ONE'S first thought on hearing of a proposal to broadcast plays is that the idea will not do at all, for a play is intended to be seen as well as heard. We cannot hear the scenery; we cannot hear the facial expression of the actors and actresses; we cannot hear the physical action in the play, unless it be noisy, and even then we lose more than half of its value by not seeing it; and we cannot hear the pauses. When the reader remembers how much of the action and interest in a play is dependent upon sight, he soon realizes that a play which is only heard is inadequately experienced. The action of a man sitting upon his hat is entirely physical, but its effect is dependent upon our seeing it and not upon our hearing it. The world, for centuries past, has enjoyed that joke, but no man could laugh at it while it was broadcast. The sight of one person being kicked by another person extremely pleases the spectators, but that joke falls flatly on our ears when we hear it, accompanied by a bang,

'What's to Become of the Drama?'

asks St. John Ervine, the well-known playwright and dramatic critic, in the accompanying article, in which he brilliantly discusses, among other things, the future of Radio Drama and the effect which its development, as well as that of the Talking Film, will have upon the Theatre.

through the loud speaker or the earphones. Facial expression cannot be broadcast. (I am leaving out of consideration the probability of broadcasting pictures.) The pause, which can be tremendously effective on the stage, is totally ineffective on the microphone. Moreover, it is notorious that people who are heard but not seen are less audible and less interesting than people who are heard and seen. The playgoer who has the misfortune to sit in a seat from which he cannot see the stage knows well that his interest in the play is nothing like so great as it is when he is able to see the stage. Anyone who is doubtful of this fact may test its truth for himself by sitting behind a pillar in church while a sermon is being preached. He will find himself almost unconsciously straining his neck to see the preacher.

The Search for a Radio Technique.

It is facts such as these which make one inclined to doubt the value of broadcast drama. I remember listening for the first time to a broadcast piece, a musical comedy. I was struck with the fact that immediately the singing ceased and the clowning began the entertainment dropped considerably, and the principal effect of broadcasting upon me was to make me feel that never would I go into a theatre if I had no other means of testing the worth of plays than that of listening to wireless extracts from them. One began, in those days, to estimate the worth of the piece, not by what one heard of it, but by the applause and laughter of the audience. 'It must be good,' we said to ourselves, 'because the audience seems to be enjoying it!' Those, of course, were experimental days, and the B.B.C. had to conduct its business by the old-fashioned, but infallible, method of trial and error. I am not in the counsels of those who are responsible for drawing up the programmes, but I imagine that they soon discovered that a special technique was required for broadcast drama just as a special technique is required for movie drama. In other words, plays will have to be specially written for the microphone. It is no more possible to broadcast a stage play than it is possible to make a moving picture out of the ordinary manuscript of a dramatist. The author writes his play for a particular machine with whose works he is fairly familiar; that machine is the stage. But a cinematograph is not a stage, although it seems more related to one than the microphone, which, indeed, has no relationship to a stage of any sort. The author who designs his work for the microphone, therefore, must use an entirely different technique from the kind that he uses either for the theatre or the cinema; and it is to discover what this technique is that clever brains are now being exploited. I do not pretend to know what it is or to be able to discover it, but I suggest that the good broadcast play will be very like one of Mr. Bernard Shaw's disquisitory pieces, in which there is almost no physical action, although it contains plenty of mental and spiritual action. If I were asked to name a piece which appeared to me to be a nearly perfect play for broadcasting I should instantly mention Getting Married, and I think I should suggest some of the Greek tragedies, such as Euripides' Medea and The Trojan Women. In these plays the ears and the mind are chiefly employed; the eyes have little exercise. Mr. Shaw's piece is generally divided into three acts in the theatre, but it is in one very long act, and ought, properly, to be played without any intervals. This very fact makes it peculiarly suitable for broadcasting, for it involves no tiresome waits. The immensely vivacious and stimulating argument can be conducted from start to finish without interruption, because the scene is not changed and the action is continuous; the auditor's ears are delighted with witty, well-packed dialogue, and his mind is kept in a ferment of intellectual activity by its contact, unimpeded by such obstacles as scenery and the extravagant contrivances of the stage, with the mind of a man of genius.

G. B. SHAW.

Let us Hear the Dramatist!

The Showing-up of Blanco Posnet is another, and a shorter, play by Mr. Shaw, which is peculiarly suitable for microphone performance; and here I suggest that the B.B.C. should repeat its experiment of inviting Mr. Shaw to broadcast one of his plays. I am frequently told that his performance of O'Flaherty, V.C., was one of the best items in all the programmes that have been broadcast. A Dutch gentleman whom I met in the South of France informed me that he had heard it in Holland with delight. Not all authors are good broadcasters, or even readers, of their plays, but it would be a good idea to invite some of them to speak their plays through the microphone. To hear the author himself may be (but not always is) an added pleasure.

The best play for broadcasting purposes, then, seems to be the intellectual play, in which the author gets his effects through discourse rather than through action; and Mr. Shaw, who, when Getting Married and Misalliance were first performed, was derided for writing plays that were not plays, is now seen, and not for the first time, to have been a pioneer and well in advance of his period. But all this speculation may be rendered vain by the broadcasting of pictures which is promised to us for the immediate future. An immense development both of films and broadcasting is about to be made. Movietones and broadcast pictures between them may completely revolutionize entertainment, and may even cause the theatre as we now know it to be scrapped. I hate to think that this may happen, but hating a thing does not prevent it from happening.

Costly Theatre-going.

The theatre, as it is, is an extremely expensive and somewhat inefficient instrument. Let me offer an obvious example of its costliness. If I wish to read Miss Margaret Kennedy's novel, 'The Constant Nymph,' or Miss Rebecca West's novel, 'The Return of the Soldier,' I can buy a fine copy of it for seven shillings and sixpence or even for a less sum. It is equally enjoyable whether I buy it in the dear or the cheap edition. If I wish to see the plays which have been made out of these novels, I must spend fourteen shillings (including the entertainment tax) on a stall if I wish to be comfortable, or two shillings on a hard, extraordinarily uncomfortable seat in the gallery if I am poor. When the play is over my entertainment is at an end, but the book-buyer still has the book when he has read it and can read it again or lend it to his friends or sell it to a second-hand bookseller and thus recover part of its cost. The entertainment of the book is exactly the same whether it be bought in London or in the provinces, but the playgoer does not see in the provinces, generally speaking, so good a production as he sees in London. (He does not, of course, pay as much for it!) The film-fan in Pontypool sees precisely the same cast in Mr. Chaplin's The Circus as the film-fan in London sees. The whole apparatus of the theatre, so far as the provinces are concerned, is clumsy, out-of-date, inefficient, inferior, and comparatively expensive. But with the coming of movietones and broadcast pictures a person sitting on the Paps of Jura will be as well off for entertainment as a person sitting in the Haymarket in London. The effects of that revolution are incalculable. Who, in Aberdeen, say, or in Belfast will pay to see an inferior performance of a stale play when he may see or hear a first-class performance of a new play?

The revolutionary effects of this development will not be confined to plays. The whole business of lecturing may be profoundly affected by it. I give many lectures in the course of a year. Sometimes I am in form and sometimes I am not. I may arrive in a town, after a long, cold, and exhausting railway journey, feeling far from fit, and be obliged to go straight on to a platform and speak to an audience for sixty or ninety minutes when all I wish to do is to crawl into my bed and howl for a hot-water bottle and a little bit of comfort. I travelled from New York to Chicago, a thousand miles, and arrived there, after a sleepless night, in time to step on to a platform and address an audience which expected me to be very bright and entertaining. I hope I was not as flat as I felt, but obviously this sort of business is likely to cause ups and downs in a lecturer's quality. The movietone will prevent him from giving anything but his best performance.

'Releasing' the Perfect Lecture.

He will prepare his lecture and deliver it in circumstances of comfort, and it will be 'released,' as a gramophone record is 'released,' only when it is as nearly perfect as is possible for it to be. Madame Gallucurci's records are not released until her notes are round and pure. The makers do not sell records full of flat singing. It will presently be possible for people in tiny towns all over the world to hear, say, Mr. Bernard Shaw lecturing on Equality who could have had no hope of hearing or seeing him, because the physical exertion of lecturing everywhere would be beyond the resources of any human being. It is miracles such as these that we are about to see, and Heaven alone knows what changes they will make in our lives. I know this, that listeners in country places love the 'talks' and broadcast plays, and are sharpening their wits on them; and I, personally, believe that in a decade from now the countryman whose mind is not stupefied by city life will have brisker and better brains than the city man—largely as a result of broadcasting.

On Friday, August 3, a further step forward in the development of The Radio Times as the programme-paper of the 'complete listener,' and the most varied weekly magazine for the intelligent reader, will be marked by the publication of its first

NEED WE HAVE STUDIOS?

The following article is a reply to critics who believe that Broadcasting from Studios, as opposed to Broadcasting direct from Concert Halls and Opera Houses, is unnecessary. The author not only puts his case skilfully, but is qualified by expert knowledge of the factors and difficulties of the problem.

IT is much easier to give a more or less balanced opinion on this subject nowadays than it would have been two years ago. The experience which has been gained from recent broadcasts has definitely placed the subject of outside broadcasts, at least of orchestral music, upon an entirely different plane. The use of a concert hall to accommodate a symphony orchestra is productive of better musical quality, and this primarily is the main object of all our efforts musically. The minor disadvantages of hall noises, such as coughing, rustling of programmes, etc., are incidental to such ventures, but at the same time many people regard such side-issues as actually contributing to verisimilitude of the performance from the point of view of local colour; hardened concert-goers are so used to these things happening that the deathly stillness of the background of a studio performance makes them feel that something is lacking.

THERE can be no possible doubt that certain buildings are acoustically impossible from the microphone point of view. No amount of balancing and re-arrangement will ever render them capable of giving an adequate performance to the microphone, because, after all, the microphone is in the unfortunate position of being a listener sitting on a permanent seat from which he cannot move, and listening to the performance of a work with one ear, and, consequently, can only reproduce those effects which reach him at that particular point in the hall. As we all know, it is positive torture to listen to performances in many halls which are in regular use; so that if one feels that oneself, one cannot expect the microphone to re-act otherwise, as the same physical factors are responsible for the phenomenon of reception in both cases.

Therefore, if there is any doubt as to the suitability of the hall on grounds of acoustical properties, one should refuse to jeopardize the broadcasting of a serious musical work from that hall. Although in the past it has been necessary to take certain items from unsuitable buildings for various reasons, it is a matter for general satisfaction that the recurrence of these episodes is becoming gradually less.

Again, one must consider the type of material which is to be broadcast. If, for instance, the work involves a large chorus, orchestra and several principals, and the platform accommodation for spacing such a body is inadequate, the artistic presentation of such a work to the microphone is going to be very difficult, if not impossible.

Thanks to unceasing work, to balance and control, few works are out of the range of adequate microphone presentation nowadays, and there is no doubt that did the accommodation for artists in our concert halls permit of augmentation, or adaptation, one could go a great way towards including every work for the microphone which is capable of adequate presentation in the concert hall itself, working on the analogy that the microphone is a listener for whom one has to find the right seat, to allow him to realize everything that is taking place on the platform.

The question of outside broadcasts boils itself down to the one point: if there are facilities for the correct placing of the microphone, there is no reason why an outside broadcast should not be a success.

With regard to orchestral broadcasts in the studio, it is an advantage to be able to place the orchestra according to our own ideas with regard to the microphone, and not to be called upon to adapt ourselves to the conventional concert hall arrangement of the performers; but unhappily, lack of space does not permit taking the fullest advantage of this privilege. Whether the introduction of much larger studios with a more pronounced resonance period of their own, plus, perhaps, super-imposed synthetic echo, will give us broadcasters the desired result, only the future can decide.

ALL the foregoing applies strictly to orchestral music, but when we come to the smaller forms of music, the position is almost entirely reversed. Chamber music broadcasts can be given much more adequately from the studio than from an outside hall. The same thing applies to singers, excepting those of the definitely operatic type of voice, accustomed to the one-man struggle against a large orchestra. They naturally require more space, and can be broadcast to better advantage, from an outside hall of a suitable size. Pianists and solo instrumentalists gradually acquire a sense of studio technique, and can be relied upon to give of their best from the studio.

To return to the subject of orchestral music, however, we come up against the old argument, which is entirely fallacious, that the ideal conductor for wireless must not necessarily be an impressive conductor in the concert hall, and the converse proposition; in other words, that wireless conducting is a branch all of its own.

