THIS WEEK'S UNMISSABLE TV

ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR AND PPA COLUMNIST OF THE YEAR

'Brilliant Bodyguard bows out in style'

AND THIS IS how Bodyguard ends... but with a bang, or a whimper? The biggest BBC drama for ten years, with viewing figures of upwards of ten million, finishes with a 75-minute finale (Sunday BBC1).

In keeping with everything that's gone before, it's exhausting, with a huge set-piece sequence that takes up most of the episode. But writer Jed Mercurio plays fair with his audience by making absolutely sure that most, if not all, of our questions are answered by the end.

I remember very well, though I was just a little girl, the unfolding story of Charles Manson, his "Family" and the grotesque, ritualistic murders of actress Sharon Tate and her friends.

Without wishing to sound like the most macabre child, I was fascinated by the news reports that emerged from Los Angeles during that dreadful summer of 1969, when the spirit of the Sixties died horribly in the house Tate shared with her husband, Roman Polanski. It became one of the biggest stories of my childhood.

To this day the Manson Family remain infamous in criminal history, and nearly 50 years on are the subject of Manson: the Lost Tapes (Thursday ITV). It's horribly fascinating and makes full use of contemporary film footage shot on the Manson Family ranch. Even though the Family (ie cult) members were smiley, happy people, they are the most sinister, blank-eyed bunch of spaced-out teens you'll ever see.

I'm sad to say goodbye to everyone who's appeared in BBC2's The Mighty Redcar, which finishes on Thursday. I hadn't expected great things but it's turned out to be such a warm, humane series, full of smashing young people.

They love and are proud of their town, but its paucity of jobs means that so many of them must leave their families to look elsewhere for work.

CHRIS SHIP

‘After being in Jerusalem recently with Prince William, I’m watching the BBC4 series Jerusalem: the Making of a City, Simon Sebag Montefiore’s 2011 documentary on the city’s fascinating and complex past,” says ITV’s royal editor. “The ITV crime drama Unforgotten was a great watch, and our household has just binge-watched Friends – yes, the whole lot!’

‘Bodyguard is the kind of television you watch from behind a settee and Vanity Fair is a brilliantly portrayed romp –

Olivia Cooke is marvellous,” says the chat-show king. “An unexpected pleasure is The Repair Show. Such a simple idea, such a glorious success. The loving care of the experts, their expertise and modest demeanour puts to shame the posturing and clamour of television show-offs, too numerous to list here.’

WHAT WE'VE LEARNT THIS WEEK

The “Spanish” flu epidemic of 1918 didn’t start in Spain; the virus probably originated in water fowl, passed to farm animals and crossed over into humans in the US state of Kansas. One theory is that a “patient zero” called Albert Gitchell spread the virus by serving food in an army camp, from where troops brought it on transport ships to Europe. It may have gone on to kill ten times as many people as the First World War.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

POLDARK: THE LOST YEARS

Next year's Poldark will be the last, the BBC has announced. But the production has been clever about the series. The fourth ended this summer with book seven of Winston Graham's 12-part saga. Book eight starts a decade later – when Aidan Turner's Ross (left) would have been in his 50s – and mainly concerns the Poldark/Warleggan children. But writer Debbie Horsfield is focusing the fifth, final series on the interim "lost decade" – picking up clues in the books and filling in the gaps. The move, which has the approval of the Winston Graham estate, means they won't have to age Turner drastically. Also, RT hears the producers are keen to adapt the final books when the time is right. "This will be the last series in the Poldark chronicle – for now," says executive producer Karen Thrussell, no doubt with a wink...

A TREAT FOR TODAY

If you're one of the ten million people glued to smash-hit BBC series Bodyguard, you'll have noticed pretty much every episode features Radio 4 Today presenters announcing the glum (fictional) news. This may explain why Today keeps airing plugs for it. Today editor Sarah Sands defends the nonstop coverage – confirming that she gave her team permission to appear. "People aren't spending their entire lives talking about the findings of select committees. Are you going to reflect the world people live in? The pleasures?" she says. No doubt hearing yourself in the hot drama of the moment is also a pleasure for Justin Webb et al...

WHO WILL REPLACE EDDIE?

Still no word about Eddie Mair's replacement on PM – a decision is expected at the end of September, RT hears. Broadcasting House's Paddy O'Connell would be a good choice. But PM is made by the people who make BBC television news, so they could pick a TV news face. And the smart money, insiders tell RT, is on a woman.

TAKING ON THE BULLIES

Mike Bartlett is not afraid to tackle the big subjects. His excellent drama Press is getting a lot of attention on BBC1; Doctor Foster, a peek into the world of middle-class marriage, could return; and now he's working on a three-part drama for ITV about workplace bullying. The Man stars Ken Nwosu as Thomas Benson, a hard-working father struggling with his job in a Reading business park. The cast also includes Ben Miller and Phoebe Nicholls. BEN DOWELL

Present tense

Victoria star Jenna Coleman is taking a break from the lavish ITV period drama to flex her acting muscles in a dark psychological thriller. In The Cry, she plays Joanna, a young mother who travels from Scotland to Australia with husband Alistair (Ewen Leslie) to see his mother, Elizabeth (Stella Gonet) and to fight his Australian ex-wife Alexandra for custody of their teenage daughter, Chloe. The most unimaginable tragedy soon strikes when Joanna's baby goes missing – plunging her mind and marriage into meltdown.

Based on the 2013 page-turner by Australian writer Helen FitzGerald, the four-part drama, coming soon to BBC1, promises to be a visual treat. "We could not be more thrilled to have shot the show in the incredible Australian light of Melbourne, and contrast that with the beautiful West End of Glasgow," says executive producer Claire Mundell. BD

‘We need to laugh’

TV should make fewer dramas – and more comedies

AS THE TEN million viewers who are watching Bodyguard will no doubt tell you, we’re living in a golden age of drama. Shows like Game of Thrones and The Handmaid’s Tale are beloved by audiences – and the commissioners who throw huge amounts of money at them.

But do they make you laugh? When was the last time you guffawed at something on the telly that wasn’t on a cheap repeat channel called Dave or Doreen or Spike?

I’ve worked on quite a few comedy shows, for example The Office, Absolutely Fabulous and

‘When did you last guffaw at something that wasn’t a repeat?’

The Vicar of Dibley, and writing my new book on my experiences brought something into sharp focus for me. The fact is that British comedy is no longer a priority for those who run the main channels – any of them – and it’s no longer the force for fun that it once was.

This is a pity because if we ever needed a laugh, it’s now. If new young writers don’t see good BBC1 or BBC2 comedy then they will never learn how to write it themselves. Actors never discover how to make an audience laugh, or how to create a character the viewers recognise and love. Playgrounds and canteens are denied catchphrases. This is a pity, and it’s self-perpetuating.

But why has this happened? Partly because channels want hits right from the off. It famously took Only Fools and Horses three series to be a hit, while The Office was only huge because BBC2 repeated the first series fairly quickly and the audience was reassured that it wasn’t a docusoap.

Controllers find it easier to say “no” to comedy because it’s risky, and “yes” to another procedural drama. An hour of drama costs around £1 million, whereas half an hour of comedy doesn’t get half that – it gets barely £300,000 or so if it’s lucky. It doesn’t make sense.

Why is laughter considered so much cheaper than tears? Because it’s all done in a studio by five people in two sets, isn’t it? Yes, if 1959 and Sid James ever come back! If we want comedy to look every bit as good as drama, and be on TV every bit as often, then it needs more financial support.

COMEDY GOLD
The Office and This Country showcase UK comedy-writing talent

As we have seen with Vanity Fair, ITV’s current period adaptation that has been oddly scheduled against Bodyguard, dramas can struggle – although we’ll have to wait until the consolidated figures are in before deciding how well the period drama has done. But wouldn’t this have been an opportunity for ITV to have had a chuckle on the other side?

Channel 4 also likes to pride itself on its (often brilliant) edgy late-night comedies. But if it was really bold, it would try the ultimate challenge of a pre-watershed or studio comedy.

When viewers sit down for an evening’s telly, we must remember they might have had a hard day and just want to laugh. Make some comedy, because if you don’t the art will be lost. Spend some money on it, even if, as I kept being told, “the trouble is that British comedy is quite distinctive and it doesn’t sell abroad, so we can’t get any foreign investment for it”.

OK – end of moan. The good news is that there are still brilliantly talented people in the UK, making things like This Country, Upstart Crow, Detectorists, Inside No 9 and Witless, so I’ll shut up and let you get back to Bodyguard. And, if you must, Game of Bloody – sometimes very bloody – Thrones.

Jon Plowman is a producer and former head of BBC comedy. How to Produce Comedy Bronze by Jon Plowman is published on 20 September

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 23-29 SEPTEMBER 1995

WHAT WE WATCHED

Andrew Davies’s Pride and Prejudice, still considered by many to be the daddy of BBC period adaptations, started this week. “Sex romp Jane Austen” the tabloids blared – and they hadn’t even seen Colin Firth strip off and jump into the lake yet.

Producer Sue Birtwistle told RT she regretted selling Davies the idea that it’s a “book about sex and money” – remarks he repeated in pre-broadcast interviews. “It’s what those wonderful old films used to be about, all smouldering glances across the room,” she explained. “Those kinds of moments are exciting and much sexier than thrashing around in bed.”

WHAT YOU SAID

Was there ever a time when Chris Evans didn’t grab the headlines? In 1995, he had recently taken the reins of the Radio 1 Breakfast Show and was already generating a hefty postbag. “Granted he’s loud and occasionally rude, but he is very funny,” said Daniel Lawrence from Bath.

Greg Browning from Cwmbran in Wales agreed with another RT correspondent that Evans was “unbearable”, also adding that the Ginger One’s presence on the airwaves made the station a “no-go” area. BEN DOWELL

and Graziano Di Prima

This is a dream come true and I'm honestly having the best time of my life. I'm like a magpie – I love getting covered in sequins, glitter and sparkles – and I feel like the luckiest girl in the world having Graziano as my partner.

I haven't been on a platform like this before and all the attention has been a bit of a shock to the system, like having the press write about my ex-boyfriend [actor Tom Rosenthal] as though I dumped him – we broke up a year ago and it had nothing to do with Strictly. I've just got to try my hardest, be myself and dance my little heart out.

KATE SILVERTON, 48, newsreader
and Aljaz Skorjanec

The only dancing I've ever done is in the safety of my kitchen, and although it's too ambitious at the moment, my ultimate aim is to do a sexy tango. And I want to get into my wedding dress again.

Aljaz is really good at what he does. Gemma [Atkinson, Aljaz's partner last year] said he's the best teacher – I'm going to need that. I was afraid of Craig Revel Horwood but I met him the other night, had lots of hugs and now I adore him.

Although when I read the news on Saturday night, my mum said, "You look a little too brown," so I'm going to ease up on the fake tan!

This is the first time I've got anywhere near to getting on Strictly and I have to admit, I wasn't prepared. I got asked fairly late on and I couldn't believe it. It's my absolute dream show.

I grew up dancing. Being from an Indian background, music is a massive part of our culture and fabric. But I've discovered that is very different to all of this. I really want to do the paso doble because I just love all the drama – and I'd love to do an Indian-themed routine, too.

I work part-time in the NHS and on This Morning so I'm going to squeeze in rehearsal time wherever I can. Janette has been the best partner, and I'm going to give it everything I have.

SUSANNAH CONSTANTINE, 56, presenter and Anton Du Beke

In the past, I said if I was ever asked to do Strictly, it would be one humiliation too far. But you know what? Now I can't believe I ever considered saying no.

Anton and I clicked instantly – he's got the same sense of humour as me. Although I have pulled a muscle in my ribs already. Anton thought I'd ripped my dress, but it was just my muscles ripping. Well, I don't need my ribs. I'll be fine.

I'll listen to the judges, but if Craig Revel Horwood criticises a specific thing, I will politely ask him to show how it can be improved. Craig, if you can do it better than my Anton, let's see how it's done, love.

JOE SUGG, 27,
and Dianne Buswell

I've never danced sober before, but I've always thought it would be nice to know what I was doing on the dancefloor... My grandparents love Strictly and I know it'll make them really happy. I want to do Dianne proud, too – although I did think an American Smooth was a coffee, so I've a lot to learn...

LAUREN
paratriathlete
and AJ Pritchard

Since I was a little girl, Saturday nights were always about watching Strictly with my parents and sister. I always thought it looked amazing and now, here I am. It's a bit surreal, actually.

I'm here to make friends for life, get dance skills and gain confidence. I'm excited to show the world what AJ and I can do.

I hope I can inspire girls, whatever their ability or disability, to dance and believe in themselves – to say "If she can do it with one arm, I'm just as capable of doing it."

GRAEME SWANN, 39, former cricketer and Oti Mabuse

I have been asked to do Strictly before, but I've never had time – cricket tours are always in the winter. My kids absolutely love this show so I couldn't let them down. And secretly I've always wanted to do it as well.

I can't wait to do the waltz. I wanted to get married in a top hat and tails but my wife wouldn't let me, so this is my chance to get them on!

I'm having an absolute blast. It's way more fun than I thought it would be. I'm hoping to be here at Christmas and get that trophy, to be honest. Oti wants that and I want that for her. I'm in it to win it for this girl and hopefully I'm good enough.

KATIE PIPER, 34, presenter and campaigner
and Gorka Marquez

I don't have rhythm, but I have commitment – I'm going to treat this like a full-time job! I never give up, and Gorka is like that, too. I've got some injuries – I'm blind in my left eye – that might make it more difficult, but it won't hold me back. In a way, it motivates me more. We could all find reasons to not do things, but they don't have to stop us.

FAYE TOZER, 42, Steps singer
and Giovanni Pernice

I've been wanting to do Strictly for years! I'm a huge fan. I had preconceived ideas about what it was going to be like, but it's everything and more. And I'm excited for my little boy to see his mum twirling around on telly.

Giovanni is passionate and driven and I am, too, so that draws us together. What fills me with dread is the idea of going on TV and dancing live in front of so many people. But I was born for this. More sequins, more spray tan, more feathers. I'm ready – throw it at me!

STACEY DOOLEY, 31, presenter and journalist and Kevin Clifton

I've always loved Strictly and it felt like the right time to do it, as work has been so intense – I was in Mosul this year, Iraq, Honduras... It's important work that I'm passionate about, but sometimes you need a bit of escapism. Travelling keeps things in perspective: I'm not entertaining any bitching about what I'm wearing or the Strictly curse.

Of course I want to win. Anyone saying they don't is fibbing! If I go out first, I'll be so beside myself I'll have to emigrate.

CHARLES VENN, 45, Casualty actor and Karen Clifton

This is my first time being asked to do the show, and I jumped at it. I'm hoping to master a few dance skills, and hopefully get as far as I can. My Casualty co-stars can't wait to attend. Immediately, as soon as the news came out, it was a case of,

"Where are my tickets?". I've seen Karen do her thing on the dancefloor and know she's going to whip me into shape. I've already started dropping weight and seeing muscle definition I haven't seen in years...

ASHLEY ROBERTS, 37, pop star and Pasha Kovalev

My mum loves [US Strictly equivalent] Dancing with the Stars and she screamed when I told her I was doing Strictly – she's coming over for the first live shows.

I've had dance experience in the past but it was all booty-popping, jazz and hip hop. I've never trained in this world at all, so this is all new to me. It's been almost ten years since I performed with the Pussycat Dolls and this feels very different!

DANNY JOHN-JULES, 58, actor and Amy Dowden

I had no idea that I was going to be doing Strictly when I left Death in Paradise a year ago. Back then I thought, "I'm in no hurry to go anywhere." I was supposed to be having a year off – then Strictly came up...

Every muscle in my body has had this wake-up call. Blood, sweat and tears. And painful toes. Well, Amy will have painful toes by the time I've finished with her! I'm going to get fit – I was turning into a bit of a has-been. I'm the oldest on the show so I have to prove my prowess.

I've known Bruno Tonioli since the late 70s – we used to do the same dance class!

I always say I can't dance and then turn into a pretty poor imitation of Justin Timberlake on the dancefloor...

I don't have a TV. Even when I was on EastEnders, I never watched myself, I couldn't bear to. Although I think Nadiya will make me watch our dances back. She's going to teach me so much about dedication and discipline.

No matter what, we're going to have fun. It's not about the winning. It sounds cheesy, but it is about just being a part of this – I feel privileged to be here. INTERVIEWS
BY FRANCES TAYLOR

SEANN WALSH, 32, comedian
and Katya Jones

I was shocked when I was asked to do Strictly, but I just thought: "What an amazing opportunity." The night after performing the group dance, I was at a wedding and I did the routine on my own. It went down really well.

I've had the tan, and Dr Ranj and I are getting our chests waxed together. Am I getting my top off? That's up to Katya.

If Katya wants to see the chest, then the British public will have to see the chest, too. She's the boss!

I 100 per cent want to learn how to dance. To make people laugh, I'd just carry on doing stand-up. Although I still don't really know the dances, to be honest. Was I meant to research all this?

MY DOCTOR WHO MANIFESTO

The 13th Doctor is on her way and it's going to be a blast, promises showrunner Chris Chibnall. Here are his 13 reasons to watch... ▷

WHAT'S IT LIKE to land your dream job? Well for the past couple of years, I've been lucky enough to find out.

As I came to the end of Broadchurch, I was mulling over ideas for my next projects. All that changed when Steven Moffat, my predecessor as Doctor Who showrunner, ambushed me over dinner, saying, "I'm sorry but I'm about to derail your life. I'm leaving Doctor Who. We've all had a chat and agreed you're the best person to take over."

I think my mouth opened and closed silently for a few moments, like a fish. My first childhood memories, my first memories of being alive, are of Doctor Who – a strange, hypnotic set of images and sounds, monsters emerging from the sea, drawing me towards the corner of the lounge. Seemingly aimed at me as a young child, but also slightly forbidden, a bit too grown up – a show happy to scare and thrill and entertain me and my parents. I vividly remember discussing the first cliffhanger sight of a Sontaran, in 1973, with my beloved great aunt Billie. She died young, nine years later. I wish she was here now to see Jodie Whittaker's Doctor crash to Earth.

'Doctor Who got hold of me early and never let go'

Doctor Who got hold of me early and never let go. My biggest hope is that the same will be true for a generation of children this year.

Jodie Whittaker will be their first ever Doctor – and you never forget your first Doctor.

But I'm aware not everybody knows the show. Or maybe you've watched the show in the past but drifted away. As the 13th Doctor is about to arrive, I thought I'd reveal the 13 (see what I did there?) things you need to know about this series. Let's start with number one...

TUNED IN
Segun Akinola has regenerated the show's spooky theme range from the present day, through centuries past, alien worlds and spaceships. Each week is a new treat. Also, did I mention, monsters?

1 You don't need to know anything about Doctor Who

If you've never seen Doctor Who before, the first episode this year is the perfect place to start. You need to know absolutely nothing about the show's past. There's no barrier to entry for this series. Start here: we'll take you by the hand. If you're a lapsed viewer, come on back in and try Jodie Whittaker's fizzing, funny, smart Doctor.

2 Each episode will be a new adventure...

The series is made up of ten standalone stories – every episode is a complete story. The settings

3 Bradley Walsh is a proper star

He's playing Graham O'Brien, one of three new characters who will be joining the Doctor on her adventures. Everything Brad does, he excels at – from quizmaster, to singer, to being one of our best screen actors. He's even managed to conquer Instagram this year with #bradders-bangerz (look him up). I cast Brad as Detective Sergeant Ronnie Brooks in Law & Order: UK a few years back, and have wanted to work with him again ever since. Audiences quite rightly love him. Now he's fighting aliens, and both of us couldn't be happier.

4 But he's not the only one...

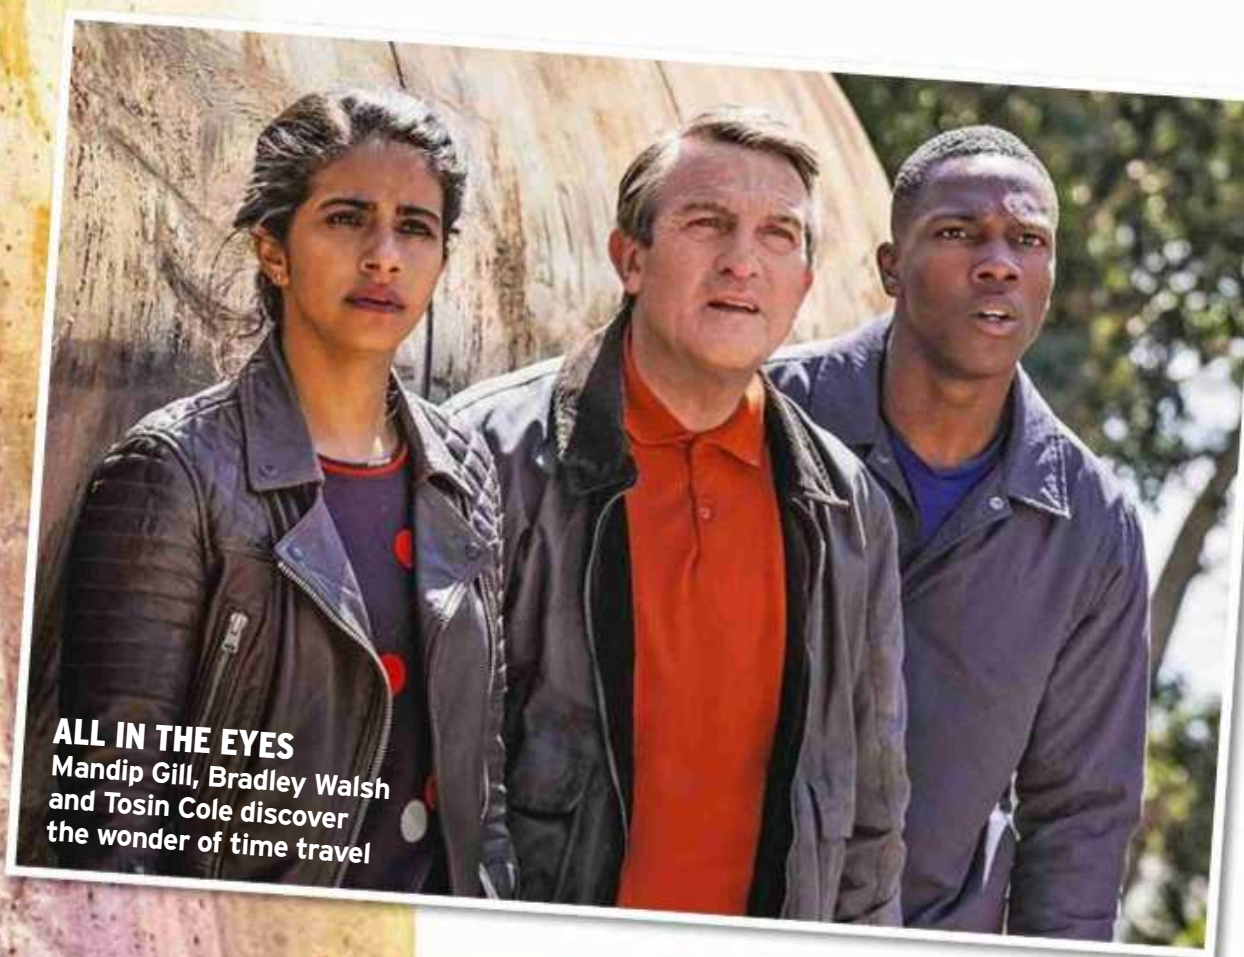

Two of Britain's brightest young stars, Mandip Gill and Tosin Cole, appear, too. They play Yaz and Ryan. And across the series, they'll encounter a host of amazing guest stars.

5 Here be monsters

The Doctor and her friends will be fighting monsters, solving mysteries and righting wrongs, just as they have done for five and a half decades now. You'll laugh, gasp, and your kids (or you) might hide behind the sofa (so do move it away from the wall, as a precaution).

6 The Doctor's a woman – and that's OK!

The Doctor is one of television's most brilliant and enduring creations. The Doctor will still be the same mercurial, funny, strange, contradictory character: an adventurer in space and time, gathering up friends along the way and solving problems by thought and wit rather than punches and violence. If you're anything like the crew who work on the series, just a few seconds with Jodie Whittaker's lively, warm, funny, super-smart Doctor will have you willing to follow this Doctor to the ends of the universe.

7 The theme music is the same – almost!

Yes. The Doctor Who theme is one of the most iconic in TV history. I love it. It has been arranged this year by Segun Akinola, our new composer, taking the original recordings made by Delia Derbyshire and the Radiophonic Workshop in 1963, and refashioning them for today. (Just as we've done across the whole show: building a thrilling new version while honouring the past.)

8 The mystery of the missing Tardis continues

The Tardis – the Doctor's unmistakable space and time machine – exploded and disappeared just as the 13th Doctor slammed into life on Christmas Day last year. Who knows where it is now. Maybe we'll find out!

9 New stars, new writers...

Former children's laureate and acclaimed YA novelist Malorie Blackman is one member of our new writing team this year, along with Bafta winner Vinay Patel, Joy Wilkinson, Pete McTighe and Ed Hime.

10 You won't find it on Saturday night

The show is moving to Sunday evenings. Look for it from Sunday 7 October on BBC1. Start building your Sunday-night plans around it – make sure everyone's done their homework and got their Monday-morning clothes and stuff ready – before you all settle down on the sofa with some snacks in time for the first episode.

11 We've been keeping our secrets close to our chest

We've been working hard at staying quiet until now, in order that audiences aren't spoiled, and also so that our stories make it onto television in the most exciting way possible. But now we're getting excited about showing you Epzo, a life-changing bike ride, Robertson, the Ux, Umbreen, Rosa, Desolation, Kandoka's moon and Ribbons. All of these things are on their way...

12 There's a galaxy of stars

One of the great joys of Doctor Who is that there's a new set of characters every episode – meaning we get to work with new, amazing guest stars every week. In the first two episodes alone you'll see Sharon D Clarke, Shaun Dooley, Art Malik and Susan Lynch. And we've got lots more names to reveal across the series.

13 We can all live the dream...

Did I tell you this is my dream job? Yes, it's more fun than I could possibly ever have imagined. I get to write adventures for a character I've loved since I was a child, and I get to work with some of the most talented craftspeople in television. And sometimes we blow stuff up. I hope you'll have as much fun watching it as we've had making it. The 13th Doctor is on her way and it's going to be a blast. Come and join us, all across space and time. It's going to be a universe worth of fun.

ON TOUR
The Queen In Malta with Prince Philip in May 1954

In her reign, the Queen has travelled more than a million miles and visited 117 countries. ITV's royal editor Chris Ship celebrates 70 years of walkabouts, charm – and soft power

A FOND FAREWELL
The Queen in Malta on her final overseas trip in 2015

progress

GIVEN THAT SHE has travelled more widely than probably anyone else on earth, it's ironic that the Queen doesn't actually own a passport. The British travel document is issued in her name, so she's never needed one. But, if she did have a passport tucked away in her handbag, its pages would be covered in stamps from immigration offices as far apart as Tonga in the South Seas, Belize in Central America and of course dozens from Canada, New Zealand and Australia – where she remains as much their Queen as ours.

When the Queen gave up overseas travel after her visit to Malta in 2015, she had flown the equivalent of 42 times around the globe – 1,032,513 miles, if you must know – and visited 117 different countries.

That last visit to Malta was a fitting end to a reign dedicated to travelling the world, as the Mediterranean island has always held a special place in her heart. She lived on the island for several months between 1949 and 1951 when Prince Philip was posted there with the Royal Navy. And of course her reign began on foreign soil, in Kenya, where she was told of the death of her beloved father, King George VI. Since then, she has watched the British Empire fall and subsequently helped the newly formed Commonwealth to grow.

That the family of 53 countries that make up the Commonwealth is in a healthy shape is in no small part down to the affection the Queen has shown it and the attention she has given it throughout her reign. In 1953, fresh from her coronation at Westminster Abbey, the young Elizabeth showed that she intended to be a Queen of the world. Her six-month tour with the Duke of Edinburgh took in 12 Commonwealth countries and her Christmas broadcast that year was recorded in Auckland in New Zealand. "I set out on this journey in order to see as much ▷

Bonne Maman®

◁ as possible of the people and countries of the Commonwealth and Empire,” she said. “I want to show that the Crown is not merely an abstract symbol of our unity but a personal and living bond between you and me.”

