'Siamese Cats'

Mr. Compton Mackenzie's talk entitled 'Of Siamese Cats and Some Islands,' given from London on Monday, September 24, aroused great interest among listeners, not only as an account of the strangest breed of cats in the world, but as a small masterpiece of the spoken essay, fired with the imaginative colour which distinguishes the work of the author of 'Sinister Street,' 'Carnival,' 'Sylvia Scarlett,' 'The Passionate Elopement,' etc.

THE Siamese cat is an animal of most definite personal likes and dislikes, and unless it likes you naturally no amount of coaxing or bribery on your part will ever win its affection. The origin of the Siamese cat is obscure, but the most satisfactory theory makes it an inbred, semi-albino variety of the Malay jungle cat, and no relation to any Western cat. The markings are rather like those of a Jersey cow, that is to say, its body is cream or café au lait or tawny, with seal or chocolate points. The tail can be straight, but the more characteristic tail is kinked at the tip. The fur is fine and close, and silky as a chinchilla rabbit's, and when plenty of outdoor exercise is available to keep it in perfect condition this fur is delicately perfumed like a sachet. The mask is V-shaped like a marten's, and the eyes are of a blue which sometimes exceeds in intensity that radiant blue in the heart of ice. Such an animal at first glance does not look like a cat at all. My friend and publisher, Newman Flower, once told me a story of somebody who lived in Vauxhall Bridge Road, and who kept about a dozen Siamese which he used to take out with him in the evening when he went to post his letters. On one occasion an astonished navvy passing by called out to a friend: 'Bill look at this bloke walking about the blooming street with a lot of blinking otters.' And I have heard my own cats called monkeys before now.

My first Siamese cats were the offspring of a princess from Siam, who lost her husband on the boat coming over and then eloped with a common sandy cat in the island of Capri, where she was living. The two kittens were black, white and yellow, with magnificent green eyes, but their temperaments and shape, and chiffon-velvet fur were their mother's. We thought they were boy and girl, and called them Guy and Pauline. As a matter of fact, they were both girls, and Guy died after her first kittens. Pauline was an odd cat, and had a curious habit of bringing her suitors home and offering them her dinner, which she used to sit and proudly watch them eat, and then the moment the plate

'Poetry of Today'

Among the talks of the Autumn Session, the series by Miss Sackville-West on 'Modern English Poetry' ranks high as the work of a writer and poetess of great distinction. In response to the request of many readers, we are arranging to print in The Radio Times the complete text of the talks, the first of which, dealing with the approach to Poetry and the conservatism of the Pre-war 'Georgian' Poets, will be found below.

THIS is the first of a series of six discussions of modern poetry. I am not going to interpret the word modern as meaning only the most advanced and difficult of the younger poets of to-day, but shall try rather to give a general survey of poetry since the year 1900, and so endeavour to trace the influences which make many poems written in 1928 so startlingly different from most poems written at the beginning of the present century. I believe that a great many more people would read contemporary poetry, and would read it with enjoyment, if they were less completely baffled by its unfamiliar methods and its unfamiliar point of view. Few people realize to what an extent their pleasure in reading is influenced by the element of the familiar; in other words, it is only human to be flattered by the sense that we can understand. So it will be my aim to make the point of view of modern poets more understandable to you, and also, I hope, their method or technique less puzzling and even repulsive. I shall have to impress upon you that modern poetry is difficult because it is highly experimental, and to explain exactly why modern poets have felt so urgently the necessity for experiment. But in order to do all this, it is necessary to go back some way.

There is one other observation which must be made, for it vitally concerns the whole question of reading modern poetry. It is this: when we read the poetry of authors whom tradition and convention have taught us to accept, we approach it, however little we may mean to, in a spirit full of a certain reverence. However independent we may believe our judgment to be, the fact remains that we approach it disposed to appreciate rather than to find fault. With the poetry of our contemporaries, it is exactly the reverse. We prefer to find fault; or, at any rate, we are determined to take nothing on trust. We read our contemporaries as an act of suspicion; we read the dead as an act of faith. I suggest that in both cases our attitude might with advantage be modified. Then the lapses of the dead would not be so leniently overlooked, and the efforts of the living would stand a better chance. The first thing to do is to rid our minds of prejudice.

Now, you may ask why I choose the date 1900 as a starting-point? Do I choose it arbitrarily, because it is the beginning of the century? No, I choose it for several legitimate reasons. Firstly, because it marks the end of Victorianism. (Queen Victoria, you remember, died, to be precise, in 1901.) Secondly, because the great poets of the Victorian era were all dead, Tennyson, Rossetti, Matthew Arnold, Browning; Swinburne and George Meredith, it is true, were still alive, both of them dying in 1909, but the small amount of verse written by them in their old age may, for our present purposes, be dismissed as negligible; therefore, we may safely say that by 1900 the great Victorian poets were off the stage and a new generation was taking their place. The only three with whom we shall be concerned, and who overlap from the days of Queen Victoria into our own age, are Thomas Hardy, Robert Bridges, and A. E. Housman. Thirdly, I choose the year 1900 because it opens the century in which two startling factors appear as part of everyday life: I mean science and machinery. Of course I am not suggesting that machinery, and science, in our modern sense of the word, did not exist in the nineteenth century. What about industrialism? you will say. And what about Darwin, Huxley, and Spencer? Of course. But I do suggest that it is only within the last twenty or thirty years that machinery and science, ceasing to be the preoccupation of a comparatively few specialists, have become an absolutely dominating and unescapable influence in the lives of all. And it is impossible that poetry, and the thought of poets, and the general shape of their mind, should have remained unaffected by so extraordinary a change taking place over nearly the whole face of the globe, and in the mind of thinking man.

We go back to 1900, therefore, and stand on the threshold of the reign of Edward VII. The South African War is over, the world is at peace, we are surrounded by the large air of material prosperity and the intense excitement of new invention and discovery. The 1890's are behind us; and decadence—that vague term—is out of fashion. The young century is full of energy. Slightly smug, perhaps, and a little too self-satisfied; vigorous and hearty, rather than subtle. You have only to look at the novelists of the period to verify this: Wells, Bennett, and Galsworthy were in their prime. It is not the ideal soil for poetry to thrive in. Still, the poets were pegging away, and in 1911 came a sort of gathered-together manifesto of their activities: in 1911 the first book of Georgian Poetry appeared.

Now, the five volumes of Georgian Poetry, an anthology which was published at intervals from 1911 to 1924, stand to those ten years in very much the same relation as the famous 'Yellow Book' stood to the eighteen-nineties. The first volume included the work of such poets as Lascelles, Abercrombie, Gordon Bottomley, Rupert Brooke, W. H. Davies, Walter de la Mare, John Drinkwater, John Masefield, and James Elroy Flecker; and in the second volume the names scarcely varied. This anthology was immensely popular. It became, in fact, a best-seller, and I mean it in no offensive spirit when I say that it owed its popularity to the fact that it had the knack of meeting the demands of the moment. Thus, its first volume supplied precisely the comfortable kind of poetry, which most agreeably supplemented the self-satisfaction of those years; then, when the war came, quickening people's emotions and giving thereby a really remarkable stimulus to the reading of poetry, it provided, in a conveniently accessible form, selections from the work of such poets as Rupert Brooke, Robert Nichols, Siegfried Sassoon, and Robert Graves.

nite as a family likeness? Roughly speaking, it is their conservatism which they have in common. Some of them, since those days, have certainly seceded and gone over (more or less) to the more anarchical faction; but in the volumes of Georgian Poetry it is a sturdy and respectable Toryism which cements the blocks together. No doubt about that. We enter a strangely tranquil atmosphere; it is like going into a quiet room, with windows overlooking a lawn and a twilight garden. Perhaps there is the flash of a kingfisher down by the stream, perhaps the cry of a rabbit caught in a snare; but nothing more distressing than that; never the cry of a soul in torment. The voice of the war-poets breaks loud and angry, and the peace is ruffled: we are disturbed: was that the voice of prophecy, or was it only a temporary interruption? We are not very sure, but the peace sinks back again like a blanket, and England, for the Georgian poets, at any rate, still stands as formerly she stood. The apples are stored in the loft, the ploughman leads his horses down to drink, and next summer the corn will ripen as usual for harvest.

This is the poetry which you may safely read, confident that you will be neither puzzled nor annoyed. Here and there you may meet with a sudden whirlpool, an angry wave, but on the whole the stream flows smoothly and without danger, and spreads into large, placid lagoons today in collected works or in new volumes or in the pages of The London Mercury. It remains curiously untouched by the problems of this age. When we come to examine the work of some other poets whose names I have not yet mentioned, we shall find them in the throes of their struggle with many misgivings, both spiritual and technical; impatient with the traditions of their craft; uneasy amongst the problems of a difficult world. But with the Georgians we are still in the company of poets who think that the poetic conventions are good enough for them; and who elect to retreat into the sanctified cloisters of the poetic paradise, taking their readers with them, rather than blunt the delicate weapons of their art against an enemy who does not play the game according to their rules. The accepted forms of beauty are still beautiful, nor does it ever seem to occur to them that words and images may wear thin and threadbare after centuries of use. Poetry, to them, is a means of escape from life, whether it takes the form of the ghosts, fays, and children of Mr. de la Mare, or the sheep and buttercups of Mr. W. H. Davies. I am not saying whether they are right or wrong; there can be no question of right or wrong in such matters; there is only a question of difference; and every poet, after all, must express himself according to his own personal conviction. All that we can exact of him is that the voice in which he expresses that conviction shall never counterfeit or falter.

Next week I propose to examine the work of some of these Georgian poets in rather more detail, after which I shall be free to pass on to the new kind of poetry which, I imagine, presents the real difficulty to most readers.

NEXT WEEK:

Ansermet conducts the Hallé Orchestra.
A Broadcast of German's opera, Tom Jones.

I shall not try, on this occasion, to go any further, but shall discuss very briefly the general characteristics of these Georgian poets.

The habit of labelling writers, and of tidying them into schools or camps, is one of the most irritating and unintelligent but also one of the most persistent of the tricks of criticism. We are not quite so guilty as the French in this respect; but still, we are bad enough. I have just been guilty of it myself, in talking of 'Georgian' poets. For what resemblance is there, in fact, between, say, Walter de la Mare and Rupert Brooke? When you put it like that, you see at once that you might as well compare Ariel or Puck with a young man tossing the caber. Yet surely there must be something to be said for the habit? Some better reason for talking about Georgian poets than merely the reason that their work appeared in an anthology called Georgian Poetry? There must be some common ground on which they meet? Some likeness, which, although individual features may differ, is as definite and at the same time as indefi-

Sir Walford Davies on his new Series of Talks. Is Form Audible?

Those who are listening to the Tuesday talks which Sir Walford Davies is giving for the Ordinary Listener will find in this special article a brief sketch of the lines which the series will follow.

THE reply to this question, it may be supposed, depends upon what is meant by form. If you say a violinist was in good form, you judge by what you hear him play, but your use of the word applies to something in him which you have deduced from the sounds heard.

You are probably not speaking of the form of the actual tones emitted at all. But when you say that a silver birch has a very graceful form, you really do refer to the form of the thing seen. And even when you praise a picture of a silver birch, you still are concerned with the form of the thing seen, though you also can say your artist was himself in good form (as a painter) when he transcribed its beauty to canvas so skilfully and capturingly. Beethoven's conception called the Concerto in D may show the fine form of his mind, and Kreisler's playing of it may show his 'deep calling unto deep.' But have the lines of melody themselves a form or shape that we can detect and admire?

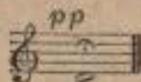

I have been asked for a sketch of the present course of Tuesday talks to the Ordinary Listener. They are on Audible Form. The aim is to help the listener to train his or her own ear in the power to detect actual shapes, sizes, and blends of tones heard, apart from composer or player, much as the ordinary eye can detect shape, sizes and blend of things seen, apart from an artist or anyone else. The talks will take the form which seems now most desired by listeners—that of short weekly expositions at the piano of some musical work of general interest and accessibility. I have promised to try to find and choose such works as are also obtainable in good gramophone records, so that listeners who do not themselves play and who yet wish to train their ears can follow up the works for themselves till they can feel they have more or less mastered them.

It is so jolly hard to detect form with the ear. It is gone before you know it, and only constant repetition of our aural experiences will make us sure of them. In this respect it seems certain that all music-lovers are alike. Of course, we vary in quickness. From the speediest listener and detector of fine form (such as Mozart, who remembered a whole movement in every detail after only one hearing) down to the slowest and least retentive aural memory-man, there is an almost endless range of speeds and slownesses 'in the uptake.' All find it hard, though some find it harder; and practice is the secret of advance to all listeners alike. This being so, it is extraordinarily easy to sympathize with a listener who wrote this week that 'the notes go past so quickly, while I'm trying to look for beginnings and endings, that I miss a great deal and am swept off my feet and confused, and feel very like a small boy holding on to the back of a vehicle that has suddenly accelerated.' The writer of this is in no peculiar case, and that is our great difficulty on both sides of the microphone. A talker on the forms of trees could easily refer listeners to fir trees, knowing it to be a form familiar to all and easily seen. But a music-talker cannot so easily refer you to the group of tones called a dominant seventh and be sure that it is either familiar or even detected. Yet in the land of music it is a chord about as plentiful as plane trees are in London; and after some eighty talks I feel the time has come to try (on Tuesdays) to face the music together and attempt to suggest a few intelligible ways in which any listener can for himself (a) quicken his power to detect audible form as it passes, and (b) advance by ever so little his intelligent familiarity with and appreciation of the various forms when heard. It is startling to realize that 44,000 hours of music are now projected on to the ether annually in Britain alone! This means that if 999 out of every 1,000 licence-holders were not listening at all, even then millions of hours of active listening go on each year. In these circumstances, if a well-wrought melody really has or can have in itself beauty of form comparable with the beauty of (let us say) a single dahlia; if a melody well listened to can compare with a flower well looked at, it is worth attempting to compare notes and to reach, if possible, a few common musical values that all can recognize. With this in view, it is clear that the first thing is to make sure of our working power to look steadfastly at will with our ears at any point or 'point-instant' in the world of sound, a matter of practice. From that we can go on to familiarize ourselves with a path of points (a melody), and after that with the various composite forms called chords or harmonies for which it is difficult, it may be impossible, to find a helpful analogue in visible form.

Any reader who chances to think of listening systematically to the present series may well, by way of preparation, make themselves quickly familiar at a keyboard (alone, or with the help of a friend) with the following:—

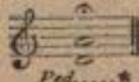

(1) Any single tone, e.g.,

(2) The interval of the octave, e.g.,

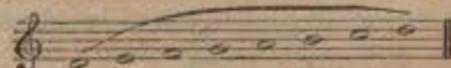

(3) The perfect fifth, e.g.,

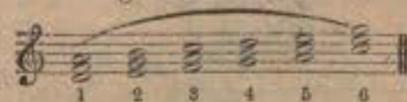

(4) The first two harmonics to be faintly but surely heard inside any full-toned bass-note, e.g.,

(5) The so-called natural scale of white notes, e.g.,

(6) The six common Major triads that can be found among the white notes:—

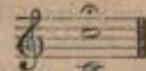

The reader should further try to acquire a quick, easy grasp of the difference to the ear between the three that are Major (Nos. 3, 4, and 6), and the three that are Minor (Nos. 1, 2, and 5). This power to detect differences can well be quickened by softly swaying (as Schubert loved to do) from the thought and experience of a Major chord to the thought and experience of a Minor chord in the same position and pitch, thus:—

Further, it will be useful to play any form of perfect cadence till it becomes very familiar to the ear:—

Lastly, every student of the language of tones will probably follow the talks better if he will often for practice set down an octave thus:—

and then test and develop his own powers of adding for enjoyment the greatest variety and number of tones he can possibly hear and enjoy simultaneously within that octave. A few suggestions are here appended, numbered for reference in the course of the Talks:—

Programmes of the Week.

NEXT week, with its specially attractive programmes, marks the official opening of the winter broadcasting season, when Smith and Jones (and even Dogsboddy, who has returned from abroad full of pious resolutions to lead a better life) settle down of an evening before sets, replete with all the new gadgets from Olympia, to the serious business of listening; and the air is filled with the seductive notes of the wireless dealer. This week is, incidentally, the sixth anniversary of the birth of British broadcasting.

Dogsboddy, full of pious resolutions.

Armistice Day.

THE week begins, appropriately, with Armistice Day, Sunday, November 11, which is to be celebrated by four special relays. The first, which is referred to in a note on page 303, comes from the Cenotaph. The Cenotaph Service, which has never before been broadcast, is imperial in its appeal, for it is the Empire's tribute, paid in person by His Majesty the King, to the Empire's dead. The relay will begin at 10.30 with music by massed bands of the Brigade of Guards. The striking of the hour by Big Ben will indicate the beginning of the Two Minutes Silence, the conclusion of which will be marked by the firing of a battery of guns in St. James's Park. At 2.30 we are to hear a relay of a meeting held in Trafalgar Square, with music by the massed bands of the Welsh and Irish Guards, prayers and hymns and an address by the Rev. Pat McCormick, Vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. The evening service comes at 8.0 p.m. from St. Martin-in-the-Fields, and, at 9.5, a great Remembrance Festival, organized by The Daily Express, in conjunction with the British Legion, will be relayed from the Royal Albert Hall to all stations except 5GB, which is to have a special Armistice Day Concert from the London Studio. This festival will be a mammoth reunion of comrades of the war, at which 'Dick' Sheppard and Earl Jellicoe will speak, and many wartime songs will be sung.

Vaudeville, Denmark, etc.

MONDAY evening, November 12, opens with a special vaudeville programme including Gracie Fields, Ronald Frankau, Doris and Elsie Waters, Leonard Henry and Claudia Colman, followed by a debate. The evening will conclude with a concert by wireless favourites—Rispah Goodacre, Leonard Gowings, and Albert Sammons. The main feature of Tuesday evening will be a Danish national programme. These national programmes are now very popular. That devoted to the life and music of Denmark will follow, more or less, the lines of the recent Swiss and Hungarian programmes.

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

'The Pretenders.'

ON Wednesday, as I mentioned last week, there will be the second performance (from London, etc.), of Ibsen's romantic play, The Pretenders, on which Mr. J. T. Grein contributes a special article to next week's issue of The Radio Times. The Pretenders will have been given previously on Monday evening, from 5GB. For particulars of this play, one of the Great Plays series, let me refer you to my note of last week and to the booklet which the B.B.C. has issued in connection with the production. The Pretenders has previously been performed three times in England—once in London, once by the O.U.D.S., and once at the Festival Theatre, Cambridge. In the first-mentioned production the principal part, that of Earl Skule, was played by Lawrence Irving. On the other occasions the part was taken by two of our younger actors, both of whom, it is interesting to note, are now on the staff of the B.B.C. working at Savoy Hill. Thursday's attractions include a Hallé Concert, conducted by Ernest Ansermet, relayed from Manchester, and a new story by A. J. Alan.

An Edward German Opera.

THE larger part of Friday evening's programme from London, Daventry, etc., will be occupied with a broadcast performance of Sir Edward German's opera, Tom Jones, which, I understand, may be conducted by the composer. Tom Jones will have been given on the previous evening from 5GB. The opera will be heard in a concert version, the various musical numbers being joined with sufficient dialogue to carry on the story. As a wind-up to the week, the revue Djinn and Bitters will be revived on Saturday evening, November 17. This revue had a great reception on its first production in August.

For Your Library List.

ON Thursday, October 18, Mrs. M. A. Hamilton reviewed the following novels:—'Silver Circus,' by A. E. Coppard (Cape); 'Point Counterpoint,' by Aldous Huxley (Chatto); 'Gallinaufry,' by H. R. Wakefield (Allan); 'The Silver Flame,' by James Hilton (Butterworth); 'The Triumph of Youth,' by Jacob Wassermann (Allen and Unwin); 'A Mirror for Witches,' by Esther Forbes (Heinemann); 'But Soft, We are Observed,' by Hilaire Belloc (Arrowsmith); 'Collected Stories of Sherlock Holmes,' by Conan Doyle (Murray); 'The Society of the Spiders,' by Roland Daniel (Brentano); 'The Case with Nine Solutions,' by J. J. Connington (Benn).

Newman Flower on Schubert.

ON Saturday, November 17, at 9.15 p.m., Mr. Newman Flower will talk on the Schubert Centenary, the celebration of which takes place during the following week. Mr. Flower has recently written a notable life of the composer and contributes the Centenary article to our special Schubert number, published on November 16.

Military Band.

THE Wireless Military Band will be heard on three occasions next week; from London on Tuesday, November 13, when Maurice Cole with the band will play the Grieg Pianoforte Concerto in A Minor; from 5GB on Friday, November 16; and again from London on Saturday, November 17, with Hilda Blake and Glyn Eastman as soloists.

True Story.

WHATEVER may be your opinion of modern music, I feel sure you will appreciate a story sent to me by a correspondent in Wales. A young friend of his, in the course of a discussion on broadcasting, referred to repairs he had recently made to his set. 'I had been cleaning and overhauling my set,' he said, 'and put in a new valve: after doing so, I switched on when the Vienna String Quartet and Leon Goossens were broadcasting—and my mother said, "There, now you've broken it!"'

Vaudeville.

AMONG the artists appearing in London and Daventry vaudeville this month are Tommy Handley and Mabel Constanduros, (November 20) and Jack Hulbert, Angela Baddeley and Maria Sandra (November 22). Maria Sandra is a singer of Negro spirituals. Angela Baddeley, who has not been heard by listeners for some time, has made a great success in the dramatization of Christopher Morley's novel, Thunder on the Left. During the week of November 26, the Royal Command artist, Norman Long—'A Song, A Smile, A Piano'—will broadcast from several of the stations. The vaudeville programme on November 20 will include a further relay from the London Palladium. The enterprise of the management of London's premier house of variety in permitting relays from their theatre has been warmly applauded by the listening public. The idea that such broadcasting damages the reputation of either artist or management has happily been outgrown.