Of course it is; but this is decidedly not due to any special musical qualification on the part of the conductor for wireless, but rather to his being the possessor of an open mind, to take advice from those who are in a position to tell him what his results are like over the microphone. No conductor has yet heard himself conduct his own orchestra over the microphone; many have tried conducting rehearsals with headphones on closed circuit, but one and all have been obliged to abandon this impossible experiment. Instead of this, all orchestral rehearsals are listened to by a competent musician reading the score in a small cabinet at the side of the conductor, and taking samples of the rehearsal on headphones and loudspeaker on closed circuit. Wherever the conductor's wishes do not appear to be realised over the microphone, he is at once consulted, and steps are taken to rectify whatever mistake was being made; and if, on the other hand, an important part is not sufficiently prominent, the conductor is informed of the fact and the matter is put straight. The function of the man in the box is merely to lend the conductor his ears, and to bury Caesar or to praise him as the case may require.

IN these circumstances, it will therefore be clear that any conductor who has mastered the technique of his craft, can with very little experience put up an excellent show for the microphone. Naturally, as he repeats his performances for the microphone, he will begin to notice those points in the score which have called for criticism on the part of the man in the box, and will gradually come to associate certain types of passage with certain scoring, with certain distinct microphone phenomena, and make his adjustments accordingly, unasked. As his sense of microphone technique increases, there will be less and less occasion for outside interruption.

In conclusion, whatever progress may in the future be made in the artistic broadcasting of music of every type, the only way to attain to as near perfection as we shall ever get, will be by sedulously avoiding all dogma on the subject of microphones, outside halls versus studios, and the like. For when all theorizing is finished, the final judgment must inevitably lie with the reception as conveyed to the human ear; and however impossible a proposition may appear on the face of it, if the final results are better than those previously obtained, we should not even hesitate to broadcast a symphony orchestra from the inside of an empty gasometer!

Harry Weldon to Broadcast.

I HEAR that Harry Weldon is to make his microphone debut on July 31. He is one of the few stars of the music-hall who have not as yet 'gone on the ether' (an awkward-sounding phrase which suggests the abysmal depths of drug-addiction). Mr. Weldon, whom we recall as a bull-fighter and a sailor, among other disguises, should 'come over' excellently. It will be amusing to hear his familiar whistling speech, though what its effect on the microphone will be, goodness knows. Anyway:—

'There ain't no public 'ouses on the mountains,
Just to wet your little whistle when you're dry.
But we've only got a sarsaparilla fountain.
You're a liar, too, and so am I.'

June 19.—Sister Pall is apprised of her boy by letter that he visits London come Thursday till Saturday and hopes to wait on her. Whose name, sister tells me, is Azarias Nubbins, with a snugg little auctioneer's business in Huntingdon, and is by religion—God save us! a Plymouth Brother. The first time of our having a Plymouth Brother in the family—if he comes into it—but nought yet settled between them, it seems, only for his taking her to the pictures and there once list her on the care and last birthday gave her a chepe crystal-sett. So resolving to abide his coming, what I make of him; and if he be as snugg as Pall thinks, to do all I can in pressing forward the matter, Plymouth Brother or noe.

June 20.—To Ascot by carr, my wife and I and Pall; sister in her new clothes saying (to use her own words) that she do feel poshed upp to the nocker, such language as I had never thought to hear a Pepys use, and comes, I suppose, of consorting with Plymouth Brethren. My wife in her flowered georgette in the lamp-shade style, mighty fine; I in my grey tays and tall white hat, which is noble, yet not too ceremonious, but very nicely combines jauntiness with sobriety, to my great content. At the last minute remembering Uncle Peter, I had my wife sew a little diamond of black cloth on my left sleeve, being a thing not fitt to name that I should be seen abroad with noe marks of mourning for Uncle, and he only 6 days buried and his death brought me 2,000l.

So away with fayr skyes and all merrie. But Lord! The squeeze of carrs we fall into after Virginia Water, all crawling like snayls, and the trouble I had in keeping my eyes in three or four places at once, to wit, upon the steerage and upon the policemen that direct us and the fine wenches in the carrs about us! These busy, most of them, putting on the last touches with their puffs and mirrors. Very observable it is the brassy way women now do this most openly before everybody; and was told yesterday by Mr. Snigsby of his lately eating lunch in a tavern, and a wench that sits near him did fall a-combing herself with a pocket-comb, she shaking the comb after every

The Burning Question.

WHAT does the public want?—a most fascinating subject, that, and one which is constantly in the minds of those responsible for the programmes. I suggest to the Talks Department that it would make a rousing subject for a broadcast discussion. My own opinion, gathered not from a reading of the letters received by the B.B.C. and the outside Press, but from a varied experience of men and women of all classes, is that the taste of the public is under-estimated, rather than over-estimated, by those whose business it is to provide it with literature, drama, films, etc. Its besetting sin—or virtue—is curiosity. It likes to hear new things and form its own opinion of them. There is more sturdily independent opinion in this country than on the Continent, for all that opinion there is more vocally expressed than here. We are apt to do ourselves less than justice.

combing, and, at one of these shakings, some of the combings shaken into Snigsby's gooseberry tart.

Come on the course and having very hardly found a park for the carr and leaving the hired man we have brought with us to mind it, we into the Grand Stand with our tickets and here agaynst the raylings a very good sight of the Royall procession up the course—the cream horses and scarlett outriders noble beyond everything; yet what most pleased me was the King, his tall white hat and gray tays that might have been mine own. My wife and Pall all theyr eyes for the Queene her frock, and to talk of nothing else by the space of ½ hr., as women will about cloathes, and no stopping the fools.

In the Hunt Cup did put on Pnory Park for myself 1l, for my wife 5s, for Pall 2s 6d; whereby we win 7l 10s, 1l 17s 6d, 18s 9d respectively. So to bless God and Mr. Joel, and after that did leave well alone. Walking on the course between races, who meets us but Mr. Jimble and his lady, with them Connie. He have places in the Royal Enclosure and is, I can see, with child about it; though how he can have got them, God knows. Standing awhile behind Connie and Pall, I was suddenly catcht with sister's trim shape from a back view, better than Connie's allmost, and come to me if she could have but Connie's front with her own back, how much better might she do herself for than auctioneers and Plymouth Brothers.

In the way home wishing to don my woolly under my coat, but find that my wife, in sewing on the black diamond for Uncle Peter, have sewed my coat to my shirt. She offering to undo me with the nayl-scissors that she hath in her vanity-bagg. But I will not be undone with nayl-scissors on the publique road before everybody. So to do without my woolly and praying God I catch not my death of it. But three double whiskies at dinner saved me, I believe. Afterwards listening-in to the Wireless Military Band, they playing, among other matters, 'The Bees' Wedding,' most excellently done beyond everything. Set me musing of Pall's wedding to her Plymouth Brother, what I am like to make of him when I see him and how I shall best nayl him to it, the poor fool!

Pro and Con.

BOTH my Aunt Agatha Lightfoot and Miss Jimp have, of course, sent in letters to the Editor—'pro and con' the B.B.C. Not that my aunt, who writes fervidly 'pro,' needs his guinea. Her dear father, who was killed in a tricycle tragedy in '84, left her three hundred a year tied up in the most intricate fashion. 'I love the B.B.C.,' she writes. 'They are so improving. I do wish, though, that we could hear The Druid's Prayer more often. It always reminds me of a pianoforte recital

'I love the B.B.C. They are so improving.'

I gave at Littlehampton the year Mr. Lloyd George was smuggled out of the Birmingham Town Hall disguised as a policeman—and so on. Miss Jimp, whose letter is headed 'Ladies' Waiting Room, The Railway Station, Penmaenmawr,' begins: 'I hate the B.B.C. I feel sure it—they, I mean—are men of unstable character. All this Beethoven! It ought to be stopped. I am hoping to meet a Member of Parliament at our Social Evening tomorrow. I shall tell him.' What Social Evening? Where? Miss Jimp remains a mystery. She evidently does not care for the B.B.C. The Editor threw both these letters on my table. 'Friends of yours, I believe!' he said, with rather a bitter smile.

A 'Blue' Evening.

SOMETHING new—and, to many listeners, disturbing—in the way of programmes will be heard from London and Daventry on July 23. Its title is 'Blue on the Boulevard'; its conception ultra-modern. The aim of this programme is to show the influence of the Negro upon Western poetry and music. This 'Negro tendency' has been one of the most notable artistic manifestations since the war. The melancholy rhythm of 'The Blues,' the syncopated frenzy of sheer jazz, the crude virility of Negro sculpture, the picturesque fervour of the now popular spirituals—these the Negro has given to us through the United States of America. They have in America a poet called Vachel Lindsay, who understands the Negro, from whom he has acquired much of the spirit and material of his verses. One of his finest poems, 'The Congo,' will be recited during the programme on July 23—and another, The Daniel Jazz, will be heard as set for chorus and chamber orchestra by Gruenberg. The influence of the Negro spirit upon a young French composer will be heard in Georges Auric's Adieu, New York, and upon an English poet and an English composer in Rio Grande, a choral setting by Constant Lambert of a poem of Sacheverell Sitwell's. Both Lambert and Auric have written ballets for Serge Diaghilev, whose Russian company is now with us again. 'Blue on the Boulevard' will, you see, provide an amusing and unconventional evening's entertainment. My Aunt Agatha Lightfoot will not like it—but then she is so fond of The Druid's Prayer.

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

An Architect's Grumble.

THE talk which will be broadcast from London at 9.15 on Monday, July 23, is entitled 'Who Cares? An Architect's Grumble about the Disfigurement of England.' The architect in question is Mr. Clough Williams-Ellis. I have never heard him grumble, but it should be a brilliant and entertaining performance. He is one of our most imaginative architects—as witness the lovely little fishing village which he has designed and built at Port Merion, near Harlech. Mr.

'Old English villages along the motor roads.'

Williams-Ellis has a very right and proper bee in his bonnet about the disfigurement of our lovely countryside with petrol pumps, vile jerry-building, gaunt and ugly hoardings, etc. He has written a book on this, entitled 'England and the Octopus,' which Geoffrey Bles is shortly publishing. Another of his books is 'The Pleasures of Architecture.' Let us listen to him on the 23rd. It is high time his ideas were generally adopted. Some of the 'Old English villas' along the motor-roads are beginning to look like stalls at an advertising exhibition.

The C.P.R.E.

IN a similar connection will be an appeal from London on Sunday, August 5, by the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, on behalf of the Council for the Preservation of Rural England, whose efforts are directed against the same forms of outrage as is the scorn of our architect. The Council is appealing for Associate Members to assist it in its efforts to preserve the countryside, the success of which depends upon the support and donations of the public. You may become an Associate Member for one guinea per annum. If you wish further particulars, write to the Secretary of the Council, 17, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.1, and listen to the Appeal on August 5.

The Winning Poster.

DURING May I brought to your notice the competition inaugurated by the Radio Manufacturers' Association for a design for the poster of the Radio Exhibition. Six hundred artists competed. The first prize of £50 was awarded to Mr. Clarence Scott, of the Leeds College of Art. The winning design will no doubt appear in The Radio Times, at the time of the Exhibition in September.

Teaching by Wireless.

A STRIKING testimony to the now recognized importance of educational broadcasting is the recently announced decision of the National Committee for the Training of Teachers in Scotland to install £30 receiving-sets at their four principal training centres.

Next Week's Vaudeville.

OF the 'single acts' in next week's Vaudeville the most outstanding are Tommy Handley (July 23) and George Grossmith (July 25). The former is at present engaged upon another revue, a successor to his recent Ina Inn, which drew more appreciative letters than any similar broadcast during the past two years. His new revue, as yet untitled, will be presented from 5GB on August 3, and other stations on August 4. Its author has written an article on 'How to Make People Laugh' which will be one of the many features of our Summer Number. On July 27, at 7.45, there will be a programme from London which includes Jane Dillon, Neil Kenyon, Cicely Courtneidge, and Delys and Clarke. Cicely Courtneidge was one of the successes in the cabaret given before the King and Queen on the recent occasion of Lord Londsdale's Golden Wedding. Delys and Clarke are syncopated duettists, the most amusing and effective, I think, that we have 'on this side of the water.' I remember Leo Delys when he used to sing in Paris, at Harry's New York Bar. Nowadays he and his partner are generally to be heard at 'Chez Henri,' that charming little night-club in Long Acre which will enjoy a long life because it never sells drinks after hours.

Harriet Cohen.