And since then she’s visited every Commonwealth country with the exception of Rwanda and Cameroon – both of which joined in more recent years. Her busiest decade was the 1970s and Canada has been the most frequently visited country (27 times if you include the stops for her plane to refuel). Australia is not far behind on 16 visits.

But the Queen hasn’t neglected the smaller members of the Commonwealth family. The tiny island nation of Nauru is not an easy place to visit. With 11,000 people living on its eight-square miles, Nauru in the Pacific Ocean is the world’s smallest island country.

And yet, had you gone there in October 1982, you would have seen a beaming Queen Elizabeth in a blue and white dress meeting children on the dockside. Nauru joined the Commonwealth in 1968 and the Queen decided this country, like many other member states, deserved a visit from the organisation’s head. “I always felt that the Queen enjoys travel,” says Charles Anson, who accompanied the Queen abroad as her Press Secretary during the 90s. He says it’s because “she is genuinely curious about people, their different cultures, traditions and quirks”.

THAT MEANS SHE has been to places, inside and outside the Commonwealth, to which no member of the British royal family could go now. You couldn’t imagine the Queen going on tour in Libya, for example, or Iran or Yemen. But in 1954, the Queen could be found on the streets of Tobruk on Libya’s eastern coast. She was also in Aden (now Yemen) in the same year when it was still a British colony. And a visit to Tehran was ticked off in 1961, long before Iran became an Islamic Republic.

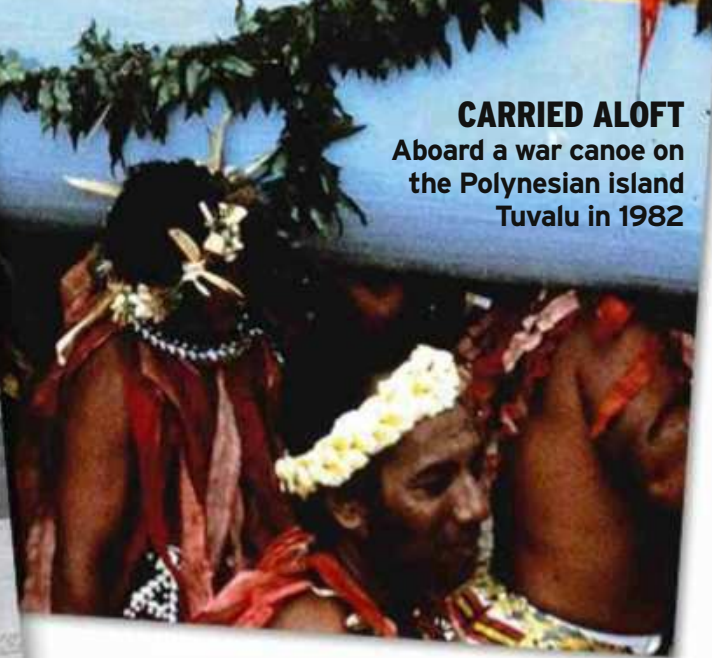

The second Elizabethan era has been such a long one the Queen has witnessed countries change and seen many world leaders come and go. Harry Truman was the President of the United States when she became Queen. After she welcomed Donald Trump to Windsor Castle in July, he became the 12th occupant of the White House to meet our monarch.

The most well-known royal photographer of recent times, Arthur Edwards of The Sun, has looked through his lens many times as the Queen travelled the world to meet leaders of state and church alike. He recalls the moment at the Vatican in 2000 when the Queen, Defender of the Faith and Supreme Governor of the Church of England, met Pope John Paul II, the leader of the worldwide Catholic Church.

CARRIED ALOFT

Meeting King Idris of Libya in Tobruk, 1954

It wasn’t their first meeting – they’d met twice in the 1980s – but on this occasion the pontiff was frail and struggled to talk. “The Queen took complete control of the situation,” Edwards says. For the press who were at the Vatican that day, the Pope’s words were barely audible but “she repeated them loudly”, Edwards remembers, “so we could all hear them.”

‘Her tours were not all about leaders... but about people’

Another significant moment came with Nelson Mandela at a Commonwealth heads of government summit in 1991 in South Africa, a year after his release from prison. He would not become the country’s president until 1994, but the Queen’s relationship with Mandela – some say it was better described as a friendship – began with a mix-up at the formal banquet for the Commonwealth leaders. Mandela was not on the guest list as he wasn’t a head of government at the time, but the Queen decided he should be at the dinner anyway.

ACCORDING TO PRESS Secretary Anson, “they clicked right away” because they both shared a deeply held belief that societies should be multiracial. Anson adds: “I remember they talked about the way international sport, and the televising of it, had helped to break down barriers between people of different races all over the world.”

In fact, the relationship between the two was so warm, Mandela could say things other leaders couldn’t. “He was the only leader whom I recall sometimes calling the Queen by her first name in private conversations,” remembers Anson. “And it seemed totally natural.”

The Queen returned to South Africa in 1995 as a guest of President Mandela, and he was invited to Buckingham Palace the following year. For a Queen who has steadfastly avoided politics all her life, she ▷

◁ has had quite an influence on the world's politicians. When another African leader, Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, wanted to leave the Commonwealth in 1961 in favour of stronger ties with the Soviet Union, she visited despite the threat of bombs in the capital. Not only did she visit but she also danced. The tour provided one of the most memorable images of all: the Queen foxtrotting with President Nkrumah at a ball in Accra. The President kept Ghana in the Commonwealth.

But her tours were not all about world leaders and big summits. They were primarily about people. And for the Queen who once said "I have to be seen to be believed," she chose to travel, where possible, in the most visually accessible way. Not just open-top cars and jeeps but sometimes by canoe. In Tuvalu in 1982, she was carried aloft in a war canoe through the streets of one of the coral atolls that make up the South Pacific nation.

In fact, the royal walkabout we recognise today was invented by the Queen in 1970 on another tour of Australia and New Zealand.

WHERE SHE LED, her family has followed and those walkabouts are today in the royal tour rule-book for every member of the royal family. Of course, sometimes security can prevent the Queen from meeting the people who have come to see her. It was the case in Ireland in May 2011. But, despite her limited movements, the visit of a British monarch to the Irish Republic will be remembered by that nation and this one for many years.

"A Uachtaráin agus a chairde," she said in Gaelic at the start of her speech in Dublin Castle, which translates as "President and friends..." It was a gesture of reconciliation that went a very long way. The Queen said: "With the benefit of historical hindsight we can all see things which we would wish had been done differently or not at all."

The day before she had stood next to the President of Ireland, Mary McAleese, and the two women laid wreaths at the Garden of Remembrance where Ireland honours those killed fighting against the British.

"The Queen is perhaps the best example of soft power at work," says Anson. And Edwards, who was in Dublin that night, remembers the tour well. "It gave me goose bumps that one," he says. "It's the best visit I've ever done with the Queen and you could almost feel the two countries move forward in that moment."

In 1947, on her 21st birthday in Cape Town, the then Princess Elizabeth declared that she would devote her whole life "whether it be long or short" to the service of the Commonwealth. On her wedding day later that year, she had the symbols of the then eight Commonwealth countries sewn into her wedding gown. More than 70 years later, Meghan Markle arrived at St George's Chapel in Windsor to marry Prince Harry with the national flowers of all 53 members of the Commonwealth embroidered into her veil.

It was a sign that she and Harry – together with the younger generation of royals – intend to carry on their grandmother's good work right across the Commonwealth now the Queen no longer travels the world.

THE NEXT GENERATION

Harry is poised to carry on his gran's good work

Did you know that in broadcasting circles the Queen is known as "One-take Windsor"? It underlines not just her skill and poise in front of the camera but also a desire to get the job done.

But as ITV's new documentary reveals, she was no match for a chirruping bird in the Buckingham Palace garden as she attempted to record last year's Christmas broadcast to the Commonwealth. She was in the Palace's Regency Room recording the audio version of the broadcast when the sound recordist picked up the sound of birdsong on his headphones and had to ask the Queen – ever so humbly, we suspect – to do it all over again.

The two-part documentary takes its cue from this year's Heads of Commonwealth meeting in London to look back at the Queen's role in not just keeping this members-only club together, but helping it thrive.

Says programme producer Robert Hardman: "The Queen inherited her title, her palaces, her Crown Jewels and so much else. But the Commonwealth has been her own work. It was never a done deal. There were eight member states when she joined and now there are 53. That it is still going strong in a world of endless summits and multinational groupings is down to her."

Queen of the World features rare home-movie footage, expertly shot by both the Queen and Prince Philip as they travelled around the globe, as well as interviews with members of the royal household, and with those closest to the Queen, including the Duke and Duchess of Sussex. Cameras follow the young couple on their first joint engagement to the Marlborough House HQ of the Commonwealth.

"The Duke already has a good understanding of how it works and the Duchess is a fast learner, too," says Hardman. "They didn't need much in the way of introductions. They just piled straight in." TERRY PAYNE

THE PROBLEM WITH doing a talk show nowadays is that the mystery and intrigue of fame have disappeared. Because of the electronic world we live in they have been replaced by a familiarity that can often mean no matter what question you might pose to your guest, the viewer already knows the answer. Graham Norton has solved the problem by transforming the talk show into a party with everyone, including the audience, invited. And it works not so much because of Norton's interviewing skills but because of his rare talent for making his guests feel wanted and his ability to convince his guests, who are often meeting for the first time, that they are lifelong buddies. He is, to that extent, not so much a talk-show host as an illusionist.

If you want a glimpse of what talk shows used to be like, then tune into Jonathan Ross who, like Ol' Man River, just keeps rolling along with his jolly and idiosyncratic manner. I wonder if either of them has ever thought of aspiring to the American chat-show example of working five nights a week. I am often asked why it works in America, where it's a TV cornerstone, producing legends like Johnny Carson and Jack Paar, and today Jimmy Kimmel and Jimmy Fallon.

'The talk show has always been slightly dismissed as trivia'

Whenever I seek an answer to the question, it brings back memories of a time, 40 years ago, when my bosses at the BBC wondered if I fancied a pop at five nights a week. I was told all the BBC bosses were behind me. My immediate boss, Bill Cotton, whose idea it was, wanted a mix of showbiz, politics and sport and whatever else tickled our fancy to replace the ailing current-affairs programme Tonight, which was a flop in the ratings.

In those days the NUJ had a vigorous presence in the BBC and when the news of the new show broke, a cell of disgruntled hacks immediately began a campaign involving old ratbags like Dennis Skinner to point out the consequences of replacing "serious political debate" with tap-dancing or showbiz. This ignored the fact that the programme they objected to was to be conducted by someone with 30 years' experience as a journalist – not to mention a fellow member of the NUJ, which I still am after more than 60 years.

All their campaign needed was a cheap tabloid headline, which was eventually provided by a BBC governor, Mark Bonham Carter, who warned his fellow governors and indeed the nation that my five-nights-a-week stint would lead to "a trivialisation of the airwaves". His observation really took off. The NUJ threatened a walkout, questions were asked in Parliament. The Observer issued a dire warning: "Everyone will expect endless interviews with Peter Ustinov and that's not what current affairs are about." But the most extraordinary intervention of all came from Lady Faulkner, widow of the former Prime Minister of Northern Ireland. She was on yet another BBC quango called the Television Programme Policy Committee. She told her fellow members that the only hope for the salvation of all concerned was if the show went ahead I could be "broken in as a serious interviewer".

Lady Faulkner's intervention came at a time when my guests had included Henry Kissinger, Luciano Pavarotti, André Previn, John Mortimer, Bernard Levin and Christiaan Barnard. In the end, we agreed to do two shows, which was the worst possible compromise. I sulked for a while. I had an offer from ABC in Australia, which I accepted, and which led to a happy and lucrative career in what went on to become my second home. I never did get to thank Lady Faulkner.

THE ONLY TIME we've tried it in this country was The Jack Docherty Show, part of the launch schedule of Channel 5 in March 1997. Even that only lasted in its five-nights-a-week format until September the same year, when a flagging Docherty and a press mauling saw it become reduced until it ended up a twice-weekly show by September 1998. The only positive to come out of the experiment was that it gave a break to a young Irish stand-up called Graham Norton, who occasionally stood in as a guest host.

Which begs the question, why have we never had a successful five-nights-a-week chat show? The accepted answer is that we don't have the talent pool that America has and that the host would soon end up interviewing himself.

But this misses the point. It shouldn't just be showbiz, but also politics, popular culture and sport. Moreover, it could be freed from the strictures that hamstring our mainstream political shows: develop a house style, be polemic, controversial, opinionated about any subject. It could spark debate, be instantly reactive to the day's events, be they reality TV or Brexit, and, with the advent of social media, interactive in a way that TV bosses dream of. Indeed, we already have the seed of such a show when Good Morning Britain is hosted by Piers Morgan. Let him off the leash and give him a five-nights-a-week platform and we just might see this format succeed in Britain.

‘It shouldn't just be showbiz, but also politics and sport’

The real problem, as I see it, is that the attitudes I remember permeating the BBC 40 years ago are still around today across the whole broadcast community. The talk show has, and always will be, slightly dismissed as a piece of television trivia. To most bosses, it's electronic chip paper and therefore has never had the full backing of any commissioner.

The biggest indication of this is that if they don't know what to do with a talent, they often end up giving them a talk show. They disregard the importance of hiring someone who knows how to ask a question, while producers fail to understand that it must appear spontaneous while being highly structured. In America, talk shows are an integral part of the TV landscape, their hosts revered, and when one retires the scramble to get the host's chair is akin to the struggle for King Lear's throne.

I believe a five-nights-a-week show could work here, but only if we can get the bosses to understand what an important and entertaining show it could be, and we get the right host. Go on, take a risk, commit to it, let it grow. You never know, you might just like it.

Bargain Hunt

What are Britpop stars Jarvis Cocker and Bez doing on Bargain Hunt?

Bargain Hunt
Friday 12.15pm BBC1

ANTIQUES ENTHUSIASTS VISITING a fair this summer would have been forgiven for doing something of a double take at the sight of Jarvis Cocker among the crockery.

The Pulp frontman, who is more accustomed to playing a main stage than checking out antiques stalls in a Kent field, was part of a special episode of Bargain Hunt. It airs as part of BBC Music Day, an initiative that began on radio.

Joining him were no ordinary reds and blues. Cocker and Pulp's keyboard player Candida Doyle were flanked by expert Mark Stacey, while Mark Berry – better known as Bez – and Rowetta from 90s band Happy Mondays were aided by Catherine Southon.

Bargain Hunt's executive producer Paul Tucker describes the episode's eclectic mash-up as “total opposites coming together in one field” at the Kent County Showground this July. “There were one or two people staring in disbelief at who was there,” adds presenter Charlie Ross.

“I was expecting Jarvis to be difficult because I didn't think Bargain Hunt would be his sort of thing,” continues Charlie. “But he was absolutely delightful. He really entered into the spirit of things and I thought he was a really nice bloke.”

Jarvis did draw the line, however, at donning the infamous Bargain Hunt attire. “He's got such a fashion reputation that he didn't want to ruin it,” says Paul. “But he played ball, because he wore a blue suit as he knew he was going to be the blue team. But I think it was a step too far for him to wear a Bargain Hunt fleece.”

Shunning the Bargain Hunt garb certainly didn't dampen Jarvis's enthusiasm for antique

‘It was a step too far for Jarvis to wear a Bargain Hunt fleece’ hunting, and he was responsible for one of the more memorable items purchased on the day.

In the programme, the Common People hitmaker becomes somewhat enamoured with a unique Russian painting. “I think it's awesome,” he enthuses as he approaches the seller's stall. “It's fantastic. If it didn't sell, I'd buy it.”

His teammate Candida optimistically offers up the fact that paintings can make a lot of money. “They can,” retorts Mark, “if they're not this one.”

Paul laughs at the memory. “I thought maybe we'd missed something – maybe Jarvis was going to show the whole art world something.”

“He spent over £100 on it and it was never, ever going to make a profit,” reflects Charlie, adding that he couldn't see any of the celebrities having much of a future in antique dealing.

ULTIMATELY THIS PROVED to be a very unusual edition, with the episode's climax featuring an outbreak of anarchy never seen before on the BBC daytime favourite.

“Suffice to say I had to refer to the Bargain Hunt rulebook,” laughs Charlie. “I think it's the first time in history that we've had to look at it.”

Paul says that although they've had “various things go wrong” on the show over the years, what happened this time resulted in the episode's finale having to be re-shot.

“We had to deliver this show quite quickly after we filmed it, and of course we weren't expecting to have to do the ending again,” says Paul. “Although it wasn't expected, it certainly added an interesting twist and another layer to the show. I guess it's what you might expect from a bunch of rock 'n' rollers.”

The man who made murderers

As unused footage emerges of Charles Manson's gang, will it shed new light on how he brainwashed killers?

FOR SOME IT WAS the riot at the Rolling Stones' Altamont concert, for others the election of Richard Nixon as US president. But the death of the free-love dream undoubtedly came closer when one of its most aberrant advocates, Charles Manson, acquired the notoriety he so desperately sought.

In the summer of 1969, the career criminal, Beatles obsessive and one-time associate of the Beach Boys instructed members of his "Family", a group of young dropouts and runaways, to commit nine murders including that of pregnant actress Sharon Tate. "He confided in me about how groovy it was killing people," says Paul Watkins, Manson's lieutenant, in the new two-part documentary Manson: the Lost Tapes.

But what fresh light can be cast on this oft-told story? It was a conundrum producer Simon Andreae wrestled with for years, until the looming 50th anniversary of the killings forced his hand. As Quentin Tarantino and Mary Harron prepared fictional versions of the story (the latter starring Matt Smith as Manson), Andreae happened on a long-forgotten 1973 documentary by Robert Hendrickson.

Initially intending to make a drama about the crucifixion of Christ, Hendrickson had been put in touch with the Family by an apostate member, Mark Ross. Manson, awaiting trial and wanting a record of his grim actions, gave Hendrickson permission to film on the Family's Californian compound.

The result, Manson, was Oscar-nominated but drew scathing reviews. Sensationalist and drowning in psychedelic effects, it could generously be said to be of its time. The footage, shot between 1969 and 1973, was however both eerily intimate and insightful about the radicalisation of two dozen white-bread, middle-class kids. As we ponder today how regular citizens can be brainwashed into committing murder, there are contemporary echoes. Andreae says, "We're asking an eternal question about human nature: to what extent can we make hearts dark?"

THE EARLIER FILM, Manson, showed bright-eyed but dark-hearted youngsters spouting cod philosophy – and much worse. It was duly banned in 1975 when Family member Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, charged with attempting to murder then-President Gerald Ford, protested it could prejudice potential juries. She was convicted anyway.

Her concern was unsurprising, given the film showed her declaring "anybody that has ever gone against us, or would ever step in front of us, will be taken care of". Fellow Family member Sandra Good opines that "when somebody needs to be killed, there's no wrong, you do it, then you move on", as both cradle rifles. Paul Watkins brandishes a flute.

Deciding to make a less sensational update, Andreae was convinced Hendrickson must have hours of unused material. He hired an investigator to search for the man and his work, both of which had apparently disappeared. "Nothing happened for several weeks then, in autumn 2016, I got a text saying, 'I think I've found what you're looking for': 100-plus hours of 16mm film and dozens of hours of audio tape, most never seen or heard before. It was an extraordinary cache," he says.

DRIFTING INTO VIOLENCE

MURDERED BY PROXY

Hendrickson had died just two weeks earlier, leaving his family at a loss regarding his archive. "All this footage had been hidden away because part of his family worried the remaining members of the Family might come after them if they knew it existed," Andreae says. "But they didn't want to destroy it because it was unique culturally and forensically, and financially valuable."

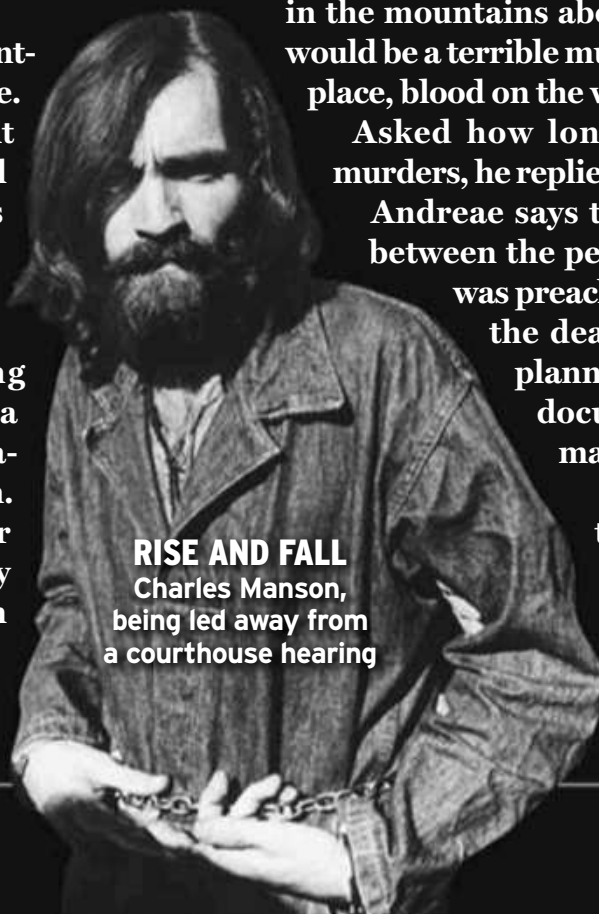

Given permission to catalogue the materials, Andreae compiled his documentary using extracts from the original film, together with unseen footage and contemporary interviews.

The latter took time to secure. While the likes of FBI criminal profiler John Douglas (inspiration for Netflix's thriller Mindhunter) were happy to talk, former Manson acolytes required more persuasion. "They could see we'd made responsible films, and were intrigued, if somewhat trepidatious, to see the tapes," says Andreae.

He secured new interviews with the Family's youngest member, Dianne Lake (aka Snake); Catherine Share, the matriarch also known as Gypsy who, when asked what she felt about Manson in the original film, replied "all the love I have"; and Bobby Beausoleil, who is still incarcerated for the murder of Gary Hinman, which preceded the others.

ALL THREE ARE repentant, says Andreae. "Beausoleil says it destroyed his soul and wishes he'd taken his victim to hospital. With Gypsy and Dianne, it's very clear to them now that Manson was hoodwinking them and selling them a dream. They have led relatively regular lives since then. Everyone knew Dianne in her community as the church lady with the fun hats, and when she came out as Snake, it just didn't compute." In the documentary, watching footage of her teenage self, Lake whispers, "Anybody watching this now would think I was a monster." Share, meanwhile, is shocked by film of Manson interviewed in prison while he awaited trial (Hendrickson had sneaked in a microphone and camera). "Oh, my God," she gasps as he rambles, seemingly incoherent. "He's asking us to break him out."

RISE AND FALL
Charles Manson, being led away from a courthouse hearing

Andreae adds, "All you normally see of Manson is him looking dishevelled and humiliated during his trial, or acting up to his reputation afterwards. [Here] we have footage of Manson the cult leader – and you feel some of the charisma and potency that the Family found so seductive."

An interview with Manson himself, who died in late 2017, was never seriously considered. "The last time he was interviewed for television in 1984, he had become this weird caricature," says Andreae, who is aware of Manson's penchant for self-mythology and media manipulation. "I'm not sure how much he would have added to the story."

The new documentary contains troubling revelations about Manson, however. His mounting physical and sexual abuse of Family members in the run-up to the murders has been well reported in the past, but here the extent of his forward planning is also revealed as Watson says: "Charlie told me that one day in the mountains above Beverly Hills, there would be a terrible murder, bodies all over the place, blood on the walls."

Asked how long this was before the murders, he replies: "About three months."

Andreae says this shows "the tension between the peace and love [Manson] was preaching to his followers and the death and murder he was planning". He admits that his documentary can be nightmarishly intense.

"You feel you're being taken down the rabbit hole. The challenge is: if I had been one of these people, could this have happened to me?"

In the Ryder Cup it's the hole that matters – not the parts

Friday 6.30am Sky Sports Ryder Cup/Main Event

A FOOTBALLER CAN'T SCORE a hat-trick unless he gets good passes from the midfielders, and he won't win unless his goalkeeper keeps stopping the ball. A batsman can score a great century, but he won't win a Test match unless the bowlers take 20 wickets. A winger in rugby can score a dashing try – but only after the forwards have won him the ball.

For some this mutual dependency is the breath of life, for others it's a perpetual frustration. For a few, it's an unthinkable restriction on their sporting lives – and they become track-and-field athletes or tennis players or golfers.

Occasionally we ask footballers how they'd manage on their own; that's why we have invented the cruelty of the penalty shootout. And every two years we ask golfers how they'd cope with something they never usually think about: other golfers.

It's called the Ryder Cup. It brings together 12 lone wolves and asks them to form a pack. That is the contradiction at the heart of the competition as Europe takes on the United States once again. This year, the competition takes place at Le Golf National near Paris; the United States won last time, but Europe has won six of the last eight.

'Even at his peak, Woods-with-partner was as happy as a wet cat'

In 1989 sports psychologist John Syer published a book entitled Team Spirit: the Elusive Experience. Steve Archibald, former Tottenham footballer and a client of Syer's, famously described team spirit as "an illusion only glimpsed in victory". Admittedly that says more about Archibald than it does about team spirit.

We've all of us seen team spirit in action. A good many of us have experienced it for ourselves on village greens and park pitches, when, for reasons impossible to define and at times impossible to predict, the whole really is greater than the sum of its parts.

SPORTS PSYCHOLOGISTS TALK about "membership individuals": those people whose greatest sporting joy is to sink self into common cause, respect of their team-mates the only prize they crave. You'd have thought such a person could not exist in the self-elected loneliness of golf, but up comes Colin Montgomerie. He never won a major title, but he played in eight Ryder Cup singles matches and never lost: he won six and halved the other two. On his own he was merely good – when he was with others, he was genuinely great.

Montgomerie is now retired, but his antithesis, Tiger Woods, will be back, once again, to have another crack at the other-people conundrum. In four-balls and foursomes – the matches you play with a partner – Woods's record is nine wins and 16 losses, with one half.

NO "I" IN TEAM
Can Tiger Woods help his compatriots to Ryder Cup victory?

HOW TO WATCH

Sky Sports has exclusive live TV coverage on its dedicated channel Sky Sports Ryder Cup, with over 40 hours live from Friday to Sunday.

BBC2 has daily highlights every evening across the tournament.

ON RADIO BBC Radio 5 Live has live Ryder Cup commentary over all three days plus breakfast reports on Friday and Saturday.

Even at his peak, Woods-with-partner was as happy as a wet cat. I remember watching him in partnership with Paul Azinger at the Belfry in 2002 – and the gasp from the gallery when Woods left his putt short. That's a terrible sin, one that shows you have let your partner down, if not forgotten him altogether: the partner has a much better chance of holing out if you overhit.

Woods's great strength at his peak was the way he seemed unaware of everything around him: crowds, opponents, weather, trees, cameras. To ask him to change for three days of the year was not only unfair, it was impossible.

Now playing his best golf since his hiatus in 2009, I suspect the last thing Woods wants or needs is breaking the rhythm to become a team man. But teams are strange organisms: perhaps it will be the remaking of him. Tiger, the new Monty? We'll see.

Into the unknown

After the Oscar-winning Room, Irish director Lenny Abrahamson has taken on another literary bestseller – The Little Stranger by Sarah Waters

B EING NOMINATED AS best director at the 2016 Academy Awards for the claustrophobic captivity thriller Room seems to have messed with Lenny Abrahamson's head. "By the time you get to the actual Oscar night, you're just knackered," reflects the 51-year-old Dubliner. "It's a full-on six months of interviews, receptions, screenings and waking up in the mornings in some hotel not quite sure where you are, but knowing there's a black SUV outside waiting to whisk you away somewhere else."

We meet in a sun-filled office in a Georgian terrace just south of Dublin's city centre, home to Abrahamson's production outfit, Element Pictures. In person, Abrahamson is affable and as articulate as you'd expect of someone who started off at Dublin's Trinity College studying theoretical physics and then switched to mental and moral science – philosophy to you and me.

Eleven years into his feature film career, Room, his fifth release, proved a breakthrough.