For Chess Enthusiasts.

ON Friday, November 16, Mr. Brian Harley, Chess Editor of the Observer, will broadcast a chess talk dealing with the popular opening move, 'The Queen's Gambit Declined.' I was never a one for chess, having been from my earliest youth more inclined to the frankly physical contest of such sports as football than the smouldering stoic antagonism of the checkered board upon which the Shahs of Persia, over two thousand years ago, used to wage mimic war against their grand viziers. The origin of the game is a matter of some doubt. Various learned authorities attribute the invention to the Chinese, the Hindus, and the Persians. That it came to Europe by way of Arabia is indicated by the words 'check' and 'mate,' which are derived evidently from Shah mat ('The king is dead'), as well as by the names of various of the pieces. There are many entertaining, and more or less well-established, references to the game in history. Harun-Alraschid and Charlemagne are both supposed to have played chess. John Huss, forced when in prison to while away the time with chess, deplored the fact that thus he ran the risk of becoming subject to violent passions.

BOTH SIDES OF THE MICROPHONE

The Staff Will Entertain.

ONE programme I have omitted from the celebrations of next week—the B.B.C. Staff Birthday Programme on Wednesday, November 14. This 'busman's holiday' will be held to honour the sixth anniversary of British broadcasting. Staff programmes of the past have been very popular. Surprising talent is discovered among those whose daily task it is to minister to the talents of others. The Chief Announcer may be revealed as a cornet-player of no mean virtuosity, or he whose normal responsibility it is to correct line-noises on the S.B. System as a British Chaliapin.

'Surprising talent is discovered.'

A New Mohr Play.

ON November 26 we are to hear Caravan, a new radio play adapted and translated from the German of Max Mohr by Cecil Lewis. I am as yet unable to report on the nature of this play, but I understand that it is in three acts and the setting is Egypt. Lewis and Mohr are no new combination. The English dramatist has already adapted and presented from the studio three plays of Max Mohr—Pimpus and Caza (at Christmas last year), Rampa (last March), and Improvisations in June (in July). The author of these unconventional plays has led an unconventional life. As a boy he ran away to become an Alpine guide. During the war he was a prisoner and wrote plays for his comrades to act; later we learn he was a circus rider in the low quarters of Cairo. He lives now in a chalet in Switzerland, one of Germany's most original and successful writers, with Improvisations in June running for six months in New York, and Rampa, after being filmed, about to be produced in London.

What Women Do.

THE second talker in the series 'A Woman's Day,' Mrs. Emmet, will describe a typical day in the life of a woman councillor (3.45 p.m. Thursday, November 15). Mrs. Emmet, one of the youngest members of the L.C.C., is a graduate of Oxford and a daughter of Sir Rennell Rodd.

'The Silent Fellowship.'

ONE of the most welcome of the regular features of broadcasting is that special form of Epilogue which comes on Sunday evenings from Cardiff, and on occasion from 5XX also, entitled 'The Silent Fellowship.' The inaugurator of the Silent Fellowship, Mr. E. R. Appleton, Station Director at Cardiff, has published certain of his recent addresses in volume form under the title of 'Healing Wings' (Mowbray, 2s.). The addresses, together with the suggested 'practical steps' which accompany them, form a notable addition to the literature of practical Christianity.

An 'L du G' Revue.

A REVIVAL of the successful 'L du G' revue, Advanced Sparks—a Musical Manual for Motorists, will be presented from 5GB on Friday, November 23, and from London, etc., on Saturday, November 24.

Dame Rachel Crowdy.

ON Wednesday, November 14, at 7 p.m., Dame Rachel Crowdy, Chief of the Opium Traffic and Social Questions Section of the League of Nations, will broadcast a talk on Child Welfare under the title of 'The World's Children.'

Broadcasting Shoes.

WIRELESS now plays its part in the world of fashion. I learn that the representative of a big American firm of shoemakers, visiting Newmarket and noticing on the feet of a racing enthusiast a particularly striking pair of shoes, photographed the shoes and had the picture transmitted by wireless to New York in order that Broadway might not be a moment longer than was necessary behind England in the matter of fashions for men. Well, I never—! We certainly live in a wonderful age, as my Aunt Fanny is never tired of reminding me.

"The Announcer"

Samuel Pepys, Listener.

By R. M. Freeman.

(Part-Author of the New Pepys' 'Diary of the Great Warr,' etc.)

Oct. 5.—To Huntingdon, my wife and I, and here lie at the Bridge House Inn in readiness for sister's marrying tomorrow.

Oct. 6.—Up betimes and to trim myself, with a particular care not to miss any brissels on my face, but to make an utterly clean business of it, as befits the occasion. However, coming to a very obdurate brissel, neare to the poynt of my chinn, it makes me press on the razer, and the razer slips and nicks me, a deep nick that brings on a damnable bleeding; and for all my plugging it with cotton-wool and other matters, continues bleeding most defiantly. Whereby twas 10 or more minutes, before I could stay it.

Presently, trimming done, and my mustaches neatly sizzored, I to gloss my hair by a long brushing, having first fingered a few dropps of oyl into it, very good lustrous oyl, with a faint whif of violets thereto, and did cost me 15<sup>s</sup> for a baby-botel of it in Bond S<sup>t</sup>.

So into my shirt, and my collar fixt and my new tye tyed, when, of a sudden, my devil of a chinn starts bleeding agayn and bleads on to my collar and tye before I am ware of it. Which did set me swearing naughtily and to rage around our chamber in a great fury, while I divest myself of my bloudie collar and tye. But Lord! In divesting myself of these, what does my curst chinn but bleed onto my shirt-cuff! So as not onelic must I don another collar and tye, but another shirt likewise, with all the devil's business of shifting studs and sleave-links; which is now made even more than usual of a devil's business by the stiffness of the cuffs and the smallness of the link-holes, being new shirts both of them. Whereby did hurt my thumb most cruelly alike in pressing the links out and afterwards in pressing them in, and makes me the maddest swearingest man that ever was in all the world, I believe.

After breaking fast, did consider of our going out to Mother's; but upon a consideration of how discomfortably upside-down the house is like to be and how the kindest thing a man can do is to keep out of the way on these occasions, I bade my wife carry my love to Mother and Pall, with offers of any service that my wife can render them. So to rest awhile in the smook-room agaynst my coming fatygues; by and by to sun myself in the garden, but was careful to keep streightly to the dry camber of the paths for fear of damping or otherwise spoyling the shine of my clean shoes.

My wife back from Mother's, we, after lunching sparely, to our chamber and to put the last touches to ourselves; with some wipes at me by my wife that I do wholly engross the long mirror when she wants to see herself in it. So, for peace's sake, did stand aside a little to let the vain wretch share it, and presently make merrie sport for ourselves by kissing each other and watching ourselves do it in the mirror; the first time of our ever seeing ourselves kiss in a mirror, and this onelic done by rolling, each of us, our near eye sideways to the mirror, while we kiss. Which was most extraordinarie roguish, more like guilty kissers watching agaynst a surprise than lawfull married kissers, and did please me mightily to observe. Set me thinking, if a man might goe on kissing his wife roguishly (rather than onelic lawfully) all his wedded days, how many happier marriages should there be!

Anon my wife to Church, I to Mother's to fetch Pall; the 2 bridesmayds, Amarantha Pepys (Roger's girl) and Sally Nubbins following. Pall in ivory sattin and a wreath of snow-droppes to crown her vail, which do gentle her uncomely features into comeliness allmost, like a sweetening mist to a sour landscape. The bridesmayds in faynt green and muslinn capps, alsoe with snow-droppes to them. Amarantha looks mighty pretty, but Sally misses it by her Nubbins nose.

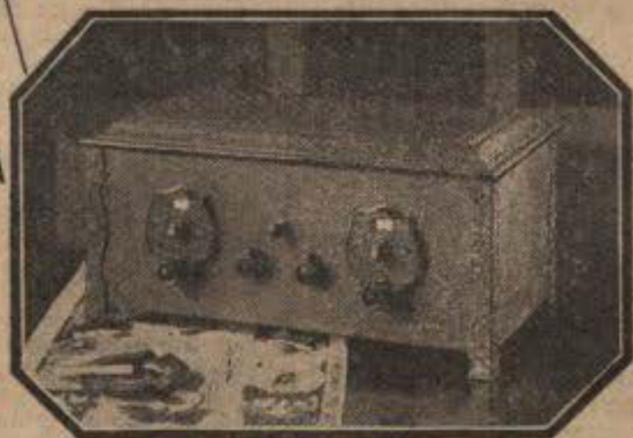

So come to Church, where a great strength of people—but manie onelic sight-seers—and presently did give sister away with the greatest joy in giving her to a good husband (though ugly) that ever I had in my life. In charging them after marrying them, Uncle Athanasius tells Nubbins of his having taken an inestimable treasure into his keeping; which is a thing that had never before crost my mind about sister, and to pray from my heart that Nubbins shall onelic continue to find her so.

Wedding over, Mother receives at the Bridge House (at my charges) with a plenty of champagne wine and all merrie; though with some sorrow of heart to me afterwards when they bring me the bill (35<sup>l</sup> 12<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>d</sup>). Yet agaynst that, I have sent off sister worthily of our Pepys family and she now ensured for life; which, of itself, be no small thing. So albei' this wedding have cost me, one way or another, above 70<sup>l</sup> I did take to myself some consideration of comfort herein.

SAVE US FROM TECHNIQUE!

'Astyanax' on the Broadcast Talker.

IN last week's issue of The Radio Times appeared an article in which an 'ordinary reader' was pleading for specialist radio talkers. His theory appeared to be that only certain people, endowed naturally with a 'microphone voice,' and versed in the special technique of microphone elocution, should be allowed to form the medium between the writers of talks and their audience. The ordinary writer of a talk, according to this critic, lacks the necessary 'mechanical art.' He spoils good matter by bad manner; his goods by his delivery.

It is a fair point to raise, and an interesting theory. But I do not think it is really justified. Our critic makes, of course, the exception to prove his rule—Sir Walford Davies and Mr. Compton Mackenzie. But whether these exceptions are of the proverbial nature I take leave to doubt. I think it was Mr. Humbert Wolfe who not long ago supplied the best answer in an article, in the course of which he said that he had never heard a poem read, however badly, by its author without gaining something from it that he had never found in the poem's words on the printed page, or through some ordinary reader's lips.

The truth is that personality is more important, more vital, and infinitely more attractive, than perfection—in diction, as in the characters of the people you know, or in the construction of a dinner. The author of a talk may not read, will not read, as perfectly as an announcer who is trained to the microphone. But so long as he reads well enough to be audible and intelligible, the author will automatically give in his reading a warmth and humanity, a personal contact, which must naturally be lacking in the man technically trained to the duties of representing an impersonal voice and nothing else. When our critic states that 'What is really wanted is a more interesting and absorbing manner rather than matter,' he is stultifying his own argument. It is the author, not the master of elocutionary technique, who gives to his talk interest and absorption—for it is the author who, from a very human and natural vanity, is more interested and absorbed in his matter than anybody else. And some of this interest and absorption he 'puts over' the more effectively from the fact that he does so unconsciously, and not by any methods of studied artifice. The best actors in the world—you can see it for yourselves on the stage, and particularly on the screen, over and over again—are children and animals. Buster Keaton's superb cow in Go West made the great comedian play a very second fiddle in one of the best of all funny films. Yearly the real children in Peter Pan are the despair alike of critics and their grown-up colleagues. Technique is an artificial method of achieving a result which sophistication or self-consciousness prevents the actor or speaker from achieving in a perfectly natural manner. It is vital for a news bulletin. It is, or would be, fatal to talks depending for their interest on their essential humanity.

That some talks read better in print than they sounded in words is true enough. But it is generally the case with such talks that the author, so often a man of some literary experience, wrote subconsciously rather for print than for the microphone. And the converse is in fact far more often true: that talks, which have sounded perfect through the microphone, read dully and indifferently. The medium is not the same, and the matter suffers in proportion. The average good talk is too intimate, too—casual is not the right word—informal, perhaps, to suffer printing gladly. Quite recently I read one of Mr. A. J. Alan's famous microphone stories in print; of course it was a fine story, but it lost just that which makes him in truth a 'master of the microphone': it was only a fine story, not a supreme piece of work.

The hall-marks of delicacy, finish and distinction cannot be stamped upon indifferent material merely by the addition of a trained voice. The mixture must be good material plus distinctive personality. Nothing else will score. The future remains 'wropt in mystery,' but the idea of future talks as 'rhapsodic' and 'the layman's poetry' is frankly too high for me, and, I should imagine, for most people. I agree that rhapsodies and poetry should depend for their delivery largely on a special elocutionary technique. But talks do not come within this slightly exalted category. They are, and I imagine are likely to continue to be, as a general rule, plain words to plain people. And in such cases the presence of the writer at the microphone is a vital asset of which we must not be robbed in order to sacrifice to that cruelly inhuman goddess who is veiled beneath the name of Technique.—ASTYANAX.

A WONDERFUL MUSEUM

of musical instruments of the past is, unknown to most visitors to London, housed in the Royal College of Music. The author of this brief article describes the contents of this unique collection, which includes the guitar of David Rizzio, the ill-fated minstrel of Mary, Queen of Scots.

THERE is in the heart of Western London a little-known but delightful collection, hidden away in a gilded and ornate dungeon beneath the Royal College of Music. It consists of rare and ancient musical instruments, and is the result of the life-long hobby of the late Sir George Donaldson, a once famous art dealer of Bond Street, who died in 1925 and left these treasures to the Royal College. Many of them are historically interesting, such as the guitar of David Rizzio. Perhaps he played it to Mary Queen of Scots on the day he was dragged from her presence and stabbed to death. The 'virginal' may have been that on which Queen Elizabeth showed her undoubted skill. Instruments such as these, no doubt well known in their day, have long been forgotten: the 'pandurina' (Spanish, dated 1700); the 'pochetto,' a tiny two-stringed fiddle with a ram's head carved in ebony; the 'rebec,' a three-stringed fiddle; the 'espinette,' with five strings; the 'orphon,' a portable lute-shaped pianette with shoulder-straps; the 'colascione,' a two-stringed lute; the 'theorbo,' eleven-stringed lute; the 'baryton,' a kind of 'cello'; the 'melophone,' played by moving little rings with the fingers; the 'dulcian,' the 'cor Anglais,' and many more. Of Kit violins (sordini) there are several curious examples, some of them two-stringed. A 'clavycytherium' (earliest known piano) dates from the fifteenth century. There are many really beautiful works of art amongst them. The 'theorbo' has a dancing party engraved on the ivory, which is quaint beyond description. One case is filled with hurdy-gurdies ('vieilles,' drawing-room instruments a hundred years ago). But the lutes are gems; one of them is 6ft. 6in. high and broad in proportion; it is difficult to imagine how it could have been played.

The collection takes one back centuries, and one can picture the Romeo of the period accompanying his love-ditty beneath the window of his innamorata with the 'orphon' hanging round his neck. Many a melodious midnight ramble has the 200-year-old Neapolitan mandoline shared, and prime ballerine may have learnt their first 'steps' from the tiny, delicate sordini. A musical missal known as a 'gradual,' with its illuminations and heavy gold lettering, must be worth a small fortune; it dates from the fourteenth century.

Permission to view this delightful and unique collection can be obtained at the Royal College. All who are interested in the Renaissance period should pay it a visit.

Notable Passages from Recent Addresses.

The Cathedral and the House.

TIME was when men would build their city around the massive pile of the cathedral or the parish church, in such wise that the House of God towered high above all the town and all the countryside, and the houses of men, clustered around, seemed by their relative lowliness to be paying reverence to its dignity and sanctity. Thereby, consciously or unconsciously, our forefathers expressed in symbolic fashion the place which worship and the service of God must occupy in every ordered life, as the force which should dominate, pervade, elevate, sanctify all the manifold activities of men. Our modern civilisation prefers to rear its cities around the factory chimney; and perhaps this too is a symbol, a sign of the changed view of life in which God and His supreme claims find little place.—The Rev. W. T. C. Sheppard, Liverpool.

The Telescope of Theology.

SOMEONE has likened theology to a telescope. It is meant to give you a clearer view of things, but each one wastes time by boasting about his own telescope; one, that his is the oldest, handed down from apostolic times; another, that his is the latest, up-to-date with modern learning. If only we would think, we should see that we were looking at the telescope instead of through it. No wonder we go back from our worship to our work without a glimpse of the Way, the Truth and the Life. We are of no use to the outside world. It says, 'We don't care a bit about the date of your telescope, but we should be very grateful to you if, as we go into another week of life with its duties and temptations, you could show us something to lift up our hearts and make us want to be better men and women than we often are.'—The Rev. Arthur Gilbertson, R.N., Plymouth.

Body and Soul.

WHEN the horizon doesn't lift above the three-score years and ten, you can see that the struggles of life must be about the conditions of life rather than life itself. To eat, drink, and be merry, since tomorrow we die, seems almost the only policy. Jesus, with His understanding of God and belief in immortality, saw that the value of life lay not in the pleasure or comfort or gain that a man could get, but in the quality of life itself. To the doctrine that man was a body possessing a soul He would never have subscribed. To Him man was a soul, and the soul was the thing. The body was only a convenience, a temporary lodging place. He therefore believed that if men concentrated their thought on the conditions of life and permitted human affairs to obscure the vision of spiritual attainment, they were making a great mistake. He believed that if the search for pleasure or comfort, for accomplishment or gain in things material were allowed to prevent us from progressing in spiritual attainment we were putting ourselves in positive danger of losing the only wealth that can be ultimately preserved. If we gained them so that we no longer strove for spiritual character, then we were already dead, men who had lost their souls. Men would continue to climb the higher heights, but we should have no part or lot in it.

The Solidarity of Humanity.

THE ideal of God for humanity is that it shall be one: not monotony, but harmony. By the solidarity of humanity we mean the inter-relationship of man with man; the fact that no nation can, in a world like this, isolate itself and be ultimately independent. We learned it tragically in the days of the War. There were those who attempted to stand out. In some sense no nation was able to stand out at last, because the agony and suffering of each ran to the uttermost end of the world. All nations are inter-related in a spiritual and fine consciousness that does not admit of separation.—The Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, London.

A weekly page of special interest to the housewife and the home gardener.

Soups for all Seasons.

I WOULD like to impress on all housekeepers that there are very few definite rules in soup-making. Cookery books may give excellent ideas—but their recipes need not be slavishly followed. Soup-making should be an adventure. All that is necessary is some knowledge of its principles.

For stock-making there is nothing better than a very big earthenware pot—of the best quality—with a lid. I would advise the addition of a veal knuckle bone. It gives a soft quality to the stock and it costs practically nothing. Have it sawn by your butcher. Use any other veal or beef bones you may have. All the bones should be sawn, and browned in the oven. Lay them in the bottom of the pot. Then add fresh meat—a piece of buttock steak, which has been well wiped with a cloth wrung out in cold water and cut in small pieces. After this, any trimmings of meat or chicken, chicken bones, and skin and giblets if you have no better use for them. Cover with cold water, using about a quart to the pound of meat.

Bring the stock so slowly to the boil that the process takes nearly an hour. Skim carefully. When boiling point is reached, throw in a cupful of cold water. This will cause the scum to rise quickly. Skim again and clean off the sides of the pot with a cloth. Remember that it is only the grey-brown scum that need be taken off. When the stock is clear a white froth will rise. This is left. From this time on the pot must simmer so slowly that scarcely any movement of the stock is noticeable. Cover it, but put the lid on one side to allow of evaporation. After two hours add a few sliced carrots, a sliced turnip, leek, onion, and some celery, all of which have been browned in a little fat. Put in a lump of sugar and a clove, too. Simmer again for an hour at least, then strain through a cloth into a large china basin.

If you want to use the stock at once, remove the grease by pressing tissue paper on the surface, or pour it through a cloth that has been wrung out in very cold water.

Keep your stock in a cool, airy place and raise it from the shelf by standing it on two pieces of wood, so that the air may pass under it. Boil it up every day in summer: in winter once every other day. Season it as you require it.

Nothing is more delicate for an invalid—or for an unexpected guest—than a soup made of good veal stock thickened with a yolk of an egg beaten up in a little cream.

Here is a very pretty soup—called Mimosa soup—which is made of good brown stock.

Slice finely a number of very tender cooked French beans. Boil an egg for fifteen minutes. Heat the stock and add the beans. Season. Put the yolk through a coarse sieve and sprinkle a little of it on each plate of soup, as you serve it. You will have a harmony in pale green and yellow to justify the name.

I do most warmly recommend the excellent and fragrant French Crouste au Pot. This is merely a good brown stock in which vegetables, coarsely cut, and the sliced heart of a cabbage have been cooked. A few dice of veal or chicken can be added. With it, or in it, should be served slices of French rolls which have been buttered and then browned in the oven. In France this soup is always served in a brown earthenware pot.—Mrs. Elizabeth Lucas in a talk on October 22.

Lentil 'Potted Meat.'

WASH 1 breakfastcup of lentils and put in saucepan with 2 breakfast cups of water, 1 very small onion cut up, 2 Oxo cubes, 2 ozs. butter. Put on stove to cook, and when it boils place where it will simmer gently for 25 minutes, stirring occasionally; add salt and pepper to taste, pour into dish and leave to set. This is excellent spread on hot buttered toast, and also makes appetizing sandwiches.

