Yourselves As I See You.

In the accompanying Talk (Number Nineteen in our Series 'The Talk of the Week'), given from London on May 7, M. André Maurois, the distinguished French novelist, whose 'Colonel Bramble' books have endeared him to thousands of English readers, sketches an amusing and sympathetic picture of 'the Tea Drinkers,' as he calls the English. He has something to say about our cooking, our passion for games, our lack of logic, and our habit of laughing at our own emotions.

BEFORE I begin I must apologize for addressing you in a language which is not my own and which I speak but imperfectly. A few months ago I went to America, and as soon as I landed in New York was met by a large number of reporters. One of them said: 'It's a relief to find you speak English.' 'Yes,' I said, 'but I speak it very badly.' 'Oh, of course, you don't speak it at all well!'

Next morning I had to order my breakfast by telephone. I said: 'Tea, toast and jam, please.'

A few minutes later I got scrambled eggs. Since that day I have no illusions left. What gives me courage is that I know that you British do not mind a little hesitation in the speaker. One could almost say that you like it.

I have a friend at the House of Commons who told me that he had no success there until he learned how to stutter. You do not like eloquence. I mean high-sounding, pompous eloquence. That was one of the things I discovered when I studied the life of Disraeli. Disraeli, before he could be accepted by one of your parties as a leader, had to tone down his speech and his dress.

You are not a noisy race. You take things quietly and gently. A hundred Englishmen in a room make less noise than two citizens of any other nation.

At present I have just arrived from Cambridge. I can't tell you how I enjoyed this

'The Tea Drinkers,' says M. Maurois, 'care little for reasoning or general ideas. They love facts. They all know by heart the height of their monuments, the tonnage of their ships and the number of lines written by their poets.'

peaceful and ordered life. I think you are the only people on the earth who are really happy; because you don't ask too much from life.

There was a spring, a sunny river, flowers in every garden, a gramophone on every boat: and Cambridge was happy.

Men in general don't like happiness.

You do. And that's why you sometimes get it.

Now, I have been asked to talk to you about the Unknown Island—the Unknown Island being, of course, your own—and I have brought for you a little manuscript which was written by a sailor who had the courage to go several times from Calais to Dover. Here it is:—

The Unknown Island.

Leaving the coast of France at a point between Boulogne and Calais and steering westward, you will, after about an hour and a half of a passage which is often unpleasant (for the sea is one of the worst in the world), reach the Island of the 'Tea Drinkers.' It is a remarkable fact that, although so close to Europe, this island is almost unknown.

Every man who is curious to study strange customs should be encouraged to visit it. I am aware that the inhabitants are considered to be savages, but from frequent personal observation I can affirm that they are not savages, but, on the contrary, one of the most kindly peoples on earth.

The traveller will there, as in all foreign lands, make it his care not to wound the feelings of the natives by disregarding their customs. The 'Tea Drinkers' are extremely tolerant in all matters of thought and religion, but they insist on some of their customs being observed. For instance, it is evident that the traveller who should S venture to dip his bread and butter in his tea or to eat mustard with his mutton would be liable to expulsion; but these are trifles which may easily be learnt before undertaking the journey.

The European arriving among the 'Tea Drinkers' must not yield to the sentiments of terror which he will feel on landing. The policeman on the quay, although an enormous black creature, is perfectly harmless and only wishes to be useful. The language spoken by the 'Tea Drinkers' will seem unintelligible, even to travellers who have tried to learn it beforehand, but that is because the natives hardly pronounce their words at all. By dint of practice you will manage to understand them.

Although called 'Tea Drinkers,' the inhabitants of this island absorb many other drinks, including wine. You can on arrival get a glass of a strong drink which they call whisky. It will taste unpleasant at the first sip. But if you persevere, in a week you will be scarcely able to take your lips from the bottle.

The food of the 'Tea Drinkers' is very different from that of the Europeans, but it is not unpleasant. Generally speaking, they eat more than other nations. I think that is due to their climate, which is one of the dampest in existence. In the morning, when we are content with a cup of coffee or tea they swallow a complete meal; dried fish, which they term 'haddock,' eggs, meat, and even in the North—the most savage part of the island—a thick mess of oatmeal to which they give the name of porridge. You will like their dishes at other meals. They serve you with huge slices of underdone meat, which the head of the tribe or his wife often cut up themselves with a somewhat disquieting skill. If you are fastidious, I advise you to avoid their vegetables, which are generally boiled in water and somewhat insipid. Above all, refrain from the produce which they call 'vegetable marrow.' Their sweets, which are excellent, are called 'puddings.' Of these there are more than 1,000 different kinds, with which you can profitably become acquainted.

To visit the Island of the 'Tea Drinkers,' you may dress yourself as you will. I should advise you, however, never to wear too new clothes. The 'Tea Drinkers' hate to see a man too well dressed, and the mark of their great lords and important figures is the simplicity and the great age of their garments.

You will immediately notice a curious national disease, which is that they cannot happen upon a round object without hitting it either with the foot, or the hand, or a racket or a stick of a special shape. It was long thought that the exercises in which they indulge every week and particularly on Saturdays, were of a religious character. However, the most competent European scholars now hold that they are 'sports.' Be they religious or children's games, the exercises have acquired a high importance, and you will be exposed to contempt in the Island until you have yourself learned the they made a month before. The nation does not cast up these variations against them: it rather approves them. It considers that you should act each day according to the circumstances of the day and not be a slave to formula or doctrine.

A study of their history will convince you that the method has been highly successful for the people is one of the happiest and most prosperous on earth.

The 'Tea Drinkers' do not so much require a man to be learned as possessed of a solid and trustworthy character. Their children are taught, earlier here than elsewhere, to govern themselves and each other, and to tell the truth. In their schools, the lad who can hit a ball well or displays qualities of character, is infinitely more respected than one who succeeds in literature or science.

The result is that while some 'Tea Drinkers' are among the most cultivated of mankind, others are ignorant. But you can trust them, one and all. I cannot too strongly counsel you to make friends from among them. You will not find better or more sure. When a 'Tea Drinker' is at your side in a quarrel, he will fight for you to the death. Another of their qualities is modesty. You will never hear one of them rehearse what he has done in his life. You will learn, by accident, one day that he is a great savant or a great writer, but he will never have spoken to you but of the most simple things, and he will, like the rest, have spent his Saturdays knocking about some kind of ball. Their women are often beautiful and generally very unaffected. The reason is that they have not been spoiled, for, contrary to the case in Europe, the man here is ruler of the household. This, however, does not prevent the men from being shy, not merely with women, but with all foreigners. The 'Tea Drinkers' are possessed of a kind of shame which prevents them from expressing their emotions. Hence they make a practice of laughing at them; this they call humour; but this humour imparts to their conversation (manner of life) a kind of amusing reserve which has its undoubted charm. Such are their qualities. The mischief is that their qualities remain hidden while their defects are apparent. So you must know them well in order to appreciate them. It is, therefore, to be desired that many Europeans should form the habit of visiting them and that their Island should cease to be unknown.

'The language spoken by the "Tea Drinkers" will seem unintelligible because the natives hardly pronounce their words at all.'

habit of knocking a ball once a week. It is not unwholesome, however, and you will speedily manage to overcome the tedium which the practice inspires at first.

When you have begun to know the language and to become familiar with the natives, you will be able to study the workings of their mind. You will find them very intelligent, but you will perceive that their intelligence moves rather differently from ours.

The 'Tea Drinkers' care little for reasoning or for general ideas. They love facts. They will be delighted if you will quote their figures. They all know by heart the height of their monuments, the tonnage of their ships and the number of lines written by their poets. At the time of an annual race between the oarsmen of their two great Universities, they all know by heart the number of strokes, the weight of the crews and the time each boat has taken between the bridges. Their memory for such matters is incredible. Logic is a thing indifferent to them. Their political leaders will sometimes make a decision contradicting that which most simple things, and he will, like the rest, have spent his Saturdays knocking about some kind of ball.

Their women are often beautiful and generally very unaffected. The reason is that they have not been spoiled, for, contrary to the case in Europe, the man here is ruler of the household. This, however, does not prevent the men from being shy, not merely with women, but with all foreigners. The 'Tea Drinkers' are possessed of a kind of shame which prevents them from expressing their emotions. Hence they make a practice of laughing at them; this they call humour; but this humour imparts to their conversation (manner of life) a kind of amusing reserve which has its undoubted charm. Such are their qualities. The mischief is that their qualities remain hidden while their defects are apparent. So you must know them well in order to appreciate them. It is, therefore, to be desired that many Europeans should form the habit of visiting them and that their Island should cease to be unknown.

YOU WILL FIND

on pages 388-389 'The Announcer's' News and Views of Broadcasting and a second instalment of 'Samuel Pepys, Listener,' both illustrated by Arthur Watts; on page 390 the opinions of your fellow-listeners on various matters of topical interest expressed in Letters to the Editor; and on page 391 the Second Chapter of Old Magic, in which Bohun Lynch continues the story of Tom Carlew and the mysterious death of Spiridon Kakoglou. If you are wise you will place an order with your newsagent or bookstall for a copy of The Radio Times to be reserved for you throughout the summer.

Epsom on the Air.

The Derby Story to be Relayed from the Downs.

THIS Derby Race belongs to all of us. I think that it was G. K. Chesterton (that modern Dr. Johnson of ours) who said that British Democracy is not so much interested in the equality of man as in the inequality of horses. It is one of those half-truths which are sufficiently and deliciously untrue to please each one of us.

Perhaps it gives to us the key to that palace of make-believe which we have built round the Derby and Derby Day. Here is our noblest surreptitious festival which each year brings about a record mortality among aunts and grandmothers. Just make-believe—the perennial jest which makes our House of Commons gather in session although the majority of members have been ‘called away on urgent business’ on the day and the minority are gathered round the tape machines. Perhaps you remember how the old London Coal Exchange declared with solemnity a permanent holiday for the first Wednesday in June in celebration of Lord Howe’s great victory at Ushant. How heartily and everlastingly we enjoy the Derby joke!

But it does not end with those who, by hook or by crook, contrive to reach Epsom Downs for the affair. There is the multitude who stay at home or at work but yet have some share in a mighty or a minute sweepstake or a festive shilling on some potential winner (picked with the proverbial pin). The whole Derby house of cards would tumble down if all sweepstakes were legal and if we talked out loud about the fancy which we have backed. Very sweet and romantic are the blessings of illusion and the sense of daring which come to us in a workaday world when we have a chance of winning a fortune or a florin on the first Wednesday in June.