Adapted by Emma Donoghue from her much-lauded novel, its daunting story – about a young woman locked inside a suburban outbuilding with the small son fathered by her kidnapper – was certainly a hard sell. But the empathy and intelligence of Abrahamson's handling brought the film four Oscar nominations, with Donoghue winning for best adapted screenplay.

Abrahamson isn't ungrateful for his Oscar nomination – on the night he lost out to Alejandro G Iñárritu for The Revenant – but he speaks of feeling like he was "spat out at the other end", and finding himself "back in Dublin having to make your own breakfast. You realise it's hit you like a drug. It's like a chemical imbalance... you want to get back to that place and the best way to do it seems to be to make another Oscar-worthy film. As soon as possible." The Little Stranger may be that film.

In contrast to Room's contemporary, American-set family drama – and indeed its predecessor, Frank, a quirky musical odyssey about a singer who performs under a papier-mâché head – The Little Stranger (in cinemas from Friday 21 September) is an austere, subtle production, set after the Second World War. It's an adaptation of Sarah Waters's richly atmospheric, Booker-nominated tale (first published in 2009) of a malign, ghostly presence in a crumbling English country house.

A FTER ROOM, ABRAHAMSON found himself surrounded by scripts, uncertain which way to turn. He spent six months in a funk. "Then the penny dropped: I'm actually good at stuff I'm drawn to and can't let go of. I'd be waking up in the middle of the night and making notes on The Little Stranger. That tells you something."

As for being lured to Hollywood, "I'm lucky [success] happened to me when I got a bit older. If I'd been younger, I might've had my head turned." He confirms he was never in any danger of moving his Polish wife Monika, two kids and their dogs to a mansion in Burbank. Rather, his tranquil

Proud, not pious

There was something ironic about the Oscar-winning 1993 courtroom drama Philadelphia ending up in court. But its fictional story of a corporate lawyer wrongfully dismissed when he develops visible symptoms of Aids bore too many likenesses to the real story of Geoffrey Bowers. In fact, according to the suit filed by Bowers's family in 1996 accusing the film-makers of misappropriation, there were 54 such similarities. (The story was judged to be "inspired in part" by Bowers and a settlement reached.)

In the film, written with first-hand experience of homophobic prejudice by Ron Nyswaner, a gay activist, Tom Hanks plays Andrew Beckett, whose skin lesions signal his submission to the virus, leading to a trumped-up charge of incompetence that gives the firm its excuse to sack him.

The first mainstream movie to unflinchingly depict Aids in all its cruel detail, Philadelphia is in good hands with the late director Jonathan Demme, who never sugar-coats the sadistic reality of the epidemic, and rehearses the same kneejerk reactions on screen that some of the film's audience experienced. It was courageous for Hanks, still at the comic stage of his career, to play a gay man at a time when Hollywood wore its homosexuality as a dirty secret. Bigotry was rife and same-sex relationship stories were rare, even after Princess Diana's efforts to de-stigmatise HIV. Denzel Washington's ambulance-chasing lawyer Joe Miller (below, with Hanks) is homophobic but, as an African-American, is ultimately moved by Beckett's disenfranchisement. When the partners testify in court that Beckett brought Aids upon himself, it's a simple case of whose side are you on?

If anyone was in any doubt, they just had to listen to Bruce Springsteen's soulful, Oscar-winning theme song: "Saw my reflection in a window and didn't know my own face... and my clothes don't fit me no more."

A proud, humane but never pious film, Philadelphia led to a wave of better understanding. With the smash Broadway revival of Tony Kushner's Angels in America: a Gay Fantasia on National Themes, it feels like we've come a long way, medically and culturally – if not economically for those African nations still suffering. We must never forget.

RT Offer To order Philadelphia on DVD for £6.99 (RRP £9.99) including p&p, call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply) quoting ref RT1661. Your contract for supply of goods is with Simply Media home base is an island off the Irish west coast.

THIS OLD HOUSE

Working with screenwriter Lucinda Coxon, for The Little Stranger Abrahamson has delivered the essence of the expansive page-turner, with the events that beset an aristocratic Berkshire family seat sharing equal billing with the conflicted feelings of Domhnall Gleeson's social-climbing doctor as he grapples with the spooky happenings. His pent-up passion for daughter of the house Ruth Wilson comes from the spell the house itself cast on him as a working-class schoolboy.

'I'm good at stuff I'm drawn to and can't let go of'

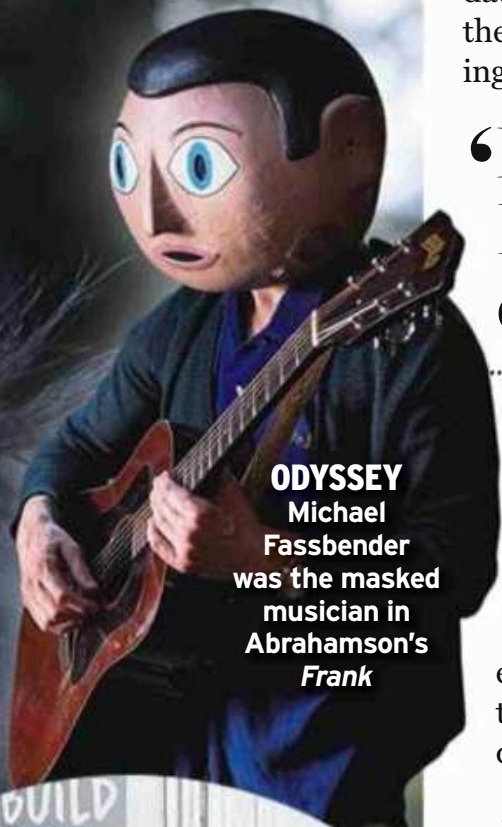

"I like a challenge," Abrahamson says. "You've got character study, social study, period drama and a ghost story escalating in intensity, all looking to be brought together to make something coherent. And at the heart of it is this doctor, who's excluded from this world of aristocratic entitlement. He's fascinated by the thing he doesn't want to want – but can't help himself."

IF THERE IS a thread to Abrahamson's varied filmography, it is protagonists who are divided souls. Gleeson's gnawing contradictions echo the unease felt by the captive mother in Room: she longs for freedom only to find it tainted. In his breakout film, What Richard Did, an elite rugby-playing alpha male is forced into self-examination after a drunken incident.

The bestselling Waters has confided to him that The Little Stranger is her favourite adaptation of one of her books. So how has he handled the spectral element of a seemingly accursed old house without the usual cheap jump-scares or tricky digital enhancements? "I have absolutely zero belief in the supernatural," says the science graduate. "But it's that thing where you can experience a frisson in particular places, certain houses that don't feel quite right, or you visit a city where things somehow seem that bit off. You start to lose your commitment to the natural, the solid, and get a heightened sense of the possibility of bad things happening. If you can manage to convey that on screen without the usual CGI and gore, then the effect on the viewer can only be stronger."

FILM OF THE DAY

Die Hard 2 ★★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm E4 18

ACTION Although rarely used in evidence, I feel that the first two Die Hard movies in 1988 and 1990 were vital in reviving the disaster movie in the second half of the 90s. Both are firmly rooted, respectively, in 70s classics The Towering Inferno and Airport (the latter the launch of a franchise at Chicago's Lincoln International during a snowstorm). For Bruce Willis's second one-cop-against-the-world outing, John McClane arrives at Dulles in Washington to meet his unlucky wife during a blizzard. But rogue Special Forces soldiers hack air-traffic control and demand an extradited drug lord is freed or they'll start crashing circling planes, one of which contains the long-suffering Mrs McClane (Bonnie Bedelia). Combining his famous DIY initiative with the inside knowledge of working men (janitor Tom Bower and returning LAPD cop Reginald VelJohnson), McClane has a lot more souls to save, but this time there are snowmobiles. William Atherton is also back to represent the not-yet fake news media. (US 1990, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

DAYTIME

P Tarzan ★★★
1.00-2.50pm 5STAR PG

ADVENTURE Over 100 years since the first outing of Edgar Rice Burroughs's apeman creation comes this motion-capture cartoon, which grafts some surprising visual nods to Avatar and Jurassic Park on to the basic plot. Young JJ Greystoke survives a helicopter crash that kills his family, and is raised by gorillas to become the legendary vine-swinger (voiced by Kellan Lutz). Years later, the evil head of the Greystoke firm threatens Tarzan's animal family. It's a lively fantasy that packs in enough action to pass muster. AJ (Ger 2013)

EVENING

Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban ★★★★★
6.00-8.35pm ITV PG

FANTASY Mexican director Alfonso Cuarón brings an edgier feel to this third instalment, which has boy wizard Harry (Daniel Radcliffe) contending not only with Gary Oldman's escaped convict, but also the difficulties involved with turning teen. There's still plenty of fun to be had, though, with ghouls and gadgets galore. Timothy Spall, Emma Thompson and David Thewlis join the list of cameoing stars, while the leads are all growing into their roles. The film has the odd dull patch, but, by and large, it's on a par with its predecessors. DA (US/UK 2004, may be edited for violence, HD)

A Tale of Two Cities ★★★
7.00-9.20pm Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA Dirk Bogarde gives a good account of himself in this Rank remake of Charles Dickens's French Revolution novel. TEB Clarke, who scripted many of the best Ealing comedies, was perhaps an odd choice for such a prestigious project and, in striving for dramatic weight, he is occasionally guilty of being pompous and ponderous. But director Ralph Thomas brings the best out of his cast, with Dorothy Tutin a fetching Lucie Manette and Christopher Lee a hissable Marquis St Evremonde. DP (UK 1957, BW)

P Gods of Egypt ★
9.00-11.25pm C4 12

ADVENTURE This action blockbuster is set in Ancient Egypt, where a mortal (Brenton Thwaites) convinces a fallen god (Nikolaj Coster-Waldau) to help him overthrow the evil god-king Set (Gerard Butler). Drenched in off-putting computer effects, the story tries to be part fantasy adventure, part superhero film, failing to meet either goal. As the tale gets more ludicrous, so, too, does the action. Thwaites and Coster-Waldau are a comically bad double act, but neither compare to the scenery chewing Butler, whose performance is a mess of posturing. JL (US 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

P 300: Rise of an Empire ★★★★★
9.00-11.10pm Syfy 15

ACTION This worthy companion piece to Zack Snyder's 300 sees General Themistocles (Sullivan Stapleton) rally his fellow Grecians against the massive Persian navy led by ruthless commander Artemisia (Eva Green). Like 300, the film is based on a Frank Miller graphic novel, and director Noam Murro sticks to what worked the first time in terms of raw violence and rugged action. While Stapleton can't quite match the charisma of Gerard Butler's Leonidas, a breathtaking Green does evil in the highest style possible, despite being saddled with the most risible dialogue. AJ (US 2013, violence, a sex scene, nudity)

P Dancer ★★★
11.00pm-12.20am BBC2 12

DOCUMENTARY Director Steven Cantor and subject Sergei Polunin seem uncertain which story to tell in this moving but unfocused profile of a self-styled ballet bad boy. A promising child gymnast, Polunin left the run-down Ukrainian town of Kherson to become a dance prodigy in Kiev and London. At the age of 19, he became the youngest-ever principal dancer at the Royal Ballet. But the guilt of seeing his parents divorce under the strain of supporting his ambition drove Polunin off the rails and he quit after two years of drink and drugs. Slickly made, but too arch to be genuinely revealing. DP (UK/Rus/Ukr/US 2016, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

LATE NIGHT

13 Hours: the Secret Soldiers of Benghazi ★★★
11.25pm-2.00am C4 15

THRILLER Michael Bay calls his blow-by-blow procedural detailing the 2012 terror attack on a US compound in Libya his "most real movie". But it has more in common with the jingoism of Rambo than the sobering analysis of something like Black Hawk Down. Bay treats the adaptation of Mitchell Zuckoff's divisive book in simplistic terms: it's basically The Alamo, only in Benghazi. This works best when being visually dynamic and brutally immersive in its sensational combat sequences – it's certainly hard to ignore. AJ (US 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

The Skin I Live In ★★★★★ 12.20-2.10am BBC2 15

DRAMA Pedro Almodóvar offers his own distinctive take on "mad doctor" horror flicks with this story that follows obsessive scientist Antonio Banderas's illicit efforts to perfect synthetic human skin. Behind the doors of his country house, the sultry Elena Anaya remains a prisoner clad in an all-over body suit. Euro-horror aficionados will trace echoes of Georges Franju's Eyes without a Face as events unfold, but Almodóvar turns the seemingly familiar material to his own ends, as his twisted plot continues to engross and surprise. TJ (Sp 2011, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

King Kong ★★★★★
6.30-9.55pm C5

DID YOU KNOW?
Effects wizards needed 18 months to realise the CG version of the Empire State Building. The real thing was built in a mere 14 months FANTASY Last year's well-intentioned, 1970s-set Kong: Skull Island brings the official King Kong franchise to eight canonical films, with Godzilla vs Kong to follow in 2020. Purists will insist there's no topping the innovative 1933 original. I find I have a lot of time for the 1976 disaster-era remake. Let's say that Peter Jackson's $207-million-budget, three-hour attempt in 2005 is a lot better than it could have been. Jackson imbued two Tolkien trilogies with emotional intimacy, so he does have form, and his affection for what is a story about film-makers and the exploitation of celebrity feels very modern. That said, he pays homage by setting it in 1933, with Jack Black, Naomi Watts and Adrien Brody taking very seriously the roles of villain, damsel and hero. Motion-capture maestro Andy Serkis brings the 25-foot gorilla to detailed life and the set-piece action is big, including a re-imagining of the original's lost giant-spider sequence. (NZ/US 2005, violence, swearing, col/BW, HD)

DAYTIME

ParaNorman ★★★★★
1.25-3.20pm C4

COMEDY A misunderstood 11-year-old boy sees dead people in this delightfully quirky animated horror comedy that excels in both of its genres. Norman Babcock (voiced by Kodi Smit-McPhee) is a loner whose supernatural gifts make it hard for him to fit in. But he has to come to terms with his abilities after he discovers that his legacy is to break a witch's curse that has been hanging over his small New England town for 300 years. Co-directors Sam Fell and Chris Butler use superb stop-motion craftsmanship, solid storytelling, fantastic character development and clever humour to capture the look and atmosphere of classic horror films. Despite the subject matter, things always remain family friendly: kids will love the scary, spooky antics while adults can appreciate the references to the likes of Halloween and Friday the 13th. AJ (US 2012, HD)

Six Days Seven Nights ★★★★★
2.10-4.20pm Sony Movie Channel 12

ADVENTURE This sub-Romancing the Stone comedy adventure stars Anne Heche as a New York fashion magazine journalist who sets out on a romantic island trip with her fiancé (David Schwimmer from Friends) but ends up stranded on an even more remote island with drunken local pilot Harrison Ford. Unfortunately, director Ivan Reitman (Ghost Busters) decides that pirates and ludicrous plot twists are more intriguing than exploring the far more interesting chemistry between the two leads. It's enjoyable, though, thanks to the attractive screen presence of Heche and Ford. JB (US 1998, edited for language, sex scenes, nudity)

There Was a Little Boy ★★★★★
3.00-5.00pm True Entertainment

DRAMA Cybill Shepherd gets the chance to sink her teeth into a grittier role than usual in this moving made-for-TV drama. She plays a mother-to-be who is haunted by memories of her first child who disappeared 15 years earlier. The ever-reliable John Heard is superb as her husband and Shepherd is almost as good, helped by a largely unknown though fine supporting cast. JF (US TVM 1993)

EVENING

Suffragette ★★★★★
6.40-9.00pm Film4 12

DRAMA Director Sarah Gavron and writer Abi Morgan beat their feminist drum proudly as they bring to screen the fight for the female vote. Suffragette centres on a group of largely fictional women, although Meryl Streep appears as Emmeline Pankhurst. Beginning in London in 1912 during the escalating civil disobedience, we follow a wrung-out laundress (Carey Mulligan), her feisty colleague (Anne-Marie Duff) and the local ringleader (Helena Bonham Carter). The film illustrates the scale of their oppression and what forces they were up against and, while eschewing the conventions of period drama, it benefits from fluid, naturalistic visuals and a respectfully sombre hue. It's rousing and heart-stopping, yet forgoes some brutality, with the fidgety camera relaying the fear and frenzy but masking the violence. There are real women's stories here that intersect too briefly but Suffragette is an inspiring introduction to a chapter of history that's been disgracefully ignored. EAS (UK/France 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

Back to the Future Part II ★★★★★ 6.50-9.00pm E4 PG

SCI-FI After the success of the first time-travelling caper a sequel was inevitable, although this time around director Robert Zemeckis is guilty of gilding the lily. Stars Michael J Fox and Christopher Lloyd return from the original, along with Lea Thompson and Thomas F Wilson, but the script is too clever for its own good and the film gets bogged down by trying to cram in too many ideas and settings (past, future, alternative universes). The effects, however, are even better than in the first film, and the actors certainly enjoy themselves in a baffling array of roles. The more enjoyable Part III is on Tuesday. JF (US 1989, edited for violence, language, HD)

Quantum of Solace ★★★★★
8.00-10.10pm ITV2 12

ADVENTURE Daniel Craig's second outing as James Bond had a famously troubled production, which may explain why it fails to deliver on the promise of its predecessor, Casino Royale. Picking up events directly after that film's climax, it sees Bond looking for answers after the death of his lover, Vesper Lynd. The trail leads to Quantum, a mysterious organisation that has infiltrated the world's corridors of power and is moving to instigate a regime change in Bolivia. Marc Forster's take on 007 was hit by a writer's strike during its making, and the script suffers as a result, with the paranoid storyline as nonsensical as the Ian Fleming-inspired title. But viewed solely as an action spectacle, there's still plenty of excitement. JH (UK/US 2008, violence, HD)

Fun with Dick and Jane ★★★★★
9.00-11.00pm Universal 12

COMEDY Keeping up with the Joneses becomes a criminal enterprise in this loose remake of the 1977 comedy that starred Jane Fonda and George Segal. Burned by an Enron-style corporate crash, jobless Jim Carrey and Téa Leoni suffer the indignity of having even their lawn repossessed. The impoverished pair turn Bonnie and Clyde, only to wind up victims of director Dean Parisot's badly aimed gags as the film lurches wildly from satire to slapstick. There are a few chuckles early on, but once Carrey and Leoni resort to pulling heists dressed up like Sonny and Cher (with Carrey doing Cher), it's clear the script has hit a wall. SP (US 2005, violence, edited for language)

LATE NIGHT

Queen and Country ★★★★★
12 midnight-2.05am C4 15

DRAMA John Boorman's sequel to his much-loved 1987 film Hope and Glory is right up there with Ingmar Bergman's Saraband, vying for the record for the longest gap between a director's original film and his follow-up. Only nine or so years are meant to have passed since Bill (played here by Callum Turner) was a boy living in Blitz-torn London. Now he's a young man with a keen interest in movies doing his National Service. Not a lot really happens here – Bill survives life at a training camp and experiences a first love with a disturbed young woman (Tamsin Egerton). Sadly, the acting is uneven, although David Thewlis provides reliably good value in support. LF (UK 2014, swearing, a sex scene, brief nudity, HD)

Enjoy the best in railway travel on board the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express

NO-FLY CUNARD MEDITERRANEAN VOYAGE

INCLUDES A VENICE SIMPLON-ORIENT-EXPRESS JOURNEY

Experience the golden age of travel with a rail journey on board the Venice Simplon-Orient-Express, an overnight stay in the enchanting city of Florence and a classic Cunard cruise.

The Venice Simplon-Orient-Express harks back to a more elegant age of travel. You'll journey through the countryside in original 1920s carriages, featuring Lalique glass panels, wood marquetry and wood-burning stoves. Experience the gracious service as you dine in the sumptuous restaurant carriage, returning to your compartment to discover that your private lounge has been converted into a bedroom with upper and lower berths.

After arriving in Venice, you'll transfer to Florence for your one-night stay to enjoy world-class art and gourmet Tuscan cuisine. The cradle of the Renaissance, Florence is romantic, enchanting and utterly irresistible. It's one of Europe's great art cities, with extraordinary architecture and works of art at every turn. Visit the Uffizi Gallery to see Giotto's frescos, Michelangelo's David, canvases by Botticelli, Leonardo da Vinci and a host of other greats.

Next, you'll travel to Rome to board Queen Victoria for your Mediterranean cruise back to Southampton. There's something refined and regal about a Cunard cruise and the Queen Victoria certainly upholds the fine traditions of this luxury line. From its elegant public rooms to its gourmet dining and luxurious cabins, Queen Victoria exudes class. The range of options for high-quality entertainment and enrichment, as well as relaxation, make for the cruise holiday of a lifetime.

You'll call at the fascinating city of Cartagena, with its Roman and Carthaginian heritage, and experience the British quirks of Gibraltar before cruising back to Southampton.

FILM OF THE DAY

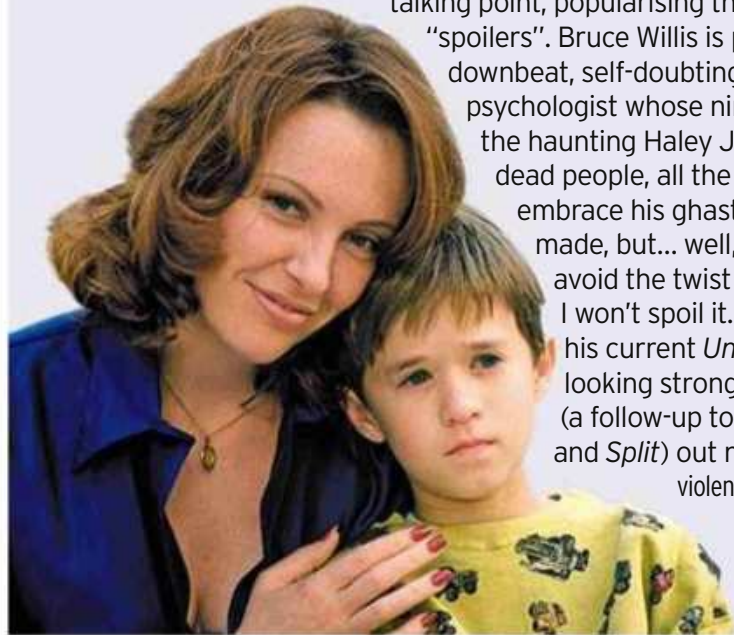

The Sixth Sense ★★★★★

SUPERNATURAL DRAMA The high-concept twist ending is always a gamble. But when it works, bingo! Writer/director M Night Shyamalan made a rod for his own career's back in 1999 when his twist in The Sixth Sense became a universal talking point, popularising the new concept

"spoilers". Bruce Willis is perfectly cast as the downbeat, self-doubting Philadelphia child psychologist whose nine-year-old patient, the haunting Haley Joel Osment, "sees dead people, all the time". Encouraged to embrace his ghastly visions, progress is made, but... well, if you've managed to avoid the twist for the past 19 years, I won't spoil it. As for Shyamalan, his current Unbreakable trilogy is looking strong, with third part Glass (a follow-up to both Unbreakable and Split) out next year. (US 1999, violence, swearing)

DID YOU KNOW?
In M Night Shyamalan's early versions of the script, Malcolm Crowe was a crime scene photographer, not a psychoanalyst

BIOPIC Offered contracts and star roles after Gone with the Wind, Leslie Howard chose to leave Hollywood and return to England to make films to boost wartime morale. Here, he directs and stars as aircraft designer RJ Mitchell, the father of the Spitfire. The cast includes Rosamund John as his wife and David Niven as the test pilot, while William Walton's score sums up an entire era of flying pictures. It was Howard's final screen performance: his plane was shot down in 1943 on a mission that became shrouded in mystery – one that has never been explained satisfactorily. AT (UK 1942, BW)

COMEDY HORROR In this daft, sometimes clunky 1963 remake of James Whale's 1932 comedy horror (itself based on the JB Priestley novel Benighted), the accent on horror is limited – although keep an eye out for Joyce Grenfell's ubiquitous knitting needles! Producer/director William Castle, who forgot to bring any of his famous huckster's gimmicks to the set at Hammer, adds a certain sincerity to the thunder-and-lightning schlock. Pratfalling Tom Poston is the token American among a glorious British cast boasting Robert Morley, Fenella Fielding and Peter Bull. As they attempt to avoid being bumped off in a Dartmoor mansion, Fielding (see profile below) steals every scene she's in. AC (US/UK 1963)

ACTION COMEDY Channing Tatum and Jonah Hill return for duty in this sequel to the 2012 cop comedy 21 Jump Street. The big surprise here is that the partnership has lost none of its charm. Directors Phil Lord and Christopher Miller treat it all with a knowing wink as the duo is sent under cover to college by their hilariously hot-headed police captain (Ice Cube) to identify a drug dealer. It might all be a bit overbearing were it not for the performances of Tatum and Hill, who send themselves up mercilessly. SP (US 2014, violence, swearing, sexual references)

Like many of my generation, I fell for the purring tones of Fenella Fielding in Carry On Screaming, seducing Harry H Corbett in a plume of smoke. Her sad passing earlier this month, aged 90, reminds fans of her golden years in innocently bawdy comedies with Norman Wisdom, Dirk Bogarde and Tony Curtis, plus regular spots on Morecambe & Wise.

Her husky voice was a gift to radio and the stage, but she rarely saw the top of a cast list. She was rediscovered in the 1990s, playing diabolical schemer The Vixen in the Uncle Jack kids' TV series, and she ennobled Rik Mayall and Adrian Edmondson's 1999 film Guest House Paradiso.

Three decades earlier she had been approached by Fellini, but nothing materialised. Ah, what might have been, darling! AC

THRILLER Detective Holly Hunter teams up with agoraphobic criminal psychologist Sigourney Weaver to hunt down a serial killer duplicating the crimes of his most notorious predecessors.

SCI-FI ADVENTURE Director Robert Zemeckis's blockbusting trilogy went slightly off the rails with the second segment, but it got right back on track with this concluding instalment. Shot back-to-back with Part II, the film is set predominantly in the Old West and offers Michael J Fox the chance to indulge in all the sharpshooting situations that made Saturday matinee western serials such a treat. As before, the plot revolves around the need to tinker with time and the problem of how to power the trusty DeLorean car so that Fox can get back to the present. The inimitable Fox is again on cracking form, and Zemeckis neatly ties up the trilogy's loose ends. JF (US 1990, edited for violence, language, HD)

THRILLER An intriguing Hitchcockian tale from German film-maker Wolfgang Petersen, this succeeds better than most. Tom Berenger wakes up after a horrific car accident with amnesia and attempts to put his life back together with the help of PI Bob Hoskins, while Greta Scacchi is the femme fatale who may or may not be trying to kill him. There's a very neat twist at the end but that in a sense is part of the problem: there are so many bluffs and double bluffs it becomes quite exhausting to follow. However, Petersen directs with some panache and there's an excellent supporting cast, including Joanne Whalley-Kilmer and Corbin Bernsen. JF (US 1991, violence, swearing, nudity)

DRAMA Dusting down the classic story of the little man winning big, this triple-Oscar-winning boxing drama is shot through with genuine impassioned commitment, born of the fact that Sylvester Stallone realised this was his best hope of stardom. The notion, then, of success hanging by a thread unites both the character of boxer Rocky Balboa and of Stallone himself. Stallone, in fact, is highly convincing as a mumbling Philadelphia no-hoper who ends up having a crack at the loquacious heavyweight champion of the world, Apollo Creed (Carl Weathers, by way of Muhammad Ali). Sly also wrote the script and was rewarded with Oscar nominations for both acting and writing. If you're in Rocky mode, the first three sequels follow on consecutive nights. JM (US 1976, edited for violence, language, HD)

HEALTHCARE

WHAT IF YOU COULD AVOID NHS WAITING LISTS?

Find out how private healthcare cover can help you get the quick access to treatment you need

If you're new to private health insurance then you may be wondering what exactly you get for your money. At its core, private health insurance is designed to give you peace of mind when you need it most.

A private health insurance plan can offer you quick access to the medical treatment that you need by giving you access to private facilities and specialists – helping you to avoid NHS waiting lists.

You'll have a choice of where and when you want to be treated and a decision in who is responsible for your health care; often you can choose from thousands of specialists.