An Old-Fashioned Christmas Cake.

1 lb. flour.
1 lb. currants.
1 lb. sultanas.
1 lb. raisins (stoned and chopped).
1 lb. sugar (Dom.).
 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. peel.
 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. chopped almonds.
1 teaspoon carbonate of soda.
3d. orange flower water.
A little vanilla and almond essence.
 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. best butter.
 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. lard and 6 eggs.

Beat butter, lard and sugar to a cream, then the eggs one at a time. Gradually and alternately add flour and fruit. Then add orange flower water and essences. Lastly add soda mixed in half a teacup of warm milk.

Line cake tins with greaseproof paper, three-quarters fill the tins, and bake in a moderate gas oven for four hours.—From Listeners' Talk, October 29.

This Week in the Garden.

THE first half of November is the best time for planting Tulips; Daffodils do best when planted in August or September, but Tulips should be kept out of the ground until later. Hyacinths should also be planted now.

On many soils an annual top-dressing is very beneficial to lawns. A suitable compost for the purpose can be made from equal parts of good weed-free loam and either leafmould or well-rotted manure. If a little bone-meal can be added, so much the better. The mixture should be passed through a fine sieve and then sprinkled evenly over the lawn.

The present is a good time to put in cuttings of Currants. Last week something was said about the way to make Gooseberry cuttings. Now Red Currant cuttings should be made in exactly the same way. Each cutting should be eleven or twelve inches long, and should have all the buds removed except the topmost four.

Black Currants, on the other hand, should be dealt with quite differently. In this case all the buds should be left on the cuttings. If this is done, the buds which are buried in the soil will in due course give rise to vigorous suckers. Moreover, as a clean leg is not required, a Black Currant cutting need not be so long as a Gooseberry or Red Currant cutting. Six or eight inches is long enough, the top being cut just above a bud, and the bottom just below a bud.

Many enquiries have been made lately regarding the club-root disease of the cabbage tribe. This disease is caused by a microscopic fungus, and if diseased roots are allowed to decay in the ground innumerable spores or 'seeds' of the fungus are liberated into the soil ready to attack future crops. Therefore, as soon as the produce has been gathered, and before decay has commenced, the diseased roots should be lifted with a fork and burned.

The fungus which causes the disease thrives in sour soil. It is not found on chalky soils or on land which is kept sweet by the regular use of lime. Therefore, as soon as the land has been cleared of a diseased crop it should be dressed with lime at the rate of about 28 lb. to the square rod.—Royal Horticultural Society's Bulletin.

Simple Upholstery and Repairs.

DON'T use a heavy hammer for tack driving. For nearly all work I use one weighing only about 4ozs. in the head with the face about  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. in diameter, and a handle of 12ins. or 13ins. in length. With a heavy hammer you are likely to damage the frames you are working on by breaking the joints or bruising the show wood. Hold the hammer handle near the end and not close to the head. It is not the shank of a tack that does the work, but the head well driven home that pinches the webbing canvas or cover you wish to secure.

When driving a tack do it smartly without too many taps, the less blows you give the better, or the tack will bend or head come off. When purchasing tacks do not ask for tinned tacks, ask for 'blue cut' tacks, and sizes you will require are as follows:  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. improved tacks for webbing,  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. or  $\frac{3}{4}$  in. fine for covers.

For ripping, or untacking, of old covers, you require a ripping chisel and mallet, or an ordinary screw driver will take the place of the chisel. A light mallet is all that is necessary, an old croquet mallet with handle cut down is admirable for the job. Now, taking the chisel or screw-driver in the left hand, grip it firmly and place the cutting edge just under tack and cover, or covers, or the webbing you wish to remove, at a close angle to the frame and also in same direction as the grain of the wood, and then strike it smartly with the mallet. The tack will sometimes come out at first blow, but repeat the blows until the tack is removed. Don't try to save your tacks for they are too cheap new to spend the time straightening.

Loosen the cover with your ripper and lay evenly a thin layer of cotton wool or any stuffing picked on carefully. Should you use horsehair always put a layer of cotton wool over it, or the hair will penetrate the cover. Now replace the cover stretching it down until the cover is tight. Whenever you are tacking covers use the  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. fine tacks, and in stretching either old or new coverings always pull centre of cover down first and then stretch to the corners.

It is best to temporarily tack covers and canvas first before finally driving home your tacks. Also you may not be able to pull your cover tight enough at first. Again, after temporarily tacking your cover you can with advantage sit on the chair for a little while and then permanently tack the cover down, the sitting will settle the stuffing and take the stretch out of the covering. This latter operation is really essential when you are using American cloth or other similar coverings.

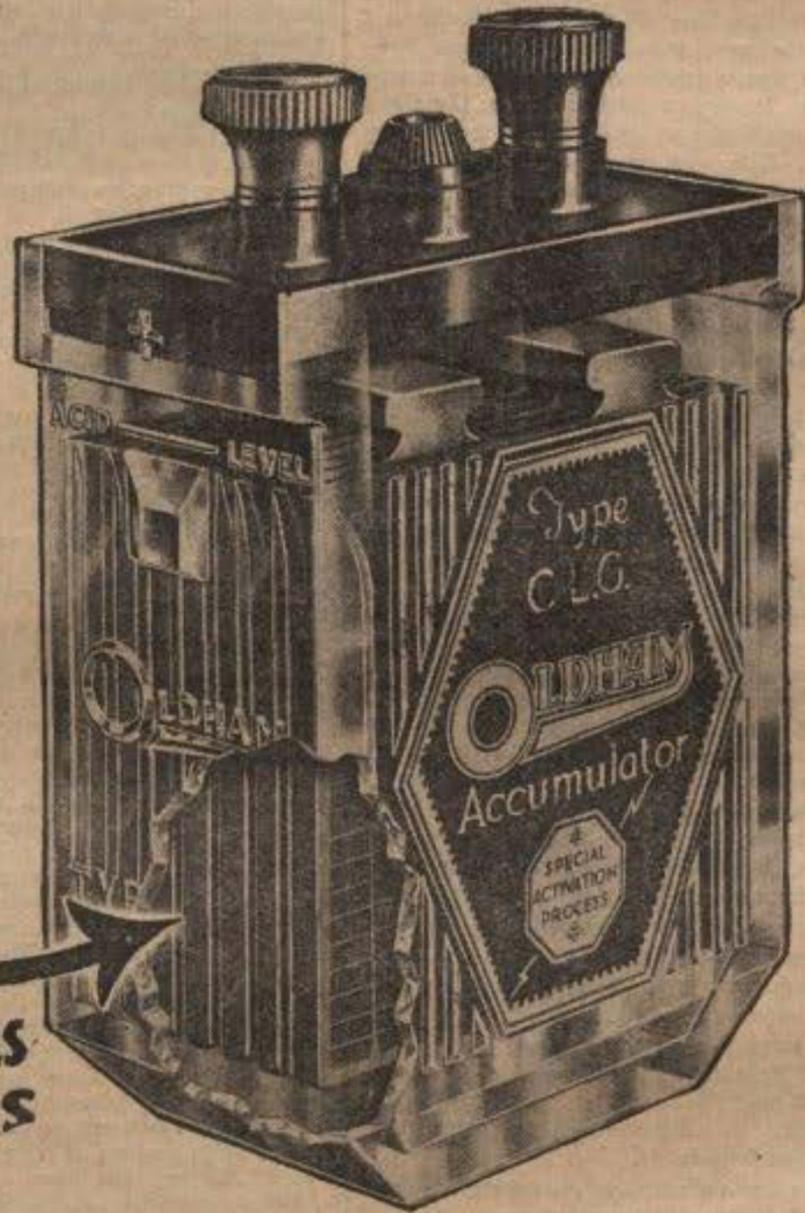

You may find that the springs of your chair seat have broken, buckled, or come adrift, and often you can repair them without taking the seat right out as follows. Turn the chair upside down on the table or floor, and with your ripping chisel and mallet remove the bottom canvas, the webbs are now bare, if they are torn, rip them off also. The springs are now in view, and the upper canvas to which they are sewn; if the latter is not torn or worn through you can replace any broken or buckled springs by sewing new ones in with an ordinary sacking needle and some strong twine; four ties in each spring are quite sufficient.

When springs are all secure to top canvas, and be sure that all the springs you do not remove are

HERE'S THE EXTRA POWER IN OLDHAM ACCUMULATORS

WHEN you buy your next accumulator ask to see an Oldham. Look at its plates. You will note that they are  $\frac{3}{16}$  of an inch thick—considerably thicker than those used in most other accumulators. This is why Oldham accumulators give longer service and why they need less frequent re-charging. Remember too, that all Oldham plates are made under the Special Activation Process, a method of plate making which is exclusive to Oldham. Buy an Oldham and you will save money in two ways. First, because the accumulator will last longer, secondly because it will need fewer trips to the charging station.

WHAT WE BELIEVE.

Opinions expressed at the recent violent debate on 'What is Wrong with Broadcasting?' held by the Birtle Amateur Dramatic and Debating Society in the village institute of Birtle-in-the-Briar, with the vicar, the Rev. Rupert Fest, in the chair, and extracted secretly from the minutes of the debate by Graham Eltham.

That no one likes this modern music, and that the B.B.C. only broadcasts it out of spite.

That the man next door oscillates on purpose because he is jealous of our five-valve set.

That the announcer has wavy chestnut hair, and receives an offer of marriage from an heiress every day.

That when the wind howls in a radio play, it isn't really the wind.

What the Other Listener Thinks.

Give Contemporary Music its Chance!—The Jazz Controversy—Choosing a 'Listening Menu'—We Are Accused!—The Valuable Grumbler—The Music-Hall Relays.

ASTONISHMENT has given way to eloquence after reading a column in a recent issue of The Radio Times which expresses a view of modern music as unbalanced as it is misleading. Elgar's music, which alone provides your contributor with pleasure amongst that of twentieth-century composers, is not modern. Some of it is recent. One might as well call Hardy a neo-Georgian because he was still writing a short while ago. Judging also from his references to Parry and Stanford, your contributor appears to live still in the nineteenth century. The rich beauty of The Fire Bird, the sober greatness of Œdipus Rex, and the warm humanity of what Bartok's music I have heard, do not exist for him, and when even a few can appreciate modern music, one is entitled to suspect that the fault lies, not with the composer, but with an unresponsive listener, and this impression is heightened when one attempts to get a seat for the Russian ballet! Even the vulgar herd seems to be pro-modern there.

If Mr. Scott considers that modern composers are poseurs and innovators for novelty's sake, let him remember that Beethoven, considered on all sides to have been a most conservative musician, upset, for example, the whole scheme of the minuet in the symphony, introduced voices into the orchestra, wrote consecutive fifths in a quartet (consciously, of course), introduced programme music and, in general, played havoc with the musical axioms of the day.

Modern composers have, in comparison, but followed the tendencies of their predecessors—towards increasing freedom in rhythm, harmony, and melody, and towards more varied orchestration. They have drawn their inspiration from ever-widening sources; the Russian Revolution, the Great War, the Industrial Revolution and the reaction from it, have inspired musicians as well as poets and painters.

I think it would be nearer the truth to say that no great musician can help being original in a startling way, otherwise his artistic life will be purely interpretative.

To Mr. Scott's final question concerning the few performances of Schönberg's and Stravinsky's music, the B.B.C.'s forthcoming series of modern chamber music recitals seems sufficient answer, but, if not, let him inquire how many people have heard not less than two performances of the following works: Berlioz's Messe des Morts, Monteverde's Incoronazione di Poppea, Brahms's German Requiem—works in my humble opinion amongst the greatest things in music. Unless they can attract the attention of the only two classes of people who, apart from the B.B.C., can or will produce them, the major works of modern composers will suffer a similar and all-too-common fate.

In conclusion, may I express my belief that we are at the beginning of an epoch which, in the value of its contribution to human culture, scientific and artistic, has few parallels and no equals, and that in these stirring times music is playing a sustained and great part.—J. L. N. O'L.

WHY not let Jazz alone? It is all right in the right place. It is all wrong in the wrong place. To hear nothing but Jazz is like eating nothing but jam. The former is as bad for the ears as the latter is for the stomach. Season your meal with a little of everything, and you won't get 'colly-wobbles'!

'ALL-ROUNDER.'

SIR HENRY hates Jazz and is proud of it. I hate Bach and am proud of it too. I expect we're both fools!—S. F. J., Harwich.

To those situated in isolated districts an hour or so of oratory from some well-known personage is a boon, and such speeches do a lot of good, especially to the younger generation, inasmuch as it helps to build character; so will the B.B.C. kindly give us the full toast list in the future, and give us much more than in past years?—X. Y. Z., Bideford.

We were discussing at home last night the question of who was the best broadcast talker—that is to say, which of the talkers most successfully achieves that tone of intimate informality which is essential if he is to 'hold' the listener. The following talkers were in the running—Sir Walford Davies (of course), Desmond MacCarthy, Percy A. Scholes, James Agate, Cecil Lewis and the Chief Engineer. I wonder who else would qualify?

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.
Yet another and unexpected evidence of the manner in which broadcasting has become part and parcel of the national life. This hostelry, near Shaftesbury, has recently been renamed 'The Listen Inn.'

Perhaps your readers would have their favourites.—R. N. B., Bournemouth.

THE ideal way to enjoy broadcasting is to listen only to those items which you know will hold your attention. On purchasing The Radio Times, try marking in blue pencil those items you are able and wish to hear, and in ordinary pencil, those which may appeal to you and in which you should take an intelligent interest. With this method you are never bored, and can add considerably to your store of knowledge. Should it appear to be a 'dud week,' don't fuss. It's better to listen to one item with all your attention rather than to a dozen with your mind wandering; besides, the balance at the end of the year will be well in your favour—the law of averages and the selection committee will see to that.—J. L. T., Tufnell Park, N.7.

I THINK it is possible that an idea may be gaining ground that the B.B.C. wants to do something outside its own sphere and become a sort of public authority on other matters, that phenomenal success in its own business gives it the right to butt in to others. I think there is an old saying about a cobbler sticking to his last. Why supplement the programme matter with ordinary fiction—good, of course—but doesn't it really belong to the magazines? And recipes and garden work? What has chocolate, canaries, good beds, chutney, saucepans, onions and puddings, narcissus, bulbocordium and greasebands to do with coming wireless programmes? Will you consider the using of that space for words that will be sung? Now you have my grumble please accept my thanks for the many other things you have done so well.—H. B., Buckingham.

I, AN old bed-ridden invalid—in the 1870-80 period—used with nervous dread to warble a 'ballad' or play a 'piece' called a little after-dinner music. Now, since my doctor gave me a crystal set two years ago (which gives perfect reception, and I pray may not be upset by these new schemes!) I have learned to appreciate and understand the old masters, etc., and have, with Sir W. Davies' and Mr. Scholes' help, become quite musical. My personal maid—brought up in an Essex village and sent to service at eleven years, comes up with delight from the proms., operas, concerts, etc.—looks out for names of old masters—enjoys Wagner—and says that from Sir Walford Davies she has learned to understand Handel.—E. B. P., Kensington Gardens, W. 2.

I FREQUENTLY long to set the malcontent writers to the daily Press of letters making vague charges such as 'dry-as-dust programmes,' 'too many talks,' etc., against the B.B.C., the task of preparing just one week's programme of the usual number of hours a day broadcasting. When they had finished (if their imaginative faculties survived the strain), I wonder how many of their fellow-listeners would be satisfied with the result!—M. F. W., Clapham, S.W.4.

I READ with interest the weekly page 'What the Other Listener Thinks,' but I notice only those letters that agree with the B.B.C. programmes are printed.—W. P., Birmingham.

THE grumbler is the 'outward and visible sign' of that divine discontent that has been the motive power behind the world's progress throughout the ages. I am sure there are grumblers at Savoy Hill. Even the Chief Engineer, on those all too rare occasions when he 'comes on the air,' has a grumble that things aren't to his liking, but he intends to keep plodding on. I am also equally sure that the grumbler has been one of the best friends of the officials of the B.B.C.—the pointer that shows the way.—J. A. C., Rotherham.

PLEASE let us have more relays from the big London music-halls. Such 'trips to Town' mean a great deal to country-folk, for they have, as is to be expected, much more 'atmosphere' than a studio show. Surely the notion that broadcasting vaudeville artists from the stage is bad for their reputation is quite unsound! For my own part, the broadcast reminds me that it is a long time since I went to a music-hall and confirms my intention to spend a day or so in London before Christmas.—R. L. E., Solihull.

The Life of the 'Jogah.'

This article on the life of the London 'buskers,' or street-entertainers, is by 'Gloves,' a popular 'busker' who led the recent broadcast given by these wandering artists from the London Studio.

HOW does a 'busker' live? Let me tell you. He rises early, and, after visiting the Labour Exchange, makes for one of the more popular theatres, where he may secure a chance of working to the matinée queue. He must get there by eleven o'clock, or he will find others there before him, and will be crowded out.

Arriving at the 'pitch,' he joins the others who are waiting and talks the 'shop' of his craft—each performer's luck on the previous night, where the 'bar was up,' or performances were forbidden by the police and so on.

By this time the group will be really representative, and may consist of singers, comedians, acrobats, two or three elocutionists, instrumentalists of every description, from violin to ocarina, mimics, raconteurs, dancers, conjurers, paper-tearers and perhaps a couple of jazz bands.

Listening to the conversation, the ordinary citizen would understand merely a word here and there, for it is carried on in a slang based on Italian. 'Varda the polone,' murmurs a 'jogah,' and everyone glances at a passing girl; while another relates how 'my luck was in last night,' I got 'bona metzas' (good money) and earned 'corona tray soldi' (five shillings and threepence) during the day.

Perhaps one of the number may be collecting on behalf of a 'busker' who is ill or in trouble, and most of those appealed to contribute a few pence or promise to do so later in the day. The signatures on the list are curious, for instead of ordinary names you will see 'Dinny,' 'Jock the Acrobat,' 'Hoopy,' 'Cloggy,' and 'Chops,' for all these men are known by a nickname or nom de queue.

'Charlie'—a well-known 'busker.'

Noon is near, and many realize they have no chance of working here, so when a policeman appears the word goes round, 'Varda the scarpo—orderly!' (See the policeman, move away), and the majority scatter to the other theatres to find queues suited to their various turns.

The next hour is spent in rehearsing new material 'sotto voce.' When a sufficient number of people have collected to form an audience or 'slang,' the first 'busker' steps out and commences his performance. He must interest and hold his audience in spite of traffic and a hundred other distractions, and that is by no means so easy as it appears.

His show ended, he passes along the line with his hat and proceeds to investigate the contents, or 'bottle,' which may be anything from twopence to

ROUND AND ABOUT

Troubadours of the Pit Queue—The Story of the 'Surprise Item'—A Famous Theatrical Producer whom you will hear on Wednesday.

two shillings, but usually averages just over a shilling. Very occasionally a half-crown is found, obviously given in mistake for a penny, and the practice (incredible as it may seem) is to show it to the queue and offer to return it to the donor.

After dining at a coffee stall, the 'jogah' repeats his morning routine, with the exception that he may be able to perform at two or three different theatres, taking his turn at each, for to infringe this rule and perform out of turn is termed 'topping,' and he who 'tops' is anathema.

Eight o'clock, with the last of the queues safely inside the theatre, the 'busker' 'homeward plods his weary way,' for most of them manage to maintain a home of some sort, however humble, and avoid the stigma of the lodging house.

What will it be Tonight?

A popular feature of the programmes is the newly instituted 'surprise item,' which at 10.45 every Friday evening brings some novelty to the microphone.

THE search for a more elaborate name having failed, they called it the Surprise Item—and as the Surprise Item it is known to millions of listeners who eagerly await the hour of 10.45 on Friday evening to see what the ingenuity of those responsible for the feature has contrived. Probably the most popular surprises to date have been those of the Three Co-optimists (July 13), 'Seamark's' play Embers (August 3), the relay from the signal box at King's Cross (August 10), John Penmar Williams, the Eisteddfod Chaliapin, and Master Frederick Firth, the boy soprano (August 24), the criticism of a radio play by James Agate and Hannen Swaffer (September 7), and Bilboquet and his Radio Circus (September 28).

The task of arranging for such a weekly novelty is no easy one. You will not lightly satisfy a public which has waited till a comparatively late hour for what is promised as one of the most original broadcasts of the week. It must in most cases be what one may term a 'stop press item,' arranged at the last minute in order to include a broadcaster or a topic upon which public interest is fixed on the day in question.

That such 'stop press items' are the cause of much hard work goes without saying. For example, on a recent Friday, all was set for a distinguished actress to appear at 10.45. At 7.30, alas, the management to whom she was contracted, sternly forbade her to broadcast. There was nearly a case of heart-failure at Savoy Hill—but the creator of surprise items, after a temporary relapse started gallantly out to find a substitute in the shape of a highly-paid vaudeville artist who was about to leave on the following day for a tour of the world. This gentleman, said his parlour-maid, was in the auditorium of a West-end theatre with his family. Pursuit carried on to theatre. Gentleman found. First he thought he would; then he decided he wouldn't. Time, 9.35—with just an hour and ten minutes in which to fill the gap. Frenzied telephone calls collected a trio of cabaret 'stars' who reached the studio at 10.30, rehearsed for fifteen minutes, and gave what turned out to be not the least successful of the Surprise Items.

A Disciplinarian of the Theatre.

Mr. Basil Dean, the celebrated producer, gives a talk in the series 'Aims and Ideals in the Theatre,' at 9.15 on Wednesday next.

Mr. Basil Dean.