So much by way of philosophy on the power of Derby Day. But there is a good old saying, ‘Cut the cackle and come to the ‘osses.’ Epsom’s great race will be brought to your houses again on this Wednesday of 1928. There are many who have seen the Downs, but not in recent years. How can I help all of them to envisage the modern scene? It has changed and is changing vastly. Last year we were startled by that great stark innovation of concrete and iron—the new stand which dominates the course. Then that other mighty grand-stand has arrived—half a mile or more of brilliant red omnibuses standing wheel to wheel and the great army of charabancs gathered from everywhere in Britain and collected like a swarm of bees on a sunny afternoon to one chosen spot.

FEATURES OF THE WEEK.

A commentary on the Derby will be broadcast at 2.45 p.m. on Wednesday, June 6. For other outstanding features of this week’s Programmes see page 401.

The motor age has changed Derby Day. The colour and the jazz patterns remain, but (forgive me if I seem an old fogey) some part of the glamour has gone. The gipsy and the tipster, and the trickster—all those amusing picturesque folk who practised the art of selling nothing for something—have been pushed out of the forefront of the picture. Peer and commoner no longer jostle in hearty equality at the entrance to the paddock. The side-show and the huckster must be searched for in odd corners jumbled amidst lines of the all-conquering automobile. It is an affair now of traffic regulation and inhibitions. But how can one hope to gather half a million people and the vehicles which bear them in such a spot without sacrificing simplicity?

For all that, the Derby reminds me of the truism which Frenchmen love, ‘The more it changes, the more it remains the same.’ You can still take your picnic lunch on Epsom’s fair hillside under, let us hope, the same fair June sky. The old gipsy women are still there, somewhere, smoking their black pipes and waiting for ‘the pretty lady’ to cross their palms with silver. The essential hurly-burly and saddle and silk and post and paddock (founders of the feast) are at the back of it all.

It is just the swing of the wheel of progress. It happens that where thousands saw the race in other days tens of thousands now can be there to see the winner. And, better still, there is scarcely a Briton who cannot gather for himself something of the glamour and the thrill of it all from out of the ether.

There is no need for me to remind you of that first Derby broadcast of last year. You will remember how from Epsom’s grand-stand, despite the fog which strangely enough descended upon the course at the critical time, the full story of the race was told. This first tentative experience taught lessons which promise even greater success this year. The arrangements are complete. We can leave the rest to Mr. R. C. Lyle and to fate.

For myself, I have picked the winner (with a pin), and—whisper it only—I have four tickets in a reprehensible sweepstake. Long may the Derby and the Derby jest endure!

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

Summer Timings.

DURING the long summer afternoons, when tennis and so on exercise their claims even upon 'radio fans,' the programmes are to be slightly curtailed. From July 2 until September 21, when there are no schools transmissions, the afternoon programmes from London and 5XX will not begin until 4 p.m., except on Saturdays and Sundays, when timings will be unaffected, and Thursdays, when the programme will begin at 3 p.m. There will be the usual lunch-time transmissions, but it has been decided to curtail slightly broadcasting hours in the early afternoon, since a careful analysis of correspondence received shows that very few sets are in action at that time. You will see that the Thursday afternoon relay from the Abbey will be continued as usual.

An Educational Discussion.

A JOINT conference between the B.B.C. and the British Institute of Adult Education is to be held in the Friends' Meeting House, Euston Road, N.W.1, on Friday, June 22, to discuss the lately-issued report New Ventures in Broadcasting, a review of which by G. D. H. Cole appeared in a recent issue of The Radio Times. The chair will be taken at 8 p.m. by Sir Henry Hadow. Other speakers will be Sir John Reith, Mr. G. H. Gater, Mr. Arthur Pugh, and the Hon. Oliver Stanley, M.P. A certain number of tickets are available for interested listeners, who should apply at once to the Adult Education Section, B.B.C., Savoy Hill, London, W.C.2.

A Grave Error.

I AM asked by Dr. C. W. Saleeby to correct a wrong impression which may have been caused by an error in his talk which appeared in our issue of May 4. It was silk shirts he advised for tennis players, not silk shorts!

The Canary Obligated.

THE opening night of the 1928 Nightingale Season seems to have been a great success, though it was feared by the sceptical that music-hall contracts might prevent the nightingale from coming to the microphone. One listener writes to me: 'I am writing to tell you how beautifully we heard the nightingale on Saturday, May 12. I might add that I have a little Norwich canary, and he woke up and sang, too. At midnight it was very interesting. The nightingale was singing, my canary chirruping, Big Ben striking—all at the same time!' There's an idea for one of our musical enfants terribles. A Trio for Nightingale, Canary, and Clock tower in A Flat! As I write, another letter has arrived, from a Blackpool listener, whose canary also competed with the nightingale.

'Hark, hark, the Nightingale!'

The Loud Speaker in the Church.

I HEAR that after two years' experiment in quest of ideal reception, the Rev. Montague Spinney, Vicar of Horninglow, Burton-on-Trent, held a wireless broadcast service in his church on Sunday, April 22, when the relay from Liverpool Cathedral was heard by a large congregation. Mr. Spinney is not the first vicar to attempt this—I heard some time back from the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, Vicar of St. Stephen's, Bow, E.3, that he has on various occasions run a lead from his own set in the vicarage to a loud speaker in the church, where parishioners have gathered to listen to the opening of Wembley Exhibition by H.M. the King, the Dedication of Liverpool Cathedral, the Menin Gate Memorial Service, and so on. The Menin Gate broadcast was greatly appreciated by those of his flock who had lost relations in the war. Mr. Lancaster has on several occasions used the chiming of Big Ben as the climax of his Watch-night services.

Freaks of Music.

A CONCERT of 'Musical Curiosities' which John Ansell is to conduct from London on Tuesday, June 19, will include a Toy Symphony by Laubach; The March of the Kitchen Utensils from Vaughan Williams' Incidental Music to Aristophanes' Wasps; the Witches' Scherzo from Granville Bantock's Incidental Music to Macbeth, which is written for three bassoons; Tchaikovsky's Two Cuts (from The Sleeping Beauty); Victor Hely-Hutchinson's effective 'Robot Music,' written for the B.B.C. production of R.U.R., etc. There are many strange compositions in music, as in art and literature—piano pieces for left-hand only, Moscheles' Suite, which reads the same either way up; Schumann's fine fugue on the name 'Bach,' Ravel's Minuet on the name 'Haydn,' even the Waltz on the initials 'B.B.C.'

Lady Bertha Dawkins.

AN appeal will be broadcast from London on Sunday, June 10, by Lady Bertha Dawkins, Lady-in-Waiting to H.M. the Queen, on behalf of the Professional Classes Aid Council, which so sympathetically and tactfully ministers to the distress of those members of the community who are perhaps feeling the pinch of modern conditions more keenly than any other class. Lady Bertha will appeal for donations of money and of clothes in good condition. Gifts sent to her at Kensington Palace, W.8, will be very gratefully received.

Quick Work.

PROBABLY the most rapidly successful SOS message ever broadcast was 'put out' from 5GB on May 16, concerning a Birmingham girl who had been missing from home since April 24. By noon on May 17 the Birmingham police learned that the girl had been located in a Woolwich hospital, under an assumed name, suffering from diphtheria.

Choosing the American President.

AMERICAN politics are pretty confusing to the Englishman. When political processes are in progress 'over there,' the average London newspaper devotes more space to the incidental battle, murder and sudden death than to the actual machinery of election. At 9.15 p.m. on Wednesday, June 13, Mr. S. K. Ratcliffe, lecturer and journalist, will talk about 'The United States President: How They Choose the Candidates.' His talk is of special interest in view of the approaching Presidential election.

Letters for Mr. Grossmith.

Historical Research.

IN a recent paragraph on the talk given by Mr. George Grossmith I remarked on the length of his stage career and his perennial youthfulness. In reply to this Mr. Albert C. Cox, of Dorchester, has sent me a cutting from the Dorset County Chronicle of May 8, 1828, wherein mention is made of the arrival in Dorchester of 'that talented youth, Master Grossmith, of Reading, Berks, who intends giving his universally admired entertainments at Mrs. Luce's Assembly Rooms, this and tomorrow evening, when he will personate nearly 40 different characters.' Can it be possible, asks Mr. Cox, that already, at so tender an age, 'G. G.' was displaying his versatility? Mr. Grossmith tells me that he received many hundreds of letters from listeners to his broadcast, and asks me to thank warmly those to whom, through pressure of time, he may not have been able to reply.

A Service from Windsor.

A SPECIAL service is to be relayed from St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, on Sunday evening, June 17. The chapel is the spiritual headquarters of the Order of the Garter, where, as ordained by Edward III, the knights and canons worship God side by side. In the broadcast service, the music of which has been arranged by the chapel organist, Sir Walford Davies, the opening and concluding sentences of Scripture will be sung to inflexions set by John Marbeck, the 'singing man and organist' of St. George's Chapel who was condemned to the stake for his leanings towards the Reformation, but pardoned in consideration of his great musical gifts. The address will be given by the Dean of Windsor, the Very Rev. A. V. Baillie.

A Critic on Critics.

IN his new book, 'Behold these Daniels,' Mr. Basil Maine discusses with humour and subtlety his fellow music-critics, among them Ernest Newman, Richard Capell, Francis Toye and F. Bonavia, whose names and writing are familiar to readers of The Radio Times. Though I have searched all over the book—which is published by H. and W. Brown, 20, Fulham Road, London, S.W.3—I can find no mention of the price.

Barbirolli's Orchestra.

IT is some time now since we heard John Barbirolli conduct his Chenil Chamber Orchestra. This orchestra still exists under Mr. Barbirolli's conductorship, though it has dropped its original title. It will broadcast an hour of lighter music—transcriptions of Strauss Waltzes and so on—from London on June 20.

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

Rembrandt in Worcestershire.

OUR issue of April 6 last contained the reprint of a talk by Mr. Roger Fry on 'Art and National Prestige,' which was illustrated by a reproduction of Rembrandt's portrait of himself as an old man. Mr. J. E. Phillips, of Worcester, had long possessed a copy of this picture, though without having the least idea what it was until The Radio Times enlightened him. He has photographed his canvas, a picture of which appears on page 390, and forwarded the matter to Mr. Fry. It will be interesting to hear what the famous art critic has to say about this. Pictures—even copies—of great value have been discovered in quite out-of-the-way places.