A MAGNETIC figure in modern music is Harriet Cohen, the English pianist. She is a very beautiful woman who enjoys the friendship of most of the celebrated people of our time. Miss Cohen is to give a recital at 5 p.m. on Sunday, July 29. She has, I hear, been engaged by Casals to play with the Barcelona Orchestra, on October 18, Bach's D Minor Concerto and Bax's Symphonic Variations. She is a great friend of Arnold Bax and has given first performances of several of his works. She shares with Dame Nellie Melba the distinction of having her name on the menu. 'Poire Harriet' is as well known to gourmets as 'Pêche Melba.'

Military Band.

THE concert which the Wireless Military Band is to give on Friday evening, July 27, will include Auber's Overture The Bronze Horse, four dances from The Blue Bird, by Norman O'Neill, Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance, No. 3, and Carnival in Paris, by Johan Severin Svendsen, the Norwegian composer, who died in 1911.

Sunday, July 29.

LONDON'S evening concert on Sunday, July 29, will be given by the Wireless String Orchestra—conductor, John Ansell. The programme which Mr. Ansell has chosen is remarkably varied. It comprises works by Bach, Puccini, Boughton, Mokowski, O'Donnell, Arensky, Fletcher, and Oscar Strauss.

Variety Note.

ONE of the most entirely successful broadcasters is Fay Compton. Her voice is outstandingly 'microphonic'—if you heard her Ophelia in the Ellen Terry programme or her reading of Shelley a few Sundays ago you will understand what I mean. Miss Compton is coming to the studio again on July 28, when she will take part in a variety show with Firth and Scott and the Parkington Quintet. In the same programme appears 'Chez Cupid,' a sketch by Cecil Lewis, for which, I understand, Roger Eckersley is writing a special dance number.

The Daughter of Wieniawski.

WE are to hear on Monday, July 30, a concert of music by Poldowski. 'Poldowski' is the musical nom de plume of Lady Dean Paul. She was the daughter of the famous Polish composer, Wieniawski. At the age of five she began composing. When nine years old, she wrote an Oriental Suite which was performed publicly. She came from Brussels to London to study composition under Percy Pitt; then she went to Paris to complete her studies with Vincent d'Indy. Some of her many well-known compositions are the Caledonian Market Suite for piano, Pat Malone's Wake for piano and orchestra, and various smaller piano works, such as Bloomsbury Waltz, Child Talking to the Cat and Bouncing Ball, and a violin and piano sonata. Tatiana Makushina will sing a number of the composer's songs, settings of poems by Blake, Verlaine, etc.

A Cool Book.

IT is seldom, alas! nowadays that you can find a book, at the price of a shilling, which combines a decorative outside with an inside mingling interest and useful information. But that such a book is now to be had is a fact. A collection of the Household Talks broadcast during 1927 has been made under the title of 'Home, Health and Garden,' and is published in an attractive cover by the B.B.C. Its perusal enables you to eat, decorate, keep bees, and dress in greater efficiency and comfort, to say nothing of a good many other things. In short, if you enjoy Household Talks, you will be glad to possess 'Home, Health and Garden.'

Library List.

THE list of novels which Mrs. Hamilton reviewed in her talk of June 28 comprised the following: 'General Crack,' by George Preedy (Lane); 'Children in the Wood,' by Naomi Royde Smith (Constable); 'The One and the Other,' by Richard Curle (Cape); 'Cressida—no Mystery,' by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes (Heinemann); 'Blue Feather,' by Lawrence W. Meynell (Harrap); 'Circumstantial Evidence,' by Andrew Stewart (Lane); 'Black Sparta,' by Naomi Mitchison (Cape); and 'Nightseed,' by H. A. Manhood (Cape).

'Announcer and Lord High Everything Else.'

Overstaffing in Canada.

A FRIEND who has been touring in Canada tells me he visited a radio station which has a staff of one. This versatile soul is engineer, announcer, and Lord High Everything Else. When the time came to say good-bye, he had to 'close down' for a minute while he shook hands with my informant.

'The Announcer.'

'Come, Come Now, Astyanax!'

Charles Croker, author of Speed, replies briskly to 'Astyanax's' recent 'point of view' article on Radio Drama entitled 'Switch on the Lights!' 'Astyanax' pleaded for a 'drama of language' which should be independent of 'noise effects' and other artificial stimuli to the visual imagination.

MY interest in a recent Radio Times is due to an article by one 'Astyanax' on the subject of Radio drama.

You see, being myself a Radio playwright, I am one of the guilty parties to the presentation of this form of entertainment.

'Astyanax' tells us that:

(1) He doesn't like it;

(2) It is all wrong;

and, most important of all—

(3) He knows exactly what is the matter.

A moment's digression. I think 'Astyanax' is a large gentleman whose preparation to write an article consists chiefly of taking off his coat, rolling up his shirt-sleeves, filling—with determination and tobacco—a large pipe, looking as near as possible like Mussolini, and then wielding his pencil as if it were a two-handed sword. Having done all these things he then proceeds to 'tell the world,' possibly roaring the while like any sucking-dove, and to as much purpose.

Let us see what he says. 'The appeal of the Radio play must be to the ear, not to the eye.' The way in which he then juggles with meanings, with phrases like 'visualizing with the eye,' then with 'the mind's eye,' suggesting that they are interchangeable terms, is dexterous but unscientific and illogical. It almost makes me think that his 'mind's eye,' when endeavouring to visualize psychological processes, suffers from severe myopia.

He goes from strength to strength, getting now to the point where he says: 'For Radio drama to succeed, it must achieve satisfaction of the ear alone.' The ear alone, mark you! excluding entirely the use of imagination and 'the mind's eye'!

He proceeds: 'Radio plays must not be visualized.' He says this with all the authority of a doctor putting on his labels 'Poison—must not be taken!' But while the doctor speaks with a deep knowledge gained through most difficult experience, Astyanax evidently doesn't.

May I tell Astyanax—I'm sure my readers know it already—that the ear alone cannot be satisfied. One might as well try to satisfy a piece of beef or a length of electric cable. The ear is part of an inter-acting whole. It is just one of several channels which convey sensations to the brain. It is not an end in itself, and cannot be satisfied either by Radio drama, music, or any other sounds which happen to vibrate its tympanum.

Further, as supporting your case for excluding reliance on imagination or visualization, you quote that Mark Antony said: 'Lend me your ears,' suggesting that he really meant that! If this were the case ears should have been made detachable. You know very well that he meant 'Lend me your attention,' your sympathy, your appreciation of tragedy upon tragedy, your power to visualize life in Rome without Caesar, your ability to picture this assassination for yourself, and all the rest of it. And then, please note, this poet painted in words a picture sufficiently stimulating to cause a rebellion! The artist in words uses them to the same purpose as Mark Antony, to express his own feelings and to produce an effect, not on the ear, but through the ear. Words are used to this end and to this end only. At random I select a few lines from various simple poems, which may assist you.

'The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea.'

'Oh to be in England now that April's there.'

'Africa in her matted hair obscured, and India in meditation plunged.'

'The silent and the subterranean dark has crossed the nadir and begins to climb.'

Words compel visualization, whether you like it or not. Artistic writers use them as a medium to give us less favoured mortals something from which we may re-create their own visualization of beauty.

And you say, Sir, that the broadcast play, although 'offering a supreme opportunity for our poets,' 'should have nothing to do with visualization'! I can only say that, metaphorically, you should be made to suffer the fate of the boy whose name you write under. You will remember, perhaps, that the Greeks hurled him from the walls of Troy to prevent his doing further damage to that already done.—CHARLES CROKER.

[The Editor, being unable to offer 'Astyanax' his full right of reply, has given him the opportunity of glancing over Mr. Croker's article and prints below his short comment thereon.]

'Astyanax' writes:—

'I am infinitely grateful for the chance to defend myself against Mr. Croker's thrusts. I am, however, no Mussolini, but a much weaker vessel. My article was written less in the hope of laying down a law than in order to draw from an authority like Mr. Croker a definite pronouncement on the aims of Radio drama. I humbly give him best, only adding that I prefer my own knowledge of Homeric mythology, according to which "Astyanax" was flung from the walls of Troy at such an early age that his peccadilloes, previous to his untimely end, can have done little damage beyond occasional "blasting." Mr. Croker's Speed made much more noise than that!'

Broadcasting Prophesied

—and a Suggestion for a 'Listening Holiday.'

On page 59 will be found a number of brief extracts from the Editor's post-bag. Below are two somewhat lengthier letters of more than usual interest.

A Broadcast Prophet.

To the Editor of The Radio Times.

DEAR SIR,—It is not generally known that Edward Bellamy, in his book, 'Looking Backward,' published in the 'eighties, forestalled Val Gielgud, by describing a twenty-four hour programme, all however relayed by landline. He also described a broadcast sermon.

The hero, Julian West, was aroused out of a trance in the year 2000, after having slept, in a subterranean chamber, for a period of one hundred and thirteen years, three months and eleven days.

He awakened in a strange room, to find a complete stranger, Dr. Lecte, watching him.

Two days later, Edith, the daughter of Dr. Lecte, asked Julian if he were fond of music. On receiving an affirmative reply, she took him to the music room, where she seemed very much amused when he expected her to play, or to sing to him, and where he looked in vain for any sign of a piano or any other musical instrument.

She handed him a card which bore the date, September 12, 2000, and which contained the largest programme of music which he had ever seen, obviously the forerunner of The Radio Times; it included vocal and instrumental solos, duets, quartets and various orchestral combinations.

The programme was a continuous one, as we shall have it eventually; the various selections being bracketed together in sections, of which there were twenty-four.

Julian selected an organ piece and Edith crossed the room and merely touched one or two screws, and at once the room was flooded with music. Presently she turned on a waltz.

Answering Julian's amazed queries she explained that the music between midnight and morning was provided for the sleepless, the sick and the dying. All the bedchambers had a telephone attachment at the head of the bed (what a nightmare for Victor France), that it could be set to awaken the sleeper by a clockwork combination and that reveilles and airs of an inspiring type were played during the waking hours of the morning.

The programmes were so co-ordinated that the pieces at any one time simultaneously proceeding in the different halls in Boston (four in number) usually offered a choice, not only between instrumental and vocal and between different sorts of instruments, but also between different motives, from grave to gay, so that all tastes and moods could be suited.

As this seems to epitomize the B.B.C.'s broad-minded aim this forecast is quite remarkable.—Yours truly, CONSTANCE CLIFFORD.

Try It for Once!

To the Editor of The Radio Times.

DEAR SIR,—There is a very popular line of criticism which is frequently directed against radio programmes. It consists in the accusation of Monotony—with the largest possible M. Now, this is all very well, but it results from one or two inevitable circumstances. The B.B.C. programmes include items for all. To look at programmes must seem monotonous, because there is only a limited number of types of items that can be used, and they are being used all the time.

But there is, in fact, a pretty simple solution. It is only the incredibly eccentric or the would-be breakers of some sort of record—no matter how stupid so long as they break it and get their advertisement!—who can conceivably try to listen day in and day out, hour after hour, to all sorts and conditions of programmes. The average person very sensibly makes up his mind what sort of item and programmes he personally favours, and listens to them—much in the same way as he frequents a favourite restaurant, a tailor, or a cinema. The result, of course, is that people become stereotyped in their listening.

Just now we are most of us taking holidays. We are getting 'gingered up' again—if I may use the expression—for another lap of our ordinary life's routine. How is this done? We go away; we change our circumstances and environment; and we return to the daily round with a refreshed mentality and a widened outlook.

I suggest that every listener might do worse than apply this parallel to his listening. If you are a daily devotee of the Savoy Orpheans, give them a rest and try a Bach Cantata and a talk or two. If you swallow education with avidity, just try a dose of Charlot's Hour. Give your own pet items a miss, and just try the things that other people seem to enjoy. It can't do you much harm, and you may suddenly find something that will provide you with as much delight as astonishment. We are all far too prone to say lightly: 'Oh, I never bother to listen to such and such. That type of thing always bores me.' So few things really exist in types, and people almost deliberately put labels on quite pleasant, harmless things and thus frighten themselves with the sound of the names printed on the labels!—Yours truly, GRAHAM ELTHAM.

Chapter Eight of 'Old Magic' by Bohun Lynch.

The Invention of Julius Brake.

This chapter tells us of Guy Harvester, Kakoglou's secretary, whom we last saw at Holland Town on the day of his kidnapping. We learn what happened earlier on that day at the offices of the Mid-Devon Farming Syndicate.