HE has probably more right than any other man in England to talk about the aims and ideals of the theatre. He has aims other than the making of money. He is an idealist, though those who can never recognize an ideal except when it is romantic would probably refuse him the name.

Also he knows his subject. He learned the fundamentals of it in Liverpool, where, as director of the Repertory Playhouse, he learned something of the extent and the limits of the producer's power. The war called him away just as he was beginning to realize that he had something to contribute to modern dramatic theory. By 1917 his bent had asserted itself even in the Army, and he had become director of the Entertainment Department at the War Office.

After the war he decided to conquer London, and in 1919 there was established one of the most famous partnerships in the modern history of the theatre—that between Basil Dean and Alec Rea, the two calling themselves the Reandean Company.

They produced Galsworthy's The Forest and The Skin Game, Karl Kapek's R.U.R., and other plays of distinction. It became obvious that Basil Dean was a man to be reckoned with. He despised the commonplace and the facile. He experimented with lighting with a thoroughness that was new in England. He brought a strict and penetrating discipline to his producing which made even the most individual actors sink their individual notions into what Basil Dean considered the correct interpretation of the play.

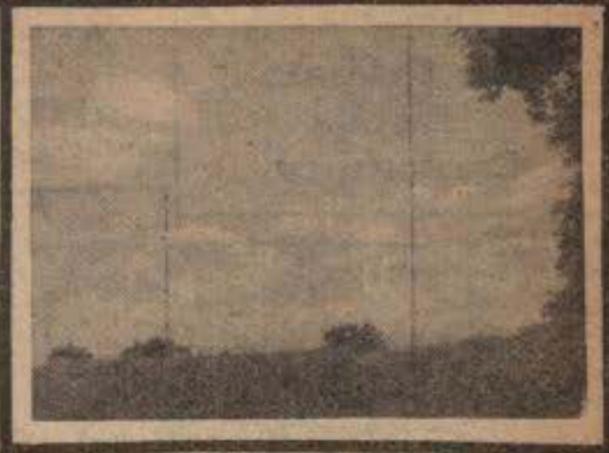

Meanwhile, he was studying the theatre in other countries. He had long visits to America. He visited Berlin and Moscow. He got to know McTears Theatre well.

The success of the Reandean productions led, in 1924, to Basil Dean's appointment as joint managing director of Drury Lane. That was one of his failures, and there was an acrimonious parting in 1925. Basil Dean would probably say it was a greater failure to have to make a financial success of Drury Lane by means of imported musical comedies.

Since then he has produced many successful plays, the best, perhaps, being The Constant Nymph. He has frequently been in controversy, for he is recklessly outspoken. He once said, though he softened it later, that the future of the English theatre is in the United States. On another occasion he once declared: 'Let us have as many unclean plays (in the sense of subject matter) as the public will pay to see; but let us insist upon them being sincerely written and from a strictly moral point of view.'

THE PROGRAMMES

A Thousand Guests for the Lord Mayor—Meet the real Sir Harry Lauder!—How the silence of Whitehall will fall upon the Empire.

The City's Greatest Feast.

On Friday, November 9, the speech of the Prime Minister is to be relayed from the Lord Mayor's Banquet at the Guildhall.

IN spite of all the talk about turtle soup and barons of beef, the Lord Mayor's Banquet is not the most sumptuous of City feasts. Some of the Livery Companies give dinners with more elaborate menus. But no banquet of all the year is nearly as impressive and interesting as that of November 9.

Sir Kynaston Studd.

The occasion of the dinner, as nearly all the world knows, is the entry into office of the new Lord Mayor, this year Sir Kynaston Studd.

It is the first of the Lord Mayor's honours, and it is also the first of his expenses, for the cost (and altogether show and banquet cost about £4,000) has to be met half by the Lord Mayor himself and a quarter each by the two Sheriffs.

To the banquet there usually sit down about 850 guests, but that is not the total number of those who feast there that night, for in addition to those in the Great Hall there are about 150 others who are in adjoining rooms, so that altogether about 1,000 people enjoy the hospitality of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs.

The guests are chosen from among the leaders of the nation. The Prime Minister invariably accepts the invitation and usually makes it the occasion of delivering a speech of real substance and importance. Other Cabinet Ministers are usually there, also the Foreign Ambassadors, the Judges in their scarlet robes, the Law Officers of the Crown, the Sheriffs, and representative Peers.

When these pass from the ancient Library of the Guildhall, where they have been greeted, to the ancient Great Hall, where the tables have been set, the scene is one of extraordinary richness and colour. The procession is headed by the City Marshal with the four State trumpeters playing fanfares, followed by the Sword Bearer and the Mace Bearer, whose offices are centuries older than the five-centuries-old hall in which the feast is held. Then comes the Lord Mayor, his train borne, with the chief lady guest on his arm; then the Lady Mayoress on the arm of the chief guest, her train borne by a page, followed by six Maids of Honour, uniformly dressed, who afterwards pass with their cavaliers into the drawing-room.

The Great Hall makes a marvellous setting for all the beautiful dresses and sparkling jewels, the glittering uniforms, the scarlet robes of the Judges and the Aldermen, the mazarine gowns of the common Councilmen.

A feast never seems so romantic as in a Gothic building, and the Great Hall is one of the richest pieces of Gothic architecture in London. The magnificent east and west windows, the carved columns, the vaulted roof all make the ideal setting for a banquet whose history goes back to the time of Richard the Lion-Heart. The Great Fire destroyed much, but much of the original remains, and the guests may have the delight of knowing that the paving of the floor was paid for by Dick Whittington.

All round are banners, and emblems, and statues, which speak of a proud and loyal past. Romance and history are in every inch of the Hall, from the giant figures of Gog and Magog in the corner of the gallery to the Sword of State and the Mace among the priceless Corporation plate and insignia. The chef on his raised platform carving the baron of beef is a symbol of good cheer and also of history. Little wonder that for many the Lord Mayor's banquet is the happiest and most memorable night of the year.

The Making of a Comedian.

At 8.15 on Thursday, Sir Harry Lauder returns to the microphone. This brief study of the world's most famous comedian is written by a friend and fellow Scotsman.

THE announcement that Sir Harry Lauder is going to broadcast is always good news for listeners. He has got the world so well-instructed that the mere mention of his name brings a sense of anticipatory pleasure.

Most of the world knows his story. He has always been autobiographical. Like most Scotsmen who have climbed from poverty to wealth, from obscurity to fame, from hardship to comfort, he delights in talking about the old days. Just recently he has been to Arbroath where he told of the tears and struggles of his mother, and he has often told of the years of difficult and lowly-paid apprenticeship he had to serve to the profession of which he is incomparably the most distinguished member. These are the elements of romance, and the public dearly loves a man with a romance.

But the romance is not all. Sir Harry Lauder is one of the most thorough craftsmen that ever set out to entertain the public. He is the possessor of genius, if we accept its definition as 'an infinite capacity for taking pains.' Such simplicity as there is in his songs does not come by nature. It is the distilled essence of art. Such a complete and perennial hold over the affections and the imaginations of an audience do not come merely to the man of genial disposition. They are the result of an infinitely careful study of detail. There are months of intense observation and careful polishing in every one of his character studies.

Nature gave him a sympathetic and musical voice, but no one ever produced his voice with more skill and care than Harry Lauder, and that is why when he is broadcast listeners feel his presence so vividly that it seems he must be in the same room with them. He has a hundred jokes ready in his memory, but he does not trust in these. They were made for the music-hall and he knows that broadcast humour is different to music-hall humour. He has kept his imagination fresh. He has continued to grow when other men have let their minds harden into superficiality and repetition. A.E.M.

11 a.m., November 11, 1918-1928.

How the B.B.C. will carry out on Armistice Day the most important broadcast of the year, which will bring the Empire to the Service at the Cenotaph.

NO development of the broadcast service has been more welcomed by listeners than that which has made possible the relaying on Armistice Day, from all British Stations, and through 5SW to the Empire, of the Cenotaph Service. There is no doubt that this will rank as the most impressive item in a crowded year's programmes.

Special measures are being taken by the B.B.C. engineers to ensure that the apparatus necessary to the relay shall not in any unfitting way intrude upon the spirituality of the occasion. No wires or cables will be allowed to trail across the steps where the flowers lie heaped; no microphone will be visible at the lectern. The crowds in Whitehall will see no indication that the words and music which they hear are falling upon the silence of homes in all parts of the country.

The point from which the engineers will control the relay is to be established out of sight within an archway on the east side of Whitehall. From this point underground cables have been run to a plug near the foot of the Cenotaph where the lectern will stand, and to another position at the edge of the pavement, connecting up with a microphone concealed in a tree which will pick up in proper balance the music of the bands and the singing of the choir. The usual pair of telephone circuits will join the control point with Savoy Hill and the S.B. system. The laying of the underground cable to the Cenotaph was a complicated business, necessitating the removal of part of the roadway.

A special lectern has been designed for use in this service. Built into the heart of it is a microphone, screened from view by a covering of silk through which the voice of the preacher will be clearly audible, though the existence of the microphone itself is concealed. The B.B.C. engineers, with their vanload of gear, will have to take up position at 8.30 in the morning before the vast crowds begin to throng Whitehall.

The formal service will be impressive enough, but how much more impressive, with their suggestion of the great crowd, will be the hundreds of little incidental sounds which the microphone, as is its way, will pick up. Behind the Silence, something stirs all the while, something alive yet impalpable, as though it were the heart of the world beating or the movement of lips in unspoken prayer.

The Cenotaph with its flowers.

IN this, the fourth and last of his Symphonic Poems, Saint-Saëns takes for his hero Hercules, one of whose exploits had formed the subject of his earlier orchestral work, Omphale's Spinning Wheel.

He prints in his score the outline of the 'plot.' Mythology tells, he says, how Hercules in early years saw two paths in life—that of dalliance in pleasure, and that of virtue. In different to the seductions of nymphs and bacchantes, the hero chooses the way of struggle and combat, at the end of which he discerns through the flames of the funeral pyre the reward of immortality.

ABOUT fifty years ago Ponchielli promised to rival Verdi as a composer of Italian Opera. After a few years, however, he advanced no further, and he died when he was little over fifty.

His most successful Opera was La Gioconda, whose plot is of the usual somewhat lurid type fashionable at that time.

We are to have the Dance of the Hours, a spectacular Ballet, which occurs in the Third Act. The Ballet represents successively dawn, day, evening, and night. It is also intended to symbolize the eternal struggle between the powers of darkness and light.

THE Giant therefore drove them before him, and put them into a very dark dungeon, nasty and stinking to the spirits of these two men. Here, then, they lay from Wednesday morning till Saturday night, without one bit of bread, or drop of drink, or light, or any to ask how they did. . . .

SCOTTISH listeners will not need to be told who Hamish MacCunn was, but some mere Southrons may care to be informed that he was a Greenock man, who for some years was in London, first studying at, and then on the staff of, our Royal College of Music.

He wrote this Overture when he was still a Royal College student, inspired by that Canto of Scott's Lay of the Last Minstrel which opens—

'O Caledonia, stern and wild,

Svendensen, arr. Godfrey

SVENDSEN, who died a few years before the war, was a violinist-conductor-composer, and wrote several large-scale compositions, including two Symphonies. He is less of a nationalist composer than his contemporary, Grieg. In such pieces as this Norwegian Artists' Carnival, however, the spirit of his native country is happily present. This, and the four Norwegian Rhapsodies by which he is well known, belong to his earlier years of residence in Christiania. He was conductor of its Musical Association when he was in the mid-thirties. That was a time of small things for him. He had spent some years wandering over Europe, picking up a living in various musical occupations, and was glad to settle down at home (though he not infrequently undertook tours abroad during the rest of his life).

Allinson

NO OTHER BREAD
NO OTHER FLOUR
MAKE THESE CLAIMS

- Allinson Bread is guaranteed to contain the whole of the wheat, every particle (100% of its food value)—nothing added and nothing taken away, except the husk. This guarantee is printed for your protection on the Allinson paper band which should come to you around every Allinson Loaf you buy.
  - Allinson Bread is made from flour milled solely from the finest selected Empire Wheats, including a large proportion of English Wheat. Allinson make a practice of discarding wheats below their standard quality. By eating Allinson Bread you are supporting English farmers.
  - Allinson Bread gives you the natural, wholesome, appetising flavour of Wheat, matured and blended in vast storage bins.
  - Allinson Bread is made from flour stoneground in the good old-fashioned way of our sturdy ancestors between the upper and nether millstones to the ideal texture for easy assimilation by the digestive system.
  - Allinson Bread contains in full degree the Vitamins A and B, the life-germ of the wheat. These vitamins are essential to the maintenance of bodily vigour and to the growth of bone and teeth. They are particularly important in the case of growing children.
  - Allinson Bread contains the mineral salts from the outer covering of the wheat-berry in the exact proportions provided by nature as an aid to digestion.
  - Allinson Bread gives an adequate quantity of the "roughage" which is vitally necessary to keep the bodily system functioning readily and easily. This "roughage" is Nature's preventative of constipation.
  - Allinson Ltd. mill no other than Wholemeal Flour. Many firms produce brown flours and "so called" "wholemeal" or "wheatmeal," which are merely the by-product from milling white flour. With Allinsons there can be no mistake—they make only genuine Wholemeal and are the recognised specialists in this product.
  - Allinson Bread, the trade mark of which is The Allinson Mill—stands as a hall mark of quality in bread and a definite safeguard against inferior substitutes.
  - Allinson Bread is endorsed by The New Health Society.
  - Allinson Bread is the only Bread which brings you, in addition to health and strength, generous free gifts, including lovely reproductions of some of the world's most famous pictures.
  - Allinson Bread is made from flour milled at London, Castleford, Yorks and Newport Mon. At each mill these claims hold good.
- These 12 points of superiority are 12 convincing reasons why you and your family should eat Allinson Wholemeal Bread. Therefore insist on getting only

Allinson GUARANTEED 100% WHOLEMEAL Flour & Bread

Allinson's 100% Wholemeal Bread, with its generous food value, is obtainable from bakeries everywhere. Overture, 'The Butterflies' Ball' ..... Cowen

'FROM the earliest days of my youth,' Sir Frederic Cowen has said, 'I was intended for music. Even if I rack my memory I cannot discover that I ever had the opportunity of thinking of or choosing anything else.' Even so, not many musical youngsters achieve an Overture at eight—Sir Frederic's feat. It was written to a libretto by a girl cousin, and its title was Garibaldi. 'It had a run of two consecutive nights in the Royal Opera House back parlour,' we hear—doubtless to enormous applause from the entire family.

Sir Frederic, who came to England from Jamaica four years before the important event described above, has been composing and conducting ever since.

This Overture, suggested by the old nursery rhyme of The Butterflies' Ball and the Grasshoppers' Feast, is delicately and daintily orchestrated, with many trills and flutterings on Flutes, light converse of the Woodwind and Strings, and so forth. There are suggestions, too, of the delicious languor of a summer's afternoon.

On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring .. Delius

DELIOUS has an exquisite touch in suggesting in music the beauties of nature.

This impression of Spring-time joy is scored for Strings, Woodwind, and Horns, the Strings being divided into nine or ten parts. A rich and velvety texture results.

After a mere three bars of Introduction, the first tune (quite short) begins; it has a rocking motion, perhaps suggested by the rhythm of a cuckoo's cry, and is given to Strings, with, in one place, little wisps of melody in Clarinet and Oboe woven in.

A little later the second tune starts. It is a Norwegian folk-song, In Ola Valley. It runs on continuously from the previous tune, and begins very much as that did, but its opening can quite easily be noticed from the fact that the Flute enters here (for the first time in the piece), doubling the first phrase of the tune an octave higher. (The entry of the Oboe, a moment later, with the same phrase, cannot be missed.)

There are several vague suggestions of cuckoo-calls, as for instance by the two Clarinets, a little after the point just described. Soon, however, there comes an actual imitation of the bird's cry (marked 'Cuckoo' in the score); it is allotted to the First Clarinet.

This continues for some time, and then the piece ends with a repetition of the first tune, very softly played, and at last fading into the distance.

This Week's Bach Cantata

Church Cantata, No. 115.

'Mache dich, mein Geist, bereit' ('Ready be, my Soul, alway').

THIS is another of the Chorale Cantatas with the form of which listeners must now be growing familiar. The opening chorus is founded on the same hymn which forms the concluding Chorale, the soprano voices singing it, transformed into a 6-4 rhythm, while the others and the orchestra weave illustrative embroideries about it. There is a striking resemblance between this opening chorus and those of Cantatas No. 114, broadcast on September 30, and of No. 140, a still more famous one built on the hymn, 'Wachet auf' ('Awake').

The same motif is used in all of them, an upward soaring figure of joyousness, suggested to Bach's thought by the word 'Awake,' which he takes as the central idea of the text. Flute, oboe d'amore and horn are all effectively used in the accompaniment along with the customary strings and continuo, although in modern times the horn is usually replaced by a trumpet, the part being inconveniently high for the modern horn.

The second number is a very beautiful air for Contralto with oboe d'amore obbligato, built on the same melody as the voice sings. In the fourth number, a soprano song, there are interesting parts for flute and violoncello. The actual instrument specified by Bach is a violoncello piccolo, but it can be replaced quite satisfactorily by the modern 'cello.

The final Chorale is accompanied by all the instruments.

The words are reprinted from 'Bach's Cantata Texts, Sacred and Secular,' by C. Sanford Terry, by kind permission of the publishers, Messrs. Constable and Company, Ltd

I.—Chorus.

Ready be, my soul, alway,
Watch ye, pray unceasing!
Else shall come God's judgment day
On thee all unheeding.
O beware! Satan's lure
Offereth temptation
For thy soul's damnation.

II.—Aria (Contralto).

Ah, slumbering spirit, why sleepest thou still?
Now rally thy will!
For haply a sudden call breaketh thy slumber,
And thee, caught unwatching,
Among those who wake not death's power will number.

III.—Recitative (Bass).

God, Who upon thee watch e'er keeps, With light will flood sin's darkling deeps. He giveth thee His grace and light, And in return He asketh a loving heart that walks aright For all the favours that He show'reth. So, vain is Satan's empty lure, weak souls alone enamouring! Do but to God make thine appeal; be sure with speed help to thee's coming. Cast off the world, nor let it hold thee! 'Tis false and will deceive thee. It but ensnares man's nature weak with guile and subtle flattery.

IV.—Aria (Soprano).

Ever hopeful raise your prayer
In the night's long vigil!
Ask ye at God's lenient hand,
On your Lord's forbearance stand!
Soon He'll free you from sin's snare,
And you cleanse from evil.

V.—Recitative (Tenor).

God hearkens to His people's crying, And bends to earth a listening ear. When Satan in our downfall rejoicing, In His great might will God appear. His only Son, our need Who knoweth, Gives strength, and calms our fear, And as our Saviour help bestoweth.

VI.—Chorale.

Therefore let us all be found
Watchful, prayerful, ever!
Perils sore and griefs abound,
To us drawing nearer.
Comes the day God will pay
Judgment on our scorning;
Day of wrath and mourning!

HOME, HEALTH AND GARDEN.

also secure, re-web the chair. The best webbing is what is called No. 12 or 14 English grey webb.

A piece of wood about 9ins. long by 2ins. wide and  $\frac{3}{4}$ in. thick makes a good substitute for a stretcher. Fasten your webbing at one end by doubling in about  $\frac{1}{2}$ in. and driving five  $\frac{3}{4}$ in. improved tacks, one at each side, one in middle and then two between; to stretch the webb, take your piece of wood and wrap the webbing round it longways, then resting one end of stretcher against the frame of chair, push the other down. Now secure webbing with three tacks, cut off, leaving about  $\frac{3}{4}$ in. to fold over, and secure this with two tacks; so repeat with each webb.

Now stitch your springs to the webbing. This is not easy, as you will require to get one hand through the webbing and push your sacking needle through the webb and back again, catching the wire of the spring. It is a good idea to thoroughly examine each process as you untack your repair, and so find out how springs are secured. Always have your springs upright or, if inclined at all, outwards when chair is standing on its legs.—Mr. Arthur J. Bedy, from a talk on October 18.

Listeners' Talks.

MORE than 1,000 listeners contributed to the second Listeners' Talk, and as many sent both recipe and hint the task of deciding which was the best was again a difficult one. In choosing the recipe to be broadcast, however, two things were kept in mind, first, that the ingredients should be easily available, and, second, that the article should be, as far as possible, something that could be made again and again, week in and week out, if desired. That is not to say, however, that unusual recipes are not desired and welcomed. The hints selected are also mainly those which are of daily use or are of a specially seasonable character.

It might be well to remind listeners that, as the entries close some three weeks before the talks are given, and as it is later when they are published in The Radio Times, recipes which are seasonable when sent are out of date when the talk is given. This meant that many excellent recipes had to be rejected as the time for them had passed. Many also could not be considered owing to the fact that they had been duplicated many times.

The accepted recipes were sent in by the following:—

Mrs. C. C. F. Haine,
Orchard Cottage,

SONG CYCLE, 'DIE SCHÖNE MÜLLERIN' ('THE FAIR MAID OF THE MILL') and other Songs by SCHUBERT

Sung by ROGER CLAYSON (Tenor)

TONIGHT and on the three nights following we are to hear one of Schubert's most famous works—the cycle of twenty songs which he entitled, Die Schöne Müllerin (The Fair Maid of the Mill). It comprises twenty songs which the composer selected from a set of poems, the Müllertieder, by Wilhelm Müller. In it we follow the fortunes of a miller's apprentice, who wanders off to seek a new master, following the course of a winding brook, to which he confides his thoughts. He finds his new work in a mill to which the brook leads him, and falls in love with the miller's daughter. He thinks he has won her, but she gives her love to a forest ranger, and the poor miller-lad, broken-hearted, seeks rest from his grief beneath the waters of the mill-stream, his one constant friend.