Star-Gazing.

LISTENERS will have an opportunity of seeing their favourite 'radio stars' in the flesh, for at the Theatrical Garden Party which is being held in the grounds of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, on June 12, Tommy Handley, Clapham and Dwyer, Jack Payne and his B.B.C. Dance Orchestra, Julian Rose, Nick Adams, etc., will give a series of performances in the B.B.C. Tent. Admission to these shows will be 2s., which goes to that admirable charity in aid of which the Garden Party is held—the Actors' Orphanage.

Sir Henry's Surprise.

WHEN Sir Henry Wood went to Cardiff to conduct the National Orchestra of Wales, he was surprised to find that of its thirty members sixteen were Welshmen. The Welsh, he said, did not usually shine as instrumentalists, though Wales had provided some of the finest of our singers. It is possible that the lack of good orchestral music in the Principality has prevented Welshmen from learning any instrument. With the new orchestra firmly established we may look to a change in the near future. One of the London members of the National Orchestra who has now settled in Cardiff is busy learning Welsh—a gesture which might be considered politic for a singer, but which in this case shows an encouraging desire to understand the people he is to work among.

Housewives, take Heed!

AS one who greatly admires the skill with which the French housewife cooks vegetables, I have never ceased to be depressed by the 'soggy' potatoes and 'watery' cabbage which represents the English ideal of cookery. In his recent talk M. André Maurois had something to say about the English vegetables. Housewives who heard his talk and felt a twinge of conscience should listen to Miss Florence Petty, the well-known lecturer on household matters, who is to broadcast at 5 p.m. on Monday, June 11. Her subject will be the cooking of vegetables.

Pictures in Music.

FOR me, at least, music has a distinctly 'pictorial' appeal—as indeed for any man who is not a trained musician with an ear for musical 'form.' Music has a stimulating effect on the imagination, and even a Bach fugue—which is distinctly not programme music—will create a picture in the mind. Ravel and Debussy achieve their intention of picturing in music submerged cathedrals, Spanish processions, gardens in the rain and so on. From Manchester on June 14 Mr. Lawrence Haward, Curator of the Manchester Art Gallery, will introduce a programme of orchestral music, explaining before each piece the particular painting which it calls to his mind.

Grieg Anniversary.

ON Friday, June 8, Manchester is celebrating the anniversary of Grieg's birth in 1843 with a concert of his works. The Station Orchestra will be conducted by Harry Mortimer, soloists, Edward Isaacs and Nora Desmond.

The Prince at Cardiff.

THE Welsh National War Memorial in Alexandra Gardens, Cathays Park, Cardiff, is to be unveiled by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on Tuesday, June 12. This outstanding public event is to be broadcast from Cardiff and 5XX. The Archbishop of Wales and other clergy will take part in the ceremony. Listeners will hear the Band of H.M. Welch Guards. A running commentary, which I understand is to take a slightly new form, will be given by Mr. E. R. Appleton, Cardiff Station Director.

A Carl Fuchs Recital.

A CELLO recital is to be given from Manchester on June 12 by Carl Fuchs, who has held the violoncello professorship at the Royal Manchester College of Music since its foundation by Sir Charles Hallé.

"The Announcer"

A Popular New Feature.

Samuel Pepys, Listener.

By R. M. Freeman.

(Part-author of the New Pepys' 'Diary of the Great Warr,' etc.)

MAY 9.—Comes this morning a letter from the Post Office asking 10s. for my licence (one year), which, with my wife's hatt and the new valve, do make no less than 4l. 13s. 6d. this damned instrument have cost me within 4 dayes. And what shall be the end of it, God knows.

MAY 10.—To the Club, where a hott disputioun between Colonel Wix, who is evangelickal, and Mr. Snigsby, who is nothing, over broadcasting on Lord's Day. Mr. Snigsby disabling the B.B.C. that they should truckel to the churches by shutting down in the mornings; but the Colonell stands to it passionately that, if there be any truckeling, it is better to truckel to the Christian churches than to the ungodly heathens. Both using very high language and like to have gone to blows over it, when, by God's mercy, come in Sir Thos. Block with Generall Hackin, they fiercely contesting, Sir Thos. for, the Genll. against, majority-calling at bridge. Whereupon the Colonell and Mr. Snigsby, being both very stout for the Portland Club, to leave their quarreling and to make common cause with the Generall against Sir Thos. But Lord! Pretty to observe how two men that were neare killing each other over Sabbath-keeping did become instantly converted into own brothers allmost over majority-calling.

MAY 11.—My wife and I to Mrs. Fripp, the fair widow that looks at me in church, and afterwards to dance to Ciro's musique on the wireless. Admirall Norker, albeit he have a wife and past sixty, dallying with this Fripp woman in the most ridiculouse manner possible, and she (God save us!) abetting him. I did first perceive this night that she begins to age and is less pretty than I had thought her. This is my wife's opinioun also.

MAY 12.—Come Mrs. Pye, the Gray Lady for my subscripitioun to the Parish funds. But I could afford her only 2 guineas this year instead of 3. So here is 1 guinea retrenched towards the cost of my wife's hatt, and I mean to continue it till all is discharged. At the Club, Mr. Tompkinson tells me the latest from Aberdeen—that all the egge-shells from that city are now sent to Savoy Hill to be relayed.

MAY 13 (LORD'S DAY).—To church with my wife, she mightily pleased with herself in her new hatt. This reminded me to reduce mine accustomed 2s. 6d. into the plate to 1s. Whereby another 1s. 6d. wiped off the hatt, to my great content. Mentioning broadcasting in his sermon, Mr. Blick spoak of it as the greatest of all moderne inventiouns both for pleasure and chepeness to the publique; he being a priest and a celibate, but had he had a wife, methought would have spoaken otherwise.

MAY 14.—My wife to the doctor to have injectiouns for her hay-fever; which is sovereign for the fever, but cannot wear her armes bare by reason of the prick marks of the syringe in them, and, being a woman, it do hurt her vanity. I to the barber's for a trim, where I find a loud-speaker set up to beguile us in our waiting—a good notioonn, methought. For the barbers are now so busy cropping or waving the women that a man shall often have to await his turn 30 min. or more. Discoursing hereof with one that sits next me, he laments his wife shingling herself because he can no longer go to her for hayr-pins to clean his pipe; which methought a strange reason, yet in a manner sensible. Anon walking in St. James' Park, my gouty foot so to tweak me that I home and shifted into old boots. So was kept within the rest of the day; but even this is better than to be seen abroad in old boots.

What the Other Listener Thinks.

Extracts from Letters to the Editor—Further Replies to Mr. France—The Popularity of the Radio Play—Exception taken to 'Woodbine Willie'—What the Clocks Say.

The Tenants' Timekeeper:

I QUITE agree with Val Gielgud's reply to Victor France, and I thank God for wireless and the B.B.C. workers. It is the one bright spot in my life. I am a dressmaker, and sew for hours and hours for very small pay. But if music is being broadcast I find myself sewing to quick time; also I love to hear plays. Old Heidelberg, Speed, and The Night-fighters were 'red-letter' nights. I shall always remember them. I never go to a theatre—funds do not run to it. Also the other tenants depend on me for the time.—H. S., London, W.6.

BROADCAST for twenty-four hours. Unlimited material. Boundless possibilities. Radio art only in its infancy.—A. H., Rochdale.

THE majority of listeners no doubt consider Mr. France's letter a joke!—F. H. W., Devonport.

I EXERCISE a woman's privilege and change my mind (I rarely do). Mr. Gielgud's article has placed me in the opposite camp. The views he brings forward are far more convincing than those of Mr. France. So please do not quote from my previous letter.—E. B. P., London, W.2.

START the daily transmissions at 6.30 p.m., except for the weather forecast, morning service, schools' transmission and children's hour. Very few people listen to the morning and afternoon concerts. There can be only two reasons why the B.B.C. broadcasts these—either with a view to completeness or for the sake of invalids. Yet an invalid who had listened all day would soon get tired of music.—W. G. G., Norwich.

D.O.R.A. and the Dog Biscuit.

I THOROUGHLY agree with the opinions expressed by Victor France. Truly we are a peculiar people. At one end of the scale we have the ludicrous activities of D.O.R.A. where a dog-biscuit cannot be purchased after 8 p.m. unless put on a plate. And at the other end the B.B.C. pumping out sound, much of which nobody hears, from morn till midnight.—W. M. P., Ryde.

I SHOULD like to point out to Mr. France that there are many listeners employed in such places as the Post Office whose duties do not commence until 4 p.m. For these listeners the morning broadcasts are all too short.—T. J. P., London, E.C.1.

YOUR ideas will never run out. The world is ever renewing its wonders. The creative energy of writers and musicians will not cease. Humanity will never cease to be interesting. Give us more—not less!—L. M. T., Halstead.

Replies to the Play Hater.

I ENTIRELY agree with 'A. E. A.', your Barnstaple correspondent. Radio drama is only a very 'second best' affair. The most it can do is to serve as a medium for ideas, and I, for one, would sooner have those ideas expressed by a clever speaker like Sir Oliver Lodge than by a hotch-potch of different voices.—R. DE B. S., Warwickshire.

I WISH I could switch off all callers who appear to reserve their visits until during such times as plays are being broadcast. But the Rector must receive all with perfect charity, dispose of them as quickly as possible, and then rush back to pick up the threads of the play.—'RECTOR,' Manchester.

GIVE us a share of everything, but do not cut out the plays. If anything gets cut out, let it be the sopranos!—A. B. C., Basingstoke.

WOULD people go to a theatre if they knew that the curtain would be kept down all the time, and they would only hear the voices of those taking part in the play? I believe there would be general relief among listeners if the plays were discontinued. We are not all creative geniuses and to ask every listener to create his own stage setting is expecting too much.—'LISTENER,' Falmouth.

Switch off the Lights!

To enjoy a play one has to concentrate as one would at a theatre and try to get the atmosphere. We always switch off the lights and listen in darkness. Then, if one has any imagination, it is so easy to visualize what is happening.—S. W., London, N.W.11.

A LISTENER'S DISCOVERY.