EVER since Kakoglou's death Guy Harvester had been uneasy. It will be remembered that he had chosen to fly to London from Blade ahead of his employer, who had decided to motor in order that he might see for himself the conditions prevailing in the lesser-known districts of Mid-Devon. If he also had gone in the car, Harvester told himself, the accident would not have happened.

After talking to the chauffeur, Miles, on the latter's return to London, he felt that the circumstances of the accident in the quarry ought to be investigated a little more closely than the coroner's jury had seemed to require. And this he promised himself to do in the near future. Miles was not a particularly sensitive fellow, but he told Harvester, quite quietly, that he nearly fainted when he saw Kakoglou's face as he lay at the bottom of the quarry. It was twisted and caught in a mask of unspeakable terror.

Harvester had never liked the Greek, though from time to time he had tried to persuade himself that his personal inclination went arm in arm with his interest.

Kakoglou's attitude towards his confidential secretary was simply this: 'Here is a man who knows what is good, whether in pictures, or the cut of a coat, or a brand of wine. I am a child in such matters, and it is worth my while to pay him a high salary to give me a reputation for something—in the public estimation—prettier than making money.' Nor did Kakoglou particularly like or understand Harvester. Their mutual interest, however, held them together.

It was no strict part of Harvester's duties to follow the Greek's various financial undertakings, but as he seldom talked of anything else, the confidential secretary naturally learned a good deal about them. It is to be feared, moreover, that though he sometimes felt called upon to express sympathy with Kakoglou's point of view, he was insincere in doing so.

Harvester disliked the idea of the big amalgamations just as much as, for example, Rooke did. His real sympathies were entirely on the side of the small farmers, who had been forced by artificially-manipulated conditions to sell their land and to come in as 'wage-slaves' to the huge combines.

Harvester was unmarried and had rooms in Kakoglou's big London house overlooking the Green Park. On the night of the accident he had flown back, landing at the Western Aerodrome, and had reached the house by car before the news had been broadcast. Before going to bed he had glanced at the last number of the Antiquarian Review, to which he was a subscriber, and read there Carlew's article about the pocket-book, looking very closely at the illustrations. He had bought the little book with a bundle of others for his employer's collection. For its binding of red morocco alone it was both interesting and valuable. The contents had puzzled him a great deal. He had lent it to Carlew partly for the sake of getting Prayer was found written in the space covered by a threepenny-piece, but in looking-glass hand, and there was a long list of Latinized names with dates calculated from the supposed year of the creation—annus mundi—which defied explanation; and, lastly, there was a half-sheet with a narrow flap which had at one time been covered with paste. This half-sheet was covered with odd drawings, apparently made haphazard in different places—here a horrible face, here a hand with a dripping dagger, there another holding a pair of pincers. And at equally haphazard intervals were spaces neatly cut out of the paper as though a number of drawings had been considered by someone better destroyed. The book containing these loose sheets stood with the rest on a half-empty shelf pending their relegation to the rubbish-burner downstairs.

Just after he made this discovery came the aeroplane expedition to the West Indies, immediately followed by Kakoglou's death. He had no opportunity of returning the loose sheets to their original home or of mentioning the matter to Carlew.

Thenceforward his time was completely taken up between the private house and the main office in Piccadilly. There were the other executors—big business men, partners of the Greek—to confer with, as well as the heads of departments who had to deal with current affairs. Business had to proceed even while its principal controller's estate was being valued and put in order.

The confidential secretary found himself in conclave mainly with Kakoglou's partners, Mr. Herbert Bruntwith and Sir Victor Pembton. Sooner or later they knew that they would have to take Guy Harvester into their confidence in matters regarding which it was signally important to be secret.

Early on the morning of the adventure at Holland Town already described, Bruntwith and Pembton called Harvester into the innermost room of the Piccadilly offices and, taking due precautions lest they should be disturbed, gave him a fat and costly cigar and proceeded to explain the situation.

Bruntwith was a short, very fat man with heavy-lidded, protruding eyes and a ferocious scowl; Pembton's constant smile was somewhat hidden by heavy moustaches, and Harvester always felt that it boded no good to anyone. To his surprise they had little to say at first about the explosions at Queensbeare and Culverton.

'A half-sheet covered with odd drawings, made haphazard and in different places.'

Rooke's opinion and partly because some light might be thrown upon it by one of the many thousands who would listen to the description broadcast and see the drawings on their screens. He was, therefore, delighted that Sir Francis Cadogan should have expressed curiosity regarding it. For there was much that was extremely unusual about the note-book. Why, for example, had that page in Latin been written? Harvester was not much of a scholar, but the sense of it seemed familiar.

After he had parted with it temporarily to Carlew, Harvester had made a discovery. The note-book had been one of a bundle of half-a-dozen tied together with a strap; the other books were completely uninteresting, but in one of them—an odd volume of 'The Art of English Poetry,' by Edward Bysshe—were some loose leaves which had evidently come originally from the note-book. On one of these the Lord's

'What would you say, Harvester,' Pembton began, 'was the most important factor in our farming concerns?'

'The weather, I suppose.'

'Right first time. Now, as you know, meteorology is an exact science, and we know what weather to expect for some time in advance. This has made a lot of difference to agriculture during the last fifty years or so. But, tell me now, if we could control the weather—exactly, mind—so as to secure rain or sunshine at will, like turning a tap or switching on the light, we could do more?'

Harvester thought for a moment before answering.

'Full control of the weather,' he said at last, 'is unthinkable. It would be the conquest of Nature.'

'Well, yes; but it would depend on who controlled it, wouldn't it? I mean that on an average—good years taken with bad ones—the present system as arranged by Nature works pretty well. Sometimes the weather is good for grain, sometimes for roots and so forth. And any considerable interference with natural forces is uncomfortable for some people. Am I right?'

'Certainly.'

'You see what I mean, I feel sure. For instance, if the absolute control of rain were a closely-guarded secret in the hands of one man or, let us say, one company—'

'They would be masters of the earth.'

'Practically. Yes,' said Bruntwith. 'One grows one's own crops in perfect and ideal conditions and floods one's competitors.'

'Yes, if they were not in the next farm.'

'I am talking in a big sense,' said Bruntwith, making a sweeping gesture. 'In this office, as you ought to know, we do not think in parishes. We do not think in counties. We think—' he said it with an air—'in continents.'

Guy Harvester had always disliked the fat, pompous man, but he knew that he was practical and efficient, so that he wondered at this romantic outburst.

'You understand,' said Pembton, with his hateful sneering grin; 'to take a concrete example, if the Mid-Devon Farm Syndicate and the Northern Dales Company and the other concerns in which we are interested were to have perfect weather conditions, and if at the same time the American and Canadian, or perhaps the Central European, grain supplies were, owing to bad seasons, to reduce their output very considerably—if, I say, something of that sort were to happen, we should benefit.'

'PRO' and 'CON.'

In connection with his recent offer of a guinea each for the best letters 'Pro' and 'Con' the programmes and policy of the B.B.C., the Editor hopes that those listeners who write to him will express their personal point of view as sincerely as possible within the prescribed limit of 200 words. The letters selected each week will be chosen for the freshness and originality of their viewpoint, rather than for any artificial excellence of style.

'You would benefit on a scale that is simply colossal.'

'Exactly. You know Professor Brake?'

'Julius Brake? I've heard of him. The meteorologist? Wasn't he the man who said that one day we should be able to wash London down with rain one street at a time?'

'I believe he did say something of the sort. Very injudicious of him. The world at large should not be allowed to imagine that such things could ever happen. Would it surprise you very much to learn that some months ago we—Kakoglou, Bruntwith, and I—bought Professor Julius Brake—lock, stock, and barrel, as you might say, for our exclusive use? He is an original investigator, is Brake, of powers which it would be difficult to exaggerate, but his ideas of practical application lack enterprise. However, we can supply that.'

Something in the way Pembton said this, in the way Bruntwith rubbed his fat knees, made Harvester stand up, his face white with expectancy, glancing from one man to the other.

'Do you mean,' he began, 'that there's any chance of this weather-control being possible?'

Pembton's smile became audible as a soft tittering laugh.

'Oh, yes,' he said in a low voice; 'it's already done. The secret is ours.'

'Good Lord!'

'We won't,' said Bruntwith, 'go into the scientific details now. As you probably know, the possibility of weather control has been discussed for the last sixty or seventy years. It was a question of concentrating a sufficient radiant energy at particular points.'

'I often thought,' said Harvester, 'during those last days I was with him that Kakoglou had something up his sleeve. He dropped hints that something was about to happen, though he never gave me the smallest indication of its nature.'

'You understand, of course,' Pembton put in, 'the urgent necessity of holding your tongue—for your own sake?'

'Of course,' Harvester answered, not realizing exactly what he meant.

'Because, you see, in recognition of your services—I am speaking for Bruntwith and myself, but I am quite sure that we are carrying out what would have been Kakoglou's wishes in the matter—we are this day setting aside a block of shares for your personal—enjoyment. This time next week you will be a rich man, Harvester.'

Next week's chapter tells of how Harvester received the offer of Bruntwith and Pembton and how he was lured to Holland Town by a message from the man called Vincent.

A Postscript to H. V. Morton.

The Possibilities of Artistic Development Along the Lines of his Article.

IN last week's issue appeared a very striking article, by Mr. H. V. Morton, entitled 'Things I should like to hear Broadcast.' Interested in the possibilities of the 'atmospheric' programme by his own experiences as narrator in the recent broadcast from the Tower of London, the writer proceeded to list the various sounds of our common English life which he would like to hear picked up by the microphone—the clatter of clogs over Lancashire cobbles, the sound of the Horn of Ripon, the babel of the Norwich cattle-market and so on.

The 'Art of Sound Painting.'

Mr. Morton's article was more important than, perhaps, a great many of us realized; he called our attention to a special branch of the Art of Broadcasting which has never as yet been fully exploited—something which the microphone alone can achieve. One may call it 'painting in sound.' Is it possible to paint in sound? To visit a scene aurally as one would visit it in the flesh? So that one might say, 'Oh, yes, I've heard the Tower of London' with as much conviction as the more usual, 'I've seen the Tower of London.' Any experience appeals in a varying degree to all the five senses. Of these the usual sense is the most highly developed by common use—with the result that people will say: 'I saw that opera in Paris last year,' though the major part of the experience was one of hearing.

Mention of Mr. Morton brings me to the broadcast with which he was associated—the relay, from the Tower of London, of the Ceremony of the Keys. Various Microphones conveyed to the distant listener the sounds of the ceremony—the tramp of the Guard, the challenge of the sentries, the rumbling of the heavy doors, the clash of the closing locks, the wistful echo of the Last Post. A complete aural picture of a series of happenings. This relay appealed to many listeners. Though the sounds were light and scattered, they were vastly pictorial. One could see the thing in one's mind's eye. If one had been an eye witness instead of a mind's eye witness one would have seen another side of the ceremony—the winking of lanterns, the shadows of the towers, the sudden gleam of a bayonet, and so on. Concentration on this chiaroscuro would have taken one's mind from the sound of the thing. One's memory of the experience would have been quite other than that of the listener who sat at home with his loud-speaker.

Broadcasting in this instance gave us something which was unique—an experience which we could not have achieved even by being present at the Tower in the flesh—something which even the 'talking film' could not have given. The experience was artistically so true and entertaining that the more thoughtful must have speculated on a possible development and extension of it. Time and again one has caught a glimpse of the same sort of thing. During the Boat Race broadcast the incidental sounds of land and water were almost as pictorial as Mr. Squire's admirable commentary. The scraps of laughter and conversation which reach us between the items of the Savoy Band are like coloured lights on a painter's canvas; they line in a scene of luxury and gaiety to the listener who is listening with all his ears.

'Listening' to a 'Scene.'

On first consideration, the notion of listening to a scene may seem strange. It is, in fact, a contradiction in terms, but the word 'scene' must suffice until someone has invented another word for the aural appeal of any set of happenings. Read Mr. Morton's article again if you have it by you—and consider the possibilities which it suggests—whether Life itself and the sounds of it might not make as stimulating hearing as the finest concert or vaudeville programme which the ingenuity of the B.B.C. could provide. It would be interesting to hear the suggestions of listeners as to suitable subjects for such 'sound-painting.'

What the Other Listener Thinks.

Plain-spoken Comments from the Editor's Post Bag.

NOWADAYS we get too many 'high-brow' programmes, and I have not yet met a person who would listen to chamber music. In spite of detailed descriptions, we are unable to understand it, and I think that not one of your millions of listeners could state what any selection of chamber or symphony music is intended to represent.—N. O. M., Enfield.