The first song is Das Wandern (Wandering). The 'prentice wants to go off a-wandering, to see who will be the pianist in the third of the B.B.C. Chamber Music Concerts tonight at 8.0, caricatured by Allinson.

the world, and we hear how cheerfully he strides out on his way.

Wohin? (Whither?) He speaks to the brook-let beside which he takes his way. 'You will find your mill to turn, some day,' is his reflection, 'and I'll find my work waiting for me, too.' In our third song, having come to a mill, and seen the miller's lovely daughter, he thanks the friendly brooklet that has led him.

Halt. He comes to a mill, and welcomes the familiar, happy sight and sound. He asks the brook, 'Was this the place to which you meant to lead me?'

Danksagung an den Bach (Thanks to the Brook). He hears the brook babbling of 'the maid of the mill,' and wonders if this unknown maid whispered a word to the stream. Anyhow, here he is, looking forward gaily to his task at the mill.

Am Feierabend (A Holiday Evening). He is not very strong, and wishes he could show the maiden a giant's strength, and so impress her with his willingness and capacity.

Die Neugierige (The Inquirer). Of course, it is one of the oldest questions—that of the lover who seeks to know if the maiden loves him. The stars and flowers can't tell him. Maybe, the brook can. No? 'O tell me, she does love me?' But the brook, for once, is tantalizingly silent.

READ THESE LETTERS

The following letters are typical of the thousands received from men and women who have learnt French, Italian, Spanish or German by the new Pelman method:—

"After several years' drudgery at school I found myself with scarcely any knowledge of the French language, and certainly without any ability to use it. I realise now that the method was wrong. After about six months' study by the Pelman method I find I have practically mastered the language. Your Guide to Pronunciation is invaluable." (B. 143.)

"I think your German Course excellent—your method of language-teaching is quite the best I have come across." (G. F. 103.)

"Regarding the (Spanish) Course, I must say that I find the method perfection, and the learning of a language in this way is a pleasure. It is simple and thorough." (S. F. 109.)

"In three months I have already learnt more Italian than I should have learnt in many years of study in the usual way. What astonishes me still more is that one can learn so well without using a single word of English." (I. M. 124.)

'The Best in the World'

General Sir Aylmer Haldane, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., D.S.O., writes:—

"The Pelman method is the best way of learning French without a teacher."

A Naval Commander writes:—

"I may say that I learnt Spanish by your method and am convinced that it is the best in the world."

"I am writing to let you know that I have passed in French in the London Matriculation, although French was my weakest subject. I attribute my success very largely to your instruction, and am most grateful to you for it." (M. 1404.)

"I was able to pass London Matriculation (in Spanish) last June with minimum labour and no drudgery, although I was always reckoned a 'dud' at languages." (S. B. 373.)

"I have only been learning German for five months, now I can not only read it, but also speak it." (G. M. 148.)

"I am extremely pleased with (Italian) Course. I found it of the greatest possible service to me during a recent visit to Italy." (I. T. 127.)

"It is, perhaps, even yet too early to review your Course as a whole, yet it would be unfair not to take this occasion of appraising it. In place of generalizations let me take my own experience. Quite recently an odd volume of Boursault's comedies, written under the blaze of Molière's sun and therefore not much read now, came into my hands. It had been rescued in 1916 from the library of Peronne in the Somme battles. A vastly entertaining volume of Dumas, dated 1866, came from the same library. I read its 200 odd pages in a couple of days, averaging 25 pages an hour. My dictionary was needful but once in three pages or so. Two months ago I knew no French, and now I can pen the above. After saying that, I do not think a formal compliment is necessary." (A. 631.)

Further letters describing the merits of the new method will be found in the book which will be sent free to everyone who writes for it to-day to the Pelman Institute (Languages Dept.), 95, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1.

The Gift of Tongues

By ANTHONY SOMERS

I HAVE discovered a remarkable method of learning Foreign Languages, a method for which I have been looking all my life. I only wish I had known of it before; what toil, what drudgery, what disappointments I should have been saved!

It has sometimes been said that the British people do not possess the "gift of tongues." Certainly I never possessed that gift. At school I was hopeless. When the subject was French or German, Latin or Greek, I was always somewhere near the bottom of my Form. Yet in other subjects—English or History or Mathematics—I held my own quite well. I have now come to the conclusion that the reason I failed to learn languages was that the method of teaching was wrong.

Although I never could "get on" with Foreign Languages I have always wanted to know them—especially French. I have wanted to read the great French authors in the original. I have wanted to read Racine and Victor Hugo and Balzac, and that great critic whom Matthew Arnold so much admired, Sainte-Beuve, in French, and not merely through the medium of a characterless translation. Besides, I have wanted to spend holidays abroad without being tied to a phrase-book. So I have often tried to find a method which would really teach me a Foreign Language. And at last I have found it.

How to Learn Languages.

Some time ago I saw an announcement entitled "A New Method of Learning French, Spanish, Italian and German." Of course, I read it, and when I saw that this method was being taught by the well-known Pelman Institute, I wrote for their book, "The Gift of Tongues," and this so interested me that I enrolled for the course in French. Frankly it has amazed me. Here is the method I have wanted all my life. It is quite unlike anything I have seen or heard of before, and its simplicity and effectiveness are almost startling.

Consider, for example, this question with which the book (which, by the way, can be obtained free of charge) opens.

"Do you think you could pick up a book of 48 pages, written in a language of which you do not know a syllable—say, Spanish, Italian, German or French—and not containing a single English word, and read it through correctly without referring to a dictionary?"

It sounds impossible. Yet this is just what the Pelman method of language instruction enables one to do, and so remarkable is this method that I am not surprised to hear that it is revolutionising the normal method of teaching languages in this and other countries.

One of the most striking features of the Pelman Language Courses is the fact that they are written entirely in the particular language (French, Spanish, Italian or German) concerned. There is not an English word in any of them. Even if you do not know the meaning of a single Foreign word you can study these Courses with ease, and read the lessons without a mistake, and without "looking-up" any words in a French-English, Italian-English, Spanish-English or German-English Dictionary. This statement seems an incredible one, yet it is perfectly true, as you will see for yourself when you take the first lesson.

Grammatical Difficulties Overcome.

Another important fact about this new method is that it enables one to read, write, and speak French, Italian, Spanish or German without bothering one's head with complex grammatical rules, or burdening one's memory with the task of learning by heart long vocabularies of Foreign words. And yet, when the student has completed one of the Courses, he or she is able to read Foreign books and newspapers and to write and speak the particular language in question accurately and grammatically, and without that hesitation which comes when a Foreign Language is acquired through the medium of English.

The new Pelman method of learning Foreign Languages is described in detail in a book entitled "The Gift of Tongues."

Special editions of this book have been published for those interested in the question of learning

- FRENCH. —GERMAN.
- SPANISH. —ITALIAN.

Any reader who is interested in the new method of learning any one of these four languages should write for a free copy of "The Gift of Tongues," specifying the particular language in which he or she is interested. By return will be sent a copy of "The Gift of Tongues" with full particulars of the new Pelman method of learning Foreign Languages without using English. Write to-day, using the form printed below, and mentioning the particular language in which you are interested, to the Pelman Institute (Languages Dept.), 95, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1.

THIS, written for the Countess of Radnor's String Orchestra, contains six pieces, all but the first in old dance-rhythm, and all full of that straightforward freshness which we recognize as one of Parry's chief attributes.

The first piece is a lively, busy Prelude; the second is an Allemande—a graceful, fairly quick dance of German origin; the third is a Sarabande, a very stately dance in a very slow three-in-a-bar time; the fourth is a Bourrée, a very brisk dance; the fifth is a Minuet; this is a slow, very expressive one; the last one is a whirling Gigue.

THE YELLOW PRINCESS was the first operatic work which Saint-Saëns put on the stage. That was in 1872, when he was thirty-seven. The piece did not succeed; no one could have guessed that within five years he would be represented by an opera which is one of the most popular of all stage works—Samson and Delilah.

The Yellow Princess, a light opera in one Act, is based on a story by Louis Gallet, about a scientist who falls in love with a Japanese carving, takes a drug, and dreams that he is in Japan. On awaking, he finds a more satisfactory love than that for a statue.

paint-brush, contrived to give his subject attractive 'local colour.'

QUILTER is one of the two or three living English Composers who seem to get nearest to the spirit of Shakespeare. The Suite we are to hear was written in 1922, and includes four pieces, the first three being the Introductions to the several Acts, and the last a dance that winds up the play. The titles are: (1) Shepherd's Holiday; (2) Evening in the Forest; (3) Merry Pranks; and (4) Country Dance.

THE origins of the tale of Tristan and Isolde (Isolt) are lost in legendry. Apparently it is an old Celtic romance. It was on the thirteenth-century version that Wagner based his great love-drama, a work which, in its kind, has never been surpassed.

The wonderful Prelude epitomizes the transcendent, passionate love of Tristan and Isolde.

LISZT'S popular piece is a musician's interpretation of one view of life—Lamar-tine's, in the poem in which he asks 'What is life but a series of preludes to the song that death begins?'

There is the Prelude of Love, and the tempests that break in upon its joy. There is another Prelude in which the unhappy lover seeks balm in quiet retirement from the world; but when the trumpet peals he rushes to the fight, finding his real strength in battle.

These ideas give Liszt scope for picturesque vivid music, in the Symphonic Poem we are to hear.

Scene I. A lofty, dimly-lit vault underground in Robert Catesby's house at Ashby, on October 19, 1605. At the rear are two heavy doors which admit to a secret chapel. The conspirators are grouped round a table, with the exception of Thomas Bates, who stands on guard at the door.

Scene II. A room in a house behind St. Clement's, London, in the early evening of November 4, 1605. Catesby, Winter, Christopher Wright and Guy Fawkes are playing cards.

Scene III. The courtyard of Holbeach House, an old moated residence about four miles from Stourbridge, in Staffordshire, at sunset on November 8. The conspirators, together with their followers, are besieged by Sir Richard Walsh, and they have just repulsed an attack.

YOUR EXPENSES

KEEP a sharp eye on your expenses, no matter how unimportant they may appear. Small amounts wasted soon run away with an alarming proportion of your income; small amounts saved and invested in National Savings Certificates grow rapidly into a very comfortable sum. Every shilling you rescue and invest in Savings Certificates becomes one-and-sixpence in ten years—a clear profit of 50%.

National Savings Certificates can be obtained in single documents representing 1, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100 Certificates, costing 16/-, £4, £8, £20, £40 and £80 respectively.

Shaving against time

Men who have to get to work in the morning should use Erasmic Shaving Stick. It lathers quickly and generously—even in hard water, and its millions of creamy little bubbles get right into the roots of the beard, making it easy for the razor to "do it in one." Erasmic Shaving Stick saves your time and it saves your face, giving you a clean, close shave that lasts twice round the clock.

UNGEDULD (Impatience).—All nature must bear the message to the beloved—'Thine is my heart, and shall be thine for ever.' But impatient love need wait for no messages; her eyes will know the unspoken thought, her heart will feel a heart's devotion.

Morgengruss (Morning Greeting).—The 'prentice stands beneath the maid's window, and, though she is asleep, bids her 'Good morning.' If she doesn't care for him, he will leave her; but he hopes she will not reject him. Like a true lover, he rhapsodies upon her charms.

Des Müllers Blumen (The Miller's Flowers).—He brings her a bouquet of forget-me-nots, and likes to think of the rest of the flowers standing beneath her window and whispering his love to her.

Thränenregen (Tear-drops).—The miller and the maid sat together by the brook, his heart full of love and longing. The rain began, and she left him with a light word—wondering.

Mein (Mine).—His uncertainty is resolved. She loves him, and all the world is full of his rapture.

WHILE everyone realizes that laws exist, and must be obeyed, and even that they are essential to the continued existence of any society, there are few people who know in any detail how a law is actually made. 7.25 Prof. E. N. DE C. ANDRADE: 'Science in the Modern World—I, Science in the Home'

THE present era of history is frequently termed the era of scientific industrialism. The methods by which science is applied to the framework of modern civilization form the subject of a series of talks by Professor Andrade, of which this evening's is the first. Professor Andrade was for some years Physics Professor at the Artillery College, Woolwich. Recently he has been appointed to the Quain Chair of Physics in the University of London. Listeners may already know his clearly-written book on 'Eugenics.' His subject tonight is science as embodied in almost every commonplace utensil about the house, and domestic civilization as the direct result of the scientific method.

As a tutor and lecturer with thirty years' experience at Leeds University and with the W.E.A., he is well used to teaching biology to adults, and this course will give him a vastly wider field.

All the chief characters have now been introduced except Papageno, a charming little Bird-Woman, who is won by the bird-catcher after some trouble, including an attempt of his to hang himself.

MOZART'S last Opera, The Magic Flute, has one of the strangest plots possible.

The young Prince, Tamino, goes through various adventures in trying to win the beautiful Pamina, daughter of the malignant Queen of Night. He is alternately helped by Three Genii and tempted by Three Ladies, these last servants of the Queen of Night. Papageno, a quaint, practical-minded bird-catcher, is also in search of a wife.

Act II opens with a solemn Temple ceremony. Sarastro, the Chief Priest, and other Priests, accept Tamino and Papageno for initiation.

In the next scene, Monastatos (Tenor), a Negro slave, who has designs upon Pamina (Soprano), finds her asleep. He is interrupted by her mother, the wicked Queen of Night (Soprano). Later, both are frustrated by Sarastro's arrival.

The rest of the Opera must be summed up in

NATIONAL ORCHESTRA OF WALES

Leader, ALBERT VOORSANGER

Conducted by WARWICK BRAITHWAITE

Overture, 'Consecration of the House', .. Beethoven

BEETHOVEN wrote this Overture in 1822, for the opening of a new theatre in Vienna, on a day which was also the Emperor's name-day.

Beethoven's biographer, Schindler, told how the composer, while roaming with friends in the woods, walked apart for a while, and then showed them two themes for the Overture that he had jotted down in his sketch-book, saying that one might effectively be worked in his own style, and one in that of Handel.

Of course, the Overture is true Beethoven, not just an imitation of Handel, of whose style there is no more than a pleasant flavour.

It is a dignified and jubilant piece, appropriate to the celebration of the two events which brought about its composition.

MAY HUXLEY (Soprano) and Orchestra

Ah Fors e Lui ('Traviata') .. Verdi

ORCHESTRA
Concerto, No. 5, in D Minor, for Two Violins and Orchestra.....Bach (Violins—ALBERT VOORSANGER and FRANK THOMAS)

THE Movements of the Concerto are as follows:—

FIRST MOVEMENT. The interest of this lies in a happily bustling tune, taken up in alternation by the two Violin parts. Sometimes one Solo Violin starts a tune, which is then taken up (almost in Fugue style) by the other.

Note especially the opening tune; this is important. It often recurs, and may be looked upon as the main tune of the Movement.

SECOND MOVEMENT. This is a very expressive Movement, and has become famous. We have, in fact, a Violin duet with a quiet accompaniment.

THIRD MOVEMENT. In spirit, style, and construction this is so like the First Movement as to call for little description.

The Solo Violins begin in imitation at a mere beat's distance, and keep up a vigorous and cheerful motion all through.

ORCHESTRA

Symphony, in D Minor (The 'Clock') .. Haydn

A FEW of Haydn's Symphonies have received nicknames—The Bear, The Hen, and so on, that are not always easy to account for. The clue to the nickname, The Clock, is not at once clear when the Symphony begins, for it is only in the Second Movement that we hear the 'tick tock' rhythm from which the work has taken its name.

The First Movement begins with the conventional slow Introduction, after which, quite inconspicuously, but most happily, follows a scampering, quick Movement, in which the Strings dash up and down, like a group of children chasing each other.

The Slow Movement has the 'clock' rhythm as an accompaniment to a charming First Violin Tune. This, with a Minor key episode, makes up the short piece.

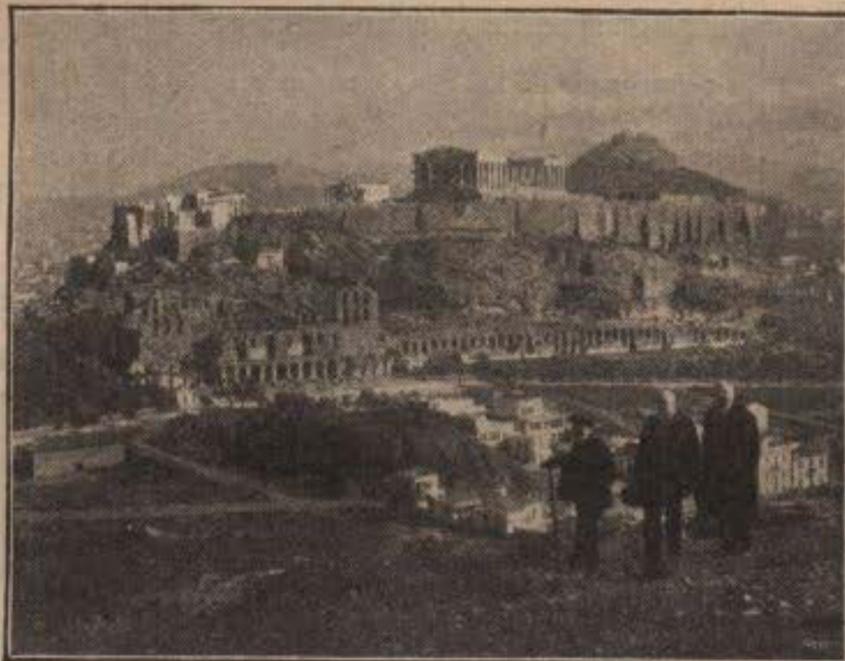

The Third Movement, the usual Minuet, is one of the countrified dances that Haydn loved to write.

The Fourth Movement has, as text, a passage first given out by Strings. It comes up several times, with intervening episodes, and finally is used as the basis of a Fugue, short but very briskly pursued. The Full Orchestra then gives it out in glory, and with a final scamper we come to the end of the Movement and of the Symphony.

TALKS OF THE MONTH.

Several important series of Talks begin this month. The attention of 5XX listeners is called particularly to that which Mr. Norman Walker is giving on Biology which will involve certain experiments which they can carry out at home.

LISTENERS will be interested to hear of the new series of broadcast talks which begin this month.

Among them are one or two departures from the ordinary scheme of things which should prove particularly attractive.

On Tuesdays, at 7.25 p.m., Professor E. N. da C. Andrade introduces a new series on 'Science in the Modern World.' These talks provide information on subjects not to be found in any text books, as they deal with the very latest contributions of science to our everyday life. Those who have read Professor Andrade's book on Engines will be prepared for some really attractive and stimulating talks. Also on Tuesdays, at 8.0 p.m., broadcast from Daventry 5XX only, there will be six talks on 'How to begin Biology,' by Mr. Norman Walker. Mr. Walker has a theory of his own about the teaching of science, and listeners are to have the opportunity of working actually with him by means of some simple experiments which he is going to suggest and which his talks will illustrate. He has prepared a pamphlet which gives a full account of each of his six talks, and further arrangements have been made for listeners to be able to procure a small parcel of materials to be used in the experiments which he suggests. This is something quite new, and should prove a most intriguing venture. The parcel of materials has been specially prepared under Mr. Walker's supervision, and it can be obtained, price 2s. 6d., post free, on application to Mr. Alfred Millard, c/o The B.B.C., Savoy Hill, W.C.2. You should write at once for your parcel so as to be well prepared for Mr. Norman Walker's first talk, which will be broadcast on Tuesday, November 6.

Other interesting talks starting shortly are a course of four talks on 'Amateur Dramatics,' by Mr. Geoffrey Gilbey and Mrs. Penelope Wheeler, which are primarily intended to interest younger listeners, especially members of Boys' and Girls' Clubs. These talks will be on Wednesdays, starting on October 24, and will be followed by a series on 'Salesmanship,' by Mr. C. C. Knights. This is another new departure in our programme which should prove of great interest to those listeners who are, in one way or another, interested in trade and commerce.

On Thursdays, Mr. G. D. H. Cole, the well-known W. E. A. tutor, who is Reader in Economics in the University of Oxford, starts a new series on 'Modern Britain in the Making.' His talks deal with that period of the history of England which we know as the great 'Industrial Revolution' from the days of Daniel Defoe to the days of Cobden and Bright. The pamphlet on his talks is full of rare illustrations and of useful advice to listeners who have formed groups and really want to study and discuss this subject.

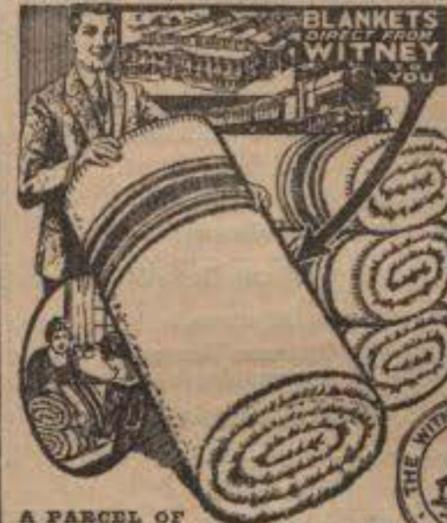

Another series of great importance is that on 'Tendencies in Industry Today.' This is a subject in which we are all interested and which affects us all. Lord Melchett gives the first talk and will be followed in turn by Mr. Walter M. Citrine, Mr. H. D. Henderson, Major Walter Elliot, Miss Lynda Grier, and the Rt. Hon. Sir Herbert Samuel. Here again a pamphlet is ready waiting for listeners, which can be had on application to the B.B.C. or any of its local stations.