As a patient in a private room you can expect the comfort of en-suite facilities and your own TV and telephone. You won't have to worry about visiting restrictions, either, so your friends and family can come to visit you whenever they want.

Radio Times is pleased to be introducing you to AXA PPP healthcare, who provide affordable private healthcare cover.

WHY CHOOSE US AT AXA PPP HEALTHCARE?

We'll be there for you and your family when you need us most, covering you for new medical conditions that arise after you join.

With our plan you can expect:

- A FREE £100 M&S gift card when you take out our Personal Health plan!
- Quick access to diagnosis when you choose an out-patient option
- A dedicated Fast Track Appointments service
- Access to the latest licensed chemotherapy drugs on specialist referral
- Treatment from a consultant, rather than a junior doctor
- Ask us anything you like about your health, with nurses, midwives and pharmacists available at the end of the phone

*The Marks & Spencer gift card offer is for new customers only. The gift card will be sent to you within 28 days of receiving your first subscription payment if paying annually. Or, if paying monthly, within 28 days of receiving your second month's subscription. This offer cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer, apart from the 5% discount for paying annually. Only one voucher will be issued per household. Offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Silver Linings Playbook ★★★★★
1.00-3.00am C4 15

COMEDY DRAMA Jennifer Lawrence had a good year in 2012, with The Hunger Games confirming an emerging superstar and David O Russell's idiosyncratic Silver Linings Playbook buffing her credibility. Russell adapted this beguilingly offbeat love story, gifting Bradley Cooper a career-changing role as a bipolar divorcee who returns to his larger-than-life suburban Philadelphia family after a spell in a mental health clinic. After a chance meeting, he partners with Lawrence's young widow to train hard for a dance competition that promises to prove therapeutic. Robert De Niro appears in a rare autumnal role of substance, stoking the dramatic trajectory towards a ballroom dance-off. A genuinely unusual bittersweet romance that also boasts terrific choreography. (US 2012, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

The Southern Star ★★★
3.20-5.30pm Talking Pictures TV PG

ADVENTURE This African-set tale filmed in Senegal is splendidly photographed by Jean-Luc Godard's go-to cameraman, Raoul Coutard. Director Sidney Hayers tries to pull together the Jules Verne-inspired plot and a cast that verges on the preposterous, headed by George Segal (too urban), the ravishingly lovely Ursula Andress, and the great Orson Welles, who was obviously in need of the dosh. Ian Hendry and Harry Andrews bring dignity to a romp that isn't sure whether it's comedy or adventure or both. TS (Fr/UK 1969)

The Day of the Triffids ★★
4.00-5.50pm Horror Channel 15

SCI-FI A meteor shower blinds all but a few Earthlings (star Howard Keel among them), leaving society in a state of hysteria and at the mercy of carnivorous plants from outer space in this adaptation of John Wyndham's novel. While the Triffids themselves are efficiently bizarre and menacing, Steve Sekely's direction hardly provides the sinister spores with a shining showcase. That was left to Freddie Francis, director of the lighthouse scenes added later in a bravura effort to beef up the chills and thrills. AJ (UK 1962)

Fire with Fire ★★★
9.00-11.10pm 5Spike 15

ACTION Although it's probably the biggest movie yet to emerge from rapper 50 Cent's production outfit, it still has "straight to DVD" stamped all over it. Josh Duhamel (Transformers) stars as a fireman who is placed in the witness protection programme after getting caught up in a gangland execution carried out by an evil white supremacist (Vincent D'Onofrio). But when an assassin comes a-calling, he reluctantly turns vigilante. A notable cast – Bruce Willis, 50 Cent, Vinnie Jones – at least tries to bring some spark to proceedings. JF (US 2012, violence, swearing)

Chappie ★★★
10.00pm-12.25am 5STAR 15

SCI-FI If RoboCop and WALL-E had a baby it would be Chappie, a decommissioned law enforcement android secretly hardwired with consciousness. Forbidden by his boss (Sigourney Weaver) to experiment with the damaged droid, an IT designer (Dev Patel) gives Chappie artificial intelligence so that he learns like a child. When Chappie is kidnapped by criminals, his endearing naivety makes him a nimble mimic but an awkward "gangsta" and soon he's torn between good and evil. Hugh Jackman's appearance as a mullet-wearing bad guy is largely forgettable, but this futuristic thriller from District 9 director Neill Blomkamp is pacy and the punkish production design recalls Mad Max. KK (Mex/US 2015, violence, swearing)

Tale of Tales ★★★★★
11.00pm-1.40am Film4 15

FANTASY Matteo Garrone (Gomorrah) delivers a scrumptiously deranged, gorgeously ornate return to the grimmer reaches of the fairy tale. The European co-production comprises a trio of briefly intersecting stories taking place in three adjacent kingdoms, presenting the outlandish tribulations of the realm's respective royals – who include a possessive mother (Salma Hayek), a negligent father (Toby Jones) and an arrogant playboy (Vincent Cassel). The pace of this baroque beauty can be indulgently languorous, but the cast is divine and it looks fabulous. EAS (It/Fr/UK 2015, violence, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

THE SMART WAY TO SEARCH FOR FINANCE

If you're a property owner, then there could be a cheaper option...

If you're a property owner, then a homeowner loan (also known as a secured loan) could be a cheaper option compared to a personal loan. You can usually borrow larger amounts and over a longer term, making the repayment more affordable.

Freedom Finance has developed one quick and easy application, which allows you to get a tailored quote based on your individual needs from a panel of leading lenders – and there's no negative impact on your credit score.

Most importantly, Freedom Finance will take the time to provide you with only the loan options that you will be accepted for – and this gives you time to properly consider your options before proceeding to a lender. With no obligation to proceed, you remain fully in control.

What you'll get

- Rates from 5.1 per cent APRC
- Personalised to you
- Free, no-obligation quote
- Only one application
- All credit profiles considered

Friendly, helpful service

Radio Times has teamed up with Freedom Finance to help you to find the right loan for you. Whether you're planning your next home project or helping close family kick-start theirs, Freedom Finance compares loans to find one you're likely to be accepted for, without affecting your credit rating. Freedom Finance's customers highly recommend the company to friends and family for its no-nonsense approach and professional service, and it is rated "excellent"

REPRESENTATIVE EXAMPLE

A loan of £35,000 paid back over 120 months, plus a broker fee of £2,870 and lender fee of £367.50 added to the loan, will mean monthly repayments of £476.14. The borrowing rate is 8.69% and the APRC is 11.2% (variable). The total charge for credit would be £22,136.80 and the total amount repayable would be £57,136.90.

Lines open Mon–Thu 8.30am–8.30pm, Fri 8.30am–5pm and Sat 9.30am–4pm.

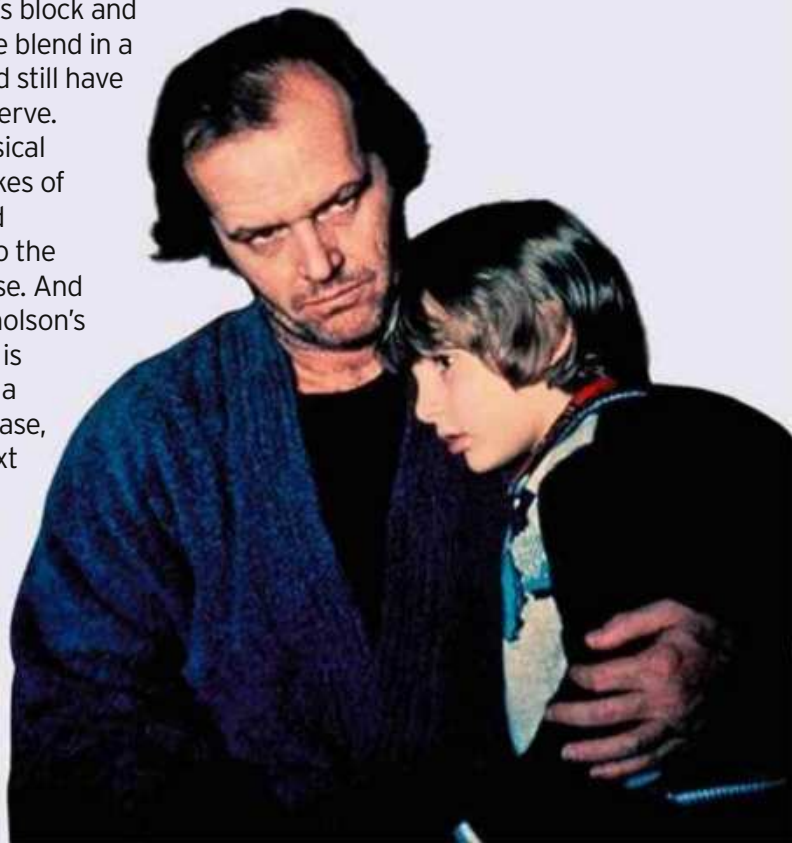

If you are thinking of consolidating existing borrowing, you should be aware that you may be extending the term of the debt and increasing the total amount you repay. Think carefully before securing debts against your home, as it may be repossessed if you don't keep up repayments on your mortgage. Minimum repayment period is 12 months. The APR percentage rate you'll be offered is dependent on your personal circumstances. Freedom Finance is a leading credit broker and not a lender. Credit subject to status, UK residents only.

The Shining ★★★★★
9.00-11.25pm Paramount Network 15

HORROR While Steven Spielberg's virtual-reality-themed Ready Player One amounted to little more than an extended pop-cultural sugar-rush, I almost forgave him during the Shining interlude, when the gamers visit the Overlook Hotel from Stanley Kubrick's masterpiece to search for whatever it was they were searching for. Just to see those corridors and that carpet again was a thrill. A radical revision of Stephen King's novel (which the author never liked), it focuses on the descent into homicidal madness of caretaker Jack Torrance (Jack Nicholson) after he moves into the off-season Colorado hotel with his wife (Shelley Duvall) and ESP-enabled son (Danny Lloyd). Themes of addiction, loneliness, writer's block and domestic violence blend in a terrifying way and still have the power to unnerve. Avant-garde classical music from the likes of Ligeti, Bartok and Penderecki add to the unbearable unease. And even though Nicholson's "Here's Johnny!" is commonplace as a comedy catchphrase, seeing it in context reminds you why it's not funny. (US/UK 1980, violence, swearing, nudity)

WESTERN Clark Gable rarely ventured out West, but on the evidence of this impressive picture he should have done so more often. From Monday Sky Store and Virgin Movies (also on DVD, Blu-ray and download)

SCI-FI ADVENTURE Cosmic chancer Han Solo gets his own origins story in director Ron Howard's engagingly propulsive and fun space western. Stepping effortlessly into Harrison Ford's shoes, Alden Ehrenreich captivates as the arrogant flyboy charmer who escapes his grungy home planet by joining the Imperial army. After befriending grifter Beckett (a charismatic Woody Harrelson), Solo joins his gang as they attempt to steal a shipment of precious fuel from a mining world for the power-mad Dryden Vos (Paul Bettany). Reunited in transit with his first love Qi'Ra (Emilia Clarke), Han faces betrayal and double-cross while forging a delightful bromance with Chewbacca (Joonas Suotamo) and an uneasy alliance with Lando Calrissian (Donald Glover). DVD OF THE WEEK

The Negotiator ★★★★★ 15 Released on 24 September on DVD and Blu-ray

Jon Hamm and Rosamund Pike take top billing in this high quality, taut and gripping political thriller. Hamm plays an alcoholic former US diplomat who, ten years after the Lebanon terrorist attack that killed his wife, is persuaded back to Beirut to broker the release of a kidnapped CIA station chief. A slightly underused Pike plays the CIA "skirt" assigned to babysit Hamm as he negotiates the highways and byways of 1980s Middle East power politics, with added complexity caused by connections between the kidnap and his wife's killing. The film's plausibility declines somewhat towards the end, but it's largely an exciting and impeccably played affair. Dave Aldridge RT Offer To order the DVD for £13.99, call 0844 848 7300 (charges apply), quoting ref RT1661. Where's the fun in that?

Whatever happened to the joy of sex, wonders Alison Graham

EVERY NOW AND again the country goes a little bit bonkers. It's currently clutching its pearls and running into the street, hailing a passing hansom cab, to escape all the sex on telly.

The fact that everyone seems to be At It has led to the kind of "Flipping heck, what do we have here?" newspaper features that use the words "cavort" and "romp". Words, incidentally, that no one actually says to anyone in real life.

There are saucy scenes all over the place as papers screen-grab the juicy bits in Bodyguard and Wanderlust and write about how it's the women who are now calling the sexy-time shots in television dramas.

This is all true, but then we know that telly doesn't tend to wake up to the zeitgeist until the zeitgeist has wrapped a blanket around its knees as a pan of milk warms on the stove (see diversity in casting, which was a looooooong time coming).

But, oh dear me, does it all have to be so joyless? It isn't too long since the so-called destructive, "angry sex" in Doctor Foster. And much has been made of the supposedly boundary-breaking adultery drama Wanderlust (Tuesday BBC1), where married couple Toni Collette and Steven Mackintosh decide (at the wife's suggestion and initiation) to sleep with other people.

'Everyone sounds as if they've trapped a hand in the car door'

There's lots of sex, but it's all so miserable – everyone sounds as if they've trapped a hand in the car door. After two episodes I decided I couldn't waste another second on any of them – and God knows I love a bit of middle-class angst.

In Bodyguard (Sunday BBC1), doomed Home Secretary Julia Montague (Keeley Hawes) came on to her bodyguard David Budd (Richard Madden), but she was in charge. He even bridled and referred to himself as "room service" when she offered to knock on his hotel-room door for a bit of booty after she'd finished her paperwork.

It was a good scene: Julia was in control, he was the BLT and pot of coffee from the 24-hour menu. But it's impossible to gloss over the fact that he tried to strangle her during a waking nightmare shortly afterwards, because he had a Damaged Soul. Then she was blown up by a terrorist bomb. Women, they aren't allowed any fun in dramas. (See also Apple Tree Yard, where a woman's adultery was punished in every possible way when she ended up in court after her lover murdered her rapist.)

NO OBJECTIFICATION

STILL, AT LEAST these women, all of a certain age (refreshing!) get to keep their vests on. It's good to get away from those nonsensical scenes where a naked woman in a drama never got out of bed without tucking the duvet under her armpits and hobbling to the bathroom. It looked ridiculous and cumbersome, like a ferret dragging a sideboard. In Bodyguard it was Richard Madden's bum that did a lap of honour while Keeley Hawes kept her modesty.

I assume these cover-ups (Toni Collette remains clothed, apart from that hideous underwear thing she wore in episode one that looked like the nicotine-stained net curtains from a 1950s dockside pub) are a statement, that women are no longer being objectified.

That's absolutely right, of course, but that doesn't mean this all has to be so miserable and worthy, does it?

THE NAME'S BLAND, BEN BLAND...

A resistance to going to bed at a reasonable hour at the weekend, and particularly on Saturday night, tends to lure me into the Sunday papers review on BBC News in the run-up to midnight.

It's usually presented by the splendid Martine Croxall (she's cool, calm and clever and should really be fronting the BBC's main 10 o'clock news from time to time).

But she was away. "Those of you expecting Martine...you've got the rail replacement bus service," said her stand-in, Ben Bland. Who was anything but, as it turned out. What a smashing, funny, self-effacing introduction.

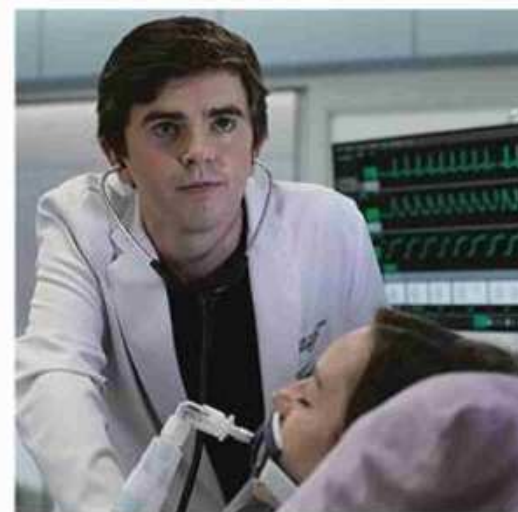

GOOD STAND-IN
Ben Bland on the BBC News channel

1 BINGED IT YET? Killing Eve iPlayer (BBC1)

Jodie Comer's incredible turn as an international assassin dominates this phenomenally smart and stylish comedy thriller. Can it possibly live up to last weekend's swaggering opener? Maybe not quite, but you'll be too swept up by the ace performances, the firework scripts and the sheer brass neck of it all to notice. The whole series is on iPlayer. Now.

CATCH UP 5 The Good Doctor NowTV/Sky Box Sets

Freddie Highmore plays an autistic surgeon with savant syndrome in a US drama that's scored colossal ratings over there, if not too many glowing reviews. It's unashamedly sentimental and follows the well-worn paths of syrupy medical dramas such as Grey's Anatomy – although its head writer David Shore also created the harder-nosed House. Highmore's performance has drawn praise from those campaigning for people with autism in the workplace.

PRISON, UP CLOSE 6 First and Last Netflix

What a simple, brilliant idea for a documentary series: everyone featured here is either just arriving at, or just about to leave, Gwinnett County Jail in Georgia, USA. As some desperate stories play out – we get a sense of how jail time is the natural destination for people who have grown up deprived – we're left to wonder whether the people we see, however optimistic half of them might seem, are stuck in a broken system for life.

REAL FOOTBALL 7 Six Dreams Amazon Prime

If you like the glimpses behind the scenes of a top football club in All or Nothing: Manchester City but would prefer something looser, less sanitised and not so close to home, try this. Filmed more like a traditional observational documentary, it follows a coach, a sporting director, a club president and three players (Saúl Ñíguez, Iñaki Williams and Andrés Guardado), as they navigate a season in Spain's La Liga.

EXPERIMENTAL DRAMA

2 Maniac Netflix

Anything might happen in a drama, based on a Norwegian series that's already on Netflix, with Emma Stone (right) and Jonah Hill as two losers who sign up for an unusual drug trial. Setting a lot of the action inside the characters' heads allows director Cary Fukunaga, of True Detective fame, to let rip. Available from 21 September

3 Another Chance Inside No 9 Netflix

You can't rewatch Reece Shearsmith and Steve Pemberton's comedy anthology too many times. If you're doing so via Netflix, here's the first time you can rewatch series three. The Riddle of the Sphinx and Diddle Diddle Dumpling are up there with the best ever episodes. Available from 21 September

4 Quirky Dramedy Lodge 49 Amazon Prime

A drifting, sad surfer (Wyatt Russell) decides he's destined to join a fraternal lodge, in a meandering dramedy about lost souls that takes its time to reveal what it's really about, if indeed it's really about anything. Get on board with the show's determination to be idiosyncratic and its dazed philosophising on life and loss will sneak up on you.

FRESH STAND-UP 8 Daniel Sloss: Live Shows

Netflix

The Scottish comedian, a veteran at 28 having first broken through as a teen, arrives on Netflix with two sets based on shows previously seen in Edinburgh and on tour. He's a bit self-conscious in his desire to shock with routines about vegans, Christians and drunken sex, but he knows how to structure a funny story and, on occasion, his desire to cover uncomfortable subjects is a pleasantly dark surprise.

OUTSTANDING MUSIC DOC 9 Pump Up the Bhangra

iPlayer (BBC4)

What's even better than a perfect rockumentary? A film about a genre that you (probably) don't know too much about, and which leads you right into the beating heart of the scene. BBC Asian Network presenter Bobby Friction brings passion and acumen to his story of bhangra, and how its development mirrored the trials and triumphs of the British Asian community in the 70s, 80s and 90s. Available until 25 September

10 DIVE STRAIGHT IN Forever

Amazon Prime

It's not often you watch a comedy drama and think, wow, this feels new. But Maya Rudolph and Fred Armisen aren't quite like any TV couple you've seen before, as two funny nerds many years into a stalling, childless relationship. With complete assurance, Forever constantly does the unexpected: so much so that you shouldn't risk reading anything further about it. Just try it.

YOUR NEXT BINGE

A seriously funny take on teenage angst

Plenty of teenage girls kept diaries in the 1980s, but Rae Earl's really stood out from the crowd. The Lincolnshire native's musings about her teenage life became a novel, which then went on to inspire a critically acclaimed TV series. My Mad Fat Diary tells the story of Rae (Sharon Rooney), a music-obsessed teenage girl growing up in Stamford in the 1990s. So far, so by-the-book teen drama, right?

However, when you discover that Rae's just been released from a psychiatric unit, where she's been staying after attempting to take her own life, you begin to get the sense that the show is something very different.

My Mad Fat Diary follows Rae as she attempts to get her life back on track and reconnect with her best friend, the glamorous and seemingly carefree Chloe, who thinks Rae's been in France for the past few months.

While it deftly deals with some pretty heavy issues, from mental health and suicide to body image, the show still manages to be laugh-out-loud funny. That's thanks in no small part to sex-obsessed Rae's internal monologue, which is jam-packed with humorous musings about the men in her life.

The dynamic between Rae and Chloe (Killing Eve's Jodie Comer) is pitch-perfect, and it's impossible to avoid becoming invested in her will-they-won't-they relationship with friend Finn (Nico Mirallegro).

But My Mad Fat Diary is often at its finest when Rae's sitting down for meaningful chats with her counsellor, Kester (Ian Hart), or facing off against her mum (Claire Rushbrook). Watch those scenes and you'll be left with little doubt as to why Rooney won a Scottish Bafta for her work.

"I'd love to think Rae would have a legacy," the actress said when the series came to a conclusion in 2015.

Dear diary, she definitely does.

How big can phones get?

Like cars, phones keep getting bigger and more costly. Last week Apple unveiled its new range of monolithic black rectangles: following the precedent of last year's £1,000 iPhone X, the iPhone XS (someone at Apple has a sense of humour) costs a grand and has a 5.8-inch screen. There's also the iPhone XS Max, with a huge 6.5-inch display. The fully-specced model costs £1,449.

For context, the first iPhone was £270 and had a 3.5-inch screen. A lot has changed in the decade since it was released: not only do we use our phones for everything now, but we replace them a lot less frequently. Hence: big screens and luxury price tags. They've both become ridiculous.

If you're looking for a budget smartphone, the Moto G6 Play (£170) is around the same size as the XS and does all the basics.

Going further, Doc Dig is a fan of the relaunched classic Nokias: the iconic 3310 (£40) and oddball "banana phone" 8110 (£70). Using these bare-bones handsets feels like taking a holiday.

If you must stay on the cutting edge, consider investing in plans such as O2 Refresh, which allows you to upgrade your phone at any time to a new model. Just be prepared to buy new jeans – those massive screens might not fit in your pocket. JONATHAN HOLMES

Pointless Celebrities

5.25pm BBC1

QUIZ Some groups of Pointless celebrities are very competitive. Some are very knowledgeable. The two don't always coincide, however, and that's certainly the case in this edition's opening round. It turns out that three out of four Strictly professionals – Katya Jones, Giovanni Pernice and AJ Pritchard – wouldn't know a hit single if it rolled across their dance shoes. Everyone wants to win, though, with the more culturally plugged-in Oti Mabuse taking an early lead.

An entertaining, mostly music-based show sees the pros team up with Strictly contestants, albeit not always the ones they were paired with on the show: Ore Oduba, Joe McFadden, Lesley Joseph and Debbie McGee – or simply “the Lovely” as she'll now be known. JACK SEALE

New Order Night

from 8.30pm Sky Arts

MUSIC An evening of Manchester-born music climaxes with a new doc about New Order. Decades (9pm) isn't a re-evaluation of their much-discussed (but never dull) history, though. Rather, it follows the band's preparations for their collaboration with the artist Liam Gillick and a 12-piece synthesiser orchestra during the Manchester International Festival in 2017.

New Order Live in Glasgow comes next, at 11pm. It's a gig from 2006, when Peter Hook's hirsute lurch still graced the band. The atmosphere is electric, but the struggle for stage dominance between Hooky and Bernard Sumner is, at times, palpable. GARY ROSE

Casualty

8.35pm BBC1

DRAMA Dylan is forlorn on his houseboat, feeling that true love has slipped through his fingers after he discovered Ciara's duplicity. But no one who passes through the emergency department's doors is ever away for long, and what do you know, Ciara is back, suffering from stomach pains. Blake, too, can't keep away as he turns up to pester his mum Elle while she's at work. After a chat with Jacob about Jacob's mum, Blake decides to act on his own initiative as a surprise for his father... oh dear. Meanwhile, Duffy has a headache and a pompous patient is an NHS-hater with a silly little notebook and a pen of bile. ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

PICK OF THE DAY Strictly Come Dancing 6.15pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT We've met the 15 celebrities, seen their group dance – and now the hard work really begins. Strictly Come Dancing launches this evening with the first live show of the series. It's a whopper, at two hours and 20 minutes, requiring a stamina from viewers that's akin to that of the celebrity contestants.

Early favourites are Vick Hope and Ashley Roberts, but look out for Stacey Dooley, Graeme Swann and Danny John-Jules, who could have their odds with the bookies slashed after their debut dances, while Susannah Constantine looks set to cause more trouble than Brendan Cole ever did. When RT asked if her smutty humour should be something Tess Daly needed to worry about, the What Not to Wear presenter retorted: “Yes, she's going to be terrified every time. Well, let's hope there's more than one time we come off that dancefloor...” Luckily for them, nobody goes home this week. FRANCES TAYLOR

Meet the Strictly stars: page 10

TV CV DAVID HAIG

Popular character actor David Haig, 62, is currently playing Bill Pargrave (right) in Killing Eve (9.25pm BBC1), but he's also known for his big-screen roles: he's appeared in Florence Foster Jenkins, Bridget Jones's Diary and Four Weddings and a Funeral. Haig was a stalwart of 90s TV in shows including The Thin Blue Line as DI Derek Grim and Soldier Soldier as Major Tom Cadman. He was also Captain Robert Battersby in The Darling Buds of May (far left). More recently, he's appeared in The Witness for the Prosecution, Penny Dreadful and Gold's Yes Prime Minister remake.

This year he also wrote and starred in West End play Pressure, which mixed war and weather and won rave reviews. He'll next be seen alongside Imelda Staunton and Geraldine James in the upcoming Downton Abbey film. FT

The X Factor

8.35pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT The same faces seem to be cropping up on The X Factor year after year. And we're not talking about Simon Cowell's ageless mug. There have been several singers this series who were big parts of the show last year, including Anthony Russell (who withdrew from Judges' Houses due to personal reasons) and Scarlett Lee, who returned with Never Enough (from The Greatest Showman) after falling foul of the Six-Chair Challenge. When isn't that song going to be a crowd-pleaser?

Tonight, auditions continue; though we don't know who will be taking to the stage, you can bet they'll have a "story" and this is the culmination of their "journey", whether they've been there before or not. FT

Mystery Road

9.00pm, 9.55pm BBC4

DRAMA New series A beat-up pick-up truck sits abandoned in the Australian outback, its two occupants, farmhands from a cattle station, nowhere to be seen. A missing persons investigation brings laconic, big-city detective Jay Swan (Aaron Pedersen) to the remote territory to assist local police chief Emma James (Judy Davis). Swan's single-minded approach is set to ruffle feathers in a community where the fact he's aboriginal makes him stand out further.

This simmering cop drama moves slowly, peeling back layers to get at the nasty underside of the local town. Pedersen and Davis spark off each other nicely, and the expansive skies and wide-open landscapes are stunning. DAVID CRAWFORD

How the Victorians Built Britain

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Michael Buerk ends his celebration of 19th-century innovation by focusing on how Manchester was shaped by the cotton industry. The success of the city's mills presented infrastructural challenges that led to world-class engineering feats: first an inter-city rail link to Liverpool, then the spectacular Manchester Ship Canal.

The industry also prompted further novelties, from sewing machines to shopping arcades. Buerk marvels at it all, mostly keeping his natural dolefulness in check. But the touch of class he brings is offset by the script repeating key facts. Do you know how many miles inland Manchester is? You will by the end of this. JS

DRESSED TO KILL

Assassin Villanelle (Jodie Comer) is in Paris, and worrying her handler

Killing Eve

9.25pm BBC1

DRAMA Jodie Comer has the most amazingly expressive face – as stone-cold assassin Villanelle she can be squeakily playful and purringly coquettish one minute and the next a dead-eyed smirking monster, watching her victims die.