To begin with, the average listener has little fancy for broadcast opera, and less still for high-class music. And, deplorable as these facts may appear, they nevertheless represent the views of a majority.—W. L. A., Glamorgan.

In the broadcasting of London's ceremonies, its joys and sorrows, and its memories, the B.B.C. has aroused pride of race and dormant patriotism in many British hearts. When the station orchestra plays the National Anthem (always as it was intended to be played) we here at home stand at attention; while the little terrier dog sits up and salutes.—S. E. C., Leigh, Lancs.

Down with 'Nose Talk'!

BEING a British Broadcasting Corporation, may we have at least one day per week a British programme with good, straightforward English music, language, and intonation, and for that day omit American accent and slang, or what might be termed 'nose talk'?—E. B., Norwich.

WHEN recently introducing the British Women's Symphony Orchestra, Dame Ethel Smyth spoke of such and such a thing 'to which I referred above.' Such a little slip-up as this, proving that she was reading from a manuscript, quite spoiled the effect of spontaneity created by her talk. If the B.B.C. must tie its speakers down to the written word, it might at least ensure that this sort of thing does not happen. However, the time has surely come to permit impromptu talks. The ban on controversy is down. Let us have more speaking and less reading. The effect on the popularity of the 'talks' would be astonishing.—M. D., Rochester.

WHAT strikes me so forcibly is the feeling of friendliness between the B.B.C. and its listeners. Both announcers and speakers seem to be desirous of giving pleasure.—P. O., Worthing.

A French Listener's Opinion.

AN incident which happened to my husband and myself recently in France will show you that the appreciation also exists abroad. Whilst having tea at a restaurant at St. Germain, the proprietress twisted her frame aerial until an English singer became audible. We smiled, thinking it an act of courtesy to us, but in reply to our thanks she explained that she always took the London programmes because they were the best and were without advertisements.—M. B., Westcliff-on-Sea.

THE first thing I should like to make any comment on is the high moral standard of your programmes. During all the hours that I have spent listening, I have never heard one single sentence of vulgarity. For this, I think an overwhelming majority of listeners are truly grateful.—A. S., Desborough.

I suspect a tendency among some of the 'superior' officials to 'educate' us. We shall resist forcible feeding. Lead us, à la Sir Walford Davies or Sir Oliver Lodge, upward and onward, if you can, but spare us the schoolmaster.—A. B., Brixton Hill.

SHE IS 100—AND LISTENS.

Last month Mrs. Webb, of Hanbury, near Droitwich, celebrated her 100th birthday. Mrs. Webb is a regular and enthusiastic listener.

PRO

Let me thank the B.B.C. for reviving the art of speaking our noble English language. Reformation was needed badly, and in the talks, announcements—in fact, everything in the spoken voice—we have now got a high standard of correct English. What a joy it is to hear good English! How the talks help our memories and imaginations! How pithy and discreet are the lecturers in their choice of words, for in their limited time they must make us see the gist of their subjects quickly. 'You cannot,' says the B.B.C., 'even attempt to say all you know about your subject; indeed, there is hardly a limit to what you may omit. Life is short and complex. Pack your subject like a bag for the holidays. Omit nothing the listener is sure to need; include nothing he can do without. Arrange your thoughts so that listeners can travel with you comfortably.' Invaluable institution!

A cheque for One Guinea will be sent to the writer of this letter, Mr. W. Moore, 42, Hartington Street, Belfast.

CON.

1. You are afraid of controversial subjects, and all live, interesting topics are more or less controversial. Authorities on either side in debate or lecture would be listened to eagerly.
2. Programmes cannot be considered alternative when one station gives, say, ballads and the other bands—both are noise, and thousands of your subscribers are surfeited with music.
3. Variety hours should be timed. It is irritating to listen to xylophone banging and nasal syncopations for fear of missing a good patter comedian.

Suggestion: One night a week should be devoted to a good play—tragedy, comedy, or problem (not one-act sketches), and preferably always on same night of the week—one could then reserve the particular night as Play Night.

A cheque for One Guinea will be sent to the writer of this letter, Mr. F. C. Taylor, Wilderness, Wellsbridge.

YOUR greatest achievement is to 'dare' to take religion right into the homes of the people who, believers or unbelievers, must be impressed and influenced thereby. Such a task is most courageous, but the seed thus sown will bring forth good fruit and do more to accomplish unification than lords, bishops or Churchmen can ever hope to do.—C. H. F., Birmingham.

A LARGE number of the treasured artists singing in ballad concerts broadcast by 5XX and 5GB would, on the concert platform, include in their programme one or two songs in Welsh, Scotch, or Irish. Will not the B.B.C. please invite them to do so in their broadcast programmes, and thereby earn the gratitude of Welsh, Scotch, and Irish listeners? Apart from the folk-songs, there are available many gorgeous modern songs by native Welsh, Scotch, and Irish composers, and the kindly sympathy of the B.B.C. would be a prized additional incentive to our native composers to give generously of their best to the music-loving world.—I. M., Merionethshire.

People are too Fussy.

I DON'T know about Pro and Con. I listen when I like. I switch off when I don't like. I do a good bit of both, but I think on the whole I get my ten bobs' worth. In my opinion, people fuss too much!—J. N., Market Harborough.

I WOULD like to express my gratitude for the poetry readings, and my hopes for their continuation. I should like to add the suggestion that modern poets should be encouraged to broadcast their own work. Might I plead too for the broadcasting on principle of less well-known works, as opposed to the hackneyed pieces most of us had to learn at school?—V. F., Edinburgh.

I USED not to care for broadcasting, but I am a great lover of cats, and I find my pussies refuse to be separated from my loud-speaker. They coil round it ecstatically and purr in unison, and especially to light music—and I have grown to love an art that has such an appeal for dumb animals.—S. K., Hayward's Heath.

Doctor Radio.

SPEAKING from personal benefit derived, the wireless is one of the most valuable allies the medical superintendent has. On one occasion, when an artist was exceptionally funny, I laughed so heartily that, being asthmatic, a nurse thought I had a spasmodic attack, and rushed for medicine. I told her the wireless mixture was the stuff for me!—J. H., Henley.

THE drama is, perhaps, the most important of all the broadcasting experiments. Unlike the silent drama of the screen, the radio drama is all words and sounds. There is no doubt that the radio will develop its own drama. It is certain it will not be a drama of weird and wonderful effects. The success of Paolo and Francesca last week confirms that impression. Comedies with well-written, sparkling dialogue, many of our greatest tragedies, can be produced, and the less interference by mechanical contrivance the better. Nearly everyone is a novel-reader these days, and can paint the scenery and bedeck the characters with the mind's eye as the spoken word reaches them. Here are some plays that would broadcast splendidly if the characters were cast with due care as to voice tone: The Likes of 'Er, by Charles McEvoy; The Constant Wife, Our Betters, and Smith, by Somerset Maugham; Tess of the D'Urbervilles, by Thomas Hardy; Yellow Sands, by Eden Philpotts; and The School for Scandal, by Sheridan. Very few effects are needed for any of these plays.—G. W. W., Brockley.

5.35 READING FROM THE OLD TESTAMENT

THE SONGS OF THE BIBLE

No. 1: The First Song of Moses

Exodus xv, vv. 1 to 12 and 19 to 21

NOW that our series of readings called 'Foundations of Poetry' which began on April 1, is at an end, we begin today a new selection of great passages from the Old Testament. The last was from its philosophy; the new draws upon that lyrical exaltation into which the narrative so often and so superbly breaks. The first passage chosen is the song that Moses sang when the Lord had led forth the Israelites from Egypt, and destroyed their enemies in the waters of the Red Sea, and all the women of Israel went out with timbrels and with dances to sing to the Lord.

Appeal on behalf of the Rehearsal Club by DAME MADGE KENDAL, D.B.E.

LONG rehearsals are one of the most exhausting forms of work. Between rehearsals the actress badly needs somewhere to go and rest and eat a quiet meal. The high-priced star, with a town flat and a West-End Club, is all right; but her humbler sisters have not these resources. It was for their sake that the Rehearsal Club was started in 1892, and, as it has necessarily to occupy an expensive central position, and at the same time, to fulfil its purpose, keep its subscription down to the very low figure of twelve shillings a year, it will be readily appreciated that it merits some outside aid.

Contributions should be sent to the Secretary, the Rehearsal Club, Leicester Square, W.C. 2.

MUSIC lovers rank this work very high. It is serious and often highly emotional, sometimes mystical, always deeply felt and extremely beautiful. It has three movements.

FIRST MOVEMENT. There is a slow Introduction. Note its opening Tune in the Lower Strings.

Then comes a quick passage in which that opening tune is extended and stiffened into something very vigorous and forceful—really the first main tune of the Movement.

Then the slow passage returns;
the quick first main tune is heard again, and is now followed by a second main tune—a tender
one, opening, in Strings alone, with a scale-wise ascent of four notes, by which it can easily be recognised whenever it returns.

This material is developed for a little time, and then there grows up an orchestral climax, and at its height there is a triumphant syncopated tune for Full Orchestra—a third main tune.

From this point on it is a matter of development, and then of recapitulation of the material heard, and listeners should by now be well acquainted with this.

THE SECOND MOVEMENT moves at a gentle,
but not slow speed. Plucked Strings and Harps begin with a tender melancholy. In a moment the Cor Anglais (Alto Oboe) creeps in with a graceful tune. A somewhat livelier mood is represented by the middle portion of the Movement, and then the pensive mood returns.

THIRD MOVEMENT. (Not too quick.) This is a Movement of imposing strength and vigour.
After five or six bars of Introduction, the Violoncellos enter with the joyous first tune.

The Second Tune, some little time later, cannot be missed; it opens with a dignified phrase for Brass alone.

From these Tunes, and several from the preceding Movements, a magnificent Finale is evolved.

Trio in C (K.548) Mozart

THIS Trio (or Terzett, as Mozart called it) was written in that year of extraordinary productivity, 1788 (in July, the month which saw the birth of the G Minor Symphony). This, and the other works for Pianoforte, Violin and Violoncello, were mostly written for amateur friends. This in C is quite an easy one. It contains three Movements—two quick ones, between which is a Slow Movement, in singing style.

of tragedy—'Sister fair, why do you walk so wearily?' 'I would fain lie under the turf, brother dear.'

Feinsliebchen is a song with a 'la la la' refrain. The lover protests that his charmer shall never go bare-foot. He will buy her nice clothes. The maid reminds him that she is poor, and cannot wed. Never mind, he insists, she is true and honest, and that is better than gold. The end shows that the determined fellow was sure of his case, for we hear the lass saying: 'What was that he took from his pocket? My heart, it was a golden ring!'

the violinist, takes part in the Chamber Music Concert this afternoon.

Erlaube mir, feins Madchen (Permit me, lovely maiden); Schwesterlein (Little Sister); Feinsliebchen, du sollst nicht barfuss gehen (My love, you should not go bare foot).

ALMOST the whole of Hugo Wolf's output consisted of songs. Besides these, he wrote one complete opera, and had written half the first Act of another (at the age of thirty-seven) when mental disease attacked him. He died six years later, in 1903.

The Lied eines Verliebten is a lover's song. Thoughts of his love awake him early in the morning, and at midnight he is thinking of her. He wonders if the capricious maiden has given him even a single thought.

Der Gärtner is a light, graceful song in praise of a lovely Princess, who comes riding down the avenue. The gardener covets a remembrance of her—only a feather from the hood that covers her dainty head, and would give her in return all his flowers.

BRAMMS set a considerable number of folk-songs, both for solo voice and for choir. These three are from a set of Forty-nine German Folk Songs, the last of three such collections that he published.

Erlaube mir is a lover's petition to be allowed to see the roses in her garden. But the maiden is coy, and refuses, so the lover is left lamenting that he may only view such beauties from afar.

Schwesterlein is a conversation between a brother and sister. The former asks 'Sister fair, it is nearly midnight; when shall we go home?' The sister would stay and dance with her sweetheart. In the end of the song is a note

This Week's Bach Cantata.

Church Cantata No. 9.

'Es ist das Heil uns kommen her.' ('Behold Salvation is at hand.')

THE hymn which Bach chose as the foundation of this Cantata, is one of three by Paul Speratus, which are included in the first German hymn book—the Erfurt Enchiridion. It appeared in 1524. One verse of the hymn, with words and music both in their original forms, is used as the Chorale with which the cantata is concluded; another verse is sung by the sopranos throughout the beautiful Chorale fantasia which is the first number. Flute, oboe d'amore, and 1st violins all have interesting and melodious parts in the accompaniment here, which is completed by 2nd violins, violas, and continuo; to the second last line of the chorale, the other voices have a curious figure whose meaning no one has yet understood. The attentive listener will hear altos, basses, and tenors, in imitation at one bar's distance, to the words, 'Who for our sins did suffer death,' singing a passage which has no obvious relation to the words or the musical context.