We hope that many more groups will be formed at the fireside, and in clubs and schools, to get the best out of these talks and to test the exciting possibilities of frank discussion of the many different subjects provided in the programme.

PAUSE (Suspense). He is filled with

He hangs up his lute with a green ribbon upon it, for the song that once came to him comes no more. His heart is too full for song.

Mit dem grünen Lautenbande (With the Green Ribbon). He remembers that she said her favourite colour is green. He will cut off the green ribbon and send it to her, as a symbol of everlasting love.

Der Jäger (The Huntsman). A rival appears, and the miller is jealous.

Eifersucht und Stolz (Jealousy and Pride).
Why does the brook rage so? It is because the rival has come, and it is sympathizing with the miller? He bids it turn back and upbraid the faithless maiden; but, he adds, don't tell her of my pain.

Die liebe Farbe (The Favourite Colour). He meditates sadly on his favourite colour, green—the colour that she loved, and the colour of the huntsman's coat. He is a huntsman now. The hunt must end in death, and the green turf will cover him.

SANGER'S CIRCUS—STAGED BY BASIL DEAN.

The second in the series of talks by well-known figures of the theatre will be broadcast tonight by Mr. Basil Dean. This picture shows the supper scene in the present production of The Constant Nymph (of which Mr. Dean is both producer and part-author), with Mr. Raymond Massey, as Lewis Dodd, second from the right, and Miss Jean Forbes-Robertson,

IF one were assessing the benefits conferred have to give a very high place to the ultra-violet

ray. The really marvellous healing qualities of the ray will be described by the Professor of talk.

- 7.25 Mr. GEOFFREY GILBEY and Mrs. PENELOPE
WHEELER: 'Amateur Dramatics—III, Some Stage Hints'

IN the third talk of this series Mrs. Wheeler discusses such entirely practical questions as the best size for the dramatic society's stage, lighting, scenery, and decoration. She goes on to consider such points as the best way to 'fake' cheap stage properties, the always difficult problem of costume, and the vital matter of make-up—always a trap for amateurs. She also explains the meaning of various common stage expressions.

AIMS AND IDEALS IN THE THEATRE

IF anyone were to be asked who was the best-known producer at present on the English stage, the answer, nine times out of ten, would be Mr. Basil Dean. Ever since his association with Mr. Rea, who first brought him to London, he has remained one of the most striking and interesting theatrical figures of the time; as interesting for his failures, such as his superb production of
Will Shakespeare, as for his successes such as Flecker's Hassan and The Constant Nymph. It is to be hoped that neither the film nor the talking-film will seduce him from the legiti-mate theatre. Actors speak of him with awe. What better compliment or testimonial can a producer desire?

LITTLE NELL AND HER GRANDFATHER

"Poor Nell!" murmured the old man. "Thy cheek is pale, and thine eyes heavy, but thou wilt soon be well again, and merry, too."

Iron Jelloids drive away depression, and fill those who take them with vigour and confidence.

If you would have radiant health, an elastic step and well-braced nerves, you must have healthy blood. To improve and strengthen the blood take Iron Jelloids. In cases of Anæmia and Weakness, Nerve Strain, Overwork, Convalescence, etc., in Men, Women, and Children, Iron Jelloids will be found a most valuable treatment. A ten days' treatment (costing 1/3) will convince you. Everyone should take Iron Jelloids now and again—they are the great Blood Enrichers.

Dr. R. O. wrote: "I find the preparation (Iron Jelloids) particularly serviceable and reliable."

Dr. L. R. wrote: "I find that my patients thoroughly appreciate Iron Jelloids."

Dr. A. H. R. wrote: "My wife finds Iron Jelloids very agreeable and easy to take."

Dr. O. A. H. wrote: "Iron Jelloids give the greatest satisfaction."

Wouldn't you like
NEW GREEN PEAS
for Dinner?

No need to have "greens" day after day this winter, you can enjoy New Green Peas now or at any time of the year with all their natural flavour, colour and sweetness, if you are careful to insist on having FARROW'S. FARROW'S PEAS are not only the most delightfully succulent and appetising of vegetables, but are remarkably nutritious. Indeed, they are one of the most wonderful foods that Nature provides, being exceedingly rich in what doctors call "proteins" and "vitamins." For this reason FARROW'S PEAS are particularly suitable for growing children and for adults whose daily occupations call for physical fitness and robust health. FARROW'S PEAS are grown from FARROW'S own selected seed on specially suitable soils, and possess the unique advantage of having a very thin skin. Consequently they are the easiest of all peas to cook and the sweetest and tenderest to eat. FARROW'S PEAS are gathered fresh and green, just when they are at perfection, and the only method of preservation is by sun drying. Thus they are saturated with sunshine, full of their original flavour, absolutely pure and free from all artificial preservatives and colouring matter.

After being carefully hand sorted to remove all imperfect peas, FARROW'S PEAS are packed in cardboard boxes with a boiling bag, pea soaking preparation and full cooking instructions to ensure your getting the most delicious and appetising dish you could imagine. Preparation is so simple a child can cook them to perfection.

They are so cheap—a 7½d. packet provides ample portions for 8 people.

FARROW'S PEAS are more nutritious than beef—use them and cut down your meat bill. FARROW'S PEAS are one of the world's delicacies—try them, there is a great treat in store for you. Avoid having substitutes "palmed off" on you; most of them are no more like FARROW'S PEAS than "chalk is like cheese."

If your grocer cannot supply, send us his name and address and 7½d. in stamps for a full-size packet. We will send it post free and arrange for your own grocer to stock or tell you the names of those who do. In packets 5½d. & 7½d. from all Grocers.

Invest your money in the Co-operative Permanent Building Society and it will earn a steady 2½% for you at once. The interest is credited to you monthly and paid to you once a year, or you may leave it to accumulate if you wish.

No Income Tax.
Interest is free of Income Tax to the investor, as the Society meets the tax liability.

Absolute Safety.
Every penny invested in the Co-operative Permanent is lent to borrowers—people who have borrowed money to buy their homes and are busy paying it back. Your money is not lent to one individual but to thousands. Nobody has ever lost a penny.

Withdrawal Easy.
You can withdraw up to £10 on demand. For larger sums, or complete withdrawal a few days' notice is required.

How to Invest.
Investments in the Co-operative Permanent Building Society are divided into £10 shares, and these shares never fluctuate in value. You can buy as many as you like outright or by instalments of a few shillings at a time. Write to-day and get full particulars without delay.

 Symphony No. 4, in B Flat . . . . . Beethoven

HAPPINESS came to Beethoven when, in 1806, he became engaged to the Countess Therese of Brunswick. The engagement, alas, came to nothing in the end, but for the time being the Composer was in bliss; and this Symphony, written soon after that happy period began, was surely affected by his joyful feelings, for it is one of the most exhilarating of all the nine Symphonies.

It is in four Movements.
FIRST MOVEMENT. A slow Introduction precedes the lively Movement, whose first main tune is heard on Strings and answered by Woodwind. The second main tune is a rustic little phrase in Bassoon, then Oboe, then high up in the Flute, which prolongs the Tune.

This leads into other tunes—first a boisterous one, then a quiet, conversational one in Woodwind. There is still more material, but this is the most important, and rules a delightful piece in which some attractive novelty is for ever cropping up.

SECOND MOVEMENT. This is in strict 'Sonata' form. It opens with a sustained, song-like first main tune in Strings. This is repeated by Woodwind, with decoration in Violins and piccato (plucked) accompaniment in the lower Strings. Afterwards, something of a climax is developed by full Orchestra. When this dies down, the Clarinet gives out the second main tune, another song-like melody. There is a soft string accompaniment. After this there is a very brief development section, followed by a regular recapitulation of the two main tunes.

THIRD MOVEMENT. A gay Minuet (with the usual 'Trio' as contrast in the middle) needs no special description. For once, however, Beethoven, after repeating his Minuet, gives both Minuet and Trio again, making a five-section piece.

FOURTH MOVEMENT. A glorious bit of the cheeriest Beethoven, this, woven out of the usual two main tunes (first going off at once, and second entering, after a full orchestral climax and a dying down of the excitement, quietly and expressively.)

2.30 BROADCAST TO SCHOOLS:

3.45 THE STATION TRIO:
 FRANK THOMAS (Violin); RONALD HARDING (Violoncello); HUBERT PENGELLY (Pianoforte)
 Trio in C Minor (1st Movement) . . . Mendelssohn

THE two Trios which Mendelssohn wrote for Piano, Violin and Cello do not rank among his most famous works, but they are admirable examples of his sincerity and tunefulness, and every Movement in them is put together with great accomplishment.

The First Movement of the C Minor Trio (the Composer's Op. 66, dedicated to Spohr) has capital vigour and good tunes.

 Paraphrase on 'Men of Harlech' (Welsh Rhapsody) . . . . . German

GERMAN'S Rhapsody, first produced at the Cardiff Festival of 1904, is built in four sections, roughly corresponding to the four Movements of a Symphony, though it has not quite the close development of themes which generally characterizes such a work.

The March is the Last Movement of the Rhapsody. It is founded on The Men of Harlech, fragments of which tune are heard from here, there and everywhere in the Orchestra; then the whole tune is given out, still softly. The excitement is cleverly worked up, a subsidence for a few moments leading to a still bigger climax, when the whole Orchestra is soon glorying in the March. Then the pace quickens, and the end is reached in a magnificent outburst of triumphant joy.

"If only I had a Private Income Like So-and-So—!"

We will help to make the wish "come true." Fill in and post the coupon for full details of a plan which, in addition to other great benefits, will bring you

£250 A YEAR FOR LIFE FROM AGE 55

Think of the happiness of knowing that at 55 years of age you will be entitled to a private income of £250 a year for the rest of your life or—if you prefer it—£3,000 in cash. Think of the relief of knowing that if, meantime, anything happens to you, your family will be provided for!

Such contentment of mind is easily within your reach. To-day you can take the first step towards it. By filling in and posting the inquiry form below, you will receive in a day or two a detailed plan showing how, at your present age and out of your present income, you can make this sure provision for your family and for your own later years. You make yearly or half-yearly deposits to the Sun of Canada of a sum you can easily afford out of your income. On each of these deposits you claim and receive substantial rebate of Income Tax. This is an additional clear saving.

Assuming the present rate of bonus continues, at 55 years of age you receive £250 a year for life. This private income is guaranteed to you, however long you live.

If you do not live to that age your family will receive a cash payment of £2,000, plus accumulated profits. If death be the result of an accident, they will receive £4,000, plus the accumulated profits.

If through illness or accident you are permanently incapacitated for earning a living deposits cease, and instead of making them you will receive £20 per month until reaching the age of 55, from which date you will receive £250 a year for the remainder of your life.

The assets of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada (the great Annuity Company) now exceed £82,000,000, and are under strict Government supervision. Why not share in the Company's phenomenal prosperity? You can do so by taking advantage of the Plan outlined.

NO LICENCES IN AMERICA!

But the Listener Pays Just the Same.

$300,000 per hour—Nearly 700 Stations—The Vogue of the Many-Valve Set—Subtlety in Advertising—But Who Pays in the End?

IT is always surprising to me that so many British listeners seem to resent the enforced annual payment of 10s. for a licence. Those who do not take exception to the actual licence are as particular about the fare which they receive in return for it as if the sum had been not 10s. but £10. 'Look at the United States!' said one listener to me the other day. 'American listeners have an enormous choice of programmes, for which they do not have to pay a penny!' It so happened that, following a recent tour of the U.S.A., I was in a position to correct the common fallacy that listeners 'over there' receive their broadcast programmes free, gratis, and for nothing.

The American listener does not pay $2.50 to the broadcasting authorities or to the Government for the provision of programmes, nor does he pay a tax on his receiving set. He pays by his response to the indirect advertising of American industries. The majority of the programmes are supplied by manufacturers who have added this means of publicity to their ordinary newspaper advertising. These programmes, with which the names of the manufacturers and their products are coupled, create goodwill among the radio audience. Some firms spend as much as $300,000 in a year on their weekly hour of radio entertainment, and the money so spent is charged to their advertising account.

Sponsors of broadcast programmes in America include manufacturers of all kinds of merchandise, principally articles of everyday use—soap, motor-cars, batteries, baking powder, chewing gum, and the like. It is possible that there may be some listeners who do not purchase these articles. They are the only listeners who get their broadcasting free; the rest, by buying the products advertised, pay for the advertisement.

To give you some idea of the vast proportions of American broadcasting, let me quote a few figures. The National Broadcasting Company alone has this year sold to advertisers programme hours to the value of $50,000,000. This time is only a small percentage of the total transmission hours of forty-eight stations. There are 693 stations 'on the air' every evening in the U.S.A. It is plain that the American listener pays more than his English brother, the total receipts from whose licences do not total much more than $5,000,000 per annum. It must be remarked also that, in addition to paying for 'space' on the ether, the American advertiser must provide his own artists, orchestras, etc. Many millions of dollars are spent on their fees. All this money spent in advertising must of necessity govern the price of products advertised. The listener, in fact, pays.

It is, however, true that the American listener gets a greater choice of programmes for his money. Yet in this case also he pays. The average receiver in use over there has not less than five valves, and thus, wherever situated, should bring in several stations. There is no dignity of poverty in the States; a man must compete with his neighbours; he must have the latest model, whether of motor-car or radio set. Why, he argues, should he do without either when both can be had on the 'deferred payment' system? If his neighbour buys an 'eight-tube' receiver Babbitt must do the same. This spirit of emulation, whether you admire it or not, makes for a prosperous radio and automobile trade.

Whether the American listener gets better value for his money in actual quality of programme is a question of personal taste. There is one fallacy regarding American programmes which I should like to explode—that they contain much material which directly advertises goods on the market. This is not now the case. Radio advertising, like newspaper advertising, has increased greatly in subtlety. The old days of 'Buy more so and so!' are past. An advertiser sponsoring a programme realizes that to try the patience of the listener with continuous eulogistic description of his commodity would be to imperil the goodwill built up by such heavy expenditure. He cannot risk offending his prospective customer or driving him to seek refuge on some other of the many available wavelengths. Today he is content, in most cases, with a simple announcement at the beginning and end of the programme that 'this concert is provided by the makers of so-and-so.'

To what a pitch this subtlety in advertising, this desire not to intrude offensively upon the susceptibilities of the listener, has been carried can be judged from the following instance. The makers of a toilet requisite named 'DA——' contracted to use a chain of stations for one hour per week for thirteen weeks. Neither their name nor that of their product was mentioned during the series. At the conclusion of the first programme the announcer requested those of the audience who were interested in the concert and curious as to the sponsor of it, to remember the letter D, and listen the following week at the same hour for the second letter. At the end of the second broadcast the letter A was mentioned, and so on until the last letter of the product had been broadcast and the word 'DA——' spelled out. Listeners then knew to whom they were indebted for the programmes. Thus by means of thirteen broadcasts the name of the preparation was firmly stamped on the minds of listeners who had had the patience and interest to follow the whole series of concerts. This was 'good advertising,' but it cost money. Though the price of 'DA——' may not have been increased, the day of its reduction had been postponed by the expenditure of so much money. The listener had paid.

'Putting publicity across.' This dance band of 'Troubadours,' which bears the name of a famous brand of tooth paste, is very popular with 'radio fans,' and has no doubt contributed enormously to the advertisement of its parent product. The costume of the players is of the same two colours as the tubes in which the tooth paste is sold.

This afternoon's talk is the first of a series in which representative women from various professions and occupations will describe their day's work, and to start the series, Miss Margaret Bondfield (who was Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Labour in Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's Government of 1924), will describe a Parliamentary day.

FOR the fifth time Sir Harry Lauder comes to the microphone to let the world of listeners share in all the joys of his humour and his pathos that have so often delighted his audiences in both hemispheres. He is, par excellence, the artist who needs no introduction and no programme. Everybody knows him, and knows that all his songs are good. It is enough to announce quite simply that Sir Harry Lauder will be on the air tonight.

Harlequin and Co., like all the younger immortals, readily adapt themselves to a new environment.

In the United States, their familiar, but rather noticeable costumes discarded in deference to trans-Atlantic civilization, and sponsored by two well-known American dramatists, they pursue their inconclusive love affairs, with only the slightest change of style.

7.0 Mr. FRANCIS TOYE: 'Music in the Theatre'

ONE reassuring feature about the recent growth of talking films and musical accompaniments delivered intact from producer to exhibitor is that the importance of carefully-chosen music as an ally to a film or a play is being more than ever stressed. The musical side of the 'flesh-and-blood' theatre is, however, at present in a very healthy state, and Mr. Toye seldom fails to find some theatre music of real merit to discuss in his fortnightly talks.

- 7.25 Mr. G. D. H. COLE: 'Modern Britain in the Making—I, Before the Great Change'

LIVING, as we do, in a society almost completely industrialized, it is hard for any but the professional historian to recreate for himself the very different Britain of the eve of the Industrial Revolution. In this new series of talks Mr. G. D. H. Cole, the economic historian and biographer of Cobbett, will describe how modern Britain came to be and out of what elements our present civilization was made. Basing his series largely on the evidence of contemporary writers (such representative figures as Burke, Cobbett, and Paine), he will start this evening by describing the England of that father of journalism,

Why the price is printed in big bold figures!

—because it is not merely the biggest of British-built speakers selling at 35/-.

—because it is not merely the most powerful instrument of its size. The other reasons are far more significant.

It is an Amplion speaker—designed by Amplion engineers and produced at the great new Amplion works.

It is the first triumph of Amplion's new super-production policy and only because it is made in thousands is the low price possible.

Wonderful value—and the performance is equally wonderful, clear-toned and true.

This Violin Concerto, the only one Brahms ever wrote, was dedicated to him, and Joachim, besides taking a great interest in its composition, and advising about some points of fiddle writing, himself wrote the cadenzas for it.

ORCHESTRA

Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks Richard Strauss

TILL EULENSPIEGEL is, of course, the legendary highspirited joker of the thirteenth century, well enough known in this country since Queen Elizabeth's days as Till Owlglass.

In a Prologue Strauss presents two aspects of Till. The Violins speak of his pensive, gentler side, and the Horn, in its capricious, bounding tone, tells us of his roguishness.

His adventures include a mad ride through the market place, upsetting, everything, then a masquerade as a monk (in which guise he preaches a mock sermon); next he falls in love, and after that 'pulls the legs' of a lot of dry old pedants. When he tires of them, he goes off whistling a jaunty street song.

A high moment is reached when the whole Orchestra gives forth the second Till theme, slowly and majestically: 'Till at the height of his glory.'

But at the last Till is arrested and tried. His protests of innocence are useless. He is hanged. (Trombone drop, Clarinet shriek, and Flute trill.)

Last comes the Epilogue, with its mingled thoughts of wistfulness and gentle smiles. After all, we muse, he was an ingratiating rogue, with something lovable in him.

NERVES AND DIGESTION COMPLETELY UPSET

—but Cassell's saved her—

"I had suffered for years with severe indigestion"—writes Mrs. C. Rex, of 4, Charlotte Terrace, Barnsbury, N.1. "The pain I endured sometimes was such that I felt afraid to eat anything. Wind came in volumes and spitting headaches hardly ever ceased. I was dreadfully nervous, too, would jump at a sound, and I never knew what it was to have a real night's rest. The complaint was taking all the life out of me. One day my sister urged me to take Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I am glad I took her advice, for my health began to improve from the first dose. I could sleep, then appetite improved and I could eat without having to suffer. Now I feel really well and strong."

Cassell's a real tonic

Commonsense tells us that weak nerves need nourishment, poor digestions need strengthening and thin blood needs enriching. A course of Cassell's does all this; because Cassell's are a splendid concentrated tonic. They contain Hypophosphates, digestive enzymes, Stomachics and Blood Nutrients—valuable factors in the building up of new vitality and health. Read Mrs. Rex's letter over again.

The Next Hallé Concert.

THE fifth Hallé Concert, on Thursday, November 15, will be conducted by a guest conductor, Ernest Ansermet. The catholicity of the repertoire of this famous Swiss conductor, is well known, ranging, as it does, from Stravinsky (whose work Ansermet has always ardently championed and finely interpreted) to most of the Old Masters. On this occasion the chief item in his programme will be Beethoven's Eighth Symphony. To many, this work is the most popular, as it is certainly the most architecturally sound, of all the Beethoven symphonies. Yet it met with a very poor reception at its first performance—a fact which produced from the disappointed composer the embittered comment, 'Just because it is so much better!' The concert is entirely orchestral. It opens with Weber's Oberon—but the broadcast does not begin until 7.45, with an arrangement by Arthur Bliss of Purcell's Suite of Airs and Dances. This latter arrangement should prove a particularly interesting co-operation, in view of the fact that such contrapuntal moderns as Bliss might well lay claim to a spiritual descent from our Elizabethan composers. Debussy's Two Nocturnes and Rimsky-Korsakov's increasingly popular Scheherazade conclude a singularly attractive evening. The whole concert will be relayed to London and Daventry.

Farewell to Dr. Temple.

VERY soon, as you know, Dr. Temple will be leaving Manchester to take up his new duties as Archbishop of York. A very real interest, therefore, attaches to the special Armistice Day Service that will be relayed from the Cathedral on November 11, at 7.45 p.m. At this service Dr. Temple will deliver the address, and it will be his last broadcast as Bishop of Manchester. During his tenure of that office, Dr. Temple has several times broadcast, and his many listeners, whilst regretting his departure, will look forward to hearing him some day soon from York.