Phoebe Waller-Bridge's adaptation of Luke Jennings's novel is turning into a treat. It's stylish and clever, with a terrific soundtrack full of bombastic Euro-pop tunes. And the cast is a dream – Sandra Oh is very comfortable as the obsessed, chaotic Eve, who's made tracking down the killer she doesn't know yet her mission. She's backed brilliantly by David Haig as her world-weary ex-boss and Fiona Shaw as an enigmatic MI6 operative.

Villanelle is in Paris but her handler (Kim Bodnia) feels she's unravelling and wants her to have a psychological assessment. Villanelle turns up wearing a billowing pink princess dress and black biker boots... AG

BLOODIED BUT UNBOWED
David is determined to unearth the truth in the explosive finale

PICK OF THE DAY Bodyguard 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK Before you embark on the specially extended 75-minute finale of the most talked-about British drama in years, make sure you have adequate provisions, because you won't want to pause it to make a sandwich or to mix another gin and tonic. And let's not have any live-tweeting, because absolute concentration is required.

This is a big, bold, bonkers, outrageous, even preposterous finish to a show that's enthralled the nation, with a smart pay-off for the millions of Bodyguard's devotees. Writer Jed Mercurio makes sure there are no questions left hanging in the air as the focus pulls firmly on to bruised, battered protection officer David Budd.

There's an almighty, breathless, trademark-Mercurio sequence of extraordinary tension that takes up almost the entire episode as David (Richard Madden) gets to the heart of the conspiracy that led directly to the murder of his boss. ALISON GRAHAM See page 49

Foyle's War

4.50pm, 7.00pm ITV3

DRAMA Today's repeats come from the start of series three, set in 1940. The first case revolves around the looting of bomb-damaged houses, but soon Foyle is investigating a murder and somebody is signalling from the Hastings cliffs to an offshore U-boat.

Amanda Root (so underused recently in Unforgotten) guest stars as the wife of an old friend of Foyle. From the moment she turns up, it's clear there's history between her and Foyle and, as the nature of the relationship unfolds, there are scenes of touching subtlety. In the second episode, Foyle and his driver Sam happen upon an illegal petrol scam, so she goes undercover at a fuel depot. DAVID BUTCHER

ENTERTAINMENT If you have a dog in the house, it'll prick its ears up. Yes, it's the 2018 One Man and His Dog contest, held in the village of Llansteffan in Carmarthenshire. Except it's more like One Man (or, potentially, Woman), One Youngster and a Pair of Dogs this time, as each team consists of a senior shepherd plus a youngster (average age, 11).

The seniors take on a particularly tough challenge called the brace, in which they need to control two sheepdogs at once. Matt Baker commentates on what feels like a time-honoured TV tradition while Anita Rani explores the Tywi estuary and goes in search of one of the area's richest natural resources – cockles. DB

The Leeds International Piano Competition 2018

7.00pm BBC4

MUSIC "The Leeds" has been sifting the global talent pool of pianists since 1963. It occurs every three years, and this is the first time it will not be overseen by its formidable founder Dame Fanny Waterman. The first rounds this year were held in Berlin, New York and Singapore.

Now we're at the business end of things as five finalists perform a concerto with the Hallé Orchestra: Mozart, Prokofiev, Beethoven and Schumann are promised. One winner gets £25,000, a guaranteed concert programme and the possibility of achieving the same level of fame as previous competitors such as Andras Schiff, Mitsuko Uchida and Murray Perahia. DB

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

FACTUAL If you ever wonder how the Roadshow experts became so knowledgeable, John Sandon shares a memory as he closely examines the dots on the base of a Worcester figure that indicate the date it was made. "When I was little," he recalls, "my father sat me in the corner and wouldn't let me out until I could recite all my Worcester year codes, so I've never forgotten them."

Elsewhere, the valuers hear some great stories as they appraise heirlooms: the man who searched for and bought back his father's war medals; the woman whose mother was sketched – beautifully – by Dame Laura Knight in wartime Coventry; and the story of "the Kardashian of dogs". DB

TV CV MATHEW BAYNTON

It's unusual to see Mathew Baynton in a straight drama, but the actor is currently playing upright Bute Crawley in period drama Vanity Fair (9pm ITV, below).

He also appeared in Abi Morgan's drama The Split, which aired earlier this year, but the 37-year-old is more recognisable for starring in a vast number of comedies, including Peep Show, Quacks and CBBC favourite Horrible Histories. He also played gormless Deano in Gavin & Stacey and is a long-time collaborator with James Corden.

Currently, Baynton is writing and developing the US version of The Wrong Mans (he co-wrote and starred in the UK version of the comedy, left, with Corden). His next TV appearance will be in BBC1's Ghosts, written with his fellow stars and creators of Sky1's Yonderland. The new comedy is likely to air in 2019. FRANCES TAYLOR

iPlayer (expires today)

If you're quick you can still binge on all three episodes of a 2017 series with and about one of pop music's greatest ever writers and producers. Regularly picking up a guitar to underline his point, the Chic man spins tales about the rise and death of disco, his ludicrously starry list of collaborators, and the future.

The House of Magic

2.35pm Film4

A delightful animated movie that deserves to be more famous. A cat moves in with a magician, to join a menagerie that has to work together to avert disaster. JACK SEALE

Battle of Britain: Model Squadron

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY The sky above the Dorset airfield is heaving with model aeroplanes for the last big push – it's 15 September, Battle of Britain day. As this educational, exciting and endearingly dotty series ends, we hear more from the pilots.

One turned to aeroplane modelling to help overcome anxiety and spends hours in his workroom ("it's not an obsession, it's a passion") though for both teams, British and Germans, the overriding celebration is of friendship.

As the run-up begins, things don't look good for the Luftwaffe, with engine problems, a battery shortage and gloomy weather. But the Brits are feeling gung-ho, so will history repeat itself, only in miniature? AG

Celebrity Island with Bear Grylls

9.00pm C4

REALITY The celebrities have now been cast adrift for ten days, and already two of them have walked. Although it's hardly surprising. The torrents of rain have been flowing as ferociously as the arguments and, tonight, tensions rise yet again when a row breaks out over food. The fishing nets are still empty and the celebrities are growing increasingly desperate.

Animal lover and The Only Way Is Essex star Pete Wicks is unimpressed by his fellow campmates' desire to hunt for meat. But there's a slice of compassion for Hollywood star – and brother of Julia – Eric Roberts, who having being something of a nuisance up until now, reveals a more vulnerable side. FT

(N Ireland: 11pm, 11.25pm)

SITCOM On the face of it there's nothing to this Australian sitcom, but the more you see of it, the better it gets. Almost all the scenes are inconsequential two-handers where characters sit and just shoot the breeze – including the world's least impressive detectives, forever on a fruitless stakeout, and their radio dispatchers back at the police station.

For the first of tonight's double bill, insecure Hendy is trying to impress an American DEA agent while the criminal pair in the drugs warehouse debate whether Madagascar is a real place. Be warned, though: the final episode looks set for an all-action climax with a big drugs bust finally on the cards. DB

Becky (Olivia Cooke) finds a way to make money from war

Vanity Fair

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA The soldiers are preparing for battle but first they must find the little-known location on a map. "Where the buggeration is Waterloo?" demands one of the regiment and with that, many fates are sealed.

So will Becky's little circle be protected from the full horrors of the Napoleonic War and its brutal slaughter? It's unlikely as losses are great (and the battle scenes are horribly visceral and effective).

It's an episode that takes dramatic leaps forward after beginning with Becky (Olivia Cooke) using her husband's absence at the war to make a bit of cash from selling his horses to snobs who are desperate to get out of Brussels.

Amelia (Claudia Jessie), meanwhile, wilts in her bed, looking pale and wan, as she awaits the return of her beloved George. The two women are destined to take very different paths in life... AG

The greatest story ever told

10.10pm Talking Pictures TV FREEVIEW

The tragic fate of the Titanic has proved irresistible fodder for film-makers since Saved from the Titanic, a lost film starring a survivor and made 29 days after the 1912 disaster. Titanic (1953) with Barbara Stanwyck was pure Hollywood soap, while James Cameron's epic 1997 Oscar magnet broke box-office records, unlike 1980's Raise the Titanic, which surfaced on Talking Pictures last week. A Night to Remember (1958) is still the one to watch: a moving docudrama featuring Kenneth More at his phlegmatic, heroic best. JEREMY ASPINALL

Burt being Burt

The Last Movie Star ★★★ Sky Store/Virgin Movies

This indie comedy may not have been the late Burt Reynolds's final film, but it acts as a worthy and poignant swansong. He plays a frail and lonely former movie star who receives an invitation to Nashville where he is to be honoured at a film festival. However, the event turns out to be a shoestring affair and the crotchety veteran soon goes AWOL. More than just a misty-eyed meditation on ageing, this is also a celebration of Reynolds's own career, with scenes from his classic films ingeniously woven into the story. JAMIE HEALY

Shaun the Sheep Movie ★★★★★ BBC

iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

After the Farmer finds himself lost and alone in the city, Shaun the Sheep and friends mount a daring search-and-rescue mission, leading to even more japes and scrapes. "Farmageddon" is promised in a sequel due out next year, but you can enjoy the original film on iPlayer until Wednesday. JH

THE PRICE IS HIGH
Kate and Michael (Michaela Coel and John Goodman) continue their investigation

PICK OF THE DAY Black Earth Rising 9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA A thriller needs a good, meaty conspiracy at its heart and this one is coming into focus. Or is it? This is only episode three; there are five more. So the chances are that whatever we think we know about the 1994 murder of Father Patenaude and the French army's role in the Rwandan genocide is way off the money.

Hence, when a mysterious stranger meets our legal-investigator heroine Kate (Michaela Coel) in the Paris catacombs and tells her, "Nothing you have been told is true, nothing!", we pretty much share her frustration.

Something fishy is certainly in the air at the grand, creepy chateau where that old toad of a government bigwig Barré (Ronald Guttman) guards his family's secrets. And Kate visits a Benedictine monastery: also beautiful, also sinister.

It's a story told obliquely via glimpses and half-scenes, with the odd bit of jagged violence to keep us on our toes. DAVID BUTCHER

Monkman and Seagull's Genius Guide to Britain

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY The former University Challenge stars are in their sky-blue Mini whisking around north Wales. In one of their passing chats the amiable Bobby Seagull admits that when he was 13 or 14 he learnt Pi up to 2,000 digits: "That was a misspent youth," he sighs.

More purposeful are the pair's visits to the magnificent Pontcysyllte aqueduct and Gladstone's extraordinary library in Hawarden. The Victorian prime minister was quite a reader: he is said to have got through 22,000 books in his life – about one a day on average – and you can tell he was concentrating because he made tiny notes in the margins. DB

Travel Man: 48 Hours in Slovenia

8.30pm C4

TRAVEL Book that mini-break in Ljubljana now. A beautiful lake, a funicular railway up to an ancient castle, free electric taxis and an impressive network of public dispensers serving groundwater and raw milk: it's got everything.

Richard Ayoade's companion this week is Eddie Izzard, whose improvisational skills don't quite provide a defence against the host's gapless deluge of quips, wordplay and deconstructions of the format. Few comedians would even attempt a gag that requires a working knowledge of both copyright law and performer's expenses; only Ayoade could pull it off while deep in a world-renowned cave. JACK SEALE

Reported Missing

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY This is such an exemplary series – careful, sad, sometimes happy, always humane and beautifully crafted. It's a small gem. The final missing person is Mickey, a 40-year-old father of four who's struggled with alcoholism since his best friend died when they were 18.

Mickey vanishes over an Easter weekend and his partner Claire is worried that he'd been fretful for some time before his disappearance. Cameras are with Mickey's patient family, including his parents who care for his three daughters, as weeks turn into months and there's still no sign of him. They are stoic, despite the torment of not knowing where he is. But the waiting is acutely painful. ALISON GRAHAM

Strangers

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA We see a flashback to happy times for married couple Megan and Jonah during a giggly Skype call, before she was murdered in Hong Kong and Jonah found out she was a bigamist. Quite the double whammy.

Jonah (John Simm) has teamed up with his wife's other husband David (Anthony Wong) to try to track down the rubbish truck that smashed into her car. But there's evidence of a conspiracy, and Jonah believes Megan sent him a coded message.

A lot of Strangers is, frankly, baffling, as there are too many plot strands involving, variously, Megan's daughter (with David), a Foreign Office apparatchik's (Emilia Fox) complex personal life, and an election. AG

First we had the outrage that Coronation Street (7.30pm, 8.30pm ITV) would dare to resurrect Jim and Liz's supposedly dead daughter. Now we know the truth: that the whole thing is a scam cooked up by a vengeful Jim to con money out of the McDonalds. But would Jim be so mean and stupid?

Let's take a look at the evidence. He once attacked Liz and left her at the side of a road, so that's mean enough, surely? And as for stupid, well, he did rob a bank wearing a flat cap as a disguise. And even I know from

TODAY IN SOAPLAND

Only £10,000 isn't enough for Jim, who spies a way of raising more cash after learning, from a loose-lipped Steve (above), that his darling Elizabeth had a one-night stand with Johnny. DAVID BROWN the movies that you're supposed to wear tights or a mask of Richard Nixon if you're going to try that.

So yes, Jim does have a track record for being as dumb as they come. But this doesn't stop Liz from now offering her life savings to Hannah (aka Fake Katie) to pay for urgent treatment.

Paddington Station 24/7

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY This series isn't afraid to cater for proper railway enthusiasts. Less dedicated documentaries would contemplate an episode mostly given over to the effect of warm weather on train tracks and think, we need to liven this up with human stories or eccentric characters. We need more than the odd glimpse of staff dealing with angry travellers. Not here. It's an exhaustive account of a points failure at Didcot, followed by extensive footage of a stretch-and-weld in west London and a methodical investigation of an uneven rail at Paddington itself.

Light relief comes from a major engineering project in Cornwall, guarding against subsidence. JS

Joel & Nish vs the World

9.00pm Comedy Central

COMEDY "I'm really feeling it," says Nish Kumar. "And by 'it', I mean a rising tide of sick." It's series two of the very funny travelogue in which Kumar and fellow stand-up Joel Dommett roam the globe humiliating themselves by taking on tough challenges, and a trek up a Peruvian mountain is taking its toll. The pair are off to meet a troupe of scissor dancers – a sort of Andean Cossacks – but the hike almost finishes them.

Big laughs come from blundering Nish and preening Joel's odd-couple friendship, and from their ability to spin one-liners under adversity. Kumar again, looking forward to altitude sickness: "Supposedly it's like a bad hangover. Should just feel like a Tuesday for me." JS

QI

10.00pm BBC2

QUIZ One of the highlights of QI has always been the outlandish and inventive buzzer noises given to the panellists, but this week each contestant gets something a bit more restrained in an attempt at keeping things inoffensive.

Of course, this is largely a set-up for a gag about regular guest Alan Davies's buzzer, but it's also a general theme in an episode where contestants are given extra points by Sandi Toksvig for politeness, giving them even more of an incentive to mind their ps and qs.

But will guests Jimmy Carr, Sally Phillips and Gyles Brandreth keep things civil, or dissolve into impropriety? Take a guess...

ADAPT AND SURVIVE
Dr James Fox explores Maori masterpieces

Oceans Apart

9.00pm BBC4

ARTS As we saw in the two previous episodes of Dr James Fox's series, the collision of indigenous cultures and Western sensibilities after the Pacific voyages of Captain Cook nearly 250 years ago caused great trauma in Australia and the islands of Oceania, which is still being worked through today. In New Zealand, however, the narrative unfolded quite differently. There were crises, undoubtedly, but there was also adaptation. The Maori, who arrived in New Zealand from Polynesia around a thousand years ago, were prepared to fight back or trade with the incomers, and today Maori culture and design thrive across the world, from the haka to wood carving and tattooing.

And it's not just about preserving the skills of the past; Fox is positively transfixed by Lisa Reihana's powerful video installation, In Pursuit of Venus, which couldn't be more modern.

Doctor Strange ★★★★★ Netflix

Director Scott Derrickson opens up the comic-book cosmos with this witty origins story, available on Netflix from today. Benedict Cumberbatch plays the neurosurgeon who loses the use of his hands in a car crash and heads to Kathmandu to seek a cure. There he trains with ancient oracle Tilda Swinton to develop his powers and become Earth's Sorcerer Supreme. The eye-popping special effects take the film to the next level of excitement, creating a top-notch and visually dazzling fantasy. ALAN JONES

Occult viewing

Pyewacket ★★★★★ 9.45pm Sky Premiere

With its simple premise, teasing build-up and creepy finale, writer/director Adam MacDonald's slow-burner is an indie horror gem. After her father dies, troubled Leah (an impressive Nicole Muñoz) performs a blood incantation calling on an evil woodland entity to punish her grieving mother, and soon an unholy presence is stalking their rural home. Maintaining an uneasy tension throughout, this menacing morality tale explores the dangers of dabbling in the occult with flair and confidence. AJ

A feast of Ford

How the West Was Won ★★★★★ 1.30pm TCM

John Ford had done so much to shape cinema-goers' view of the Old West, he was a natural choice to co-direct this all-star epic. Ford was responsible for the Civil War sequence featuring John Wayne and George Peppard, and you can enjoy more matinée presentations from the great director this week on TCM. JAMIE HEALY

8.00 A Very British Romance with Lucy Worsley
2/3. A look at love in the Victorian age, when romantic gestures such as posting Valentine's cards and sending flowers first emerged, and courtship was shaped by medieval chivalry. Director/Producer Rachel Jardine
Signed repeat 3am (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Life Story
1/6. First Steps. David Attenborough narrates tales of animals' journeys through life. He begins by looking at how animals overcome their first great hurdle – surviving infancy. In order to find food, flightless barnacle goose chicks must perform a 400ft leap of faith down a cliff from the ledge where they hatched. And young fur seals in New Zealand have learnt to avoid predators like killer whales by following a forest stream to a pool where they can develop in safety. Producer Tom Hugh-Jones
Executive producer Michael Gunton Repeated 2am First shown on BBC1 (S) (AD) (HD)

10.00 The Silent War
2/2. The Russians Are Coming! This history of how the Cold War was waged beneath the waves concludes with a look at the constant battle to gain technological advantage. As the Soviets developed bigger, faster and more sophisticated submarines than the West, a tense stand-off took place. Submariners from both sides reveal how the underwater arms race took ballistic missiles beneath the Arctic, and almost ended in nuclear disaster at sea. Director/Producer Graham Cooper (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

11.00 Hidden Histories: Britain's Oldest Family Businesses

Happy birthday, Will!

Still fresh and princely on the occasion of his 50th birthday, Will Smith has every reason to celebrate. His films were calculated to have grossed $7.5 billion in 2016, and a handful of them are yours to view on Netflix: The Pursuit of Happyness (the true story that earned him an Oscar nomination, in which he appears alongside his son, Jaden); two Men in Blacks (the first and third); and the Netflix original Bright, which proved critic-proof. Still in need of some Will power? All six seasons of The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air are available, too. ANDREW COLLINS

The Cruel Sea ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Director Charles Frend's stirring adaptation of Nicholas Monsarrat's bestseller offers an insight into the plight of sailors of all ranks during the Second World War. Produced by Leslie Norman (father of Barry), this is a prime example of the docudramatic style that, spurning the gung-ho heroics of Hollywood, characterised the best British war films. The performances of Jack Hawkins and his all-star crew also reinforce the sense of realism. It leaves iPlayer tomorrow, so don't miss the boat. DAVID PARKINSON

Taken 2 ★★★ 9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Olivier Megaton was originally a graffiti artist but switched to directing when a photographer suggested he give it a go. He was born Olivier Fontana, but chose his explosive moniker as he was born (on 6 August 1965) on the 20th anniversary of the dropping of the A-bomb on Hiroshima. The success of Taken 2 led to him reteaming with Liam Neeson on a further sequel in 2014. TOM FOLLEY

Happy birthday, Will!

Still fresh and princely on the occasion of his 50th birthday, Will Smith has every reason to celebrate. His films were calculated to have grossed $7.5 billion in 2016, and a handful of them are yours to view on Netflix: The Pursuit of Happyness (the true story that earned him an Oscar nomination, in which he appears alongside his son, Jaden); two Men in Blacks (the first and third); and the Netflix original Bright, which proved critic-proof. Still in need of some Will power? All six seasons of The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air are available, too. ANDREW COLLINS

The Cruel Sea ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

Director Charles Frend's stirring adaptation of Nicholas Monsarrat's bestseller offers an insight into the plight of sailors of all ranks during the Second World War. Produced by Leslie Norman (father of Barry), this is a prime example of the docudramatic style that, spurning the gung-ho heroics of Hollywood, characterised the best British war films. The performances of Jack Hawkins and his all-star crew also reinforce the sense of realism. It leaves iPlayer tomorrow, so don't miss the boat. DAVID PARKINSON

Olivier Megaton was originally a graffiti artist but switched to directing when a photographer suggested he give it a go. He was born Olivier Fontana, but chose his explosive moniker as he was born (on 6 August 1965) on the 20th anniversary of the dropping of the A-bomb on Hiroshima. The success of Taken 2 led to him reteaming with Liam Neeson on a further sequel in 2014. TOM FOLLEY

GOOD COP, BAD COP
Frida is on the level, but Alex is full of surprises, none very pleasant

PICK OF THE DAY Alex 11.05pm C4

DRAMA New series We Scandi noir fans are used to dark cloudscapes, cold weather and scenes of grisly violence. But the policemen have tended to be the good guys – until now.

Alex (Dragomir Mrcsic) is a bad, bad cop: he regularly snorts cocaine, extorts money and doesn't flinch from killing. But at the start of this impressively tense and absorbing Swedish drama, he goes a step too far when an accident (or is it?) sees him shoot long-standing friend Martin (who was about to become a father). Alex becomes desperate to drop his dodgy activities but his gangster paymasters are having none of it. Matters are also complicated when old flame Frida becomes his new partner, with a brief to keep an eye on him.

Alex shamelessly borrows a few clothes, and the screechy music and wobbly cameras can grate at times. But it works superbly for many reasons, not least the brilliantly moody visuals and the fierce, growly, intense charisma of a leading man who will, at times, take your breath away. BEN DOWELL

Trust Me, I'm a Doctor

8.00pm BBC2

HEALTH Endocannabinoids! The word feels good on the tongue, and the things themselves feel good if you can get them pinging in your brain. They're the reason runners sometimes experience euphoria; in tonight's first experiment, Michael Mosley looks into whether dancing or singing can also help with anxiety and other mental health issues. Can socialising and music make living with dementia or postnatal depression easier?

Another form of "natural" self-care many people are tempted by is detoxing: more and more teas, tinctures and plant-based pills claim to cleanse the liver and flush out the gut. But does your body need or want the help? JACK SEALE

Bad Move

8.00pm ITV

SITCOM The ability to self-sabotage is useful in a sitcom character. Jack Dee's disenchanted web-designer Steve has it in spades, his tendency to wishful thinking and saying what he thinks people want to hear just believable enough to be funny. This week Steve pretends to an important client that his move to the country has worked out beautifully, and immediately we know, on the "oh what a tangled web..." principle, that this lie will come back to haunt him.

In fact, of course, Steve and Nicky's house in the Yorkshire Dales is a roofless wreck with a stink from blocked drains. Pondering the septic tank, Nicky reckons "It's like a slush puppy made by Satan."

DAVID BUTCHER

The Supervet

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Straight to the hard stuff this week, as Noel Fitzpatrick awaits the arrival of a spaniel puppy that's been hit by a car. An X-ray, forwarded on by the normal, non-super vet who saw little Albie first, shows a spinal fracture, and that's just the beginning of a twisting tale that could, at every stage, lead to the worst possible ending.

The case of Flora the Scottish terrier – a "Monopoly dog" – also has more to it than first impressions suggest, and requires some detective work that leads to Dr Noel and the animal's owner bonding over a shared love of Columbo. But one stage of the examination is – painfully for Flora – more like All Creatures Great and Small. JS

Upstart Crow

8.30pm BBC2

SITCOM Julius Caesar is tonight's inspiration, allowing Ben Elton to tell a story of internecine fights among Will's players. After three series, the jokes (such as the ones about the comedies not being funny) are getting familiar to the point of being shop worn. But Elton is still whip-smart at transposing current talking points onto his Tudor canvas – and he has particular fun tonight pricking luvvie insincerity and double dealing.

The performances are once again first rate and it's nice to see Gemma Whelan's Kate get more of the spotlight. Yes, it's yet another tale of her desperation to act, but her love story is told with wistfulness as well as wit. BD

It was a smart move on the part of Emmerdale (7.00pm ITV) not to give Charity instant catharsis in the wake of Bails being jailed, as it's been much more interesting to see her go into a tailspin and start to question all that happened during her brutal, traumatic upbringing.

Already this week, she's woken up hungover in a field and committed that most heinous of soap crimes: injuring a beloved family pet. Now, she's preparing to meet her dad Obadiah, who chucked her out as a teenager. Will Charity regret letting him back in her life?

For the father/daughter showdown scenes, the always-excellent Emma Atkins has a top-class sparring partner in the form of Paul Copley (left), whose face (and voice) will no doubt be familiar to Radio Times readers. For many years, he was teacher Mr Long in Radio 4's King Street Junior and has also appeared in virtually every quality TV drama going from Downton Abbey to Last Tango in Halifax by way of The Lakes and This Life. DAVID BROWN

Joanna Lumley's Silk Road Adventure

9.00pm ITV

TRAVEL It's the best episode yet of a series overflowing with charm. The whole hour is given over to Iran, whose people reveal themselves to be tolerant, imaginative, sunny and curious – of course they are, but the very different character of the nation's government makes it easy to assume otherwise. It also means TV hardly ever sees the sights Lumley delightedly goggles at: Tehran, Kashan, Yazd and Shiraz all have something exceptional.

Lumley is on tremendous form, turning the obligatory headscarves into a fashion opportunity: "Today," she says, surveying Isfahan's stunning Naqsh-e-Jahan square, "I'm rocking the Florida golf-widow look." JS

Grand Designs

9.00pm C4

PROPERTY A Cornwall couple want to build a modernist surf house on a hillside. It's April and naturally they hope to be "in by Christmas", like every starry-eyed self-building couple ever. It's not much of a spoiler to say that isn't how it pans out. "At this stage, I wonder if Harry and Bryony will ever do justice to their vision," frets Kevin McCloud, a line that couldn't be more Grand Designs if it came with cedar cladding.

What's interesting about watching the build unfold is that at each stage Harry takes gambles that could backfire. This prompts Kevin to spiral off into musings that are esoteric even by his standards: "Like all of us," he says of Harry, "he's simply guilty of being human." DAVID BUTCHER

Taskmaster

9.00pm Dave

ENTERTAINMENT Rhod Gilbert – a welcome rogue presence on this series' panel – finds another way to work in that disturbing picture he has of host Greg Davies seductively posing on a bed in his pants.

The opening task is to bring in something confusing so Rhod brings in that photo, printed on a T-shirt, upside down. But is that as good a confusing object as Phil Wang's Thai wooden puzzle box? Greg tries to solve the box, fails and hurls it to the floor.

At which Jessica Knappett chips in, "It's frustrating, isn't it, Greg, when you're asked to complete tasks under pressure and there's a lot of people watching?" Cue big cheer from the audience. DAVID BUTCHER

JUST KIDDING

What prompted spoilt rich kid J Paul Getty III to have himself abducted?

Trust

9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA In an episode told entirely in flashback, the sorry saga of the kidnapping of J Paul Getty III spools to the beginning, when the "victim" himself hatches the plan that would go horribly wrong.

JPG3 (Harris Dickinson) is a feckless layabout, living with a clutch of other feckless layabouts in Rome. But he's penniless and needs cash to repay debts when it turns out that his mates have been spending money they've secured by using the Getty name.