The tenor aria, No. 3, has a fine violin obbligato, and No. 5, a Duet for soprano and alto, is a good example of Bach's amazing facility in the use of intricate forms. Flute and oboe d'amore, in the accompaniment, play a melodious and easily flowing canon, while the two voices sing another, no less natural in its effect. In the second half of the duet, both canons are inverted.

I. Chorus:

Behold salvation is at hand,
 And grace to us is given;
 By works alone we may not stand
 Before our judge in Heaven;
 In Jesus Christ is all our faith,
 Who for our sins did suffer death,
 Our Saviour, our Redeemer.

II. Recitative (Bass):

God gave his law to man, but man alone was weak,
 Nor kept the Lord's commandments ever;
 Our sinful way we still did seek,
 And holy man was never;
 To flesh the spirit still was chained,
 Nor hath the good fight ye sustained.
 How shall we walk in righteousness
 And know our hearts, and all our sin confess,
 The wickedness that is our own from birth,
 That soileth all our life on earth?
 In his own strength alone who trusted,
 When by temptation sore assailed,
 No man, with all his might, hath e'er prevailed.

III. Aria (Tenor):

In sin were we too deeply sunken,
 The pit had swallowed us quite,
 And darkness as of death was nigh,
 Yet in dread need none heard our cry,
 None guided us from sin's dark night.

IV. Recitative (Bass):

As was foretold to Adam's generation,
 There came to men on Earth, salvation,
 The Son of God put on our mortal clay,
 His Father's wrath he turn'd away;
 His life and death unstained
 Our heritage regained.
 In Him who puts his faith,
 In His pure life and death,
 He surely shall not perish.
 'Mid His elect will God him cherish,
 Who faith alone for off'ring brings,
 And to the love of Jesus clings.

V. Duet (Soprano and Alto):

Lord, not deeds alone we proffer,
 But a faithful heart we offer,
 For 'tis pleasing in Thy sight;
 Only faith can still prevail,
 Though all other guide should fail
 To lead us to Thee and light.

VI. Recitative (Bass):

When we have sinned against the law,
 'Tis written
 By pangs of conscience are we smitten;
 Yet shall this comfort all our grieving,
 That in the best Evangel there is promis'd
 gladness and forgiveness:
 So shall we rejoice, in Him believing,
 Our trust is in the Lord
 Who by His blessed word
 Redemption hath foretold,
 Though His great wisdom may withhold
 From mortals when it shall be.
 Enough, we trust in His great mercy;
 He knoweth best, in His good time
 The day and hour He will reveal.
 His truth endures for ever,
 His mercy failth never.

VII. Chorale.

And though thou canst not see His face,
 No evil shall betide thee.
 God is thy shield by day, by night,
 His hand shall ever guide thee.
 So trust in Him, His word is sure,
 From fear and doubt thy heart keep pure,
 He slumbers not that keeps thee.

REDINGTON: 'A Hot-weather
Supper'

WE all hope to get some really hot weather one day, so it is as well to be prepared for it. This evening Miss Phoenix Redington, who is Head of the Irish School of Domestic Economy, is to reveal the secrets attending the successful preparation of those uncooked suppers which are not least of the joys of a hot summer. Few things are gloomier than the eating of hot food on a hot evening, unless it be the cooking of hot food that precedes such a meal. From such blots on the fair surface of our holidays we can look with confidence to Miss Redington to deliver us.

9.15 Mr. E. M. FORSTER, 'Railway
Bridges'

TONIGHT the author of 'A Passage to India,' one of the most widely-discussed novels since the war, is to tell of the architectural loveliness of the railway bridges crossing the Rhône and the Saône at Lyons. Readers of Mr. Forster's novels, and his strangely-fascinating short stories, will know that he is an artist rarely accomplished in the use of words. Mr. Forster speaks to the artist and the would-be traveller rather than to the practical engineer or builder of bridges. But a subject which brings the listener into contact with the Lyons district, that combined centre of ancient, mediæval, and modern civilisations, will contain something of interest to everyone.

'MASTERS' OF THE MICROPHONE:
VIVIENNE CHATTERTON.

A 'foundation member' of the society of radio artists, Vivienne Chatterton sang into the microphone as soon as the microphone was there. Ever since the old days of Chelmsford and Marconi House she has been one of the most popular artists in the programmes. Listeners will hear her in London's Musical Comedy Programme at 9.35 tonight.

MOZART was an obliging composer, who could and would sit down at any moment and write a piece for a friend, or for some concert or other special occasion. Very many of his smaller works were composed in this way.

In 1786-7, near the end of his life, when he was living in Vienna, he wrote several Rondos, of which that in D is one. It has a little singularity, in that, instead of its first tune coming round again (it does so a good many times) in the same key, as was the custom, it appears in different keys, and so gives additional variety to the piece.

THE weird legend of Saint-Saëns' piece is familiar to most listeners. The version used is that of a poem by Henri Cazalis. The composer gives us a vivid representation of Death fiddling for the midnight capers of skeletons. Their bones knock together, as the Xylophone tells us. The dance goes on until cock-crow disperses the ghostly crew.

The scene in which this play is enacted is the Smoke-room of 'The Bull,' a country tavern, on an evening in March, 1752. There is a stairway at the back of the room, a small window also overlooks the kitchen. There are the usual hostel appurtenances; the room is lit with candles and the light from a blazing fire.

 Relayed from the National Museum of Wales
 NATIONAL ORCHESTRA OF WALES

- Carnival Dvorak
- Ave Maria Bach and Gounod
- Suite, 'Children's Corner' Debussy
- Polovstian Dance Borodin

DVORAK, in the early nineties, planned a Symphony in three Movements, based upon a poetical scheme as follows: (1) Childhood's Innocence; (2) Youth's Wild Joys and Loves; (3) Manhood's Passions.

Then, on reflection, he broke the three movements apart from one another, and published them as three separate works, which he called Overtures. Of these Carnival is the second.

High spirits are its prevailing note. The title's suggestion of youth's eager enjoyments fits it perfectly. It is full of open-air feeling, and one may easily imagine a scene of masks, gay costumes, Chinese lanterns and confetti—with a quiet corner somewhere for tender conversation.

THE complete Children's Corner Suite, which Debussy dedicated 'To my dear little Chouchou, with her father's tender excuses for what follows,' contains six pieces—(1) Doctor Gradus ad Parnassum; (2) Jimbo's Lullaby; (3) Serenade for the Doll; (4) The Snow is dancing; (5) The Little Shepherd; (6) Golliwog's Cakewalk.

WHERE THE DUCHESS WILL LAUNCH H.M.S. YORK THIS AFTERNOON.

This impressive panorama of mighty girders, giant cranes and the half-built shapes of ships is the scene of the ceremony that will be broadcast this afternoon, when the Duchess of York visits Palmer's shipyard at Jarrow-on-Tyne to launch a great new ship of war. The York, a B Class Cruiser 575ft.
long, displacing 8,400 tons, and carrying six eight-inch guns, is the one hundred and fourth warship built in this yard, which has been turning out ships for the Admiralty since the Crimean War.

USE YOUR RENT TO BUY YOUR HOUSE

It is a simple matter to buy a house with the help of this Society, and far better than paying rent for ever.

Since 1834 the Society has assisted over twenty thousand people to become actual owners of their homes. The Society advances very nearly all the money required to purchase a house, and repayments can be spread over 5, 10, 15 or 20 years.

An insurance policy can, if desired, be combined with the repayments, so that in the event of death the mortgage would be paid off and the house left free of encumbrance.

In many cases the repayments are found to be less than you would have to pay in rent for the same house and all the time you would be saving money for the future.

The Society's Booklet "How to become a Home Owner" will be sent free and post free on receipt of coupon below. The Secretary will gladly send you any other information required.

Compri-Vena

The Ideal Surgical Stocking.

The Compri-Vena, the new rubberless Surgical Stocking, may be said to have taken Great Britain by storm. A large number of wearers write to say that never since their first Varicose Vein appeared have they known such perfect comfort. Others have said that immediately they put the stockings on the pain disappeared. The weak veins are supported everywhere, yet no discomfort is felt anywhere. The secret of its very remarkable success lies in the fact that the Compri-Vena Stocking has a continuous massaging effect upon the knotted veins. This encourages the proper circulation of the blood, i.e., upwards towards the heart. Doctors will tell you that this is the scientifically correct way of treating Varicose Veins. Moreover, so perfectly does the Compri-Vena fit that it is actually undetectable even under Silk Hose. Have you had particulars of this wonderful new Surgical Stocking? If not, call or write for them to-day. Copies of testimonials will also be sent to you, NO OBLIGATION.

Symphony in B Minor ('Unfinished').. Schubert

THE YELLOW PRINCESS, a one-act fantasy in which a Dutch scientist dreams that he visits Japan, was the first stage piece that Saint-Saëns wrote. He was thirty-seven when it was produced. His collaboration with Louis Gallet (who wrote the story, in verse) was not a public success, only five performances being given. The Overture shows how charmingly the composer could suggest an atmosphere of romance and piquant strangeness.

in Cooking—VI, The Weekly Menu'

THE ordinary British housewife with a definitely limited amount to spend on food is pretty well practised in getting good value for her money; but even she may learn from this concluding talk something about the food values that science has discovered in the less expensive dishes. Miss Clarke will also say a word about the importance of good cooking and the faults most often typical of British cooks.

CONCERT

JO LAMB (Violin); ANNIE SHORE (Violoncello); JOHN WILLS (Pianoforte)

JO LAMB and JOHN WILLS
Sonata in D, Op. 12, No. 1 Beethoven

THE first Movement of Beethoven's first Violin Sonata (he wrote it when he was twenty-seven) is a quick, vigorous, run-about piece. It has two main tunes. The first is the jerky one, strutting up and down the chord of D Major at the opening, with the tags which Violin, and then Piano, attach. The second main tune is a sort of slow four-finger exercise, first introduced unobtrusively, high up on the Piano.

The Second Movement consists of a lengthy Air and four Variations, with a brief Coda, rounding the Movement off.

The Third Movement (Quick) is a very skittish dance—a Rondo. The tune with which the Piano starts off, and which the Violin repeats, dominates the Movement.

4.20 JO LAMB and ANNIE SHORE
Passacaglia Halvorsen

4.30 JO LAMB, ANNIE SHORE and JOHN WILLS
Trio in C Minor Brahms

HERE is a bracing piece of music, if ever there was one! It has the tonic effect of a tramp in the fresh, keen air of spring.

The vigorous First Movement is built upon two main tunes, the first of which, crisp and brief, is heard right away at the opening. After some episodic matter, the Violin and Violoncello give out, in octaves, the broad second main tune.

The Second Movement is in 'Scherzo' style—light, quick and lithe, and the Last Movement is as vigorous as the First.

'How to Appreciate Pictures'—
III

TONIGHT Professor Gleadowe will continue his analysis of the qualities of fine painting, speaking rather from the point of view of the practical artist than from that of the critic or of the historian; for a picture is a human document that can be more easily read by an artist than by a scholar, and should appeal to those who are neither artists nor scholars themselves.

'Hamlet'

TONIGHT'S broadcast production of Hamlet will not be a complete version of the play as written. Great care has, however, been taken to ensure that the best which Shakespeare at almost his greatest has given us shall be retained. Hamlet is, as far as stage or microphone presentations go, the finest of the tragedies, though, as a sheer resplendent work of genius, it is excelled by King Lear, a play which makes such demands upon the actors and the stage as to render its production seldom possible. Hamlet is, par excellence, a 'microphone play,' though at such moments as the killing of Polonius and the final bloody climax, its action becomes visual. The true and moving drama of the piece lies in its dialogue, which contains many lovely and familiar lines. The part of the Prince of Denmark has set the seal upon the reputation of many great tragic actors in England, France, Germany and Italy. Tonight's is the first important Shakespearean broadcast since the production, on St. George's Day, of Henry V.

MISCELLANEOUS PIANO WORKS OF MOZART
Played by ETHEL BARTLETT
Fantasia in D Minor
Rondo in F

THE short Fantasia has almost the character of an improvisation. Impetuous passages break in on the grave opening mood; there is a note of anxiety, that is soon dispelled by the gay little ending.