No charge for the Guide to the World's GREAT BOOKS

YOU are offered in return for the Coupon below a Free Guide that is a most compact and trustworthy index to the world of books. Do not miss it, for it will always be of use to you in your reading.

714 Masterpieces of the World's Literature

The Guide briefly describes more than seven hundred masterpieces of literature, and shows how conveniently and enjoyably you can acquaint yourself with every one of these by reading the remarkable epitomes which constitute "The World's Great Books in Outline"

in 7 Fine Volumes 900 Illustrations

When you have read the outline of any book in the collection, you know the original book. Some of the outlines have been actually written by the author himself: others by the greatest living authority on the classical writer, or by the best scientific authority on its subject.

But in each case, though the words of the author are used, what you get is not a series of extracts or abridgements, but the essence of the complete work in outline that reads like a complete book.

Do not suppose they are all learned or difficult books—they include the best stories and adventures ever written. They cover the whole field of the world's literature, and the Free Guide names and gives you a short description of each one. It tells you, too, how, thanks to "The World's Great Books in Outline" you can read a standard work in half-an-hour.

Think what this means to the busy man or woman who knows the joy of literature. Now, under the critical editorship of Mr. J. A. Hammerton, 714 books, the best worth reading, have been condensed into only seven volumes—beautifully bound, charmingly illustrated and easily acquired. You pay only 5/- with your order and the whole of the seven volumes come carriage paid to your home.

Prompt subscribers are also offered a Free 10/6 book "An Outline of English Literature." Further particulars of this splendid gift offer are given in the Free Guide.

The Third Concert of the Season of B.B.C. Symphony Concerts

The Hallé Orchestra conducted by SIR HAMILTON HARTY

Notes on the Three Symphonies of the Programme.

PART ONE

(Relayed to London and other Stations)

Unfinished Symphony ..... Schubert
Allegro moderato; Andante con moto

FIRST MOVEMENT (Moderately quick). After a few bars of mysterious introductory music, for Violoncellos and Double Basses alone, the first main tune enters, a rapid one, for Strings, with, soon after, a mournful strain added above by Oboe and Clarinet together.

After a time we come to a few bars of link, for Horns and Bassoons, and then the Violoncellos bring in the cheerful second main tune.

Then Schubert builds up a Movement in which he nobly expresses his deeper, graver emotions. There surely never was a more sincere and touching blend of sadness and wistfulness, alternating with tender optimism.

SECOND MOVEMENT (Gently moving along). This is one of the most beautiful outpourings of serene and comforting music ever written.

After two bars of Introduction for Horns and Bassoon, with Double Basses (plucked) beneath them, we reach the first main tune, flowing beautifully off the bows of the Violins. After a time there comes a little link, this time for Violin alone, and then the Second Main Tune, a slow one for Clarinet; with delicate syncopation in the Strings beneath. From these twin shoots the Movement grows.

Seventh Symphony

Beethoven

Poco sostenuto, vivace;
Allegretto; Presto; Allegro con brio

BEETHOVEN'S Seventh Symphony had its first performance at a concert given in Vienna in 1813 for the benefit of soldiers wounded in the battle of Hanau (where Napoleon defeated the Austrians and Bavarians).

The FIRST MOVEMENT opens with a fine slow Introduction, of some length. In time the music dies down into a soft expectancy and quietly creeps into the Movement proper (Vivace—rapid and lively). The jolly, dance-like first main tune originates with the Flute. Before long, all the players have caught the infection of it. When they have had a good time with it, the first Violin enters with the second main tune, as gay as the first. So the Movement goes on, developing these themes, then recapitulating them, and closing with a thrilling Coda, beginning very softly and working up to a fine climax.

SECOND MOVEMENT. (Allegretto—At a moderate, cheerful pace). The first main tune, in a minor key, is solemn and touching. It is not difficult to imagine how the thoughts of the audience at the first performance turned to the wounded and to those bereaved. A consoling major melody soon enters, and with alternations of sorrow and hope the Movement proceeds.

THIRD MOVEMENT. (Presto, very quick). Every thought of sadness is wafted away in a trice. The reaction is violent, but delightful. The Movement is a Scherzo with a contrasting Trio, arranged Scherzo-Trio-Scherzo-Trio-Scherzo. The Wind instruments' tune in the Trio is a pilgrims' hymn in common use in Lower Austria in Beethoven's day, and perhaps still known there.

FOURTH MOVEMENT. The fun continues, with other qualities mingled, a rude boisterousness being one. The form is the same as that of the First Movement—statement of two main tunes, development of them, repetition of them. The first main tune is easily recognized because (after two brief bars of preliminary shouting to one another of the Strings and Wind) the Movement opens with it. The second main tune enters in the violins; it has a sort of quick, limping gait, is in the minor, and never gets far without a rude interrupting chord from Wind and Drum.

PART TWO

(Relayed to 5GB only)

Symphony No. 4 in E Minor ..... Brahms

ALTHOUGH Brahms' position in the world of music was quite secure long before this, the last of his four symphonies, appeared, the work itself was not received with unmixed approval. It struck even his ardent admirers as rather austere and grim, and it must be admitted that of the four, it is the least easy to understand and enjoy on a first hearing.

The first movement opens at once with its principal theme. There is no difficulty in recognizing this. It is of itself a quite simple melody, as indeed many of Brahms' melodies are. It lends itself exceptionally well to variation, and is presented in the course of the movement in many interesting guises, not all of which are easy to recognize as springing from it. Almost immediately after it has first been heard, a little flowing tune grows out of it in a very natural way; it leads no less naturally to a sturdy emphatic little figure which will be found to have a very large say right through the course of the movement.

Sir HAMILTON HARTY.

It appears many times later, sometimes alone, sometimes as a connecting link between other themes, and sometimes along with them. The next important theme to notice is easily recognized: it is a fine big sweeping tune which horns and 'cellos play together when it is first heard. The rich effect of combining these two big-voiced instruments had been exploited by Brahms in the last movement of his third Symphony. One more theme in this movement is to be noted. It is begun by flute, clarinet and horn, and their opening phrase is answered by the oboe. His bit of the tune begins with an upward running triplet leading to a scale which drops gently downwards in steps. With these in mind the listener should recognize much of the beauty of the symphony's texture.

In the next movement Brahms shows us his more simple and tender side. The main tune, which is heard at the very beginning, is at once gracious and wistful, and has a rhythm which makes it easy to remember. There is a second subject, running more smoothly and more happy in character. The third movement is also quite simple; it corresponds to the usual scherzo with a contrasted middle section after which the first part returns.

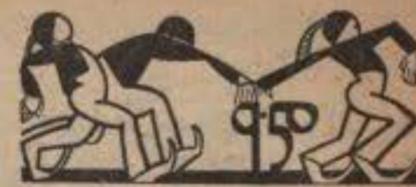

In the last movement Brahms uses an old form known as the Passacaglia; it is all built up on variations of a simple eight-bar tune heard at the beginning. This sometimes forms the melody, sometimes it is the bass on which another melody is built up, and sometimes it almost disappears in the fabric of music which is woven about it. But it is always there as the real basis of a very splendid movement. It was the last thing Brahms wrote for orchestra alone and forms a noble climax to his purely orchestral work.

THE champion of a losing side usually suffers oblivion regardless of his merits. Robert E. Lee, the Confederate general in the American Civil War, has been luckier than most. His brilliance as a soldier and the nobility of his character have been recognised by historians, and Mr. John Drinkwater, the author of the play that made Lee's great rival, Abraham Lincoln, familiar to the British public, went on five years later to make a drama of the career of Lee himself. This play, a broadcast version of which will be performed this afternoon, was produced at the Regent Theatre in 1923.

Suite of Ballet Music ('The Sicilian Vespers')
..... Verdi

MORE than fifty years lie between the production of Verdi's first Opera and that of his last. His latest music was an amazing advance on the earlier, but one characteristic was his through life—his great gift of typical Italian melody. It is for melody (and, one may almost say, melody alone) that we still prize Verdi's earlier Operas.

Of such is The Sicilian Vespers (I Vespri Siciliani), which was produced at the Paris Opera during the Exhibition of 1855, but which, for all its auspicious start, was never greatly successful as a whole. Its theme is the massacre of the French invaders of Sicily, who were murdered during Vespers at Eastertide, 1282.

The four scenes in the complete Ballet represent respectively Winter, Spring, Summer and Autumn.

Will you be young at Sixty?

Remarkable Statements by Sir OLIVER LODGE and Prof. LEONARD HILL

Brilliant Discovery by eminent Swiss Scientist
E. BUERGI, M.D., Professor of Medicine at Berne University

PHYLLOSAN<sup>Regd.</sup>

"The Most Wonderful Substance in our World"

A New and Natural Source of Vital Energy and Re-creative Power for all Mankind—of special significance to all Men and Women over Forty!

Sir OLIVER LODGE, as reported in the press, said the other day that "a century hence people will live to five score years and be useful all the time."

Professor LEONARD HILL, at a recent conference, prophesied that "longevity would be a common thing in the future and the idea of a man retiring at sixty, on the ground that he was played out, would become an absurdity."

E. BUERGI, M.D., Professor of Medicine at Berne University, Switzerland, devoted many years of research to this subject. As the result, he has discovered PHYLLOSAN, which is a concentrated extract of a natural substance which scientists agree is the source of all vital energy. Sir ARTHUR SHIPLEY, F.R.S., described it as "the most wonderful substance in our world."

Prolonged tests in hospitals and in private practice all over the world have proved that PHYLLOSAN has a remarkably revitalizing effect upon the whole human organism. PHYLLOSAN is immediately absorbed into the blood, enriching it with revitalizing elements which are carried to every cell in the body, stimulating the replacement of worn-out cells, accelerating the removal of toxins and waste, building up reserves of energy, restoring appetite, and increasing all the physical and vital forces of the body.

We are as old as our arteries. Of paramount importance to all men and women over forty is the power of PHYLLOSAN to rejuvenate the arteries by restoring their elasticity and cleansing them of accumulated deposits of lime salts, reducing and preventing high blood pressure and strengthening the action of the heart—thus removing some of the most grievous and dangerous symptoms of premature old age.

PHYLLOSAN is not a drug! It is not a "patent medicine." It is the result of many years of brilliant research and experiment by one of the world's most eminent medical scientists.

If you are beginning "to feel your age," if you are run-down, overworked, lacking in vitality and energy, if you suffer from hardened arteries or heart weakness—start taking PHYLLOSAN to-day! In a fortnight you will find there is a new zest in work, a new joy in living.

Thousands of Doctors are prescribing PHYLLOSAN!

Every claim made for PHYLLOSAN is based upon the results of closely observed tests in hospitals, clinics and sanatoria. These results have again been confirmed in numberless cases treated in private practice by doctors all over the world. More than a million prescriptions for PHYLLOSAN have been written in a single year.

THE LANCET: "A well-known natural product playing an important part."

THE PRACTITIONER: "Clinical experiments show that PHYLLOSAN brings about an increase of physical and vital forces."

THE MEDICAL WORLD: "Improvement under the use of Phyllosan is marked and progressive . . . the brilliant discovery of Professor Buergi . . . it has been widely used, and both scientists and physicians agree as to its value."

THE THERAPEUTIC MONTHLY: "Phyllosan is in no sense a quack medicine, but an extremely reliable remedy."

Release from the Tyranny of Drugs!

Self-drugging is one of the evils of the age. PHYLLOSAN is not a drug. It contains no strychnine, no deleterious drug or animal extract, is non-constipating, causes no reaction, no gastric disturbance, no injurious after-effects. It is a natural restorative and revitalizing substance—"the most wonderful substance in our world." Start to-day taking two or three tablets of PHYLLOSAN three times a day before meals, and you will soon feel so fit and well that you will have no need of drugs of any kind.

Compton Mackenzie on 'Siamese Cats'

was empty she would eject them with insults. Pauline lived in a very beautiful white house, half way up a cliff eight hundred feet high, whence she could watch dolphins swimming in the peacock-blue Mediterranean, a sheer four hundred feet below. She could sit on a columned terrace and look down where the Emperor Augustus landed nearly two thousand years ago; and she could decide, like him, that of so many beautiful small islands Capri was, taking everything into consideration that goes to make up a best island, the best of all. There is no time to give more than one picture of Capri and Pauline, and that shall be of a March afternoon when the peach-blossom is in full rosy bloom everywhere and the ground is splashed with wine-red and purple anemones. Pauline is running along beside me on a low grey wall, one of those low grey walls the colour of which seems to have been specially chosen to set off the peach-blossoms. I tell her she must go home, as I have to make a call. She gives that curiously, low deep Siamese response which I suppose I must call a miaow, but which is a much superior noise to any ordinary miaow, and which with a wag or flirt of the tail any Siamese will answer to its name.

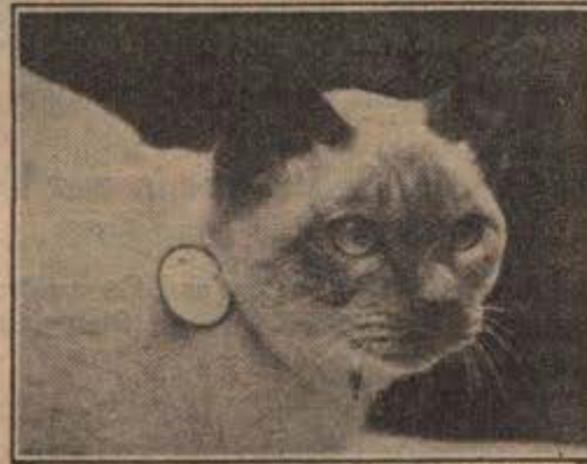

When I lived on islands that were shared with other people, I had to be content with one Siamese at a time, but now that I live on an island of my own I am able to keep eleven Siamese cats, each one of which has a marked personality of its own. Jethou is a very small island indeed, only fifty acres, a mere green hump beside such a neighbour as Guernsey, but yet with most of the things on it that human beings or cats want. There is a garden where I shall have as many flowers out at Christmas as many gardens are proud to display now. There is a library with nearly ten thousand books and all the gramophone records that anybody could want. There is a wireless which nearly always seems to behave itself.

There are sands which set off the Siamese cats to perfection when they walk on them like miniature lions in the desert.

The rabbits have never left the place since they were first put there by the Elizabethan governor who celebrated the theft of the island from the Benedictines by such an act of selfish stupidity. I need hardly say that the cats do not agree with me. They think that Elizabethan governor was a fine fellow. I suppose I ought to mention some of the faults of the Siamese cats before I stop. They are very jealous, and suffer acutely from it. They are—yes, I'm afraid they are—very greedy. They think that Samarcand rugs were only woven to be pulled to pieces by their own sharp claws. They have no idea of doing without something they want, and if they want anything they make a noise till they get it. But what are their faults compared with their virtues—with their sense of humour, their fidelity, their dauntless courage (unless they think they've seen a ghost, when they will tear away like so many animated brushes), their playfulness (they will retrieve a piece of paper as many times as you will throw it for them), their conversational powers (if you have Siamese cats you must talk to them a lot), their awareness of themselves so that each one of my eleven knows its own name, their love of people rather than place; their honesty (by which I mean they'll take a lobster off the table in front of you), their continuous passionate interest in all that is going on around them, and their depth of affection, which they are able to show in so many exquisite ways? ## Notes from Southern Stations.

Cardiff.

THE Newport Choral Society has the same experience as many other such societies, namely, it finds it hard to attract a sufficient number of men with good voices to balance the women applicants. In fact, an official ruefully declared "You cannot keep the women out!" Despite this difficulty, the choir numbers some two hundred strong and gives the first concert of the season on Tuesday, November 13. This is the thirty-first season, and Mr. Arthur Sims, the conductor, has held office since 1904. The society is mainly a Newport one, but there is a contingent from Pontypool of over forty members. This group is the relic of a choir which took part in the Eisteddfod at Pontypool. Although Monmouth is not exclusively Welsh it is not surprising that the Welsh element preponderates in this society. Some years ago it gave the first performance of Freedom, by Cyril Jenkins, at the Queen's Hall, with the London Symphony Orchestra under the conductorship of Albert Coates. The artists at this concert will be Miriam Licette, Hubert Eisdell, and Harold Williams, and the work given will be scenes from the Song of Hiawatha.

IN the third talk on English Classics and their Welsh Associations on Thursday, November 15, Mr. Ian Kyrle Fletcher will deal with Lord Herbert of Chisbury. He was the elder brother of the more famous George Herbert and is one of the most interesting figures of the 17th century. By birth a true Welshman, he has, ironically enough, become for all Englishmen the epitome of his age. With all the more noticeable qualities of the courtier, the bravo, the philosopher, and the poet, he is a disconcerting problem for those who like to pack their historical puppets into neat pigeonholes. No such attempt will be made in the present talk; it will attempt to focus attention upon those fundamental qualities of character and style which have placed 'The Autobiography' amongst the most readable of books. Mr. Kyrle Fletcher is at present at work on a book on modern developments of stagecraft.

IT has been the fashion to regard rural industries as relics of medievalism, to be tolerated on account of their link with the past but not to be regarded as making a serious contribution to modern problems. Mr. A. Watkin Jones, Secretary of the Provisional Council for Welsh Rural Development, will give a talk on Friday, November 16, on Crafts in the Age of Machinery, and he hopes to show that those engaged in handicrafts in country districts can make them a sound business proposition. Apart from this he will show the value of handicrafts as a hobby for those engaged in factory work, for they are frequently employed in making parts of articles and do not have the pleasure and satisfaction that comes from complete responsibility. He will also deal with the general effect on social life of having a certain number of people making beautiful and useful things. The talk will have a very practical bias, for Mr. Watkin Jones will illustrate it by referring to possible and actual handicrafts in South Wales. The Rural Industries Bureau sent a representative to South Wales to make inquiries about the Quilting industry in April and as a result is arranging for an exhibition and sale of work. The inquiry was made in order to find work which could be done in the homes in the depressed areas; and this activity has resulted in a request for a talk on Quilting which it is hoped to give at a later date.

ATALK on Constantinople will be given by Mr. Isaac J. Williams on Tuesday, November 13, as the second of his series under the title of 'The Marvels of the Mediterranean.'

HOW to choose a School Play is the title of the second of the course of talks on School Plays given by Miss Consuelo de Reyes in the Broadcast to Schools series on Mondays. This talk, which will be given on November 12, will show how the history of the town or village in which the school is situated can be dramatized. Advice will be given on the possibility of improving the temporary theatre, and the relation of actors to audience will be considered. Miss de Reyes was formerly lecturer in Drama at University College, Exeter, and has travelled widely as a University Extension Lecturer. Her chief work is that of Warden of the Little Theatre at Citizen House, Bath, and there, classes of young children, of older boys and girls, and of adults are held nightly and plays are produced by each section. All stage sets, curtains, properties, and scenic effects are made by the players themselves in the carpentry rooms and studios, while an enormous collection of costumes of all periods is available for hire by schools and societies. In addition to this series of talks Miss de Reyes is broadcasting from Plymouth on Drama in Adult Education.

AN Orchestral programme, of which the first part will be given from Cardiff and the second from Manchester, has been arranged for Sunday afternoon, November 11. Cardiff will be represented by the National Orchestra of Wales with Tudor Davies (tenor), and Manchester by the Northern Wireless Orchestra with Carl Fuchs (violoncello).

MISS KATHLEEN FREEMAN, whose recent novel, 'Quarrelling with Lewis,' won such favourable criticism, is giving a talk on 'Pythagoras,' on Monday, November 12. Miss Freeman is Greek Lecturer at Cardiff University and has given many talks from Cardiff.

Plymouth.

AT 8.45 p.m. on Sunday, November 11, an appeal will be broadcast from the Plymouth Studio by the Rev. Edwin Davies, Vicar of Charles Church, Plymouth, on behalf of Hampton House Home, Plymouth.

The second talk in the series on Drama by Miss C. M. de Reyes, Producer, The Little Theatre, Citizen House, Bath, will be broadcast from the Plymouth Station on Tuesday, November 13. Her subject will be 'The Value of Drama in Adult Education,' in which she will speak of drama as a means of recreation and of self-expression in Community Groups and Institutions.

At 3.45 p.m. on Thursday, November 15, the Rt. Rev. J. H. B. Masterman, Bishop of Plymouth, will give the first of a series of talks from the Plymouth Station on 'Devonshire Adventurers,' the subject of his first talk being 'Sir William Hawkins.'

Bournemouth.

ON Tuesday, November 13, Mr. H. S. Carter will broadcast a talk from Bournemouth on 'The Ancient Port of Poole.' Occupied by Roman, Saxon, Dane, and Norman, Poole, with its old quayside and land-locked waters, conjures up memories of invader, crusader, pirate, smuggler, and trader, all of whom have played their part in the town's long drama.

On Thursday, November 15, Mr. George Dance will give a talk on 'Roses.'

'WINTER Sport in the North of England' is the title of a talk to be broadcast from Stoke on Tuesday evening, November 13, and relayed to all Stations in the Northern Grouping.

A NEW DISCOVERY for the DEAF at the BRITISH MEDICAL MEETING

It has been proved none work more earnestly and consistently for fresh discoveries than the Dr. and Scientist—experimenters and experience bring forth new lights on old subjects, and what was looked upon as the best possible last year is surpassed to-day. Until recent years those suffering from deafness and its often accompanying aggravating headaches were the least bothered about. Anyone deaf was looked upon as somehow being sub-normal—a trumpet or tube was the only help obtainable—or they just had to hold "hand-to-car"—often resulting in complete isolation whether young, middle-aged or old. It was equally ineffective and conspicuous to be deaf and be shouted at or to use a cumbersome contrivance.