The copy of Rembrandt's Portrait of Himself which has been for many years in the possession of a Worcester listener, who identified it from the reproduction of the original picture, published in The Radio Times for April 6 (see page 389).

BEING in the house-decorating business, I come in contact with hundreds of different people, and I can say that I have never come across one who, like A. E. A., has not liked plays. I visit hundreds of houses in town and country. I would like to see a ballot on The Ship. I guess it would be 100 per cent.—W. G. R., Gillingham.

Where Plays are Eagerly Discussed.

'A. E. A., of Barnstaple,' asks: 'Do we listen to plays?' I, for one, will say 'yes.' I think it would interest our friend to know that for six days of the week I sit down to meals with at least 200 of my fellow workers, and whenever a play has been broadcast, or is about to be broadcast, it is the general topic of conversation.—'LISTENER,' Leicester.

Mr. Wu was appreciated, also Speed and many others. 'A. E. A.' evidently has a great want of imagination. As far as I myself am concerned, I do not care for dialect plays, as they are hard to follow.—C. F., Prestatyn.

'Full House' at the Hospital.

IN a hospital where there are no patients over seventeen, plays are looked forward to more than any other part of the programmes. Even the youngest are able to follow the story with the aid of The Radio Times. During Lord Jim we were compelled to switch off owing to a thunderstorm for a quarter of an hour; yet, on resuming our headphones, we were able to pick up the thread with ease.—TWO HOSPITAL LISTENERS, Coleshill.

WE always switch off the light. Then we find it easy to become engrossed in the doings of the play-people. We try to persuade our friends to 'try next time with the light out.' We offer the suggestion to 'A. E. A.'—I. S., Ipswich.

'LORD JIM' was very effective as a dramatic reading, but it certainly could not be termed a 'play,' while the 'new-style' dramas of the type of The Night Fighters give a somewhat scrambled effect. Here there are ragged successions of incidents, rather difficult to follow, it being puzzling to differentiate between the large number of characters. The impressionistic idea, utilizing the boundless scope of scene that wireless permits, is basically sound and a move in the right direction. It seems, however, doubtful why the action of the new radio drama should be almost entirely of a 'physical' character. We have seen in The Master Builder how effective and convincing was the vigorous 'mental' action of that play; it would seem, in fact, that there is scope, even necessity, in radio drama for the revival of the soliloquy in dramatic construction.—P. M. W., Coventry.

A.B.C. Protests.

PLEASE allow me to protest against your insertion of 'Woodbine Willie's' ignorant anti-Christian cant in your Spring Number. To Christ and His Kingdom 'W. W.' is a stranger. Christ and His religion demand (1) absolute, unhesitating, intellectual assent to all the dogmas which His words contain; (2) supreme, practical love of Him as God, resulting in actual obedience; (3) voluntary membership of His Kingdom. He that will not comply with these demands does not give his heart to Christ.—A. B. C., Torquay.

What Big Ben Says.

TWO versions (both wrong) of the words that go with the chiming of the Westminster bells have recently been printed in The Radio Times. Now for the correct rendering:—

'Lord, through this hour,
Be Thou our guide;
Kept by Thy power,
No foot shall slide.'

'So by Thy power' is poor stuff!—J. W. W., London.

YOUR correspondent 'E. J. P., Nottingham's,' letter on what Big Ben says reminds me of a letter in a Penang paper some years ago. A rich Chinese, named Chin Yock, presented a chiming clock to the town, another rich Chinese named Chin Tai promptly did the same. These two clocks never kept the same time, and therefore one or the other seemed to be always on the chime. Some wag wrote to the local paper as follows:—

'What do our clocks say?

'1st clock: "I am Chin Yock,
I give one clock."
2nd clock: "I am Chin Tai,
And so do I."

'Penang Public: "Damn! Damn! Damn!"'
—W. E. M. G., Marlborough.

*The Second Chapter of a Great Romance.

AT the beginning of the twenty-first century Dartmoor was still a wilderness of heather-clad slopes and tumbling streams, and its far-flung farms were still in the hands of their peasant owners, despite the efforts of Mr. Spiridon Kakoglou and his Mid-Devon Farming Syndicate to achieve a monopoly of farm-produce. The resistance of these farmers angered the Greek financier. One morning he set out from the great Atlantic Hotel overlooking the air port of Blade to investigate for himself the situation on Dartmoor.

That night Tom Carlew was broadcasting a talk from the C.O.R.T. (Central Office of Radio Transmission) on 'Some Recent Antiquarian Discoveries.' His appearance on the television screen was of great interest to his old nurse, Mrs. Torch, who lived on Dartmoor and whose husband worked for Kakoglou and his syndicate. She was worried about John Torch, though, for he had been out a lot at night lately and seemed to have something on his mind.

Tom Carlew spoke in his talk of a strange old eighteenth-century note-book recently purchased by Mr. Kakoglou. He held this up to the screen and Mrs. Torch could see that it was full of queer drawings, including one of a crude carved figure like a doll and one of a sinister group of houses which seemed familiar to her. After Carlew had finished, John Torch came home. He seemed white and ill as he switched on the television set for the Final News Bulletin. With some impatience he heard a series of items, until suddenly the announcer's voice dropped a tone. 'News has just been brought in of an accident on the road between Ashworthy and Culverton, in Devon. Mr. Spiridon Kakoglou, whose name has already been mentioned in happier circumstances this evening, left his car for a few minutes to see the view from high ground just above the road. We regret to announce that he slipped and fell into a deep stone quarry, and that, when found, life was extinct.'

IT was a lovely evening, but with a veiled threat of thunder in the air. From his window in Bloomsbury Tom Carlew caught a glimpse of the little square, with a fringe of trees around a trim lawn, and watched the lights coming out, in street lamps and window, to mingle with the glow of evening—yellow, orange, and one a clear, cold red. Fan-shaped, spreading up from North and East, came a thin gauze of blackish cloud with its background of hard and magic blue. The evening was very still and warm. Shuffling footfalls seemed to hesitate and drag upon the pavement.

Carlew's flat was just within the borders of a part of old London. The great white modern building in which he occupied a part of the second floor, overlooked a district of old squares and roads, to the east of the British Museum, which had been carefully preserved, as a precious relic of the past. It was very quiet here, for no wheeled traffic came down the paved walk on that side of the building.

It was two days since he had broadcast his lecture from the C.O.R.T. He was off duty tonight, and was awaiting the arrival of his particular friend, Melvil Rooke, to dine with him. Rooke was the editor of the Antiquarian Review, to last week's issue of which learned periodical Carlew had contributed an article about Kakoglou's old pocket-book. This article had appeared a few days before the date of the Radio lecture. Carlew was very anxious to discuss the book with his friend.

The newspapers had added little regarding the circumstances of the financier's death to the bare account which had been broadcast. Mr. Kakoglou, it appeared, was on his way from Blade to London, and before the point where the accident had happened, had already left the car two or three times to inspect the surrounding country. On the last occasion, about two miles from the village of Hamadon, the chauffeur had waited an hour for him before he felt any uneasiness. He had then followed in the direction in which he had seen his master walking. This took him over a rough track up a steep hill-side at the top of which, surrounded by brambles, he had come upon the edge of a sheer cliff, facing north. This was an old quarry some forty or fifty feet deep, at the bottom of which he could see Mr. Kakoglou's body lying prone. The chauffeur, Henry Miles, had hurried along the edge of the cliff to a lower point, whence he could safely scramble down. He found that Mr. Kakoglou had broken his neck. There are no houses in sight at this point, and unable, after prolonged shouting, to get any help, he managed to lift the body, and after a most arduous journey conveyed it to the car, subsequently taking it to Culverton, where he reported the matter to the local authorities. Already this evening's paper told Carlew that the coroner's inquest had brought in a verdict of Accidental Death, arrangements were being made for the remains to be cremated, and the obituary notices greatly surprised the general public with the huge list of the dead Greek's directorates and the enormous variety of his commercial interests. There appeared to be no near relatives to mourn him.

Carlew, having handled the dead man's property, and having a slight acquaintance with Guy Harvester, the confidential secretary, was perhaps a little more interested in these newspaper paragraphs than most men in the street, but it was that piece of property—the old pocket-book—which really claimed his attention.

PRESENTLY Rooke arrived, an eager-looking man, frowning to hold an eyeglass in place, about five-and-thirty years of age, and eight years older than his host. Carlew noticed at once that he was restless. He refused at first to discuss the pocket-book, but walked up and down the room nibbling an olive. Dinner was a very simple matter; Carlew asked his friend what he would like, went to the telephone and ordered the meal accordingly from the kitchens—a selection of hors d'oeuvres, some cold chicken with a banana salad, a little cheese and a dish of fruit. These arrived in the service lift, the hatch of which was in the room, in the course of a few minutes. It was not until they were drinking their coffee by the open window, that Rooke, who had been talking ceaselessly throughout the meal about their friends, allowed Carlew to get in a word.

'About that pocket-book,' he said. 'I've had two letters of inquiry. One from Sir Francis Cadogan, forwarded from your office. The old boy had read the article in the Review and wants to know if he can see the book.' Sir Francis Cadogan was the greatest living authority on folk-lore, and Tom Carlew naturally felt flattered at having attracted the attention of the great man. Carlew took two letters from his pocket and handed them to his friend.

Rooke glanced at the letter from Sir Francis, who had expressed keen interest in the pocket-book and would be deeply obliged if he might examine it for himself. He had been particularly delighted with the rough drawing of the doll or image which, drawn large and small, had been repeated by the compiler of the book on several pages. In the note-book itself there was no explanation of this oddity, but clearly it had considerable significance in the mind of the scribe.

'He writes from Edinburgh,' Rooke pointed out. 'You can send it to him, if you can get permission from Kakoglou's executors.'

'I rang up Harvester about it today; that's all right. I've got the book here, as a matter of fact.'

Carlew had been aware throughout the evening that his friend was in a state of suppressed excitement. It was evident that he had something to say, but would only say it in his own good time.

'This is interesting,' Rooke observed, dropping his eyeglass and standing up. 'I'll show you something presently. But, first of all—'

He went to the bookcase which filled one end of the room and ran his finger along the green bindings of a set of old English essayists. It was an edition re-published in 1951 which Carlew had bought second hand only the previous year. Presently Rooke took out a volume of the Adventurer.