We have a tiny drama in sound, but with no story behind it—just the natural, concentrated dramatic quality that the music of a master almost always possesses.

- YORK BOWEN (born in London in 1884) is widely known as Pianist, Composer and Teacher. He is a Professor of the Pianoforte in the institution at which he received his training —the Royal Academy of Music. He has composed much music in many forms—Symphonies, Concertos, Chamber Music (including a number of works for the viola, in which he has shown a special interest), and much Pianoforte Music.
Tonight we are to hear him in one of the joint

- THE work is founded on old Cornish folk tunes (several of which were used, in a modified form, in the work On the Cornish Coast,
which the Composer
wrote for the Crystal
Palace Brass Band
Competition in 1924).
It opens with the sea shanty *Lowlands
Low*, which is given out by the brass and developed at some length.
The opening fragment of the tune
plays an important part throughout the work, serving, in various guises, to
bind the different sections together.
A second theme (Woolycombe) now becomes more prominent and is shortly followed by a quieter section in which the tune, A maiden sat weeping, played by the Oboe, takes the most important share.
The next tune to appear is that of the Helston Furry Dance. This is introduced, apparently, by the oldest inhabitant of the place—somewhat unsteady on his feet. Others take up the Dance, and when it is in full swing, yet another tune, the Song of the Western Men, steals in, and the two themes are heard together in the Coda.

FOR most of us, probably, knowledge regarding the care of these animals is confined to the facts that both live in hutches and that it is inadvisable to hold guinea-pigs up by their tails. Mrs. Meeson this afternoon is to dispel our ignorance, and increase our affection for beasts that may be comparatively unresponsive, but are essentially useful and have always been a great joy to the many boys and girls who have an inherent love for animals. Nowadays the keeping of rabbits in particular can become a very profitable hobby to those prepared to give care and enthusiasm to the business.

6.45 Girl Guide Programme: Dame KATHARINE FURSE, Assistant Chief Commissioner, on 'Observation Out of Doors'

EVERY month this period is devoted to matters concerning the Girl Guide Movement—a Movement which has steadily gathered new strength and new influence since the moment of its foundation. This evening Dame Katharine Furse, Assistant Chief Commissioner of the Guides, will talk on a topic which lies at the very root of the whole Scout and Guide Movement, whose twin foundation may be said without exaggeration to be intelligent use of the eyes and fresh air. And a talk on such a subject comes at a highly appropriate time, for all Girl Guides are now full of excitement at the prospect of their summer camps. Many hints the Assistant Chief Commissioner will be able to give to Guides which will help them to find new joys during their 'hikes.'

MISCELLANEOUS PIANO WORKS OF MOZART
Played by ETHEL BARTLETT
Adagio in B Minor
Minuet

THESE, two among many detached short pieces of Mozart, show what the strength of personality can achieve in a few bars. The slow piece written near the end of the composer's life, strikes us at once by its tinge of melancholy and romantic freedom. The Minuet is a delightful little chromatic (coloured) essay, with lots of flats and sharps, making rich harmony in the lissom life of the piece.

MISS ETHEL BARTLETT
plays in this week's 7.15 p.m. recitals.

7.25 Prof. W. M. TATTERSALL: 'Nature's Reaction to Man—VI, Reaction of Nature to Man's Activities.' S.B. from Cardiff

IF in his domestic habits man makes himself and his animals and plants an easy prey to parasites, as Professor Tattersall has explained in his previous talks, he works havoc on a far wider scale when he travels about the world. Organisms that are harmless in their own environment may become deadly when transplanted, and in the last of his talks, Prof. Tattersall will describe how this has happened in many instances, such as the famous example of the rabbits that are one of Australia's chief pests.

Men Who Shave! Here's a Great FREE GIFT

It doesn't matter how perfect the razor, what wonderful special soaps you use, there are some mornings when the daily shave ends up in painful smarting, soreness or tenderness. You hoped for that smart, well-groomed appearance; instead the face looks—forgive us—like a badly mowed lawn, and feels worse.

Gentlemen, will you try this after-shaving delight free of cost? Just send us your name and address and we will forward a generous-sized test bottle of the deliciously fragrant, cooling, liquid skin tonic, Cream of Di-Miska. Just a few spots rubbed into the skin after the most tiresome shave makes the face feel beautifully fresh and smooth. You look as you should look, straight from the expert barber's hands. Good to use is Cream of Di-Miska too before shaving, it softens the extra tough beard—that's why so many men keep a 1s. 6d. (two months) supply in the bath-room. But make a test first of this new shaving delight and send for free supply of Cream of Di-Miska to Sales Manager (Dept. E.H.I), Di-Miska Laboratories, Addiscombe, nr. Croydon. Take your gift bottle on holiday. You know the misery of shaving with hard waters, strange soaps and after bathing. Cream of Di-Miska makes the sea-side shave a pleasure.

PEDRO G. MORALES, who has organized this concert of representative present-day Spanish music, is a distinguished poet, composer, conductor, string player and critic (born in 1879) who is known in Spain as a leading authority on English music, and here as a welcome unofficial ambassador of Spanish music. THE PRIME MINISTER TO BROADCAST TONIGHT

At 9.20 this evening the space which is usually filled by a Talk will be devoted to a relay, from the Majestic Hotel, Harrogate, of a speech by the Prime Minister to the National Savings Assembly. Mr. Baldwin's rare 'appearances' before the microphone are welcomed by listeners, for the literary simplicity of his style of speaking is peculiarly suited to broadcasting. The National Savings Assembly is being held at Harrogate at the invitation of the Mayor and Corporation. Attending it are many prominent members of the great Savings Movement, which now comprises 27,000 branches and employs more than 100,000 voluntary workers.

in England after the war served to introduce to us a good many new Spanish works, and in 1927 he gave the first B.B.C. concert of Spanish symphonic music under a Spanish conductor. The programme contains pieces now being performed for the first or second time in this country: Turina, de Falla and Morales belong to the South of Spain. The predominating type of music, as almost always in Spanish programmes, is Andalusian, though the art songs (the form of music the least cultivated of all in Spain) are essentially Latin in style, having nothing in common with Spanish folk-lore.

8.4 ORCHESTRA

Danzas Fantásticas (Fantastic Dances) Turina
(1) Exaltacion (Exaltation); (2) Ensueno (Revery); (3) Orgia (Revel)

JOAQUIN TURINA, though a Spaniard, had a Parisian musical education; his talents soon became widely known, and his career as pianist, conductor, composer and teacher has been distinguished.

The three Fantastic Dances (dedicated to the Composer's wife) embody Turina's ideas, in colour and rhythm, of the moods of various dances.

This Plan Will Bring You £250 A YEAR FOR LIFE—FROM AGE 55

Ninety-nine people out of a hundred have to provide for their own future. They have no rich relative to take the burden from their shoulders and no business pension scheme to fall back upon.

Are you satisfied with the progress you yourself are making? Have you saved anything like enough to justify a belief that at 55 years of age you will be in a position to take things easier? What about your family, should you, the breadwinner, be taken from them? The plan about to be explained will, if adopted without further delay, relieve you of all anxiety about the matter.

Assuming your age to be 35 and you would like to provide for a private income of £250 a year for life commencing at 55, this is how the plan works out. You make yearly or half-yearly deposits to the Sun Life of Canada (the great Annuity Co.) of an agreed sum. And this is what you will get in return.

£250 a Year for Life.

At 55 years of age the Sun Life of Canada will start paying you an income of a fixed sum—about £250 per annum—and you'll receive this income every year as long as you live. Or, if you prefer it, you can have a cash sum down of about £3,000. Of course, you haven't deposited anything like that sum. It's the profits that make it so large—profits heaped upon profits, accumulated over the entire period of the arrangement.

Income Tax Saved.

For every deposit you make you receive rebate of Income Tax—a concession which will save you nearly £250 during the period, assuming the present rate of tax to continue.

£20 a Month if Unable to Work.

If through illness or accident you lose the power to earn a living, and the disability is permanent, you are excused from making any further deposits and £20 per month will be paid to you until the £250 a year for life becomes due.

£2,000 for Your Family.

Should you not live to the age of 55, £2,000, plus accumulated profits, will be paid to your family. If death results from an accident, the sum will be increased to £4,000, plus accumulated profits.

Any Age, Any Amount.

Though 55 and £250 a year for life has been quoted here, the plan applies at any age and for any amount. Whatever your income, if you can spare something out of it for your and your family's future, this plan is the best and most profitable method you can adopt.

£82,000,000 Assets.

The Sun Life of Canada has assets of over £82,000,000, which are under Government supervision. It is in an impregnable position. Do not, therefore, hesitate to send for particulars of this plan, which may mean great things for you and yours.

Ballet Music from 'Herodias' Massenet

WHEN Massenet's version of the story of Herod and Salome was to be produced in London, the Censor objected to its title and to the scene of the story being laid in Jerusalem. So the work was called Salome, the names of the characters were changed, the background of the story was shifted to Ethiopia, and everyone was happy.

The Ballet is that by which Herod diverts himself and tries to forget Salome. There are in this Suite five pieces—Dances of Egyptians, Babylonians, Gauls, and Phœnicians, and a Finale.

Ballet Music, 'The Shoe' Ansell

Rossini, arr. Respighi and Howard Carr

ROSSINI had wonderful success with his Operas, but after the production of William Tell in 1829 he produced no Opera and only one important work of any kind, his Stabat Mater. For nearly forty years he lived as a retired gentleman, occupying himself in social diversions. He wrote only some light pieces, mostly for piano, and it was largely out of these that Respighi, an Italian composer of to-day (born 1879) made the music for the toyshop Ballet known as La Boutique Fantasque (fantasque, meaning 'odd,' 'quaint,' 'whimsical,' rather than 'fantastic.')

The Ballet Music is that danced by the various dolls in the shop, who come to life and take a hand in the love-romance of two of their number. There are a Cossack dance, a Can-can, an Italian Tarantella, a Polish Mazurka, and so on.

LADDIE CLIFF, who is starring in So this is Love!, and Phyllis Monkman, whose successes in musical comedy and revue are without number, will give selections from their repertoire. This brief programme is a novelty in that the two principals will have the assistance of three accompanists. The 'three-piano' work of Messrs. Clark, Hedley and Myddleton is a sparkling feature of Laddie Cliff's show at the Winter Garden Theatre.

There will, one gathers, be considerable syncopation.

THE Fantasia is not a fully-developed piece; it takes up one idea after another and treats it for a while, soon tossing it aside to express a new mood, maintaining a steady level of brilliant show-work, and keeping up expectation all the time.

The following Fugue, in three 'voices,' builds itself up solidly and steadily, in a dignified spirit. This is a good opportunity to compare Mozart's manner as a fugue writer with Bach's. Mozart wrote few fugues, but he was clearly perfectly at home in this form.

Last of the week's examples of his sunny art, is

THEY WILL ENTERTAIN YOU TONIGHT.

The summer programmes are distinguished by a number of outstanding Vaudeville shows. Tonight come two 'star' programmes which include Bransby Williams (left), Harold Scott and Elsa Lanchester (centre), and Phyllis Monkman (right). Does Bransby Williams need any introduction to you? We think not. If you have not actually heard his Dickens characterisations, you will have heard of them.

Scott and Lanchester are old favourites. From their success in Riverside Nights they came to the microphone, bringing songs at the piano, including a number of Victorian favourites. Phyllis Monkman, of the firm of Cliff and Monkman, has recently added the Studio to her other fields of conquest. She is famous as a singer and dancer in musical comedy and revue. Her dancing, alas, we cannot see—but we shall hear her sing at 6.45 with her husband, Laddie Cliff.

Symphonic Poem, 'The Preludes' Liszt

RAMEAU, after a busy life as violinist, organist and theorist, took up work of quite a new order, for him—the composition of opera. When he died (in 1764), at the age of eighty, he had written over a score of Operas and Ballets.

Here are three charming examples of his skill in dance music—a Minuet, a Musette (the Musette was once the shepherd's bagpipe), and a 'Tambourin.'

Baseball in being. Captain A. S. Burge is talking of Baseball in his Sports Talk of the Week from Cardiff to-day at 7.25.

THE 'Preludes,' says Lamartine, are Life's scenes, for what is Life but a series of preludes to the song that Death begins?

There is the Prelude of Love; and the tempests that break in upon its joy. There is another Prelude in which the unhappy lover seeks balm in quiet retirement from the world; but when the trumpet peals, he rushes to the fight, finding his real strength in battle.