THAT DAY HAS GONE—a young and enthusiastic acoustician has taken the interests of the deaf to heart (Doctors do all possible for a cure) so that even if your case has been pronounced incurable and all other efforts proved in vain—YOU YET MAY HEAR—take heart and try—Mr. R. H. Dent has opened the door to hearing by means of his newest invention—rejuvenation of the auditory system by natural use—a method described by eminent men as combines all the deaf have ever wanted or hoped for. Inconspicuous. True-to-tone results. Hearing at all ranges and angles, simple, even whispers distinct. Hands free. You forget your deafness, remove strain and hear all the while, conversation, music, wireless, a boon for indoor and outdoor in day, evening, at sports, clothes—for church, bridge, touring, etc., also enabling thousands of deaf children to attend and benefit at school, and men and women at their homes and work, for hard-of-hearing or so-called "stose" deafness and head-noise of recent or long standing.

Within the reach of all by reason of its simplicity and reasonable standard prices. "Ardeente" has been proven never to let you down. The ONLY INDIVIDUAL method—entirely different, uncopyable and guaranteed.

INVISIBLY SUPPORTED

WITHOUT RUBBER

No Bandages! Perfect Comfort!

At last every sufferer from Varicose Veins can obtain a stocking which, whilst giving full support to the weakened veins, is perfectly comfortable in wear, does not heat or give off any odour. Has not the unsightly appearance of the usual bandages or elastic stockings. On the contrary, the New Compri-Vena stocking makes ungainly legs slim and shapely and is undetectable under even the finest silk hose.

Owing to their perfect scientific construction, Compri-Vena stockings exercise the correct amount of pressure and maintain their elasticity throughout long and constant wear.

Read the following letter received from a sufferer. This and hundreds of others are open for inspection at any time:

"I received the stockings and am delighted with them. They are a beautiful fit, elegant, cool, and such a wonderful support, and are really absolutely invisible under sheer silk hose. I will send for another pair and I expect by that time I may want a different size, as my legs do not swell at all now."

Write or call to-day for full particulars and self-measurement form to Compri-Vena, Ltd. (R.T.12), Evelyn House, 62, Oxford Street, London, W.1.

NACHTVIOLEN (Gillyflowers) is a gentle threnody to the days that were. Cull your rue to spice your sorrow, Pansies if you fear the morrow, But when sorrow's deepest well is dry Gillyflowers for memory.
Frühlingsglaube (Faith in Spring). A lovely little rhapsody of delight in Spring, with its promise and proof of new life, and its call to the care-filled heart to rejoice and face the future with good cheer.
Rastlose Liebe (Restless Love).—The title has its counterpart in Schubert's music, which has an unquiet accompaniment and fails to settle down in any one key until the last page, on which the words 'Crown of life, Joy without rest, thou art Love,' are much repeated in the key of C Major.

SCOTT and LANCHESTER.

- Overture, 'The Siege of Corinth' ..... Rossini
- IN 1820 Rossini produced an Opera, Mahomet II, which was not a success. He had done extremely well with his earlier works, Tancredi, The Barber of Seville (his first opera) and others, but nearly every composer has a disappointment now and again. Like a careful, economical soul, Rossini saved up Mahomet, and when he was engaged to conduct Opera in Paris, served it up again as The Siege of Corinth. Then it was a success.

Scenes from the Scottish Highlands .. Bantock
Adagio, Minuet and Gigue ..... Mozart
THESE Scenes form one of several works which show the Composer's great interest in things Scottish. The work was written in 1913 for String Orchestra. It contains five Movements: First, a Strathspey, a dance rather like the Reel. The tune of this is called The Braes o' Tullymet. Next is a Dirge, on the tune The Isle of Mull. A Quickstep, sub-titled 'Inverness Gathering,' follows, then an arrangement of an old Gaelic melody, Baloo, Baloo, and, lastly, a Reel, The De'il among the Tailors.

Kol Nidrei ..... Max Bruch

BRUCH (1838-1920) was once Conductor of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society, and was for many years a famous teacher in Berlin. Kol Nidrei is a prayer intoned in some Jewish synagogues on the Day of Atonement.

Bruch used this sad chant as the basis of a piece for Solo Cello, Harp, and Orchestra.

ORCHESTRA

Ballet Suite, 'Boabdil' ..... Moszkowski

IF we do not often hear the larger works of MOZKOWSKI (1854-1925), he is a familiar friend to very many who have played his piano-forte duets, From Foreign Parts, or, of recent years, heard his light orchestral music broadcast. He composed also in the larger forms—a Symphony, Joan of Arc, Concertos for Piano-forte and Violin, a Ballet, and the Opera, Boabdil, The Last King of the Moors. This is founded on an incident in the war of the Spaniards and the Moors in the fifteenth century. The Ballet Music taken from the work consists of three pieces, a Spanish Malaguena (in three time, with a characteristic rhythm beginning with whole beat, two halves, whole), a Scherzo-Valse, and a Moorish Fantasia (two time, commencing with dignified chords and going on to build up the piece over a recurring motif that stumps about in the bass).

5GB Calling!

Some Future Events from the Birmingham Studio.

Symphony Concerts.

NOW that the 'Proms,' are over, listeners throughout the Midlands are looking to the 5GB Saturday night symphony concerts to fill the gap. Beethoven's No. 5 Symphony in C Minor is the chief item in the programme for 10.15 on Saturday, November 17. By the way, it would be interesting to know the exact number of symphonies broadcast by the Birmingham Studio Symphony Orchestra. Rumour puts it in the neighbourhood of two hundred, and one feels that it is not far off that mark. In the same programme John Tobin is playing the Pianoforte Concerto in C Minor by Delius. This first saw the light in 1897, and after several performances in Germany, was remodelled by its composer and played at a promenade concert in London in October, 1907. John Tobin is, of course, the founder-director of the Liverpool Repertory Opera, and was responsible for the informal chamber concerts where the audience, seated round tables, could listen in that 'home' atmosphere essential to the full appreciation of chamber music. Refreshments were provided, so that it was possible for enthusiasts after hearing a new work, perhaps of the very modern school, to swallow coffee and other strong drink! The other artist in this symphony concert is Robert Maitland (baritone).

An Orchestral Concert.

NORRIS STANLEY, the popular director of Pattison's Salon Orchestra, is the solo violinist in the orchestral concert at 3.30 on Sunday, November 11. He is playing the Dvorak Concerto in A Minor (Opus 53).

Home Without a Mother.

WE all remember those ornate mottoes which used to adorn the front parlour in the old days. Although they are now out of fashion, who can forget the heart-rending pathos of such efforts as 'What is Home without a Mother?' This has been used as the basis of an amusing little comedy by Edwin Lewis, responsible for that entertaining Sarah Brown series of one-act plays of which this is one. It will be broadcast from 5GB at 8 p.m. on Thursday, November 15, and how Bill Brown and his son, Herbert, fend for themselves when Sarah leaves home is a story which will cause many laughs, and the fact that there is another 'woman in the case' adds to the complications. The cast includes Wortley Allen, Harry Saxton, Mabel France, and Helen Enoch.

The Grand Duchess.

NINETY comic operas and operettas in twenty-five years! That is the astonishing record of Jacques Offenbach, the creator of those extravagant, gay, bustling musical shows which amused Parisians of the nineteenth century. The Tales of Hoffmann and The Grand Duchess are among the ones which will 'live,' and revivals frequently take place in the theatres of Paris and Berlin. An abbreviated performance of The Grand Duchess is to be heard from the Birmingham Studio at 10.15 p.m. on Tuesday, November 13.

City of Birmingham Police Band.

DURING the winter this band gives some twenty concerts in the Town Hall. Admission is charged to three of these, the proceeds going to the band fund for replacing instruments and increasing the library. In this way the City of Birmingham has at its disposal throughout the year a first-class military band at no cost whatsoever to the citizens. Thanks to the energy of its conductor, Mr. Richard Wassell, there has developed from the same personnel a light orchestra of twenty-eight performers, which also appears at these concerts. Some idea of the musical standard attained can be gathered from the fact that Sammons, Melsa, and de Greef have appeared at the last three concerts; Gustav Holst and B. Walton O'Donnell have conducted the band during the last fortnight, whilst two suites have been specially composed for it by Mr. Holst. 5GB is relaying one of these concerts at 7.30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 14, when the artists will be Muriel Brunsell (contralto) and Walter Widdop (tenor).

Variety.

CHRISTINE SILVER, the well-known character actress, who will be remembered for her work in connection with the broadcast productions of Tess of the Durbervilles and The Mayor of Casterbridge, is in the variety bill at 8 p.m. on Saturday, November 17. Other artists in the programme are Rhiannon James (harpist) and Lettice Newman and Eric Richmond in folk songs and duets.

B.B.C. PUBLICATIONS.

LIBRETTI.

On November 26 and 28 there will be broadcast the third of the series of twelve well-known operas, this time Samson and Delilah by Saint-Saëns. Listeners who wish to obtain a copy of the book of words should use the form given below, which is arranged so that applicants may obtain: (1) Single copies of the Libretto of Samson and Delilah at 2d. each, (2) the complete series of twelve for 2s., or (3) the remaining ten of the series for 1s. 8d.

ASTOUNDING HEALTH DISCOVERY

SCIENTIST'S MARVELLOUS ELECTRICAL INVENTION

Brings Back Lost Youth, Wipes Out the Tell-Tale Marks of Old Age, Banishes Constitutional Disorders, and Builds Health in every Body Cell.

FASCINATING FREE BOOK FOR EVERY "RADIO TIMES" READER

IF ever an inventor and scientific thinker has had a right to congratulate himself on the triumphant issue of his life-long researches, assuredly that man is MR. O. OVERBECK, F.R.S.A., F.P.C. (Lond.), etc., the well-known British Scientist who has devoted such a large portion of his time to so many branches of scientific research.

For Mr. Overbeck is to-day the living witness to the scientific accuracy of his conclusions and their splendid practical application in an invention that has begun a new epoch in curative science.

ROMANCE OF DYING MAN'S HEALTH RECOVERY.

A few years ago Mr. Overbeck was a dying man. To-day, at nearly seventy years of age, he is a miracle of untiring energy, bubbling over with enthusiasm, alert to his finger-tips, with the muscles of an athlete, the appetite of a hunter, and sufficient physical vitality to laughingly tire out a whole party of sturdy youths.

This remarkable recovery of health and vigour Mr. Overbeck attributes entirely to the rejuvenating electrical instrument he has invented, patented, and appropriately named Overbeck's Rejuvenator.

A particularly noteworthy fact about the instrument is that it does not produce any sensation during treatment.

THE SECRET OF YOUTH.

In an interview with representatives of the Press, Mr. Overbeck said:—

"The root idea of my rejuvenating electrical instrument is that human life is governed by electrical energy. The brain is the accumulator of the body, and if the brain can be filled artificially with electricity, the artificial electricity will make up for the loss of natural electrical energy."

"I have tried my invention during the past two years, and I am a new man."

"My age is sixty-four years, but I feel like a man of thirty, and I am mentally more alert than ever. My muscles and skin are those of a young man. I once had little hair, but now, as you see, I have a plentiful supply, and it is turning from grey to brown."

"My heart was so weak four years ago that my doctor told me to make my will. The heart disease has gone, and so has the kidney trouble from which I was a chronic sufferer. My spectacles are no longer needed."

Mr. Overbeck traces all diseases, other than those produced by germ attacks, to Electrical Unbalance, or a lack of negative or positive electricity as the case may be.

Such diseases, therefore, as Rheumatism, Gout, Arthritis, Neuritis, Sciatica, and Lumbago should, and do, in fact, disappear when the required electricity is fed artificially by means of Overbeck's Rejuvenator.

ELECTRIC HEALTH.

All-round health, on the other hand, is merely electrical balance, since disease germs rarely attack healthy tissues successfully. To rebuild and vitalise every body cell by means of Overbeck's Rejuvenator is to take the surest road to repelling every germ attack, and greatly prolonging life.

WORLD-WIDE DEMAND.

Mr. Overbeck's discovery has aroused enormous interest throughout the world.

Mr. Overbeck has now completed his plans for the manufacture of the "Rejuvenator" in sufficient quantities to cope with the world-wide demand which has resulted from the enormous amount of publicity given to it in the Press.

WHAT THE PRESS SAYS.

"Health and Efficiency" (the leading health magazine) says:—"The Overbeck Rejuvenator is well so called because the extraordinary difference in his own and other people's appearances, palpable to everybody, has been so marked after using the process."

The "Daily News," describing a demonstration of the Rejuvenator given by Mr. Overbeck at the Savoy Hotel, London, says:—"Mr. W. J. Womersley, M.P. for Grimsby, who presided, said that he had known Mr. Overbeck for many years, and during the last two or three years his health and appearance had improved wonderfully."

WHAT DOCTORS SAY.

"It is contrary to medical etiquette to give the names of doctors who are using and recommending the Rejuvenator, but the following tributes are from prominent members of the profession:

"It has been beneficial in a case of muscular atrophy of the legs after severe illness, and personally I have used it on my bald head, and am certainly gradually getting a good crop of hair, for which I am very thankful and pleased". . . . . M.D., M.B., C.M., F.R.C.S.

"The instrument is practically foolproof, and if the very simple instructions are carried out, is entirely harmless to use." . . . . . M.B., Ch.B.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS

Moving Coil Speaker

REQUIRES NO ACCUMULATOR

SINCE 1910 the name of "Brown" has been associated with loud speakers. "Brown" introduced the famous "Reed" movement. "Brown" pioneered Moving Coil Loud Speaker principles. Now after endless research and experiment "Brown" introduces the "Cubist"—the most remarkable Moving Coil Loud Speaker ever produced.

The "Cubist"—the new "Brown" moving coil Loud Speaker is fitted with permanent magnets. This important feature does away with the heavy expense of extra accumulator or Mains Unit necessary with most other coil driven speakers. It is supplied complete with step-down transformer ready to connect to any good Set with three or more valves. The "Cubist" is beautifully finished with polished mahogany or oak cabinet and oxydised metal flare.

Queen of the Night

Miss Noel Eadie as The Queen in Mozart's masterpiece "The Magic Flute."

Mozart wrote his celebrated opera—"The Magic Flute" (which will be broadcast by the British National Opera Company on November 6th), only a few months before he died. But into this work, which is a delightful medley of fun and fantasy—a kind of musical pantomime—he introduced some of the most haunting and melodious airs ever written.

For this particular broadcast put in a Lissen New Process Battery. It will give your Loudspeaker added volume, wonderful clarity and truth of tone, because, due to the new process and new chemical combination used only by Lissen, it has seemingly inexhaustible energy, energy which flows without a trace of ripple, without a sign of hum.

From the opening bars of the overture—in itself an exquisite piece of work—you will hear a new definition in the violins, the echoing yet clear-cut boom of the kettledrums, and the original sweetness of the wood-wind instruments—provided you use a Lissen Battery.

You can get one on your way home. Get one in time and then hear what the "Magic Flute" and other big operatic works to be broadcast sound like when you use the pure H.T. current of the Lissen Battery. 10,000 radio dealers sell it—ask firmly for Lissen and take no other.

 This reproduction shows the coating typical of all OSRAM VALVES. Notice the absolute evenness of the coating. There are no gaps, the coating clings, so that the full benefit of the coating is maintained. The secret is the startling new discovery of the scientific process of "TENACIOUS COATING."

It is the coating on the filament, not the filament itself that gives results

The coating on the filaments of OSRAM VALVES is applied by a new scientific process. It is so tenacious that users are certain of getting the same wonderful results after months and months of use as when the valves were first bought.

BADLY COATED FILAMENT
 Reproduction from an untouched micro-photograph of part of the filament of a badly-coated valve before use, showing a serious gap in the coating. # ONE DIAL TUNING

The wonderful new Mullard Master 3* is proving itself Britain's favourite receiver. It is the ideal domestic set. It fulfils every condition for popularity.

It is the most powerful three-valve receiver ever designed. It gives an amazing choice of the World's best radio programmes at full loud-speaker volume. Its tone is rich and realistic. Its selectivity is of the highest, consistent with purity of reproduction. And yet its operation is of the simplest—one dial tuning! Simply revolve one dial and station after station is tuned in; turn the other dial to increase volume and selectivity.

A still further advantage—there is no coil changing! A simple push-pull switch changes from lower to upper wavelength range, and gives equal efficiency on both!

Build the new Mullard Master 3*.

You can build this wonderful receiver yourself; though you know nothing whatever about radio you can build the Mullard Master 3* with complete success. And, by building it yourself, you obtain a wonderfully efficient receiver at the lowest possible cost.

Learn more about this wonderful receiver—post the coupon now.

Every listener should read "Radio for the Million"—the listeners' quarterly magazine. Send coupon now and a copy will be sent you absolutely free.

"Well, I've heard pretty well all the latest radio sets but, honestly, I don't know of one to beat yours."

"Thanks, old man. But this set certainly does deserve your praise. . . Do you know, I got 36 stations on the loud speaker last night—six of 'em being American."

"Was the reproduction throughout as good as it is now?"

"Every bit, Jim. Ever since I've had it, the pure, clear tone and loud speaker volume have been absolutely satisfactory. It never gives me a minute's trouble or uneasiness."

WOULDN'T you like such a wonderful set? If you would, send to-day for full particulars of the BURNDEPT Screened Four—the set which "completely revolutionized radio reception" when it was introduced early this year—the set which will always give you really good radio entertainment and a variety of programmes on the loud speaker. Great selectivity. Enormous range. Very easy to operate. PRICE, including valves and royalty, £29 16s. od. The BURNDEPT EMPIRE Screened Four: this is a set which was evolved from the original Screened Four, and gives excellent reproduction on the loud speaker of programmes broadcast on 220-560 metres and short wave stations on 20-48 metres as well. PRICE, including valves and royalty £29 16s. od.

[ Ask your local dealer to demonstrate either of these sets— or write for complete details. ]

"Slope" is the most important characteristic of a valve. It is the measure of real goodness, and the only true indication of valve performance. "slope" the better the valve. The steeper the

It has been found that a nickel filament gives higher "slope" values than any other kind of filament. This fact was discovered in the B.T.H. Research Laboratories, and nickel filaments are therefore used in all standard valves produced by the B.T.H. Co. There is now available a range of sixteen Mazda Nickel Filament Valves. They are the only valves which have nickel filaments. Type for type, they are better than any other valves in the world.

HELLESEN DRY BATTERIES

MY MONEY SAVER.

Some time ago I went to my Dealer in a state of perplexity. Edwards used H.T. Accumulators, and swore by them; Ridley on the other hand pinned his faith to a Mains Unit. Both of them were inclined to be superior when meeting me.

"Let me give you some disinterested advice, sir," said my Dealer when I appealed to him, "The H.T. Dry Battery is still the best solution to the H.T. Supply problem, provided you use a really first class Battery. I always recommend Helleesen, because I know of no other Battery which gives such consistently fine results."

I took his advice and a large Helleesen home with me. And since that time neither Edwards nor Ridley have shown any inclination to discuss the matter. I wonder why?

Equip your home for happiness!

SOMETIMES you are content to sit and listen to the broadcast programmes; sometimes you want to make up a programme of your own. And so take radio into your home, and take also a gramophone. Take, too, the means for true musical rendering—a good loudspeaker, and also take the means for electrical reproduction of gramophone music with needle scratch largely eliminated—an electrical pick-up. Then you can electrify your gramophone and get music in any volume you like.

And Lissen have made this combination of radio and gramophone and electrical reproduction available to all in its most convenient form. There is the new range of Lissenola radio receivers—the new Lissenola Gramophones; the new Lissenola Cabinet Cone Loudspeakers, whose tone is pure and true; and the Lissen Electrical Pick-Up.

HERE IS A COMBINATION THAT WILL EQUIP ANY HOME FOR HAPPINESS!

LISSEN ELECTRICAL PICK-UP.

With this you can use any radio valve set to electrify any gramophone. It enables you to play gramophone records as you have never heard them before; it brings out the low notes on the records, and amplifies the music to any degree of loudness you require. It largely eliminates needle scratch, and makes old records sound almost like new. Full 15/- instructions with each Pick-Up. Price 15/- (When ordering, state make of gramophone you are going to use it with.)

LISSENOLA 3-VALVE RECEIVER.

A music-lover's receiver, yielding pure tone and undistorted music—a no-trouble receiver with a straightforward circuit employing matched Lissen components. One dial for tuning, one dial for volume control, one switch for changing from low to high wavelengths.

Simplicity itself to use. Terminals for gramophone pick-up attachment provided and ready for use. In beautiful mahogany cabinet, with valves, batteries, accumulator and every accessory except loudspeaker, all-inclusive price, £12.12.0

LISSENOLA CABINET CONE LOUDSPEAKER.

This Lissenola loudspeaker embodies a newly-developed Cone Unit which is so good that it is being reserved exclusively for these new Lissenola Cabinet Speakers, and Lissen believe it gives the finest tone available to-day. This Unit is housed in beautiful cabinet work. It can be used with any good receiving set and will do justice to the best existing set. You can use it in conjunction with any gramophone for electrical pick-up reproduction.

Price (in mahogany) £3.3.0
(in oak) £2.17.6

The mahogany model is a perfect match for the Lissenola 3-Valve Receiver described here.

LISSENOLA PORTABLE GRAMOPHONE.

People say it plays like an expensive pedestal gramophone—and it does! Features that account for this superiority:—It has a horn actually longer than that in many expensive pedestal gramophones, a Sound-box so sensitive that it will pick up every sound recorded on the record, a playing speed regulator so accurate that true pitch and tone are always obtained. Convenient to use in conjunction with the Lissen Electrical Pick-Up and portable for use in any room or out of doors.