'This is what I want,' he said, 'I thought I remembered it. Look here.' He turned over the pages till he came to a paper dated November 7, 1758. The author of it was anonymous.

'Don't bother to read the whole thing,' said Rooke, 'just look at that paragraph, and he pointed with the stem of his pipe.'

Carlew took the volume, and saw that the essay in question dealt with dignified precision with the folly of Freethinkers and some gentleman who had the misfortune to find himself in company with the members of a 'disputing society.' And then out of the next line seemed to spring at him the isolated words—as insubstantial as the curse of Hamadon. He looked across at Rooke.

'Curse of Hamadon?'
'Does that tell you nothing?'

Carlew looked at the page again.

'No,' he said, 'there's nothing here. Mr. Anonymous simply says that the theory he is out to combat is as insubstantial as the curse of Hamadon. He takes it for granted that you know what he means. I do seem to have heard of the curse of Hamadon: the words seem familiar somehow; but I am sure I haven't read this before.'

'Don't be a fathead. I never expect people who have choice old books to read them. But there you are. He refers quite casually to this curse as though you knew all about it; and so I suppose in 1758 you did. And two hundred and fifty years later the allusion still has point. In those days the thing was common gossip, no doubt.'

'What thing?'

'Ah, there you have me. When people gather round the fire and tell ghost stories, the name of Hamadon still turns up. Perhaps I've got a better memory for queer things than most people. In the course of my researches I have come across a casual reference to Hamadon half-a-dozen times. In 1480 Humfredus Magnus, and much farther back, John of Ancona, made certain very queer references to Hamadon in their works on sorcery.'

Carlew jumped up.

'The Hamadon Ghost! I remember now my father told me something about it once, but I had no idea that it was as old a story as that. I believe my father actually saw the place when he went fishing in Devon.'

'And what story did he tell you?' asked Melvil Rooke, leaning back in his chair again. 'I'd like to know enormously.'

'It was very vague.'

'As insubstantial as the curse of Hamadon,' he quoted. 'I'm thinking Mr. Anonymous was referring not only to the curse, but to the story of the curse.'

'Well, now I come to think of it,' said Carlew, 'there was no ghost story exactly. But I do remember that my father said something about a wood which the country folk daren't enter after dark.'

'For that matter, they daren't now. Anything else?'

'I fancy there was supposed to be a curse on the family—the Hamadons of Hamadon. That's the name of the family who live there and of the village. Oh, and the old

Squire of that name was a queer chap, and seldom seen—all very vague.'

'So you said before. Now I'll tell you.'

'But what has this got to do with the pocket-book and the late Mr. Kakoglou? Oh, by Gad, of course it was near Hamadon that he—'

'Patience, all in good time. Listen. There never has been an accepted story of Hamadon. At least, no one story has lived on. Either something has happened to explode it or else the gossips have grown tired and wanted a change. There have been a series of legends, rumours, whispered hints, less remarkable for their peculiar qualities than for their amazing age.'

'It's an old family, then?'

'Back into the mists. They've been at Hamadon always—without a break. Of course you haven't heard of them, my dear chap. They are poor, they've always been poor; they've cut no sort of dash.'

'Farmers, I suppose? After all, if they had been folk of any kind of distinction they'd have got money even if they had followed the manner of many an old illustrious house and helped themselves. Or they'd have done something. The name must have cropped out somewhere, but it hasn't. In all history it simply doesn't occur. There is no Hamadon soldier, sailor, lawyer, parson, anything. Money follows brains, or at any rate character. It seems these Hamadons have been turnips generation after generation.'

Rooke, who had been looking out of the window into the walk below, turned and laughed.

'My dear Tom,' he said, 'you are yourself showing the turnipwise imagination. You think that because the usual corollary of brains or character or distinguished rascality is money that it is an inevitable rule of nature. If so I think it has been disproved by this exception. Oblige me for a moment by not starting, and don't do anything till I say, Go. Come behind me, and glance quickly out of the window towards the lamp-post on the right across the way. Then turn away and return to your chair. Go!'

Wondering at the abrupt change of subject which Rooke had made without altering his tone of voice, and what game his friend was playing, Tom Carlew did just what he was told. Glancing casually from his window towards the lamp-post in question, he saw a man leaning against it who was at that moment looking in their direction, a rather shabby fellow with an old-fashioned cap and a grey beard.

Carlew returned to his chair.

'Would you know him again?' Rooke asked.

'I think so. Why?'

'He's been watching this window for the last half hour.'

And next week you will read of Mr. P. B. Morgan, who was so anxious to buy the pocket book; of the strange walk taken by Tom Carlew and Melvil Rooke through the great mysterious London of the Age of Invention; and of what happened to them.

He saw a man looking in their direction, a rather shabby fellow with an old-fashioned cap and a grey beard.

'The World Outlook from Jerusalem,' by Mr. HUBERT W. PEET

THIS spring, a great gathering of men and women from fifty-one countries, representing almost every race and colour in the world, met in Jerusalem to help to frame a new policy and programme for Christian missions in the forthcoming years. Listeners will remember a talk on the conference given by the American missionary leader, Dr. John R. Mott, who was then on his way out to attend it. This afternoon Mr. Hubert Peet, who was largely responsible for the Press arrangements at the conference, will describe this remarkable event.

THIS afternoon's reading will give a representative selection from the enormous output of Wordsworth, the poet who began as the leader of a literary revolt, who endured torrents of contemptuous criticism, and ended by becoming Poet Laureate and the greatest influence in the world of letters of the Early Victorian age. The poems read will include the 'Ode on Intimations of Immortality,' and the even more famous sonnet, 'Milton! thou should'st be living at this hour.'

MIND-TRAINING IN SUMMERTIME

"Little Grey Books" Which Transmute Spare Moments Into Gold.

THOUSANDS of men and women are reading the "Little Grey Books" this summer. And very profitable reading they are too.

Miss Lillah McCarthy

"Pelmanism," says Miss Lillah McCarthy, the celebrated Actress, "is now my Sunday recreation—twelve Pelman books and a garden chair. After this pleasant exercise I feel braced up, ready for my week's work, and sure that I shall be able to do my best."

"That is the secret I have learnt from Pelmanism—it makes you do your best."

"Moreover, it makes your best better than you thought it possible to be."

"I am now a Pelman enthusiast, and am prescribing my remedy whenever I encounter a friend who would be the better for it—there are many who would."

"Pelmanism," she continues, "is a most absorbing game. At any convenient moment one may take up the 'Little Grey Books' and enjoy real mental recreation. Pelmanism re-creates the mind, fills one with a new energy for work, stimulates one to a greater determination of Will-Power, and increases the capacity for Concentration."

A Clerk writes that as a result of practicing Pelmanism he has become more Optimistic, has improved his Memory and his Observation, and has become less Self-Conscious.

An Engineer writes that he has strengthened his Will-Power, overcome Shyness, and increased his Self-Confidence.

A Lady Student writes that she has passed an examination "with great success, and attributes this honour to the Pelman Course."

A Doctor says that he has steadily increased his practice.

An Accountant reports a "substantial increase" in salary.

A Student of Music reports that he has gained immensely in Self-Confidence, Efficiency and Quickness of Understanding.

A Secretary and Cashier reports an increase of £80 in salary.

A Salesman writes: "Since taking the Course my salary has been increased by over 100 per cent."

A Manager states that he has increased his salary from £230 per annum, first to £400, then to £800, and now to £1,000 in two years. "During this time," he writes, "I continually referred to my 'Little Grey Books' for inspiration and confidence, and with astonishing success."

The Pelman Course has been fully revised in the light of the latest discoveries in Psychology, and the "Little Grey Books" enable you to make use of the results of these discoveries for your own personal advantage. The mental exercises are a delight to practise, and the Grey Books are a source of fascination from the first page to the last. They will help you to double your Efficiency, to increase your Earning-Power, to win your way to a higher position and to get more happiness out of life.

Pelmanism takes up very little time. You can practise it in the train, on the beach, or, as Miss McCarthy does, whilst sitting in the garden.

A little book has been published, entitled "The Efficient Mind." This book contains a full description of the revised Pelman Course and shows how you can enrol on the most convenient terms. You can obtain a copy free of charge by writing for it to-day to the Pelman Institute, 95, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1. Write or call to-day for a copy of this book—it will be sent you by return, GRATIS AND POST FREE.

NATIONAL ORCHESTRA OF WALES
(Leader, ALBERT VOORSANGER)
Conducted by WARWICK BRAYTRWAITE
Overture, 'A Roman Carnival'

Berlioz

BERLIOZ had a white-hot imagination always ready to pour out brilliant ideas in the most grandiloquent way. Add to that the fact that he had at his finger-tips an amazing knowledge of orchestration, and you may well expect that in this picture of A Roman Carnival in the sixteenth century he will make you see the gorgeous affair as vividly as he himself did when he wrote the overture.

WILLIAM PRIMROSE (Violin) and Orchestra
Concerto Accademico in D Minor
Vaughan Williams

IN this rather formidable title Vaughan Williams apparently indicates that his Concerto for solo Violin and Strings has much in common with the less elaborate Concertos of Bach's days, in which the Orchestra is contrasted with the soloist rather than used as a mere accompaniment, as in later Concertos.

This Concerto Accademico is written in three separate Movements.

The First Movement begins 'Quickly, heavily' with a vigorous tune in the Orchestra, a tune which contains a good deal of the chief material of the Movement, and to some extent of the whole work.

The Second Movement is slow, and is thought by some people to give us Vaughan Williams at his best.

The Third Movement is a rapid, bustling piece, in which we hear more than one clear-cut, energetic tune.

ORCHESTRA

Idyll, 'In a Summer Garden' Delius

NO one has pictured the calm and tranquil moods of nature more beautifully than Delius. Here is one of his impressions, fully scored and containing charming variety of mood. The work, which is dedicated to the Composer's wife, is headed by a quotation from D. G. Rossetti that gives us the thought behind the music:

'All are my blooms; and all sweet blooms of love
To thee I gave while Spring and Summer sang.'

DEAFNESS

NO LONGER A HANDICAP
 Even the 90% Deaf can now Hear!

NO need now to wear clumsy, uncomfortable devices for the relief of deafness. Practically invisible and weighing but a few ounces, the Sonomax Fortiphone is yet the most powerful and effective Hearing Aid the world has ever seen!