These ideas gave Liszt scope for picturesque, vivid music, in the Symphonic Poem we are to hear.

"£317, Jim! All from my pet hobby

Mrs. Young (whose photo appears here) earned £317 in three years just by easy spare time knitting. Hundreds of our happy circle of Cymbal Home Knitters are earning much more.

Many members of the Cymbal Circle are making £3 to £6 a week on private orders. But we do not hold out to Radio Times readers a lot of promises of "making your fortune" which would mislead them. We simply say that with the Cymbal Knitter any woman (or child for that matter) who can do the simplest hand knitting cannot help making one or two pounds a week.

Cymbal Knitting is a fascinating hobby—making all the beautiful things you long to make, knitting them almost like lightning, making them for yourself to wear, or for friends or shops who want to buy, or for the Cymbal Company who guarantee to buy all you make and care to send them, at good prices, for at least three years. Every turn of the handle brings money. You may not want the money now. Then save it up—year by year—a hundred pounds or so each year. How useful to have it when hard times come. How comforting to know it's there all the time. And what assurance it gives you to know that whatever happens to the bread-winner you yourself can be sure of bringing in £1 or £2 each week—much more if you give more time to it.

You can buy a Cymbal Knitter for cash, or on such easy terms that the instalments you pay are only part of the profit you cannot help making each week, from the very first week. Remember, this is your very finest assurance. To whichever reader of the Radio Times we supply one of our wonderful Cymbal Knitters we give a personal legal agreement to buy all they make on the machine, as much as they care to send us, at good prices which definitely assure them a big profit each week. This guarantee lasts for at least 3 years, and every assistance, even personal assistance with lady instructors in the reader's home, is given to ensure beyond doubt that they can work the machine perfectly from the first day it arrives. We arrange for regular supplies of any kind of wool, silk, any knitting material they want, at factory cost prices. There is no trouble at all. You just turn the handle.

Fill in and post the coupon below (or write). It will bring you by return the big free Cymbal book entitled "The Way to a Prosperous Home," which explains everything in detail. But do not delay. Tear off the coupon, or write quoting reference R.T.5, before this paper leaves your hands.

Robinson knew Smith opposite had a piano

Yet in one evening Robinson heard

The silvery notes of a cornet

A masterly 'cello rendering

A flautist of surpassing skill

A violinist of amazing technique.

Robinson was puzzled.

Next morning they met on the 8.24.

Here's their conversation

"I didn't know your friends were such star performers," said Robinson. "Star performers? I don't understand," Smith replied. "Why, your musical evening last night!" Oh, that was Hilversum," laughed Smith. "Hilversum, Great Scott! I can't get foreign stations like that. Have you been splashing it in a new 7-Valve set?" said Smith enviously. "Oh no, nothing so reckless or expensive. I just junked my H.T. dry battery and changed over to an Oldham H.T. Accumulator. Built up 120 volts with their neat little 10-volt blocks. I tell you it's made a new set of mine. Puts ginger into it and gives me lots of foreign stations I could never get before. No trouble, no noise, better tone, increased volume. I tell you, my boy, its the best investment I ever made" said Smith beaming.

Great Epidemic of DEADLY CATARRH

(Chronic Cold in the Head)

10 Days' FREE Trial of Marvellous New Remedy.

SEND A POSTCARD TO-DAY.

6 Years' Catarrh and Bronchitis Completely Cured in Only 14 Days.

MR. WILSON.

Mr. John Wilson, 30, Rosa-belle Street, Kirkcaldy, writes: "After 6 years suffering from Chronic Catarrh and Bronchitis trouble your wonderful 'Shirley System' has completely cured me in only a fortnight. I was always catching fresh colds, often sneezing and hawking and scraping to clear the catarrhal mucus from the throat. Every change in the weather made me worse. I had headaches, a hard cough, husky voice and my sleep was troubled. I always felt tired and sick on rising."—June 19th, 1928.

3 Years' Catarrh and Sleeplessness. Delight of Sudden Change for Better.

MR. JONES.

Mr. Owen R. Jones, Cerrigy Nyth, Deiniolen, Carnarvonshire, writes: "I sent for the 'Shirley System' less than a month ago. Within a few days there was a sudden change for the better, and I am at last rid of the trouble from which I had suffered for 3 years. I can now breathe freely. I have no headaches or pains over the eyes and can enjoy a good night's sleep which I have been unable to do for a long time. I cannot thank you enough."—June 17th, 1928.

14 Years' Catarrh and Head Noises Cured in a Week to Stay Cured.

MISS BRAMBLE.

Miss F. E. Bramble, 46, Parkdale Road, Plumstead, London, S.E.18, writes: "Two years and four months ago your splendid 'Shirley System' completely cured me in a week after I had suffered from Catarrh and head noises for 14 years. It made a new woman of me and brought about a most wonderful improvement in my general health. I even came through the terrible weather of last winter without a sign of Catarrh or colds. The 'Shirley System' cannot be praised too highly."—June 15th, 1928.

Catarrh and Deafness Cured in a Few Days. Young Welshman's Great Tribute.

MR. E. T. NICHOLLS.

Mr. E. T. Nicholls, Llwynhir, Penybont, Radnorshire, writes: "I tried your wonderful 'Shirley System' at the end of last year, after suffering 3 years from Catarrh, Deafness and head-noises. I was totally deaf in the left ear. In a few days I could hear quite clearly. The Catarrh was also cured and I could breathe freely through the nose again. Snoring was completely stopped. I am still cured. I trust that others afflicted as I was will hear of the marvellous 'Shirley System.'"—June 14th, 1928.

A veritable epidemic of Catarrh is sweeping the British Isles at present. Our treacherous climate scores again.

Are YOU a victim of this dangerous ailment? If so, don't neglect it, or regard it with indifference, or it may endanger your life. Write to me to-day for a 10 Days' Free Trial of my well-known "Shirley System" which will give you immediate relief and hasten cure.

I have specialised in the treatment, relief, and cure of this distressing and endangering condition for many years, and I would strongly advise every sufferer to give my system a personal trial just now. The symptoms are easy for anyone to diagnose.

- If phlegm drops into the back of your throat.
- If you are liable to recurring colds.
- If your head feels "stuffy" and confused.
- If you have frontal headaches.
- If you suffer from difficulty of hearing.
- If your nostrils are clogged or "running."
- If you feel tired on rising.
- If you suffer from strange "head noises."
- If your eyes are "watery."
- If crusts form in the nose.
- If your mouth and throat are dry and painful.
- If you expectorate often.
- If your sense of smell is impaired.
- If your breath is "bad" and your mouth "dirty."
- If you have pain over the eyes, or if you have a dry, hot skin, and alternate fits of heat and cold, you are almost certainly suffering from Catarrh. Doctors now realise that Catarrh is dangerous. It not only causes much suffering and distress, but it has a high rate of mortality, because the slimy and poisonous mucus flows downwards (especially during sleep) into the stomach, intestines, and other organs, causing Malnutrition, Debility, and a Catarrhal condition of the whole inner man that lowers resisting power to disease, and leads to such deadly ailments as Gastric Catarrh, Intestinal Catarrh, and even Consumption itself.

If, therefore, you are in the grip of Catarrh, don't delay, but write to me to-day for a

10 DAYS' FREE TRIAL OF THE "SHIRLEY SYSTEM"

and see how soon it will save you from the miseries and risks of Catarrh in all its forms, including Catarrhal Deafness and Gastric Catarrh.

It will bring you relief from the very first. The stuffed-up passages get clear, easy nasal breathing follows, head-noises disappear, Headaches, too, become things of the past, and your whole system is completely cleared of the poisonous and slimy mucus. It will lift the Crushing Burden of Catarrh from your shoulders like magic.

Just send me your name and address TO-DAY (a postcard will do), for a 10 Days' Free Trial of my "Shirley System." No matter how often you have been disappointed before, or how long you have suffered, don't despair until you have tried my wonderful Treatment. Address—Elmer Shirley, 35, Gray's Inn Road (C. 629), London, W.C.1.

(Personal Consultations by appointment 3 to 4 o'clock daily except Saturdays.)

Chronic Catarrh Cured 2 Years Ago. Testimony Which Speaks for Itself.

Mr. T. E. Vaul, 35, St. John's Wood-terrace, London, N.W.8, writes: "Fourteen months ago, after I had suffered severely from Catarrh for 2 years, the 'Shirley System' completely cured me. Since that time I have not been troubled with Catarrh. This speaks for itself. My symptoms were: constant colds, sneezing, cough, excess of phlegm, loss of taste and smell, always tired and sick on rising, husky voice, headaches and difficult breathing. All sufferers should try your wonderful treatment."—June 13th 1928.

MR. T. E. VAUL.

8 Years' Agony from Catarrh Ended. Now Free from Pain and Suffering.

Miss S. Hocking, Roskear Croft, Roscroghan, Camborne, Cornwall, writes: "After suffering agony for 8 years a wonderful change was brought about, eight months ago, by the 'Shirley System.' I was a complete wreck from Catarrh: so weak that I could not walk across a room. Your treatment cured me in a month. I am still well and have been working ever since completely free from my former pain and suffering. Dizziness, noises and pains in the head were also cured. I now look years younger and feel as if I have awakened from a long sleep."—June 12th, 1928.

MISS S. HOCKING.

Catarrh, Deafness, Head Noises—All Gone After 2 Years' Misery.

Mr. W. Tate, 29, Ernesettle Camp, St. Budeaux, Devonport, writes: "Four months ago I had suffered from Chronic Catarrh for 2 years. In a month the 'Shirley System' completely cured me and I have enjoyed perfect health ever since. Constant colds and sneezing, loss of taste and smell, defective hearing, bad sight, husky voice, cough, noises and aches and pains in the head, were amongst my troubles. A sick and tired feeling and an excessive flow of mucus added to my hopeless suffering."—June 10th, 1928.

MR. W. TATE.

Completely Cured 2½ Years Ago. And Now Renews Striking Testimony.

Mr. B. Pritchard, 21, Edward Street, Trebarris, Glam., writes: "Two and a half years ago the 'Shirley System' completely cured me of Catarrh, Deafness and head noises and many other afflictions which had made my life a long-drawn-out agony for two years. Your treatment introduced me to a new world. I am pleased to say I am still fit and well. My friends are, if possible, more pleased than I am at the wonderful results of the 'Shirley System' in my case."—June 10th, 1928.

Dependability

I am only one of the thousands of radio owners who buy Mullard every time.

Experience has shown me that a Mullard product can be relied upon to carry out its claim—to improve radio reception.

Take for instance the new Mullard "Permacore" Transformer. It possesses many interesting and outstanding features. Remarkably small and neat it has a silver primary and nickel secondary winding. Resonant peaks, which give unnatural reproduction, are entirely eliminated.

Mullard P.M. valves with the wonderful P.M. Filament and a complete range of the Mullard P.M. products are stocked by every dealer.

NOW YOU CAN GET TRUE PITCH OUT OF EVERY RECORD

BECAUSE on the new Lissenola Portable Gramophone you can play every record at its proper playing speed. To obtain proper pitch when reproducing you must be able to do that—but before the new Lissenola came it was impossible to do it on any portable gramophone. Now, however, you can do it every time and with every record. Because on the Lissenola Portable you can adjust the speed of the motor so exactly that it absolutely synchronizes with the proper playing speed of the record as fixed for it by the makers in the recording studio.

Then again, before the Lissenola came no portable gramophone adequately reproduced the bass notes. Now, however, when a record is played on the new Lissenola portable, the perfect rendering of heavy music and the mellow distortionless deep tones of the bass notes are brought out in a way as never before—the playing will be a revelation to you. There are sound reasons for these two big improvements in playing pitch and depth of tone which the new Lissenola brings with it. Put your arm down the horn of the Lissenola portable and down the horn of any other expensive pedestal or cabinet model. You will find the horn of the Lissenola portable longer than that in any other portable and twice the length of the horns of many pedestal and cabinet models.

Then again take the sound box of the Lissenola portable. You will find it has a thin metal diaphragm of peculiar shape which is highly sensitive and truly responsive.

These unique features in the Lissenola portable give you better tone and volume—never before associated with any portable gramophone—actually better than you get in many expensive cabinet and pedestal models costing three times the price of the Lissenola.

And you can carry the Lissenola portable about with you anywhere, any time. At home it gives you better reproduction than many expensive gramophones costing many pounds more than you are asked to pay for the Lissenola portable. Take the Lissenola Portable with you on your holidays. Be sure it is a new Lissenola portable. If your dealer is unable to supply from stock order at once direct from factory.