So silly JPG3 decides to fake his own kidnapping as a means of arm-twisting his grandad into paying a "ransom". But we already know that J Paul Getty, the world's richest man, doesn't intend to pay a single, solitary cent. It's a trippy, slightly messy-feeling episode, but young Paul's life is so hopelessly off-kilter it probably wouldn't stand up to a straight narrative account. ALISON GRAHAM

Remembering an icon

Today is the tenth anniversary of Paul Newman's death, and happily for anyone who wants to watch a bona fide legend at work, there are several outstanding movies showing. Tune in to Sky Westerns to see Newman and partner-in-crime Robert Redford in Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, switch to Sky Greats to catch them again in conman classic The Sting, while TCM is screening Newman's star-making performance in boxing drama Somebody Up There Likes Me. Thankfully, there's no sign of his feature debut, 1954's The Silver Chalice, which he urged viewers to avoid in paid adverts years later when it was on TV. TOM FOLLEY

Prime gets prehistoric

A Early Man ★★★★★ Amazon Prime
Nick Park's childhood obsession with Ray Harryhausen's stop-motion dinosaur movies inspired this, his first solo directing feature for animation house Aardman. The upbeat, visually inventive tale sees cave-boy Dug (voiced by Eddie Redmayne) and his boar Hognob challenge Bronze Age invaders led by Lord Nooth (Tom Hiddleston) to a prehistoric game of footie. Flintstones-style technology and puns aplenty jolly up a story whose conclusion, like all the best sports movies, is reliably predictable. ANDREW COLLINS

Her life to live

A Fantastic Woman

9.45pm Sky Premiere
Chilean director Sebastián Lelio follows Gloria with another tale of female empowerment. Daniela Vega stars as a trans woman who is subjected to slights and humiliations on a daily basis. Those she tangles with are hung-up on her not being "normal" and in response this asks why you'd even want to be. EMMA SIMMONDS

LIFE HACKS

More pressing issues for Duncan (Ben Chaplin) and Holly (Charlotte Riley)

PICK OF THE DAY Press 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA So far Charlotte Riley's journalist character Holly has been a slow burn. In fact she has burnt so slowly I've worried at times she might sputter out altogether, sitting around looking cheesed off, doing worthy work on struggling broadsheet The Herald, defaulting to an expression of weary disappointment in each scene she's in.

All of which feels like a waste for an actress of Riley's powers, but tonight Mike Bartlett's newspaper saga gives her a bit more to get her teeth into, as Holly's boss Amina (who seems far too racked by self-doubt to have made it as an editor) waves a white flag after last week's humiliation.

Over at tabloid The Post, the Prime Minister is demanding an apology. "We don't need you like we used to," he warns editor Duncan. Once again, Ben Chaplin as Duncan sets a crackling fire under every scene he's in, while appearing to do virtually nothing. DAVID BUTCHER

Gareth Malone's All Star Music Quiz

7.00pm BBC2 (not Scotland)

QUIZ On the eve of BBC Music Day, something beyond the average celebrity panel game: Gareth Malone asks the questions and two teams of celebrities play the answer on their favoured instruments. Can Ed Balls play the piano to the same standard as his quickstep, and is he on a level with JB Gill from JLS, who also plays keys? Will Cold Feet/Fast Show star John Thomson thrash Keith Moon-style on the drums?

With the other guests less well-known and so presumably chosen for their musicality – not least Yolanda Brown, whose day job is being one of the UK's best saxophonists – expect an amusingly wide range of abilities. JACK SEALE

The Mighty Redcar

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Jade, 19, is passionate about politics, she campaigned for Vote Leave and now, days before the general election, she's canvassing on behalf of the Conservatives. She even has an "I 'Heart' Boris Johnson" tattoo.

On our last visit to the small seaside town (though I hope The Mighty Redcar returns for a second series) we meet the last little group of young people, all eager to forge some kind of path in the world. Like Billy, 16, who wants to work, though his dad's desperate for him to go to college. Then there's hospital care assistant Amber, kicked out by her mum, and now living in her car and begging friends for a sofa to sleep on. ALISON GRAHAM

No Offence

9.00pm C4

COMEDY DRAMA In the bustling ensemble of No Offence one character has always stood out: Paul Ritter's forensics polymath Professor Miller. Generally, Miller's role is to rattle off cynical asides in, at best, a couple of scenes per episode.

But tonight, in an episode scripted by series creator Paul Abbott, Miller moves centre stage as two women from the far-right group under surveillance corner him in a café and threaten his daughter, sending him into an unexpected tailspin with ugly implications. There's a typically Abbott-esque moment when Miller confides to his daughter, "You were called Lena because neither me or your mother could stand up straight when you were conceived." DB

Hollywood's Brightest Bombshell

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Fans of Hollywood's Golden Age will know Hedy Lamarr, once hailed as "the most beautiful woman in the world", from movies such as Samson and Delilah. Born in Vienna, young Hedy caused a furore in 1933 by appearing nude in arty Czech film Ecstasy.

However, this fascinating portrait is not all about her short film career, failed marriages and reclusive later life. Unearthed tapes and archive footage reveal Lamarr's talent for invention, notably her patented work on "frequency hopping" that arguably influenced the outcome of the Second World War and became the foundation for wi-fi, Bluetooth and satellite GPS. JEREMY ASPINALL

The likes of Emmerdale's (7.00pm, 8.00pm ITV) Emma Atkins and Danny Miller always seem to get the plaudits, but I'd like to take a minute to champion actor Dominic Brunt (right), who never gets the recognition he deserves. He recently told me that a lack of awards glory and acclaim is the secret to his longevity on the show. So I could be putting two decades of employment at risk by saying how quietly marvellous both he and Lucy Pargeter have been throughout Paddy and Chas's tragic baby storyline, which tonight sees them getting prepared for the birth.

Doctors (1.45pm BBC1), meanwhile, offers up the thrilling prospect of Emma and Zara trying to catch up on work at home, only to get distracted by the shopping channel. (With low-level drama like this, I wonder if viewers will do the same?) Thankfully, there is jeopardy elsewhere, thanks to a pregnant patient who's been in labour for 36 hours, but is having second thoughts about this zen approach. DAVID BROWN

Michael Palin in North Korea

9.00pm Channel 5

TRAVEL Michael Palin sees some bizarre buildings on his tour of North Korea. At an unfinished beach resort he walks around a gleaming airport terminal with no passengers or planes, but staff waiting pointlessly in shops. With its clean lines it looks like a set from a Wes Anderson film, dated and futuristic at the same time.

Of course, almost everything Palin sees has been laid on by his (surprisingly amiable) minders: but he feels he has got under the façade to glimpse the real country and "it doesn't feel brutal," he decides. But he's only seeing what they want him to see. "Many say it's a dictatorship," he says on the voiceover. Hang on: it is a dictatorship, isn't it? DAVID BUTCHER

Succession

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA A colleague told me he and his wife enjoyed binge-watching Succession so much, they've gone back to the start to watch it all again. Very understandable. It's a great piece of writing and acting, and for those of us watching the old-fashioned way, the climax begins now in a two-part finale (concluding next week) set at Siobhan's wedding in an English castle.

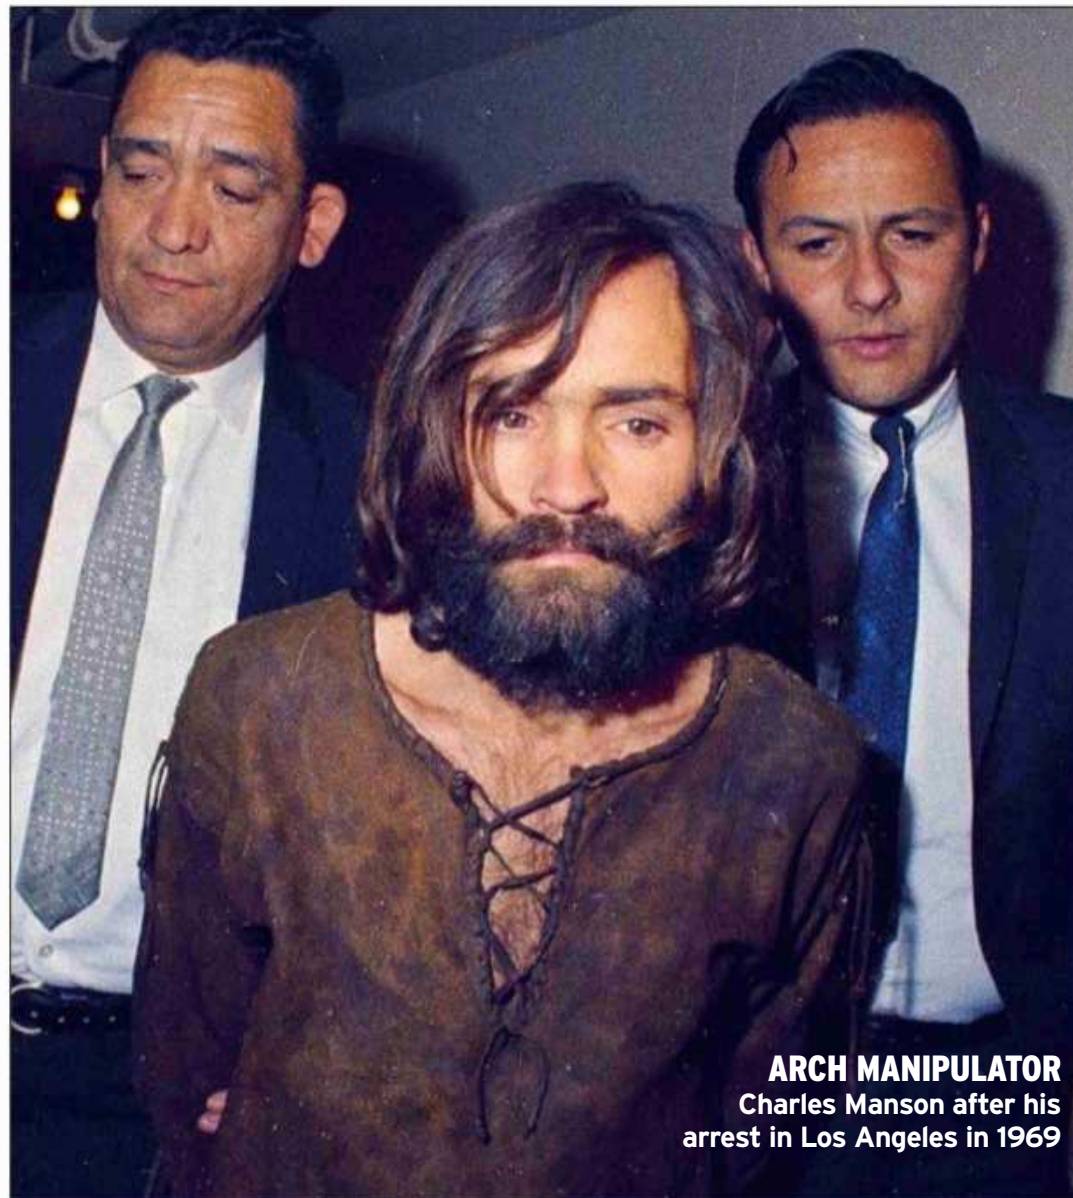

There, the super-rich Roy clan carry on their various feuds and betrayals and it's like a battlefield where little explosions go off in every corner of the plot. Plus, there's a guest turn from Harriet Walter as waspish matriarch Caroline, who meets doofus groom-to-be Matthew Macfadyen with the killer greeting, "Ah, look at you! You're very plausible!" DAVID BUTCHER

Sick of It

10.00pm, 10.30pm Sky 1

COMEDY New series Frequent Ricky Gervais and Stephen Merchant collaborator Karl Pilkington steps out of their shadows for this new project, co-writing and starring in his first foray into scripted TV. Pilkington plays Karl, a taxi driver version of himself who has recently broken up with his girlfriend and moved back in with his elderly aunt – but despite his newly single status, he's not alone.

For Karl is accompanied at all times by an imaginary version of himself presenting his unfiltered inner monologue, using the kind of tirades against modern society fans of his other appearances will know and love. It's a slow starter, but might be worth sticking with beyond this opening two-parter. HUW FULLERTON

ARCH MANIPULATOR
Charles Manson after his arrest in Los Angeles in 1969

Manson: the Lost Tapes

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

An elfin-faced young woman with pixie-cropped hair fondles a rifle as she looks straight to camera and says in a softly playful voice, "When somebody needs to be killed there's no wrong, you do it and move on."

The first part of this enthralling documentary is full of stoner-hippy rubbish like this as teen members of Charles Manson's so-called Family are taped by film-maker Robert Hendrickson shortly after the arrest of their leader and his cohorts for murder. Manson never got blood on his hands, but in August 1969 he persuaded his followers to murder, infamously, Roman Polanski's pregnant actress wife Sharon Tate and a group of her friends.

Two former members of the Family watch their young selves on the films. One, Diane Lake, says ruefully of the Manson ethos, "We just bought it, you know?" AG

RT The telegenic choirmaster deploys his guitar, piano and conductor's baton in his own music quiz. Two teams featuring well-known musicians and musically-minded famous faces - Rob Rouse, Yolanda Brown, Ed Balls, Pippa Evans, JB Gill and John Thomson - must say, and play, their answers to questions across all genres. See page 102.
 Series producer Toby Brack; Executive producer Lisa Clark (S) (HD)

7.30 Great British Menu

The North West chefs prepare their desserts as they continue the battle to cook at a banquet celebrating 70 years of the NHS. Liam's creation honours a friend who works nightshifts in the NHS, Ellis's dish is dedicated to the staff who saved his brother's life and Craig's offering pays tribute to his wife with an unusual Christmas concept. Only two can go through. (S) (HD)

8.00 Back in Time for the Factory

4/5. The volunteers in the social time-travelling experiment find themselves in 1983. Margaret Thatcher is prime minister, monetarism and the free market are the economic doctrines of the day and more than three million people in Britain are unemployed. Clothing factories in south Wales like theirs are struggling to stay open and hard-won equality in the workplace is under threat. In the face of cheap overseas labour, our modern workers' futures depend on producing a fashionable but tricky-to-sew velour tracksuit. Series producer Catrin Griffith (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 The Mighty Redcar

RT 4/4. Against his dad's wishes, 16-year-old Billy chooses to start a career rather than go to college. Amber, who's 20, works as a healthcare assistant at the local hospital but when bailiffs came to collect a debt she'd run up, her mother threw her out and now she's living out of her car. Jade, 21, campaigns vigorously for the Conservative Party in the run up to the general election, but she's about to realise that the job and opportunities she desires may lie beyond Redcar. See page 102.

Director/Producer Kate Bartlett Signed repeat 2.25am (R) (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 Hollywood's Brightest Bombshell: the Hedy Lamarr Story
RT Documentary portrait of movie star Hedy Lamarr, whose reputation as "the most beautiful woman in the world" belied a talent for scientific invention. Born Hedwig Kiesler in Vienna and brought to Hollywood in the 1930s, Lamarr's career shone all too briefly. However, her contribution to the development of "frequency hopping" was to provide the foundation for wi-fi, Bluetooth and satellite GPS. See page 102. Director Alexandra Dean Executive producer Susan Sarandon (S) (HD)

Benedict's home movie

Star Trek into Darkness ★★★★★

9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

Benedict Cumberbatch's try out for this Star Trek (Film of the Day, p45) was very much in the spirit of the series: he basically did it on a "communicator" – to us, a mobile phone. The urgent call for a tape came when the actor was in Gloucestershire for Christmas, prompting a dash to London and a hastily improvised audition shot in a pal's kitchen on an iPhone. Cumberbatch zoomed it off to JJ Abrams, only to be told that the director was himself on holiday. Although he was flustered and furious, the effort paid off. ANDREW COLLINS

Don't fall asleep!

Night Owls ★★★★★ 9.50pm Sky Premiere

A screwball comedy set over one night, this has beleaguered office worker Adam Pally (TV's The Mindy Project) having to keep his boss's ex-mistress (Rosa Salazar) awake after she overdoses on sleeping pills. As with a similar scene in The Apartment, a different kind of romantic comedy is on the cards thanks to the wackily dark set-up. It's fun to watch Pally try to keep himself and Salazar from making a fatal mistake, and the pair make for a charming double act as they endure a fast and funny waking nightmare. JAMES LUXFORD

Now on Netflix

Ouija: Origin of Evil ★★★★★ Netflix

The Hasbro parlour game franchise takes a step up the scare ladder in this horror prequel set in a well-realised 1960s. Elizabeth Reaser is the fortune-teller fraud who invests in a ouija board to reinvigorate her seance scams, only for her young daughter to be possessed by a Nazi Holocaust demon. ALAN JONES

TIME TO DISH UP
John Torode and Gregg Wallace reveal this year's all-conquering cook

PICK OF THE DAY Celebrity MasterChef 8.30pm BBC1

FOOD Some celebrities must emerge from MasterChef wondering if a change in career is called for. Spencer Matthews showcased deft kitchen skills, as did rugby star Martin Bayfield. One of the most memorable moments came courtesy of British Airways chef Frank, who took absolutely no nonsense from Gemma Collins. Despite her protestations that she was creative, he retorted, "You're not. You're a nightmare." Give him his own series.

There are now just three culinary protégés in the running to be named 2018 champion. Two tasks remain: they must present John Torode and Gregg Wallace with a faultless three-course meal, and will also fall under the critical gaze of Bryn Williams. At his new restaurant, they will cook for some of the country's best chefs, well-known to MasterChef viewers, including Marcus Wareing, Romy Gill and Shaun Rankin. FRANCES TAYLOR

Bargain Hunt

12.15pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE A guest is involved in auction-day skulduggery in this BBC Music Day special. Who could possibly bring even a whiff of scandal to taint Bargain Hunt?

Buying a load of old tat in the hope of making a profit for charity are Jarvis Cocker and Candida Doyle from Pulp (the blue team, though Cocker has obviously refused to wear the blue T-shirt) and Rowetta Satchell and Bez from Happy Mondays are the red team.

With experts Catherine Southon and Mark Stacey, they trawl the Kent County Showground antiques fair; all eyes are caught by clapped-out record players, and Cocker falls for a hideous painting.

Walking Britain's Lost Railways

9.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY Rob Bell follows the footprint of the railway line that once ran from the now vanished Sheffield Victoria Station to Manchester Piccadilly. It's another engaging odyssey and Bell is an enthusiastic companion, chatting amiably with people, including a group of ladies out for a stroll.

He finishes the walking part of his journey in Hadfield (the real-life location of The League of Gentlemen's Royston Vasey) but first he admires the engineering triumph of the three-mile trans-Pennine Woodhead tunnel, now packed with National Grid cables. Its building was brutal and claimed the lives of many navvies. AG

A Discovery of Witches

9.00pm Sky 1

DRAMA "What would I taste like?" Having been shown his gorgeous Tudor home, witch Diana Bishop has invited frosty (well, he is 1,500 years old) vampire Matthew Clairmont to dinner. He has just employed his enhanced sensory ability to describe a fine red wine when she asks the inflammatory question. She's taking a lot on trust.

But as mystical creatures descend, bent on keeping the pair apart – always the way in such dramas – this vampire, who can hear the blood coursing through her, may be Diana's only hope. Until she can harness her own magical powers, that is. At the moment, she's flying on pure instinct. GILL CRAWFORD

No, your eyes aren't deceiving you, the BBC hasn't brought the Porridge revival back for a second series. This really is EastEnders (8pm BBC1), though with cockney inmate Mick (or should that be Fletch?, right) getting on the wrong side of the fearsome Fraser (or should that be Grouty?), we may as well be in Slade Prison. All we need now is the laughter track – and, let's face it, that wouldn't be completely out of place on EastEnders these days.

Back on the Square, we're ticking the boxes of "illicit affair" storytelling as Sharon grows jealous of Keanu's friendship with pregnant Hayley. No doubt next up will be "Keanu helps Hayley when she gives birth", followed by "Sharon demands Keanu choose between the women in his life", which will come just before "Phil finds out about it all", climaxing with "Sharon moves in with Keanu and the Taylors" and "Phil has a drunken one-night stand with Mel". Pure guesswork, but I bet some of it comes true. DAVID BROWN

The Art of Drumming

9.00pm Sky Arts

MUSIC Here, we focus on drumming styles, kicking off with the acrobatic beats of the great Keith Moon: a "lead drummer", who sounded like he was playing while falling down a flight of stairs – all in perfect time.

John Bonham also had an instantly recognisable rhythmic personality, epitomised by his machine gun bass drum. Like all top musicians, Moon and Bonham played from the gut.

It's a shame neither of them are around to defend themselves against Ginger Baker's assertions of superiority. "They were nowhere near my level," he says. Maybe he's right. But could any of them hold a candle to jazz octopus Buddy Rich? "[Rich's] technical ability was unworldly," says Dave Weckl. GARY ROSE

Can You Feel It: How Dance Music Conquered the World

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Enter a dark, smoke-filled box with sweat dripping off the ceiling, as this superior series charts club culture's evolution from 70s parties in DJ David Mancuso's New York loft to astronomically priced nightclubs in Las Vegas today.

Evocative archive footage brings the atmosphere to life, while nerdy sound systems details will please the audiophiles. As the story shifts to UK clubs and raves, it's the insider anecdotes that entertain the most – from how to set up an illegal rave to, improbably, Bernard Manning at the opener of Factory Records' fabled club, the Hacienda. DAVID CRAWFORD

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The host with the most kicks off his 24th series in the company of Bradley Cooper and Lady Gaga, who are already being hotly tipped for Oscar glory with their remake of A Star Is Born. The last time Gaga graced Graham's red sofa, she became best pals with EastEnders' own Dot Cotton, aka June Brown. Could Doctor Who star Jodie Whittaker become her new chat-show companion tonight?

Speaking of space travellers, Ryan Gosling also rockets in to talk about playing Neil Armstrong in biopic First Man. Music comes courtesy of Rod Stewart. SARAH DORAN

The Good Place

Netflix

A third series arrives of the US sitcom about... well, when it started it was about a slovenly woman who dies and is admitted to heaven by mistake, but it's a lot more plot- and twist-driven than most comedies, so we've come a long way since then. Suffice to say fans will be rapt as they find out what's next. A brilliant cast is led by Ted Danson and breakout star D'Arcy Carden.

SPORT Golf's intercontinental grudge match returns. Two years ago Europe were beaten by both overwhelming US skill and the fierce patriotism of the Hazeltine crowd. Now Team USA travel to France to try to win the Ryder Cup on foreign soil for the first time since 1993. They may miss home advantage but there's a wealth of talent, including Masters champion Patrick Reed, US Open and PGA Championship winner Brooks Koepka, and comeback kid Tiger Woods. In their way stands Europe's trump card, newly crowned world number one Justin Rose.

But batting individual names around misses the point of a tournament that prioritises collective performance over solo brilliance. Two years ago the Americans finally cracked the code and, in captain Davis Love III's words, "came together like a family". Have they remembered what they learnt? JAMES GILL Sport: page 35

Daniel is departing

Imperium ★★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

It's your last chance to catch this tense, thought-provoking thriller – it leaves iPlayer tomorrow. Daniel Radcliffe stars as a bookish FBI agent who infiltrates a gang of white supremacists, earning the trust of the organisation's key players. Director Daniel Ragussis moves the plot forward in a way that will feel familiar if you've seen your share of undercover movies. Happily, though, the film has a sense of authenticity (the story is credited to a former FBI agent) and Radcliffe is convincing in the lead. STEPHEN CARTY

All the Money in the World ★★★

8.00pm Sky Premiere

The kidnapping of 16-year-old John Paul Getty III, heir to his grandfather's fortune, was one of the biggest stories of the 1970s. It's currently being dramatised in Trust, a ten-part series on the BBC, but here it's director Ridley Scott giving us his spin on events. Christopher Plummer is hugely impressive as the ruthless tycoon, but Michelle Williams is less convincing as the supposedly distraught parent, while Scott's approach favours melodrama over historical detail. TERRY STAUNTON

Robert Rodriguez's sequel to his no-budget El Mariachi sees Antonio Banderas assume the mantle of the guitar-playing stranger who arrives south of the border seeking vengeance. An early appearance from Salma Hayek, plus cameos from Quentin Tarantino and Steve Buscemi, add to the joyfully mindless mayhem. JOHN FERGUSON

As Radio 4's First World War drama Home Front begins its final run, author DJ Taylor reflects on the role of art in remembrance

Home Front

Monday-Friday 12.04pm Radio 4

BACK IN THE 1990s my RAF veteran father used to watch the televised Remembrance Day service at the Whitehall Cenotaph in a mood of deep despondency. It wasn't just that the ceremony made him reflect on the countless friends and work colleagues who had never come back from the Second World War; simultaneously, he was struck by the suspicion that there would come a time when people would stop remembering. As the intervening years piled up, and the Somme, Ypres and El-Alamein drifted away beyond recall, the casualties of 1914–1918 and 1939–1945 would cease to matter.

My father didn't live long enough to take an interest in BBC Radio 4's Home Front, whose final series begins this week. Had he done so, he would doubtless have been happy to admit that much of this gloom was misplaced, and that even a war whose last surviving combatant perished back in 2011 is still fresh in our memory. As to why we continue to remember a conflict that ended a century ago this November, the explanation lies in the fact its consequences are still central to hundreds of thousands of individual lives.

After all, one failsafe way of calculating the First World War's enduring impact is to inspect your own family tree and see where the branches take you. And so my immediate forebears include a grandfather, Lance-Corporal JW Taylor, who was invalided out of the Norfolk Regiment after Passchendaele, Great-Uncle Walter, who died in a military hospital in 1918, and Great-Uncle Reg, the victim of a bullet in the head that started making its presence felt long years after he had returned from Flanders. It's the same with my wife, who spent part of last summer on a trip around the battlefields in search of her Great-Uncle Cecil's resting place.

And all this is to ignore the wider ramifications of the war, its long-term political fallout, its intense mythologising, and not least a map of eastern Europe whose recent reconfigurations would have seemed perfectly plausible to some of the military strategists poised over their maps in the summer of 1914.

HERE, IN ALL kinds of ways (politically, communally, individually) is something that demands to be memorialised, and whose resonance – such is the weight of the history fallen upon it – seems to demand a continual response from historians, documentary-merchants, filmmakers and creative artists. From re-runs of Blackadder to the Kitchener recruiting poster, Flanders Fields lie everywhere around us.

As for the way in which the First World War is but none of them manages to convey the futility of so much of the campaign's military action as Siegfried Sassoon's poem The General, with its bitter concluding triplet: "He's a cheery old card, muttered Harry to Jack/As they trudged up to Arras with rifle and pack/But he did for them both with his plan of attack."

ART, TOO, TENDS to work by stealth, conveying its message by the sideways glance rather than head-on engagement. This approach was crucial to the novelists who wrote about the First World War in the decades after it ended, for the magnitude of the conflict presented them with an almost insuperable artistic dilemma. How could you deal "realistically" with something so vast, so multifaceted and so unknowable? It took until 1928 for the first "proper" war novel – All Quiet on the Western Front – to appear, ten years after hostilities ended. Meanwhile, without consciously advertising the fact, the war became the principal subject of nearly every novel written in the period from 1918 to 1939.

From the frivolities of Evelyn Waugh's Vile Bodies to the countless romantic fictions about women trying to find a husband in a world suddenly deprived of a million marriageable men, the First World War's consequences are always there in 20th-century British fiction, and made all the more important by their authors' awareness that it's too early to establish their long-time effect. There is a rather significant moment in Anthony Powell's At Lady Molly's, set in 1934 – the fourth instalment of A Dance to the Music of Time – where one of the characters is described as "something left over from the war". But so was nearly everybody who wandered through the Britain of the 1930s.

This is Home Front's last bow. It will end, a century after the conflict it is reimagining, in November 2018. Centenaries often encourage a sense of closure, the thought that a natural line has been drawn under some cataclysmic event and that there is nothing more to be said. There seems little chance of this happening with the First World War. Art, fiction, drama and film will continue to be concentrated on one of the great shaping forces of the modern age with the power to influence all our lives, from here to eternity.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Get Carter

All week Radio 4, Radio 3

Angela Carter: Of Wolves and Women was a very fine BBC2 documentary last month, in which the writer Jeanette Winterson commented that "every woman writing now has a debt to Angela Carter, whether or not they have read her".

With books that included her Bloody Chamber collection of folk tales and the bestselling Nights at the Circus, Carter (below), who died in 1992, created a blend of feminism and magical realism that made her one of the most brilliant and original literary voices of the past 50 years. She is clearly having a moment, because now comes a season of dramatisations of her work on Radio 4 and the chance to discover just why Winterson and so many others held her in such high regard.