The Fortiphone is the latest discovery of three eminent scientists who have devoted their lives to the relief of deafness. It is so powerful, so pure in tone, so entirely free from extraneous noises that it enables even the 90% Deaf to enjoy conversation immediately and to hear every word and note in Church, Theatre, and Concert Hall at 5, 50 or even 150 feet, comfortably and without embarrassment. Undoubtedly one of the greatest marvels of modern times. Leading Aurists and Doctors recommend the Fortiphone.

The Sonomax "waistcoat pocket" Sound Amplifier surpasses, in power, heavy box devices weighing many lbs. The greatest discovery of the age for the relief of deafness.

THOUSANDS NOW USE IT!

During the last two years thousands of Fortiphones have been sold and every day more and more deaf people are discarding less efficient aids for this new discovery, which has amazed the scientific world and brought new hope to all deaf people.

BRAHMS' PIANO WORKS

Ballad No. 1 in D minor ('Edward'), Op. 10
Waltzes from Op. 39

THE first of the four Ballads that make up Brahms' Op. 10 is described as 'After the Scottish ballad Edward'—the words of which the composer later set as one of his Ballads and Romances (Op. 75). This ancient tale, the spirit of which is caught in the piece we are to hear, is found in Percy's Reliques. It is a dialogue between a mother and her son. He comes in with reddened sword, and she anxiously asks what is the meaning of it. He says first that he has killed his steed. Pressed, he declares that he has killed his father. In the mother's heart fear and horror grow. He says he will 'fare over the sea,' leaving his wife and children for ever. 'And what will ye leave to your ain nither, dear?' she tremblingly asks. In anger and despair, the son cries out, 'The curse of hell frae me shall ye bear!'—for 'sic counsels ye gave to me.'

MISS REBECCA CLARKE, a pupil of Stanford at the Royal College of Music, was, until a few years ago, chiefly known as a Viola player (in which capacity she has entertained listeners more than once). Since 1919, when she won an important American prize for composition, she has become quite well known as a writer of Chamber Music and Songs.

'Shy One' is a charming picture of the helpful maiden, 'titting about the house, shy as a rabbit. The end of the song is the lover's aspiration:— 'To an isle in the water with her would I fly.'

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS' fondness for the countryside and its songs is well known. Besides collecting many folk tunes, he has written some of his own, some in the folk-idiom and the others, like the Songs of Travel, of which The Roadside Fire is one, expressing in his own personal style his love of the open road. He has set R. L. Stevenson's robust verses with fine understanding and sympathy, and has given us something typically English in its healthy virility and underlying delicacy.

7.15 THE FOUNDATIONS OF MUSIC

BRAHMS' PIANO WORKS
Played by HOWARD JONES

Scherzo from Sonata in F Minor, Op. 5
Waltzes from Op. 39

BRAHMS' Op. 1 (published in 1853, when he was twenty) was a work for Piano. He began his career as a pianist, and during his early years of composition he tackled the Piano Sonata form several times. He had not yet learnt how to make the best of the keyboard, especially as regards delicacy and colour. His further study of the possibilities of the Pianoforte was made through the medium of Variations, of which he had written some half-dozen sets by 1866. Then, for about a dozen years, he almost entirely ceased to write music for the Pianoforte alone, his next work (Op. 76, in 1879) being a set of eight pieces, four entitled Capriccio and four Intermezzo. The titles broadly indicate the two types of piece, the one brisk or vigorous, the other quieter, sometimes almost grave.

These titles, with Rhapsody (thrice), Ballad and Romance (once each) are the only names Brahms gave to the thirty pieces that constitute the bulk of his middle and later period Piano

THE QUEEN OF DISEUSES.

Yvette Guilbert, the French diseuse, whose name has become famous in two Continents, is now appearing at the Arts Theatre Club, and London Station will relay her songs between 10.0 and 10.30 tonight. This portrait of her in a characteristic rôle was painted shortly before the war.

music—a collection of works, mostly in simple forms, that abound in interest and vitality, and in emotional breadth and purity. In this, as in most of Brahms' music, the emotion is not superficial. There are charms upon the surface, but some of the best must be sought a little beneath it.

Brahms was fond of internal melodies and cross-rhythms (for example, two notes to a beat in one hand against three to the beat in the other), and to the lyrical beauty of his music is added a bracing ruggedness of outline.

7.25 Mr. A. J. PEARSE: 'Wit and Humour in Books—VI, Stephen Leacock'

IN Stephen Leacock our generation possesses a humorist of the very first rank; a writer who, for sheer 'funniness,' can fitly be compared with Dickens in his most ridiculous mood. Also, he is a satirist of society to a degree that might not be immediately apparent to an unobservant reader, but that may become more perceptible to those who listen to Mr. Pearse's concluding talk.

TETLEY STEPHENSON: 'Modern Transport—VI, The Links between Different Means of Transport'

IN his previous talks Mr. Tetley Stephenson examined in turn the great systems of transport—railway, road and canal—as they exist in Great Britain today, glancing also at comparable conditions abroad. Tonight, in his concluding talk, he will discuss how all these systems can best co-operate for the good of trade as a whole; how far it is possible to gain efficiency by co-ordination with the incentive of common financial interests, and how far, in that case, it will be essential to strengthen public control.

10.0 YVETTE GUILBERT

(The Famous Diseuse)

In Songs from her Repertoire.

Relayed from the Arts Theatre Club

THE art of the 'diseuse' is not one in which England excels; our own stage has produced no one who can hold an audience, alone, throughout a whole performance, with the sheer personality that she puts into her recitations and her songs, in the way that Ruth Draper has made famous in America and Yvette Guilbert in France. Tonight listeners will have a chance to hear the Parisian shopgirl of forty years ago, who has held two Continents spellbound by the magic of her voice and the eloquence of her hands—those black-gloved hands that Toulouse-Lautrec drew so wonderfully when Yvette Guilbert was the sensation of the artistic world of the 'Yellow Book' days. They will not see the hands, but this evening's broadcast from the Arts Theatre Club will be for many a unique and invaluable opportunity of hearing one of the really great artists of our time.

PUCCINI'S last opera was completed all but the is based upon the fairy tale of the Princess who propounded three riddles to those who wooed her and had beheaded the suitors who failed to guess the answers. In Act I, the Prince of Persia, having failed, is about to be executed. Kalaf, an unknown prince, protests against such wanton cruelty, but catching sight of the Princess Turandot, falls madly in love with her.

TO ALL PIANISTS SAVE WEARY HOURS OF KEYBOARD PRACTICE

Mr. FOORT, whose Organ Recitals are being broadcast every week, writes me:—
Dear Mr. Macdonald Smith,
I take this opportunity of letting you know that I am continuing to use your System with the finest results, and as my professional work keeps me so busy that there is little opportunity to practise, I find it of the greatest value. The exercises alone save many weary hours of keyboard work, enabling one to get flexibility and finger control far more easily and efficiently than by the out-of-date method of scales, arpeggios, etc.
I recommend your System to beginners and advanced players alike whenever occasion arises.
Yours sincerely,
REGINALD FOORT, F.R.C.O.

7.15 THE FOUNDATIONS OF MUSIC
BRAHMS' PIANO WORKS
Played by HOWARD JONES
Intermezzo in A Flat, Op. 76, No. 3
Rhapsody in B Minor, Op. 79, No. 1

FOR about thirteen years, from 1866 to 1879, Brahms gave up pianoforte composition, devoting himself to chamber and vocal music,
and bringing out the first of his four great symphonies.

This Intermezzo is one of the first set of pieces (Op. 76) in which, after this long interval, he resumed composing for the pianoforte. It is a gracious trifle of but thirty bars, with a hint of harp chords in the left hand and an expressively swaying, syncopated right-hand part. This charming and uncommon effect soon gives way to a few bars in which Brahms uses his favourite cross-rhythmic device of two notes to a beat in one part and three to a beat in another.

Among Brahms' most vigorous and distinctive piano solos are his Rhapsodies. The B Minor Rhapsody is the first of two such pieces which constitute his Opus 79. This piece is in three sections, the first of which itself has much varied material. The opening is very busy and agitated.
After a while there comes a very quiet, simple tune in the Treble; then greater energy than ever; and so on for some time.

A GREAT JEWISH CANTOR.

Listeners who have never heard Jewish ritual singing will have a chance to do so tonight, when the Jewish Chronicle Musical Festival will be relayed from the Kingsway Hall.
Above is a photograph of Sirota, the world-famous cantor, who will sing in it.

The Second (middle) Section consists of a very smooth, sustained melody marked 'Very sweet and expressive.'

The Final Section is, on the whole, a recapitulation of the First Section.

7.25 Dame KATHERINE FURSE: 'The Adventure of Life'

THIS talk resumes the series, which began in April, designed to appeal particularly to listeners between the ages of, say, fifteen and eighteen. Dame Katherine Furse, who gives it, has been Assistant Chief Commissioner of Girl Guides since 1922; she was Director of the Women's Royal Naval Service from 1917 to 1919, and in the earlier days of the war she was a pioneer organizer of the V.A.D.

9.15 Travellers' Tales: Lady LAWRENCE:
'Across the Sind Desert'

IN this talk Lady Lawrence will describe a journey across the great wilderness that covers the interior of Sind. Her husband, Sir Henry Lawrence, was at that time Governor of Bombay, but both her and his associations with India go back into history, as he is a great-nephew of Henry Lawrence of Lucknow, and she herself is a descendant of Sir Charles Napier, the conqueror of Sind.

A Private Income— Not a Salary

£400 A YEAR FOR LIFE— FOR YOU!

Think of it! Not a salary demanding daily work at the office, but a private income to be paid to you every year as long as you live.

And while you are qualifying for it—it begins at age 55—there's full protection for your family; £3,200, plus accumulated profits, will be paid to them in the event of your death. Should that be the result of an accident, £6,400, plus the profits.

Should illness or accident permanently prevent you earning any kind of living, £32 a month will be paid to you until you are 55, when the £400 a year becomes due.

Every year you will save a very substantial amount of Income-Tax—a big consideration in itself.

This can all be accomplished by means of a plan devised by the Sun Life of Canada—the great Annuity Company with Government supervised assets exceeding £82,000,000.

It's a wonderful plan, adaptable to any age and for any amount. It brings independence within the reach of tens of thousands of men, who, otherwise, would be compelled to go on working till the end of their days.

