H.T. dry battery. You can remedy this defect by fitting an Oldham H.T. Accumulator which will last for years.

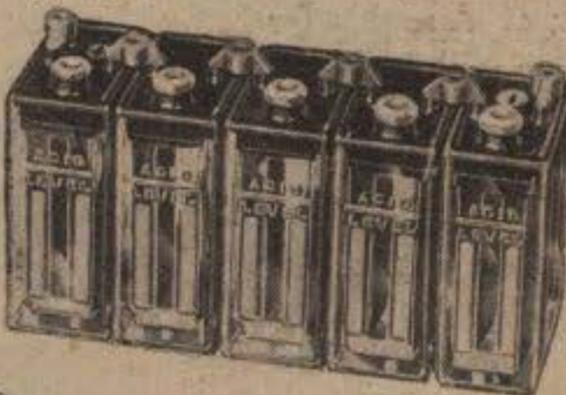

It is noisy?

Crackles and noises can be directly attributed to a faulty cell in an H.T. dry battery. In an Oldham H.T. Accumulator all cells are open to examination. Noises are impossible. Instead the receiver is fed with an even flow of pure, direct current—without a trace of ripple or hum.

Does it distort?

Pure, life-like reproduction depends entirely on a correct balance being maintained between H.T. voltage and grid bias voltage. A sudden drop in H.T. voltage—through exhaustion of any of the dry cells—will cause distortion. Safeguard yourself against this by fitting an Oldham H.T. Accumulator which holds its charge for months on end.

The cure lies in an

Build up your Oldham H.T. Accumulator to any required voltage with these 10 volt Blocks. Each one complete with connecting flex and wander plug.