Under the portmanteau title Get Carter, the week begins with something very special: the world premiere of an unmade screenplay – The Christchurch Murder (Saturday 2.30pm) – that Carter based on a real-life murder that took place in Christchurch, New Zealand in 1954. It's a production of haunting power, enhanced by the great Fiona Shaw as the voice of Carter herself.

There's a dramatisation of Nights at the Circus on Sunday at 3pm, while stories from The Bloody Chamber fill the 15-Minute Drama slot (Monday to Friday, 10.45am and 7.45pm). And Drama on 3: An Evening with Angela Carter is on Radio 3 on Sunday at 7.30pm (see page 128).

The Archers this week...

The day of Freddie's sentencing is drawing near, so Elizabeth urges him to do the right thing and admit everything to the police. But Freddie fears the repercussions, both from the law and from Ellis. Will he be brave enough to tell the whole truth before the judge delivers their decision?

Fallon's mood remains low, but Harrison is determined to play peacemaker following recent tensions. However, things don't go to plan and when Fallon puts her foot in it, hackles rise and tempers fray. Will Harrison's good intentions only end up making everything worse? Plus Alistair and Shula's fragile accord is tested when Shula hears from Alistair's solicitor... DAVID BROWN

The naked truth

Should I have debuted without a script?

DO YOU EVER get those dreams where you're in a public place without a stitch on? It happened to me when I was sitting at the LBC microphone for the very first time. Don't worry, I wasn't literally naked. There are cameras everywhere in the studio and in any event, I have a no-nudity clause in my contract: LBC insisted on it. But at 4.03pm on Monday 3 September the sense of vulnerability and shock that accompanies those nudi-dreams coursed through what doctors agree can still legally be described as a body.

More than a year after the possibility of doing this was first suggested, many months after 3 September was pencilled into my diary, and after two weeks of test programmes, interviews, publicity photographs and preparation, it was about to come down to this moment. The 4pm news bulletin would finish. A jingle with my name in it would play, and then the microphone would go live. I would have to say actual words.

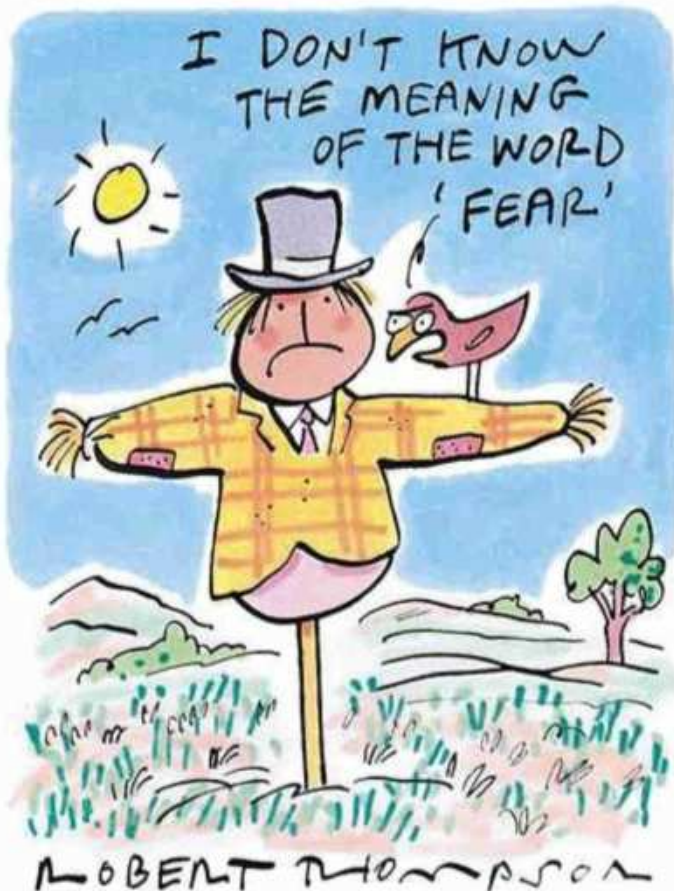

A sensible person would have written a script for this moment. Or perhaps, as is sometimes the norm at the nery start of new broadcasting ventures, recorded something, just to be on the safe side. A scrap of clothing: a loincloth to prevent embarrassment. I opted for nudity.

'With 20 seconds to going live, I had second thoughts...'

The day before, I had gone for a long walk in the countryside. A cloudless Sunday demanded I enjoy what could be the last hot day of summer. For ten miles I followed a route through forests and fields, soaking up the isolated beauty while considering what to say the next day at 16.03.

Previously in this column I've discussed my unhappy relationship with maps. On this occasion I had an app with detailed photos and written descriptions of every stage of the route, as well as an Ordnance Survey app that clearly showed me at every stage where I was. To be on the safe side there were separate maps from the people at Google and Apple.

I got lost three times. On one occasion, after becoming trapped in a field – where I swear to you the advertised gate did not exist – my only means of escape was to throw myself through a hedge. I wish I was joking about that, and so do my scratched arms. On the plus side, my extended meandering gave me plenty of time to consider what I wanted to say at 16.03.

My goal was to introduce myself to LBC listeners – who were used to a different voice at that hour – and to say hello to people tuning in for the first time. I would highlight how LBC was available around the UK and the world, and chat about what the new show might be about. Most of all, I wanted to present me, unscripted and real. Easier to hide behind some well-polished words; much more honest, and thrilling, to just speak.

WITH 20 SECONDS to go, I had second thoughts about the naked speaking thing. If only I had written a script for emergencies. What if I got mentally lost and had to throw myself through a hedge? I was naked. Think of the scratches!

Ten seconds. This was about to get real. The mic live light came on: it was just me, the microphone and, somewhere out there, the listener. I can't remember what I said. The detail has vanished, as the detail of naked dreams do. But like the dreams, I remember the feeling – intensely so. And I loved it.

Eddie Mair's show is on LBC, weekdays

Why did Chris Evans have to leave?

The departure of Chris Evans from Radio 2 subtracts only a small percentage of that station's output but it reduces its star power by around 50 per cent.

In recent years, Radio 2 in particular has given up trying to find any radio stars, preferring to import TV names instead. I first met Evans in the early 1990s when he did a show on GLR, the forerunner of BBC Radio London. It was a mid-evening show called The Greenhouse, aimed at teenagers revising for their GCSEs.

Show me the money

In those days, he was every bit as sparky as he is now. He also had nothing to lose. At the time, GLR was the only arm of the BBC that would have dreamt of employing such an independent spirit. I would imagine his most recent departure has been forced on him. Four burly men doubtless came into the room, each carrying a corner of a huge cheque, and he was just forced to take it. Precisely how huge a cheque nobody knows, but most people agree it must have been an extra million on top of the already generous stipend that Evans earned at the BBC.

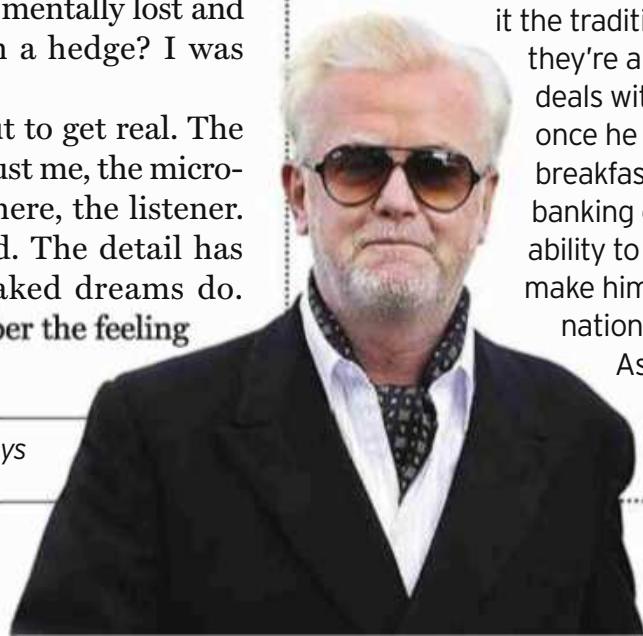

Back on the radar

Let's not forget that Virgin Radio is not the same station that Evans worked for, bought and then sold almost 20 years ago, but a relatively modest digital start-up, albeit backed by Rupert Murdoch, that launched a couple of years ago using that much put-upon name. So the question is, why would Virgin Radio consider it worth paying that much of a premium for somebody like Evans, even if he is the only genius of British pop radio? In the sense that the nation has suddenly been made aware that there is still a digital station called Virgin Radio, the company has probably had a few hundred thousand pounds of value out of him already – and he hasn't even joined it yet.

The watercooler king

As Trump's presidential campaign proved, nowadays conventional advertising is a mug's game. You increase your profile by becoming the news. In hiring Evans, Virgin has increased its profile at a stroke in a way that would have cost a fortune and taken years if they had done it the traditional way. No doubt they're already thrashing out deals with advertisers. And once he starts doing their breakfast show they'll be banking on Evans's proven ability to get headlines and make himself part of the national conversation.

As Evans has proved before, nobody puts baby in the corner.

We all know the old poser "Name five famous Belgians". But how about "Name five famous female composers"? It shouldn't be too hard. The International Encyclopedia of Women Composers has more than 6,000 entries. So, to get the ball rolling, here's Debbie Wiseman (above), Classic FM's own female Composer in Residence, with a major new series celebrating the lives and works of some of the world's finest female composers, starting with Fanny Hensel (Mendelssohn's sister), Clara Schumann (Robert's wife), Louise Farrenc (a distinguished professor of piano at the Paris Conservatoire) and Lili Boulanger (sister of the famous composition teacher Nadia), who died a century ago, aged just 24. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Drama on 3: An Evening with Angela Carter

7.30pm Radio 3

The poet of the Gothic is elegant company for an autumn evening. Fiona Shaw describes how Angela Carter's first radio play, Vampirella (1976), was conceived purely in terms of words and sounds, rendered superbly in a new production. A hardy tourist – the character inspired by Carter's university lecturer Christopher Frayling – finds himself in a castle occupied by Countess Dracula and her housekeeper, the widow of cannibal Sawney Beane. Shaw also narrates a new production of Carter's second radio play, Come unto These Yellow Sands (1979), which explores the area between reality and imagination in depicting the life of Victorian painter Richard Dadd (1817–1886). Believing he was possessed by Osiris, Egyptian king of the dead, Dadd murdered his father and created his final masterpiece in the madhouse.

The Weekend Documentary

2.05pm BBC World Service

Amid all the terrifying statistics around biodiversity, one is particularly sobering: almost half of the Great Barrier Reef has died since 2016. But could this phenomenon be halted with a few genetic tweaks? Here, Razia Iqbal meets three experts at the Natural History Museum who are busy trying to change the world in three ways: drought-resistant food, miscarriage prevention and heat-resistant coral. There's always room for an ethics debate, but this programme favours an informative breakdown of how science is leaping forward. TOM GOULDING

Today's Choices

Shaun Keaveny

7.00am 6 Music

Shaun Keaveny (above) is approaching the end of his tenure as the 6 Music breakfast show presenter. Come the new year – along with various other changes on the network – he moves to lunchtimes. So this will be his last time getting up super-early for the annual BBC Music Day – which takes place on Friday but starts its build-up today, with Keaveny relocating to Glasgow. There he'll be hooking up with Subcity Radio – an independent, non-profit station – and learning more about the city's music scene. The countdown continues tomorrow, with Lauren Laverne broadcasting live from Goldsmiths, University of London, and on Thursday Mark Radcliffe and Stuart Maconie will be live from Leeds, looking at the links between art school and music. SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio 3 In Concert

7.00pm Radio 3

The Royal Northern Sinfonia launches its 60th-anniversary season with a birthday gala under its music director, the pianist-conductor Lars Vogt, recorded at Sage Gateshead on Sunday. Showing off the full range of a modern chamber orchestra's repertoire, works by the form's three classical founding fathers – Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven – are paired with later tributes by Fauré, Poulenc, Prokofiev and Brahms (the beautifully crafted but mistitled Variations on a Theme by Haydn – the theme is not by Haydn at all), all capped by a specially commissioned "anniversary encore" by the composer, librettist and singer-songwriter Errollyn Wallen. MARK PAPPENHEIM

2.15 Drama: We're Backing Britain

It's 1968, and Britain's economy is teetering on the brink. Strikes, devaluation and rejection from the Common Market are making Prime Minister Harold Wilson's life a misery. What the country needs is some Dunkirk spirit. David Morley's satire - inspired by the I'm Backing Britain campaign - takes us back to the doom and gloom of Britain in the late 1960s and shines a light on the industrial strife of the decade that followed.

Decision Time: the Next Financial Meltdown

8.00pm Radio 4

The worst economic crisis since the Wall Street crash of 1929 began in earnest in March 2008, when the US Federal Reserve pumped hundreds of billions of dollars into the disintegrating US banking system. The ripple effect produced a global catastrophe, whose most iconic images include employees of the bankrupt Lehman Brothers carrying their belongings in boxes from their HQ in London's Canary Wharf. In this programme Nick Robinson (above) asks if we are now in a better position to withstand another crash. His panel includes former Chancellor of the Exchequer Ken Clarke, former BBC economics editor Stephanie Flanders, and Dame DeAnne Julius, founding member of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

8.00pm Classic FM

The son of a Gloucestershire vicar, Ralph Vaughan Williams was at once the most down-to-earth and the most visionary among Britain's great 20th-century composers. To mark the 60th anniversary of his death, Jane Jones presents an evening of music by VW, alongside works by his teachers Hubert Parry, Charles Villiers Stanford, Max Bruch and Maurice Ravel, as well as by his friend and fellow folk song collector Gustav Holst. And there are performances recorded at last month's Vaughan Williams Festival, held in the ancient Templar church of All Saints in the composer's Cotswold birthplace of Down Ampney. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Carte Blanche: Charles Dumont

9.00pm Radio 2

After profiling Jane Birkin, Vincent Niclo meets a French artiste whose name may not be as familiar – although you will almost certainly know his chef-d'oeuvre: Charles Dumont wrote Non, Je Ne Regrette Rien for Edith Piaf (above). The 1960 recording appeared to sum up the little sparrow's tortuous life and it remains an anthem for the bohemian and the defiant. Frankly speaking, this episode sounds patched together. Dumont begins by speaking English but then gives up. His replies in French have been given an English voiceover and Niclo's questions sound very much as if they were re-recorded later. But Dumont's memories of working with Piaf at the end of her life are wonderful, and his subsequent career is remarkable: he collaborated with Jacques Brel and Barbra Streisand. Next week's subject is Jean-Paul Gaultier. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Who put the bubbles into Coca-Cola? Arguably, Suzanne Ciani, the five-time Grammy Award-nominated American pianist, composer and electronic music pioneer. She launched her career back in 1974 by using her Buchla 200 "electric music box" to create the idealised sound of bubbles bursting for Coca-Cola's iconic "pop 'n' pour" audio logo. Now in her early 70s, Ciani and her updated Buchla 200e were star guests at July's "Pioneers of Sound" Prom and can here be heard in an exclusive reworking of material she first played in the 1970s. MARK PAPPENHEIM

RT 3/4. French singer and actor Vincent Niclo celebrates talented artists who are beloved in France and around the world, and invites them to talk candidly about their life and career. He continues with Charles Dumont, who originally played the trumpet and came to music through jazz. He enjoyed modest success until a chance meeting with iconic French chanteuse Edith Piaf. Through a twist of fate he created one of her two signature recordings, Non, Je Ne Regrette Rien, and went on to write a score of songs for her. Dumont then became a singer in his own right, in the old French popular style, and now remains much-loved as a writer and touring performer.

Today's Choices

The Art of Radio Times 6.30am/8.30pm/1.30am Radio 4 Extra

"As far as I'm concerned, every commission I receive from Radio Times is an emergency." Thus speaks – in an archive recording – the great illustrator Eric Fraser in this celebration of the wonderful visual tradition of the magazine you are reading. Fraser – whose work gave the magazine much of its character in its early days – was speaking about the speed with which he always had to operate, but it never stopped him producing the goods, his draughtsmanship "faultless". This programme was first broadcast in 2013 to mark our 90th anniversary, and five minutes later here we are at 95. Among those joining Peter Day in looking back are two former RT art editors, David Driver and Brian Thomas, and the Times's political cartoonist Peter Brookes, who contributed to the magazine back in the 1960s. The cover above was one of our most popular ever. SIMON O'HAGAN

The Eternal Life of the Instant Noodle

11.00am Radio 4
What is the world's most devoured fast food? You might think that burgers or chips would rule, but in fact it's the humble instant noodle. According to the World Instant Noodles Association, 270 million servings are eaten around the world every day. This engaging documentary presented by journalist Celia Hatton looks at the noble aim behind the invention of the noodle, and how it's the top item traded in US prisons. You might even want to visit all three instant noodle museums in Japan. KASIA DELGADO

Today's Choices

The Art of Radio Times 6.30am/8.30pm/1.30am Radio 4 Extra

"As far as I'm concerned, every commission I receive from Radio Times is an emergency." Thus speaks – in an archive recording – the great illustrator Eric Fraser in this celebration of the wonderful visual tradition of the magazine you are reading. Fraser – whose work gave the magazine much of its character in its early days – was speaking about the speed with which he always had to operate, but it never stopped him producing the goods, his draughtsmanship "faultless". This programme was first broadcast in 2013 to mark our 90th anniversary, and five minutes later here we are at 95. Among those joining Peter Day in looking back are two former RT art editors, David Driver and Brian Thomas, and the Times's political cartoonist Peter Brookes, who contributed to the magazine back in the 1960s. The cover above was one of our most popular ever. SIMON O'HAGAN

What is the world's most devoured fast food? You might think that burgers or chips would rule, but in fact it's the humble instant noodle. According to the World Instant Noodles Association, 270 million servings are eaten around the world every day. This engaging documentary presented by journalist Celia Hatton looks at the noble aim behind the invention of the noodle, and how it's the top item traded in US prisons. You might even want to visit all three instant noodle museums in Japan. KASIA DELGADO

12.00 Composer of the Week: Rachmaninov 5/5. In America: Apple Pie? Rachmaninov was slow to embrace his adopted country, never really learning English and always looking back longingly to mother Russia. But in the last year of his life he finally became an American citizen. By then he was thoroughly immersed in American cultural life, relishing jazz and even admiring Mickey Mouse's take on his ubiquitous Prelude. Donald Macleod looks at the composer's last years in a country he had come to love.

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday 5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday 5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday

5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday

5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday 5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday 5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Shaun Tilley BBC Surrey, Sussex, Radio Bristol and Somerset

Age "Energy-wise I still feel 25."

Current job Presenter of 70s and 80s Heaven on BBC Sussex and BBC Surrey (Saturday 5.00am) and 70s, 80s and 90s Heaven on BBC Somerset and BBC Radio Bristol. He is also a club DJ with a Friday and Saturday residency at Popworld in Reading.

CV Born and brought up in Swansea, he began his broadcasting career with Swansea Sound, later working for Radio Caroline, Radio Luxembourg, BBC World Service, Radio Clyde, Radio City Liverpool, Piccadilly 1152, the Magic network and Capital Gold. Joined BBC local radio in 2011.

Best moment "I've been fortunate to interview some really big stars, but nobody comes close to Robert De Niro, my all-time favourite actor."

Worst moment "Co-hosting Luxembourg's last ever show on its legendary 208 frequency in 1991. I was surrounded by the broadcasting legends I'd grown up listening to, all crying like babies. It was the end of an era."

Off air "I split my time between London and the family home in a village outside Swansea. I have three grown-up children and live with my partner Opal, a fellow broadcaster, and our two youngsters. I'm a passionate Swansea City supporter."

First radio memory "Tom Browne hosting Radio 1's Top 20 and Bob Stewart on Luxembourg."

Favourite broadcasters "Noel Edmonds, for his incredible imagination; Simon Bates, so slick and authoritative; Alan Freeman for sheer originality; and Paul Burnett, a wonderful raconteur."

Ambition "To continue to develop within the BBC. I have so much creative freedom here."

Dream job "I would love to have been a rock star."

Secret skills "I'm very good at making up bedtime stories for the kids. Opal and I are vegetarians so we share the cooking – it's amazing what you can do with Quorn!" DAVID GILLARD

Women in war

When Homer wrote about the siege of Troy, he left the women in silence. Now Pat Barker has decided it's time their voices are heard

Book at Bedtime: The Silence of the Girls
Monday–Friday 10.45pm Radio 4

WHEN PAT BARKER started writing The Silence of the Girls – her retelling of Homer's Ancient Greek epic poem, The Iliad – the #MeToo protest moment hadn't happened. But the just-published novel's focus on power and control in relationships between men and women seems prescient.

"It's a very strange experience," Barker tells me. "By the time #MeToo and #TimesUp were in the news, the novel was being line-edited, and I suddenly saw: 'This is quite topical.'"

Barker, 75, is best known for her sympathetic portrayal of men during war. Her First World War Regeneration trilogy drew on the writings of psychiatrist William Rivers and poet-soldiers Siegfried Sassoon and Wilfred Owen. The final book in the trilogy, The Ghost Road, won the 1995 Booker Prize. More recently she's tackled the Second World War in Noonday (part of her Life Class trilogy about art students at the Slade).

But in The Silence of the Girls, she's created a feminist version of the Trojan War – told from the perspective of 19-year-old Briseis (the captured princess enslaved and fought over by Achilles and Agamemnon in the first section of The Iliad). In Homer's original, Briseis is silent. So Barker gives her a voice. The narrative grips like a thriller, as Briseis battles to stay alive. When the Greeks sack her homeland of Lyrnessus, she sees her husband, father and brothers killed.

'I wanted to give the girl – a sex slave – a voice'

Abducted with the other women to the Greek war camp, she is given to Achilles as a "bed-girl". Later Achilles's rival, Agamemnon, demands she become his mistress. Handed around between powerful men, Briseis knows they see her as a trophy. "Men carve meaning into women's faces; messages addressed to other men," she observes bluntly.

As she was writing the novel, Barker was thinking of the Zidi women in Syria and Iraq, bought and sold in the slave market, and the rape camps in Kosovo. "Enslavement in war is very much a part of our contemporary lives."

At the beginning of the novel, she quotes from Philip Roth's The Human Stain. "Roth has this speech in it about how all of European history starts with The Iliad – and it starts with a quarrel between two men. And I thought to myself, well actually if you're a man, it starts with a quarrel, but if you're a woman it starts in silence. I just wanted to try to fill that silence, give that girl who is basically a sex slave, a voice."

Barker is not the only writer retelling ancient stories for modern readers. She mentions Kamila

SPOILS OF WAR
Pat Barker (below) describes a bleaker fate for “bed-girl” Briseis than that portrayed by Rose Byrne in the 2004 film, Troy

Shamsie, Madeline Miller and Colm Toibin. It's no coincidence that Greek myths are back in fashion, she says. “People typically go back to the past when they're nearing the end of something. So what are we coming to the end of? Is there a genuine change going on in the relationship between men and women at the moment?”

THERE ARE LOVELY contemporary touches in The Silence of the Girls. The warrior chants for Achilles are English rugby songs. “When you're retelling myth you deliberately plant anachronisms because it's a way of saying: ‘Hey, come on, this isn't then, it's actually now.’”

In Barker's version, Achilles is a complex figure. Yes he's a bully and a “monstrous narcissist”, but, abandoned by his mother (the sea nymph Thetis), he's also emotionally vulnerable. “The idea of being abandoned by your mother at the age of seven has very strong resonances because that's what happened to me,” she says.

Barker never knew her father. She was born in Teesside in 1943. Her mother was a Wren stationed in Dunfermline who became pregnant after a one-night stand. She and her mother lived with her mother's parents in Thornaby-on-Tees, but when Moyra married, the young Pat, then seven, remained with her grandparents. Her mother, she thinks, felt great shame about her birth. She was very loved by her grandparents – and it was her grandfather who inspired her fascination with the Great War. Every night he washed his bayonet wound in the kitchen sink and, aged 11, she wrote a poem about it.

After grammar school, she read history at the London School of Economics, then returned to Durham, where she became a teacher of history and politics. She married David, a zoologist 20 years her senior, and had two children.

SHE WASN'T PUBLISHED until she was 40. Her creative breakthrough came on an Arvon course taught by Angela Carter, who encouraged her to take her tales of working-class women seriously. Published in 1982 by Virago, Union Street opened with the rape of an 11-year-old girl and followed the lives of several women over the course of a few months. That novel was followed by Blow Your House Down (1984), about a serial killer preying on women, and The Century's Daughter (1986). Barker admits she tired of reviewers saying “Why do you never write about men?”, so she switched her attention to the First World War. Regeneration sold over a million copies. Readers have told her it helped them understand their own fathers and grandfathers.

She was awarded the CBE in 2000. After her husband died in 2009, she couldn't write for two years – “But now my whole house has become a study.” She hopes The Silence of the Girls is her most accessible book, adding, “I have no classical background at all.”

For a time the success of Regeneration was a burden, she admits. But eagle-eyed readers will spot quotations from Owen and Sassoon buried in the text of the new novel. “I couldn't believe it when it says in The Iliad that Agamemnon dug a trench. I thought: ‘Whoopee, did he really?’ And of course when I was describing the Greek men in the trench, it was very much with that idea of the men in the First World War digging trenches in waterlogged ground,” she says triumphantly.

The best true spy story ever

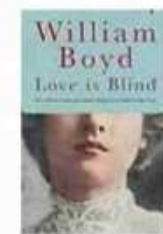

...according to the master – John le Carré

THE SPY AND THE TRAITOR BEN MACINTYRE

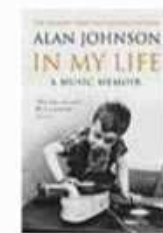

Book of the Week Monday–Friday
9.45am Radio 4

In what John le Carré has called “the best true spy story I have ever read”, journalist and presenter Ben Macintyre recounts the career of Oleg Gordievsky, who, in the 1980s, became the KGB's London head – and an MI6 informant. His work as a double agent proved vital during the Cold War, but also saw him targeted by the CIA, who were determined to find out the identity of Britain's mysterious source... The Spy and the Traitor (£21.50, incl p&p) is based on years of research by Macintyre – who gained extraordinary access to Gordievsky, now 79, visiting him in the safe house he has lived in for the past 38 years – and argues that the former spy single-handedly changed the course of history.

LOVE IS BLIND WILLIAM BOYD Start the Week Mon 9am Radio 4

Brodie Moncur is a piano tuner in late-19th-century Edinburgh, navigating a fractious relationship with his priest father. When his employers open a new branch in Paris, he's offered an escape – and admittance into a rarefied new world. Brodie is the protagonist of Love Is Blind (£16.99, incl p&p), the 15th novel from Any Human Heart and Sweet Caress author William Boyd, which is typically vast in its scope and coruscating in its portrayal of a young man who criss-crosses a continent in pursuit of love.

IN MY LIFE: A MUSIC MEMOIR ALAN JOHNSON

Avid readers of the memoirs of former home secretary Alan Johnson – a Labour MP for two decades before he stepped down last year – will have picked up on a recurrent theme: they're all named after songs written or performed by the Beatles. Johnson reflects on his deep love of the band, and of music generally, in the fourth instalment of his autobiography, In My Life: a Music Memoir (£15.29, incl p&p), recalling the songs that have stayed with him and the places they still evoke so vividly. Johnson appears in the latest edition of Simon Mayo's Books of the Year podcast. HANNAH SHADDOCK

JAPANESE ANEMONES ARE one of my go-to plants for this time of year. They help take the garden from late summer into early autumn, and grow well in a variety of soils and aspects. I rarely plant up a garden without them.

I like the honesty of Japanese anemones, with their large cheery and open flowers that are available in a range of pinks and whites. Even when they're not in flower, their tough, dense, heart-shaped foliage still creates an excellent ground cover, doing a great job of suppressing weeds.

I also like perennials that can add height without the hassle of staking, and the strong, thin wiry stems of Japanese anemones hold the flowers proudly above the foliage so they can be clearly seen.

My favourite of all-time is Anemone "Honorine Jobert", which boasts lovely clear white single flowers with a subtle pink tinge on the underside of the petals. Their light green and yellow centres create a lovely contrast and that helps them to sing out from a shady spot.