AN ORCHESTRA THAT BRISTOL OWES TO ITS ROTARY CLUB.

The Bristol Orchestra, directed by Richard Austin, which will be relayed by Cardiff Station from the Glen Pavilion, Durdham Down, tonight, is run by the Rotary Club of Bristol, in the belief that there is a demand for good music rendered by a first-class orchestra every night in the week. So far, all the indications show that this belief is sound—at least, so far as Bristol is concerned.

All Smoking affects the throat!

Pipe, cigar or cigarette—no matter which—the delicate membranes of the throat object to smoke, which eventually produces irritation, either mild or severe. To prevent this, take an 'Allenburys' Glycerine and Black Currant Pastille occasionally between smokes and let it dissolve slowly in the mouth. Containing pure glycerine and the luscious fruit juice of ripe black currants, they are delightfully soothing.

Week to Week—VI, What is a Weed?'

AN old saying describes 'matter out of a place' as 'dirt.' In the same way a plant in the wrong place is a weed. In itself a weed may be interesting to the botanist and pleasing to the eye, and what is a highly-esteemed plant in one country may become a pestilent weed in the different conditions of another.
Mr. Eric Parker will give weeds their due in his talk this afternoon.

BRAHMS' PIANO WORKS
played by HOWARD JONES
Capriccio in B Minor, Op. 76, No. 2
Rhapsody in G Minor, Op. 79, No. 2

THE Capriccio in B Minor, a great favourite, is one of the Composer's daintiest pieces—a fanciful, light-hearted, and light-footed conception.

The G Minor Rhapsody is an impassioned utterance. The wide sweep of its melody (note its opening in an arpeggio, a favourite figure of Brahms), the leaping vigour of the succeeding passage, and the following curious portion, marked 'mysterious' (in which the opening arpeggio motif is heard softly in the bass), are striking elements in a piece of uncommon impressiveness.

7.25 Finance in the Modern World—VI
The Rt. Hon. PHILIP SNOWDEN
'The Relations of Finance, Industry, and Trade'

ANYBODY who has listened to the previous talks in this series will have realized the enormous power that finance wields in the modern world. The concrete embodiment of finance is the bank, particularly the central bank that controls the 'bank rate' and determines the amount of credit available for the business world.
In this talk Mr. Philip Snowden, the brilliant economist who was Chancellor of the Exchequer

Colline LUIGI MANFRINI
Alcindoro SALVATORE BACCALONI

THE libretto of La Bohème is founded upon Henri Murger's novel 'La Vie de Bohème.'
In Act I Rudolph and Mimi first meet and declare their love.

ACT II

The Second Act is a gay scene in a crowded, noisy square, on a merry Christmas Eve. Schaunard, the musician, Marcel the painter (both of these are Baritones), and Colline the philosopher
(Bass) have come to dine at the Café Momus. The poet Rudolph (Tenor) brings Mimi (Soprano) to join them. The dinner party is a merry one, the food and drink lavish, for one of the artists has had a windfall.

Presently a coquette, Musetta (Soprano), appears, followed up by a wealthy old man, Alcindoro (Bass). These two sit down to dinner close to the five friends, who recognize Musetta, and pass facetious remarks.

Musetta is, in fact, an old flame of Marcel's, and tries to attract him, much to his discomfiture. She manages to get rid of her aged admirer for a while, and she and Marcel fall into each other's arms.

Then the military tattoo approaches, and the party of Bohemians, preparing to go home, find they have not enough money to pay for their dinners. Musetta tells the waiter to put everything on her bill, and goes away with the artists and Mimi, leaving the bill for the old man to pay when he returns.

TOPICAL TALK

ACT III

Scene: At the city gate.

This Act brings a great change of feeling in the drama, which is strongly reflected in the music. It is winter, and the curtain rises on a group of scavengers and others, waiting in the raw, frosty early morning for one of the Gates of Paris to be opened. Sounds of revelry, including Musetta's voice, are heard from the tavern near by. Mimi, now apparently weak and ill, enters, and asks at the inn for Marcel, who is living here with Musetta,

and who quickly comes to her. She asks him to help her. Quarrels have occurred; she and Rudolph find it difficult to live together, but equally difficult to part. Rudolph enters, and Mimi hides behind a tree. Rudolph, it appears, is torn by jealousy. He tells Marcel much the same tale as has just been heard from Mimi, and also expresses a fear that Mimi is dying. Mimi reveals herself by her coughing and sobbing.

Mimi and Rudolph sadly talk of separating.
Marcel, meanwhile, has heard Musetta flirting in the inn, and these two, quarrelling, form a quartet with Mimi and Rudolph.

Musetta and Marcel go their own ways, shouting epithets at each other. Mimi and Rudolph move off together, singing 'Shall we await another spring?'

The remainder of the work tells of the parting of Rudolph and Mimi, of their reconciliation, and of Mimi's death from consumption.

DR. JOSEPH HAYDN makes a familiar name look a little strange. Honorary degrees for composers were not so common in Haydn's day as now. He was 'capped' by the University of Oxford in 1791, and chose this work (not a new one) for the performance which then accompanied the ceremony.

It is the very best Haydn—clear, spontaneous, and full of geniality. There are four Movements, the Second (Slow) one being an Air with Variations, some of them so free that at times the tune practically disappears.

Does Your English "Let You Down"?

You are Judged by the Way you Speak and Write.

SUCCESS in almost every walk of life is dependent upon the ability to use the right word at the right time.

Have you ever realised that friend and employer alike are influenced by your manner of speaking and writing? If you fumble for words or make grammatical slips, you are constantly giving an unfavourable impression of yourself.

No one can get far ahead in life without a mastery of clear and terse expression, for that very lack gives the impression that he or she is commonplace.

Be a Master of English!

The Regent Institute has evolved a system of instruction by means of which anyone of ordinary intelligence can be taught to express himself with clarity and force.

Ballad in G Minor (Op. 118, No. 3)
Intermezzo in E Flat Minor (Op. 118, No. 6)
Intermezzo in C (Op. 119, No. 3)

THE Ballad is one of the set of six pieces that make up Op. 118, written in 1893, the composer's sixtieth year. It is short, crisp and vigorous, with a sweet lyrical interlude in the middle. A momentary reminiscence of this gentler strain forms its happy end.

The minor-key Intermezzo is a stirring, dramatic piece, full of vivid life and, perhaps it may be felt, a sense of conflict.

The other, the major-key Intermezzo, is marked 'graceful and jocose.' Its happy little tune goes singing along beneath an overhanging arch of light foliage.

7.25 Prof. HAROLD J. LASKI: 'Social Purpose—
VI. The Case for Democracy'

THE argument in favour of democratic government insists that all citizens have an equal interest in what the state does, and that the state will not be successful in knowing what to do except by knowing what is happening to its members. This it can only do when the opinions of its members are freely offered and fully guide the activities of those who rule. This only occurs when those who rule are freely chosen by those who are to be governed by them. If, therefore, the object of social organization is response to human demands, that system which organizes the widest basis of consent to the rules made seems the most satisfactory. But there must accompany the acceptance of this thesis the institutions which our experience of history suggests as necessary to its fulfilment. With the development of this argument and its implications, Professor Laski will conclude his series of talks.

Conducted by

GEORG SCHNEEVOIGT

SIGRID SCHNEEVOIGT (Pianoforte)

TONIGHT'S conductor, Georg Schnee-voigt, is already quite well known to us, as he is to audiences in almost every city of Europe that has an orchestra or opera house.

He was born in Finland in 1872, and studied first at Helsingfors, and then in Sondershausen, Leipzig, Dresden, Brussels and Vienna. He taught in the Conservatoire at Helsingfors, was principal cellist in the Philharmonic Orchestra, and conducted the Finnish opera there. He succeeded Weingartner in the direction at Munich. Other posts as conductor were held at Riga (1912), Helsingfors (the City Orchestra) and Petrograd. For ten years he was chief conductor of the Concert Society in Stockholm, and in 1918 he founded the Philharmonic Orchestra in Christiania (now Oslo). From 1924 to 1926 he was general Musical Director at Dusseldorf, and last year he conducted the famous Los Angeles Orchestra. In the summer months he conducts the concerts at Scheveningen, Holland.

11.0-11.15 THE SENIOR T.T.
RACE

An Eye-Witness Account by 'IXION'
S.B. from Liverpool

THE most important road race for motor-cycles held in Great Britain is undoubtedly the Senior Tourist Trophy, which was run to day over the famous course in the Isle of Man. It is a race of thrills and spills, adventure and excitement, and the great crowds that gather at such spots as the Ramsay Hairpin Corner and Ballig Bridge never have reason to feel dissatisfied with their day's sport. Moreover, it is a valuable opportunity for British manufacturers to show what their machines and riders can do in competition with the pick of their rivals from abroad. The race will be described tonight by 'Ixion,' of The Motor Cycle, one of the best known authorities on motor-cycle racing, who will just have returned to Liverpool from the Isle of Man after seeing the race.

BARRED

from happiness
by ILL-HEALTH

Worse than real bars are the invisible barriers of debility. Nothing kills your vitality and high spirits as completely as the combination of nerve and digestive disorders now so common. It is a puzzling condition. "Painkillers" and "Rapid Cures" only make matters worse. Nerve tonics or indigestion remedies are little use alone. Yet many thousands have effectively restored their health and recovered their old joy in life through the proper treatment—which was specially devised for these conditions—Dr. Cassell's Tablets. Dr. Cassell's nourish nerves and digestion simultaneously. Hypophosphites feed the nerves. Blood Nutrients enrich the blood. Digestive Enzymes and Stomachics aid the digestion. This treatment is the proved successful way to overcome the general weakening due to devitalized foods, and the worry and noise of modern life. Start a course to-day.

Great Hills make great holidays

Who would go for a holiday save among the hills, the hills beside the sea?

When work was invented, hills were invented as a pleasant relief. English towns to work in, Scottish hills to play in, that is the recipe for most of us. And what hills they are! Older than the Alps, older than the Andes, but young again every year when the heather drapes its royal purple on the mountain sides. What luck to have Scotland so near! What folly not to go!

And the journey: through the rolling English countryside, and up, up into the mountains in the best train, on the best line, to the best place in the world.

They are "little beasts" to shave, nasty little curly hairs, and they show against the whiteness of the collar. They will shave much more easily if you use Erasmic Shaving Stick, which with its rich lather gets the hairs ready for the Razor.