The plant reaches around 1.2m. If you want something a little shorter, say around 90cm, then try the hugely popular pink "September Charm", with darker pink outer edges. Anemone "Pamina" flowers for longer than the others, and has very deep pink semi-double flowers with distinctive bright yellow centres. It's altogether more compact, reaching around 75cm, so is ideal for smaller gardens as well as middle or front of border.

ITHINK THAT ANEMONES look particularly good planted in blocks rather than drifts in borders. However, they can also do a fine job of softening the corners of walls, sheds and summer houses, or they can be grown at the base of a pergola post where a paving slab or two has intentionally been left out.

They will also combine well with other plants that flower around the same time, such as asters, Verbena bonariensis, ornamental grasses and penstemons.

You can plant now, while in flower, to instantly boost your borders if they need them. Dig in plenty of leaf mould – just don't let the new plants dry out during dry periods and they should establish themselves quickly.

My must-have flower

Japanese anemones are just the ticket to take your garden into autumn, says Joe Swift

SEASONAL STAR
Japanese anemones such as the popular "September Charm" add much-needed colour at this time of year

3 TOP TREES FOR BEAUTIFUL BARK

We demand a lot from some garden trees – plenty of seasonal interest including flowers, fruit and autumn colour. But how do they look once their leaves have scattered on the ground? There are some fabulous trees with beautiful bark and stems that bring so much to the autumn and winter garden. Silver birches, cherries, some choice maples, cornus trees and lesser-known ones are worthy of a little close attention. We're nearing a good time to plant trees, too, so start planning.

1 TRY A SNAKE BARK

There are a few maples called "snake barks": Acer davidii, Acer capillipes and Acer tegmentosum. Acer davidii "Serpentine" is a good choice for the smaller garden (grows to 5m in height and spread), with stunning white-striped purple bark on the younger branches and oval leaves on distinctive red stalks. It flowers yellow in drooping racemes in spring and has deep red autumn leaves.

2 CONSIDER A RED TRUNK

We all know the ghostly white bark of silver birches, but there are plenty of other fabulous birches with a range of bark colours and textures. Chinese red birch (Betula albosinensis "China Rose") is a beauty, with a solid pinky-red smooth bark, which peels away in clean sheets. It grows to 9–15m tall, and spreads 4–6m with a lightly spreading crown.

3 CHOOSE A CHERRY TREE

I have two choices. The deep-mahogany Tibetan cherry bark (Prunus serrula) is irresistible to the touch – silky, shiny and textured. A deep mahogany colour, too, makes it a top choice. Choose a multi-stemmed specimen and plant it somewhere you can touch it easily (it reaches 8m in height and spread). "Amber beauty" (Prunus maackii) is another fine choice, perhaps for a larger garden. A more upright tree (about 12m tall with a spread of 5m), it has a cinnamon and golden yellow bark, with white flowers and red and golden autumn foliage.

CORNUS AND SIBIRICA

As summer borders fade, this vibrant dogwood takes centre stage. The foliage turns to pink and orange before falling to reveal stems that glow crimson. Plant in groups for maximum impact. A superb RHS AGM variety.

Jack Whitehall: Travels with My Father

Netflix from Friday 28 September

AS JACK WHITEHALL discovers in his Netflix travel show this week, Budapest's majestic architecture is best admired from the Danube, the river that cleaves the city in two. The comedian and his dad, Michael Whitehall, take a boat trip when they explore Hungary's capital in series two of Travels with My Father.

Whitehall Senior enjoys his creature comforts, so next time he may want to consider upgrading to a cruise like the one I recently embarked on. River cruising has never been so popular, and many lines now offer facilities on a par with ocean-going vessels. I join 160 other passengers on the MS Thomas Hardy halfway through its seven-day Danube itinerary that begins and ends in Budapest, calling at Bratislava, Salzburg and Vienna along the way.

I take up my berth at one of the smaller stops, Melk, a quaint Austrian town that sits in the shadow of a vast butter-scotch-yellow abbey. Like many river cruises, mine includes a guided tour at every stop. In Melk, we learn that the abbey was originally the seat of the Babenbergs, who ruled Austria until 1246; the Habsburgs gave the abbey a Baroque makeover when they succeeded them. There is a marble dining hall where Empress Maria

Theresa was serenaded, a rococo spiral staircase and a dazzling church – a florid confection of red marble, frescoes and bling. Best of all is a wood-panelled library with tomes from floor to ceiling, secret doors and 300-year-old globes.

From there, we sail overnight to Linz, docking a short stroll from the main square's strawberry and vanilla ice cream-coloured townhouses. This charming medieval city has a dark chapter in its history. Hitler grew up here and announced the annexation of Austria from the balcony of the town hall on 13 March 1938. He planned to make Linz the Danube's most illustrious city, but only succeeded in building a bridge that the Allies destroyed.

One joy of river cruising is having plenty of time to yourself. After the walking tour, I nose around the old town, then borrow one of the ship's bikes and pootle downstream on the popular Danube cycleway. Later, I linger on the top deck as the sun dips below the horizon, watching swans, fishermen and cyclists glide past.

DAY THREE OF my trip takes us to Vienna. If this grand city had an anthem, it would be Johann Strauss Jr's waltz The Blue Danube – although the river is actually murky-green and doesn't flow through the centre of Vienna. Still, Austria's capital more than compensates with its wealth of palaces, concert halls, museums and enticing coffee houses. Docking here all day gives passengers time to catch a classical recital in the Musikverein's famous Golden Hall, admire Gustav Klimt's sensuous paintings in the Belvedere Palace or – my preferred option – take a ride on the jaunty red ferris wheel that played a starring role in Orson Welles's The Third Man.

"You have two kinds of people in Budapest: those living in Buda and those who want to live in Buda," jokes our Hungarian guide, David, when we arrive in the city known as "the Queen of the Danube" the next day. He explains that it's a city of two halves, divided by the Danube. On the western bank is hilly, leafy Buda, where Hungary's kings took refuge from the Mongols in the 13th century. Nowadays Buda's cobbled lanes are a Unesco world heritage site. The old royal palace houses the national gallery, there are wonderful views from the fairytale towers of the Fisherman's Bastion and Russian couples pay handsomely to tie the knot in Matthias Church, which the Ottomans converted into a mosque and the Nazis used as a stable.

River cruising is more popular than ever and, as Jack Whitehall discovered, there's only one way to see Budapest

On the opposite bank is flat, business-minded Pest, the home of Europe's largest parliament building – an enormous neo-Gothic affair that makes the Palace of Westminster look drab. On Andrassy út, the grandest of Pest's broad boulevards, David points out a lavish opera house (tickets start at 80p) and the House of Terror museum – the former headquarters of the Nazis and the Hungarian KGB.

ON THE LAST morning, I open my cabin's curtains and am greeted by the loveliest view yet: a barely rippling river, a cloudless blue sky and a giant bronze woman waving a palm leaf atop a hill. Liberty Statue was erected by the Soviets in 1947 to commemorate their victory over the Nazis; but is now dedicated to all those who sacrificed their lives for Hungary's freedom.

I wave a fond farewell to Buda's most famous monument and the Danube's myriad delights. I'm now curious to explore its lower reaches, but a trip east from Budapest to Serbia, Bulgaria and Romania will have to wait. CLAIRE WEBB

The gift that doesn't give

Gift cards worth £900m are unspent every year – don't give one as a present, says Paul Lewis

A COLD WIND IS blowing down the High Street. House of Fraser is just the latest in a series of high-profile retailers and restaurants that have been driven out of business. Many others are closing branches, begging their landlords for rent cuts or looking for a buyer. Their days may be numbered.

So once again, it's time for a warning about gift cards. When a business dies, any unspent gift cards usually die with it, leaving the people who hoped to spend them with nothing.

House of Fraser was an exception: after some delay, new owner Sports Direct has said that an unused gift card can be exchanged for a replacement of the same value. If you have one send it to Gift Cards,

27 Baker Street,
London W1U 8AH.
Take a photo of it first and send it by signed-for post. Not everyone will bother or hear about the scheme but it's a better outcome than the alternative.

Every year, individuals spend about £2.5bn on gift cards for friends and relatives. Businesses spend another £3.5bn on cards to give as bonuses or rewards to staff. The industry used to say that 6% of the money spent on gift cards was never redeemed. Nowadays it reports it's just 1.5% within a year of purchase. This still means a whopping £900m-worth sits languishing in a drawer or forgotten in a pocket.

ONE PROBLEM IS that gift cards usually have an expiry date. If you don't use them within two years – or sometimes one – they are no longer valid. The clock starts running when the card was bought, not given, so you should spend a card as soon as you can. Many can be spent online, and some of the better ones reset the clock every time the card is used.

My favourite gift is a voucher that says at the top, "I promise to pay the Bearer on demand the sum of Ten Pounds" (or Twenty or Fifty) and is signed by the Chief Cashier at the Bank of England. It never expires and you can spend it anywhere.

GUIDE

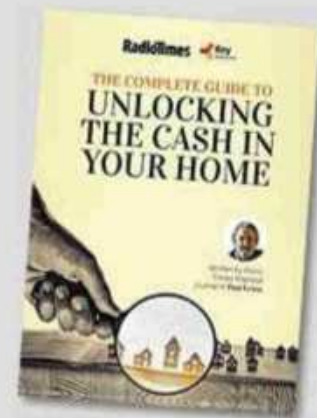

ARE YOU OVERLOOKING YOUR BIGGEST ASSET?

Many retired homeowners are asset rich but cash poor. If you are worried that your finances in later life won't give you the lifestyle you hoped for, then your home could help.

Downsizing may be one option, but equity release is a way to unlock a tax-free cash lump sum from your home without having to move. A lifetime mortgage, which is the most popular type of plan, is secured against your home just like a traditional mortgage, and is available to homeowners aged 55–95.

WITH A LIFETIME MORTGAGE

- You can access tax-free cash
- You can spend the money as you wish
- You can secure a fixed interest rate
- There are typically no monthly payments to make as the loan, plus roll-up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end
- The value of your estate will be reduced and your entitlement to means-tested benefits may be affected

Radio Times has partnered with Key, to produce a FREE guide written by financial journalist Paul Lewis. The guide is a great starting point to finding out if you could unlock the cash in your home.

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is complete free of charge as Key's usual advice fee of 1.99% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan, subject to a minimum advice fee of £1,499.

To request your FREE RT guide, written by Paul Lewis, or to book a no-obligation consultation, please call FREE on 0808 156 2698 or visit radiotimes.com/equityrelease

Lines are open Monday–Thursday 9am–8pm, Friday 9am–5.30pm and Saturday 9am–5pm

 Susie Dent

Last week my wife said to me, "You're daft – you must be cuckoo." What is the origin of that phrase? Roger Hayward by email

Strangely, to be called daft would have been a compliment in Anglo-Saxon times. Then, it meant mild, gentle and humble, a reflection of the word's origin in an Old English term meaning suitable and fitting – in fact, "daft" has a surprising sibling in the word "deft". "Silly" began in the same way, as it originally meant pious and meek. In time, such qualities began to be looked down upon as the opposites of valour and strength, which is why both "daft" and "silly" took a turn for the worse.

"Cuckoo", meanwhile, has been a synonym for mad since the early 20th century. The connection appears to stem from the bird's insistently repetitive call, which might be thought suggestive of simple-mindedness.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

LADY IN RED
Songs of Praise presenter
Pam Rhodes

We're used to Songs of Praise being moved around the Sunday afternoon schedule on BBC1, but it now seems to be getting out of hand. Recently it has been shown at 12.25pm and 1.15pm – one week it was on at 11.25am and it now seems to be getting shown mid-afternoon. On 9 September it was scheduled for 3pm, ahead of repeats, one of which was a three-year-old episode of Escape to the Country. Surely the programmes could have been shuffled so that Songs of Praise would be shown at either 4pm or a preferred time of 5pm? Is this a plan by the BBC to say that viewing figures are down? If they are, it will be because so many viewers will have missed the programme thanks to its poor scheduling.

A HEAD-SCRATCHER

I wish In My Head (Radio 4) was out of my head. What a load of drivel this programme is. The Circus Manager on 5 September was the limit, having to listen to a "mess of sound" (binaural, you say), but there was also The Boxing Manager the following day – both contained just the sort of extraneous noise you hear in a busy room, but would prefer not to. I listen to The World at One and then The Archers at 2pm, but the 15-minute programme in between often appears to be a "fill-in" – I wonder where on earth they have dredged up the material from. The cutting-room floor perhaps?

Joan Hubbard Gorleston-on-Sea, Norfolk

... Have the BBC lost their heads with this ridiculous programme? The graphic verbal illustration and sound effects of a hunter skinning a deer on The Deer Stalker (7 Sep) was unbelievably unpleasant.

Astrid Smith Walton-on-Thames, Surrey

TAKE A RAIN CHECK

Recently news items have highlighted the impact of this summer's heatwave, including excess deaths, fires and lost agricultural production. Yet a constant refrain from TV weather presenters was "It's glorious out there". Now, if there's a hint of rain in the forecast, we're "unlucky", or "it's going downhill". These are supposed to be intelligent, educated people; they must know that what makes this country habitable is regular rainfall. So why perpetuate the myth that sun is good and rain is bad?

Phil Smith Formby, Liverpool

NO MORE QUACKS?

I am a big fan of Upstart Crow (Wednesdays BBC2), but why is no one singing the same level of praise for Quacks? I recently watched the repeat of series one on BBC, having loved it first time round – I hope series two is on the way.

Caroline Caudwell Arnside, Cumbria
Shane Allen, controller of comedy commissioning at the BBC, wrote back to you personally. "Dear Caroline, thanks so much for your kind words about Quacks. Sadly, there are currently no plans for another series as we don't have the room to bring everything back – we have a set amount of sitcoms and need to bring through new shows each year. BBC2's comedy heritage continues with a new offering from the tremendously talented Toby Jones in Don't Forget the Driver. This, coupled with Defending the Guilty, which follows an aspiring barrister on his journey through the criminal justice system, is coming down the tracks alongside family car-crash sitcom The Other One. We welcome back Mum, Motherland, Inside No 9 and Two Doors Down as returning series, so perhaps you could enjoy having the funny bone tickled as opposed to sawn off!"

THE END

CRICKET A HIT FOR 5

And so the international cricket season has drawn to a successful close. For thousands, if not millions of us, one broadcaster has kept this alive. From those of us who cannot (or will not) pay for the Sky coverage, this broadcaster deserves grateful thanks. I refer of course to Channel 5, and their reliable nightly coverage.

The programmes are edited to the highest standard, there are short replays to make a point and interesting spectator shots to complete the atmosphere.

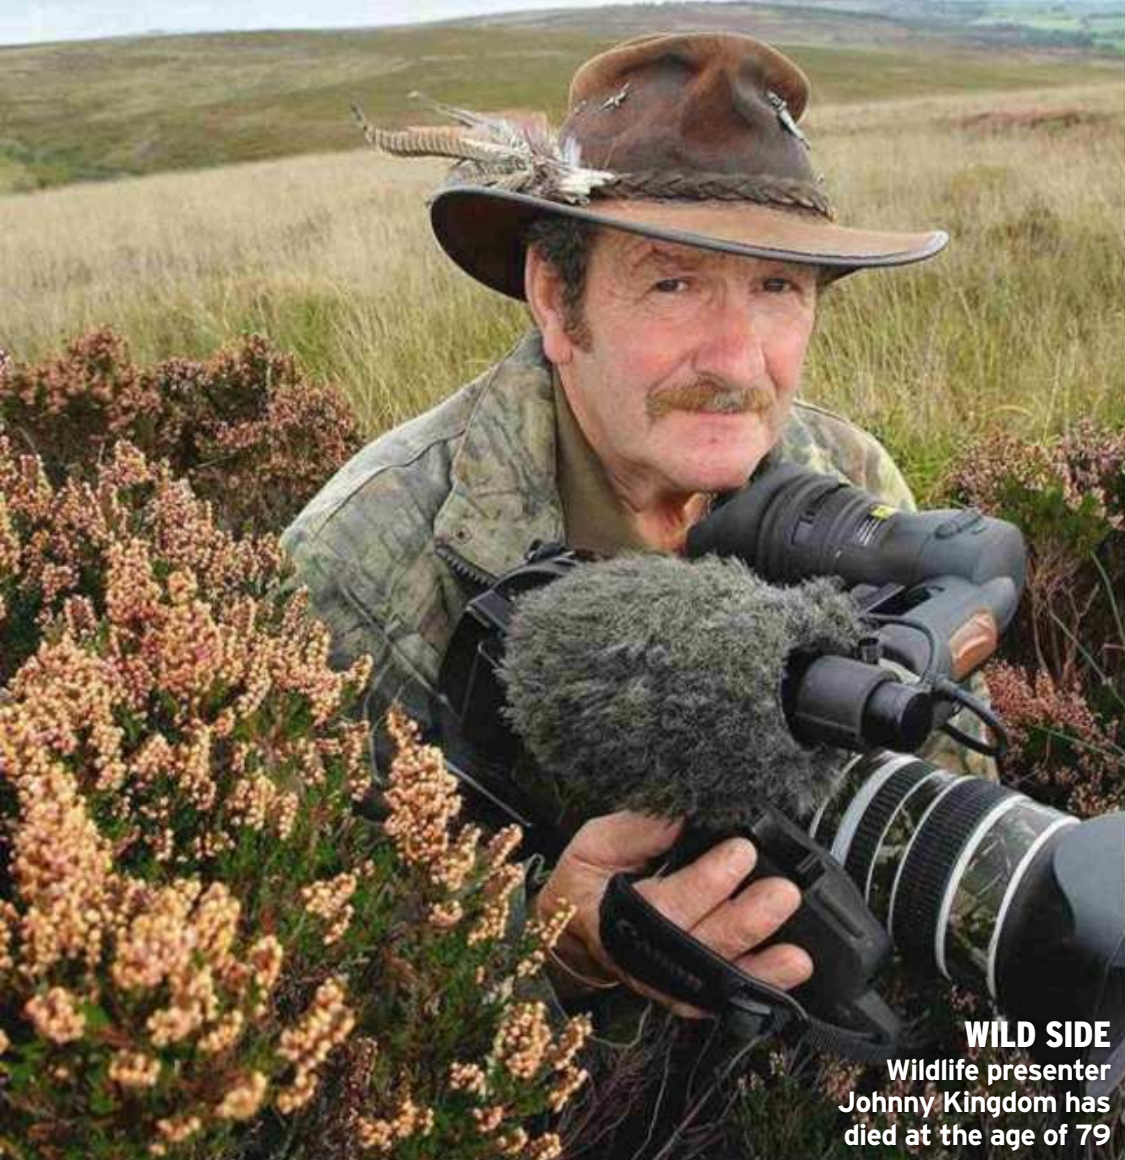

The graphics complement the programme and the producer avoids the droning experts sitting around a glossy set and concentrates on the action. Instead the pleasing, subdued commentary by Messrs Boycott, Nicholas and Vaughan gives just the right amount of information.

Mike Fowler Sandy, Bedfordshire

SOUNDING OFF

I do so agree with Alison Graham (RT, 15 September) about those announcers who gatecrash the end of one show to tell us about another. I was always taught that it's rude to interrupt. Apart from that, they should consider that final credits may contain information that I want, but I cannot read them if they are squashed to one side. Also, some programmes have theme music that I like and wish to hear and lastly, I don't need to be told about other programmes – I have Radio Times for that. These chattering nuisances are wasting their breath – I hit the "mute" button the moment they butt in.

WE'VE LOST A ONE-OFF

How sad to hear of the death of Johnny Kingdom. Many of us looked forward to the engaging programmes about his beloved Exmoor and its wonderful wildlife. His passion for the area, his knowledge and enthusiasm, made for a wonderful viewing experience. A very special man and probably a "one-off". He will be missed.

LIFE AFTER CHRIS...

You asked for suggestions for the successor to Chris Evans when he leaves the Radio 2 Breakfast show in December. My pick would be Sara Cox, who has a proven track record in radio presentation, is naturally funny, and has the talent to adapt quickly, as shown when she sits in for Chris. Her voice is smooth, her diction clear and she comes over as warm and engaging.

Pam Young Grimsby, Lincolnshire

I suggest Jo Whiley takes over the Breakfast show when Chris leaves. Then we can have Drivetime back.

David Miller Chigwell, Essex

I can tell you who I don't want: Vanessa Feltz, Sara Cox, Zoe Ball, Jeremy Vine, Richard Madeley, Lisa Tarbuck or Graham Norton. I agree with your reader (Feedback, 15 September) who suggested giving Trevor Nelson a try. When Sara Cox stands in for Chris I always switch to another station.

Barbara Warburton Widnes, Cheshire

...Chris's replacement doesn't matter to me as I have now bought a DAB radio to pick up Virgin and will continue to follow Chris in the mornings.

Brenda Alexander Boston, Lincolnshire

COMING UP ON DAYTIME

The last 12 episodes of Red Rock are being shown next year, and there is to be no more The Coroner. What, if anything, have we got to look forward to in the future at this time of day?

Sue Bailey Skipton, North Yorkshire

WORTHY SUCCESSOR?
Could Jo Whiley – currently presenting Drivetime with Simon Mayo – take over from Chris Evans?

We asked the BBC what they had planned for daytime and Dan McGolpin, BBC controller of programming and daytime, said: "We're pleased that so many Radio Times readers love the drama that we show on BBC1 in daytime. In addition to Doctors, which runs through most of the year, this winter will see the return of Father Brown and a second series of Shakespeare & Hathaway. The award-winning series Moving On, written by Jimmy McGovern, is also back and just last week we announced new comedy drama from the same production team: Pitching In, starring Larry Lamb and Hayley Mills. Next year we have action-packed new crime drama called The Mallorca Files, which is going to be worth waiting for. We also have a strong pedigree of international drama: treats to look forward to include 800 Words and the final series of A Place to Call Home."

BITTERSWEET SYMPHONY

As a dedicated supporter of the BBC, especially Radio 3, I look forward with enthusiasm to the Proms every season. But this year I was really disappointed in some of the programming.

While I appreciate we need to include a number of new works to be performed, I was quite dismayed at some of the omissions this year, for example: not one Mozart Symphony, out of 41, and no Schubert symphonies, of which he wrote nine.

Would it have been asking too much for at least one or two symphonies from these wonderful composers?

Michael Wyatt Yarnscombe, Devon

VITAL VIEWING

Disturbing as it was to watch, or rather perhaps listen to, Married to a Paedophile (3 September, Channel 4) was timely and important. The lip-synced explanations by actors playing convicted sex offenders, with their justifications, alienated attempts to build fresh, non-offending lives, alongside the bewildered and honest struggles of loved ones to understand ▽

YOU ASK US

Who's the familiar face in Bodyguard?

Who is the actress that plays Chanel in Bodyguard? And where have I seen her before?

Josephine Curlock, Manchester
Stephanie Hyam stars as fired PR adviser Chanel Dyson in the BBC1 drama, and tells RT the reaction to the series has been "amazing".

"When you're filming something you don't know what the reaction or the ratings are going to be, but a lot of people are talking about it," she says.

Hyam has also appeared in Doctor Who, Peaky Blinders, Sherlock, Jekyll & Hyde and Murdered by My Boyfriend, but says her breakthrough was starring in The James Plays at the National Theatre in 2014.

"It was pretty much my first job out of drama school and it was the best launch for the rest of my career that I could possibly have wished for," she tells RT. "Obviously being in a massive series helps for future roles, but if I had to pick one thing that was a breakthrough, it'd be that."

She landed the role of Chanel after having previously worked with Bodyguard's casting director, Kate Rhodes James. "They weren't quite sure how they wanted the character of Chanel to come across at first," she explains. "But we tried it a few different ways and it was very much collaborative. Then I had a meeting for it, was offered the role and was really excited."

RISING STAR

Most memorably, Chanel spills coffee down Julia Montague (Keeley Hawes) in the first episode. "It was a bit stressful because I wasn't sure when I was supposed to throw the coffee and when we were rehearsing without it," she says. "So I would launch this coffee cup and then was told, 'That was actually a rehearsal, can we get Keeley a new top?' and then it'd take another ten minutes while they got her a new shirt. Maybe

I caused a few problems that day!" Hyam, who says "of course" she would want to work with writer Jed Mercurio again, says she doesn't get recognised "ever, because I look completely different in everything I do. Which is probably a good thing."

But how long will that last? Hyam's star is most certainly ascending – she's just finished filming Laurel and Hardy biopic Stan & Ollie with John C Reilly and Steve Coogan. She also has another film and more TV in the works, including Gentleman Jack, a Sally Wainwright period drama starring Suranne Jones. FRANCES TAYLOR

◁ the incomprehensible, was immensely powerful. We owe it to victims to understand how such horrendous offences come about so we can better protect the vulnerable.

As a former manager of a charity working with those convicted, I applaud the imaginative and thoroughly convincing technique used by the programme-makers to open a rare and much needed window into this all-too-prevalent social scourge.

Stephen Hanvey Winchester, Hampshire

LIKE, STOP!

I'm on the brink of giving up on Wanderlust (Tuesday BBC1). The repeated unnecessary use of the word "like" in every sentence of dialogue given to the teenage characters is beginning to make it unwatchable. Yes, it's realistic, as Lord knows we hear it enough in real life. However, that doesn't mean we need to be bombarded with it in a TV drama.

In future I'll stick to the likes of the excellent Bodyguard (Sunday BBC1) and Black Earth Rising (Monday BBC2), where the protagonists show some eloquence and have a vocabulary that is more than just a stringing together of conversational tics.

Charlie Lambert Warwick

SOUNDS FAMILIAR...

While I enjoyed the first episode of the new BBC drama Press (below, Thursdays BBC1), I did find the theme and incidental music distracting.

One five-note sequence that was often repeated had me singing "Fry's Turkish Delight" each time it was used. Maybe it's an age thing!

JONATHAN ROSS

'I wanted to get Aretha'

The king of chat reveals his great regret

Do you have your own elaborate home viewing suite?

We've got a big TV downstairs, but I tend to watch upstairs with my wife Jane. We lie on the bed and watch it with the cats. Which isn't great sleep hygiene, I believe.

What's on?

Ramsay's Kitchen Nightmares and Ramsay's Hotel Hell seem to be permanently on, and I'm a sucker for an orangutan. There's not enough orangutan TV, it should have its own channel.

Do you and Jane agree on which shows to watch?

Yeah, we both enjoyed Love Island and we've been watching Celebrity Big Brother. We love Black Mirror and almost anything Charlie Brooker's done; and Russell T Davies is an amazing writer. Jane's competitive and plays an online video game called Hearthstone, so sometimes she's only half got an eye on the television, and I can watch The Bourne Identity again and again. And she's involved with Game of Thrones at the moment, a very high-profile, very big thing [as a showrunner on the prequel].

Which must leave you days free to mess about in the shed?

Not a shed. I have an office in Camden. I'm doing a very complicated Thunderbird 2 model kit – the green one that looks a bit like a squashed pickle. The office is full of comic books and comic book art and there's a picture of me and Jane before we were married. We're both wearing the same suit, it's very, very 80s and a really lovely picture.

Do you make a point of watching the opposition, Graham Norton?

I don't see Graham as opposition. He's a rival in that we sometimes try to attract from the same guest pool, but there are enough people to go around. We had a period where Graham seemed to get most of the movie-star guests, so we booked a guy called Henry Fraser who had an accident and taught himself to paint with his mouth. It was a fascinating story. We're probably the only show that does that in the entertainment sphere.

Are stars less frank these days?

There are times when we talk about sensitive issues, but you've got to respect the guests, so it's only if they want to. Lily Allen is a guest on this week's show and she's obviously had a very interesting and quite complicated life so we'll be talking about that, but only because she's indicated she's prepared to do so.

You've been doing chat shows since 1989. Who do you regret not getting as a guest?

There were only a couple, and sadly they're now dead. I always wanted to get Aretha Franklin on and also a man called Jack Kirby. He was the primary creator of most of what we call the Marvel Universe now. I pitched a South Bank Show and I wish I'd done it because he's such a huge figure. But I didn't have the leverage to make documentaries. It was one of the customary, cyclical downturns in my career.

How do you cope with those?

NOTHING ON TV?

MY BOOK I'm a big fan of anything by Joyce Carol Oates.

MY DVD A horror film called Death Line. It's weird, but I like it because a lot of it is set in Russell Square Tube station in the 70s. I occasionally wallow in nostalgia.