Erasmic also keeps your skin in beautiful condition and your neck will not get sore where the collar scrapes.

—see what you are buying

THIS man bought his H.T. Dry Battery in the dark. He couldn't see inside—he hadn't the faintest idea how long it would last. He couldn't be expected to know that its power started to ebb away as soon as it was made. He thought it was cheap, that's why he bought it. It wasn't very long before trouble started—noises, cracklings, fading, distortion. Now, he knows it wasn't cheap at all.

Build up your H.T. with Oldham 10-volt Blocks. They provide a smooth, steady flow of current all the time. The tone will be improved, range extended and volume increased. And you'll save money in the long run. The Oldham H.T. Accumulator gives lasting service; it only needs recharging about four or five times a year. The stout Oldham plates, made under the Oldham Special Activation Process are exceptionally durable. An Oldham 60-volt H.T. Accumulator costs 33/- (with tray 37/6). Start now and build up on the expanding bookcase principle to the required voltage. You will be amazed at the improvement an Oldham H.T. Accumulator will make in your Set.

Oldham 10-volt H.T. block, capacity 2,500 milliamp hours complete with connecting flex and two wander plugs -

Extra large size, capacity 5,500 milliamp hours - - 8/-

A Commentary on the Athletic Meeting by Mr. H. M. ABRAHAMS
Relayed from Fenner's, Cambridge
With Interludes by the WIRELESS

with FRANK FOXON (Baritone) and the
B.B.C. DANCE ORCHESTRA
Personally conducted by JACK PAYNE

THIS afternoon's athletic meeting has more interest than the usual contest between a University and an outside club. Since the war Cambridge has supplied an unusually high proportion of athletes to the British Olympic teams, and Fenner's is now recognized as one of the most likely places to which to look for cracks capable of holding their own in the best company the world can provide.

So this year the meeting between the Varsity and the Amateur Athletic Association has been arranged as a sort of Olympic test. Cambridge are to be strengthened by the addition of some of the star products of recent years, and their team will include such famous athletes as H. B. Stallard, the miler and half-miler, D. G. A. Lowe, who has already run for Great Britain at Colombes, C. T. van Geysel, the high jumper from Ceylon, and those two fine hurdlers, Lord Burghley and G. C. Weightmann-Smith. The encounter between these cracks and the strong team brought down by the A.A.A. should make a most thrilling afternoon's sport, which listeners will hear described by Mr. H. M. Abrahams, himself an old Cambridge runner, and a former victor in the Olympic Games, an article by whom on this afternoon's meeting will be found on page 425.

BRAHMS' PIANO WORKS
Played by HOWARD JONES
Intermezzo in E Minor (Op. 119, No. 2)
Rhapsody in E Flat (Op. 119, No. 4)

IN the first piece we admire the resource which transforms the opening theme, with its quietly urgent rhythm, into a middle-section tune in the style of an old German dance of the waltz persuasion.

The E Flat Rhapsody is the last solo piano-forte piece Brahms wrote. The magnificent energy and breadth of the march-like opening and the delightful airy grace of the middle section have made it a great favourite.

Its variety of resource is stimulating, and the minor-key ending comes as a curious and powerful stroke of exhilarating effect.

FOUR CRACK ATHLETES WHO WILL FIGURE IN THE MEETING AT FENNER'S THIS AFTERNOON.

An important athletic meeting takes place at Cambridge this afternoon, when a 'past-and-present' Varsity side will compete with a strong visiting team sent down by the A.A.A. Most of England's representatives in this year's Olympic Games at Amsterdam will be on the track this afternoon. A commentary on the races will be broadcast by Mr. H. M. Abrahams from the ground. Here are four of the Cambridge cracks—H. B. Stallard, Lord Burghley, C. T. van Geysel and G. C. Weightmann-Smith.

by the ambitious Boris Godounov, who is at first Regent, afterwards Tsar. Boris has realized that his title is threatened by Ivan's younger son, Dmitri, and has had him secretly assassinated.

In this Air, Boris, in spite of his supreme power, is disquieted. Misfortunes fall upon his dear ones. His people are plague-stricken, and look on him as the author of their miseries. He is haunted by dreadful visions of the murdered Dmitri. He calls upon God for help.

The Ideal Surgical Stocking.

MAKES FAT LEGS SLIM AND SHAPELY.

Unsolicited testimonial from wife of Colonel to another sufferer who recommended.

I am writing to tell you how very pleased I am with the "Compri-Vena" stockings.

For the first time I have secured something that gives real support and at the same time is beautifully comfortable, and last, but not least, I can wear really thin silk stockings.

I went through perfect agony with the ordinary elastic stockings; by night they were really unbearable. I also find that I am able to wear a smaller size in shoes and I have told several of my friends about them.

Their pure tone makes listening worth while

Cambridge University v. the A. A. A.

Harold M. Abrahams on this Afternoon's Great Athletic Meeting.

THIS afternoon, Saturday, June 9, a team selected by the Amateur Athletic Association will compete against a team of Cambridge athletes composed of both those who are still 'up' and those who have gone down. The match will consist of 12 events and scoring will be by points—five for first, three for second, and two for third. Each side will have two representatives in each event, save that in the one and three miles there will be three representatives apiece.

Fenner's Ground, where the competition is to be held, is one of the largest athletic grounds in the country. The track itself is three laps to the mile (586 2-3 yards per lap). The competitors run round in a clockwise direction (the 'Varsities still maintain this custom, though all Championships and the Olympic Games are run in a counter-clockwise direction). It is suggested that it is more difficult to run right hand (or leg) inside. I myself have never noticed any difference, though I have heard that long distance runners (10 miles or so) suffer from stiffness next day on the leg which has been next to the grass (the inside leg) when they have suddenly changed from one kind of track to the other.

The hut from which we are to broadcast will be on the track itself about 25 yards or so beyond the finish. Owing to the fact that the runners will be coming straight towards us as they finish, in a close race we may well give listeners (in our anxiety to pronounce a result 'red hot') a wrong result. If we do we hope we may be forgiven and our advance apology accepted.

Matches between Cambridge University and the A.A.A. date back to 1911. They owe their origin to the enthusiasm of P. J. Baker (who was President of Cambridge Athletics in that year). In 1911 and 1912 the matches were held in December and the A.A.A. won the first time, Cambridge the next.

In 1919 the match was revived and Cambridge won. In 1926 the contest was held for the first time in the summer and the A.A.A. won by 52 points to 38. Last year the Association was again successful by 66 1-6 points to 43 5-6. This year for the first time the Cambridge side is to include both past and present members and as no less than 26 of the A.A.A. points were gained last year by old Cambridge men, the new arrangements may level up matters.

It is no easy task to predict the winners of particular events, especially since at the time of writing neither of the teams has been finally chosen. What I can do is to give the reader the records of the men who are likely to be seen on one side or the other.

The Cambridge side will include one Olympic and five past or present A.A.A. champions. There are a dozen men who have won their events against Oxford—and, in fact, the total number of events won by these men in the Inter-Varsity Sports is 29. D. G. A. Lowe (the Olympic 800 metres champion of 1924) will run in the half mile. Lowe's record is too well known and too long to give in detail. He holds the world's record for 600 yards, 1min. 10 2-5sec., and the English record for 880 yards, 1min. 53 3-5sec. H. B. Stallard (ex-A.A.A. champion at quarter, half, and 1 mile), has run the latter distance in 4min. 14 1-5sec. Lord Burghley and G. C. Weightman-Smith have both run the 120 yards hurdles in 14 4-5sec., and on a really fine day we will see a new British record of 14 7-10 sec. for this event. C. T. van Geysel (A.A.A. champion in 1926) has high jumped 6ft. 3ins., and R. S. Woods has put the weight 44ft. 11ins.—the English record. Another Cambridge weight putter, R. L. Howland, has nearly equalled Woods's put. J. W. J. Rinkel (who did inside 49 for 400 metres (437 yards) in Vienna recently, will run in the 220 yards. A formidable array indeed.

For the A.A.A., W. Rangeley (who beat evens for 100 yards a week or so ago) may run in the 100 yards. H. H. Hodge, who won this event last year, is a doubtful starter. J. W. Moore (4min. 19 4-5sec.) and C. Ellis (the present A.A.A. champion at one mile, 4min. 17sec.) may run in the mile—though perhaps Ellis may compete in the half. R. W. Revans (23ft. 6 1/2ins.) will be in the long jump. J. E. London (21 4-5sec.) in the 220 yards, and perhaps the high jump (6ft. 2in.). H. A. Johnston, three miles (14min. 35 2-5sec.), and R. Leigh Wood (50 1-5sec.) in the quarter mile.

I think the A.A.A. will win on points and that they will gain first place in the 100 yards, 220 yards, quarter mile, 3 miles, long jump and possibly the discus. Cambridge will win the half mile and mile, 120 hurdles, weight, high jump and pole jump.

As several ground records may be equalled or beaten and the same may apply to British and English records, I give these below.

To Experimenters

THOUGH your set may be capable of receiving many foreign stations in addition to those of the B.B.C., the difficulty of identifying them often mars the pleasure of listening to their transmissions.

There is, however, no reason why the experimenter should not be able to identify the most remote Broadcast station, for he can secure the assistance of the B.B.C. engineers by sending particulars, together with a coupon, given with each issue of World Radio. Full particulars of this scheme are given in the current issue of this important journal.

Order World Radio to be delivered regularly in future.

Dennis Noble who sang to you in the Meistersingers

If you heard the voice of Dennis Noble in the "Meistersingers" from Covent Garden—he sang to you in the broadcast "Proms." If you appreciated his voice then, you will appreciate it still more if when next time he broadcasts you are using a Lissen New Process Battery in your set. For the pure current of this battery will keep every word clear, every note distinct. The fine voice will come to you with a truth of tone that will delight you. For there is a fine power in the Lissen Battery, put there by a secret process and a new chemical combination which is known only to Lissen, and which you can get in no other battery.

The large cells are packed with energy which is sustained throughout the longest programme and lasts throughout months and months of use. The current flows noiselessly all the time—pure, steady D.C. current always. You will never find better power for radio.

The Lissen Battery is obtainable at any one of 10,000 radio dealers. You will get extra power and added clarity if you ask next time for a "Lissen New Process Battery," and show plainly by the way you ask that you mean to take no other.
